Divisional Superintendents

Meet in Medicine Hat To-Day.

Today the divisional superintendents of the C. P. R. meet in Medicine Hat to exchange ideas in connection with the operation of the road. In addition to the superintendents of the division there will be present the officials of the engineering staff, the mechanical staff, the passenger, freight and fuel agents and the car distributor—between forty and fifty officials in all. Among those present will be A. Price, general superintendent, Calgary; District superintendents J. A. Niblock, Calgary, G. Erickson, Cranbrook, J. Brownlee, Moose Jaw and J. S. Lawrence, Medicine Hat, divisional engineer N. E. Brooks and Mr. Woodhouse.

It is expected that the meeting will result in being a great help to the heads of the different departments of the division.

Later—The special cars began to arrive early this morning. The Mayor placed the city hall at the disposal of the officials and a meeting was held in the council chamber at 10 o'clock, most of the railroaders being present. When seen at noon by the representative of the Times Mr. Price stated that the matters under discussion, which relate to maintenance of way and general operation of the road, were of a private nature and there was nothing to give the press.

As The Times goes to press they are again in conference.

The visitors spent a part of the forenoon looking around the city. This is the most important held here by the C. P. R.

He Likes This District:

Man Writes Nice Things.

An American, who bought land in this district last spring, got the wandering habit and thought he could improve his lot by going to another district, of which he had heard great reports.

The other day a friend here, who had his land for sale, received a letter from him, part of which read as follows: "That land is worth $1 an acre and if it ain't worth that much to him he can't have it. I am not so dead sick of that country as some people might think. I've seen enough of their frozen wheat in this part of the country to show me which is the best country."

Surprise Party.

Hillcrest Club Invaded.

An incursion was made on the Hillcrest Club on Friday evening last, by a battalion of fair and gallant invaders. Means of access had been secured by treachery; the garrison had made no preparation against the assault; and in fact, (under the circumstances) resistance was more than out of the question. The conquered were treated in a chivalrous manner, however, and became the willing vassals of the fair victors.

Among the items of the program arranged by the visitors were confessions and speech making, (parliamentary procedure was NOT followed). A number of the ladies prepared a light repast, under Mrs. Cosens' direction, and with the assistance of a few of the boys, waited on the company. Musical (?) selections by the latter were afterwards rendered, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

The Times Newsboys.

Good Selling by The Times' Staff of Newsies

The newsboys for The Times have put up a great record. In September The Times started a competition among the boys to run until the end of the year. The boys found The Times easy to sell, and although several weeks were missed by all of them, the figures show the demand for the paper.

John Littleford secured first place with a total of 291. Next to him came Donald Ross who, although he did not start until October, ran up 198. The third place was taken by Percy Unwin who, with only six weeks' selling, had the great total of 163. Barrie Glover was out only half the weeks but his number was 116. John Poll, who is The Times "devil" now, was on a fair way to win the prize, when he stepped into the inky job, as in the first six weeks of selling he had disposed of 104 Times.

One of the delivery boys had 73 to his credit, although he could sell only on his rounds. John Secoy with only the last four weeks out has 76 to his credit.

The Times is continuing the competition in the same way. Each boy who sells more than a certain number receives a bonus on each paper, and the first prize seller receives double that bonus. By this means every boy has a chance to win money

Will We Have Baseball?

Not Settled for 1908.

Whether Medicine Hat will have baseball or not for 1908 hangs in the balance. The season of 1907 was not a profitable one for the shareholders, but they expected this and were willing to support a team to boom the city. The games were not attended, however, as well as they might be, and it was the lack of attendance that arose the feeling that the city was not yet ready for high class baseball.

Many of the shareholders of last year express their willingness to bear the expense of the stock they buy, if that will bring a team this year, and if there are enough of these, we will have a team.

In Lethbridge, the hotelmen, to whom baseball means such a lot of money, are getting together, and will have a team in that city if a league can be formed.

It is felt by many, that although baseball did not pay in 1907, it will be different this year. The city is larger, and a taste for the game has been roused among people who had never seen many games. During the last couple of weeks of last season a great many people attended regularly who had not been out before.

Medicine Hat, without baseball, will not have as pleasant a summer as it had in 1907, and it is to be hoped that arrangements can be made to continue the league. Calgary and Edmonton, who did all the talking about supporting the league, are not saying anything about baseball for 1908.

Vanderers vs. Ramblers.

Hockey Season Started.

The opening hockey game of the season was played at the rink between the Wanderers or school team and the Ramblers. The Wanderers were there with the goods and greatly surprised the Ramblers by defeating them 5 goals to 2. They had the Ramblers hustling at all times. It Wars with his little tin horn of a referee. The goals were scored as follows: 1st, J. Barreau, Wan.; 2nd, J. Barreau, Wan.; 3rd, White, Ram.; 4th, R. Bolter, Wan.; 5th, T. Gerow, Ram.; 6th, J. Barreau, Wan.; 7th, J. Barreau, Wan. The team lined up as follows:

Wanderers		Ramblers
Hamilton	goal	A. Colter
C. Hargrave	Point	R. Bodd
M. Cory	Cover Point	I. Colter
R. Gordon	Rover	B. Mitchell
J. Barreau	Centre	P. White
K. Colter	Right Wing	E. Luno
W. Woodhouse	Left wing	T. Gerow

Deputation from Gleichen.

Interview Minister of Agriculture.

A deputation from Gleichen, consisting of W. H. James and A. D. Shore came to the city Friday for the purpose of laying before Mr. Finlay the advisability of establishing an agricultural college in that thriving town.

For some months Gleichen has been working up the college scheme, and this is the culmination, as far as the efforts of the town are concerned.

The deputation drew the Minister's attention to the location of Gleichen in the centre of an excellent agricultural district, with irrigation close by. The inadvisability of establishing the college at Strathcona where the provincial university is to be, was dwelt upon. It was pointed out that in the United States agricultural colleges were purposely established separately from the universities, and in some cases they were being moved apart at great expense. The college students always envied the university students their apparent life of ease, while they themselves had to work at the plow.

The Minister could only promise consideration, and with this the deputation left for home on Friday noon's train.

New Moving Pictures.

The Leading Alberta Firm of This Nature Will Open.

On January 20 the firm of Willis & Cosgrove, lessees of the Lyric theatre in Calgary and of the Edmonton Opera House take over a lease of the opera house here from Crowsn & Lutes, who have run a moving picture hall for the past month.

Willis & Cosgrove are the brokers of most of the companies that play in the west, and have control of the supply of a number of opera houses in Alberta and British Columbia. In addition they are the proprietors of a number of moving picture houses. This ensures new pictures and a great variety.

Earnest Willis was in the city Friday completing the arrangements.

Announcement will be made later in The Times.

Another moving picture hall is to be opened up in the near future on South Railway Street by C. Nash and J. T. Williams. The building formerly occupied by C. E. Brotchie has been rented as a hall giving a length of 40 feet.

Irvine Notes.

On Monday last there was an interesting case tried before H. J. Ferguson, J. P. and E. G. Lenwell, J. P. It appears that C. Pearson Stone had been selling hard cider and a sample being sent away to be tested for its alcoholic strength it was proved to be above the strength allowed to be sold by the government without a license, consequently a charge was laid and the defendant was found guilty and fined $50 and costs.

There was a public dance held in the town hall here on New Year's Eve which was exceedingly well attended, numerous visitors coming from many outside points to enjoy a good time. The following were those present: Mr. and Mrs. John Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Munday, Mr. and Mrs. J. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan, Mr. and Mrs. Roman, Mr. and Mrs. G. Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. THE CITY FATHERS.

New Council Starts Its Duties.—Committees Formed.

The first meeting of the council for 1908 took place last night. Present: The Mayor, Alds. Penhale, Baker, Forster, Spencer, Huckvale.

The mayor briefly addressed the new council. He trusted that he would be able to do something to further the interests of Medicine Hat during his term of office, and expressed a wish that all meetings should be conducted in a spirit of friendliness and mutual tolerance. The task before them was not an easy one. It was their duty to get the city into financial shape and he hoped the members would make every effort to attend regularly and be on time. Until the next taxes came in or the debentures were sold there was a shortage of money to carry on the business of the city. He believed that it would be necessary to raise the price of gas. The present price was less than half of what was charged in other places, and the gas formed a source of revenue which would have to be utilized. The question of salaries for firemen was to be dealt with and he suggested that this matter should be dealt with in no personal sense and trusted the council would not fall down on this question. The charter did not make any provision for payment except to commissioners and an amendment would be necessary. The sewer question would have to be dealt with as the guarding of the public health must not be neglected.

The council then went into committee of the whole to consider the striking of standing committees. The following committees were announced: Gas, Ald. Baker, chairman, with Alds. McKay and Tweed; Water, Ald. Penhale, chairman, with Alds. Forster and Huckvale; Finance, Ald. Forster, chairman, with Ald. Spencer and Huckvale; Public Works, Ald. McKay, chairman, with Alds. Huckvale and Tweed; Fire, Water and Light, Ald. Tweed, chairman, with Alds. Baker and Spencer; License, Police and Relief, Ald. Spencer, chairman, with Alds. Penhale and Baker; Parks and Market, Ald. Huckvale, chairman, with Alds. [illegible] and McKay.

A communication was read from the city medical practitioners, asking a grant to use the sidewalks by horse traffic when the state of the roads was bad, in going to and from emergencies. They were willing to take full responsibility should any accident occur. Ald. Baker thought an example would be set to the public which they would be likely to follow and the solicitor saw no reason why anyone going for the doctor should not expect the same privileges. Referred to license and police committee.

The Canada Foundry Co., wrote that the English firm who were supplying the engines had notified them that they would have to charge interest and storage on the plant built for the city. The engines being constructed for natural gas, they were of no use for the general trade. The city were asked to pay the charges and to supply foundation and engine room and allow erectors to start as soon as possible, the city to accept responsibility from date of starting and to pay interest on the amount of contract until the financial condition improved. Ald. Penhale stated that $3,000 would cover the cost of foundation. The mayor thought that special debentures should be issued to provide for the expenditure which would be incurred. The clerk was instructed to enquire as to the terms on which the company would hold the plant.

The John McDougall Co., wrote announcing receipt of letter re shipment of pumps.

The Merchants Bank wrote that the city might take payment for the debentures at any point they deemed fit, and the question of exchange on the money from the point of payment to Medicine Hat might be arranged without reference to the by-law. The council must not delay to place the bonds on the market. The solicitor said that the present council could not bind other councils in the matter of exchange. It was decided that the mayor and chairman of the finance committee should call on Mr. James and explain the situation.

The Burroughs Adding Machine Co. submitted a new proposal for the purchase of their machine. Notified that their proposal could not be accepted.

T. M. Babbington wrote resigning his seat on the council, and disclaiming all rights to the same.

The Bank of Montreal wrote that no applications for advances could be considered until the city bonds are sold.

J. H. Holmes wrote asking for an option on the debentures and George A. Stimson & Co. made a similar request. The clerk was instructed to notify these firms that an option had been already given.

A letter was read from the sec.-treas. of the Agricultural Society asking for the usual grant of $1 per member from the council. There were 142 members. Laid on the table for consideration.

A letter from the solicitor was read dealing with an objection filed by Mrs. Bassett against the extension of the city boundaries by the inclusion of Central Park. The department at Edmonton showed Mrs. Bassett to be owner of more than half the property, whereas, according to the petition such was not the case. Some persons who were property owners according to the petition did not hold the titles, which ought revert to Mrs. Bassett. The solicitor was instructed to take the necessary steps to call the attention of the government to the claim. The secretary-treasurer of the fire department notified the council that a committee had been appointed to interview that body, consisting of Pres. T. Hutchinson, Chief W. Hatcher, Capt. W. B. Finlay. They wanted a third permanent man placed in the fire department.

Chief Meiklejohn reported on the poll taxes collected as follows: Total amount collected $1,029.00; retained 15 per cent. commission, $154.35 paid in to City Treasurer, $874.05. Filed, and poll tax collector commended for the zealous way in which he has performed his work during the year.

The Agricultural Society wrote asking for a generous grant towards the demonstration farm. Alds. Forster, Huckvale and Penhale expressed themselves as strongly in favor of giving a grant to the association. Ald. Baker thought the question was where were they to get the money? Laid on the table.

Finance committee advised payment of following accounts:

The appointment of the auditor for 1908 next came up. Mr. Krauss said he was willing to accept the position but asked for an increase in salary. He said that taking the time he had given to the work, the salary worked out to an average of 45 cents an hour. The present salary was $250 and he asked that it be increased to $400. Mr. Rowe and himself to undertake the work. Referred to special committee to report at adjourned meeting.

The question of Mr. Fewing's claim came up. On Ald. Forster's motion it was decided to ask the city engineer to make a tracing of the levels and base of the foundation.

Ald. Baker brought up the question of the wholesale liquor license to be applied for today for the new building across the track, near the station. He stated that there was no need of a third license of this kind. The railroad was opposed to it and he urged the council to take action. The mayor and Ald. Huckvale thought the council or officials had no authority to act in the matter. Ald. Baker thought the council had a right to express their opinion to the license commissioners. The solicitor stated that eight out of twenty near residents had petitioned against the license, which was sufficient to declare the license unnecessary; but the matter of granting a wholesale license lay at the discretion of the commissioners. No seconder was found for Ald. Baker's motion expressing disapproval of the granting of the license.

The council adjourned at 11.30 till 8 o'clock Thursday evening.

Rev. Lewis Hooper Leaving

Popular Missionary Leaving for B.C.

Everyone will regret to learn of the removal of Rev. Lewis Hooper to British Columbia. Mr. Hooper has had charge of the Josephsburg Mission for three years and has done great work in the district. On account of his health the doctors ordered him to British Columbia, where he takes charge of Langley Mission, 15 miles from New Westminster.

D. C. Haviland, of Josephsburg, will take charge of the local mission until a successor is appointed.

Mr. Hooper has been in the west 25 years, a great part of that time serving in the Mounted Police. His friends wish him speedy recovery.

Death of Mr. Waldock.

Early yesterday morning, John Risely Waldock passed peacefully away at the residence of J. G. Waldock, 420 Montreal Street, at the ripe age of eighty-five years. On New Year's Eve the deceased retired to bed in his usual excellent health and it was during the night that he was seized with the paralytic stroke which finally brought about his demise. Since then he has been unable to speak, and in spite of his robust health, it was evident that he could not hope to live many days. Hemorrhage of the brain was the immediate cause of death.

Mr. Waldock was born in Astwick, Bedfordshire, England, on the 21st March, 1823. His father, George W. Waldock, was the owner of large flour mills and brick yards in Astwick, Stotfold and Bassingbourne. For fifty years the son was actively engaged in the business, which he inherited. He married Miss Ann Hopkins, of Bassingbourne, who predeceased him by thirty years. Coming to Canada in August 1899, he has since lived with his son in Medicine Hat. A well known figure in the city and highly respected, he will be greatly missed by the circle of friends of whom he has made many during his residence in Medicine Hat. The deceased was remarkably hale and strong up to the time of his seizure. He leaves behind three sons, Mr. J. G. Waldock, of this city; Mr. S. O. Waldock, of Kettleby Ont.; and Mr. F. W. Waldock, of Hitchen, Herts, England.

A remarkable coincidence was the death of Mr. J. G. Waldock's son ten years ago. "Mont" Waldock was seized with peritonitis on New Year's Eve and died on January 6.

The funeral took place at the Baptist church today at 2 o'clock to the Hillside cemetery.

New Store North of the Track.

H. S. Ireland, who has been with A. C. Hawthorne on Fourth Street, has opened up a store on South Railway Street. The store will be open for business about the end of this month and the stock will consist of a full line of furnishings, boots and shoes, clothing, hats and caps, etc.

Mr. Ireland is a man well known in the city for his business ability, and should have a very successful future before him in his new enterprise.

Seven Persons Pickings.

Dr. Smythe, of Medicine Hat, made a professional call to J. W. Brown's this week.

Mr. Frank Stephenson, of Bull's Head, had a close call New Year's Day. While coming in a hand car to Seven Persons, he was overtaken by a freight train, and the car was struck before he had time to get it off.

A couple of surveyors created quite a furore in the city this week, but whether laying out lots, locating a new wagon crossing or another side track, no one was able to find out.

There was a large dance at Chas. Tonberg's last Friday. A large attendance was present.

Inspector J. W. Brown was hauling out oats to his ranch.

There is to be a meeting at Mr. Wellington's next Saturday at 13 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a farmers' store.

At the school meeting this week T. O. Neating was re-elected secretary-treasurer with an increase of salary and it was proposed to re-engage Miss Taylor for the coming year if she could be induced to accept the position.

Sam Carlson and family are contemplating a trip to Elko, B. C., and Frank Soderstrom and wife will run the section house in their absence.

The new pump installed in the C. P. R. pump house is a dandy and Mr. Leonard laughs and smokes his pipe while the ball goes up.

We noticed on our streets during the week Mr. Foster, Inspector Brown, J. R. Huntley, Mr. Belford, Mr. Weiss, Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Levine, Mr. Strand, Mr. Leonard, Miss Ada Miller and Miss Murray.

Three Daily Trains.

Will be Running by June 1st.

An improved passenger service will be inaugurated by the C. P. R. next summer which will eclipse all previous efforts to accomodate the travelling public.

It will consist of a triple daily service between Winnipeg and Vancouver. Two of these fliers continuing in the service between Winnipeg and Montreal.

The double daily transcontinental service last summer, efficient as it was, was found inadequate to provide for the record travel to the coast, a record which the C. P. R. anticipates, with reason, will be eclipsed during the coming summer.

The triple daily service, the first in the history of the western section of the road will be inaugurated about June 1.

Tweed-Mullins.

A quiet home wedding took place on New Year's Eve of Miss Rena Mullins, niece of Jas. Hargrave and Mr. H. L. Tweed, eldest son of the late Thos. Tweed and Mrs. Tweed. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. Jas. Hargrave, only the immediate relatives being present. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white colienne over taffeta trimmed with lace and a tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She wore the gift of the groom, a pearl necklace and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Melrose Hargrave, a cousin, played the wedding march and Miss Gertrude White sang "The Sweetest Flower That Blows."

Mr. and Mrs. Tweed left on the Spokane Flyer for the coast for an absence of two months. The bride's going away gown was of dark brown broadcloth, brown hat trimmed with tan.

Mounted Police Notes.

A mystery in connection with the butchering of some cattle has been under investigation by the Mounted Police during the last week or two. A couple of brands cut from the car-Big Voice brought into the barracks casses of animals. He stated he had found the cattle in a hopeless state on the ice near Police Point and slaughtered them for the beef. There were no tracks in the snow, so it was evident the cattle had been there since Dec. 26, the date of the last snowfall and the Indians did not slaughter them till several days later. It is surmised that the animals strayed on the ice and were unable to get back. The brand of the steers was identified by Mr Jackson as an animal that had run with his herd.

Eighteen horses were recently stolen from Porcupine's herd. A number of them have been found at Swift Current, and will be returned to the Indian chief. Who the culprit is is not known.

New Photographic Studio.

R. de Savoye is opening a photographic studio at the corner of Toronto Street and Fourth Avenue. Mr. de Savoye has had many years experience in the art in the city of Paris, France before he came to this country. For some time he has been engaged in the business in the prairie provinces, principally in the Arcola and Regina districts.

Mr. de Savoye will be ready to receive on the 15th of the month.

Foster's Forecast.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4—The last bulletin gave forecast of a disturbance to cross the continent Jan. 5 to 7, the great central valleys, Jan. 4 to 8, and the eastern States, Jan. 7 to 11. The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about Jan. 10, cross the Pacific slope by close of Jan. 11, the great central valleys Jan. 12 to 14, and eastern States Jan. 15. A warm wave will cross the Pacific slope about Jan. 10, the great central valleys, Jan. 12 and the eastern States Jan. 14. A cool wave will cross the Pacific slope about Jan. 13, the great central valleys Jan. 15, and the eastern States Jan. 17.

This will be a moderate disturbance until it reaches the eastern States when and where it will increase in severity and as it goes out on the northern Atlantic it will become a furious storm.

The warm wave of this disturbance will be moderate and the cool wave moderate indicating a great rise in temperatures from Jan. 10 to 19. About Jan. 10 very low temperatures will prevail on meridian 90.

Not much precipitation can be expected with this disturbance and not much until Jan. 19. Rainfall of January is expected to be very light within 500 miles of Burlington, Iowa; also in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi; also in Maryland, eastern Virginia and the district of Columbia. Elsewhere from about to above normal rainfall. Looks like heavy rains in Texas for January.

This shortage of rainfall in the great corn and winter wheat producing sections looks bad as it will be continued into February and March and start the crop season in with a drouth.

Temperatures of January will be comparatively lowest in the extreme south. Elsewhere the month will average much warmer than usual.

About and immediately after Jan. 4 extreme weather events may be expected. Not very cold and not very much precipitation, but the storms will be fierce.

The school for grain judging will be held by the Alberta government in this city on Jan. 10. The poultry and dairy meetings will be held on Feb. 5, at 2 and 8 p.m.

Meteorological report for week ending Jan. 6, 1908:

with Binghamton.

Billy Smith was one of the most promising players, but when he was diving in Toronto Bay he struck his head and died from his injuries. Shindle, Serad and Griffin were among the players who graduated into the big league.

A change was made in the league in 1887, Newark, Jersey City and Scranton being taken in, Oswego being dropped. When Utica disbanded Wilkesbarre took its place. Binghamton also quit before the season was over. Hamilton had one of the strongest teams in the league, but it became demoralized before the season was over, and finished fifth, Toronto winning the pennant. That is the year E. S. Cox wrote on the blackboard at Toronto his famous message: "Citizens of Toronto, are you satisfied?"

Peter B. Wood was back with Hamilton that year and did some great pitching. It was no uncommon thing for him to pitch two games in a day and win them both. In addition to being one of the great pitchers of his time, he was a hard hitter and could always be depended on for a hit when it was needed.

The other pitchers were Jones and Horner, of the pony battery; Horner and Warner. Big Moxie McQuery played first base the other infielders being Collins, Marr, Phillips, and Rainey. The outfielders were the great trio, Wright, Knight and Mansell. There were seven left-handed batters and how they could lace out the ball, except when they bumped up against a southpaw. Pitching for Binghamton, Eddie Green retired them without a hit or a run. Parsons, of the Rochesters, who had a slow ball, was another pitcher who puzzled them. The team led in fielding and stood second in batting. During the season it played fourteen errorless games. It won ten straight games in one stretch, and eleven in another. The best game was when Rainey was sold to New York and McQuery went to Syracuse. Although the Torontos captured the flag the Hamiltons won seven out of twelve games in the series. They had their hardest luck against Newark, winning only four out of eleven games. Yet Hamilton played a remarkable game against Newark on the latter's grounds. It was the game when Jim Mutrie, of the New York team, was on hand to see Rainey play, and Jack covered himself with glory and a deal for his release was made after the game. Jack Horner was pitching and he sent the first two men to first on balls. One man stole third. A hot ball was knocked to Rainey, who jumped up into the air, caught it with one hand, touched the base and threw to second, completing a triple play. After that Newark got only two hits off Horner. Hamilton winning by a score of 3 to 0.

When he was at his best Mickey Jones did good work. Little Jack Horner did not have much speed but he had a great assortment of curves. He seemed lost when his partner, Warner, was not behind the bat. The infield was a regular stone wall, and Knight, Wright and Mansell took good care of the outfield.

Charlie Collins seldom let a good player slip through his hands, but he did this year. Billy Hallman was signed as catcher, but as the team had Jack Morrison, Moore and Horner, he was released. Hallman afterwards turned out one of the best players in the National league.

Humilton's great rivals that year were Toronto, Rochester and Syracuse, the home games with these teams drawing the largest crowds. Toronto's great battery were big Ned Crane and Decker, Slattery, the outfielder, was also a good man. Joe Visner, McGlone, Jim Knowles, Zimmer and Parsons were Rochester's stars. Syracuse had a hard hitting team with Lefty Marr, Ollie Beard, Simon, Bettman and Buckley. Grant, the colored second baseman, did great work for Buffalo, and the first baseman, Lehane, was always good for a hit. Hamburg was also a good hitter. Buffalo opened the season here, With Pete Wood in the box, Hamilton won, Mickey Jones pitched the second game. The score was tie, 5-5, at the end of the ninth. Hamilton failed to score in the tenth, Hamburg, the first batter for Buffalo, put the ball over the left field fence and won the game.

There were good men in the other teams, including Pitcher, Titcomb, O'Brien, Friel, Murphy, with Jersey City; Irwin, Fields, Stovey, Walker, Henry and Coogan, with Newark and Ely, Lyons, Casey, Tomney and Green, with Binghampton, Utica lost a number of its best players and the team had to quit before the season was over.

Albany, London and Troy were taken into the league in 1888. Newark and Jersey City being dropped. Syracuse won the pennant with Toronto second, Rochester third and Hamilton fourth. The Hamiltons carried off the honor in the Canadian end of the series, winning ten out of sixteen games from both Toronto and London. The local team lost a majority of the games played with Syracuse and Rochester. Not many changes were made in the Hamilton team. Ed. Swartwood played first base for a time, and when Tom Lynch was signed he went to right field. Charley Collins went to Rochester and second base was covered by Andrews and Wood. Green and Jones were the pitchers and the catching was done by Visner, Sun Purvis and Thayer. Visner was a powerful fellow and could catch every day. He was a fine thrower and it took a fast runner to steal second on him. He made one of the longest hits ever seen at Dundurn, sending the ball over the trees in centre field. Jack Rainey was back with the team, the big league proving too fast for him. Jack was a good fielder and a reliable batter, but he had a peculiar throw. Syracuse had a strong team with Rosty Wright, Ely, Beard, McQuerry Marr, Battin, Higgins, Mingley and Walker. Monkey Murphy was not a great pitcher, but he won a number of his games by his kidding. Toronto lost Ed. Crane, Slattery and Albert, but it had Eddie Burke, who afterwards went to New York. Dennie Connors, Hartnett, Richley, McLaughlin, Tommy Kearns, Decker, Anderson and Doc Sheppard. This was London's first appearance in the league, and its team was composed of Shiebeck, third base; Patsy Donovan, a great fielder; Dickerson, third base; Quinn, left field; Kinslow, Powers, Bishop and Husted. Kinslow was a good catcher and afterwards went into the big league. The Hamiltons sold Pete Wood to Philadelphia for $3,000, and Rainey, Knight, Thayer and Andrus went to Buffalo, and Marr Phillips to Rochester. It was hard to part with old favorites who had been with the team so long. The teams of 1887 and 1888 had no superiors in the league, especially that of 1887, the only weak spot being the catchers, who couldn't throw but in other respects it could not be improved on. In 1888 the team was strong behind the bat but it missed McQuery. Wright and Collins.

In 1889, Albany and Troy were league, and its team was composed of Hamilton, London, Rochester, Syracuse, Toledo, Toronto, Detroit and Buffalo. Detroit won the pennant, with Syracuse second, Rochester third, Toronto fourth, and Hamilton away back.

With the exception of Swartwood all the Hamilton players were new men. Ed. Swartwood was manager and he discovered two great players in Fo[illegible] and pitcher Blair. Brodie was [illegible] the best fielders who ever played [illegible] the league, and he afterwards made his mark with league teams. Blair was a left hander and pitched a number of good games. He was sold to Chicago, but died during the winter. Old Bill Phillips played first base; Tommy Kearns, second; Eddie Sales, short; Pete McShannic, third, and McCann and Swartwood in the outfield. The team did not make much of a showing and to strengthen it, Abner Powell, pitcher Petty, catcher Spies and Polhemus were secured from the Southern league. He pitched his first against the Torontos. They made five hits off him in the first two innings, but after that they could not touch him. Dug Crother, pitcher, was also signed, but he was only fairly successful at times. Tommy Kearns played brilliantly, but he also made costly errors. McShannic was a beautiful thrower but not a reliable fielder, and he was weak at the bat. Bill Phillips had seen his best days before he came here, but occasionally the old fellow hit hard. Brodie was a wonder, and could cover centre as well as left field, and you couldn't stop him on the bases. He would start to slide ten feet from the bag, and it was a marvel that he never got hurt. In one game he caught a fly with his hands behind his back. For a big man, Swartwood was remarkably successful in stealing bases.

Detroit had one of the strongest teams that ever played in the league. Knauss, a southpaw, Shreve and Goodfellow were the battery. Virtue covered first base; Higgins second; Wheelock, short; Joe McGlone, third; Count Campaw, Shaffer and Rooke, outfielders. Toronto's prominent players were Burke, Grim, Rickley, McLaughlin, Swift, Vickery and Jim McGuire. Buffalo had Fanning, Rainey, Lehane, Dealey, Hamburg, Stuart, Thayer and Fanning. On Toledo's pay roll were Perry Werden, Old Doc Quest, Morton, Sneed, Billy Bottenus, Sunier, Morton, Sage, Smith, Stalling and Wehrie. Not many changes were made in Rochester and Syracuse. Jones and Wood pitched for London; Bucke, Easterbrooke and Sam Laroque played first base; Dickerson, second, Frank Schiebeck, third; Petee, short; Murray, catcher; Donovan and Knight, outfielders.

Syracuse and Rochester dropped out in 1890, the league being composed of Hamilton, Detroit, Buffalo, London, Toronto and Saginaw, Bay City. The Detroit team remained intact, out-classing the others, and the league broke up before the close of the season. Hamilton lost Blair and Brodie, who were sold; Kearns, there were new faces on the team, including Ed. Cartwright, who is now Bill Phillips and Swartwood, and employed at the rolling mill; Frank Foulkrod, Dowie, Dan Casey, Pig Ward, Chris Fulmer, Sprogell, Miller, Twohey, Latouche and Miller. With the exception of Cartwright, it was a weak team. Pig Ward was a great coacher, getting on the line and calling off a number of figures to rattle the opposing pitcher.

This wound up the International league. Considerable money was lost by the directors and those associated with them in the team, but they were plucky and did their best to give Hamilton people good baseball.

OTHER LEAGUES.

Except for amateur teams baseball was dead until 1897, when a Canadian league, composed of Hamilton, London, Guelph and Toronto, was organized. Charlie Maddock managed the Toronto team, but as that city was represented in the Eastern league, it did not last long. The local team was composed of H. Eugene McCann, who played with Jersey City; McGinnis, Shorty Conwell, Tommy McAndrew, Mark Phillips, Jimmy Deane, Lauer and Mallot and Cochran, Doc Sippi, Ward and Jimmy Cockman played with London and Congalton and Tommy Dark were Guelph's stars.

In 1898, another international league was organized, being composed of Hamilton, Bay City, London, St. Thomas, Saginaw and Port Huron, but several of the teams disbanded before the close of the season. The Hamilton team was composed of Congalton, Phillips, Schrall, Eltom, Deane, Pete Hagerty, McCann, Conwell and George Bradford.

THE LONGEST GAME.

A remarkable game, 19 innings, the longest ever played here, took place on June 29, 1898, between Hamilton and Port Huron. Marr Phillips scored the winning run for Hamilton, Eltom bringing him in on a safe hit. The full score was:

A Canadian league composed of Hamilton, London, Chatham, St. Thomas, Stratford, Guelph and Woodstock had a short existence in 1899.

Another attempt was made at an International league composed of Hamilton, London, Grand Rapids, Port Huron and Chatham in 1900, but it ended in failure. Hamilton's team was composed of Sheehan, Cockman, McKevitt, McAndrew, Brodrick, Doran, Bradford, Needland, Beere and Conwell. Pete Lohman got together a great team for London, the stars being pitcher Siever, now with Detroit; Pitcher Cooper, Hemphill, Charlie Jones, now of the Washingtons; Hart and Mohler, Chatham developed the great fielder Sam Crawford of the Detroits.

This ended professional baseball in Hamilton and since then the people have had to be satisfied with city league teams. No man did more for the game here than William Stroud, who was interested in the team since the days of the Eagles. James Dixon, W. R. Davis, Thomas Crooks, William Malcolm, John Patterson and Richard Mackay also did a great deal for the game. In the old days Lem Fletcher, E. S. Cox and Mike McSonnell were the main stays of the Toronto team.

The last and most popular players who ever wore a Hamilton uniform were pitchers Wood, Chamberlin, Blair and Jones; Moore, Visner, catchers McQuery and Ed. Cartwright, first basemen; Collins, Kearns and Andrews, second basemen; Marr Phillips, shortston; Rainey, third baseman, and Brodie, Wright, Knight and Mansell, outfielders.

Red Cliff Clippings.

Red Cliff is booming now and presents quite a different appearance from what it did six months ago.

W. O. Buck returned today from the east where he was spending the holidays.

Fred Courtnell spent this week in Bowell, attending dances and having a good time generally.

Talk about the weather; we are sometimes inclined to think the seasons have reversed and we are having an ideal spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Anderson spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Crouch and left Wednesday for Halbrite, Sask., where Mr. Anderson has a position as teacher.

Santa Claus was a conspicuous figure on our streets Christmas Eve and as all the children of Red Cliff were spending the evening at Mr. Crouch's, he stayed longer there than any other place. He must have come in an air ship for he couldn't go in a sleigh without snow.

Some one must have had a roasted pig for Christmas as one of Rev. Brubaker's fat hogs was missing Christmas eve and no trace of it has yet been discovered.

Quite a few people from Bowell have been hauling coal from the Stoner mines the last few weeks.

Mr. Row and Mr. Burns of the Hat took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker New Year's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Crouch and children and Mr. Courtnell spent Christmas evening with Mr. and Mrs. William Dodge. Games and music were the order of the evening.

The boys at the Fleming ranch gave a dance New Year's Eve which was quite well attended, and dancing was continued until a late hour Wednesday, a.m.

The carpenters are busy now putting the roof on Mr. Brubaker's new house and he will soon be able to move into it.

We hear that one of our residents had a few too many drops of firewater in the Hat last week and the police were oblieed to care for him. Too bad! When we were just congratulating ourselves on being a well behaved set of people, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker and their son and daughter drove over to Bentinck Saturday to visit their son Elmer who is living on a homestead there.

An Educative Campaign.

(The Peterboro Daily Review.)

Trade newspapers generally are well patronized. A glance over the advertising columns reveals the fact that the wholesalers recognize the benefits and advantages of printers' ink. Nearly every supply house, jobbing establishment and manufacturing concern, tell in plain, simple, yet attractive and convincing style, just what they have to offer. Each one points out the superior merits of his goods, and certainly these announcements must bring returns or those using the columns of trade periodicals would withdraw their patronage.

The trade paper is rendering the local newspapers good service by urging upon retailers the advisibility and necessity of advertising. The educative campaign, so ably conducted by the trade papers, and gradually reaching those who never before have acknowledged the virtue of printers' ink as a means of increasing their sales is bringing around to the proper way of thinking, and regard advertising as a desirable and widely circulated space medium, as a splendid investment, and not as an expenditure, which may, in a dull period, or by reason of other pressing needs, be dispensed with. The retailer is becoming impressed and convinced. He recognizes that if publicity pays the jobber, it must certainly yield a return to the retailer, and to a greater extent.

The wholesaler has several representatives on the road to solicit trade and secure orders, but the retailer has, generally speaking, no able pricesl courteous clerks, attractive representative to go directly to the people. He must make his appeals to the great purchasing public, through the best means at his disposal. He must invite trade, as he cannot send a canvasser around from door to door. First-class goods, reasonable prices, courteous clerks, attractive premises, nicely dressed windows they will not accomplish the object sought. The appeal made in all the lines spoken of must be backed up and strengthened by well directed and appropriately worded advertisements. In this world but little comes to the man or institution that sits down and waits. If anything is worth having, it is worth going after in a business-like, systematic manner.

The trade journal, in season and out of season, is pointing this all out, directing, guiding and counselling merchants in the work. It deserves great credit for what it has accomplished.

I would not own a business that I could not advertise remarked a speaker at a recent banquet. This is the right sentiment, the proper spirit, and if all retailers would take the same view their lot would be immeasurably improved. The man who advertises and does it well, who specializes in this department as he does in all others, is the "man" who survives in days of stress and keen competition, who is ever increasing and enlarging his premises and keeping pace with the times. After all, business nowadays is largely a survival of the fittest, and not a problem to be worked out, as many suppose, along the lines of least resistance and narrow conceptions as to expenditure and ideals.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

"We shan't want," he said, "at least £2,000 to start it, for we must have an armed force of our own. We have to penetrate a cannibal country of the fiercest devils in Africa. It is a plateau, a little plateau of two square miles, and the niggers think that it is haunted by an evil spirit. When we get there we shall have to hold it by force of arms, and when we send the stuff down to the coast we must have an escort of picked men. The bushes grow up there as thick as gooseberry bushes in a garden at home. With a little cultivation they will yield twice as much as they do now. We shall want another partner. I know a man, a soldierly fellow, full of fight, who knows the natives and the country. I will undertake to lead you there, but you will have to take great care of me.

"Yes," said the Englishman, "yes, go on."

You will have to have me carried most of the way. I am weak, devilish weak, and I am afraid of dying, but I know the way there, and no other man can say as much. It is in my head here; it is not written down. It is only in my head, and no one can get it out of there."

"No," said Meredith in his quiet, refined voice—"no, no one can get it out. Come, let us turn in. Tomorrow I will go down the river with you. I will turn back, and we can talk it over as we go downstream."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHAT Meredith proposed to do was to enter into a partnership with Victor Durnovo, and, when the purpose of it was accomplished to let each man go his way. A month later Victor Durnovo was in London. He left behind him in Africa Jack Meredith, whose capacities for organization were developing very quickly.

There was plenty of work for each to do. In Africa Meredith had undertaken to get together men and boats, while Durnovo went home to Europe for a threefold purpose. First, a visit to Europe was absolutely necessary for his health, shattered as it was by too long a sojourn in the fever ridden river beds of the west coast. Secondly, there were rifles, ammunition and stores to be purchased and packed in suitable cases. And, lastly, he was to find and enlist the third man, "the soldierly fellow, full of fight," who knew the natives and the country.

This, indeed, was his first care on reaching London, and before his eyes and brain were accustomed to the roar of the street life he took a cab to Russell square, giving the number affixed to the door of a gloomy house in the least frequented corner of the stately quadrangle.

"Is Mr. Guy Oscard at home?" he inquired of the grave manservant.

"He is, sir," replied the butler, stepping aside.

Oscard came forward and shook hands. His manner was not exactly effusive. The truth was that their acquaintanceship in Africa had been of the slightest, dating from some trivial services which Durnovo had been able and very eager to render to the sportsman.

"I'm all right, thanks," replied Durnovo. "I only landed at Liverpool yesterday. I'm home on business. I'm buying rifles and stores."

Guy Oscard's honest face lighted up at once—the curse of Ishmael was on him in its full force. He was destined to be a wanderer on God's earth, and all things appertaining to the wild life of the forests were music in his ears.

Durnovo was no mean diplomatist. He had learned to know man within a white or colored skin. The effect of his words was patent to him.

"You remember the simiacine?" he said abruptly.

"Yes."

"I've found it."

"The deuce you have! Sit down."

Durnovo took the chair indicated.

"Yes, sir," he said. "I've got it. I've told my mind on it at last. I've always been on its track. That has been my little game all the time. I did not tell you when we met out there, because I was afraid I should never find it and because I wanted to keep quiet about it."

Guy Oscard was looking out of the window across to the dull houses and chimneys that formed his horizon, and in his eyes there was the longing for a vaster horizon, a larger life.

"I have got a partner," continued Durnovo, "a good man, Jack Meredith, son of Sir John Meredith. You have, perhaps, met him."

"No," answered Oscard, "but I have heard his name, and I have met Sir John, the father, once or twice."

"He is out there," went on Durnovo, "getting things together quietly. I have come home to buy rifles, ammunition and stores."

He paused, watching the eager, simple face.

"We want to know," he said quietly, "if you will organize and lead the fighting men."

Guy Oscard drew a deep breath.

"Then there is to be fighting?"

"Yes," said Durnovo; "there will be fighting. We must fight our way there and we must hold it when we get there. But so far as the world is concerned, we are only a private expedition exploring the source of the Ogowe."

"The Ogowe?" and again Guy Oscard's eyes lighted up.

"Yes. I do not mind telling you that much. To begin with, I trust you. Secondly, no one could get there without me to lead the way."

"How long will it take?" asked Guy.

Durnovo tugged at his strange, curtain-like mustache. His mouth was hidden. It was quite impossible to divine his thoughts.

"Three months to get there," he answered at length, "one month to pick the leaf, and then you can bring the first crop down to the coast and home, while Meredith and I stay on at the plateau."

"I could be home again in eight months?"

"Certainly. We thought that you might work the sale of the stuff in London, and in a couple of years or so, when the thing is in swing, Meredith will come home. We can safely leave the cultivation in native hands when once we have established ourselves up there and made ourselves respected among the tribes."

"I suppose," Guy said after a pause, "that there is the question of money?"

"Yes; Meredith and I have talked that over. The plan we fixed upon was that you and he each put a thousand pounds into it; I put five hundred. For the first two years we share the profits equally. After that we must come to some fresh arrangement should you or Meredith wish to give up an active part in the affair. I presume you would not object to coming up at the end of the year with a handy squad of men to bring down the crop under escort?"

"No," responded Oscard after a moment's reflection. "I should be able to do that."

"I reckon," continued the other, "that the journey down could be accomplished in two months, and each time you do the trip you will reduce your time."

"Yes."

"Of course," Durnovo went on, with the details which he knew were music in Oscard's ears—"of course we shall be a clumsy party going up. We shall have heavy loads of provisions, ammunition and seeds for cultivating the land up there."

"Yes," replied Guy Oscard absently. In his ears there rang already the steady plash of the paddle, the weird melancholy song of the boatman, the music of the wind amid the forest trees.

Durnovo rose briskly.

"Then," he said, "you will join us? I may telegraph out to Meredith that you will join us?"

"Yes," replied Oscard simply. "You may do that."

"There is no time to be lost," Durnovo went on. "Every moment wasted adds to the risk of our being superseded. I sail for Loango in a fortnight. Will you come with me?"

"Yes."

When Durnovo had gone Guy sat down and wrote to Lady Cantourne accepting her invitation to spend a few days at Cantourne Place, on the Solent. He explained that his visit would be in the nature of a farewell, as he was about to leave for Africa for a little big game hunting.

* * * * * * *

Miss Millicent Chyne was walking on the sea wall at the end of the garden with Guy Oscard. One of the necessary acquirements of a modern educational outfit is the power of looking perfectly at home in a score of different costumes during the year, and, needless to say, Miss Chyne was perfectly finished in this art. The manner in which she wore her sailor hat, her blue serge and her neat brown shoes conveyed to the onlooker, and especially the male of that species (we cannot in conscience call them observers), the impression that she was a yachtswoman born and bred. Her delicate complexion was enhanced by the faintest suspicion of sunburn and a few exceedingly becoming freckles. There was a freedom in her movements which had not been observed in London drawing rooms. This was Diana-like and in perfect keeping with the dainty sailor outfit; moreover, nine men out of ten would fail to attribute the difference to sundry cunning strings within the (London) skirt.

"It is sad," Millicent was saying, "to think that we shall have no more chances of sailing. The wind has quite dropped, that horrid tide is running, and this is your last day."

She ended with a little laugh, knowing full well that there was little sentiment in the big man by her side.

"Really," she went on, "I think I should be able to manage a boat in time, don't you think so? Please encourage me. I am sure I have tried to learn."

"I do not know if you have learned much," he answered; "but I have."

"What have you learned?" she asked in a low voice, half fascinated by the danger into which she knew that she was running.

"That I love you," he answered, standing squarely in front of her and announcing the fact with a deliberate honesty which was rather startling. "I was not sure of it before, so I stayed away from you for three weeks; but now I know for certain."

"Oh, you mustn't say that!"

She rose hastily and turned away from him. There was in her heart a sudden feeling of regret. It was the feeling that the keenest sportsman sometimes has when some majestic monarch of the forest falls before his merciless rifle—a sudden passing desire that it might be undone.

"Why not?" he asked. He was desperately in earnest, and that which made him a good sportsman—an unmatched big game hunter, calm and self-possessed in any strait—gave him a strange deliberation now, which Millicent Chyne could not understand.

"Why not?"

"I do not know — because you mustn't."

And in her heart she wanted him to say it again.

"I am not ashamed of it," he said, "and I do not see why I should not say it to you—or to any one else, so far as that goes."

"No, never!" she cried, really frightened. "To me it does not matter so much. But to no one else—no, never! Aunt Marian must not know it—nor Sir John."

"I cannot see that it is any business of Sir John's. Of course, Lady Cantourne would have liked you to marry a title; but if you cared for me she would be ready to listen to reason."

In which judgment of the good lady he was no doubt right, especially if reason spoke with the voice of £3,000 per annum.

"Do you care for me?" he asked coming a little closer.

There was a whole world of gratified vanity and ungratified curiosity for her in the presence of this strong man at her elbow. It was one of the supreme triumphs of her life, because he was different from the rest. He was for her what his first tiger had been for him. The danger that he might come still nearer had for her a sense of keen pleasure. She was thoroughly enjoying herself, and the nearest approach that men can experience to the joy that was hers is the joy of battle.

"I cannot answer that—not now."

And the little half shrinking glance over her shoulder was a low-booming unmaidenly invitation. But he was in earnest; and he was, above all, a gentleman. He stood his ground a yard away from her.

"Then when," he asked, "when will you answer me?"

She stood with her back turned toward him, looking out over the smooth waters of the Solent, where one or two yachts and a heavy black schooner were creeping up on the tide before the morning breeze. She drummed reflectively with her fingers on the low stone wall. Beneath them a few gulls whirled and screamed over a shoal of little fish. One of the birds had a singular cry, as if it were laughing to itself.

"You said just now," Millicent answered at length, "that you were not sure yourself — not at first — and therefore you cannot expect me to know all at once."

"You should know at once," he argued gravely, "if it were going to be 'no.' If you do not say 'no' now, I can only think that it may be 'yes' some day. And"—he came closer; he took the hand that hung at her side, conveniently near—"and I don't want you to say 'no' now. Don't say 'no!' I will wait as long as you like for 'yes.' Millicent, I would rather go on waiting and thinking that it is going to be 'yes,' even if it is 'no' after all."

She said nothing, but she left her hand in his.

"May I go on thinking that it will be 'yes' until I come back?"

"I cannot prevent your thinking, can I?" she whispered, with a tender look in her eyes.

"May I write to you?"

She shook her head.

"Well—I—I— Now and then," he pleaded. "Not often. Just to remind you of my existence."

She gave a little laugh, which he liked exceedingly and remembered afterward.

"If you like," she answered.

At this moment Lady Cantourne's voice was heard in the distance calling them.

"There!" exclaimed Millicent. "We must go at once. And no one—no one, mind—must know of this."

"No one shall know of it," he answered.

CHAPTER IX.

THOSE who for their sins have been to Loango will scarcely care to have its beauties recalled to memory. And to such as have not visited the spot one can only earnestly recommend a careful avoidance.

Suffice it to say, therefore, that there is such a place, and the curious may find it marked in larger type than it deserves on the map of Africa, on the west coast of that country and within an inch or so of the equator.

"This is not cheery," Jack Meredith observed to his servant as they found themselves deposited on the beach within a stone's throw of the French factory.

The Great Failure.

Creditors of the ill-omened James Whitcomb Exposition have applied to the courts for a receivership and thus call public attention called to the failure of an enterprise of which so much was expected. So exposition ever held on this continent was so well planned in theory, and so utterly incompetent in practice, as the Jamestown Tercentennial. The great world's fair at Chicago was the commemoration of the first English community on this continent; but the Chicago fair was an experiment, and had to conquer all eastern prejudice against all things connected with the great western metropolis. The Jamestown Exposition was founded on an event that needs no bolstering to make its irresistible appeal to the imagination of every English-speaking person in North America. Yet this exposition in which 3 millions of dollars were spent, did not attract the people like the Canadian national fair. The concern is $2,000,000 in debt, $900,000 of it is owed to the United States government.

A post mortem on the Jamestown fair reveals the fact that its fatality, when the visiting dignitaries and the representatives of the newspapers were so discourteously and stupidly handled. But in construction and conception the Exposition was magnificent. It covered 400 acres of ground and overlooked the very place where the Monitor and the Merrimac fought. The architecture and the gardening and the building were said to surpass any other American Exposition. Anchored within view of the grounds were several war ships whose business it was to entertain and thrill the visitors. Many noted military organizations gave realistic sham battles, and performed other warlike manoeuvres. Airships sailed and collapsed overhead; famous athletes contended on track and field; and on paper, there seemed no possibility of the public staying away from the attractions.

But apart from the mismanagement of inauguration day the Exposition had many a misfortune to complain about. In the first place the Government loan was long delayed. The work had to be done with labor and materials at a very high price. April, May and June unrolled the worst kind of exhibition weather and the famous Government piers, advertised as the crowning attraction, were not ready for dedication until the second week in September. To these misfortunes were added a row over the management of the coterprise. Several gentlemen contended for a sort of dedicatorship over the exposition, the final master turning up in a politician. The average day attendance was from three to five thousand, the biggest day 50,000 and the daily expenses $5,000.

The local newspapers, with misguided patriotism, kept on booming the fair, and insisted that it was a tremendous success; but the outside papers, whose reports really counted, saw fit to criticize unsparingly. They insisted that the exposition was a failure, and their readers stayed away. The transportation at Jamestown was miserable. They assisted in the failure. The Norfolk and Portsmouth Traction Co, owned by Richmond, New York and Philadelphia capitalists, controlled the two trolley lines running to the grounds. The fare by the Ocean View route was 15 cents straight, by Pine Beach way the company sold tickets six for a quarter or 10 cents straight. The service on the cheaper line was execrable, it appearing that the trolley company did all in its power to throw traffic to the 15 cent line. It succeeded it seems, for thousands of passengers, tired of waiting for cars on the cheaper line, paid the extra nickel and returned by the Ocean View route. The schedules of the extra steamers were uncertain and the service slow, with the result that many of them quit early in the game their backers losing thousands of dollars. The backing was principally local, and the old town of Norfolk has been hit harder than perhaps ever in her history.

The hotels nobly assisted in the work of destruction by their exhorbitant charges in the first few days of the fair; and though later on they reduced their rates, the indignant howl had gone forth all over the on till last Saturday night, when the gates and doors were locked. It is suggested that it might re-open next year, under different management, but this is considered extremely unlikely.

A glance at some of the figures, showing the indebtedness of the company, would not encourage the hope of another exposition next year.

Government loan to exposition	$1,000,000
and aid	2,000,000
Other government loans
Railroads loan	200,00
Total debt remaining	2,500,000
Norfolk and Portsmouth Bankers' loan	65,000

Daily Salary expenses	5,000

country, and thousands were frightened away. From the beginning the enterprise lost ground, and although it closed only a few days ago, it was almost decided to abandon it four months earlier. But local bankers came to the rescue of the company with $65,000, and the railroads made a pool of $200,000, so it struggled

The Weak Spot.

(Calgary News.)

The weak spot in the Liberal administration at Ottawa, as it was at Toronto, during the Mowat-Hardy-Ross regime, is the nepotism of the members of the Cabinet and the supporters of the government.

Every member of the cabinet who has had relatives has had a number of them farmed out on the public preserve, regardless of qualification. All that was required of the appointed one was the ability to answer the roll call when the pay car passed his way.

Another crying evil has been the manner of selecting members of parliament or ex-members to fill public positions for which in many instances they had no qualifications.

The auditor-general's report, published annually, makes good reading along this line and proves conclusively that under existing conditions the easy path to government office is by way of having represented a constituency, and that the next best is to be a relative of some member.

This was the foolish policy that was pursued by the Ross administration, where relatives of Ross, Dryden, Gibson and the rest were put into positions to the detriment of more competent and more deserving members of the Liberal party. And this was one of the features of misgovernment that wiped out that government when they faced the people,—when but two members were elected on polling day, and these only by the skin of their teeth.

There is only one way for governments to continue to secure the support of the people, and that is by the efforts of a strong premier who will not hesitate to crowd out of his cabinet any member who looks upon public office as anything but a public trust.

When a member of parliament or a cabinet minister looks upon the public domain as a private preserve to be exploited in the interest of himself and family, it is full time for the premier to step in with the date properly filled in on the accepted resignation of the gentleman who has forgotten what he owes to the people of this country.

The Liberals should see to it that there will be no more scuttling of the government ship along this line, as was done by Ross and his fellow-buccaneers, and the Tories should find in this hint good fighting material during the session.

And the auditor-general's annual report is a mine of wealth untold to the seeker after truth in the matters above referred to.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Drink and the gang drinks with you; swear off and you go it alone, for the bar room bum who drinks your rum has a querulous taste of his own. Feast and your friends are many; fast and they cut you dead; they'll not get mad if you treat them bad so long as their stomachs are fed. Steal if you get a million, for then you can furnish bail; it's the limit thief who gets out on leave while the little one goes to jail. Advertise and the dollars come rolling; quit and they fail to arrive; for how are men who have money to spend to know that you are still alive.

One of the evidences of the waste of money of the Liberal government is shown in the granting of $15,700 for a wharf near a small town in Eastern Ontario—Colborne. The town of Colborne is over a mile from the lake. There is another wharf in a much more suitable position as regards protection, only a mile west. The new wharf will be built right in the open lake without any protection whatever, and after it is built nobody will ever use it but the boys in the swimming season. Colborne has about as much need for a wharf as Medicine Hat has for an underground railway.

A special Christmas number was put out by the Edmonton Bulletin. It is by long odds the best this year. It is made up in large magazine style, printed on heavy coated paper and with a special cover. It contains Christmas stories and local descriptive articles, with exceptionally good cuts.

The Cranbrook Herald also got out two extra large issues on its special book paper. The Herald carried an ad. for every place in town and did a lot to show that Cranbrook is very much alive.

The Saskatoon Phoenix and Lethbridge Herald used Christmas covers, highly lithographed, after the style of the Christmas Times.

Just while we're on it, this Lethbridge Herald is producing a fine daily, a most readable eight pages, although it is only a couple of weeks old.

Woods, who formerly ran the Canadian Grain and Stock Co., which had a branch in Medicine Hat, is getting further bumps in the States. The Federal grand jury is after the Wisconsin Grain and Stock Co., of which Woods is head. The company is accused of similar crimes to those proven against the Canadian Company.

The Times subscription lists have always been open to advertisers. All you have to do to convince yourself is to call at The Times office. And of the size of The Times circulation it is all LIVE, LOCAL circulation—no unordered or ordered out names, no big list of far off circulation dead to the advertiser.

The Times has never sought a circulation useless to the advertiser. That's why advertising in The Times pays.

The Times believes the aldermen should work under the same conditions as those under which they were elected. That's why it does not seem right to pay them this year. This reason may be more "obscure" than is the reason of The News for thinking it "obscure."

Now, that 1908 is upon us it might be a good idea to talk less about the "glad hand" and work more along that line. A local woman in commenting publicly upon The Times editorial of some issues ago, said that she had recently been calling in the interests of a local institution, and had found two women on one street who had been here some time and had never had one woman speak to them. Let the newcomer feel he or she is wanted.

There are a hundred reasons why Medicine Hat should reach the top for growth in 1908, and they are becoming better known every day. The personal touch which will be given the inclinations of manufacturers by the visit to the east of John T. Hall should mean a lot to the city for thisyear.

Medicine Hat is not the creature of chance, nor of boost, but has most of the qualifications which make it a desirable place in which to locate industries. Medicine Hat simply needs to be known as it is.

Already the real estate men are looking forward to March as the beginning of the 1908 rush. They have every confidence that the city will make good, as it did in 1907. In fact Medicine Hat will be the gainer by the falling off in speculation. She has the opportunities for investment and there is sure to be a lot of money free this year that will be placed in such safe places as Medicine Hat and not risked in towns where the buying is of a purely speculative nature.

The decision of the ratepayers to build a spur line to the free factory sites granted by Bennett & Hamilton will place the city in the best position for starting the big industrial expansion we know is coming in 1908. In Industrial Place factories will have the greatest facilities for manufacturing.

That British capital is looking to Canada more than ever is evident from continental and British reports. It is mostly British money that has bought in Canadian bonds To the British investor Canada is a gold mine, compared with the returns from his local investments.

To say that Medicine Hat will receive its share of all the capital placed in the west is only giving credit to the good judgment of men with money.

The Manitoba government has purchased the Bell Telephone System for $3,400,000. Public ownership is being recognized the world over.

WHAT IS DONE WITH GOLD FROM EUROPE.

Buying $10,000,000 worth of gold from the Bank of England is no more complex a transaction than buying a piece of real estate, says George W. Malor, cashier of the United States subtreasury at New York, in the New York World. Whatever difference there is in the two is in favor of the gold purchase. In it you are pretty sure to get the value of your money.

Much of the gold bought by the large banking houses of New York and other American cities is purchased from the Bank of England or the Bank of France. Its purchase is arranged by the English or French agents of the bank that wishes to secure the gold.

The price that will have to be paid depends largely upon the demand. At the present time, when every dollar of gold that can be secured is being eagerly sought by bankers here, the price is as high as 5 and 6 per cent.

The shipment of gold is accompanied by comparatively few extra precautions. An extra detective or two from Scotland Yard, perhaps and as many other private detectives employed by the Bank of England furnish all the protection needed.

All gold imported into this country comes in one of two forms. It is either in gold bars or in coin. If in coin it is usually American money that has been sent abroad in some previous year, for a comparatively small amount of foreign gold is brought here.

Whether in bar or coin, however, it is all shipped in small steel cases. The bars are of an exact length so as to permit them being packed tightly in the cases, while the coins are in bags, irrespective of denomination, that just hold 500 ounces.

The arrival of a gold laden ship at her pier in North River is no different, so far as precautions for the gold itself are concerned, from that of any other vessel. There are always government officials, city police and private detectives to meet each ship, and the arrival of a ship with $10,000,000 in gold aboard will result in no more than one or two extra men being present to ride on the waggons carrying the gold away from the pier.

The steel boxes, with their precious contents, as they are carted down from the ship to the wharfs, might from their appearance contain only ordinary merchandise.

If any unusual precautions are taken, however, it is during the brief moments that the boxes with their millions are lying on the pier waiting to be lifted into the waggons and carried away. Then they are watched with a good many pairs of eyes and not a stranger is allowed to approach anywhere near them.

More Terrible Than War!

More terrible than war, famine or pestilence is that awful destroyer, that hydra-headed monster, Consumption, that annually sweeps away more of earth's inhabitants than any other single disease known to the human race.

"It is only a cold, a trifling cough," say the careless, as the irritation upon the delicate mucous membrane causes them to hack away with an irritable tickling of the throat. When the irritation settles on the mucous surface of the throat, a cough is the result. To prevent Bronchitis or Consumption of the Lungs, do not neglect a cough however slight as the irritation spreading throughout the delicate lining of the sensitive air passages soon leads to fatal results. If on the first appearance of a cough or cold you would take a few doses of you would save yourself a great deal of unnecessary suffering. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the life-giving properties of the pine trees of Norway, and for Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough and all Throat and Lung Affections it is a specific. Be sure when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to get it. Don't be humbugged into taking something else Price 25 cts.

Miss Lena Johnston, Toledo, Ont. writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for throat troubles after taking numerous other remedies, and must say that nothing can take the place of it. I would not be without a bottle of it in the house."

UNITED STATES FOLLOWS THE LEAD OF ALBERTA.

Lesson Learned That Will Save Loss of $800,000,000 in Cattle Trade—Red Deer Cattle Going to Chicago.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 30.—"Maybe those range steers bawling out there in the feed lots would just hate all this warmth and light and band music," drawled a Texas ranchman. He waved his hand inclusively about the amphitheatre when the great stock show was held recently. "Beef critters from the range always have got a bum deal, ever since we began getting in this expensive breeding stock. Plenty of snow and north wind for them in winter, hauled for hours in crowded cars without water, only to get knocked in the head without a smell of high life like this." Out in the cold and snow there were 15,000 tired steers waiting their turn up the runway to the slaughter room. Seemingly no Thanksgiving or Christmas or New Year's brings to the millions of range cattle cause for rejoicing.

And yet, if they did but know it, the millions of suffering steers upon the range have cause for a grand celebration this year, for at least they would have found a friend. Alarmed at the frightful loss and suffering during the severe winters, the United States government has intervened on behalf of the ill-used cattle and is moving a thousand governmental wheels to bring about better conditions for the live stock which forms such a large item in America's annual bill of fare.

AN EXPENSIVE LESSON.

Bound up with the government's tardy action is the story of the discovery of an $800,000,000 leak in the nation's wealth, of a lesson learned from Canada and of conditions on the range that beggar belief.

For years reports have poured into the department of agriculture of the suffering and wholesale deaths of cattle left to winter on the range with no other food than the grass that the snow did not cover and no shelter—but many new line fences. Each year the report was worse, and finally, not long ago, the department sent an agent to investigate and to suggest possible remedies.

The situation he found was frightful. In the last year for which figures are available 2,687,027 cattle died from all causes, over half of them succumbing from exposure. Over 1,000,000 sheep died from exposure, and another million from other causes. Hundreds of thousands of sheep and steers are left to their own devices every winter, when snow and ice cover the grass of the plains (the only fodder for the cattle) and after frantic, futile efforts made by the cattle to penetrate the crusts of ice, with lips and noses torn to the bone, and blood freezing in their veins, they mutely surrender to their fate.

This is awful, were it unavoidable, but, according to the report, the most awful part of it seems to be that no attempt is made to provide food, water and shelter for the stock it being calculated that a large percentage of the stock may be lost if the winter be a severe one, and that if there is no expenditure for food, the cattle being made to subsist on the grass of the plains, even a heavy loss of cattle by cold and starvation may be sustained and still leave a profit to the cattle raiser.

The financial loss incurred each year in this way is estimated at no less than $24,000,000. Thousands of frozen carcasses can be seen any spring, lying in snow drifts or leaning against the endless fences of the railroad right of way.

FREE RANGE NO MORE.

Now the "free range" is no more. Yet the range methods persist. No fodder or shelter is provided. The majority of cases and the average rancher expects to find a loss of 50 to 75 per cent. of his stock at the end of a severe winter.

The full significance to the wealth of the country of this reckless waste of animal life is only disclosed by a careful examination of recent government figures of the value of cattle. The story they tell is startling.

On January 1, 1907, there were 51,566,731 cattle in the United States, exclusive of milch cows. This was the largest number in the history of the country. The value of these cattle was estimated $881,557,898. In spite of the size of this figure it is more than $25,000,000 less than the total value in 1901, when there were 6,000,000 less cattle. In other words the hardships and losses due to the range winters have not only retarded the growth of the number of cattle in the country, but they have also caused a marked deterioration in the quality of the survivors.

On the basis of the government figures the average value of the cattle of the country on January 1, 1901, was a trifle over $20 apiece. Six years later, in January 1907, after the ranges had been fenced in and grazed out, an average value was a little over $10 or a depreciation of nearly 50 per cent. As was seen, this loss was absolute as well as relative and the country's cattle are not worth today the price of the smaller herds of six years ago. On the basis of the 1901 value, the farmers and stockmen of the country ought at this moment to be richer than they are by $80,000,000. Clearly it is up to Uncle Sam to find some means of putting a stop to this enormous depreciation.

In their search for a solution of the problem, the government experts turned to Canada, to discover, if possible, how conditions had been met there. Curiously enough they found the situation entirely different owing to milder winters and richer forage for the steers.

ALBERTA TEACHES LESSON.

In Alberta the warm "Chinook" winds, blowing up from the lower Columbia river lick up the snow and make a season of bright, cloudless days, with occasionally scanty snowfalls, broken by frequent and prolonged periods of warm weather. Sometimes the temperature drops very low, but seldom dangerously so, and anomalously, the average is considerably above the average further south. This cuts down the suffering and loss of live stock to a marked degree.

The problem for the Canadian stockgrower is also simplified by the fact that Canadian cattle are free from that other curse of the range, Texas fever which alone caused a loss of from $40,000,000 to $100,000,000 in the United States in 1906. Alberta in particular, owing to its location in the northern latitude, is free from the ravages of injurious insects of all sorts, one of which is responsible for the deadly Texas fever.

But the day of the free range is over in Alberta, as it is in Texas and the Dakotas. The picturesque cowboy is doomed and the English "younger son" no longer rules, from the saddle, domains as large as principalities. The same fertile prairie that has enriched the stockgrower has gained the eye and ear of the farmer. The vast cattle ranges are already giving way to the farm, yet cattle raising will always be a leading industry in Alberta. The high altitude produces a strong-lunged, hardy breed of cattle with enormous feeding capacity.

CHRISTMAS FOR CATTLE.

Here if anywhere, the cattle have reason to be thankful, and might be expected to celebrate Christmas if some idea of the meaning of the day should penetrate their dumb intelligence. For wiser than the stockmen in the States, the ranchers of Alberta have avoided the mistake of overcrowding, which leads to overgrazing, failure of grass and starvation. They have learned the lesson that our own department of agriculture is trying to inculcate, of the enormous profit that is to be made by raising smaller herds of better stock. The results are already evident in the increased shipments to Chicago.

"I reckon you're from Dakota, stranger," said the Missouran to one of the men who were with the cattle.

"No, sir, we're from Alberta," was the patriotic response.

The Missouran was nonplussed.

"Stranger, you've got me," he said. "That State ain't on my map."

Deftly the Canadian produced a map and indicteed a point midway between Calgary and Edmonton.

"Stranger, you're a long way from home, but if those are grass cattle you've got good grass up there, and what's more, you know how to make cattle."

This is merely one of the incidents that give color to the daily life of the great stockyards, but it is an incident of significance, for Red Deer, from which the cattle came, is far north that in the old school geographies it used to be included in the great white blank that stretched in unbroken desolation to the Arctic ocean. This land now proves to be covered with rich nourishing grasses, so that it is possible to raise cattle and ship them as far south as Chicago and still sell them at a profit in competition with other steers.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company had orders for 1,500 cars for the shipment of cattle during the month of November alone, making this month's stock shipments the largest in the history of the country. An idea of the quality of the range bred cattle in some of these shipments can be had by noting the prices they brought. A top load recently averaged 1,896 lbs., and sold at $6.10 per cwt., grossing $85.15 per head. A second load, averaging 1,374 lbs., was put over $5.30, grossing $75.57, and the third load averaging 1,245 lbs., at $5.30, grossing $66. The fourth cut, 64 head, averaging 1,159 lbs., sold at $5.60, grossing $53.34. Some medium weight cows grossed $40 per head.

Red Deer is the most northerly point from which cattle have ever been shipped to Chicago as yet, but representatives of Swift & Co., in Alberta, predict that the Peace river region, lying away north of the Saskatchewan valley will within the next decade be the centre of an important cattle range industry.

NO PROBLEM IN CANADA.

In other words, Canada has no such live stock problem as there is in the United States, and the question now before Uncle Sam is whether our western range can be put on an equal footing with that of Alberta by mitigating the effects of our severe winters.

The department of agriculture has opened its campaign by trying to induce stockmen to provide feed and shelter, by showing them the profit to be made in that way. In the next place, it is urging them to promote better grass growth by reseeding of pastures. The stockmen themselves are asking for some kind of legislation which will enable them to lease and improve sections of the public land so that they will be able to take care of the large herds now grazing on them. Lastly, the best solution of the difficulty lies in cutting down the herds and grading up the stock, so that when the stockman can no longer grow beef he will be in a position to dispose of high class feeding cattle, which he will aim to sell as yearlings or two year olds to eastern feeders.

All these points are brought out the recent report of J. S. Cotton, who is the assistant in range investigation in the government's bureau of plant industry. The hearty co-operation of the live stock men is required before any great results can be accomplished. But if this co-operation is given a stop will be put to what is now a blot on the country's industrial life as well as a source of great loss, and a brighter day will dawn for the much abused beef steer.

Lethbridge Daily News Quits.

The Southern Alberta News published at Lethbridge announces that its daily issue has ceased publication. It has been a very hard struggle to make ends meet, although a good paper has been produced. The daily has had a fair trial, but it was not found to pay, and the shareholders desired to sell. This was accomplished, Mr. Hagel, who was formerly one of the proprietors repurchasing the paper.

The Lethbridge News did a lot for Lethbridge, but the city was not large enough to make it profitable to issue a daily, however good.

A couple of piano agents from Calgary . . . . . who drummed up Medicine Hat last week in the interests of the Heintzman & Co., piano, or to be more accurate, offered the Heintzman & Co. piano for sale in their own interests, have been reported as making so many either wilfully or foolishly untruthful statements regarding the piano which we sell—the Gerhard Heintzman—that we consider it our duty to make some reply in our own interests as a resident firm doing business in the city, and in the interests of the piano which we are offering to the people whom we meet day in and day out, as, in our opinion, the best piano built in Canada today.

Under ordinary circumstances the statements made by this pair would be looked upon as the ordinary methods of a rival piano man and passed up without much comment, but the reports of this particular outfit's actions have been so frequent and from such reliable sources that we are forced to believe that they have adopted the gas bag system as their particular method of doing business on our stamping ground, and we deem it our bounden duty as well as a very great pleasure to punch a hole in it as vigorously and expeditiously as we know how.

Every person whom we have seen that has been visited by this genial pair, has told us that they stoutly maintained that the Gerhard Heintzman piano was "no good." This "no good," which has seemed to form the keynote of their everlasting duet with its multitudaous variations, although foolish enough to those who know, is very apt to have an influence in some few cases, and we cannot afford, and it is not good for Medicine Hat, that even a few thousand dollars should be sent to Calgary on the strength of such a cheap statement, from men whose musical education has evidently been frightfully neglected.

It is doubtful if either of these men could tell the difference between a piano and a banjo if they could not see the instruments and had to depend upon their "ear for music."

Anyone who says that the Gerhard Heintzman piano is "no good" stamps himself as an unmitigated ass. That's our opinion and it's of quite as much value in regard to these Calgary "music critics" as their opinions are in regard to the Gerhard Heintzman piano.

Another apparently stock argument of the Calgary piano experts is: "The Gerhard Heintzman piano is not the REAL Heintzman." Thereby hangs a tale. It is not generally known, but, insofar as we understand it, we reveal it for the benefit of future piano buyers in general, and the cheap talk artists in particular. We have heard the story several times and it runs thus: In the beginning Gerhard Heintzman and George Heintzman built pianos under the firm name of Heintzman & Co. George Heintzman is supposed to have been the financial and Gerhard Heintzman the building end of the business. The reputation of the Heintzman became exceedingly great but whether it was the financial or factory end of the company that was most instrumental in making it great is a matter of opinion. In view of subsequent events we are of the opinion that it was Gerhard Heintzman made the reputation of the Heintzman & So. piano. In the course of time Gerhard Heintzman severed his connection with 'Ye Olde Firm" and built pianos in his own name, calling them the Heintzman. The Heintzman & Co. people took exception to Gerhard Heintzman calling his piano "The Heintzman" and the courts sustained their contention but granted Gerhard Heintzman the right to name his piano the Gerhard Heintzman.

The Gerhard Heintzman has steadily gained in reputation and in favor until today it stands, in the opinion of the majority of musicians and lovers of music, as the finest piano Canada has produced. The accompanying cut of the Gerhard Heintzman factories, past and present, shows the most wonderful progress that has ever been made in piano history. It takes years for a reputation to be built up on merit only and one thing that goes to prove the esteem in which the Gerhard Heintzman piano is held is the fact that it has not been forced upon the public by the aggressive advertising methods adopted by so many piano makers, but rather has been sought by the public for its real worth. There is not another piano offered to the people of Canada whose makers do not periodically send out the "general manager" or the "president" of their company with authority to give you "very special" cuts on the prices. These prices, however, are usually arranged beforehand in order that the "general manager" may do some tall slashing in the price without any material injury to the net profit. Gerhard Heintzman has never been forced to resort to this "general manager" and the many other wily schemes for the very good reason that the trade have been so ready to buy up the pianos that the factory has not been able to keep pace with the demand. The retail buyer has no harder problem to solve than the buying of a piano and it is the easiest thing in the world to get fooled and never realize it. It is a proverb amongst piano men that it is not the piano that sells but the salesman. In other words, it is not the quality of the piano, but the smoothness of the agent that is the greatest factor in closing a piano deal. BUT YOU CAN'T FOOL THE TRADE. And this brings us to the question of price.

Our arguments are not as to the merits or demerits of the Heintzman & Co. piano but to flatly contradict the statements of these misguided agents from Calgary who tried to make you believe they were from Toronto, and to serve as a kind of gas regulator in the interests of a truly meritorous piano and our own legitimate field of trade.

YOU CAN'T FOOL THE TRADE when it comes to a question of the price.

One man said to us "By Jove, those Calgary fellows were after me hot. They were bound they would sell me, and say they did rip your piano up in great shape." "Oh, that's nothing," we replied, "all agents do that with the other fellow's piano. What price did they quote you." "All prices up to $700." There is NO UPRIGHT PIANO built in Canada today that is worth $700. We are not going to ask you to accept this statement of ours without some hard facts to bear it out. As we said before, YOU CAN'T FOOL THE TRADE, and the factory price is the truest guide to the real value of a piano generally. We have on our files the FACTORY PRICES of all the best pianos built in Canada, and we know what we are talking about when we say that there is no upright piano built in Canada today that it would not be barefaced robbery to take $700 for. Anyone who pays more than $550 is paying just so much more than the piano is worth and if you must send your money out of Medicine Hat don't be foolishly extravagant in paying money for something you do not get. The retail price of a piano does not necessarily represent the actual value it more often indicates the breed of HOG that the retailer or agent belongs to. The factory price indicates the commercial value of the piano and inferior pianos are graded sharply. THE TRADE IS NOT FOOLED and the manufacturer must give value for price or lose the trade. The factory price is the surest test of value, and we say again from the knowledge we have of factroy prices that there is not an upright piano built in Canada today that is worth a cent more than $550 and there are mighty few of them that are worth that. We make the statement without any qualifications whatever. The same boost in price is made on the cheaper grades and we have positive knowledge of pianos that have been sold to Medicine Hatters by outside agents for $375 that cost exactly the same money at the factories as pianos which we are, and always have, offered on our floor in Medicine Hat for $325. We have positive knowledge of one of these pianos being sold to a Medicine Hatter as a $450 piano. These few facts may serve in guiding you, but the wiles of the professional commission piano agent are legion and you will be very clever indeed if you are not caught some way or other. The best plan is to buy at home from someone you can go around and reason with if things do not appear just right.

WHY THE BIG PRICE. Every outside piano firm that does business in Medicine Hat has an agent to whom a commission of usually 10 per cent. is paid on every sale made in the city. You can figure out how much the agent got on your piano easily enough. Again, every visiting agent gets a commission of not less than 10 per cent. and usually 15 per cent. Now figure out what Mr. Number Two gets on your piano. Then there is the house for which Number Two works. They must have a profit. Guess at that profit and take these three amounts from the price of your piano and you will have what it cost at the factory, plus the expense of transportation. We CUT OUT COMMISSIONS Nos. 1 and 2, and if you figure out what these two commissions amount to you will see how it is that we sell a piano which costs a certain amount at the factory for $325 or $550 while the outside firm asks for the same factory price instrument respectively $375 and $700.

To sum up, let us say that the Gerhard Heintzman piano is a good piano. We do not say it is the best because we sell it, but we sell it because we believe it to be the best.

The GERHARD HEINTZMAN piano is certainly the REAL Heintzman, but Calgary gas isn't the real gas—not yet.

A $550 GERHARD HEINTZMAN piano costs as much at the factory, as the best piano that was ever built in upright form in Canada and there are no exceptions.

We have had all sorts of offers from other piano men who would help us to sell if we would handle their pianos, but although Gerhard Heintzman never sends a man to help us sell we are satisfied to pass all the others up, for the Gerhard Heintzman piano is its own recommendation. It sells on MERIT, not on talk.

Now, if you wish to add the agent's commission to your piano payments, do so, but don't ask us to believe that you have got a better piano by doing so.

We want all the piano trade Medicine Hat can give us, but we can't resort to the gas bag method of inflated prices and talk to get it.

Yours truly,

The Assiniboia Music Co.

Reminscences of Baseball.

(The Hamilton Herald.)

The talk of a revival of baseball here brings old enthusiasts back not only to the days of the International league over twenty years ago, but still farther back, when the Standards, Eagles, Centrals, Hop Bitters, Baysides, Primroses, Unions and Clippers were in evidence. Many exciting games were played on the diamond at the old Crystal Palace grounds, and at Victoria Park, now Dundurn Park. In the early days, London Guelph and Hamilton were the great baseball cities of Canada, Toronto, where the game is now so popular, not having a strong team as compared with the others. The old Tecumsehs of London, with their famous battery, Goldsmith and Powers, who later played with Chicago, and the Maple Leafs of Guelph, were famous teams, holding their own against the crack nines in the States. They had membership in 1877 in an International league composed of London, Guelph, the Syracuse Stars, the Buckeyes of Columbia, the Alleghanies of Pittsburg, and the Fall Rivers.. Fred Goldsmith of the Tecumsehs was the great pitcher of his day, a writer in the London Free Press claiming that he was the first man to curve a ball. Other crack players on the team were Phil Powers, Joe Horning and Juice Latham. Hamilton could not boast of such a strong team as either Guelph or London in those days, but later it came to the front.

CHANGES IN THE GAME.

Many changes have been made in the rules since then, when the underhand delivery was in vogue. The game has become more scientific but it is doubtful if it affords the spectator more pleasure than did the old style of play. Sacrifice hitting had not reached the perfection it has now although it was practised to some extent, a fast runner bunting with the hope that he would reach first before the ball, but as a rule the players laced out the ball. "Annointed it" was the way the old enthusiast used to describe it. This increased the batting, and there is no denying that the spectators do enjoy a slugging game, even though the pride of the pitcher is hurt. Now, when a man is on first, the next batter is instructed to sacrifice and get him to second. The writer remembers when Charlie Collins tried to introduce sacrifice hitting and what a hard time he had. Men like Marr Phillips who could lace out a ball, and wanted to keep up their batting averages strenuously objected to bunting, but it has since been demonstrated that that is the game if a team wants to score.

Scores in the old days were larger; it was not a battle between pitchers. The man in the box used to depend more on the fielders and did not attempt to strike out so many men. Now new rules are constantly introduced to spoil the effectiveness of the pitcher but they do not result in increasing the hitting. Perhaps in no other position has more improvement been made than in the twirling department. One reason for this is that the pitchers do not have so much to do, a team carrying a staff of twirlers, and a pitcher is not called upon to occupy the box more than twice a week, and he has a chance to rest up his arm. Nor is the work of a catcher so arduous. In the old days catchers had no protection at all. The mouthpiece was later introduced; then cames gloves and masks, and now the receiver is dressed like a warrior, with gloves, mask and breastplate; it's almost impossible to hurt him, and thus protected he should be able to catch every day, providing his throwing arm does not get sore. So much improvement has been made in baserunning that a catcher must be a great thrower. The game was never so scientifically played as it is to-day, team playing being a great factor, but it is doubtful if the individual players are any better.

OLD TIME TEAMS.

Old timers will recall the days of the Maple Leafs half a century ago. The best known players were the late Major Mason, Billy Shuttleworth, Tom Carroll, James Kay, Tom McCann and Harry Swatman. Then there were the Stars, among the players being the Basquil brothers, George McCully, Dave and Walter Cook and Jerry Doyle. The Leafs were a good team but it was not until 30 years ago that the Standards brought Hamilton into prominence in the baseball world. The club was organized in 1875, with Wm. Campbell as president, Josh Campbell as secretary and John Stewart manager. The personnel of the team was: Jas. Ennis, pitcher; James Fairburn, catcher; Tom Crofton, 1b; Coffey, 2b; Tom Shaughnessy, ss.; Ben Lear, 3b; James Myers, lf.; Pat McGra, 2b; Wes Campbell, rf. and c., and Tom Crooks, utility. The club was in existence until 1878, and others who played with the team were Nagle, a pitcher from Philadelphia; Charles Collins, 2b; George Wallace, 1b; John Moore, 3b; Hank Crawford, Charlie Mullin and McMullen, outfielders. Few of the officers and players are left. James Ennis is a job printer; Fairburn was an engineer on the G. W. R. and went west; Jim Myers is a clerk at Stroud's hotel; Ben Lear worked at the case in the old Spectator office on Macnab St., and Tom Crooks is more rotund than he was when he used to be an athlete. The big event about that time was a tournament in which the Standards, the Athletics of London, Woodstock and Bowmanville competed, the last-mentioned team winning.

AMATEUR TEAMS.

When the Standards disbanded the game was dead for a couple of years but in 1885 the Eagles and Centrals were organized, and were in existence for three years. Dan Cotter, of the Wentworth Park hotel was manager of the Eagles. W. (Sarge) Gillespie, since dead, was the pitcher; Joe Weber, now a successful manufacturing clothier was catcher; Fred Buscombe, exmayor of Vancouver, B. Church, Charlie Tindel, Ike Reynolds Jim Fox, Jimmy Hewer, and Billy Buckingham.

In 1881 there was great rivalry between the teams in the city league, composed of the Hop Bitters, Primroses, Nationals and Buckeyes. The championship was won by the Hop Bitters with Jimmy Reardon and Jimmy Garrity as pitchers; George Brand, catcher; Riley and Bob Jackson, first basemen; John Taft, second; Ed. Patterson, short; Cotton Heath and Ike Webb, third basemen; James McInerney, Charlie Vint and Mike Redden, outfielders. Dennis Redden, Jack Tomkins, James Hinecliffe and Pick Axe Collins also played with the team. Jimmy O'Brien, Jimmy Jones and Kelley pitched for the Primroses; Maskey Jones and Tom Canary did the catching. Tom Costello played first base; Tom Cones second; Dubber Williams, short. Dave Towler, third, Bob Sullivan and Jack Sullivan, outfielders. Kilroy, Monk, John Stroud, Taw Shay, Dick Crooks and Jimmy Brand were among those who played with the Nationals.

The Buckeyes were composed of Hall, Billy Barnfather, who managed the champion Senators; Bob Hunt Roach, Walter Gray, Billy Buckingham, who was a crack infielder; Hayes, Tinsley and McNeil.

The Eagles, Centrals and Blackhawks also played that year. In one game W. H. Watkins, former manager of the champion Detroit team, the year of the Big Four, played with the Black Hawks, being in the box.

The Primroses won the championship in 1882, the other teams in the league being the Hop Bitters and Buckeyes. Charlie Quinn, Dick Robinson and Pete Miller were among the men who played with the Primroses. A. L. Richardson, who was a crack little shortstop and the fastest man on the bases in his day, joined the Hop Bitters that year. There were few changes in the Buckeyes. The Baysides had a strong team in 1883, being managed by Wm. Carroll, the well known tobacco man. The late Jack Campbell did the pitching and Billy Barnfather was the catcher. Tom Canary, second base; A. L. Wad Mundie, now a successful artist in Chicago, played first base, Richardson, short; and Thomas Kinsella, third, the outfielders were Michael Hayes, Joseph Hendrigh and James Lynch, now a hotelkeeper at Ancaster. Jim Heath played first base; Toad Thatcher, second; E. L. Patterson, short, and George Brand, third, with Bob Jackson, Charlie Vint and Dave Griffith in the outfield. Brig Moore and O'Brien did the twirling for the Primroses, and the late Mickey Jones was the catcher. Tom Costello held down first base; Slack Thompson, second; Dubber Williams, short; Chas. Quinn third and Jim Jones and McNeil were in the outfield. The late Thomas Patterson, who was a great baseball enthusiast in his day, besides being a good fellow, manged the Unions. The battery work was done by the Harrison Brothers, Fred and Jack; Billy Pfann played first base; Dave Garson, second; Belan, short; Jimmie Wilson, third; with Jimmy Clucas, Catchpole and Sam Garrity in the outfield. The Baysides won the championship.

The Hop Bitters changed their name to the Clippers in 1884, William Stroud being manager and George Sterling secretary. The other teams in the league were the Primroses, with Maurice Foley, president; Jack Welch, manager, and Georg. Shambrook secretary; the Baysides and the Unions. The Wood brothers, Peter B., and Fred L., were the crack battery of the Clippers; Jeff Wood played first; Pat McGra, second; A. L. Bennett, short; Jimmy Wilson, third; Oscar Atkinson, left field; Charlie Wilson, centre, and Barnfather, right; Brig. Young, pitcher, and Jones and Henigan were the battery for the Primroses. Cosgarson and Williams were the outfielders. Dave Garson and A. L. Richfielders. Campbell and Walker did the pitching for the Baysides. Tom Wardell, late M. L. A., played second base and his brother Dr. Harry Wardell, was shortstop. Dan McAuliffe covered first base. The Unions had about the same team as in 1883.

This was the year when the famous game was played between the Clippers and Toronto, the latter trying to ring in the great Boston battery, Buffington and Hatchett. After a great deal of wrangling Toronto agreed to play its own team, and the game resulted in a tie, 5 to 5.

THE CRACK CLIPPERS.

The first Canadian league was organized in 1885, being composed of the Clippers and Primroses of Hamilton, London, Toronto and Guelph. Charlie Collins, who had played with Indianapolis and Detroit, returned to Hamilton and managed the Clippers, getting together a crack team. The Wood brothers opened the season with the Clippers, but quit about July 1. Peter B. going to Buffalo. Mike Morrison and Kid Hendricks were the pitchers, and Billy Hunter was the catcher. Later Elton Chamberlain was signed to play third base and he developed into a great pitcher, besides being a hard hitter. Ed. Stapleton played first, Collins second, W. W. Andrus, short, John Croghan, who was the wit of the team, and Charlie Wilson and Dummy Hoyt outfielders. To strengthen the team Jerry Moore was signed as catcher, and Jack, afterwards named Rev. John, Rainey, covered third. Nicol and James Henigan were the Primroses' battery at the start, but later Mike Morrison and Fred. L. Wood joined the team. Mickey Jones played first and Pat McGra second, but later Billy Bierbauer was signed and in a few years he became one of the crack players in the big league. A. L. Richardson, Dubber Williams, Pete Miller, Gwens, Dave Garson, Jeff Wood, Barnfather, Jimmy Wilson, Billy Pfann, George Myers, Tom Wardell and White Wings Casey from Syracuse, also played with the team during the season. The Toronto team was composed of pitcher McKinley, big Stemmyer, who was called "Stonewinder" because of his peculiar delivery, Horner and Warner, O'Rourke, Fatty Smith, Kavanagh, Fred Macklin, Donald, Manning Wade, Sheffler and Billy Reid. Guelph's crack players were Kent Fitzgerald, Bun Purvis, Ed Hewer, Charlie Maddocks, Tommy Cockman and Jimmy Hewer. The London team had Joe Knight, Kid Seward, Tom Bill Thompson, the Ghost, Steve Dunn, Quinn, Billy Smith, Connors and Count Campau.

One of the most exciting games was between the Torontos and the Clippers towards the end of the season Big Stemmyer, who depended upon his great speed, had the Clippers at his mercy, and after the Torontos had their ninth inning the score stood 10 to 6 in their favor. Then the Clippers went in and tied the score. Neither team scored in the tenth, and in the eleventh Andrus tallied the winning run.

The Clippers won the championship, the standing of the teams being:

	Won	Lost	P C
Clippers	33	10	767
London	27	12	692
Toronto	24	19	558
Guelph	8	28	222
Primroses	8	31	205

Reminiscences of Baseball.

(The Hamilton Herald.)

The talk of a revival of baseball here brings old enthusiasts back not only to the days of the International league over twenty years ago, but still farther back, when the Standards, Eagles, Centrals, Hop Bitters, Baysides, Primroses, Unions and Clippers were in evidence. Many exciting games were played on the diamond at the old Crystal Palace grounds, and at Victoria Park, now Dunnarn Park. In the early days, London, Guelph and Hamilton were the great baseball cities of Canada; Toronto, where the game is now so popular, not having a strong team as compared with the others. The old Tecumsehs of London, with their famous battery, Goldsmith and Powers, who later played with Chicago, and the Maple Leafs of Guelph, were famous teams, holding their own against the crack nines in the States. They had membership in 1877 in an International league composed of London, Guelph, the Syracuse Stars, the Buckeyes of Columbia, the Alleghanies of Pittsburg, and the Fall Rivers. Fred Goldsmith of the Tecumsehs was the great pitcher of his day, a writer in the London Free Press claiming that he was the first man to curve a ball. Other crack players on the team were Phil Powers, Joe Horning and Juice Latham. Hamilton could not boast of such a strong team as either Guelph or London in those days, but later it came to the front.

CHANGES IN THE GAME.

Many changes have been made in the rules since then, when the underhand delivery was in vogue. The game has become more scientific but it is doubtful if it affords the spectator more pleasure than did the old style of play. Sacrifice hitting had not reached the perfection it has now although it was practised to some extent, a fast runner bunting with the hope that he would reach first before the ball, but as a rule the players laced out the ball. "Annointed it" was the way the old enthusiast used to describe it. This increased the batting, and there is no denying that the spectators do enjoy a slugging game, even though the pride of the pitcher is hurt. Now, when a man is on first, the next batter is instructed to sacrifice and get him to second. The writer remembers when Charlie Collins tried to introduce sacrifice hitting and what a hard time he had. Men like Murr Phillips who could lace out a ball, and wanted to keep up their batting averages strenuously objected to bunting, but it has since been demonstrated that that is the game if a team wants to score.

Scores in the old days were larger, it was not a battle between pitchers. The man in the box used to depend more on the fielders and did not attempt to strike out so many men. Now new rules are constantly introduced to spoil the elasticness of the pitcher but they do not result in increasing the hitting. Perhaps in no other position has more improvement been made than in the twirling department. One reason for this is that the pitchers do not have so much to do, a team carrying a staff of twirlers, and a pitcher is not called upon to occupy the box more than twice a week, and he has a chance to rest up his arm. Nor is the work of a catcher so arduous. In the old days catchers had no protection at all. The mouthpiece was later introduced; then cames gloves and masks, and now the receiver is dressed like a warrior, with gloves mask and breastplate; it's almost impossible to hurt him, and thus protected he should be able to catch every day, providing his throwing arm does not get sore. So much improvement has been made in baserunning that a catcher must be a great thrower. The game was never so scientifically played as it is today, team playing being a great factor, but it is doubtful if the individual players are any better.

OLD TIME TEAMS.

Old timers will recall the days of the Maple Leafs half a century ago. The best known players were the late Major Mason, Billy Shuttleworth, Tom Carroll, James Kay, Tom McCann and Harry Swpatman. Then there were the Stars, among the players being the Basnull brothers, George McCully, Dave and Walter Cook and Jerry Doyle. The Leafs were a good team but it was not until 30 years ago that the Standards brought Hamilton into prominence in the baseball world. The club was organized in 1875, with Wm. Campbell as president, Josh Campbell as secretary and John Stewart manager. The personnel of the team was: Jas. Ennis, pitcher; James Fairburn, catcher; Tom Crofton, 1b; Coffey, 2b; Tom Shaughnessy, ss.; Ben Lear, 3b; James Myers, lf.; Pat McGra, 2b; Wes Campbell, rf. and c., and Tom Crooks, utility. The club was in existence until 1878, and others who played with the team were Nagle, a pitcher from Philadelphia; Charles Collins, 2b; George Wallace, 1b; John Moore, 3b; Hank Crawford, Charlie Mullin and McMullen, outfielders. Few of the officers and players are left, James Ennis is a job printer; Fairburn was an engineer on the G. W. R. and went west; Jim Myers is a clerk at Stroud's hotel; Ben Lear worked at the case in the old Spectator office on Macnab St., and Tom Crooks is more rotund than he was when he used to be an athlete. The big event about that time was a tournament in which the Standards, the Athletics of London, Woodstock and Bowmanville competed, the last-mentioned team winning.

AMATEUR TEAMS.

When the Standards disbanded the game was dead for a couple of years but in 1885 the Eagles and Centrals were organized, and were in existence for three years. Dan Cotter, of the Wentworth Park hotel was manager of the Eagles. W. (Sargo) Gillespie, since dead, was the pitcher; Joe Weber, now a successful manufacturing clothier, was catcher; Fred Buscombe, exmayor of Vancouver, B. C., played 1b; Jack Elwell, 2b; Jimmy Malcolmson, 3b; Joe Armstrong, ss.; Geo. (Pud) Myers, lf; Mike Redden, rf; Billy Rowe, cf. Others who played with the team were Pete Armstrong, electrician, who was at the Savoy with the Vassar girls last season; Charlie Collins, Jack Moore, Ed. Gorman, who was afterwards successful in the ring, Jay Bayne, Charlie Wilson, McGeachey brothers and Frank Beck, a pitcher from Poughkeepsie. The Centrals were composed of George Walker, pitcher; the late Jimmy Henigan, catcher; Robert Tindel, 1b; Dave McLaughlin, 2b; Jimmy Reynolds, 3b; ex-Ald. Church, Charlie Tindel, Ike Reynolds Jim Fox, Jimmy Hewer, and Billy Buckingham.

In 1881 there was great rivalry between the teams in the city league, composed of the Hop Bitters, Primroses, Nationals and Buckeyes. The championship was won by the Hop Bitters with Jimmy Reardon and Jimmy Garrity as pitchers; George Brand, catcher; Riley and Bob Jackson, first basemen; John Taft, second; Ed. Patterson, short; Cotton Heath and Ike Webb, third basemen; James Moinerney, Charlie Vint and Mike Redden, outfielders. Dennis Redden, Jack Tompkins. James Hinchliffe and Pick Axe Collins also played with the team. Jimmy O'Brien, Jimmey Jones and Kelley pitched for the Primroses; Mickey Jones and Tom Canary did the catching. Tom Costello played first base, Tom Conan second; Dubber Williams, short; Dave Towler, third, Bob Sullivan and Jack Sullivan, outfielders. Kilroy, Monk, John Stroud, Taw Shay, Dick Crooks and Jimmy Brand were among those who played with the Nationals.

The Buckeyes were composed of Hall, Billy Barnfather, who managed the champion Senators; Bob Hunt Rosen, Walter Gray, Billy Buckingham, who was a crack infielder; Hayes, Tinsley and McNeil.

The Eagles, Centrals and Blackhawks also played that year. In one game W. H. Watkins, former manager of the champion Detroit team, the year of the Big Four, played with the Black Hawks, being in the box.

The Primroses won the championship in 1882, the other teams in the league being the Hop Bitters and Buckeyes. Charlie Quinn, Dick Robinson and Pete Miller were among the men who played with the Primroses. A. L. Richardson, who was a crack little shortstop and the fastest man on the bases in his day, joined the Hop Bitters that year. There were few changes in the Buckeyes. The Baysides had a strong team in 1883, being managed by Wm. Carroll, the well known tobacco man. The late Jack Campbell did the pitching and Billy Barnfather was the catcher. Tom Causey, second base; A. L. Richardson, short; and Thomas Kinsella, third. The outfielders were Michael Hayes, Joseph Hendrigh and James Lynch, now a hotelkeeper at Ancaster. George Pothe and Jack Kennedy caught a few games. Dr. Peter B. Wood and Fred. L. Wood were the star battery for the Hop Bitters, the late Jimmy Reardon being change pitcher. Jim Heath played first base; Toad Thatcher, second; L. Patterson, short, and George Brand, third, with Bob Jackson, Charlie Vint and Dave Griffith in the outfield. Brig Moore and O'Brien did the twirling for the Primroses, and the late Mickey Jones was the catcher. Tom Costello held down first base; Slack Thompson, second; Dubber Williams, short; Chas. Quinn third and Jim Jones and McNeil were in the outfield. The late Thomas Hatterson, who was a great baseball enthusiast in his day, besides being a good fellow, managed the Unions. The battery work was done by the Harrison Brothers, Fred and Jack; Billy Plan played first base; Dave Garson, second; Belan, short; Jimmy Wilson, third; with Jimmy Chucas, Catchmole and Sam Garrity in the outfield. The Baysides won the championship.

The Hop Bitters changed their name to the Clippers in 1884, William Stroud being manager and George Starling secretary. The other teams in the league were the Primroses, with Maurice Foley, president, Jack Welch, manager, and Georg. Shambrook secretary; the Baysides and the Unions. The Wood brothers, Peter B., and Fred L., were the crack battery of the Clippers; Jeff Wood played first; Pat McGra, second; A. L. Bennett, short; Jimmy Wilson, third; Oscar Atkinson, left field; Charlie Wilson, centre, and Barnfather, right; Brig Young, pitcher, and Jones and Henigan were the battery for the Primroses. Cosgarson and Williams were the outfielders, Dave Garson and A. L. Hichfielders, Campbell and Walker did the pitching for the Baysides. Tom Wardell, late M. L. A., played second base and his brother Dr. Harry Wardell, was shortstop. Dan McAuliffe covered first base. The Unions had about the same team as in 1883.

This was the year when the famous game was played between the Clippers and Toronto, the latter trying to ring in the great Boston battery, Buffington and Hatchett. After a great deal of wrangling Toronto agreed to play its own team, and the game resulted in a tie, 5 to 5.

The Toronto team was composed of pitcher McKinley, big Stemmyer, who was called "Steamwinder," because of his peculiar delivery; Hornes and Warner, O'Rourke, Fatty Smith, Kavanagh, Prad. The first league was composed of Hamilton, Utica, Toronto, Syracuse, Rochester, Oswego, Buffalo and Binghampton. Those were great days at Dundurn and many readers will remember the exciting games played there. The Hamilton pitchers were Malcolm McArthur, Mike Morrison and Joe Knight. McArthur had a glass arm and did not last more than one season. Joe Knight had been pitching for some years, and when his arm gave out he went to the outfield. The catching was done by Jerry Moore, Jack Morrison and Bull Thompson, Mickey Jones, who afterwards developed into a pitcher, played first; Charlie Collins, second; Nate Kellog, short; Rainey, third, with Rasty Wright and Andrus in the outfield. Longboat cannot run at Madison Square Garden sports in New York. The President of the Athletic Club refuses to let him enter, claiming that he is not an amateur. It is more likely the reason is that the Pastime A. C. is not made up of good sports. They know they would have no chance with Longboat.

There are five or six real estate agents pushing the sale of land around Walsh this winter. They say hundreds of settlers will locate here next spring.

It is reported that the C. P. R. company will pipe water into Walsh next summer from springs about 12 miles south.

A Christmas tree party was held in the school house on Monday evening Dec. 23, when the young folks enjoyed themselves immensely, no one being forgotten by Santa Claus. After the Christmas tree a dance was held in the town hall.

Mr. S. Campbell sent 350 pounds of dressed poultry to the Hat for Christmas.

Mr. E. Marshall, our popular young C. P. R. agent, was taken ill with rheumatism the day before Christmas. We hope to see him at his post again in the near future.

School Board Meo's

A special meeting of the school board was held on Friday evening last. Present: the Chairman, W. J. Brotherton, and D. Milne, J. Kennedy, J. D. Colter, W. G. Niblock.

A letter was read from the Merchants bank asking for information re the financial needs of the Board and urging the sale of the new debentures at an early date.

Mr. Niblock stated that he did not think it wise to put the balance of the $30,000 on the market under present conditions, and thought it better to wait until some improvement in the financial situation was visible. In all probability not more than 90 could be obtained, and he preferred to wait. There was no immediate need of the money.

The secretary treasurer stated that the interest on money borrowed from the Bank of Montreal would be at the rate of seven per cent. in the immediate future, as compared with six per cent. in the past.

Mr. Niblock thought the Montreal Gazette and the Monetary Times, two leading financial papers, should be used as an advertising medium for the sale of debentures.

A motion was carried to the effect that $10,000 debentures be advertised for sale to 31st January, the chairman and secretary to make arrangements with the bank in the meantime. L

The secretary-treasurer stated that last year power was obtained by by-law to borrow $14,000. For this year $16,000 would not be any too much.

Mr. Milne's motion giving power to borrow $16,000 from the Merchants' Bank was passed.

Church Notes

The annual business meeting and roll call of the Baptist church was held on Friday evening last. The past year's work has been very encouraging in all departments, and the financial condition especially is eminently satisfactory.

The opening meeting in connection with the week of prayer of the churches, was held last evening in the East End Presbyterian church, the Rev. A. C. Farrell being the leader. Tonight in the Baptist church the Rev. A. McLaren will lead; Wednesday in the Methodist church, Rev. Jas. W. Morrow; Thursday in the Presbyterian church the Rev. H. Bryant.

On Sunday next the Rev. Mr. Dalgleish, of Swift Current, will preach in the Century Methodist church.

On New Year's Day an entertainment was given in the basement of the Century Methodist church. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent by those who availed themselves of the invitation given to all. A musical program was rendered and games of all kinds played by those present. In the evening a largely attended congregational service was held. A minute was allowed to any who felt constrained to speak, and the ready response and the character of the remarks of the speakers augur well for the future of the church.

Services in the Baptist church at the usual hours next Sunday. Morning, 11; evening, 7; Sunday school, 2.30.

Women's Hospital Aid.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Hospital Aid was held in the nurses' home on Thursday Jan. 2. There was a representative attendance and the reports given by the officers were most satisfactory. After the reading of the reports Mrs. Waldock was appointed chairman and the elections took place, which resulted in the following being elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. J. Niblock.
President—Mrs. J. E. Nicholson.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Hardy.
Secretary—Mrs. J. K. Drinnan.
Treasurer—Mrs. Noble.
Auditors—Mrs. Waldock and Mrs Grauss.
Solicitor for new members—Mrs McWhirter.
Executive—Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. Hardy and Mrs. Finlay.

Mrs. Niblock is to act as secretary until Mrs. Drinnan's return.

After the newly elected officers had taken their places the usual business was transacted. The officers are to be congratulated on such a successful year.

The following are the reports read:

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

To the officers and members of the Woman's Hospital Aid Society.

I have much pleasure in submitting to you our fifteenth annual report. We have had a very successful year, with a larger attendance at most of our meetings than during the previous year. As our work has increased, owing to the addition of the new wing, it has been suggested by one of our members that we arrange our work differently for this year and we would like to see more of our members coming to the meetings and helping us in the interests of suffering humanity. For our February 14 entertainment we decided to send out "Free Will Offering" envelopes and realized $234.00. In March, April and June from our cake sales $94.20. At the laying of the corner stone in July the ladies served ice cream, cake and lemonade, clearing $22.65. In October the Agricultural Society consented to our serving meals during the two days of the exhibition and we raised $200.00 and in November from the Kenney-Harvey Concert Company, $57.00. You will see by above statement that we have raised quite an amount this year, but it will be required for linen, etc., for the new wing. There will be 25 new beds to furnish and if the citizens could see their way clearly to help us along those lines it would be very acceptable. Death has entered our midst and taken two of our members, one of whom was an active worker and a past officer. Our society extends sympatny to their bereaved ones. Mrs. McWhirter has been unable to attend our meetings on account of illness, but has not neglected the work, having added 67 new names to the membership list. Thanking both officers and members for continued courtesy and assistance.

J. E. NICHOLSON,
President.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the officer? and members of the Woman's Hospital Aid Society.

The following is a report of the work done by this society in 1907. On January 1, 1907, this society started with a membership of 451. We have lost by death 2, resignation 15, members leaving town 15, total 32. Sixty four new members being added, we start on the year 1908 with a total membership of 483. Ten regular meetings were held with an average attendance of 10½. The following articles were supplied the hospital during the year: 12 dozen sheets, 8 dozen draw sheets, 12 yds. sheeting for operating gowns, 14 dozen pillow cases, 20 yds. cambric and 15 yds. muslin for screens, 7½ yds. table linen, 2 dozen table napkins, 4 undershirts, 10 pair of drawers for old men, 15 yds. muslin for curtains, 6 men's dressing gowns, 40 yds. flannelette, 3 dozen barrow coats, 1 large rug, 8 dozen men's night shirts, 2 dozen night gowns, 4 dozen men's socks, 3 dozen bath towels, 1 dozen baby vests, 4 dozen bed spreads, 18 dozen pair slippers for old men, 4 dozen dressing towels, 4 yds. flannel for binders, 8½ yds. rubber sheeting, 16 spools, 4 bunches tape.

FELL DOWN STAIRS WITH CHILD

The following testimonial proves once again the superiority of "Nature's Healing Balm," Zam-Buk. Mrs. L. Spalding of 505 Erie St., Stratford, Ont., says: "Some time back I met with a peculiar accident while descending the stairs with a child in my arms. I slipped, falling heavily on my left arm and elbow, receiving a fresh wound. My arm was inflamed, swollen and very painful. I tried different preparations, but the wound kept discharging and refused to heal. About this time my brother suggested using Zam-Buk. I acted upon his advice. Zam-Buk thoroughly cleaned the wound, stopped all discharging and soothed the pain, and in four weeks the wound was nicely healed. I have had perfect use of both elbow and arm ever since and owe this good luck to the wonderful healing balm Zam-Buk and would advise others to use nothing else." Zam-Buk cures cuts, bruises, burns, ulcers, festering wounds and all skin diseases—of all druggists and stores—50c. box or post-paid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. THE CITY FATHERS

Debentures Being Inquired For Several Amendments to By-Laws

INCREASE IN PRICE OF GAS PROPOSED

The adjourned meeting of the council was held on Thursday last. There were only three aldermen present at eight o'clock, and for a time it appeared as though the meeting could not take place as the necessary quorum could not be formed. Ald. Forster and Penhale were engaged in a Masonic function. At last Ald. Forster turned up and the council proceeded to business, there being present the Mayor, Alds. Baker, Spencer, Forster, Huckvale. The mayor stated that he had had a talk with Mr. James, as a result of which he had agreed to pay the exchange on the debenture payments from place of payment. If this had not been done the city might lose the sale of the bonds. The council endorsed the mayor's action in a resolution on the subject.

Ald. Spencer moved the adoption of the police report:

Arrests and cases on summons, 51; drunk and disorderly 12; disorderly 16; drunk and incapable, 8; indecent acts, 3; theft, 1; vagrancy, 4; cruelty to animals, 2; obstructing police officer, 2; refusing to pay wages, 1; breach of pool room by-law, 2. Fines $186.50; $14.00; total $150.50.

Major Sissons then brought up the matter of a piece of land which had been transferred to the Dept. of Militia by the C. P. R. for the building of an armory. As there was a gas well on the property he could not recommend the armory being built there, and asked that an exchange be made with a block on the south side of the track at the corner of Fourth Ave. and the river. The Y. M. C. A. had a piece reserved 70 feet or so from the river, leaving there a corner suitable for the armory. The contract price was $16,000 and Mr. Burns estimated that the cost would total $17,000 before the building was completed. In shape and size it would be similar to the new Cypress Club, but larger each way and a little plainer in design. Building operations would go in the spring and if the city could agree to an exchange they would get a good building in Medicine Hat. He would recommend the granting of a piece 100 feet square in the locality mentioned in exchange for the land already transferred to the Department of Militia by the C. P. R. for the same purpose. Also the clerk to be instructed to open up correspondence with the C. P. R. with a view to getting transference of all the park property offered by the C. P. R. under certain conditions to the city.

Mr. Kennedy requested that sewer connections should be made for the Young Men's Club on Fourth Ave. They would exchange labor for making the connections under the direction of the city engineer, for cement. Referred to the board of works committee with power to act.

Ald. Baker gave notice of a by-law governing the election of an alderman for Ward IV in place of T. M. Babington, resigned. Also a by-law to raise money by debentures for the extension of the gas system.

Ald. Spencer gave notice of by-laws for raising money by debentures for sewers, waterworks and market place. The mayor gave notice of a by-law to amend the price of gas.

A by-law ammending by-law 132, relating to injuring of the fire department's chemical hose, bell ropes, telephone poles, etc., to deal with the giving of false alarms, and to prevent lighting of bonfires after sunset, was read a first and second time. Also a by-law to amend by-law No. 38, relating to streets and sidewalks. These were considered in committee of the whole and taken as read a third time.

Mr. Crosskill made application for the assessorship for 1908, and for various clerical duties to be added in connection with the making and sending out of assessment notices and attending to the voters' list. He wished to take over any work which does not require to be signed by the clerk. He asked for an increase of salary. For last year's work he received $600 and he would ask that this be raised to $65 a month. The matter was referred to the committee on salaries, composed of Ald. Baker, Forster, Penhale and Spencer.

Ald. Baker brought up a matter in connection with the laying off of employees of the city on account of slackness of work. He said that in some cases which had come under his notice married men had been dispensed with and single men kept on, and was told considerable distress was caused. He thought the work should be divided up as nearly as possible between the employees. It was a custom amongst workmen to do this. A resolution was carried to instruct the engineer to see into the matter and divide the work up as nearly as possible between employees of the city.

Ald. Baker brought up the matter of the chairmen of committees getting better acquainted with their departments than they had been in the past, and thought the engineer should submit a report, for instance, as to number of men employed. If the chairman of each committee would O. K. the expenditure in his own department it would greatly help the finance committee. Ald. Baker also thought the city should buy wholesale as far as possible, mentioning the case of gas fittings as one in which this course should be followed.

The accounts as presented in last week's issue of The Times were not formally passed until this special meeting of the council.

The council adjourned at 10.30.

What Natural Gas Has Done for the Only Town in Canada That Has It

Under the above caption a Hot Springs, Ark., paper publishes the following:

"The Natural Gas Town of Canada is the other name for Medicine Hat," said W. B. Marshall, a hotelkeeper at Medicine Hat. The town has a population of 6,000, and is in the province of Alberta. Mr. Marshall has just registered at the Midland hotel.

"Six years ago drillers sinking a shaft for coal struck gas at 400 ft. Now our town is the only one in the Dominion which has gas in paying quantities. The town owns two gas wells and controls the gas business. It gives a rate to manufacturers of five cents a thousand feet. As a result two brick plants, a flour mill and a canning factory are using the gas. The canning factory cans only meats as Medicine Hat is in a big range country. The rate to private consumers is 15 cents for the first 100,000 feet, 12½ cents for the second 100,000 and ten cents for the third 100,000 feet. The system of the city control of the gas wells has worked satisfactorily there.

"The strike of gas has made Medicine Hat a prosperous town. Five miles of cement sidewalk were built this summer and a new $50,000 town hall is in process of construction."

Railroad Men Meet

Fifty Officials Discuss Important Matters

MEDICINE HAT HAS BIG MEETING

Three Transcontinentals This Year

A meeting of the officers of the western division of the C. P. R. was held in Medicine Hat on Tuesday and Wednesday last, during two of the most ideal days of a week of summer weather. Mayor Cousins placed the city hall at the disposal of the company and the four meetings of the session were held in the council chamber. The following is a list of the officials present:

Calgary—A. Price, general superintendent; J. Niblock, superintendent; T. W. Alexander, resident engineer; G. Bell, roadmaster; C. E. Mansfield, chief dispatcher; A. Halstead, general freight agent; W. B. Harris, fuel agent; N. E. Brooks, divisional engineer; T. Bradshaw, roadmaster; B. Reddick, roadmaster; T. R. Flett, trainmaster; W. McKinty, B. & B. master; T. Martin, asst. divisional engineer; J. C. Cardell, general foreman; W. E. Woodhouse, master mechanic.

Medicine Hat.—J. S. Lawrence, superintendent; H. W. McLeod, resident engineer; W. H. Gordon, B. & B. master; A. Hobkirk, trainmaster; A. Allan, chief dispatcher; T. W. Scott, roadmaster; W. J. Marchen, roadmaster.

Cranbrook.—G. Erickson, superintendent; J. R. McNabb, trainmaster; J. S. Rossiter, resident engineer; J. H. Scott, chief dispatcher; G. Glassford, dist. master mechanic; O. Olson, roadmaster; K. Laborne, roadmaster.

Moose Jaw.—J. Brownlee, superintendent; H. B. Sims, resident engineer; J. B. McTaggart, B. & B. master.

The discussions were of a widely varied nature and were conducted throughout in a frank and open manner which from the first augured well for their success. The meetings, with the exceptions of the last on Wednesday afternoon, were conducted in camera and the following subjects amongst others came up for discussion: Divisional organization; the best methods to adopt to avoid accidents; handling of fast freight trains; handling of L. C. L. freight shipments; and way freight trains; the unnecessary use of the telegraph; and other subjects of importance.

The Times representative obtained admission to the closing meeting, which was devoted to a discussion on fuel consumption, in which the following gentlemen participated: W. E. Woodhouse, master mechanic; Grant Hall, superintendent of motive power; W. B. Harris, fuel agent; J. Brownlee, supt. Moose Jaw; J. Cardell, fuel expert; trainmasters Hobkirk and Flett; and foreman Smith. The leakages which run up the fuel bill was the theme of the first speaker. There was, he said, much difference in the capacity of men, and to have thoroughly efficient engineers or firemen was the greatest of economies. Young firemen showed a tendency to work their fires too heavy, to use the poker too freely and to feed their fires in an irregular manner. A source of loss which he believed was one of the greatest was carelessness in coaling.

Another speaker attributed to the engineer primary responsibility for the saving of coal. A careful eye on the steam gauge was the best fuel saver. Improper use of the injector, leaky joints and various other causes of waste should be checked by the engineer. When the busy times come on the road and overtime is worked or continued, the increase of expenditure was excessive.

It was stated that the mines had one much of late to improve the quality of coal supplied to the company.

Mr. Price appointed a committee to go into the matter of coal supply and to make a recommendation as to means to be adopted with a view to economy.

Mr. McMullen brought up the question of making better time with shipments of live stock.

The service for the summer was outlined by Mr. Price.

Interviewed later the general superintendent stated that the schedule was not final, but three transcontinentals would begin to run in April and the Soo-Spokane Flyer would be put on again.

The following was moved by N. E. Brooks, seconded by T. R. Flett and carried with acclamation:

"Upon behalf of the C. P. R. Company, especially the officers of the western division, I move a resolution of thanks to His Worship Mayor Cousins, the Council and citizens of Medicine Hat for the warm and courteous welcome given us; and we deeply appreciate the kind, thoughtful manner in which the use of this beautiful city hall was placed at our disposal for two days to hold our meetings in.

"We regret that it has not fallen upon some more competent to express our thanks, but railroaders as a rule are men of deeds rather than words, and therefore His Worship Mayor Cousins be asked to convey to the council and citizens of Medicine Hat our deep gratitude for the many kindnesses shown us at our first meeting of western division officers, for which Medicine Hat was selected, and I am sure I am voicing the wish of one and all when I say that we hope that we may soon meet here again.

"We particularly appreciate among the other advantages, the ideal weather which could not be beaten anywhere."

A vote of thanks to Mr. Price for his courtesy and the free and open manner in which he conducted the discussion was moved by Mr. Hall. The value of these meetings, he said, was much intensified by freedom and openness in discussion. With great enthusiasm the vote was carried.

Mr. Price briefly responded, expressing his gratification at the result of the meetings, and announcing that in all probability these meetings would be held periodically. A program of the subjects for discussion to be prepared a month or so before the date arranged for, these to be sent to all the superintendents of the division, so that a preliminary meeting of the local officers might be held.

To The Times representative Mr. Price stated that the trade outlook was improving. The mines at the Crow's Nest were reopening and he considered a general revival of trade in the spring would take place. With his visit to Medicine Hat he was highly pleased. He left on No. 18 Wednesday night, going down the Crow line and thence on to Calgary. The visiting officials all left Wednesday night or Thursday morning, to return to their respective districts.

GIFT TO Y. M. C.

Check from Chester Massey

WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

S. McClellan, secretary of the Young Men's Club, has received the following letter from a friend of the Club in the city:

Jan. 10, 1908.

S. McClellan, Esq.,
Sec. Y. M. C.

I am pleased to be able to inform you that I have at your disposal a $100 check from my cousin Chester D. Massey, Toronto, towards the fitting up of the Y. M. C. buildings.

I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Massey, of which the following is a portion:

Toronto, Can., Jan. 6, 1908

Dear Cousin:

I am in receipt of your letter of 30th ultimo., and the efforts of the young men in Medicine Hat appeal to me as being so commendable that I am disposed to help them, though the demands upon me here, in all directions, are heavy. I enclose check for $100 in behalf of the Y. M. C. project of which you write, with the hope that it may be of some service.....

I remain,
Very sincerely yours,
C. D. MASSEY

This check will be devoted to extending the equipment of the gymnasium which I consider the most important part of the institution you are forming.

Again expressing my pleasure at being able to secure this assistance for the good work you will do,

I am,
Yours sincerely,

This money will help in the better equipment of the gymnasium. The subscription list is growing rapidly and the interest of the citizens is most apparent. The work is being rushed along. Brick is on the ground, and the foundation is finished. There is some little delay in securing facing brick.

The building as it looks from the plans, is going to be an addition to the city, although only one story in height, to the built immediately. The door will enter about a third of the distance from the east wall, and there will be two windows on the right hand side, opening into the gymnasium, and one into the library and reading room on the left.

The interior has not been definitely planned, but the good size of the gymnasium can be judged from the present building. The gymnasium will be used for Sunday meetings for men, for which the floor will probably be protected by heavy duck or canvas.

IRVINE MAN ARRESTED.

(Lethbridge Herald,)

John Brown, who claims to hail from Irvine, Alberta, is safe in the arms of the police, simply because a slick game didn't work. Yesterday there were several papers stolen from a suit case belonging to T. S. McKenzie, of the O. W. Kerr Co., while it was in his room in the Lethbridge hotel. Among others, a certificate of stock for $1000, but because of the company's declared dividend of 55 per cent., is worth about $1600, and several certificates of stock in the O. W. Kerr Company.

While Mr. McKenzie was in his office unaware of the theft a fellow came in to try and "cash in" the $1,000 certificate, saying that he had bought it from a man for $30 who told him it was worth $100 and that he could cash it at the O. W. Kerr Company office.

Recognizing his own papers, the owner kept hold of them and escorted the man to the police station. He was brought up this morning but was remanded until Wednesday. In the meantime he is in durance vile.

NEW RAILROADS

Medicine Hat to Have Them Soon

C.N.R. and G.N.R. Coming This Way

Again comes verification of the rumors of new railroads for this city. When J. K. Drinnan was in Saskatchewan for the holiday, a friend reported to him a conversation with a son of Wm. Mackenzie of the C. N. R. Mr. Mackenzie said, during an inspection of the line, that the road which now reaches Regina is to be continued immediately towards the west, and Medicine Hat would be reached during the fall of this year. The plan is to build through Medicine Hat to Lethbridge and the coal district in order to secure coal direct from the mines for the engineers. When this line is built another will run from this district north to the Edmonton-Winnipeg line of the C. N. R.

That this railway was coming west has been known for some time, as it was known it would not stop at Regina, but the words of Mr. Mackenzie bring it nearer than expected.

The G. N. R. at the last session of the Saskatchewan House, secured the right of extending their line from Manitoba through the province of Saskatchewan, and the route outlined in The Times some months ago brings it to a point where it must go through Medicine Hat. When active operations will be started is not known.

Now word comes from the southwest that the G. N. R. has almost completed its extension from Fernie east to Michel. This is the point from which an extension to Medicine Hat has been expected for a couple of years. As soon as the road passes Michel a few miles it will progress much more rapidly, as the mountain building is both slow and expensive.

Grain Judging School

Government Experts Visit Medicine Hat

GOOD ATTENDANCE AND INSTRUCTIVE TALKS

About 40 persons attended the grain judging school on Friday afternoon. The special train was delayed accordingly an extra hour was allowed in the afternoon, the meeting being held from 1 to 5 o'clock, although the full program could not be carried out, a very profitable afternoon was spent by those who were present at the lectures, where in a few hours knowledge of grain was gained by some which could otherwise have only come as the result of many years experience.

For the old established farmer the meetings proved of high value, enabling him to correct some of his ideas on grain grading and so forth.

Sample trays of wheat, barley and oats, according to which grain was under consideration were placed before the students on tables in the car. These were divided into a large number of sections and each lecturer gave a general description of the varieties. One or two samples were used for judging purposes.

Among the subjects dealt with were the varieties and milling qualities of wheat and oats, the identification and eradication of weeds, examination for seed qualities and a short talk on dry farming.

W. C. McKillican, of the Dominion Seed Branch, spoke on the varieties and milling qualities of wheat. First he enumerated some of the common wheats, dividing them into spring and fall varieties and these again into hard and soft varieties. The constituents which caused differences in the results were starch and glue. The glutinous varieties were hard and usually red, and made "strength" in flour. The dough being of a highly plastic nature would retain the gas better, aiding in the "rising" process, thus flour from the hard wheats was the most suitable for breadmaking. The starchy wheats were white in color, were soft and the flour lacked in plasticity. This would make tough bread, but for biscuits, pastry and other "short" foods, was the best. Only the hard wheats could be grown to advantage in the west, and as the standard was continually rising and better wheats demanded, it paid to raise only the best.

Going on to deal with the special varieties, Red Fife, Preston, Durc etc., the speaker said that the first was the standard for spring wheats, and should be grown in the west wherever it was not essential to have the early maturing varieties. In this district it could be grown successfully, and in fact the first prize wheat at the provincial seed fair at Edmonton last winter came from Medicine Hat district.

Winter wheat was next discussed. Turkey Red, or as it was now usually termed, Alberta Red, was the winter variety which was best adapted to this province, and was the most common here. The first carload of seed came in from Kansas 6 years ago, and weighed 57 lbs. to the bushel. The first crop yielded 64 lbs. to the bushel, and now 65 lbs. was sometimes obtained, and he had known a case of 67 lbs. to the bushel being realized. A glass jar containing samples of Kansas Red and Alberta Red for comparison was passed around for examination, and the latter showed marked improvement on the original seed.

Mr. McKillican strongly advised the growing of some one variety, whichever that might be, by each farmer. There was no place, he said, for a mixture. Each variety required a special treatment in milling, and consequently the milling of mixed grains was not satisfactory.

T. Jamieson, elevator inspector for the Alberta Pacific Company spoke on the commercial grading of grain. He thought the seed train would be of great benefit to the province at large. The first year 60 per cent. of the wheat was smutty; now there was only 5 per cent. smut in this district. The Lethbridge district, which he would imagine somewhat similar to Medicine Hat, was largely devoted to the growing of Alberta Red. The farmers there had had great success with winter wheat, raising an average of 25 bushels to the acre. A Kansas man whom he had met expressed wonder at the wheat raised in this country. He thought Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Macleod, Leavings—from here right along the Crow line—was eminently adapted for winter wheat growing. In spring wheats, Red Fyfe was the best in the world, and this also was well suited to this climate.

James Murray, superintendent of the experimental farm, Brandon, spoke on seed wheat. He advised the growing of the best hard wheat, which paid in the long run. He knew a farmer who had been selecting his wheat for eight years. His crop was sold for seed at $2.50 a bushel. There was an association now for registering pure-bred Red Fyfe, just as there was one for registering live stock. He advised every farmer to devote five, ten or fifteen acres to seed growing. The portion of the crop set apart for this purpose should be allowed to ripen to perfection before the cutting. Grain for milling purposes was better not dead ripe when cut.

Other speakers were W. H. Fairfield, superintendent of experimental farm, Lethbridge; A. Mitchell, chief inspector of weeds; H. A. Craig, superintendent of fairs and institutes.

The tour, which commenced on 6th inst., will last about two months, and practically every station on the C. P. R. and C. N. R. and Irrigation railway in Alberta will be covered. From time to time other experts will relieve those mentioned. From Medicine Hat the school proceeded to Taber, thence to the Mormon country, thence north to Edmonton.

To The Times Mr. Craig expressed himself as highly satisfied with the results of the tour so far. The meetings have been more successful than anticipated, in numbers and interest taken. The best was that held at Gleichen, where fifty farmers attended the lectures. The notable feature at each station has been the large proportion of farmers and grain growers present.

All the features of the stock judging school have been incorporated and new ones added by the grain experts. On the subject of dry farming, Mr. Craig stated that one or two farmers in the district have harrowed according to the Campbell system, and two or three are taking it up. He believes this system cannot be taken up too soon by local farmers.

E. S. Martin Married

Martin—Bullock

(Halifax Mail, Jan. 6.)

The marriage at half past seven o'clock this evening, in St. Stephen's chapel, of Gwladys, daughter of Mrs. C. Beverley Bullock, 94 Victoria Road, and E. S. Martin, now manager of the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Medicine Hat, and formerly accountant in the Halifax branch. The social prominence of the bride and the fact that Mr. Martin has a host of friends here have made the wedding the chief social interest of the week. However, owing to the very recent death of the groom's father, the utmost simplicity will be observed. The wedding will be a very quiet one. Both bride and groom will be unattended, and no invitations have been issued for the wedding.

The ceremony will be performed by the uncle of the bride, Canon Bullock, chaplain to His Majesty the King, who will be assisted by the Very Reverend the Dean of Nova Scotia.

Miss Bullock will be given away by her brother Aubrey Bullock.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Martin will leave for St John, where they will sail by the Empress of Ireland for England. They anticipate an absence of about two months. On their return they will proceed to the west, visiting the principal Canadian cities en route. The one regret here in connection with the wedding is that it will take Miss Bullock away from us. She has been a great favorite in Halifax society and will be greatly missed.

The collection of wedding gifts is a notably large, valuable and beautiful one. Few Halifax brides for years back have been so fortunate.

The groom's gift to the bride was a really exquisite pendant of emeralds and diamonds.

She will be followed on her wedding trip by the best wishes of all who know her.

(Halifax Mail, Jan. 7.)

The wedding last evening in St. Stephen's chapel, of Gwladys, daughter of Mrs. Charles Beverley Bullock, 94 Tower Road, and E. S. Martin, manager of the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Medicine Hat, was witnessed by a large number of the friends of both. As has been stated the utmost simplicity was observed, and, owing to the recent death of Mr. Martin's father, the wedding was a quiet one. However, no similar ceremony ever performed in the chapel was more impressive and beautiful. The uncle of the bride, the Rev. Canon Bullock, honorary chaplain to His Majesty the King, officiated, being assisted by the Very Reverend the Dean of Nova Scotia and Rev. Kenneth Hind, chaplain to His Lordship the Bishop.

Miss Bullock was unattended. So also was the groom.

The chapel still wore its Christmas dress of evergreen. As the bride entered the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was finely rendered by the organist, Mendelssohn's march being played at the conclusion of the ceremony.

Aubrey Bullock gave his sister away.

Miss Bullock made a very lovely bride, her gown of cream serge, worn with large white picture hat, being ideally suited to her tall grace and general style. She carried a boquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony, followed by the best wishes of their hosts of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Martin left for St. John, whence they will sail on the Empress of Ireland for England, anticipating an absence of two months. On their return they will proceed to the west, visiting the principal Canadian cities en route.

The collection of wedding gifts was equally remarkable for beauty and extent. Seldom indeed has any Halifax bride been so fortunate in this respect as was Miss Bullock. The groom's gift to the bride was a pendant of emeralds and diamonds.

To Protest Against Railroad Act

DELEGATION TO PROCEED TO OTTAWA

A month ago The Times published the resolutions of the five railway unions which met in Medicine Hat on December 9, to protest against the new railroad act which makes a mistake through error of judgment or lapse of memory punishable as a criminal offence. The five unions concerned, to wit, the Order of Railroad Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and Order of Railroad Telegraphers, have decided to send delegates to lay their grievance before the Ottawa authorities. Ash Kennedy, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the C. P. R. system was in this city on Thursday last in connection with this matter.

The following will be the delegates from Medicine Hat:

Engineers, J. A. S. Canty; Firemen and engineers, J. Smeaton; Telegraphers, Harvey Hall.

D. Campbell, of Toronto, 3rd Vice President of the Order, and E. Trotter, Montreal, will also be there to represent the telegraphers. The delegate of the Calgary engineers will be W. Puller. The 22nd inst., is fixed as the time of meeting in Ottawa.

Business Change.

E. E. Hersant, who is well known in the city as a practical butcher, has acquired Roberts Bros.' meat market on the East Allowance.

F. Magnuson has sold out his barber shop to J. D. Matheson, formerly of Winnipeg. Mr. Matheson has had large experience in barbering and comes well recommended. He was on his way to the coast, and dropped off to see a friend, but was so impressed with the city and climate that he decided to stay.

The special Soo-Spokane car was attached to a freight Thursday night to take the lodge members back to Calgary.

Bank of Commerce Moves

The Bank of Commerce moved into their spacious new premises on the corner of Main Street and Fourth Avenue on Saturday afternoon, beginning business there promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. At the present time the workmen are engaged in adding the finishing touches to the interior, and it will be several days before the bank is completely fitted up. Architecturally, the building, of Colonial design, adds materially in quiet dignity to Main St., and Fourth Ave.

At the entrance the gates fold back when not in use, forming panels in the side walls. Within, the desks and teller's office are in fine mahogany and brass, mahogany, too, being used extensively throughout the building. The manager's office is on the left as the bank is entered, and here, as in other portions of the building, is a fireplace which lends much to the appearance and comfort of the room.

On this floor is one of the two large vaults; the other being in the basement, where are also the messenger's room, lavatory and the furnace room. Here, in addition to the furnace, a boiler is installed for water heating during months when artificial heat is not required in the building.

On the second floor are the well equipped rooms for the staff, the bath-room and lavatory, whilst on the third are a large room suitable for billiards or some such purpose, and another smaller room.

The building is wired throughout for electric lighting, to be installed at a future date. The wires are carried through iron tubing, eliminating very largely, danger from fire. The fittings are of a combination type—for gas or incandescent electric lights.

The first customer in the bank after its opening was Mr. Bintoul, and the second was The Times. Mr. Bintoul got ahead only by being inside the building, as contractor, from 6 in the morning. He deposited the first money and The Times received the first.

Mr. Zimmerman passed through here with five head of cattle for the Foster ranch.

School inspector Brown was in Seven Persons Thursday and Saturday.

The "Farmers' Store Meeting" was a success. A committee was appointed to take subscriptions for shares, and another meeting appointed for next Saturday at Mr. Leonard's.

Mr. Butler, brother of our operator here, has taken a homestead and is going to try the "simple life" for a while.

Mrs. Murray and daughter passed through here on Saturday.

Mr. Foster was interviewing Mr. Brand with the intention of buying more cattle.

W. Strand and T. O. Nesting have dissolved partnership in the ranch business and are going it alone now.

There are about thirty-five homesteaders expected here in the Spring.

Coleridge Clippings.

Work is still being continued on the new tracks here and altogether seven new lines have been laid to the north of the present main line, of a mile and a quarter each in length. The new section house is finished, as also the water tank, and rapid strides are being made with the ashpits and coal-chutes. The new locomotive offices and bunk house is being pushed forward with all haste, and efforts are to be made to have same completed and ready for occupation within the next few weeks.

Mr. John MacCarroll, our genial restaurateur, has rented his premises for six months to two go-ahead men from the States, who are of the right stuff and can foresee the possibilities of the place, and who were willing to pay the price that Johany put upon the results of his labors. With them to see was to stay and we are pleased to have such men in our burg.

Mr. Fred. Gadsden, of Medicine Hat, and friend, were Coleridge visitors Friday.

Six more stalls are to be added to the roundhouse here, says Mr. McDiarmid, who has secured the contract, and work will be started within the next few weeks, the men having already bespoken rooming and boarding accomodation.

Mr. T. M. Babbington, of Medicine was in our town for a few on Friday.

t enjoyable and pleasant party was given last Thursday evening, by Miss Emma Cavan, of the Paradise ranch, Coleridge. Invitations were issued to the number of 38 and the guests began to arrive shortly after 6 p.m., being cordially received by their hostess, who was charmingly attired in a beautiful silk costume of exquisite workmanship, assisted by her brother Mr. H. W. Cavan. An early adjournment was made to the skating grounds where the ice was found to be in perfect condition and, it being a lovely moonlight night, the hours till midnight passed all too quickly. Supper was then partaken of, when the usual rush for autographs on the dainty serviettes, retained as a memento of the pleasant evening, was indulged in, after which progressive whist was the order of the evening, until 8 a.m., when several of the fair sex complained of homesickness and the party then broke up with many expressions of satisfaction and thanks for a most enjoyable time. Among those taking part in the festivities were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bearss, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mundie, Misses F. G. Harper, Lulu Leppard, Margaret Acheson, Stella Leppard, Laura Leppard, Minnie Acheson, Mrs. Cavan, Messrs. George Jenkins, Floyd Finch, Robt. Acheson, Robt. Cayan, Geo. Harper, Wm. Hull, H. W. Wanderers Vs. Ramblers.

The Wanderers and Ramblers played the second game of the series at the rink Thursday night. The Wanderers again defeated the Ramblers by the close score of 1 to 0. The game was fast at all times. The Ramblers were greatly strengthened by A. Ellis, who played because "Spots" did not turn up. The Wanderers right wing got hurt in practise and had to go in goal and the goal keeper played in the forward line where he was not at home and weakened this line a little. T. Oliver with a brass horn a good deal louder than the one used in the former game, officiated as referee and pleased both sides. The winning goal was scored by W. Irwin.

Church Notes.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Aid of St. John's Presbyterian church was held on Tuesday evening last, the 7th inst.

The officers of 1907 were all re-elected. They are as follows:

President, Mrs. Ewart; Vice-President, Mrs. Finlay; Secretary, Mrs Nicholson; Treasurer, Mrs. Wilson

The total sum of money raised for the year is $775.15, which is considered a very satisfactroy amount.

Much has been done of late to increase the comfort of the church. The seating accomodation in the gallery was installed some weeks ago, and two chandeliers and thirty-two additional lights have been added, the latter being only temporary in their present form.

The annual missionary meeting was held in St. John's church yesterday afternoon. This evening a Young People's meeting will be held. Next Sunday the Rev. J. W. Morrow will preach on the "Publican's Prayer." After the service the annual teachers' meeting takes place. In the afternoon the books for regular attendance at the Sunday school will be distributed.

Scrap books of cuttings have been compiled from the Sunday school papers and awards will be made for the best. The books being then given over to the General Hospital.

A congregational meeting was held in the East End Presbyterian church on Monday evening Jan. 6, after the prayer service, and it was then decided to change the name from East End Presbyterian church, the name it bore as a mission, to Knox Presbyterian church.

On Monday night Jan. 6 the first of the services of union prayer meetings was held in the East End Presbyterian church. A good congregation gathered. The pastor presided, and Rev. Mr. Farrell gave an appropriate address on prayer. At the close of this service the first annual congregational meeting was held. Very encouraging reports were received from each department. Officers were elected for the year. Selecting a name for the young church was an interesting item. Again the old Scotch reformer was honored, and the church will hereafter be known as Knox. A most encouraging branch of the work is the Sunday school, which already numbers 75.

Rev. A. McLaren has gone on a holiday trip to Manitoba. Mr. Cameron, of Strathmore, will take his work in his absence.

On Sunday last in St. Patrick's church the Rev. Father Turbiaux delivered the first of a series of sermons on Creed. Faith, he said, is the keystone of every religion, and is essential to the life even of the man who professes no religion, because Faith is a virtue, a power, that is a perfection, a faculty, and that faculty is and must be a principle of working.

That principle of working is the knowledge of God. As we cannot see God we have to believe in him. He is the starting point of knowledge, the more we know of God, the more forceful is our understanding; our spiritual being is enlarged, is well outlined, by Faith. It is indeed the crowning of our minds—a window through which we look out on the invisible—a wonderful supplement to our mental deficiencies, a broad extension of our spiritual boundaries—a superhuman energy added to the material one we got from Nature. It is the continuation of ourselves in God—the real participation in the knowledge God has of himself. Faith is an ear; it is an eye. Faith, indeed, is a heavenly light. The celestial vision is God himself; Faith is preparatory to it, and begins it down here. Faith is Glory's morning and Glory is the meridian of Faith. Seen from God's side it is God taking possession of our minds—seen from ours, it is man's mind taking possession of God.

Finally, Faith is a mouth. Everybody knows that Faith makes one speak with surpassing eloquence and indomitable courage and an efficiency triumphing indeed. It is the spirit of apostleship and has changed the face of the world. So we read as the first word of the Creed: "I believe....."

The week of prayer of the Baptist church begins tonight. This afternoon at three o'clock the Woman's Circle meets.

Mr. Reid, of Lethbridge, will conduct evangelistic services in the Baptist church beginning Monday next.

The Young People's Society of the Methodist church has planned for a course of Bible study during January. "Missions" will be the subject for February. The society is doing good work and much benefit is anticipated from these studies.

On Sunday last the Rev. A. C. Farrell exchanged pulpits with the Rev. Mr. Dalgleish of Swift Current. Next Sunday the Rev. C. H. Huestis of Red Deer will take the services in the Century Methodist church. On Monday he delivers a popular lecture in the lecture room of the church. Mr. Farrell will be in Red Deer to take his place.

The Kings Daughters of Century Methodist church will hold a cake sale, Saturday Jan. 18, at 3 o'clock at Mrs. I. Cosens', 607 Main Street.

Made Up Grain Reports.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6.—Two weeks and a half have now elapsed since jurors were empanelled for the case of the government against Geo. W. Wood, L. A. Wood, L. O. Wood, F. B. Wood, Paul Foss and Charles Kelly, indicted on the charge of being officers of the Wisconsin Grain & Stock Co., which is claimed to have been a fraudulent concern organized by the defendants as a means of procuring money for investment in stocks, bonds and grain and then converting the same to their own use. This is the charge in effect, but the specific charge on which the defendants were arraigned was in using the United States mails in furthering their schemes.

A large array of witnesses have been examined since the trial has been in progress before Judge Page Morris, in the federal district court, but the end is not yet in sight, and it is more than likely that the trial will continue for two weeks more. Counsel on both sides are fighting every point in the case and this fact has prolonged the trial. The case has aroused a great deal of interest and there is hardly a session of the court at which the room is not filled with spectators. Some of the strongest testimony which has yet been brought out by the government in the case was made by Earl A. Bixbee, a former employee of the Edwards-Wood Company and the Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company. Bixby, a former employee of the Edwards-Wood Company, and Edwards-Woods & Co. ed and sent out market stories to different branch offices of the firm, coloring them so as to increase customers' orders without particular regard to actual market conditions. In the same way he prepared and sent out daily letters to 5,000 customers in different parts of the Northwest as well as a weekly letter. He stated that he gathered his information from newspapers and from other sources, but sometimes made up portions of his reports to conform to the wishes of his employers.

Bixby was one of the best witnesses for the prosecution. He was careful and thoughtful in his statements, taking time to think and at the same time giving direct, ready answers. He was only with the Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company, however, for six months following its organization, the remainder of the time being in the service of the

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers.

"No, sir, not direct, sir," replied Joseph. He was very busy attending to the landing of their personal effects and had only time to be respectful. It was Joseph's way to do only one thing at a time, on the principle no doubt that enough for the moment is the evil thereof. His manner implied that when those colored gentlemen had got the baggage safely conveyed out of the boats on to the beach it would be time enough to think about Loango.

It had been arranged by letter that Jack Meredith should put up, as his last expressed it, at the small bungalow occupied by Maurice Gordon and his sister. Gordon was the local head of a large trading association somewhat after the style of the old East India company, and his duties partook more of the glory of a governor than of the routine of a trader.

Of Maurice Gordon's past Meredith knew nothing beyond the fact that they were schoolfellows strangely brought together again on the deck of a coasting steamer. Maurice Gordon was not a reserved person, and it was rather from a lack of opportunity than from an excess of caution that he allowed his new found friend to go up the Ogowe river knowing so little of himself—Maurice Gordon of Loango.

On reaching the bungalow Meredith was pleasantly surprised. It was pretty and homelike, surrounded by a garden wherein grew a strange profusion of homely English vegetables and tropical flowers.

Joseph happened to be in front, and as he neared the veranda he suddenly stopped at the salute; moreover, he began to wonder in which trunk he had packed his master's dress clothes.

An English lady was coming out of the drawing room window to meet the travelers. She nodded in answer to the servant's salutation and passed on to greet the master.

"My brother has been called away suddenly," she said. "One of his subagents has been getting into trouble with the natives. Of course you are Mr. Meredith?"

"I am," replied Jack, taking the hand she held out; it was a small white hand—small without being frail or diaphanous. "And you are Miss Gordon, I suppose? I am sorry Gordon is away, but no doubt we shall be able to find somewhere to put up."

"You need not do that," she said quietly. "This is Africa, you know. You can quite well stay with us, although Maurice is away until tomorrow."

She was tall and fair, with a certain stateliness of carriage which harmonized wonderfully with a thoughtful and pale face. She was not exactly pretty, but gracious and womanly, with honest blue eyes that looked on men and women alike. She was probably twenty-eight years of age; her manner was that of a woman rather than that of a girl—of one who was in life and not on the outskirts.

"We rather pride ourselves," she said, leading the way into the drawing room, "upon having the best house in Loango. You will, I think, be more comfortable here than anywhere."

"I see you have all the new books."

"Yes, we have books and magazines; but, of course, we live quite out of the world."

She paused, leaving the conversation with him as in the hands of one who knows his business.

"I," he said, filling up the pause, "have hitherto lived in the world—right in it. There is a lot of dust and commotion; the dust gets into people's eyes and blinds them; the commotion wears them out; and perhaps, after all, Loango is better!"

"I once met a Sir John Meredith," she said suddenly.

"My father."

He paused, drawing in his legs and apparently studying his neat brown boots.

"Should you meet him again," he went on, "it would not be advisable to mention my name. He might not care to hear it. We have had a slight difference of opinion. With me it is different. I am always glad to hear about him. I have an immense respect for him."

She listened gravely, with a sympathy that did not attempt to express itself in words. On such a short acquaintance she had not learned to expect a certain lightness of conversational touch which he always assumed when speaking of himself, as if his own thoughts and feelings were matters for ridicule.

"Of course," he went on, "I was in the wrong. I know that. But it sometimes happens that a man is not in a position to admit that he is in the wrong—when, for instance, another person would suffer by such an admission."

"Yes," answered Jocelyn, "I understand."

At this moment a servant came in with lamps and proceeded to close the windows. She was quite an old woman—an Englishwoman—and as she placed the lamps upon the table she scrutinized the guest after the manner of a privileged servitor. When she had departed Jack Meredith continued his narrative with a sort of deliberation which was explained later on.

"And," he said, "that is why I came to Africa—that is why I want to make money. I do not mind confessing to a few grey or gray hairs because I think I have the best motive that a man can have for wanting to make money."

He said this meaningly and watched her face all the while.

"A motive which any lady ought to approve of."

She smiled sympathetically.

"I approve and I admire your spirit."

She rose as she spoke and moved toward a side table, where two lighted candles had been placed.

"My motive for talking so barefacedly about myself," he said as they moved toward the door together, "was to let you know exactly who I am and why I am here. It was only due to you on accepting your hospitality. I might have been a criminal or an escaped embezzler. There were two on board the steamer coming out and several other shady characters."

"Yes," said the girl: "I saw your motive."

They were now in the hall, and the aged servant was waiting to show him his room.

* * * * * * *

"No one knows," Victor Durnovo was in the habit of saying, "what is going on in the middle of Africa."

And on this principle he acted.

"Ten miles above the camping ground where we first met," he had told Meredith, "you will find a village

"I might have been a criminal or an escaped embezzler."

where I have my headquarters. There is quite a respectable house there, with—a—a—woman to look after your wants. When you have fixed things up at Loango and have arranged for the dhows to meet my steamer, take up all your men to this village—Msala is the name—and send the boats back. Wait there till we come."

In due time the telegram came, via St. Paul de Loand, announcing the fact that Oscard had agreed to join the expedition and that Durnovo and he might be expected at Msala in one month from that time. It was not without a vague feeling of regret that Jack Meredith read this telegram. To be at Msala in a month with forty men and a vast load of provisions meant leaving Loango almost at once. And, strange though it may seem, he had become somewhat attached to the dreary west African town. The singular cosmopolitan society was entirely new to him; the life, taken as a life, almost unique. He knew that he had not outstayed his welcome. Maurice Gordon had taken care to assure him of that in his boisterous, hearty manner, savoring more of Harrow than of Eton, every morning at breakfast.

Jack took a seat on the porch and began to search for his cigar in the pocket of his jacket. Jocelyn went to the front of the veranda and watched her brother mount his horse. When she came to the back of the veranda a little later she was thinking about her brother Maurice, and it never suggested itself to her that she should not speak her thoughts to Meredith, whom she had not seen until three weeks ago. She had never spoken of Maurice behind his back to any man before.

"Does it ever strike you," she said to Jack, "that Maurice is the sort of man to be led astray by evil influence?"

"Yes, or be led straight by a good influence, such as yours."

He did not meet her thoughtful gaze. He was apparently watching the retreating form of the horse through the tangle of flower and leaf and tendril.

"I am afraid," said the girl, "that my influence is not of much account."

"Do you really believe that?" asked Meredith, turning upon her with a half cynical smile.

"Yes," she answered simply.

Before speaking again he took a pull at his cigar.

"Your influence," he said, "appears to me to be the making of Maurice Gordon. I frequently see serious flaws in the policy of Providence, but I suppose there is wisdom in making the strongest influence that which is unconscious of its power."

"I am glad you think I have some power over him," said Jocelyn, "but at the same time it makes me uneasy, because it only confirms my conviction that he is very easily led. And suppose my influence, such as it is, was withdrawn; suppose that I were to die, or, what appears to be more likely, suppose that he should marry."

"Then let us hope that he will marry the right person. People sometimes do, you know."

She smiled with a strange little flicker of the eyelids. They had grown wonderfully accustomed to each other during the last three weeks. There would appear, was one of those friendships between man and woman that occasionally set the world agog with curiosity and skepticism. But there seemed to be no doubt about it. He was over thirty, she verging on that prosaic age. Both had lived and moved in the world. To both life was an open book, and they had probably discovered, as most of us do, that the larger number of the leaves are blank. He had almost told her that he was engaged to be married, and she had quite understood. There could not possibly be any misapprehension; there was no room for one of those little mistakes about which people write novels and fondly hope that some youthful reader may be carried away by a very faint resemblance to that which they hold to be life. Moreover, at thirty one leaves the first romance of youth behind.

There was something in her smile that suggested that she did not quite believe in his cynicism.

"Also?" she said gravely, "some stronger influence might appear—an influence which I could not counteract."

Jack Meredith turned in his low chair and looked at her searchingly.

"I have a vague idea," he said, "that you are thinking of Durnovo."

"I am," she admitted, with some surprise. "I wonder how you knew? I am afraid of him."

"I can reassure you on that score," said Meredith. "For the next two years or so Durnovo will be in daily intercourse with me. He will be under my immediate eye. I did not anticipate much pleasure from his society, but now I do."

"Why?" she asked, rather mystified.

"Because I shall have the daily satisfaction of knowing that I am relieving you of an anxiety."

"It is very kind of you to put it in that way," said Jocelyn. "But I should not like you to sacrifice yourself to what may be a foolish prejudice on my part."

"It is not a foolish prejudice. Durnovo is not a gentleman, either by birth or inclination. He is not fit to associate with you."

To this Jocelyn answered nothing. Victor Durnovo was one of her brother's closest friends; a friend of his own choosing.

"Miss Gordon," said Meredith suddenly, with a gravity that was rare, "will you do me a favor?"

"I think I should like to."

"You admit that you are afraid of Durnovo now; if at any time you have reason to be more afraid, will you make use of me? Will you write or come to me and ask my help?"

"Thank you," she said hesitatingly.

"You see," he went on in a lighter tone, "I am not afraid of Durnovo. I have met Durnovo before. You may have observed that my locks no longer resemble the raven's wing. There is a little gray, just here, above the temple. I am getting on in life, and I know how to deal with Durnovos."

"Do you know," she said, after a little silence, "that I was actually thinking of warning you against Mr. Durnovo? Now I stand aghast at my own presumption."

"It was kind of you to give the matter any thought whatever."

He rose and threw away the end of his cigar. Joseph was already before the door, leading the horse which Maurice Gordon had placed at his visitor's disposal.

CHAPTER X.

THE short equatorial twilight was drawing to an end, and all nature stood in silence, while night crept up to claim the land where her reign is more autocratic than elsewhere on earth. There was a black night above the trees, and a blacker beneath.

A sportsman was abroad. He was creeping up the right hand bank of a stream, his only chance lying in the noise of the waters which might serve to deaden the sound of broken twig or rustling leaf.

This sportsman was Jack Meredith, and it was evident that he was bringing to bear upon the matter in hand that intelligence and keenness of perception which had made him a person of some prominence in other scenes where nature has a less assured place.

Since sunset he had been crawling, scrambling, stumbling up the bank of this stream in relentless pursuit of some large animal which persistently kept hidden in the tangle across the bed of the river. The strange part of it was that when he stopped to peep through the branches the animal stopped, too, and he found no way of discovering its whereabouts.

Once Meredith was able to decide approximately the whereabouts of his prey by the momentary shaking of a twig. He raised his rifle and covered that twig steadily; his forefinger played tentatively on the trigger, but on second thought he refrained. He was keenly conscious of the fact that the beast was doing its work with skill superior to his own. In comparison to his, its movements were almost noiseless.

It was terrifically hot and all the while night was stalking westward on the summits of the trees with stealthy tread.

At last he came to an open space made by a slip of the land into the bed of the river. When Jack Meredith came to this he stepped out of the thicket and stood in the open awaiting the approach of his stealthy prey. The sound of its footfall was just perceptible, slowly diminishing the distance that divided them. Then the trees were parted and a tall, fair man stepped forward on to the opposite bank.

Jack Meredith bowed gravely, and the other sportsman, seeing the absurdity of the situation, burst into hearty laughter. In a moment or two he had leaped from rock to rock and came to Meredith.

Chinamen Want Damages.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

The aftermath of the Christmas Eve frolic was seen at the Council last night in a claim for $420 laid by C. F. Harris, solicitor for the proprietors of the Columbia restaurant. He said that they were willing to allow an independent party to appraise the value of the damages. On behalf of the Chinese proprietor of the Alberta, Oxford and Victoria restaurants L. M. Johnstone wrote that the city to make amends and bear the losses. His claims were, Victoria, $7.00; Oxford Cafe $110.10 Alberta restaurant, plate glass $200, goods destroyed $268.60. He claimed that the city had not made sufficient police provision for a holiday occasion and intimated that the city had been advised that a demonstration might take place as a result of the incident of the evening before. On behalf of his clients he said that they had committed no wrong, nor had been accused of any were ratepayers, and that the assault was the unprovoked result of a racial hatred.

The Council decided that city solicitor Conybeare have a hand in the matter and referred the letters of Messrs. Harris and Johnstone to him for consideration.

Independent Press on the Bye-Election.

The by-election in Centre York was held on Monday, Dec. 23, and resulted in a win for Dr. McLean, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 19. Independent thinkers will have a good idea of how the Laurier government stands before the people of Canada by reading the following comments from the two great Independent Canadian newspapers:—

From the Toronto News.

"The result in Centre York is the most damaging blow the Liberal government has sustained since 1896. The constituency has a normal Liberal majority of 300. It was admitted that Senator Campbell was a weak candidate. Liberals were rejoicing that in Dr. McLean they had a man who could unite the Liberals of the riding and poll the full strength of the party. He is as good a candidate as his friends said he was, and certainly he should have had from 200 to 300 of a majority. But he comes out with an advantage of only nineteen. This result, combined with the loss of Colchester in Nova Scotia, with the collapse in London, the reduction of the Liberal majority in North Wellington and the increase of the Conservative majority in East Northumberland, must have very distinct significance for Ministers at Ottawa. When a Canadian government shows loss of strength in by-elections, it is not far from its downfall."

From the Winnipeg Tribune.

"The Laurier government had too close a squeeze to be comfortable in Centre York constituency, Monday. A majority of only nineteen in a constituency which was especially carved out to be a safe Liberal seat and which was carried last election by a snug majority, can scarcely be said to be a victory. When it is recalled that for years and years by-elections in Canada have invariably gone with the government, and when the enormous momentum of government prestige in a by-election is borne in mind, the slimness of the majority is significant. Of course, it has also to be borne in mind that in Capt. Wallace, son of the late N. Clarke Wallace, the opposition had a powerful candidate, and undoubtedly the Whitney forces bent every energy to help capture the seat. All things, however, considered, the government can take no comfort from the results.

While the government has not, by virtue of the by-elections held since the present parliament was elected, suffered in voting strength to any extent, still there are not wanting signs that its popularity has passed the zenith. This in the order of things is but natural. Like the human body, the moment a government begins to live, it begins to die. The best friends of the government must admit that it has received quite a number of serious hamps the last two or three years. A Government cannot lose such men as Blair, Tarte, Fitzpatrick, Sifton, et al, (whose organizing capacity everyone admits) without suffering severely. To be sure, other men have been taken in, but in no case (with the exception of Oliver) have they measured up to the stature of their predecessors.

In addition to this the government must have weakened itself in Western Canada and especially in our own North West by the gratuitous imposition of separate schools on the new provinces. Added to the sins of omission and commission, there has been altogether too much scandal not to injure the prestige of the administration.

The strong likelihood is that a general election will be held immediately after the close of the present session. To those that might argue that it is unwise to bring on an election in hard times the unanswerable reply would be that things may be worse later on, and that it is better to get to the country now than it might be later on.

DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The proposed legislation through the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is of the utmost importance, and it is receiving a great deal of attention, not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the leading doctors and druggists. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class remedies welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very serious throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. Two leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analysed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed no other medicine but Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that will "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restorer of all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recognize this fact.

"At the age of 25 my lungs were in a terrible state. I had la grippe the year before; it settled on my lungs and I kept steadily growing worse till I got down so low I was in bed for six weeks. I had a consultation of doctors, and they said they could do nothing more for me. Then I started to use Psychine. I took the medicine for more than a year. It certainly did wonders for me. I am now as strong as I was before my sickness."
MRS. H. HOPE,
Morpeth, Ont.

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is the greatest of tonics, building up the system, increasing the appetite, purifying the blood, aids digestion, and acts directly upon the throat and lungs, giving tone and vigor to the entire system. At all druggists, 50c. and $1, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, 179 King Street West, Toronto.

A Strong Candidate.

The acceptance of the candidature for the Riding of Medicine Hat by C. A. Magrath places the Conservative party in an unusually strong position. This is admitted even by the keenest of his political opponents.

Mr. Magrath's treatment of the unanimous offer of the Conservative convention at Lethbridge has shown how seriously he considers the work that will face him, and how honestly he accepts that great task. His deliberation has revealed to him the great responsibility of a member of Parliament, especially one who represents the west in its making, and his acceptance after such a deliberation is a proof of the honesty with which he will work if elected.

To add to the proof, if any is needed, he candidly announces himself as independent Conservative. He possesses a great respect for the platform of Mr. R. L. Borden, and so far as it covers the general plans of the party he is in hearty accord. However, he holds himself free to be controlled by nothing but what he considers for the good of the country, whether it be Liberal or Conservative in the origin and backing—and only on this understanding will he accept nomination.

It is Country and the Right before all with Mr. Magrath.

In the selection of Mr. Magrath the Conservative party of the Riding stamps itself as one of reform—a party anxious only to elect the man who will do right. There are a half dozen strong, good Conservatives in the Riding who would make a good fight and be members worthy of the district and the country. In the ordinary Riding they would all be considered first class candidates. But where the party lines have not been so finely drawn as in old constituencies, it was considered the only proper thing to present to the voters a man who could, and would appeal to all, irrespective of party, and only on the grounds of the greatest good to the country.

By this move the Conservative party demonstrates its honesty and pure desire for the best. Mr. Magrath has never been a prominent Conservative. He is the best man—and that was all his nominators looked at.

Concerning the qualifications of the candidate, nine-tenths of the voters know them much better than we do. From Liberal and Conservative alike a discussion of the candidate brings forth nothing but encomiums. He is well and favorably known all over the Riding, from Medicine Hat to Cardston. Among the Mormon settlements to the south Mr. Magrath has long been active in connection with his big irrigation project, and to a man, they admire his squareness and honesty. In Lethbridge, his home, no one is more respected. In Medicine Hat and the northeast portions of the riding, the name, Magrath, stands for just as much as in any other section.

He will act honestly, if elected, and everyone knows he will fight honestly for election. His opponent, W. C. Simmons, has a good reputation, and it looks as if the contest, from the candidates' point of view, will be on the square.

Whether the elections will be this year or not is now doubtful, but everything points to a summer campaign, since the government is steadily losing ground, as shown by the by-elections.

Whenever it comes the voters can feel satisfied that they have the opportunity of voting for one of the most honest, independent men in Canada—a man who will do the Riding and the country credit. That man stands for the best principles without regard to party.

His name is C. A. Magrath.

Cash.

Cash is again in the air. The feeling among the merchants is stronger than ever, and within a very few weeks there promises to be quite a change in the methods of selling. It requires only a little more study of the situation and a concerted movement until Medicine Hat will be on a plane with the Crow's Nest and Saskatchewan towns.

That it will work out to the advantage of all concerned is certain. Taber is a town of less than half the size of Medicine Hat, but it has the cash system in every store but one, and that store is reported to be sorry. The merchants candidly state that the results since they started the cash system a couple of months ago have surprised them. Since that time they have heard less talk of tight money than ever before, and they are thoroughly willing that the credit business should go the store that clings to those methods.

In Lethbridge several stores have announced the adoption of cash, and all over the west the same thing is happening.

The report of the beef commission is significant as recommending the cash system for butchers. "We are of the opinion that if the credit system were done away with and sales made strictly for cash the butchers of the province could afford to sell their meat at a considerably lower price," is the pronouncement of men familiar with conditions in the west, and deserves deep consideration.

The Times campaign for cash promises to have a result that will mean a great deal to the city. Many of the arguments it has outlined in the past year, but the merchants see many more which interest them vitally. It is a matter of changing from an old condition, the result of circumstances and quite in keeping with attendant conditions at the time, to the modern manner of doing business. It requires some courage, as it is a big step, but in every case, it has justified the step and it will do the same in Medicine Hat.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Mail and Empire calls this Riding "the new constituency of Lethbridge, which extends from the International boundary, and includes Medicine Hat." It is just the other way—the new constituency of Medicine Hat, including Lethbridge.

It is to be hoped that with the establishment of an Alberta university the Alberta government will attend to the future needs of the university and not leave it to the care Toronto University is at the present time. Every advantage has to be taken of every technicality and revenue bearing act in order to make ends meet. It has some land, but not sufficient and now it is ferreting out musty documents that enable them to tax everybody around Queen's Park in Toronto.

Alberta University should be placed at the start in such a position as to make it independent forever. This is a problem, considering the fact that the Dominion government still unjustly controls our public lands. It is only by the gift of such lands that a University can be where it will not be a burden on the people. Taxes are burdensome, and largely unjust, however carefully they are imposed. Land will bring its own revenue and only from those using that land, and is merely a legitimate rental. Or the land can be sold and the money placed to greater advantage.

The future governments of this province are going to be in an unenviable position unless the Dominion government gives up its control of our public domain.

Alberta wants the Alberta University to be the pride of the province, with no feeling of bondage to assist in its support.

The mayor's notice of motion to increase the cost of gas as suggested by The Times some weeks ago will receive some opposition in the council. The objection is that the gas consumer should not pay for everything. This argument would be plausible were the gas consumer paying an average price at the present But when, as we all know, gas is most ridiculously cheap, it seems but reasonable that this public utility should bring in a little more profit to the city, when it would still leave gas at such a low rate. This move, too, appears to be the only one that will bring immediate returns to the city in its need. If our revenue now is $30,000 an increase of 3 cents in the gross rate would increase the returns $6000, a tidy little sum. This would increase the bill of an ordinary consumer about 60 or 70 cents a month on an average—a very small amount to the individual. Each consumer will derive more benefit than that from the additional revenue to the city.

It must be a horrible sensation never to be able to dodge boquets you have handed to other people to throw at you.

One of the worst things that can happen to a city is for it to have a daily newspaper before it is ready for it. The ambition of the Lethbridge News when it started a year ago is to be admired. But Lethbridge will suffer for having had it. The suspension of the daily issue has been published all over Canada, and Lethbridge has secured the undeserved reputation of a town on the downgrade. Lethbridge is one of the best cities in the west, but it could not support a good daily. The Daily News could not afford to run at a loss and had to stop publication. There is no doubt that nine out of ten who read of this consider that Lethbridge is going back.

The News was a good paper and the merchants supported it as well as was to be expected. However, the merchants of a city cannot be expected to put out good money, and lots of it, in sufficient quantities to support a daily, if a weekly would fill the bill.

No merchant should advertise for sentiment only.

The gift of $100 from Chester Massey, president of the Massey-Harris Company to the Y. M. C. through a local man should sustain the keen interest that is being taken in this institution. Mr. Massey is in a position to know the value of these movements as he has given away hundreds of thousands of dollars to Y. M. C. A.s and similar institutions within the past ten years. When an outsider takes so much interest in it the citizens should come forward generously.

In three days of last week sixteen new subscribers were added to The Times list. Everybody appreciates a readable paper—a paper that is not afraid to take a stand.

Benefits the Mail Order House.

(Winnipeg Commercial.)

A well known Canadian mail order house announces that the year 1907 has been the biggest year for business in the history of the firm. The The house in question does a strictly cash business, and the quest on arises, "Why is there so much money from all over the land sent to one large centre?" The answer is to be found in the country merchant's credit system. It is a well known fact that the house that does a credit business must add to the selling price a certain percentage for bad debts. That is equivalent to saying that the man who gives credit cannot sell as cheaply as the "cash trader." The country merchant finds it necessary to have one price for all customers, whether they be cash or book customers, and the consumer that pays spot cash for his requirements finds that he has to pay in high prices the percentage of a bad account loss for which he is not at all responsible. He naturally resents this and has his innings, by sending his cash to the catalogue houses, where he thinks he can get better bargains.

There is a change at work, which means that hereafter business will be run more on a cash basis. If the merchants would only realize it the catalogue houses have been factors in educating the people as to doing a cash business. If farmers have money to pay cash for what they buy from the catalogue houses or the city department stores or the travelling men, they certainly should have money to pay the home merchant. But the trouble is not entirely with the farmer, or the other patron of the home store; it is more with the merchant, who does not exact cash when he delivers the goods. Let this merchant go to the bank for money, he will find that when he gets it he must give a note to pay at a certain time, and this note bears a fixed amount of interest. To the merchant his goods represent what money does to the banker. It is his means of earning a livelihood. When a merchant extends credit with no understanding when a bill is to be paid, and no exaction of interest, he is doing himself an injustice and is encouraging a system that is responsible for much trouble in trade circles.

Crime for Poor to Have Children.

New York, Jan. 3.—Bringing of children into the world by parents totally unfit to rear them and to aid in their development is a crime that it will be necessary in the end to eradicate by legislation, according to Mrs. Charles C. Crossman, of New York. At the meeting of the Woman's Peace circle at the Hotel Astor recently Mrs. Crossman startled the members by her emphatic declaration in favor of race suicide under certain conditions. She declared that when parents could not support their children it was a crime to bring them into the world.

In order to make her position clear Mrs. Crossman later gave an authorized interview to the New York World, in which she said:

"Marriage is the most sacred institution in the world. It involves duties and responsibilities the burden of which children should be taught to understand from their earliest childhood. For a couple unable to support them to bring into the world a family of children is an unspeakable crime. The environment of the children born in poverty, deprived of even the necessities of life and turned out upon the world to shift for themselves at an age when they should be nestling to their mother's bosom, precludes the possibility of their becoming aught but a burden to the community, if nothing worse"

Mrs. Crossman declares that the term "race suicide" has become famous by President Roosevelt, but that this term would not in any way include an educational system that sought only to regulate the number of children in each family by the supporting capacity of the parents.

MOTHER KILLING.

"It is simply my hope," she says, "that the time will come when parents will realize the enormity of their offence in bringing into the world a life that from the very first must be blighted. The responsibility for the neglect and non-support of the children rests in the great majority of cases, upon the man, while the labor, the pain and the privation fall upon the woman. 'Race suicide' it is called to plead for smaller families, but it is nothing but 'mother killing' to impose the burden of raising a large family upon the shoulders of a wife.

"Charity, I believe, belongs to children, and to the sick. But to an able-bodied man I would give nothing. In a country as prosperous as ours there is no excuse for a man to be shabby, dirty or hungry, unless he is palsied by illness. The poor today are poor because they want to be poor. They are in a rut, because they are perfectly contented to remain in a rut.

"Many a time have I been appealed to by well-disposed charity workers to come to the relief of a family that is destitute of starving. Invariably I have found the man of the family able but unwilling to work. For his children I have had nothing but pity, and aided them to the extent of my ability. His wife, too, I have aided, though her I have blamed with him. But for the man I have had nothing. If he will work, I will give him work, but give him food without work I will not."

Mrs. Crossman says she would teach the children of the slums that they should not marry until they can support themselves and their offspring and would point out the awfulness of bringing more of their kind into the world.

"I do not want to see a childless race, or childless marriages," she says, "Marriage should be blessed by children, but not by children whose support is not assured. It should not be sufficient for a young man to feel that he has the means to provide for himself and a wife. He should also know that he can provide for his children.

LAWS MAY BE NECESSARY.

"To bring this about would take time, but no matter how long it takes, it is something that should be done. It may be possible to eradicate completely the evil of education. It may be necessary to effect it by laws enacted by the legislature. Whatever the means, however, it is a change that should be brought about.

"Whenever the opportunity presented itself I have tried to teach the people of the slums my ideas. Many of the children I knew years ago are today the heads of their own houses, happy, prosperous and unweighted by the burden of children they cannot support. Out of a Sunday School class of eighteen girls I taught some years ago all are married, and none has more than two children. Yet, nearly all those girls were members of very large families themselves.

"It should not be necessary to teach the children outside their own homes. It is a duty every father owes to his son and every mother to her daughter. It is a subject too sacred to be treated lightly. It is of the most vital importance to the country itself, for the character of its future citizens is at stake."

"FAST" DAY.

An eccentric dominie, Matthew Byles, seems to have been as inveterate a joker as Sydney Smith. Upon a Fast day, Dr. Byles had negotiated an exchange with a country clergyman. On the appointed morning each proceeded on horseback to his respective place of appointment. Dr. Byles no sooner observed his brother clergyman approaching than he put his horse to the gallop, and with his canonicals flying, passed his friend at full run. "What is the matter?" exclaimed the latter. "Why so fast, Brother Byles?" To which the doctor without slackening his speed, replied over his shoulder, "It is Fast day."

Deadly Shellfish and Watercress.

Cause of Most Cases of Typhoid in London.

London, Dec. 29—The reports of the Medical Officer of Health for the County of London, dealing with the health of a population of 4,721,217 for the year 1906, shows a decrease in the death rate by 30 per cent., since the passing of the public health act of 1891. London's rate in 1906 was 15.1 lower per thousand than that of any other town in England of over 200,000 population, excepting Bristol and Leicester. It is also lower than that of Paris, St. Petersburg, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Copenhagen and New York. There is a marked difference between the rate in various districts. Hampstead's rate is 9.4 per thousand. Finsbury's is 20.7. Finsbury is one of the overcrowded districts of London, London shows the lowest infant mortality of all the towns, excepting Bristol. Nevertheless, the deaths of children, under 1 year old are 131 per thousand births. The deadliest disease is diarrhoea. There were no deaths during the year from Smallpox, of which there were only 31 cases, the lowest record, excepting in 1899. Scarlet fever, diphtheria and whooping cough are decreasing in virulence and typhus has almost died out. There were only four cases during the year, none of them fatal. Typhoid increased. There were 760 deaths as compared with 284 in 1905. The majority of the cases were traceable to the consumption of shellfish, especially cockles, and to the use of watercress. Phthisis increased. There were 6,775 deaths from it, as compared with 6,662 in 1905. Cancer is also increasing. It was responsible for 4,589 deaths. More stringent inspection of food and milk supply, and the diminution of overcrowding are the most needful reformations.

Resolution Passed.

Institute Workers Want Agricultural College Separate.

The following is copy of a resolution that was passed unanimously at the Institute Workers' convention, held at Calgary, Jan. 4. The resolution was moved by M. D. Geddes, editor of the "Farm and Ranch Review," and second by D. H. Galbraith, B. S. A., Nanton.

"We, the members of the Farmers' Institute staff, of the province of Alberta, in convention assembled, wish to place on record our conviction that an agricultural college is of vital importance to the province of Alberta.

"Therefore be it resolved that the establishment of an agricultural college in the immediate future is amply justified, and that in the interest of agriculture, which interest is paramount in this province, be it further resolved that the agricultural college when established, be under the control of the agricultural department, that it be established in a locality separate and altogether apart from the university, but that it be affiliated with the University."

MA CAN'T VOTE.

Ma's a graduate of college, and she's read most everything;
She can talk in French and German,
she can paint and she can sing.
Beautiful? She's like a picture!
When she talks she makes you think
Of the sweetest kind of music, and she doesn't smoke or drink.
Oh, I can't begin to tell you all the poems she can quote;
She knows more than half the lawyers do; but ma can't vote.

When my pa is writing letters, ma must always linger near
To assist him in his spelling, and to make his meaning clear.
If he needs advice, her judgment, he admits, is always best;
Every day she gives him pointers, mostly at his own request.
She keeps track of legislation, and is taxed on bonds and stocks,
But she never gets a look-in at the sacred ballot box.

Ma is wiser than our coachman, for he's not a graduate,
And I doubt if he could tell you who is governing the state.
He has never studied grammar, and
I'll bet he doesn't know Whether Caesar lived a thousand or two thousand years ago.
He could never tell us how to keep the ship of state afloat,
For he doesn't know there's such a thing—but ma can't vote.

Once when Mr. Jones was calling,
they got up a short debate
That was on the tariff question; he supposed he had it straight.
But before they'd finished talking he threw up his hands and said
That he'd not read much about it, nor remembered what he'd read.
He's too badly rushed to study how to better human lives,
Still he looms up like a giant when election time arrives.

Mrs. Gookins does our washing for she has to help along,
Taking care of her six children, tho her husband's big and strong.
When he gets a job he only holds it till he draws his pay,
Then he spends his cash for whisky or else gambles it away.
I suppose his brain's no bigger than the brain of any goat,
And he'd trade his ballot for a drink—but ma can't vote!

Early History of Bank Notes.

The Chinese are said to be the inventors of bank notes. Some authorities are of opinion that bank notes were known about 119, B. C.; in the reign of the Emperor On-ti, says the Belfast Whig. At this time the court was in want of money, and for the purpose of raising it Klaproth tells us that the Prime Minister hit on the following device. When any princes or courtiers entered the Imperial presence it was customary to cover the face with a piece of skin. It was first decreed then that the skin of certain white deer kept in one of the Royal Parks should alone be permitted, and then these pieces of skin were sold for a high price.

Again, certain authorities assert that the oldest bank notes, called "flying money," or "convenient money," were first issued in China 2697 B. C. These notes were similar to modern bank notes, they bore the name of the bank, the date of issue, the number of the note, the signature of the official issuing it, indications of the value in figures, in words, and in the pictorial representations of coins or heaps of coins equal in amount to its face value, and a notice of the pains and penalties for counterfeiting. Over and above all was a laconic exhortation to industry and thrift—"Produce all you can, spend with economy." The notes were printed in blue ink on paper made from the fibre of the mulberry tree. One issue in 1394 B. C. is preserved in the Asiatic Museum at St. Petersburg.

The British Museum posses a very old and very rare Chinese bank notes. It was in the reign of Hung Woo, the founder of the Ming dynasty, who died in 1398. The real money value of the note is but a dollar, but it is one of the only issues of paper currency ever granted by the Chinese government. Only another similar note is said to be in existence, this being in the possession of the Oriental Society at St. Petersburg. Its value to native bankers and note collectors is well known throughout China.

A former governor of Hong Kong Sir John Pope Hennessey, purchased the note at an auction of the effects of a deceased captain of one of the Chinese customs cruisers, who had amassed a large number of Chinese coins and notes, among which was the Ming bank note.

The bank of Stockholm, which commenced in 1668, was the first bank in Europe to issue bank notes which until that time were totally unknown in the west.

A period of sixty-four years has elapsed from the starting of bank notes up to the time of the first forgery. The first forged bank of England note was the act of Richard William Vaughan, a Stafford linen draper, who started this era of crime in 1758. This man was in good circumstances and a fairly good position, but conceived the idea from a desire to appear greater than he really was. He employed many artists in different parts of the notes, and it was through one of them that the crime was discovered. The man deposited the notes in the hands of a young lady to whom he was attached as a proof of his wealth.

The punishment of death for forgery was abolished in England in 1837. Many years ago the bank of England was in constant trouble on account of the numerous forgeries perpetrated upon it. Between 1797 and 1818 there was nearly one thousand prosecutions of persons for forging bank of England notes, and three hundred and thirteen capital convictions. After an act was passed in 1798 enabling the bank of England to issue notes under the value of five pounds, forgeries increased amazingly, and in the eight years subsequent no less than one hundred and forty-nine perished on the gallows for the crime of forgery on the bank. The notes were so exactly copied that even bank officials could not detect the forgeries.

The ingenuity and frequency of forgeries led to special efforts to protect the bank by manufacturing paper by peculiar and expensive processes. The notes are made from pure white linen cuttings only, never from rags that have been worn. They have been manufactured for about two hundred years at Laverstroke, in Hampshire, and by the family of the Portage, who are descended from some French protestant refugees.

So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are carefully counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. The printing is done by a most curious process in a special department within the bank building. There is an elaborate arrangement for securing that no note shall be exactly alike, consequently there never was a duplicate of a bank note except by forgery.

The largest amount of a bank note in circulation in 1827 was £1,000, though it is said that two notes for £100,000 each and two for £50,000 each were once engraved and issued. A butcher who had amassed an immense fortune in war time went one day with one of these £50,000 notes to a private banker, asking the loan of £5,000, and wishing to deposit as security the big note, stating that he had kept it for years. The £5,000 was at once handed to him, the banker at the same time hinting it was great folly on the part of the butcher to hoard such a large sum and lose the interest. "Very true, Sir," said the butcher, "but I like the look on it so very well that I have t'other one of the same kind at home."

A collector of curious bank notes in Paris became the possessor of a bank of England five-pound note with a curious story attached to it. This note was paid into a Liverpool merchant's office in the ordinary way of trade, and the cashier, when holding it to the light to ascertain that it was genuine, noticed some faint red lines upon it scrawled between the words and on the margin of the note. These marks proved to be partially effaced words scrawled with blood. Great pains were taken to decipher the words, which were at length found to form the following sentence: "If this note should happen to fall into the hands of John Dean of Longhill, near Carlisle, he will learn hereby that his brother is languishing in prison in Algeria." Mr. Dean was communicated with and with the help of the government set his brother at liberty after he had been in prison for 11 years. He had traced the message with a splinter of wood dipped in his own blood. He did not live long to enjoy his freedom, for his constitution had been irreparably injured by exposure, privations and forced labors in the dey's galleys.

An eccentric London gentleman once framed a bank post bill for £30,000, and exhibited it for five years in one of his sitting rooms. The fifth year he died whereupon the picture was at once taken down and cashed by his heirs.

Some years ago at a nobleman's house near Hyde Park, a dispute rose concerning a certain portion of Scripture, when a dean who was present denied that any such text existed and a Bible was called for. A dusty old copy of the scriptures was at length produced, which had not been moved from the shelf since the death of the nobleman's mother, many years before. When it was opened a marker was found in it, which, on examination proved to be a bank bill for £40,000. Possibly the old lady had placed it there as a reproof to her son, who evidently did not consult the Bible so often as she could have wished.

Another curious story is told of a farmer in the district of Caux, France, who on opening the cabinet wherein he deposited his bank notes discovered that five bank notes, one for five hundred francs, had been gnawed to pieces by mice. He collected the fragments and sent them to the bank of France, which, after much pains in trying to fit together the pieces, reported that a considerable portion of the notes was missing and suggested that as mice do not eat fine paper, but simply cut it up and carry away as lining material for their nests, he should organize a hunt and seek for the abode of the despoilers. The farmer at once demolished an old wall pierced with mice holes, and found a nest composed of the precious fragments. These were put together and sent to the bank, where the officials managed to put them in with the pieces previously sent them, and accordingly paid the farmer the value of the notes.

In the year 1852 a ten-pound note was presented at a London bank and cashed by a sharp-witted clerk who on the same day, disposed of it for forty pounds, beyond its original value. It happened that on the back of the note was painted a clever and realistic view of the battle of Waterloo, and this painting realized the price beyond the money value of the note.

A foreign note to the value of £1 once sold for £400 its worth being increased to that amount from it containing an autograph portrait of Napoleon. Notes embellished with artistic paintings of flowers, animals, landscapes, ships, and portraits of celebrated persons occasionally find their way to the banks, and these paintings render them far more valuable than the sum they represent

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

At a dinner in Philadelphia Archbishop Ryan and Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf were seated side by side. In front of them was one of those Virginia hams which make the mouths of men water. Turning to his neighbor, the archbishop inquired graciously—"My dear Rabbi, when may I help you to some of the delicious ham?" With ever-ready wit, the rabbi smilingly replied—"At your wedding your grace."

Mount Royal Emigrants Frightened.

London, Jan. 7.—The latest despatches from Queenstown detail one of the strangest experiences a liner has undergone for years. The Mount Royal had almost reached Halifax when she doubled back. She was about 350 miles off Cape Race when her boilers began to leak during a heavy gale. The passengers, mainly emigrants from the south of Europe, became panic-stricken and were ordered below and the hatches battened.

There in the steerage quarters the simple land folk were thrown violently about the ship and believed every instant the sea would roll in and the ship be swallowed up. The most energetic and confidence restoring actions of the officers and the crew could do nothing to dissipate their fears. Meanwhile, the ship, still like a chip in a maelstrom, was thrown this way and that and the officers battled bravely to save her and her human freight.

Christmas Eve reckoning showed the vessel was on the forty-fifth meridian. Hope was growing that the American continent would soon be sighted, but the seas rose higher and the vessel strained greater. The boilers began to leak badly, and clouds of steam blinded the crew and hindered their work. The steam ran low and the vessel could make no headway. The machinery became disarranged and with certain destruction threatening the captain decided to run back before the storm. Then for days terror reigned, for it soon became known that instead of getting closer to land the course travelled was being retraced. Everything possible was done to quiet the emigrants, and the crew suffered terribly in the freezing weather.

Nothing could be done towards repairing the machinery until the storm abated and as the storm continued the Mount Royal continued to drift. No vessel was sighted until yesterday. The intrepid captain remained on the bridge until he dropped from exhaustion and was carried below. The mate took his place. During the last few days the crew managed to make temporary repairs, and the spirits of the passengers began to rise. Most of the passengers and the crew are well, despite their terrible experience.

HIS ADVANTAGE.

John and Willie were twins. Their best friend and playfellow was Archie, who is gifted with red hair and a hot temper. One day they quarrelled and Archie started home in a huff. The unsympathetic twins called after him. "Red head! Red head!" Archie seemed not to hear until the insult was repeated, then he turned and called back—"Don't care if I am red-headed. I aint twins and folks can tell me apart."

DYSPEPSIA AND STOMACH DISORDERS

MAY BE QUICKLY AND PERMANENTLY CURED BY

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Mr. P. A. Labelle, Maniwaki, Que., writes us as follows: "I desire to thank you for your wonderful cure, Burdock Blood Bitters.

Three years ago I had a very severe attack of Dyspepsia. I tried five of the best doctors I could find but they could do me no good.

I was advised by a friend to try Burdock Blood Bitters and to my great surprise, after taking two bottles, I was so perfectly cured that I have not had a sign of Dyspepsia since. I cannot praise it too highly to all sufferers. In my experience it is the best I ever used. Nothing for me like B.B.B.

Don't accept a substitute for Burdock Blood Bitters. There is nothing "just as good."

G. Waldock, made many warm friends who will be interested in the account.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING.

(Daily Sentinel-Review.)

New St. Paul's church, Woodstock, was the scene of a very fashionable wedding on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 1, when the marriage of Mr. James Crookston, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Miss Agness Nesbitt Sovereign, second daughter of Mr. Louis L. Sovereign, of Waterford, took place before a large assemblage of relatives and friends, quite a number of guests from out of town being present. The church was beautifully decorated with Christmas evergreens. Arches of these extended across the chancel and the pillars being wreathed in the same. The guests' pews had large wreaths of green, tied with red. The ceremony was performed by Archdeacon Young of Simcoe, assisted by Rev. T. C. Wallace, rector of New St. Paul's church. DOCTOR WANTED TO AMPUTATE.

Woman's Toe Saved by Zam-Buk.

But for the timely arrival of a box of Zam-Buk, Mrs. E. F. Fonger, 34 Myrtle St., St. Thomas, Ont., would have lost her toe. She says: "I am most thankful I discovered the existence of Zam-Buk. For about nine months I suffered cruelly from the effects of having a corn removed from my little toe, for with its removal a hole remained and my toe was in a terrible state. For months I was unable to wear a shoe and as the toe showed no signs of healing and was in such a shocking condition that Doctor thought it necessary to amputate it. About this time I received a sample box of Zam-Buk and began using it on my toe. The first application gave me the greatest ease from pain and encouraged me to give Zam-Buk a fair trial. Two months after commencing with Zam-Buk there was no sign of a hole for the flesh had grown in firmly and all soreness and pains were entirely vanished. Zam-Buk brought about this healing when all other remedies failed. We find Zam-Buk so valuable that we would not be without a box in the house."

Zam-Buk heals cuts, bruises, old wounds, running sores, eczema, ulcers, boil, eruptions, scalp sores, itch, piles, chapped hands, burns, scalds, and all skin diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 3 boxes $1.25.

Heavy Immigration from South.

Lower Rates This Year—Big Rush Expected.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 9.—Present indications are that the Canadian Northwest will draw an exceptionally heavy movement of new settlers from the United States this year. It should surpass the banner record for 1907. This is not only based on the fact that the Americans have come to realize generally that the Canadian Northwest offers splendid opportunities, but also because the railroads have awakened to the fact and are offering rates to the Canadian Northwest this year which are exceptionally favorable.

Due to the efforts of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern to stimulate the settlement along their systems, the lines which lead to St. Paul from the east and south are offering homeseekers' rates to the Canadian Northwest this year which are on a parity with those in existence to the southwest for a couple of seasons. There has been a tendency to equalize the rates to the two territories for some time, but it is not until this year that the lines in the Northwest have been able to place the rates to the Southwest and the Canadian Northwest on a parity.

DID NOT GO TO STAY.

The Southwest has been drawing a heavy movement of settlers for a couple of seasons on account of extremely low rates—rates which were lower than to any other section of the country. But it is claimed that many of the homeseekers who have taken advantage of these low rates did not take the trip with any intention of settling in the Southwest. An exceptionally large number have travelled on these low rates in the winter for pleasure jaunts, getting away from the winters of the Northwest for a spell and also to take in the scenery and enjoy a recreation. The railroad officials are responsible for the assertion that many of the new settlers in the southwest have taken up their stakes as soon as they realized the position they were in and taken up homes in the Canadian Northwest. This has been done in a surprising degree, it is said.

It is believed in certain places that the Southwestern lines have come to a realization that their campaign for new settlers has not met with the desired results from the fact that they have sanctioned to cheaper rates being granted to the Canadian Northwest this year without making a fight, which it is believed that they would wage if they knew that they could stem the tide of immigration northward.

The maximum homeseekers rates to points within a certain prescribed territory in Texas, where the Southwestern lines have been endeavoring to plant settlers, has been raised $5 this year. On the other hand a maximum rate has been established to points in western Saskatchewan and eastern Alberta. This is the first time that any maximum rate has been made to apply to anywhere in the Canadian Northwest, from the United States, indicating as much as anything the campaign planned for securing the settlement of that territory.

HOW RATES HAVE BEEN EQUALIZED.

The following comparison shows the manner in which the homeseekers' rates have been equalized to the Canadian Northwest and the Southwest. Last year it cost the homeseeker only $34 to go from Chicago to El Paso, Texas, and return, while he was charged $50.80 to Macleod, Alberta. This year the tariff quotes a round trip rate of $40 from Chicago to Macleod, and $39 from Chicago to El Paso and return. The distances from these two points to Chicago in the respective territories are the same, and demonstrates to an eminent degree the equalization of rates to the two competitive territories.

Besides these rates quoted by connecting lines in St. Paul, the Canadian roads this week over the Soo line put in a special homeseekers tariff to points in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, which are lower in a considerable degree than are quoted by connecting lines as well as the regular one-way rates. There is no basis for these rates, but they have been made arbitrarily. For instance, the Soo tariff quotes a round trip rate of $33 between St. Paul and Calgary, as compared with the regular one-way rate of $39.10. These rates are quoted only for this week, but they will undoubtedly hold good on every first and third Tuesday of each month for a definite period.

No homeseekers' rates have been authorized by the Canadian Northern as yet from connecting lines. It is taken for granted that it is waiting to see what the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern are going to do, which are expected to make some kind of an announcement with reference to homeseekers' rates to North Dakota, Montana and points across the boundary in the near future.

Foster's Forecast.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—The last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross the continent Jan. 11 to 15, a warm wave Jan. 10 to 14, cool wave Jan. 13 to 17. The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about Jan. 16, cross the Pacific slope by the close of Jan. 17, the great central valleys Jan. 18 to 20 and the eastern States Jan. 21. A warm wave will cross the Pacific slope about Jan. 16, the great central valleys Jan. 18 and the eastern States Jan. 20. A cool wave will cross the Pacific slope about Jan. 19, the great central valleys Jan. 21, and the eastern States Jan. 23.

This will be one of the three most severe disturbances of the month and will bring a period of warm, dry weather. Jupiter will have almost entire control of the weather and those interested may observe what that great planet can do in the weather line. Unusual warm weather will prevail as an average from Jan. 13 to 29 at which latter date the earth will pass between Jupiter and the sun. Meantime one severe, short cold wave will occur.

This disturbance will cause severe storms during its entire movement across the continent probably most severe while it is crossing the central valleys Jan. 18 to 20. The cold waves before and after this disturbance are not expected to be severe. Not much rain or snow will fall till after Jan. 25. The 1st half of January will not bring good crop weather for winter wheat.

On and soon after Jan. 11 a wave of cold weather will be crossing the continent and temperatures will continue to rise for several days thereafter while dry weather will continue. This very dry weather in the central valleys in January may become a serious matter later in the season should a drouth occur in June, July and August as is expected in January, February and March, it would cause a failure in crops. Of such was the great drouth in the summer of 1901.

WEAK TIRED WOMEN

How many women there are that get no refreshment from sleep. They wake in the morning and feel tireder than when they went to bed. They have a dizzy sensation in the head, the heart palpitates; they are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and the lightest household duties during the day seem to be a drag and a burden.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

are the very remedy that weak, nervous, tired out, sickly women need to restore them the blessings of good health.

They give sound, restful sleep, tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart, and make rich blood. Mrs. C. McDonald, Portage la Prairie, Man., writes: "I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and weak spells. I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking them I was completely cured.

NO OBSTACLE.

One of the best stories told by the late Lord Brampton is due to a Scotsman. Lord Watson told him at Gray's Inn of a very rude and very stupid Scots judge, who once, when a celebrated advocate was arguing before him, pointed with one forefinger to one of his ears, and with the other to the opposite one. "You see this Mr——," "I do my Lord," said the advocate. "Well it goes in here and comes out there!" "I do not doubt it, my Lord," said the advocate. "What is there to prevent it?"

DEATH OF CONDUCTOR McDOUGALL

Local Conductor Killed on the Road

LARGE FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

A highly respected and well known figure is lost to Medicine Hat by the untimely death of conductor J. A. McDougall, who lost his life on the road last week.

The sad accident, which resulted in his death, occurred at Coleridge on Thursday morning last. Conductor McDougall was engaged in making a coupling between a C.P.R. car and one of a foreign type with "buffers." Not noticing these for the moment, he stood in a perilous position between one of the buffers and the bumpers of the C. P. R. car and, the engine backing up, he was seriously crushed. The way freight train, which was going east, returned to Medicine Hat with the injured man who was immediately removed to the General Hospital and placed under the care of Dr. Smythe. The injuries proved fatal and on Friday morning at 7 o'clock the injured man passed away, at the age of 42 years.

The deceased was a native of Bolton, Ontario. For twenty years he has been in the railroad service, first with the Grand Trunk Railway in Toronto, and since 1897 with the C.P.R. in Medicine Hat, being promoted to passenger conductor's ran in 1899. Recently he had been transferred temporarily to way freight conducting. Last summer Mr. McDougall was on the train which jumped the metals near Brooks station, when a despatcher was killed. He himself on this occasion escaped without injury. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Chosen Friends down east, and in the city joined the O.R.C., and A.O.U.W. and was insured in the Dominion of Canada Accident Assurance. He [illegible]

On Sunday afternoon the funeral took place at two o'clock, the Rev. J. W. Morrow conducting the services. Two hundred and twenty-five men of the different orders to which Mr. McDougall had belonged followed the hearse to the cemetery to pay their last tribute to the dead, showing the high esteem in which he had been held. The following is a list of flowers given by his family, relatives and friends:

MISHAP ON THE RIVER

Mrs. Weiler Has Terrible Experience

IN THE WATER 20 MINUTES

A remarkable accident, which might easily have had a fatal ending, befall Mrs. Weiler on Tuesday last. At about a quarter to four in the afternoon she was crossing the river to the town, side and, nearing the barge, she took a wrong turn, which brought her to the place where the sewer water enters the river. The ice here, being very thin, gave way and she was precipitated into the water.

Fortunately at this place, close to the bank, the river is shallow and, standing on the bed, she was able to keep her head above water. Calling loudly for help, she remained in this perilous position for nearly twenty minutes. Had the water been a few inches deeper there can be no doubt Mrs. Weiler would have been carried under the ice by the current and drowned.

As it was, the ice cold water began to take effect and it was only by clinging to the thin ledge of ice around her that she retained an upright position until assistance arrived.

After twenty minutes of agony Mrs. Weiler succeeded in attracting the attention of Louis Bayer, a half-breed, who, throwing a rope from the barge, rescued her. She then recrossed the river with him, her clothes, meanwhile, being frozen stiff and making movement extremely difficult. It was her pluck in walking across the river which probably saved her from contracting a fatal chill or freezing to death.

In Bayer's shack Dr. Smyth attended her, and thence she was taken to her home at Mr. Horner's.

Happily, nothing more serious than shock and severe chill resulted from the mishap, and Mrs. Weller is rapidly recovering.

LANGUAGES TAUGHT

THE TIMES' SUGGESTION ACTED UPON

Pupils Show Enthusiasm

That The Times did not commence its agitation for languages at the High School before they were needed is amply proven by recent events.

Mr. Ware, the acting principal of the High School, whose continuance in the schools will be welcome to the parents, has been kind enough to offer his services to the pupils for after-hour lessons. After a consultation with the pupils Latin and French were selected as the two languages most in demand.

Accordingly Latin is being taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Already 5 lessons have been given and on Thursday afternoon 12 students availed themselves of the class. French was commenced on Wednesday and 11 were in attendance. Besides these many more intimate their intention of joining and availing themselves of Mr. Ware's kindness.

The fact that these lessons are entirely optional, that they are given after school hours, and that the skating on the river is grand—that in spite of all these drawbacks a dozen pupils are taking the lessons, is support enough of The Times' contention that languages should be taught in Medicine Hat as they are in every other High School in Alberta.

As these languages are a requisite of later years' studies, every High School student should enroll in these classes at the start. The earlier languages are studied the easier they are.

Solicitor Advises against Ald Forster's Motion to Pay Aldermen

Present: The Mayor, Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Huckvale.

The vote of thanks as previously reported by the officials of the C.P.R. who met in the City Hall recently, was read. Accepted and filed.

The provincial board of health wrote asking if any change had been made with regard to the appointment of the health officer for Medicine Hat and for the name of the officer appointed if such change had been made. Notified that no change had been made.

The Calgary city clerk wrote requesting the Medicine Hat council to take joint action with Calgary in asking the government to pass legislation making outside municipalities who owned no hospital responsible for their patients treated. The matter was referred to the License and Police committee for them to confer with the Hospital authorities.

Malcolm's Western Canneries wrote asking the council to take up the question of the right of way to the company's plant, as they wished to take up immediately the matter of the spur track with Wm. Whyte, in Winnipeg. Referred to the Finance committee after a short discussion.

Ward, Gundy & Co., desired to be telegraphed an option on the bonds on the expiration of that granted to Aemilius Jarvis & Co. The Merchants Bank wrote notifying the council of a wire from Aemilius Jarvis & Co. to hold the unsold bonds, the amount, rate and maturities as they had a client ready to consider a purchase. The correspondence was ordered laid on the table until such time as the council should hear from Aemilius Jarvis & Co.

The Northern Electric and Manufacturing Co., requested payment for the fire alarm system supplied by them.

Accounts were referred to Finance committee.

Ald. Forster read the report of the special committee on salaries, which was adopted:

"Your special committee appointed to look into the question of salaries recommend the payment of the following salaries for 1908: City engineer, $1620; superintendent of gas and water, $1200; treasurer, $1200; chief of police, $1260; two waterworks engineers, $1020 each; meter reading clerk, $960; city clerk, $900; two constables, $840 each; city teamster, $780; two fire department drivers, $720 each; janitor, $540; solicitor, $400; chief of fire brigade, $300; weigh master, $180, and pound keeper, $480; same salaries as paid in 1907. That the medical health officer's salary be reduced from $500 to $400. That the auditor's salary be increased from $250 to $300. That the question of the assessor's salary be left in abeyance until the end of the month. The committee recommends that engineer Morrison take charge of all the inside work of his dept. until the first of April and that the store dept. be looked after by himself, and that Mr. MacDonald's services be dispensed with until April 1st. That on city work where day labor was employed, that the engineer be instructed to employ married men as far as possible, and give the necessary work out in such a manner that it may be distributed among as many men as possible, giving one outfit one week and another outfit another week.

2. That the engineer make an approximate list of the supplies which may be required by his dept. during the year, and that tenders be asked for the supply of these articles, same as in 1906, tenderers to deliver goods as required.

3. That tenders be asked for horse supplies for the city teams, for six months supply delivered as required.

4. That Mr. Porter look after the outdoor work till April 1st, taking up, among other things, the work of foreman Jackson, who can be given a subordinate position until that date; and that outside work be cut down to a minimum.

5. That the team and teamster be employed at making gravel walks under the direction of the Public Works committee.

6. That all orders for supplies of any kind whatsoever involving the expenditure of ONE DOLLAR or more, given by any city official or employee, must be countersigned by the chairman of the committee or commission affected by the expenditure or in the absence of the chairman, by a member of the committee or the commission.

W. COUSINS,
H. A. BAKER,
NELSON SPENCER,
F. G. FORSTER."

A deputation from the fire brigade waited on the council to ask that a third man be employed. T. Hutchinson said that at the present time two men were on duty 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. They wanted a day off each week. The new man would be a driver and would increase the efficiency of the brigade. Under the existing arrangements there was only one driver in the fire hall during the meal hours. Mr. Hutchinson went on to speak on behalf of the fire boys. He said an expert man was needed, one who could act as fireman, go with the chemical apparatus at all times. The two who were now engaged would quit unless a third man were added. Ald. Baker thought it advisable to arrange it possible to have an independent man who could devote all his time to the work. Ald. Huckvale thought that it could not be expected that the fireman should remain on duty all the time. Ald. Baker: "It's altogether too much." Ald. Hutchinson stated if a cheaper man than those now employed could fill the position. It was stated in reply that a man could not be obtained worth employing at less than $60 a month. Mr. Hutchinson submitted a proposal by which the fire department would agree to pay the new man's wages until such time as the taxes began to come in, if the city would pay the interest on the money. Ald. Baker thought the city was not likely to get a better offer. Accepted by the council. The appointment to be left in the hands of the fire department.

The fireboys also wished the council to take action to prevent the leaving of rigs in lanes. The solicitor said the streets and sidewalks by-law was adequate to deal with this matter. The chief to be seen with regard to the enforcement of the by-law.

The Finance committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

T. Morrey	$ 8 25
Quick Job Print Co.	7 50
Post Office	1 00
Mack Higdon	15 00
City Treasurer	27 72
J. H. Conn	30 00
A. C. Hawthorne	48 00
News	147 92
J. H. Preston	20 00
L. Foster	3 65
Stewart & Tweed, Ltd.	8 10
T. J. Fleager	15 50
H. Schmelzer	2 00
Lumber and Mfg. Co.	18 00

Regarding the by-law to give salaries to the Mayor and Aldermen the solicitor wrote that in his opinion only by-laws of a prohibitive nature, such as concerned the "peace, order welfare and good government of the city" could be passed under title XXI, clause 2. Certainly under the clause there were no powers granted to give salaries to anybody. In his opinion the council was in the same relation to the people as were trustees or directors to their shareholders. Trustees could receive nothing in the way of payment from the estate, but such as was provided for in the deed. The same thing applied to directors of a company. Members of Parliament and the Senate also could receive no greater amount than was provided for under statute. From the ratepayers' point of view the check provided by the law in such cases was very desirable. There was no guarantee otherwise that a future council would not double the amount of their salaries and so on. Calgary was seeking an amendment to their charter to allow of the introduction of such by-laws as that proposed by Ald. Forster. Edmonton had got a charter enabling them to pay the mayor a salary, but in order to make this possible he became an ex-officio member of the commission. Ald. Baker thought the matter should be put to the ratepayers. Ald. Huckvale was of the same opinion. Ald. Forster intimated that if he wasn't paid he wouldn't act on the Council.

The council went into committee of the whole to discuss the by-laws. At 11 o'clock they adjourned till Monday next.

S. Miller of the Western Canneries, while in Chicago during the holidays, bought the boilers and engines for the Canneries.

Cheap Day

The Times is going to have a Cheap Day, too.

ON FEBRUARY 12

anyone can secure The Times for one year for $1 instead of $1 50, which you have to pay any other time of the year.

Yes, The Times is going to celebrate too.

We haven't any special event to celebrate at this particular time, but that doesn't matter.

Ask any man you see celebrating why he is at it and he'll either tell you to mind your own blame business or he'll get up an event for the celebration.

It's not the celebration of an event—unless mother-in-law has gone home, or an addition has come to the family, or a long deferred bill is paid, or—Oh, that's enough.

You can just about lay it down that he is simply celebrating 'cause he feels good.

Well, The Times expects to feel about as good on as at any other time of the year. We always feel good after the week's issue has got out and been put to press, and our assurance is just how dum a paper we are turning out.

It shows everyone reads it, don't you know?

We'd a thousand times rather be jolted and jabbed and upper-cut and generally smashed than have someone put up a monocle when we introduce ourselves, and say: "Oh! Ah! Yes! Em-um-m—But let's see, who in thundah aw you."

To get back to this

CHEAP DAY

We expect to feel like celebrating that day and in order to work up to it and leave us no excuse for celebrating alone, we're going to take you all into the fun—that is all of you who are out in the cold.

We don't offer any excuse.

We are merely catering to a great popular moral movement—or words to that effect—the Calgary Herald had its Cheap Day and so have—others. They call it Bargain Day, but we call it for two reasons.

In the first place it's a cheap sort of a scheme for a reputable paper, and we wouldn't do it if we weren't celebrating, as we said.

In the second place we feel cheap in offering it. So we guess is about the correct name for it—it's about on a line with the class of talk we're serving up.

We don't think you'll think much more of us for this

CHEAP DAY

BUT WE WANT YOU TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT JUST THE SAME.

Well, to drop this cheap talk here's what it means:

Every new subscriber can get The Times for a Dollar, and every old subscriber can do the same who settles up his arrears at the same time.

Remember, it lasts all day

And we guarantee to give you a mighty good $ worth for the coming year.

Everybody should take The Times, and almost everybody does.

"There's a reason," as we have said before.

Meet us then at The Times Office on Wednesday, February 12, or send your letter with the money on that date.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

From our own correspondent

Irvine

On Monday evening the 6th of January a meeting of ratepayers was held in the schoolhouse to nominate candidates for the new village council and to receive the report of Mr. Sam Kalmbach, the Overseer of the village.

The village has a surplus of about $50, over and above outstanding accounts.

The receipts from all sources amounted to over $800. It was resolved that a night watchman should be appointed as the fire protection is small, and the recent small fires have naturally caused some anxiety to those owning property on the main street. Messrs. Bombach and Lehr asked for a bonus from the village if they were to put down a gas well. This after considerable discussion, was decided against.

The candidates nominated for councillors were as follows: Messrs. Sam. Kalmbach, Dr. H. J. Ferguson, John Koenig, Fred. Weiss, Sr., Fred. Brost, John Hausgur and H. S. Newby.

At the election of councillors for the village of Irvine held between the hours of 5 p.m., and 10 p.m. on January 13., the three persons elected to fill this position were Messrs. Samuel Kalmbach, Fred. Weiss, Sr., and John Koenig. All those nominated went to the poll excepting Herbert S. Newby, who withdrew his name just before the poll opened, much to the dissatisfaction of some of the ratepayers. We hear that the present council are going to live strictly up to the ordinance. Fire protection and other improvements are already being discussed.

A fire broke out on the north side of the railway on Wednesday afternoon in the stable of Mr. Jacob Aichler, which was soon in ashes. Mr. Aichler, unfortunately, lost some harness and hay. It appears as if the fire was caused by children, but nothing definite is known.

On Thursday evening Mrs. John Pollock was at home to a number of her friends, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Friday evening there was a pleasant gathering at the Rev. Lewis Hooper's.

Messrs. Nat Wilson and Arthur Trent were in from Graburn at the fore part of the week.

Mr. A. Irving, of the Massey-Harris Implement Co., was a guest at the Alberta hotel for a few days last week.

Homestead Inspector C. R. Williamson has been in the district for the last few days.

A meeting of the parishioners of the English church of St. George's of Irvine was held in the church on Tuesday at 7.30 p.m.; details of which are in another part of this paper.

Shortly there will be a pool table in the Alberta hotel, a much needed want, that will satisfy the persons that are true sports. Mine host at the Alberta hotel, we see, is having constructed a very spacious building on the next lot to the Alberta. We are informed that a barber shop and pool room and offices will occupy the ground floor and a Masonic hall the top floor. The above building will be 30 x 50 when completed.

Mr Henry Vockenroth, a partner to Weiss & Co., of Irvine and Walsh was in town for a day or so this week.

We understand that a business change will take place on South Railway Avenue at a very near future date. The particulars are not yet to hand.

The weather prevailing at the present time in this chinook belt is nothing short of marvellous. We have not had an actual cold day this winter so far, and then people talk of spending the winter in California. Why not breath the fresh air of Bright, Sunny Southern Alberta.

Mrs. W. Harris was at home to a number of her friends on Wednesday evening, and a very enjoyable time was spent at whist and other games.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bollinger returned from the States where they have been spending the last month or six weeks. Mr. Bollinger reports that quite a few people will be up from Dakota this spring.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. George's church Irvine, held their monthly meeting at the vicarage on Friday afternoon, when several matters of importance were discussed.

The Rev. and Mrs. H. C. L. Hooper were at home to a number of their friends on Friday evening and a very enjoyable time was spent.

The council have called their first meeting for Jan. 20, at 7 o'clock p.m., when all ratepayers are requested to attend.

Dr. H. J. Ferguson is about the busiest man in Irvine these days. He has been in the country almost continually for the past two weeks and has been attending some very serious cases of pneumonia and has, up to the present time, not lost one case.

Constable T. Brewer, of the Irvine Detachment has been removed back to Lethbridge, and Constable Ashe is the new officer to take his place.

Inspector Will Parker was a visitor to the town on Thursday returning on the westbound in the evening.

Mr. Stewart McNutt has been confined to the house for the past week, but we are pleased to see that he is able to be around again now.

The annual meeting of the Irvine school district is to be held on Jan. 24 at 4 p.m., when all ratepayers are requested to attend.

Messrs. James and Sam Gasker were in town on Wednesday of last week and they report that all stock are doing well in the Many Islands country.

The Venerable Archdeacon Harding has been asked to preside at a meeting of representatives of the Josephsburg mission of the church of England, to be held at St. George's church, Irvine, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Sunday January 26, Matins and a celebration of Holy Communion in St. George's at 11 a.m.

Seven Persons

Mr. J. A. Young shipped two carloads of sheep (400) from this place to Pincher Creek Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Carlson and family have gone on a visit to Elko, B. C. They will be away about a week.

There is to be another "Farmers' Store" meeting at Mr. Meyer's next Saturday afternoon. The meetings are well attended and seem to be having good success; a great many having subscribed for shares.

Mr. Meyers got the contract for building a shed at the school house. Reported price $65.00.

Coleridge

There is a marked movement in Coleridge real estate, owing, no doubt, to the remarkably fine weather and in anticipation of an early spring.

Mr. E. A. Cunningham, of the Rogers-Cunningham Lumber Co., was in town last week in connection with the yard that company have put down here.

Mr. H. Cavan, L. Conlin and L. Finch drove over to Medicine Hat on business last Monday.

A party of twelve assembled at Mr. Harper's ranch on Ross Creek on Tuesday for the purpose of driving to Medicine Hat and taking in the skating at the rink. Supper was served at McKinnon's at 10 p.m., and a pleasant hour was afterwards spent at the ranch, the party ultimately breaking up at 2 a.m.

Mr. T. M. Babbington was a visitor here on Wednesday and Thursday and we hope soon to see him permanently settled here.

R. G. McFarlane spent two days at the Paradise ranch, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. Cavan.

Lumber sales are gradually on the increase says the manager of the local lumber yard.

Mr. and Mrs. MacCarroll, Mrs. Gammage, and Mr. W. J. Rahn were Medicine Hat visitors on Thursday.

Mr. Floyd Finch was up from Dunmore on Thursday.

Mr. Ed. Middleton rode in to Coleridge from the ranch on business Friday.

Mrs. Morrow, of Moose Jaw, has bought some property in this town and intends building within a week or two.

A party of skaters drove over on Friday evening to Harper's ranch on Ross Creek, where another party had already met, and were well entertained by Mrs. Harper.

Red Cliff

Just a word to the man who is desirous of knowing who the scribe from Red Cliff is—my name is with the editor, and if he sees fit to do so he may divulge it, but I cannot see how that can possibly do you any good, for you know that when anyone does a thing that makes him famous it is sure to come out in the paper sooner or later.

There was a sad tale came to our ears last week about two men who got lost between Medicine Hat and Red Cliff and were obliged to spend the night in the gravel pit. We can not vouch for the truth of the story, although it came from a reliable source.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dodge drove over to the Hat Sunday and spent the day.

Miss Cora Brubaker, who was reported as being on the sick list part of last week has recovered.

There must be a "Jack-the-dog-catcher" near here for there were several men out hunting lost, strayed or stolen dogs one day this week.

Albert Brubaker and Madeline and Tom Dodge took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Crouch last Sunday.

Fred. Courtnell was a Bowell visitor the greater part of this week. We are well aware that there are quite a few charming misses there.

There has been quite a lot of gas escaping from the Stoner gas well, and we are inclined to think that enough gas has been wasted to run a good sized town a year.

We have been threatened with annihilation if a certain man can find who writes these notes so in case he does will take this opportunity of bidding you all a tearful farewell, and if these notes do not appear again for a few weeks you will know that Mr. ——— the famous warrior has another scalp.

Coyotes are getting very numerous around here now and they are so [illegible] that they come right up to our doors and barns.

The latest addition to Red Cliff is a ghost and some of us have seen it. For further particulars ask Billy Dodge.

BRONCHO BOB.

Walsh

Mr. J. Demarais was unloading a car of lumber for the new hotel on Saturday.

Messrs. Renwick and Struthers were loading beef cattle for Toronto market on Friday.

Mr. Sinclair has ear-marked quite a number of coyote hides already this month.

Our provincial government had a big gang of men and teams working on a new road between Walsh and Graburn this last fall, but for some reason took them off before any part of it was finished. Timber for bridges and culverts has been lying at the railway station for over three months. Now I venture to say, that if the work had been let by contract, it would have been finished long ago, and for a good deal less money than it will cost doing it by day labor.

Our new school teacher arrived on Saturday morning's train from the west. The bachelors of Walsh will be pleased to hear it is a young lady this time, by name, Miss Eniff. She is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, temporarily, and she had not been there more than a couple of hours when two of our well known riders of the range turned up looking for a stray heifer, but they did not say it was a white-faced one, and of course, they did not know the school teacher was there.

The only drawback to this district, where there is never any frosted or shrunken grain, is that there is never any cheap grain for feed.

Chas. Lye sent a consignment of young chickens to Robert Mitchell, Medicine Hat, this week, that dressed on an average over five pounds each.

A FINE GYMNASIUM

WILL BE READY IN TWO WEEKS

The Young Men's Club building is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. Brick has delayed the construction about a week, but in spite of this it is expected that the boys will be able to meet there in a couple of weeks.

The equipment for the gymnasium has been ordered, and a great part of it is already on hand. The gift of Chester Massey has enabled the boys to add everything that will make the gymnasium as complete as the building will allow.

In the equipment will be horizontal bar, parallel bars, horse, trapeze, ladder, two dozen pair of dumb bells, punching bag, exerciser, four mats, and other smaller things. There will be two shower baths and lavatory at the back.

It is the intention later on to give an exhibition in the Opera House.

Jenkinson Playing Polo in California.

Also Major Ross, brother of Capt. H. H. Ross.

The friends of T. B. Jenkinson will be glad to learn that he is almost recovered from his recent accident, although he will be slightly lame for life. A piece of the broken auto entered his leg. He has left the hospital.

The following is a dispatch from Riverside, Cal.:

"This city has not only received the reputation of being one of the finest winter resorts in the United States but as a polo centre it has no equal. The fact has become known throughout the country that Riverside possesses one of the best polo teams in the country, and its grounds are considered very good. This has attracted the attention of enthusiastic polo players from all over the world.

"This winter, for instance, there are already in Riverside T. B. Jenkinson, who came to this city solely to enjoy the exhilarating sport of polo, from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada, and brought his stables of fourteen ponies. Until his recent accident in Arcadia he could be seen daily giving his ponies try-outs and breaking in his green ponies. Mr. Jenkinson's injured leg is rapidly healing and he will be in the game when the big tournaments begin.

"Then there is Major C. G. Ross, of Calgary, Canada, who also came to Riverside because he heard that there was polo playing and he too may be seen on the Club grounds at Chimawa Park every afternoon working his new ponies. It is very likely that both Mr. Jenkinson and Major Ross will next year be permanent residents of Riverside, so delighted are they with the climatic conditions and the country in general.

"Another player of wide reputation is Mr. Conduit, an Irish poloist and sportsman, who is expected this week. Frank Mackie, a well known American millionaire sportsman and champion polo player is coming to Riverside in January, reservations having been ordered for himself and Mrs. Mackey at the Glenwood. His stable of ponies is to arrive about the same time. It is said that a number of other prominent polo players are expected here this winter and it is an assured fact that next winter a number of Canadian players are coming here from Montreal and Toronto and will not only spend the winter in Riverside but will send their ponies here ahead of the season so they may become acclimated.

"All the visitors at Riverside deeply impressed with the beauties of Southern California, and especially Riverside, is Major C. G. Ross, who is wintering here with Mrs. Ross and stopping at the Glenwood. Major Ross receives his rank from the Canadian Militia. He is a big ranch owner at Calgary, Alberta, Canada, where he still has large interests. He has played polo for over twenty years and is considered one of the best players in Canada. He is a member of the famous Montreal team.

"Four years ago he organized the High River team, and after playing for a year at their own home grounds went on a tour the following year to Toronto, where they defeated in succession the teams from Rochester, N.Y., Montreal, Canada, and the Buffalo, N.Y. team, which up to this time had never suffered defeat in Canada. Then Major Ross' boys played and defeated a combination team comprising players from Montreal, Rochester and Toronto teams, by a score of 6 to 2. The ponies that the High River team had were all western ponies and had travelled over 2500 miles before they were played.

"In 1905 Major Ross took a team known as the Calgary team to Montreal and out of three matches with Montreal and Kingston won two. This year the famous Montreal team has two of Major Ross' Calgary players and during the summer carried off many honors. Major Ross is considered one of the best players of pony polo in Canada.

"He has become a member of the Riverside polo club and thereby strengthens the local forces not only by his individual playing, but through the advice he can give from his years of experience. He says that the Riverside players are exceptionally fast and many of them have excellent mounts."

Curlers Visit Maple Creek.

Two rinks of Medicine Hat enthusiasts visited Maple Creek on Friday to play the district curling matches. The following represented the Gas City:

Sam Fawcett, Wm. Hatcher, M. O'Hara, J. H. Binns, skip.

J. Hargrave, T. Hutchinson, S. T. Hopper, Fred. Pingle, skip.

The following represented Maple Creek:

T. Cooil, J. C. Dixon, W. Curley, P. Chevalier, skip.

A. Burnett, T. Grice, Dr. Courice, J. Dixon, skip.

Two very exciting series were played, though in the afternoon the ice was in a somewhat wet state, making the match, to some extent, a test of brute strength. In the morning the district medal was played for. The Pingle vs. Chevalier contest ended in a tie—13 by each team. In Binns vs. Demon the Medicine Hat team were the victors—score 13-12. Total, Medicine Hat 25, Maple Creek 24.

In the afternoon a single rink match was played, on very bad ice resulting in the defeat of Medicine Hat, Score, Pingle 9, Kearns 17.

The Maple Creek team is thus the one to take part in the Calgary bonspiel.

Edmonton Journal.—Kearns, of Maple Creek, will play at the Calgary Bonspiel for the district trophy having won out from Pingle of Medicine Hat on Thursday last by a score of 21 to 7.

Jasper Demerais, a breed, hired with Thomas Lokier as a farm hand at $8 a month. He obtained $8.50 in advance from Mr. Lokier, and then decided that he could enjoy a better time in town spending the money than out on the farm. The team which was sent in to take Demerais out to the ranch was here a week, running up a bill for the owner. Demerais was fined $20, couldn't pay, so undergoes a term of one month, during which time he will have every opportunity to acquire a love of hard work.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

"It seems," he said, "that we have been waiting a considerable amount of time."

"I very nearly wasted powder and shot," replied Jack, significantly indicating his rifle.

"I saw you twice and raised my rifle. Your breeches are just the color of a young doe. Are you Meredith? My name is Oscard."

"Ah! Yes, I am Meredith. I am glad to see you."

They shook hands. There was a winkle in Jack Meredith's eyes, but Oscard was quite grave. His sense of humor was not very keen, and he was before all things a sportsman.

"I left the canoes a mile below Msala and landed to shoot a deer we saw drinking, but I never saw him afterward. Then I heard you, and I have been stalking you ever since."

"But I never expected you so soon. You were not due till—look!" Jack whispered suddenly.

Oscard turned on his heel, and the next instant their two rifles rang out through the forest stillness in one sharp crack. Across the stream, ten yards behind the spot where Oscard had emerged from the brush, a leopard sprang into the air five feet from the ground, with head thrown back and paws clawing at the thinness of space with grand free sweeps. The beast fell with a thud and lay still, dead.

The two men clambered across the rocks again, side by side. While they stood over the prostrate form of the leopard, beautiful, incomparably graceful and sleek even in death, Guy Oscard stole a sidelong glance at his companion. He was a modest man, and yet he knew that he was reckoned among the big game hunters of the age. This man had fired as quickly as himself, and there were two small trickling holes in the animal's head.

While he was being quietly scrutinized Jack Meredith stooped down and, taking the leopard beneath the shoulders, lifted it bodily back from the pool of blood.

"Pity to spoil the skin," he explained as he put a fresh cartridge into his rifle.

Oscard nodded in an approving way. He knew the weight of a full grown leopard, all muscle and bone, and he was one of those old fashioned persons mentioned in the Scriptures as taking a delight in a man's legs—or his arms, so long as they were strong.

"I suppose," he said quietly, "we had better skin him here."

"Yes."

They laid the skin out on the trampled maidenhair and contemplated it with silent satisfaction. In the course of their inspection they both arrived at the head at the same moment. The two holes in the hide, just above the eyes, came under their notice at the same moment, and they turned and smiled gravely at each other, thinking the same thought—the sort of thought that Englishmen rarely put into intelligible English.

Two rifles rang out through the forest stillness.

"I'm glad we did that," said Guy Oscard at length; suddenly. "Whatever comes of this expedition of ours—if we fight, as we probably shall, before it is finished—if we hate each other ever afterward, that skin ought to remind us that we are much of a muchness."

By 9 o'clock they reached the camp at Msala. Victor Durnovo was still at work superintending the discharge of the baggage and stores from the large trading canoes. They heard the shouting and chattering before coming in sight of the camp, and one voice raised angrily above the others.

"Is that Durnovo's voice?" asked Meredith.

"Yes," answered his companion curtly.

It was a new voice, which Meredith had not heard before. When they shouted to announce their arrival it was suddenly hushed, and presently Durnovo came forward to greet them.

Meredith hardly knew him. He was so much stronger and healthier in appearance. Durnovo shook hands heartily.

"No need to introduce you two," he said, looking from one to the other.

"No; after one mistake we discovered each other's identity in the forest," answered Meredith.

Durnovo smiled, but there was something behind the smile. He did not seem to approve of their meeting without his intervention.

The three men walked up toward the house together. It was a fair sized house, with a heavy thatched roof that overhung the walls like the crown of a mushroom. The walls were only mud, and the thatching was nothing else than banana leaves, but there was evidence of European taste in the garden surrounding the structure and in the glazed windows and wooden door.

As they approached the open doorway three little children, clad in very little more than their native modesty, ran gleefully out and proceeded to engage seats on Jack Meredith's boots, looking upon him as a mere public conveyance. They took hardly any notice of him, but chattered and quarreled among themselves, sometimes in baby English, sometimes in dialect unknown to Oscard and Meredith.

"These," said the latter, when they were seated and clinging with their little dusky arms round his legs, "are the very rummest little kids I ever came across."

Durnovo gave an impatient laugh and went on toward the house. But Guy Oscard stopped and walked more slowly beside Meredith as he labored along heavy footed.

"They are the jolliest little souls imaginable," continued Jack Meredith. "There," he said to them when they had reached the doorstep, "run away to you mother—very fine ride—no, no more tonight! I'm aweary, you understand, aweary!"

"Aweary, awe-e-e-ary!" repeated the little things, standing before him in infantile nude rotundity, looking up with bright eyes.

"Aweary, that is it. Good night, Epaminondas; good night, Xantippe! Give ye good hap, most stout Nestorius!"

He stooped and gravely shook hands with each one in turn, and, after forcing a like ceremonial upon Guy Oscard, they reluctantly withdrew.

"They have not joined us, I suppose?" said Oscard as he followed his companion into the house.

"Not yet. They live in this place, Nestorious, I understand, takes care of his mother, who in her turn takes care of this house. He is one and a half."

Guy Oscard seemed to have inherited the mind inquisitive from his learned father. He asked another question later on.

"Who is that woman?" he said during dinner, with a little nod toward the doorway through which the object of his curiosity had passed with some plates.

"That is the mother of the stout Nestorius," answered Jack—"Durnovo's housekeeper."

He spoke quietly, looking straight in front of him; and Joseph, who was drawing a cork at the back of the room, was watching his face.

There was a little pause, during which Durnovo drank slowly. Then Guy Oscard spoke again.

"If she cooked the dinner," he said, "she knows her business."

"Yes," answered Durnovo, "she is a good cook, if she is nothing else."

It did not sound as if further inquiries would be welcome, and so the subject was dropped with a silent tribute to the culinary powers of Durnovo's housekeeper at the Msala station.

The woman had only appeared for a moment, bringing in some dishes for Joseph—a tall, stately woman, with great dark eyes, in which the patience of motherhood had succeeded to the soft fire of West Indian love and youth. She had the graceful slow carriage of the creole, although her skin was darker than that of those dangerous sirens.

"They call me," she had said to Jack Meredith in her soft, mumbled English a fortnight earlier, "they call me Marie."

The children he had named after his own fantasy, and when she had once seen him with them there was a notable change in her manner. Her eyes rested on him with a sort of wondering attention, and when she cooked his meals or touched anything that was his there was something in her attitude that denoted special care.

Joseph called her "missis," with a sort of friendliness in his voice which never rose to badinage nor descended to familiarity.

The man who had found the simiacine was eager, restless, full of suspicion. To the others the scheme obviously presented itself in a different light. Jack Meredith was dilettante, light hearted and unsatisfactory. It was impossible to arouse any enthusiasm in him, to make him take it seriously. Guy Oscard was gravely indifferent. He wanted to get rid of a certain space of time, and the African forest, containing as it did the only excitement that his large heart knew, was as good a place as any. The simiacine was, in his mind, relegated to a distant place behind weeks of sport and adventure such as his soul loved.

"You men," said Durnovo eagerly, "don't seem to take the thing seriously."

"I," answered Meredith, "intend, at all events, to take the profits very seriously. When they begin to come in, J. Meredith will be at the above address, and trusts by a careful attention to business to merit a continuance of your kind patronage."

Durnovo laughed somewhat nervously. Oscard did not seem to hear.

"It is all very well for you," said the half caste in a lower voice. "You have not so much at stake. It is likely [illegible] whole life de-

A curious smile passed across Jack Meredith's face. Without turning his head he glanced sideways into Durnovo's face through the gloom. But he said nothing, and it was Oscard who broke the silence by saying simply:

"The same may possibly apply to me."

There was a little pause, during which he lighted his pipe.

It did not seem to occur to any of them that the only person whose individuality was still veiled happened to be Jack Meredith. He alone had said nothing. He it was who spoke first, after a proper period of silence.

"It seems to me," he said, "that we have all the technicalities arranged now. So far as the working of the expedition is concerned we know our places, and the difficulties will be met as they present themselves. But there is one thing which I think we should set in order now. I have been thinking about it while I have been waiting here alone."

The glow of Victor Durnovo's cigar died away as if in his attention he was forgetting to smoke; but he said nothing.

"It seems to me," Jack went on, "that before we leave here we should draw up and sign a sort of deed of partnership. Of course we trust each other perfectly—there is no question of that. But life is an uncertain thing, as some earlier philosopher said before me, and one never knows what may happen. I have drawn up a paper in triplicate. If you have a match I will read it to you."

Oscard produced a match and, striking it on his boot, sheltered it with the hollow of his hand while Jack read:

"We, the undersigned, hereby enter into partnership to search for and sell to our mutual profit the herb known as simiacine, the profits to be divided into three equal portions, after the deduction of one-hundredth part, to be handed to the servant, Joseph Atkinson. Any further expenses that may be incurred to be borne in the same proportion as the original expense of fitting out the expedition—namely, two-fifths to be paid by Guy Crawener Oscard, two-fifths by John Meredith, one-fifth by Victor Durnovo.

"The sum of £50 per month to be paid to Victor Durnovo, wherewith he may pay the thirty special men taken from his estate and headquarters at Msala to cultivate the simiacine, and such corn and vegetables as may be required for the sustenance of the expedition; these men to act as porters until the plateau be reached.

"The opinion of two of the three leaders against one to be accepted unconditionally in all questions where controversy may arise. In case of death of any of us undertakes hereby to hand over to the executor of the dead partner or partners such moneys as shall belong to him or them."

At this juncture there was a little pause while Guy Oscard lighted a second match.

"And," continued Jack, "we hereby undertake severally on oath to hold the secret of the whereabouts of the simiacine a strict secret, which secret may not be revealed by any one of us, to whomsoever it may be, without the sanction, in writing, of the other two partners."

"There," concluded Jack Meredith, "I am rather pleased with that literary production. It is forcible and yet devoid of violence. I feel that in me the commerce of the century has lost an ornament. Moreover, I am ready to swear to the terms of the agreement."

There was a little pause. Guy Oscard took his pipe from his mouth, and while he knocked the ashes out against the leg of his chair he mumbled, "I swear to hold to that agreement."

Victor Durnovo took off his hat with a sweep and a flourish, and, raising his bared brow to the stars, he said: "I swear to hold to that agreement. If I fail, may God strike me dead!"

CHAPTER XI.

THE next morning Jack Meredith was awakened by his servant Joseph before it was fully light.

"Woke you before yer time, sir," he said. "There's something wrong among these 'ere darky fellers, sir."

"Not rebellion?" he said curtly, looking toward his firearms.

"No, sir, not that. It's some mortual sickness. I don't know what it is. I've been up half the night with them. It's spreadin' too."

"Sickness! What does it seem like? Just give me that jacket. Not that sleeping sickness?"

"No, sir. It's not that. Missis Marie was tellin' me about that—awful scourge that, sir. No, the poor chaps are wide awake enough—groanin', and off their heads, too, mostly."

"Call Mr. Durnovo."

"Met Mr. Durnovo, sir, goin' out as I came in."

In a few minutes Jack joined Durnovo and Oscard, who were talking together on the terrace in front of the house. Guy Oscard was still in his pajamas, which he had tucked into topboots. He also wore a sun helmet, which added a finish to his costume. They got quite accustomed to this getup during the next three days, for he never had time to change it, and somehow it ceased to be humorous long before the end of that time.

"Oh, it's nothing," Durnovo was saying, with a singular eagerness. "I know these chaps. They have been paid in advance. They are probably shamming, and if they are not they are only suffering from the effects of a farewell glorification. They want to delay our start. That is their little game. It will give them a better chance of deserting."

School Board Meets

A meeting of the school board took place on Jan. 13, in the clerk's office. Present: The chairman, J. Brotherton; trustees, Milne, Tenbeuy, J. C. Colter. Mr. Brotherton was elected chairman for 1908. R. Roberts was appointed to the secretary-treasurership for the year.

The new by-law was introduced authorizing the chairman and treasurer to receive $16,000 to loan until such times as the taxes can be collected, to give the Merchants Bank at Medicine Hat the promissory note or notes, payable at Medicine Hat within the current year. The secretary stated that he had seen Mr. James on the matter and that under present conditions the bank could not charge more than 7 per cent. interest on the loan. A resolution adopting the by-law was carried.

The following accounts were recommended for payment:

Water	$26 6
Med. Hat Quick Job Print	14 0
W. B. Marshall Co.	2 4
Gas	42 86
Wm. A. Begg	56 0
Wm. Barrie	6 8
B. F. Souch	13 7
Gas—Montreal St.	40 0
Gas—Toronto St.	42 0
Dom. Express Co.	2 7
John Earl, Jr.,	5 0
W. A. Begg	8 0

The Rev. J. S. Damm requested the loan of a room in the basement of Montreal Street school for the holding of religious services. The board could not grant this privilege.

Dr. Scott wrote calling attention to the second annual conference of school trustees to be held in Calgary Jan. 21 and 22, and reminding the board that the dues for 1907 had not been paid. The secretary was instructed to acknowledge the letter and the chairman and Mr. Kennedy were appointed to see that the fees for 1907 be paid.

An inquiry was received from the secretary-treasurer of the Reliance school district for school seats for sale. Mr. Hay said that all the seats were required.

Drill Instructor Reid reported on the drill given during the past year. He said that the first year in such work was necessarily difficult, especially in handling young children. He could not do anything with some of the Montreal Street school pupils whom he thought should be taken off for the sake of the others. He had nothing to go by except patience and good nature. Mr. Reid had written Col. Steele with regard to the formation of a cadet corps and had received the regulations. There was one at Lethbridge which went under canvas for a week during last summer. In conclusion he greatly enjoyed the year's work.

Principal Pentland wrote regarding application for increase of salaries for high school staff. He hoped to be in Canada shortly.

Acting principal Hay's report showed that fourteen new pupils had been enrolled at the Montreal Street school and nine at Toronto Street during the new year. The new system in the schools was working well. A truant officer was urgently needed. There were children under 12 years of age not attending school, but around working, some driving rigs. It was suggested that the chief of police be asked to assume the duties. Left in the hands of a committee.

The breaking of flasks, test tubes, and so forth in the chemical laboratory amounted to a considerable sum and Mr. Hay's report suggested that a deposit of $1 should be made by students in this subject to cover breakages, to be returned in part or full, according to the amount of loss incurred by the pupil. The secretary was instructed to notify the high school teachers to call attention to a rule by which the parents or guardians were responsible for any loss incurred in this way. Mr. Kennedy was appointed to attend to the matter of the Toronto Street school lavatory, which according to the report is in an unsatisfactory condition.

MARSH ISSUING NEW RUNNING CHALLENGE.

John D. Marsh, of St. Norbert, who showed his stamina in such worthy fashion last fall in races with Shrubb, now issues a general challenge for a 15-mile foot race, any place and any time within the next two months. He includes, specially, Alfred Shrubb, and is prepared to back himself for any amount in reason from $100 up.

CONSTIPATION.

Although generally described as a disease, can never exist unless some of the organs are deranged, which is generally found to be the liver. It consists of an inability to regularly evacuate the bowels, and as a regular action of the bowels is absolutely essential to general health, the least irregularity should never be neglected.

Mr. A. B. Dettes, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—For some years past I was troubled with chronic constipation and bilious headaches. I tried nearly everything, but only got temporary relief. A friend induced me to try Laxa-Liver Pills, and they cured me completely.

Will C.P.R. Superintendents be Changed?

(Lethbridge Herald.)

This morning, on the street, there are startling rumors of numerous and important changes in the C. P. R. staff. It was reported that Supt. Brownlee of Moose Jaw was to be placed in charge of the Cranbrook division, now in charge of Supt. Ericson, that Supt. J. G. Taylor of Souris, was to take the Medicine Hat division now directed by Supt. Lawrence, and that Supts. Lawrence and Ericson were to be given Prairie divisions.

As near as can be ascertained, however, there is nothing in the report. A party of prominent C. P. R. officials were in the city this morning with G. J. Bury, of Winnipeg, assistant general manager, who is making his regular quarterly tour of inspection. Nothing was given out that would indicate that the reported changes were contemplated.

In the party with Mr. Bury were F. E. Switzer, assistant chief engineer; general superintendent A. Price, of Calgary; superintendent J. S. Lawrence of Medicine Hat; superintendent J. Erickson of Cranbrook; T. D. Smith, road locomotive engineer; A. Hobkirk, Lethbridge, trainmaster, and W. E. Woodhouse, Calgary, master mechanic. The party left at 10.45, going westward.

This report has been published all over the west, but there is probably no truth whatever in it. Mr. Lawrence knows nothing of it and does not think it is true.

Remember we have always sent The Times, the paper that publishes ALL the news, to subscribers outside of Alberta for $1.00, when ordered by a local subscriber.

The Hard Time Myth.

One can think himself into almost any disease. Mark Twain humorously put it that after consulting a doctor book he felt convinced he had everything but "milkmaid's knee." And a great part of the present "hard times" talk is due to mental processes.

That no term but "financial stringency" could be applied to it is most evident from the fact that, even with cash short, business keeps up in almost every line. Were the money not being earned, buying would decrease as a most immediate result. As it is, however, decrease in buying has followed (where it is) only after many months of actual cash shortage. Wages have decreased very little, and production has been well sustained. This is where the great difference shows itself when 1907 is compared with '93. Even those factories which did curb production have resumed when they saw that it was only a scare.

The trouble is that we have all talked too much about it. At first it was more or less of a jolly, but it proved such a new topic that it received the exploitation of a wonder. It is a long time since a question of hard times could form a basis of conversation.

From jollying, the few nervous ones withdrew into themselves and their cash. This provided some grounds for serious talk and the movement grew until it actually affected business in a more or less serious manner.

No one can deny that the banks assisted in the tightening. It may be a good thing that real estate speculation was restrained but it is not necessary to put on the clamps so suddenly that the bone is broken. A flesh wound would soon heal but a fractured bone takes a long time. It is a significant fact that of 15 Canadian banks, whose reports are to hand, 12 of them have earned a higher percentage on their capital than they did in 1906, one of them, the Merchants' Bank, having increased its percentage of profit rate by 28 per cent. The present movement of the banks may be good business, but if it is, it proves that the unrestrained lending of the past few years must have been very bad business; and it scarcely seems right that a bank's bad business should be relieved at such expense to the patrons whose business they sought so anxiously in former years.

However, one thing with another has combined to make the great public believe they should hang on to their money. In the States this belief took the form of cash withdrawals leaving the banks depleted. Our banking business precludes action of this kind; but when our neighbors suffer Canada must feel it. The close commercial relations of the two countries guarantee this.

Feeling the strain, then, in Canada to some trifling extent, something of the same public feeling followed. The banks pressed the wholesalers and manufacturers, who in turn pressed the retailers, who had to press their customers—with the inevitable result that while business kept up, and there was almost as much money in the public pocket, as ever, "hard times" became a favorite conversational topic.

While the thoughtless expansion which comes with good times has had something to do with the tension we have been feeling, the great consumer is just as much at fault, especially as it affects conditions directly. He has heard of the stringency on the other side; he had seen some effects of it here. Then he gets the idea that times are bad, that he must retrench, must clutch every cent he has, must protect his ten dollar bill at all costs.

And just here is where the credit system has a large bearing on the case. The merchant who has been doing a cash business has met his accounts as they became due. With credit, the reluctance of the consumer to part with his money, necessitates the extension of accounts until they become terrifying in their size. Or it may be the merchant has been postponing payments for the same reason as the consumer.

Deposit accounts in the banks did not decrease, but bills payable piled up. Many a consumer let his bills accumulate, at everybody's expense, while he maintained a good bank account. He wanted to keep the cash at all risks.

Thus, it was largely a matter of scare. From an unimportant beginning it increased and spread and an actual strain was felt, without the underlying monetary or business conditions that alone should cause it. If everyone took things as they are there would be little stringency in Canada.

That this feeling is rapidly gaining ground is shown in very many ways. The bank deposits in Canada are decreasing because depositors are becoming bankers—they are filling the position vacated by the banks, and to fill which they were granted their charters. Farmers, ranchers, business men, cannot get money from the banks, and private individuals are advancing the funds. And it is this movement that is going to bring the banks to a realization of the fact that they hold the money of the people.

That conditions are once more resuming a sane level is plain to the average observer. The Bank of England, the great pulse-feeler of the world, has reduced its discount rate. The Bank of France has followed suit. New York stocks are being bought and sold almost as of old. Industries frightened into closing have re-opened without exception. Other industries under liquidation are being given another chance. Enterprises stopped for lack of money are resuming their operations. The banks are a little more approachable. Municipal debentures are receiving more favorable consideration.

There is no reason for anyone in Canada to view the coming few months with anything but hope. 1908 is going to be a much better year for Canada than was 1907. Crazy speculation will not be taken up; and this is where the tightening of the past three months has had its merits.

Medicine Hat is going to figure largely in the prosperity of 1908. With the loosening of money, new industries are going to think less of bonus and more of local advantages. And that is where Medicine Hat is going to come into its own.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The necessity of languages in the High School, as outlined by The Times some weeks ago, has been recognized by Mr. Ware, the acting principal of the High School. He has kindly consented to give the children lessons after hours, and the offer has been taken up to an extent that proves that the pupils recognize the need. Mr. Ware is giving these lessons for the good of the school, and deserves the thanks of the parents who have children attending the High School.

There is no great principle involved in the question of whether to raise the price of gas or not. There is not even much monetary consideration to the individual. The increased revenue in the next three months would probably be $3,000, more or less, as they are three of the months of greatest consumption. Is it best to leave off payments we can easily make without hurting anyone, or to pay a couple of cents more for gas? Most of the same people would save it in taxes. However, the question, as we said, does not introduce any high moral principles. It is purely one of expediency.

In this regard the suggestion of The News that the ratepayers decide upon the question cannot be objected to. But if the ratepayers are to decide whether to raise the rate or not, they should have decided a year ago last November whether to lower it or not; at which time the editor of The News was mayor, when the rate was changed without consulting the ratepayers. If it is a question for the ratepayers one time, it is the same at any other time. The voters know the justice of a reduction as well as of an increase.

The News, thoughtlessly, gave Medicine Hat as hard a slap in its last issue as is in its power. It said editorially:

"The writer's household bill for gas for December was $9.15, which we think would have provided coal at our prices, and light."

If this is so in December it holds in June, or any other month. Then The News states as plainly as it can that the gas is of no advantage to Medicine Hat, except that "we value the convenience, cleanliness and comfort of the gas."

Then all our talk about cheapness of heating and lighting with our natural gas is nothing but hot air. The News has talked the cheapness of gas as much as anyone else; our publicity commissioner makes a big bid for favor on this characteristic; everyone of us knows that "the convenience, cleanliness and comfort" is a small part of the value of our gas. It is on its very cheapness we are building up our city.

If coal at Medicine Hat prices would be as cheap for household purposes as gas, then every town with its own coal is in just as favorable a position as Medicine Hat. This would mean most of the Crow's Nest railway towns, including Lethbridge; also some of the C. & E. towns.

Happily, this kind of tommyrot can easily be placed where it belongs. That it should be answered at all—that it should appear in a Medicine Hat paper, that the residents of this city save nothing by gas—is most galling.

You who have had experience in any other town than Medicine Hat, look at your last month's gas bill and compare it with what you paid elsewhere. You who have lived here no matter how long, compare your gas bill with what you know your friends pay elsewhere. You who remember what you paid for fuel and light before the gas was found, compare then with now.

Here is some information that should set The News right. The Assiniboia hotel, before gas was found, ran up a fuel and light bill of $120 a winter month, without counting extra wages. Now, with more heat and much more light needed, their bill runs to $60 in a big month. And coal cost the same then as now.

If the gas bill of the editor of The News was $9.15 for December he is still living much below what it cost him for coal and light. But of a couple of dozen citizens interviewed, not one in a similar, or even considerably larger, house than Mr. Forster's, ran up a bill as high as $9.15. Which is proof that gas is consumed in more places than his furnace—an editorial, for instance, that says gas is as expensive as coal.

A statement published editorially, by a Medicine Hat paper, deliberately denying the cheapness of gas at 18½ cents is the worst knock Medicine Hat ever received, and it will be resented by the citizens of a city, who are endeavoring to build up that city largely on the cheap gas question.

So Medicine Hat secures nothing from the natural gas save convenience, cleanliness and comfort. Fortunately, even outsiders know better.

While some opponents of higher gas are perfectly honest there are a number of the loudest clamorers who have other ends in view. The cheap gas cry may be a popular cry.

The argument by opponents that the gas consumers should not pay more of the city taxation than they do at present is without merit. If that is an argument, who draws the limit? Who can say the consumer should not pay $40,000 revenue as well as $30,000? Why is $30,000 set as THE PROPER LIMIT? If the argument is based on a solid foundation the gas consumer should pay none of the taxation—he should pay only the cost of maintenance of the system.

In a small group of men gathered together last week an increase of 25 per cent. in the price of gas would have meant only $4 during December for the four houses represented. And yet that $1 apiece would be between $3,000 and $4,000 to the council during the next three months, when they need the money most. And every one of those men recognized the fact that the returns to them from that $3,000 would be much greater than one dollar.

It's a simple question of common horse sense. It is the basis of commerce to give $1 to earn $2.

Give the council $3,000 when the spring winds start and the freshets run (if we have snow). That $3,000 will water the streets, keep the ditches clear, clean up the roads and lanes and do a dozen other little things. Does any man in this city begrudge $10 a year for the benefits of dustless streets, and clean lanes?

During the fall the watering carts had to be taken off because the city had not the money. One day's wind cost more than a dollar of comfort to every man in town.

Every good citizen of Medicine Hat will not, we think, consider a few paltry cents in an extremity like the present.

The price secured by the city for its debentures is good, considering the state of the market. This money was needed immediately to relieve the pressure from the banks, to cover money already expended. Probably even better terms will be secured in a month or so.

The effect upon the Merchants bank is already noticeable. It is to be hoped the city will soon be in a position to repay the bank treatment of the past six months.

Two names are mentioned for alderman for Ward IV.—Wm. McNeely and W. Ansley. The former is well known as a good business man. The latter has been serving on municipal bodies since 1878 in Ontario and Saskatchewan. He is retired and has all his time to devote to the city Neither has signified to The Times his definite intention of running. Both would make good men.

It speaks well for the fire-brigade that it cost for 1907 only about $800 for the members themselves, with a fire loss of only $5,415.

Last winter The Times received a telegram from the Chicago Examiner reading something like this: "56 in Chicago. What's the matter with Medicine Hat?" Now Medicine Hat can ask Chicago what's the matter there. The weather is spring-like here, while Chicago is snowed under.

The Canadian west is in for a bigger emigration than ever from the States. Hundreds have intimated their intentions of coming over. The railway rates have been reduced to equal the schedule to the Southwestern States. Many Americans are spending the winter in the west to experience the season here, and, of course, they are delighted. There is not a bit of doubt that within two months the Medicine Hat district will be under inspection from dozens of farmers from North Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio and other States. That threshing report from the Gros Ventre district published in The Times some weeks ago has interested them. The Times crop reports and pictures were eagerly sought by prospective buyers or homesteaders.

Calgary city council decided upon a board of control after the style of the Toronto system, rather than a commission.

How many merchants are there doing a credit business who, with a big profit shown on their books, have not a dollar in cash more than they had a year ago?

Agricultural Education and the Farmer.

(The Scottish Farmer.)

One of the curious educational problems of today is the hard dying antipathy of the farmer to agricultural education. That the number of practical farmers who have belief in agricultural education has largely increased is no doubt a fact which can be proved by many evidences, but there still remain a large number of successful practical men (and perhaps a greater number of unsuccessful men) who look down upon any education in the business or art of farming which is derived from a source apart from actual apprenticeship on a farm. It is the intention of the writer to briefly give what, in his opinion, are the reasons for this feeling, and to discuss the means whereby the objections may be met and overcome. In the first place we must assume that by "agricultural education" a complete system of education, practical and scientific, such as is given at many of the leading agricultural colleges, is established, to be followed by an experience of business farming on an up-to-date, practical, successfully conducted farm. The dummy that is often set up by the severe critics of agricultural education is, it must be remarked, generally one of their own manufacture and design, so that it is easy for them to place their missiles in suitably prepared weak spots; but this dummy of "book farming," "all science and no practice," is not the type of education that, at all events in the writer's experience, is to be found in this country. Given that the farmer knows the satisfactory system, and knows that it is carried out in his neighborhood at a college, he often does not send his sons to take advantage of it, and sometimes, if he does, he will say, as a farmer's wife said when her daughter wished to gain a knowledge of improved diary practice—"Well, she can learn, but when she comes back she'll have to go on in my way." One of the reasons is that the father having gained his knowledge by an apprenticeship on his father's or some other farm, and by means of a long and perhaps costly series of experiences, somewhat naturally considers that what he knows and can teach his son, ought to be sufficient for him as it was for himself, and the father is undoubtedly in some cases rather jealous that others should profess to give the young man in a shorter time, and he may remark, as was once said to the writer, after a lecture given on the purchase of artificial manures and food stuffs—"What you have said is more or less true, but I don't see why you should come around and give away information and experience that has cost me time and money to gain for myself." But coming back to the farmer who is unwilling to send his son to a college, it must be emphatically stated that the education given there is intended to supplement, not to supplant, the teachings of ripe experience. It opens up before a young fellow's eyes the whole panorama and scope of farming in all districts, and it gives him a wealth of information which he can draw upon as occasion arises. It is granted that the practical business common sense of the father can teach the son what no college could teach him in some particulars, but this learning is widened and strengthened by the education he gets in principles at the college. Another reason is the time taken in getting the education. The young man is taken from the farm, where his labour in these hard times is a serious matter. "He can't be spared," is the answer. This is a reply that must be sympathised with and it is possible that the short courses given at some of the colleges in the slacker periods of farm work may meet the case. One or two of these courses, of six or eight weeks duration, might be attended in each of two years, and much valuable information might be given in that time, and an impetus given to the study of agricultural matters during the winter months. The farmer, in his way, is a "captain of industry;" yet how many of them read anything appertaining to their industry, or to the experiences of their neighbors and friends, for any addition to their knowledge. Agricultural articles in the local papers are sometimes read and trusted (though often the writers are unknown), yet this very information, much more in detail and value, is given in the college in the neighborhood. "He can't be spared," is an objection that can be overcome with advantage to the young man in his future, which may lie in days of even more strenuous competition than at present, when he will want all the resources of science, practice and experience to make his way in a country where agricultural interests are being regarded by the State as more and more subservient to those of manufactures. A third reason, and one that cannot be overcome, and which explains to some extent the minority in which farmers' sons are at some agricultural colleges, is found in the fact that the future generation of farmers will not entirely be the sons of farmers today. As is often said—"Farming's been enough for me; my son will go into something a bit more prosperous." The increasing number of the sons of professional and business men who are taking up agriculture is a swing of the pendulum and, I believe, augurs well for agriculture, as many of these have been well educated, and brought up in a business spirit, which with capital and knowledge behind it, will tell in the organization and improvement of the industry.

ELASTICITY IS A CHARACTERISTIC

that is required; it is not, however, easily applied in the business of farming, but nowadays a departure from some of the old traditions, and a striking out on new and well considered lines, is often a factor of success. "Scientific knowledge is no good," is another objection, which rather proceeds from an incorrect knowledge of what science has done for farming. "New-fangled notions I don't believe in," says another. History tells us of ridicule poured on the man who introduced turnips and swedes ("only fitted for the gardens of gentlefolk"), rotation grasses, superphosphates ("chemical rubbish"), and where should we be today if ridicule or ignorant criticism had killed these? It may be a wise dispensation of Providence that when things are for the good of humanity they persist, in spite of opposition and ridicule—vaccination for black quarter in the United States, spraying for potato disease—had their ignorant and violent opponents, but they are still carried on, and so with the teachings of science and the introduction of reliable methods of management. The hands that wrecked the cotton looms and the threshing machine were not the hands of progress, any more than are the detractors of the motor car, the steam engine or the penny post. Conversion is slow but sure, and the man who, amongst other things, has sufficient scientific knowledge to understand the feeding of his animals, the manuring of his crops" without having recourse to his cake or artificial manure merchant for the information is the man who will come out top in the end. Science is but organized knowledge, and many of our breeders and feeders are scientific in the highest sense of the word, though their perverse interpretation of the word science would lead them to scorn the appellation. Another objection made is that college life tends to make young men disinclined to work. The disinclination to work is of earlier growth, as a rule, than the age at which young men commence their college life, and I venture to think that the complaints made, with regard to this point, of our public school and college system are rather undeservedly attributed to the school or college. The parents are, as a rule, equally to blame. During the vacation boys and young men are encouraged to do nothing in the way of serious work, the discipline of regular hours for work is entirely relaxed, and in many cases no stops are taken to continue the preparation of the boy or young man for the serious work of earning his living. Parental responsibility is inclined to be and some of his work is often to unteach the lessons learned at home. Farmers' sons at agricultural colleges stimulate other students to active, practical work, and the reflex action encourages the farmers' sons to lead the way. By their superior knowledge of practical work they are looked up to as centres of information, and this has the effect of encouraging them to equip themselves more fully on the scientific side, whilst maintaining the standard of hard work they may have attained before coming to college. Finally, "College education is no good, and a man to be successful need not have a college education." The latter part of the statement may be true, although the former part is as untrue as it is sweeping. The successful man in farming today is the man of keen business instinct, sharp at a bargain, smart in his management of men, with a good eye for stock—such men would succeed anywhere, and would perhaps pick up any business with but little apprenticeship. But is everyone built that way? And, because the few engineers, contractors, farmers, mill owners, cotton spinners, can get on without education, are we to deny its benefits to the rank and file? And is it absolutely certain that these born captains of industry would not have been saved some time and money by a previous scientific education, or that this education would have withered some of their powers? The object of agricultural education is to fit a young man for the better management of his future career as a farmer, but it often opens up prospects suited to the individuality of the student, which had not been foreseen, and where scope is given to the development of his capabilities in other directions than that of practical agriculture. The man who was not benefited, or who was spoilt by education has yet to be found. It does not stunt the powers of the born successful man and it gives a chance to others to emulate his success, and to rise to a position which otherwise would be impossible for them to reach. Much more might be said and written on the subject, but let us now explain what is meant by agricultural education.

THE "ALMIGHTY DOLLAR" RULES THE WORLD, and the trouser pocket and the bank book must be the test of every business transaction, and so the teachings of science and of experiment must be reduced to £ s. d. when instructing the agricultural student on sound lines. The law of diminishing returns must be carefully and accurately stated in all questions of manuring and feeding, and science must be used to show how, by accurate knowledge, economies may be effected and efficient results secured. The farmer is not one expert, one business man; he is a host of experts and a host of business men in himself. After he has sown his crop he has to abide by his decision, and be judged by the result; he cannot suddenly alter his system, and his failure or sucess are determined by his methods at the outset. There is need then of wide knowledge and experience in order to set his plan, and his college teaching should give him the results under varying conditions of similar experiences which may guide him at the start. He would not be in the quandary of a farmer of the writer's acquaintance who had to arrange the manuring of his potatos and was advised by his neighbors to use either nitrate of soda or superphosphate, and chose the latter because it was cheaper per ton. He should know the requirements of his soil and his crop, of his beast and of his foods; he should know something of the world's markets; of the construction and repair of his implements; of the signs of disease among his stock; of the methods of the production and of the relative values of new varieties of stock and crops; of the means to stay the fungus or insect attacks which may be prevalent in his district; of a simple method of keeping his accounts; of the incidence of local and imperial burdens on his holding; of the quality of his manures, food stuffs, seeds—these and many other matters, reduced to a business basis, he should know, and know it possible before he starts his life work. He would be a bold man who would deny to the future agriculturist the means of acquiring this information, and who would state with any prospect of proof, that science and scientific education have done no good to agriculture.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

ALEX. McRAE,
Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Almost every mail brings us letters like the above. Psychine will repeat this record in every case. It is the greatest medicine known. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

"INGOMAR" AND "ROMEO AND JULIET" AT OPERA HOUSE JAN. 21-22.

Miss Louise Marshall, who plays the role of Juliet in Mr. Sanford Dodge's production of Romeo and Juliet, that will be given Jan. 21-22 at the Opera House, has created a genuine furore the past two seasons. Probably her two greatest successes have been "Parthenia" in Ingomar the Barbarian and "Lady Macbeth" the role in which Blanche Walsh will star this season. It requires an actress of great ability to succeed as Juliet. Miss Marshall has a magnificent stage presence, and is gifted with a charming voice. She is young, beautiful and at the beginning of a brilliant career.

That Sob Squad.

Reports for Duty on Thaw Trial.

The Morning Telegraph thus sarcastically handles an apostle of gush, who is working overtime on the second edition of the Thaw agony:

Of course the Sob Squad is actively engaged by this time. Those who served last year came to the task this week fatigued and disillusioned. There was but slight enthusiasm noticeable among the old-timers, but there was one new-comer who dashed into the fray and had them setting up pins in the other alley before the others really knew the game had started.

Of course it was a case of a new hand and new interest, but the goods as delivered were hot from the bakery. Get this from the latest of the Sobby Sisters:

"She is one of the most exquisite things that ever I saw in this world! She is gold and brown; her hair is of the color of warm sepia—not such wonderful hair, but exquisitely colored. Her brows and eyes are of the same moist coffee color—the color of the eyes and brows of the people of the south. Her skin is as gold, a pale bronze—and around her eyes and ears it deepens orange and brown, like the light of the sun through amber windows."

That is certainly going some. As a description of Evelyn Nesbitt it may sound a trifle over-enthusiastic. There are subtle suggestions of a paint shop prospectus in it, and it conveys an impression of an ability to get together the most unique color scheme ever imagined by an artist. Even the worst enemy Evelyn ever had would halt far short of suggesting that she had orange colored ears.

This young recruit in the Sob Squad certainly puts it all over that youthful male enthusiast who spoke last year of Evelyn's smile as having in it "all the strange, weird glories of a shattered prism."

Continuing, this latest addition to the ranks of the Gush Girls says further of Evelyn:

"There is not a stain of color in her face, no red, no pink, save her mouth, and it is as deeply red as the blood-black of a poppy—just that tender gold on a skin like the satin surface of an old ivory cast."

Here this latest Sympathy Sister has us guessing. What is an "ivory cast?" The art of casting ivory must be among those lost somewhat far back in the corridors of time. Certainly there has been nothing doing in the ivory casting line within the past few years.

But this is not all, earnest reader. Bear with us while we quote a few more lines. If ever a Gush Trust is organized, the writer of this description for president.

"She had the same little deep kid's collar with the smudge of a black bow under her chin that I saw in the artists' 'pics' last year. And it makes her little golden face look positively Spanish. As dark as her tragedy!"

That line about the "little deep kid's collar" is excellent stuff and excuses much of the rest. Evelyn is a deep kid alright.

There is also an allusion to her "little pointed Florentine chin," and after that this:

"She was as clear and tense as a fine-toned, little, golden melody, as ready as a glinting, fine tempered rapier, when it flames in the sun before a duel."

Chicken Finances.

The Minister of Agriculture is still showing Canadian farmers how to get rich by fattening poultry. Here is the result of his operations at seven stations last year:

At Andover he paid $200 salary in four months and $13 sundry expenses to the superintendent, who fed his chickens $45 of provender, paid $13 for boxes and sold his produce for $380 making a net loss of $332.

At Bowmanville the man in charge received $200 for his services, paid $139 for provisions, $49 for coal oil and incubators, over the amount received for eggs, and sold his produce for $52, making a net loss of $336.

At Chicoutimi the expert was satisfied with $160 for his four months' work. Feed cost $169 and his sales amounted to $178, leaving $141 loss.

At Holmesville, Ont., the manager received $200, other expenditure was $36, and the sales amounted to $90, leaving a deficit of $146.

At Vernon River the manager was employed six months at a cost of $300. His payments for feed were $141, and the proceeds of his sales $146, leaving a deficit of $295.

The Brothers at La Trappe, who probably knew more about this business than the department of agriculture, were the only managers of the seven who produced a favorable balance. They came out $46 to the good.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

Edmonton, Jan. 17.—The Alberta executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada waited on the Provincial Cabinet on Saturday afternoon to bring to their attention a number of resolutions passed by the labor men for the purpose of improving the conditions of the laboring class. The delegation included T. E. James, Miners' Union, who was deputized by Vice-Pres. Lehenney, and A. J. Healey, secretary T. R. Wesman and representatives from local labor bodies interested in the proposed legislation. They were received by Hon. A. C. Rutherford, Premier; Hon. W. H. Cushing, Minister of Public Works; Hon. C. W. Cross, attorney general, and Hon. W. T. Finlay, Minister of Agriculture.

Among the resolutions brought to the attention of the executive was one asking for the appointment of scaffolding inspectors and also one for the appointment of factory inspectors.

The delegation asked that all wages should be paid in current coin, instead of by checks, and that there should be at least a bi-monthly pay day.

A Workman's Compensation Act was agreed upon to be drafted along the lines adopted by the Imperial Parliament.

An amendment to the Boilers' Inspection Act was asked for.

The government was asked to erect elevators and control public utilities.

The examination and registration of steamfitters and plumbers was urged. This has been endorsed by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, the Alberta Trades and Farmers' convention, Dr. Ternan, city medical health officer, and the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council.

A plea was made for a revision of the election laws, whereby an extension of time would be allowed voters, to permit workmen voting after working hours free from all influence.

The total abolition of the contract system in all public works was asked.

A resolution was passed by Alberta Trades and Farmers' Convention asking that the municipalities be given greater borrowing powers while the financial stringency continues, was submitted.

An application was made for adult suffrage in municipalities.

A request was made for the abolition of the system compelling candidates for the provincial parliament to put up a deposit.

Legislation was asked for to prevent the employment of children under 16 years of age.

Several resolutions were submitted regarding the operation of electric cars. Legislation for the protection of the lives of conductors and the hours of labor on Sunday were among the points submitted.

A fair wage clause was asked for to be included in all contracts given by the government.

Application was made for several amendments to the Mines Act. It was suggested that the mine inspector should visit all coal mines in his district at least once in every six weeks, and should make a written report of the condition of that mine, the same to be posted at the mine mouth. This was recommended in the report of the coal commission.

Another request made was that in every mine where at least ten men were employed there should be a regularly-equipped wash house.

Another recommendation of the coal commission was endorsed by the labor men, who asked that escape shafts in coal mines should be a proper distance from the main shaft, 100 or 150 feet was suggested.

The government were asked to make it a punishable offence for a member of the mine committee to be discriminated against by their employers.

In connection with the handling of explosives at mines, it was suggested that a suitable place should be provided for receiving and handling these.

An eight hour day, bank to bank in mines was also asked for and the Premier said the same will be brought before Parliament shortly.

After a conference which lasted for three hours the labor delegates retired, confident that their suggestions and requests will be carefully and favorably considered by the government.

LABOR LEGISLATION FORESHADOWED.

From the speech from the throne, Edmonton:

A bill will be submitted for your consideration providing for the regulation of the conditions of labor as regards compensation to workmen in case of accidents. I believe that by thus providing on an assured basis for the future the relations between capital and labor in this province will be rendered more cordial from the outset. It has been admitted in several of the most industrially advanced of the countries of Europe that the conditions under which the mining industry is carried on renders it peculiarly necessary in the interests of all concerned to impose some limit on the hours of labor in this occupation. A bill has therefore been prepared by my ministers imposing regulations in this respect which I believe will have a happy effect on this the most promising of our infant industries.

An act will be submitted for your consideration dealing with the establishment of a government drainage system in the province and providing for the expense of important and necessary works of this description being assessed against the property benefited.

John T. Hall East

John T. Hall writes that he arrived in Hamilton on Tuesday at 2 p.m., after an uneventful journey. He has made arrangements to address the Canadian Club of that city on the 16th, and the Manufacturers Association on the 16th.

He is making arrangements to address the Canadian Clubs at Toronto, London, Brantford, Montreal and Ottawa. He thinks if he can only get a chance to explain the comparative costs of power the result will be very much in our favor.

A more recent letter says:

"There is to be a meeting of the representatives of the Canadian Clubs at the City of Ottawa, 15th inst., where I go as a delegate of the Hamilton Club to meet the Governor General re National Monument upon the Plains of Abraham and will take this opportunity of interviewing Eugene Haanel, Superintendent of Mines, one whom you will remember we had some correspondence with in reference to geological formation of Medicine Hat district with a view of ascertaining what material we had there and how it could be utilized for manufacturing purposes. At the same time I shall endeavor to get all information regarding our district available in the Parliament Archives."

John T. Hall, industrial commissioner of Medicine Hat, is visiting his old home. He says that electric power can be supplied to the citizens of Medicine Hat for $3.40 per horse power per annum, ten hours a day, but that it is not used, because natural gas is a dollar cheaper. You might think that Mr. Hall is talking through his Medicine Hat, but he is in earnest.—Hamilton Herald.

Chain down the industries. John T. Hall is in the city from Medicine Hat.—Hamilton Spectator.

FINANCIAL STRINGENCY.

Wm. A. Stewart, of Ross Creek Springs made a trip into town on Saturday hoping to find a customer for a huge lynx which he had poisoned on the ranch. He asked $10 for the big tom cat but was unsuccessful in making a sale. The brute was about three feet in length and was certainly a dangerous looking cat, inclining one to believe in the Seton-Thomson, rather than the Roosevelt'an theory of lynx. The owner decided to carry his dead pet back to the ranch and there have him skinned.

(Calgary Herald.)

There is a strong possibility of there being a third candidate in the field for the federal elections. A member of the executive of the Trades and Labor Council informs the Herald that the Dominion election organizer who is organizing every possible constituency for the forthcoming election will be in the city about the eighteenth of the month to organize the labor men of the Medicine Hat riding and if possible to make arrangements for the placing of a candidate in the field opposing C. A. Magrath, the Conservative, and W. C. Simmons, the Liberal.

Special Meeting of City Council

Debentures Sold

A special meeting of the council was called for 9 p.m., on Thursday evening last, to consider an offer for the sale of the debentures. Present: The Mayor, Alds. McKay, Forster, Spencer.

The following letters from V. C. James, manager of the Merchants Bank in Medicine Hat, were read by the Mayor.

The Mayor thought that in view of the present financial condition, the best thing would be to accept the offer. Ald. Spencer was opposed to accepting, as he regarded the rate of interest which the low price implied, as excessive. On motion by Ald. Baker, seconded by Ald. McKay, the offer as made by Mr. James, was accepted, Ald. Spencer dissenting.

Medicine Hat, Jan. 16, 1908.

W. Cousins, Esq., Mayor,
City of Medicine Hat,
Medicine Hat.

Dear Sir,

I beg to confirm my message of this morning by quoting Messrs. Aemilius Jarvis & Company's telegram to me at this date:

"We can use the sixty-five thousand at eighty-nine subject solicitor's approval and verification financial standing of City. Wire immediate acceptance."

I assume this offer will be accepted for all of the issue ($65,000) and would ask you after the council have formally accepted the same, to telegraph Aemilius Jarvis & Co., McKinnon Building, Toronto, accentance of offer and saying debentures are forwarded our office for solicitor's inspection. I will be glad to hear from you by 'phone message after the Council meeting to-night.

Yours faithfully,
V. C. JAMES,
Manager.

Medicine Hat, Jan. 16, 1908.

W. Cousins, etc.,

Dear Sir,

Owing to the difficulty arising in connection with the sale of the debentures covering a grant to the Hospital Board of $5,000 and the amount of $10,000 covering the proposed expenditure for an Isolation Hospital I took the trouble to interview a member of the Hospital Board who is conversant with the financial conditions as they apply to the Hospital, and he was of the opinion that the Board would rather receive the proceeds from the sale of the debentures than the debenture itself.

In regard to the Isolation Hospital debenture I think you can arrange with us by deposit on interest at 3 per cent. the proceeds from the sale of this debenture, and at the same time arrange for an equal amount of your loans now current with this bank to carry interest at the same rate, 3 per cent. until such time as you require to use the money for the purposes specified in the by-laws. If this arrangement is acceptable to the Council it will allow of the sale of the $65,000 of debentures, which are, as a matter of fact, now under option to Aemilius Jarvis & Co., and at the same time place the city in that much better shape to arrange for the money for their current expenses against collection of taxes this year.

Yours faithfully,
V. C. JAMES.
Manager.

P.S.—Since writing the above, I have seen Mr. Fewing's, secretary of the Hospital Board, and he tells me he went to see several members of the Board and they are all agreed to accepting the proceeds of the debenture rather than block the sale of them.

V. C. JAMES.

Lemieux—On the 15th inst., at the General Hospital to Mrs. Lemieux, a daughter.

RECEPTION DAYS.

Mrs. Krauss will receive on the fourth Monday each month in the future, not on the 20th as before.

Mrs. Peter Robertson, North Railway street will receive on the fourth Friday of each month, not the fourth Thursday.

Mrs. Robert Nelson will receive on the fourth Friday of each month during the season.

Mrs. Doty gave a progressive whist on Friday afternoon from 4-7, when she entertained six tables. Mrs. Doty was assisted by Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Woodland, and Miss Ireland. The prize winners were Mrs. James and Mrs. Forster.

In the account of the opening of the Legislature in the Saturday News, Peggy says—"Mrs. Finlay was in a stunning gown of black dotted with lace and velvet garniture made over white taffeta, with which was worn a large black dress hat, trimmed with black and white ostrich plumes, and gold ribbon braid.

On Thursday Mrs. Carbert, Esplanade gave her second function of a series when invitations were issued to some twenty ladies for tea at six. Mrs. Carbert's new house, always beautiful, was especially charming on this occasion with the crimson shaded candles and lamps and the dainty tables with the crimson and white confections. Mrs. Carbert wore olive green eolienne and Miss Hazel Carbert and Miss Heather Hargrave, both wearing white, assisted. When tea was finished cards were brought, and progressive whist for points was played. Mrs. Sissons and Mrs. Ewart won first prizes, Doulton jugs; and Miss Paterson and Miss Hill, consolation prizes, pretty vases. The playing of Mr. McLean's little daughter and Miss White's singing added much to the enjoyment.

Mrs. C. S. Pingle, Montreal Street, gave one of the most enjoyable teas of the season on Wednesday afternoon when she invited her friends to meet Mrs. Pingle of Winnipeg. Mrs. Pingle thoughtfully divided the invitations, sending out part from 3 to 5 and the rest from 5 to 7, so at no time was it too crowded. Mrs. C. S. Pingle looked very handsome in a beautiful cream lace costume over cream taffeta and wearing pearl and amethyst ornaments. Her mother, Mrs. Pingle, were black with a long rope of jet beads. Mrs. Nicholson assisted in the drawing room, wearing a becoming gown of black with transparent yoke.

The dining room was beautiful, with the polished oak table centred with point lace centre piece, high cut glass vase with pale pink carnations and wreaths of smilax. Pale pink ribbons were brought from the chandelier to the corners of the table and small vases with the carnations and pink shaded candle sticks arranged at the corners. Mrs. D. G. White poured coffee and Mrs. Binning, tea. Mrs. White wore a pale blue silk gown, with lace bertha and touches of violet and green and a large white hat. Mrs. Binning wore tuscan eolienne with French knots in brown and a black hat. Miss Long, wearing turquoise organdie, and Miss Krauss white and pale blue organdie, assisted. From five to seven Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Niblock presided, assisted by Miss Smale and Miss Nesbitt.

Already real estate is opening up. A number of sales were reported for last week. The movement is going to be unusually early this year on account of the mild weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Forster, of Sparwood, B.C., are the guests of Mrs. F. G. Forster.

C. L. Coffin, and Mr. Robinson came into the city yesterday to look after the construction of E. S. Martin's house on Barclay street.

The members of the fire brigade wish to thank the following gentlemen for their very kind remembrance: J. Howson, G. Cochrane, and W. Hawke.

Miss Algie, who has been spending some months with her sister, Mrs. J. W. Martin, returned to her home in Wingham, Ont., Monday morning.

Mrs. Grace returned yesterday morning from Lethbridge.

Judge Mitchell spent Sunday in the city.

Mrs. Wallace, of Lethbridge, and her two children have been in the city for a week with Mrs. Wallace of the Southern Alberta Land Co.

Great progress has been made of late with the bridge construction. The last steel work of the first two spans is almost completed and work on the last pier is well under way. Everything points to the completion of the structure early in the spring.

The fire losses for the year were $5,415. The cost to the city for the firemen was $460. During the year 77 practises were held, with an average attendance of 17. W. E. Hatcher took first prize for attendance being out for 75 of them. A. C. Taylor secured second, with an attendance of 74.

An explosion occurred in the basement of the new Bank of Commerce on Sunday night. On account of the mild weather the furnace was shut down and the small steam heater put into service. A steam valve was left shut and about ten o'clock a report was heard by the staff in the room above. A large hole was blown in the cellar wall, but apart from this no damage was done.

Maple Creek News.—There are five or six real estate agents pushing the sale of land around Walsh this winter. They say hundreds of settlers will locate there next spring.

Next Sunday evening the Rev. J. W. Morrow will preach in St. John's church on "The blessings of a short life."

Father Turbiaux was unable to take his pulpit on Sunday on account of sickness.

Special evangelistic services are being held in the Baptist church every night this week. The pastor will be assisted by Rev. W. Reid, of Lethbridge. Services beginning at eight o'clock. A hearty invitation is extended to all.

The vestry of St. Barnabas' church has accepted the preliminary sketches of Mr. E. T. Watkin, architect, of Burslem, England, for a new church.

PLOWING AT MEDICINE LODGE

Mr. Dempster Decides to Dig In

When Inspector Parker visited Medicine Lodge on Friday he found one of the farmers there, Mr. Dempster, driving his team down the long furrows as though it was just the natural thing to do in the summery month of January. Mr. Dempster is taking advantage of the remarkably mild weather to get a large strip of his land in good shape against the advent of spring.

Perhaps the mildest January in memory, the only one which has surpassed this present month, was in 1877, in which year the Inspector remembers the lumberjacks at Fort Macleod found the heat so oppressive that they stripped to the waist whilst weilding the axe.

Alleged Attempted Suicide

Man Found Stabbed Last Fall on Trial

SENT UP FOR TRIAL

The preliminary trial of C. B. Casey for attempted suicide was held.

Casey was found about a mile north of the city on October 15, by Ed. Borth, to all appearances, dead. Mr. Borth reported the matter to the Mounted Police and Corporal Humby and the doctor went immediately to the spot. They found him conscious but in a very low state. He told a story of having been assaulted and robbed by a couple of men who took his money ($1.50 in silver) and also some of his clothing which they set on fire some distance away. The burning clothes were found by Cern. Humby at a distance of about one hundred and fifty yards, and the fire extinguished in the river, but everything was practically destroyed by the flames.

On examining the flesh wound on the inside of the left knee it appeared that the artery had been cut, possibly with a knife.

The injured man made many statements of such a nature as to arouse suspicion, and the Mounted Police decided to put him on trial for attempted suicide when he recovered.

Since the occurrence Casey has been in the General Hospital and last week was sufficiently recovered to stand trial.

As a result of the hearing on Wednesday he is sent to Lethbridge pending the next sitting of the supreme court. If found guilty the law governing the case is two years' imprisonment.

SHIPPED 100 HEAD OF RANGE CATTLE.

(Gleichen Call)

It is hard for some eastern people to believe that we have such mild winters in Southern Alberta, but here is a fact that may make them sit up and think.

One day last week Messrs. Morton and Kenny shipped 100 head of fat cows to Winnipeg from Gleichen. The animals were gathered in off the range north of this town and had not been fed anything all winter. Inspector Scott says they were all in fine condition and, indeed, could not have been in better shape. To ship cattle off the range in January for beef may surprise some of the wise men in the east, but nevertheless it is done right here in Alberta.

Quick Run for Brigade

Test Call Brings Fast Work

On Thursday night a fire alarm was telephoned in from R. C. Porter's house in order to test the speed of the boys. Although they knew nothing about it, the brigade had the chemical engine to the scene of the alarm 2 minutes and 35 seconds afterwards, and in two minutes and 57 seconds had two lengths of hose with nozzles attached ready to turn on the water.

This is a time the boys can be proud of as the distance is as great as the average run in the city.

Can't Pay Aldermen

Decision of Calgary Lawyer

The motion passed by the council at Ald. Forster's suggestion that Mr. Muir's opinion be obtained as to the legality of paying the aldermen, has brought an answer from Mr. Muir that under the city charter it is illegal.

This means that the charter will have to be changed before the aldermen can receive payment. It cost the city $10 to find this out, although at the time The Times editorial was written $25 was expected to be the cost. Mr. Muir confirmed the opinion of the city solicitor, whose expression of opinion was not accepted by Ald. Forster.

The Aldermen are to be commended upon their stand last night in not supporting Ald. Forster's motion to get the charter changed before the ratepayers have expressed their wishes.

Presentation at Irvine

Rev. H. C. L. Hoopor and Wife Remembered

Mrs. W. Harris, of Irvine, was at home to a large number of her friends on Friday evening and a very enjoyable evening was passed. At the close Mr. Herbert Sutton Newby presented the Rev. H. C. L. Hooper with a purse on behalf of the parishioners of the Mission. Miss Toll, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid presented Mrs. Hooper with a very beautiful quilt.

The Rev. H. C. L. Hooper and Mrs. Hooper expressed their appreciation of those tokens of regard and affection and hoped they might at some future date return to this mission, in which they had made so many friends. This brought the evening to a close.

Mr. Bell has taken a house on Ottawa street and brings his wife to the city on March 1.

Hockey Match

BOYS DEFEATED AT MAPLE CREEK

A fire brigade hockey team went down to Maple Creek last Friday. They expected to be opposed by a team of fire boys, but on arrival found they were up against the pick of the town's players. The result was disastrous for the Gas Town team—defeated by 8 goals to nil, and the score was a true index to the character of the play throughout. However, the Maple Creekers will be paying a return visit anon, when they will have to meet a team of the Hat's best players and the local hockeyists hope to get a little of their own back.

Two of the players who went down to the Creek on Friday had their skates on for the first time this season.

The Maple Creek Signal says of the recent game in that town:

The afternoon's game for the Tuckett badges was played with heavy ice. Towards the end of the game the Medicine Hat boys were all in, but the "Doc's" strong arm saved the day. The score was Pringle, 9; Kearns, 17.

District Umpire Benson was on the ice and at the close of the game handed the boys the ribbons. But as Maple Creek could not send a rink up to Calgary they sent the badges back to Medicine Hat.

Brigade Called Out

Chemical Engine Breaks Down.

The brigade were called out on Wednesday morning by telephone message from Dr. Smith's residence. The fire, however, proved to be nothing more than a blaze in the stove pipes. A quantity of waste paper had been burnt in the kitchen stove and some of it was carried into the pipes by the draught, filling the house with dense smoke.

The circumstances were fortunate, for the chemical wagon had come to grief about a hundred yards north of the track. As it jolted over the railway crossing the axle began to give way, and a few yards further on snapped in two across the middle where there was a faulty weld. With a rope and a couple of iron bars from Conn's blacksmith shop, opposite which the rig was stranded, the axle was temporarily patched up and behind McF. Evans' dray, was hauled ingloriously back to the fire hall. Here, on examination, it was found that the whole strength of the broken axle had lain in a strip of good metal about a quarter of an inch in thickness on the upper side of the weld. The greatest wonder is that it has lasted so long. On the occasion of the rink fire the team was fresh and travelled at a greater pace than on Wednesday and yet there was no sign of the axle giving way. The alarm on Wednesday served a useful end by bringing out the flaw which, in case of a real fire might have resulted in a serious loss of property. The makers have been wired for a new axle, the broken one being rewelded in the meanwhile.

Prohibition Turned Down.

Alberta Government Defeats it by Straight Party Vote.

At the Edmonton House the other day Mr. Hiebert made the following motion:

"Whereas laws for the total prohibition of intoxicating liquors within the provinces of Manitoba and Prince Edward Island has been declared by the decision of the Privy Council of England to be "Ultra Vires" and within the jurisdiction of the several provinces of Canada and such legislation has proved a complete success in the said Province of Prince Edward Island and has had the effect of greatly improving the moral and material welfare of the people, therefore

"Be it resolved that in the opinion of this House such legislation should be immediately introduced by the government for the total prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors within the province except for medical, scientific and industrial purposes."

The motion was lost by a straight party vote of 20 to 2, the Liberals voting against it en masse.

Mounted Police Notes.

An interesting development of the Laframboise case is provided by the arrest of a white man at Lethbridge on Saturday. It was well known to the police that a white man was concerned in the horse stealing, and ever since the loss was first reported they have been working on the clues, and after an exhaustive investigation they have been rewarded by the alleged culprit's capture. At Swift Current all track of him was lost, and he had been cleverly eluding the pursuers since then. The case against Laframboise for his other offences is proceeding at Maple Creek and both prisoners, who were captured at points over 300 miles apart from one another, will come up for preliminary trial at Medicine Hat this week.

Police Court News.

John Paul was summoned for refusing to obtain a restaurant license. He refused to appear on the summons and accordingly a warrant was issued and he was arrested. He has now to pay his license and the costs of the action.

H. R. Magwood was disposed to kick against the license by-law respecting hawkers and peddlars. He was fined $2.50 and costs for his refusal to pay the license fee.

There was a little drunken scrap in a C.P.R. boarding car on Thursday among a bunch of laborers who had too freely imbibed. Patrick Kelly and Thomas Kenny, the two hilarious Irishmen who were the ringleaders, were arrested. Patrick had to cough up $5 and costs for assault while his fellow-countryman is fined $2.50 and costs for his exuberance of spirits.

THE CITY FATHERS

The Armory Discussed--Mr. Muir of Calgary Says No Pay--Ald. Forster's Motion Receives No Seconder--Engineer's Conduct Criticised

Adjourned meeting of the council from Monday the 21st inst. Present; the Mayor, Alds. Baker, Spencer, Forster, Huckvale.

A communication was read from Mr. Griffin, C.P.R. land commissioner, regarding the transference of Park property to the city and site for armory. Mr. Griffin stated that he was prepared to arrange for a transfer but did not approve of the use of any part of block D for armory purposes. If a site in Block E on North River Street, not further south than the middle of the Block was suitable there was no object in making a change. He did not think anything should be done to encroach on Block D for Park purposes. If the proposed site were adopted, he thought the appearance of the city on the west side would be spoiled.

Major Sissons thought Mr. Griffin had taken too much upon his shoulders. He seemed to think that he had the interests of the citizens to guard, and that these could not be left safely in the hands of the council. He did not know why the C.P.R. did not wish to give the site on this side of the track. The only stipulation they had made before was that the building should not be next the track on either side. Colonel Steele had written expressing his opinion that the new site was a decided improvement upon the old one. The mayor thought the armory should go up as soon as possible and if they could arrange to suit Mr. Griffin this should be done.

It appeared that the land commissioner did not clearly understand where the proposed armory building was intended to be located. After some discussion it was decided upon Ald. Spencer's motion "That the city clerk write Mr. Griffin describing the site where the proposed armory building is to be located, namely one hundred feet facing on Fourth avenue adjoining the proposed site for the Y.M.C.A. on the property asked for, also stating that the building placed in the centre of E would be more detrimental to the appearance of the city than if located in the site asked for in Block D."

The contract for the building, Mr Sissons stated, had been let, and the contractors were eager to start excavating.

James Muir wrote enclosing copies of the judgment in the Purmal vs City case, in which the appeal was dismissed.

The city solicitor wrote enclosing the opinion of Mr. Muir regarding the payment of salaries to Aldermen and Mayor. In part he said, "I am clearly of the opinion that clause XXII, cap. 62, Alberta Statute, 1906, does not give power to the council to vote any sum to themselves as salaries, or allowances, or in any other way in respect to their services as Mayor or Aldermen." Further, no provision was made under any other clause for such payment, and it was evident that the intention was that Aldermen, School Trustees, and others in similar positions should act without remuneration or at any rate NOT HAVE POWER TO FIX THEIR OWN REMUNERATION. If such had been intended express provision would have been made. An amendment to the city charter would be necessary to provide for the payment of salaries in the cases mentioned. Ald. Baker moved that the communication be received and filed, and Mr. Muir's fee be paid. Ald. Forster moved that the solicitor prepare an amendment to the charter dealing with the salaries question.

Ald. Baker—"I should like to see the people pass on this before any action is taken to amend the charter."

The same view was taken by Ald. Spencer. Ald. Forster replied that he thought the people would not object to the payment of their Mayor and Aldermen. There was no second to his motion.

A manufacturer wrote asking what privileges, assistance or bonus the city would give in the event of their establishing a plant here. They would require in all two acres for their works. The mayor thought the council should take some action. Ald. Baker thought the main things were fuel at the cheap rate and a free site. These were as much as should be given. Ald. Huckvale thought these and also taxation exemption might be given. The Mayor said the people would have to vote upon it. Referred to special committee to report at next council meeting.

Aemilius Jarvis wrote to say debentures sold at 89, subject to verification of financial standing of city, purchaser to pay accrued interest. They wished the city to accept payment at Montreal, and also asked for a thirty days' option on the new debentures. Notified that the city was not prepared to pay the exchange from Montreal nor to give any option on the new issue.

Woods, Gundy & Co. wrote regarding further issue of debentures. They asked to be wired, at their own expense, on the matter. Decided that the three firms which have been enquiring for the bonds be notified that the city is open to receive bids.

The Canada Foundry wrote to ask if the city were prepared to pay the 6 per cent. interest on the order for the engines which were being held by the English firm and the storage charges, which they thought would not be very serious. They asked for payment of 50 per cent. on arrival, and 50 per cent. week after completion. They did not think the payment should extend over six months. If the city were not in a position to pay immediately they would be willing to accept 25 per cent. on delivery. Ald. Baker thought the firm had agreed to run the engines for a fortnight and for their men to instruct the city's employees in the manner of working them. On Ald. Forster's motion decided that the city accept the Canada Foundry Co's offer, and pay six per cent. and storage until such time as they were ready to have engines installed.

The hospital board wrote asking for use of city hall for Feb. 10, and that $5,000 hospital bonds be handed over to the board. Referred back to the health board.

T. H. Navin wrote asking that his note, due March 5, be discounted. City could not grant request under present financial conditions.

Mr. Pruitt brought up a plumbing account against the city, and asked that it be accepted. Ald. Baker thought the city employees were to have put a certain pipe in which Mr. Pruitt had done. Orders had been given to the engineer that the city employees should be given the work, but the order had been ignored. The engineer did not remember the order. Mr. Pruitt explained how the work came to be done by him. Account referred to finance committee. Before leaving Mr. Pruitt requested that the council should give him special rates on his gas as he was a large consumer.

A [illegible] read was presented, which was adopted. It showed that there were 12 meters on hand; about 50 street light globes and 20 or 30 more meters were needed at once.

Ald. Baker brought up the matter of complaint regarding meters. Mr. Porter had said that in nearly every case such errors as were discovered were to the consumers' advantage, or the meters were correct. The cost of testing the meters was about $2. It was decided that this cost should fall upon the consumer.

Ald. Spencer brought up the matter of the flaw in the chemical wagon axle, for which the manufacturers were responsible. Action should be taken in the matter, as the engine had been paid for.

By-law for election of alderman for Ward IV., was introduced by Ald. Baker. Read a first and second time and considered in committee. Read a third time and passed. By-laws for raising money for gas works extensions and for waterworks extensions and for amending the price of gas were read a first and second time.

The matter of Mr. Fewing's claim came up again. It was decided that he be asked to show who furnished him with the levels before his wall was built.

Ald. Baker brought up the matter of orders of the council to the engineer, which had been ignored. The engineer had not dispensed with the services of his friend and assistant, Mr. MacDonald, as ordered, nor did he seem to have any intention of doing so. He had not reduced the other assistant to a subordinate position, nor equalised the city's work amongst the various employees, as ordered. He thought it was time for the council to insist on their orders being carried out. He wished the mayor to see the engineer in regard to the matter. The mayor agreed to speak to the engineer today, with regard to the carrying out of the city's orders.

Ald. Spencer gave notice of a motion at next meeting of the council on the by-laws just introduced.

Ald. Baker moved the adjournment.

Ald. Forster rose to ask the mayor to withdraw a statement made in committee to the effect that he (Ald. Forster) was, and appeared to make a practice of, obstructing the work of the council. He considered the mayor's language was insulting and he demanded its withdrawal. He was acting, when the mayor passed the remark in question in what he believed to be the best interests of the citizens of Medicine Hat. The mayor did not see any cause for withdrawing his statement, in which he felt he was fully justified. He did not consider his language had been insulting but Ald. Forster seemed to think he ought to escape all criticism. Eventually the discussion was terminated by the carrying of Ald. Baker's motion for the adjournment.

BRIDGE BURNED.

The bridge over the St. Mary's River, beyond Lethbridge, was partially burned on Sunday and passengers for points beyond that city have been forced to go by way of Calgary, and north passengers have had to come around by Medicine Hat.

SENTENCE OF ONE YEAR FOR BROWN.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

"Sailor" Brown, of Irvine, was up before Judge Winter in the district court this morning to account for the possession of the O. W. Kerr Co. certificates he tried to sell to T. S. McKenzie. Messrs. T. S. McKenzie, Lampman, Constable Gillespie and A. Roy gave evidence the same as at the preliminary. The accused told his story again, but the judge evidently did not believe it all, especially his statement that he had no other certificate, and found him guilty of receiving stolen goods, although not of stealing them. The sentence was one year's imprisonment in the common gaol with hard labor.

CREED.

Father Turbiaux' sermon on creed on Sunday is synopsised as follows:

Faith is the foundation of Salvation and, without any doubt, God must have set it down on a solid basis so that it could not be shaken.

A.—Faith rests on God's word. (1) It springs from Faith in the word of man, of which we can have certain knowledge. (2) We believe what we see though our senses may be mistaken. (3) We believe that 2 and 2 make 4, but it is pretty hard to explain how sunshine melts snow and hardens mud. Then we must trust God after he has revealed to men his mysterics. Reason, as well as Faith was made by God. Both are gifts—one for natural things, the other for supernatural. God does not work against God.

B.—God's word is in holy sacrifices, prophesies, miracles and popular demonstrations of Faith in God. Only fools deny it. One of the chief instances is in the Catholic church tradition. There is a real difference between a truth of faith and the motives of believing. The former is hidden or hardly seen; the latter are self-evident. Private interpretation cannot have clear evidence of Faith truths, but it has and must have its motives of believing evident. The idea is founded on the natural evidence that mind knowledges the [illegible] that the mind should be compelled by the will to finally adhere to the truth, some serious motives must be present. "Are those motives necessary to Faith?" will be the subject matter of the next sermon.

Pingle's Rink at Calgary.

With that enthusiastic bunch, Benson, Curry and Campbell, Fred. Pingle traveled to Calgary to eat up a few provincial rinks. However, after he saw the fare his appetite went back on him, and the eating didn't take place. That Fred. gave a good account of himself is, of course, taken for granted, but he came out at the wrong end. Only one game was won—that against Ford in the Grand Challenge. The reported victory over Pinkham in the brewery was, unfortunately, untrue, because it was left that the rink would shine in the Brewery. The defeats were administered by Tarrant in the Burns; Ockley in the Visitors'; Smith in the Grand Challenge; Pinkham in the Brewery.

However, it is noticeable that Benson has acquired some new Scotch words, and Curry's attempts to suit his French accent to curling parlance is one of the features of practise games at the rink.

Hamilton, the Medicine Hat second baseman, has been offered $325 on a six months' contract to play with Seattle, and will likely accept.

President Vs. Vice President.

In the President vs. Vice-President series at the curling rink fifteen rinks were entered. The result was 80 to 64 in favor of the President.

The results:

President Vice-Pres.
Hutchinson, 9; Sissons, 5.
Holt, 6; Collier, 6.
DesBrisay, 15; Adsit, 8.
C. Pingle, 7; Burns, 13.
Currie, 6; R. E. Walton, 11.
F. Pingle, 18; E. J. R. Walton, 8.
Boyd, 10; O'Hara, 6.
Deslet, 14; R. E. Walton, 7.
Totals, President, 80; Vice-Pres., 64.

The curling has been fair all the past week, the ice keeping up in spite of the mild weather.

There is to be no professional baseball in Medicine Hat this year from present indications. It is probable, however, that 1909 will see a team here.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Irvine

The new council and ratepayers met for the first time on Monday January 20, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Present: Councillors Samuel Kalmbach, Fred. Weiss, Sr., Colin Koenig, Herbert S. Newby, secretary-treasurer. Councillor Sam. Kalmbach being elected as chairman took the chair. The chairman rose and thanked his many supporters for their vote and the honor they had conferred on him in placing him on the council, and he promised them that he would do all in his power to promote the interests of the village.

The chairman then called on the other two councillors, and they too expressed the same opinion as the worthy chairman.

The chairman, calling the meeting to order, brought before the ratepayers several resolutions, which will be published after the next council meeting.

The trustees of the Irvine school district No. 892, held their annual meeting on January 25, at 7 o'clock p.m., in the Irvine school house. Present: Chairman Ch. Weiss, Jr., George Schaller, John Koenig, Carl Beny, secretary-treasurer. The chairman asked the secretary-treasurer to read his report which was read and accepted. As Ch. Weiss, Jr., had served his term of trusteeship, the chairman asked that another trustee be nominated, which only took the ratepayers a short time to decide. Mr. J. Bollinger went in by acclamation. The secretary-treasurer then placed in his resignation which was accepted, and we learn by good authority that Herbert S. Newby is the likely person to be appointed in his stead. The new board of trustees will meet at the beginning of next week, a full report of same will be published in the next issue.

We see that Mr. Chas. Calkins is rushing the new addition on to his hotel and in a recent conversation with him he stated that he is trying his best to have same completed by the first week in February. On the ground floor there will be spacious room for a barber shop and pool room, private offices and, we hear, A BANK. The second floor will contain a spacioks hall that will be used for all purposes. This, when completed will make quite an attraction on the main street.

It is rumored that the Golden West is going to build extensively in the spring.

Mr. Bamford, of the Ashdown hardware firm of Winnipeg spent a couple of days in town last week and placed one large car of hardware with our merchants, which signifies that business is increasing fast.

Mr. J. MacNeeley, of the Medicine Hat Milling Company spent Thursday in town and he reports business to be on the mend.

Messrs. C. C. Watson and Fred. Gadsden were in town at the end of last week. We understand that a real estate deal is going on with the leading real estate firm in town.

The death of James McCaig, our well known sheep rancher of Many Island Lake, came as a great shock to all of the community, and we wish to express our deep sympathy with his relatives in their sad bereavement.

We are pleased to see that Mrs. W. J. Corbett is able to be around again after being confined to her residence for the past few days.

Mrs. Chas. Gaikins went up to Medicine Hat on important business on Thursday of last week which we have no doubt will be disclosed at a very near future date.

Mrs. Carl Beny and children returned on the evening train from New York, where she has been spending the holidays with her relatives.

We have been given to understand that one of the firms in town will soon be turned into a limited company. We will at some near future date be able to give you further particulars in this matter.

Don't forget to be at the social dance that will be given at the town hall, Irvine on January 31, Friday. Tickets $1, ladies free.

Coleridge

On Saturday the 18th inst., a meeting of the ratepayers of the district was held for purpose of electing a trustee for three years in succession to Mr. B. McCarey, the retiring trustee. Mr. James Acheson was duly elected, Mr. Francis Wright, school board trustee, secretary-treasurer and assessor has created quite a feeling by refusing to open public books at a public meeting to a ratepayer.

Mr. M. Freeman, Mr. N. T. MacLeod, Mr. Keith, Mr. Miebach, and other influential gentleman of Lethbridge were Coleridge visitors on the 19th inst., as was also Mr. Fred. Pingle of Medicine Hat.

All Crow's Nest freight appears to be handled in the new Coleridge yards by the number of cars that have been transferred here this last week, and it has been stated on excellent authority that the car shops which the C.P.R. have decided to erect somewhere in the west, will be at the junction of the Crow's Nest line with the main line, that company having reserved all their lands closely adjoining Coleridge.

On Tuesday last a surprise party was held at the farm of Mr. Fred. Walker, manager of the Canadian Land & Ranch Company. They were all caught napping after, no doubt, an ardurous day's work, and for a few moments things were pretty lively for some of the male members who had dared to disturb them. However, after having cooled down considerably, Fred made an admirable host, and instead of going skating, as was originally intended, the party gave themselves to an enjoyable hour or two indulging in parlor games of every description.

Messrs. Fred. Walker and R. MacFarlane drove into Medicine Hat on business Thursday.

Mr. Henry Cavan drove a party of skaters over to the Harper ranch on Ross Creek on Thursday evening, where they were hospitably entertained.

Mrs. Conlin has her brother from Washington staying with her on Seventh Street.

Mr. J. M. Cooper was in here from his ranch on business last Friday.

Several sales of Coleridge real estate were made in Medicine Hat this week.

"At any rate we had better go and see them," suggested Jack.

"No, don't!" cried Durnovo eagerly, detaining him with both hands. "Take my advice and don't. Just have breakfast in the ordinary way and pretend there is nothing wrong. Then afterward you can lounge casually into the camp."

"All right," said Jack rather unwillingly.

"It has been of some use, this scare," said Durnovo, turning and looking toward the river. "It has reminded me of something. We have not nearly enough quinine. I will just take a quick canoe and run down to Loango to fetch some."

He turned quite away from them and stooped to attach the lace of his boot.

"I can travel night and day, and be back here in three days," he added. "In the meantime you can be getting on with the loading of the canoes, and we will start as soon as I get back."

He stood upright and looked around with weatherwise, furtive eyes.

"Seems to me," he said, "there's thunder coming. I think I had better be off at once."

In the course of his inspection of the lowering clouds which hung black as ink, just above the trees his eyes lighted on Joseph, standing within the door of the cottage watching him with a singular half suppressed smile.

"Yes," he said hurriedly, "I will start at once. I can eat some sort of breakfast when we are under way."

He looked beneath his lashes quickly from Jack to Guy and back again. Their silent acquiescence was not quite satisfactory. Then he called his own men and spoke to them in a tongue unknown to the Englishmen. He hurried forward their preparations with a feverish irritability which made Jack Meredith think of the first time he had ever seen Durnovo, a few miles farther down the river, all palpitating and trembling with climatic nervousness. His face was quite yellow and there was a line drawn diagonally from the nostrils down each cheek, to lose itself ultimately in the heavy black mustache.

Scarcely had the boat disappeared in the bend of the river before the rain broke. The thunder crashed out in sharp reports, and the men ceased rowing and crouched down in the canoe. But Durnovo knew that behind him he had left a greater danger; smallpox had laid its hand on the camp at Msala.

It is still said on the Ogowe river that no man travels like Victor Durnovo. Certain it is that in twenty-seven hours from the time he left Msala on the morning of the great storm he presented himself before Maurice Gordon in his office at the factory at Loango.

"Will you be at home tonight?" asked Durnovo, gently pushing aside the hospitable decanter. "I have got a lot of work to do today, but I should like to run in and see you this evening."

"Yes, come and dine."

Durnovo shook his head and looked down at his wrinkled and draggled clothing.

"Well, I'll lend you a black coat. Seven o'clock sharp!"

Durnovo hurried away with a gleam of excitement in his dark eyes.

Maurice Gordon did not resume his work at once. He sat for some time idly drumming with his fingers on the desk.

"If I can only get her to be civil to him," he reflected aloud, "I'll get into this business yet."

At 7 o'clock Durnovo appeared at the Gordons' house. He had managed to borrow a dress suit and wore an orchid in his buttonhole. It was probably the first time that Jocelyn had seen him in this garb of civilization, which is at the same time the most becoming and the most trying variety of costume left to sensible men in these days. A dress suit finds a man out sooner than anything except speech.

Jocelyn was civil in her reception; more so, indeed, than Maurice Gordon had hoped for. She seemed almost glad to see Durnovo, and evinced quite a kindly interest in his movements. Durnovo attributed this to the dress suit, while Maurice concluded that his obvious hints thrown out before dinner had fallen on fruitful ground.

At dinner Victor Durnovo was quite charmed with the interest that Jocelyn took in the expedition, of which, he gave it to be understood, he was the chief. So also was Maurice, because Durnovo's evident admiration of Jocelyn somewhat overcame his natural secrecy of character.

"Well," said Maurice, when Jocelyn had left them, "I suppose you'll be a millionaire in about six months?"

He gently pushed the wine toward him at the same time. Durnovo had not slept for forty hours. The excitement of his escape from the plague ridden camp had scarcely subsided. The glitter of the silver on the table, the shaded candles, the subtle sensuality of refinement and daintiness appealed to his hot blooded nature. He was a little off his feet perhaps. He took the decanter and put it in the worst use he could have selected.

"Not so soon as that," he said; "but in time—in time."

"Lucky beggar!" muttered Maurice Gordon, with a little sigh.

"I don't mind telling you," said Durnovo, with a sudden confidence begotten of madeira, "that it's simiacine—that's what it is, I can't tell you more."

"Simiacine," repeated Gordon, fingering the stem of his wineglass and looking at him keenly between the candle shades. "Yes. You've always been on its track, haven't you?"

"In six months your go-downs will be full of it—my simiacine, my simiacine."

"By Jove, I wish I had a hand in it!"

Maurice Gordon pushed the decanter again—gently, almost surreptitiously.

"And so you may, some day. You help me and I'll help you—that is my ticket. Reciprocity — reciprocity, my dear Maurice."

"Yes, but how?"

"Can't tell you now, but I will in good time—in my own time. Come, let's join the lady—eh? Ha, ha!"

But at this moment the servant brought in coffee, saying in his master's ear that Miss Jocelyn had gone to bed with a slight headache.

* * * * * * *

During the three days that followed Durnovo's departure from Msala Jack Meredith and Oscard learned to know each other. These three days were as severe a test as could well be found for courage, humanity, tenderness, loyalty, were by turns called forth by circumstance. Smallpox rages in Africa as it rages nowhere else in these days. The natives fight it or bow before it as before an ancient and deeply dreaded foe. It was nothing new to them, and it would have been easy enough for Jack and Oscard to prove to their own satisfaction that the presence of three white men at Msala was a danger to themselves and no advantage to the natives. It would have been very simple to abandon the river station, leaving there such men as were stricken down to care for each other. But such a thought never seemed to suggest itself.

The camp was moved across the river, where all who seemed strong and healthy were placed under canvas, awaiting further developments.

The infected were carried to a special camp set apart and guarded, and this work was executed almost entirely by the three Englishmen, aided by a few natives who had had the disease.

For three days these men went about with their lives literally in their hands tending the sick, cheering the despondent, frightening the cowards into some semblance of self respect and dignity. And during these three days, wherein they never took an organized meal or three consecutive hours of rest, Joseph, Meredith and Oscard rose together to that height of manhood where master and servant, educated man and common soldier, stand equal before their Maker.

Owing to the promptness with which measures had been taken for isolating the affected the terrible sickness did not spread. In all eleven men were stricken, and of these ten died within three days. The eleventh recovered, but eventually remained at Msala.

It was only on the evening of the third day that Jack and Guy found time to talk of the future. They had never left Durnovo's house, and on this third day they found time to dine together.

"In six months your go-downs will be full of it."

"Do you think," Oscard asked bluntly when they were left alone to smoke, "that Durnovo spotted what was the matter?"

"I am afraid that I have not the slightest doubt of it," replied Jack lightly.

Guy Oscard gave a contemptuous little laugh which had a deeper insult in it than he could have put into words.

"Umph!" he grunted. "It is rather disgusting," he said after a pause. "I hate dealing with cowards."

"And I with fools. For everyday use give me a coward by preference."

"Yes, there is something in that. Still, I'd throw up the whole thing if"—

"So would I," said Jack, turning sharply in his chair, "if"—

Oscard laughed curtly and waited.

"If," continued Jack, "I could. But I am more or less bound to go on now. Such chances as this do not turn up every day. I cannot afford to let it go by. Truth is, I told—some one who shall be nameless—that I would make money to keep her in that state of life wherein her godfathers, etc., have placed her; and make that money I must."

"That's about my size, too," said Guy Oscard, somewhat indistinctly, owing to the fact that he habitually smoked a thick stemmed pipe.

"Is it? I'm glad of that. It gives us something in common to work for."

"Yes." Guy paused and made a huge effort, finally conquering that taciturnity which was almost an affliction to him. "The reason I gave the other night to you and that chap Durnovo was honest enough, but I have another. I want to lie low for a few months, but I also want to make money. I'm as good as engaged to be married and I find that I am not so well off as I thought I was. People told me that I should have three thousand a year when the guv'nor died, but I find that people know less of my affairs than I thought."

"They invariably do," put in Jack encouragingly.

"It is barely two thousand, and—and she has been brought up to something better than that."

"Um! They mostly are. Mine has been brought up to something better than that too. That is the worst of it."

"I believe implicitly in this scheme," said Oscard. "It is a certain fact that the men who can supply pure simiacine have only to name their price for it. They will make a fortune, and I believe that Durnovo knows where it is growing in quantities."

"I cannot see how it would pay him to deceive us in the matter. That is the best way of looking at it," murmured Jack reflectively. "When I first met him the man thought he was dying, and for the time I really believe that he was honest. Some men are honest when they feel unwell. There was so little doubt in my mind that I went into the thing at once."

"If you will go on with it I will stand by you," said Oscard shortly.

"All right. I think we two together are as good as any half bred sharper on this coast, to put it gracefully."

During the ensuing silence Jack was apparently meditating over the debt of confidence which he still owed to his companion, for he spoke first and quite seriously about himself, which was somewhat against his habit.

"I dare say you have heard," he said, "that I had a—a disagreement with my father."

"Yes, heard something of it," replied Oscard in a tone which seemed to imply that the "something" was quite sufficient for his requirements.

"It was about my engagement," Jack went on deliberately. "I do not know how it was, but they did not hit it off together. She was too honest to throw herself at his head, I suppose, for I imagine a pretty girl can usually do what she likes with an old man if she takes the trouble."

"Not with him, I think. Seemed to be rather down on girls in general," said Oscard coolly.

"Then you know him?"

"Yes, a little. I have met him once or twice—out, you know. I don't suppose he would know me again if he saw me."

Which last remark does not redound to the credit of Guy's power of observation.

They paused. It is wonderful how near we may stand to the brink and look far away beyond the chasm. Years afterward they remembered this conversation, and it is possible that Jack Meredith wondered then what instinct it was that made him change the direction of their thoughts.

"If it is agreeable to you," he said, "I think it would be wise for me to go down to Loango and gently intimate to Durnovo that we should be glad of his services."

"Certainly."

By 7 o'clock the next morning the canoe was ready, with its swarthy rowers in their places. The two Englishmen breakfasted together and then walked down to the landing stage side by side.

"Take care of yourself," said Oscard gruffly as Jack stepped into the canoe

"All right."

"And bring back Durnovo with you."

Jack Meredith looked up with a vague smile.

"That man," he said lightly, "is going to the plateau if I have to drag him there by the scruff of the neck."

CHAPTER XII.

IT is possible even in Loango to have a fling, but the caroneer must be prepared to face, even in the midst of his revelry, the haunting thought that the exercise of the strictest economy in any other part of the world might be a preferable pastime.

During the three days following his arrival Victor Durnovo indulged, according to his lights, in the doubtful pleasure mentioned. He purchased at the best factory the best clothes obtainable; he lived like a fighting cock in the one so called hotel, a house chiefly affected and supported by ship captains. He spent freely of money that was not his and imagined himself to be leading the life of a gentleman. He rode round on a hired horse to call on his friends, and on the afternoon of the sixth day he alighted from this quadruped at the gate of the Gordons' bungalow.

A few minutes later Jocelyn came into the drawing room, where he was waiting, with a brazen face and a sinking heart. Somehow the very room had power to bring him down toward his own level. When he set eyes on Jocelyn, in her fair Saxon beauty, he regained aplomb.

She appeared to be rather glad to see him.

"I thought," she said, "that you had gone back to the expedition?"

"Not without coming to say goodby," he answered. "It is not likely."

Just to demonstrate how fully he felt at ease he took a chair without waiting for an invitation and sat tapping his boot with his whip, looking her furtively up and down all the while with an appraising eye.

"And when do you go?" she asked, with a subtle change in her tone which did not penetrate through his mental armor.

John T. Hall in Hamilton.

Our Publicity Commissioner Speaks in Hamilton.

John T. Hall spoke before the Canadian Club in Hamilton on Jan. 20. The Spectator has the following about his address:

Mr. Hall, in introducing his address, said he had to thank C. R. McCullough for suggesting the topic. The question, Who Shall Develop the Last West? was one that was worthy to engage the attention of all Canadian clubs, as it was the duty of Canadians to develop what American's had called the Last West. Since his return to Hamilton he had spoken to many on the conditions that prevail in the west, and found that the average easterner's knowledge of it did not go farther than the boundary of Manitoba. In this the easterner was making a mistake. Regarding the development of the manufacturing industry he would only say that it seemed as though American capital would develop the west.

It was a fact that American push and American capital were being poured into it now to develop its agricultural resources. And the west would have to manufacture its own implements. Many smiled at this, but it was a fact that could not be disputed. And Medicine Hat would be the centre of the manufacturing district. Alberta had immense deposits of coal and natural gas, and American capital was developing these resources and furnishing cheap light, heat and power. The people of the east were lulling themselves into a sense of false security with regard to manufactures, and if they did not soon realize the situation it would be too late. He had learned since coming east that Mackenzie & Mann were going to build into Medicine Hat, and he was looking to see James Hill build the Great Northern into it. Once it got railroad competition the manufacturies would be sure to build about it. By means of natural gas they could develop power at a cost of $2.40 per horse power per year for a ten-hour day. With regard to the figures given by the Hydro-Electric power commission he thought they were misleading and that they would not be able to furnish power at the prices estimated. He believed the Cataract company could cut under any price the commission might give, and anyone who would examine its developing plant would be satisfied of this.

He would like to see the west developed by Canadian capital. Alberta was merging from a ranching to a farming country, and the manufacturers had to follow. As for the people who were settling it, he said he preferred the American farmers to the people who were coming in from Souther Europe. If Canadian capitalists went there they would be offered what was practically free light, heat and power.

John T. Hall will speak before the Empire Club of Toronto on Thursday. On his way back he will stop in Winnipeg a few days.

Y. M. C. Debate.

Young Men Decide Asiatics Are not Good for Canada.

A debate on the subject "Is Oriental Immigration Detrimental to Canadian National Life," took place at a meeting of the Y.M.C. on Thursday evening. Mr. Dimmick was in the chair; Messrs. Souch, Hollinger and Smith acted as judges, and Mr. Webb as critic.

Mr. Benson led off for the affirmative in a thoughtful and well delivered speech. The question at issue, he said, was not one of world idealism, nor of philanthropy. Nor should any consideration of trade or capital be allowed to enter. It concerned solely the preservation of the Canadian nationality. The national life, he continued, depended on the character and quality of the people of whom the nation was made up. It depended upon the maintaining of a high standard of life. The Oriental, by his cheapness made such a standard impossible, and the white man was driven to accepting the Asiatic mode of living or quitting the country. Canada today was a field for men of our own race and blood, of similar ideals and aspirations. The white races of Europe became assimilated and developed into good patriots and citizens. But the yellow man, who came here to make a fortune and return to the land of his birth, would not assimilate. The Asiatics who landed on our shores were unmarried, would never become citizens, never looked upon this country as their home. They returned to the east with the money earned here, thus taking out of the country great wealth. And the menace was a serious one. The population of the coast province was 200,000, of which 60,000 were adult males. In 1907 10,000 of these were Japanese and, while the whites increased at the rate of ten per cent., the Orientals increased at 100 per cent.

Mr. Brown followed for the negative. Race and color bias, he contended, were at the root of the opposition to Asiatic immigration. Personal interests were also touched and hatred of competitors influenced. The tone of the national life was directly cast, by the racial characteristics of the people of whom the nation was composed and, in the development of nations the inferior must always give place to the superior. The Indian had been driven from his ancient estate by a superior race—the whites. In turn the Japanese, who were superior physically, mentally and morally, to ourselves, would become dominant in this country.

Messrs. Hannington and Pentland spoke further for the affirmative, Messrs. Walker and Fowler for the negative. The judges then retired and while they were making their decision the meeting was thrown open for a general discussion. The decision was given in favor of the affirmative.

In a brief, but highly suggestive, criticism, Mr. Webb pointed out the strength and weakness of the debaters of the evening.

That Salary Grab.

The position of The Times on the salary-to-aldermen question is that aldermen should be paid, but that no council should decide its own salary; that the question should be submitted to the ratepayers and if the ratepayers decide to pay the council of 1908, that is what should be done; but that it would be better to have the same salary in view at the time of election as during the period of elected aldermen.

But what do you think, ratepayers of the man who accepts the position of alderman without pay, and after sitting only two regular meetings of the new year flatly says he will not act unless paid?. Ald. Forster knew the pay when he accepted the position, and by accepting, morally contracted to do his work on that basis—just as much as any workman who agrees to work at $100 a month.

Then consider that Ald. Forster, the mover of this salary grab, refuses to submit the question to the ratepayers in face of the following unanimous resolution at the annual meeting, the only ratepayers' meeting of the year: "That the council be requested to submit the question of government by commission or PAYMENT OF SALARIES TO ALDERMEN to a referendum vote of the ratepayers." Nay, he will fight to the last ditch the submission of the question to the ratepayers. He carried a resolution to submit the legality of not allowing the ratepayers to vote on it to a Calgary lawyer. He will spend twenty-five or thirty dollars of the city's money to keep it away from the ratepayers, and all this although we have four lawyers here. He rightly insists upon the gas question being submitted to the ratepayers but refuses to be consistent in the salary question. He tells the ratepayers he doesn't give a continental what they decide upon at their own meeting, and won't risk his little grab to the popular vote.

Ald. Forster waited until he had the seat of alderman cinched before he uttered a word on the salary question. You can't put him out, now, ratepayers, so he is going to get money out of it at all costs. He wanted to transfer some of the city's gold to his own pockets without giving you a chance to say nay, or how much he will take.

This is the kind of thing we must keep out of the council. Not one alderman of this city has had a breath of suspicion uttered against him up to the beginning of 1908. There is graft in other cities but Medicine Hat has been fortunate. If this style of dipping into the city's coffers without the consent of the ratepayers is not akin to what we read of in San Francisco The Times is missing some phase of the question.

To make matters worse Ald. Forster knows as well as anyone how badly the city needs its money this year. After years of hard work in the council he comes forward, dumb on this subject, slips into the seat, and then tries to force payment to himself.

The Times does not think for an instant that Ald. Forster will receive the support of more than one alderman in his fight to shut out the ratepayers. Already Alds. Baker, Huckvale and Spencer have declared against it. Ald. Forster had not one word of support at the last council meeting. The city has a solicitor for just such questions and Mr. Kealey stated emphatically that the Charter did not give the council the right to vote themselves pay.

The Times would like to ask Ald. Forster: Why does he refuse to allow the ratepayers to vote on this important question? Did he make the salary question a part of his platform of his candidature, in order that the ratepayers might be able to pass an opinion on his qualifications? Does Ald. Forster think he is consistent in insisting upon a submission of the gas question which interests 900 ratepayers (his own figures), and refusing to submit the salary question which interests 1600 ratepayers (his own figures again)?

The man who candidly admits that he is in the council only for the money that is in it, is a most dangerous alderman.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The breaking of the axle of the chemical waggon at the railway crossing brings to view a much needed move. At this crossing a great many axles and springs have been broken, including a part of the ambulance. The roughness of the crossing should be attended to at once by the city or the railway, and the city should see that it is done.

We did not think it would be long before The News showed its reason for considering obscure The Times' objections to the salary grab.

By all means submit the salary grab to the ratepayers. The Times has an idea that the pronounced expression of opinion will make even its mover sorry. If the plebescite is on the payment of next year's council the vote may be different.

Lethbridge council is going to license cigarette sellers. The idea is not so much with a view to make money as to abolish the sale entirely if possible. Most of the council spoke in favor of it.

Also Lethbridge is getting after deliquent taxpayers. The city needs the money and collection of arrears has been placed in the hands of the city solicitor. Medicine Hat needs those taxes too. The collection of them has nothing to do with the gas question.

The News still persists in its statement that Medicine Hat gains nothing by its gas. While we favor a local paper over an outsider, we cannot help but remark that the Calgary Albertan was nearer the mark than it thought, when it said in an editorial last week: "The Mad Hatter News is not a worthy champion of a city with the natural advantages which Medicine Hat possesses." A knock such as this wild statement is will soon convince the people who wish this city to grow that the Albertan told the truth.

You can always tell the weakness of The News' arguments by the number of pernsonalities it works in.

The News argues that the gas rate should not be raised because—because The Times "has uninformed ideas of the city finances"; "The Times must have been gazing into the depths of a sub-division map," (whatever that may mean); "The Times is lightweight," "egotistical," "lavish with advice," "without the remotest conception of an intelligent idea of the present condition of the city's finances," (note the flow), "The Times does not know what it is writing about," "has not enough enlightenment to give any particular weight to its advice," etc., etc., etc. Most convincing isn't it?

As The Times said last week there is no great moral principle involved in the gas question. If the ratepayers decide not have it The Times is thoroughly satisfied. It is a ratepayers' question entirely, and is not one to be threshed out by the papers. The ratepayers alone gain or lose.

The News says:

"The Times is something like the council—prepared to discuss a measure which affects the finances of the city without having the remotest conception of an intelligent idea of the present condition of the city finances."

Well, The Times does not mind being classed with the council. With very few exceptions, they're as good as we could get.

When Ald. Forster's candidature was announced The Times took the stand that an editor should not be on the council.

It took only a month to prove how true this is. We now see Ald. Forster, in his paper, abusing his fellow-aldermen, and using that paper to further a salary grab which is not backed by his fellow-aldermen.

Yes, you pay your bootblack, your minister, your employee, your school trustees, etc., etc, because that is their whole work, what they must make their living at.

But you don't pay your school trustees, your church officials, your society directors—and it is to these the alderman's position conforms. It is only when the work passes a certain stage that a society secretary is paid; and that is when an alderman should be paid. Medicine Hat aldermen should be paid, but the secretary-treasurer of a society never assumes the right to set his own salary and say when it shall start.

Ald. Forster said he could not give his time to the city unless he was paid for it. Then why did Ald. Forster offer himself for the position only six weeks ago?

Byron E. Walker, president of the Bank of Commerce, a man in touch with financial Canada as few other men are, speaks most hopefully of the financial future. It is proposed to increase the capital stock of the bank of Commerce from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, which will place that bank ahead of the bank of Montreal and third in the world.

Here's Liberal expenditure. Brodeur's bill for a four months' trip to Europe was $8,913. It looked a little big even to him and he gave his check for $915, bringing his expenses to $2,000 a month. Of these four months the British government paid his expenses at the Hotel Cecil in London for a month and a half. The Minister carried a secretary and a messenger who "did some work and was most useful." G. E. Foster spent two months abroad when the Conservatives were in power at a total expense of $2,000.

Brodeur's department is making a name for itself. A bill presented for payment contains a note of $49 for white "dickies" for a government boat. A leather cushion cost $42 that could be bought anywhere for $20, a soup tureen $20, and a tea kettle $7.11, etc. A boat which cost $22,000 to keep in 1896, cost $50,000 in 1907 and another cost $29,000 and $49,000 in the two years.

In 1907 Senators received $210,140 in sessional indemnity against $76,000 in 1896.

Homestead Entries.

The total number of homestead entries for the year is 420. During the past month 14 applications for patents have been made at the land office. The cash receipts during the year varied from $250 to $2,350 monthly for homestead entries, grazing leases, etc.

L. B. Cochran, the government land agent, is receiving a large number of applications for homesteads in the Medicine Hat district, and there is every prospect of a big rush of homeseekers in the spring. The majority of the enquiries are from the States, the Dakotas in particular, and Scotland.

Fastest Warships Afloat

There is now being completed and tried out for the British Navy a most interesting class of ocean-going destroyers, whose contract speed of 33 knots an hour is being greatly exceeded on their trials. There has been a steady growth of late years in the size of the destroyer type, the displacement rising from 350 to 500 tons, and now, in the case of these vessels in question, to between 750 and 800 tons. The increase in size is due to the demand for destroyers which can keep the high seas for a considerable period of time, and maintain a high speed under conditions of severe weather. The class which was authorized in 1906 includes five vessels of approximately similar dimensions. One of these, the "Ghurka" which has recently been built by Hawthorne, Leslie & Co., on the Tyne, while undergoing an unofficial builders' trial, made a speed of 34½ knots an hour. The "Ghurka" is 255 feet in length, 25½ feet in beam, 8 feet in depth, and of 750 tons displacement. She is designed to carry 95 tons of oil fuel, and to make a speed of 33 knots with 14,250 horse power. She conforms to the standard destroyer type, having a high forecastle deck forward, low funnels and a short signaling mast. All of the vessels are fitted with turbine engines, of which there are seven, working on three shafts. In the case of the "Ghurka" there is one high pressure turbine on the centre shaft, exhausting into two low pressure turbines on the wing shafts, the two astern turbines being carried also on the wing shafts. Ahead of the low pressure turbines on the wing shafts are a high pressure and a low pressure cruising turbine. Steam is supplied from five Yarrow water tube boilers working at a pressure of 220 pounds. Oil fuel only is used, the only coal carried on the vessel being that used for cooking and heating purposes. The "Ghurka" is armed with three 12-pounder quick-firing guns, two being carried on the forecastle and one aft. She mounts two deck torpedo tubes. The conditions laid down by the Admiralty which have to be fulfilled on the twenty-four hours' consumption trial are that the vessels shall have a radius of action of 1500 miles at a speed of not less than 18 knots per hour. The "Ghurka" has more than realized those conditions, and has proved herself to have a radius of action of 1,715 knots at a speed of 18½ knots per hour. If what are known as the Peace tanks are also filled, she is capable of steaming almost 2,500 knots without a stop, which is equivalent to a voyage across the North Atalantic to Canada, or a run from the Tyne to Malta. This is a much larger radius of action than any other vessel of the type have yet attained. This trial was completed on Friday evening off Yarmouth, after which the vessel proceeded to Sheerness, took in oil fuel and sailed for the Tyne on Saturday morning at 8 a.m., arriving off Tynemouth piers—a distance of 270 miles—at 6 p.m., thus reaching home sooner than could be done by train from Sheerness to Newcastle, a continuous speed in a moderate sea, of 27 knots being comfortably maintained with four-fifths of her boilers.

The recent trials of the "Mohawk", another of this class, built by White & Co., of East Bowes, indicate that they will be unusually fast and economical vessels. The contract called for 33 knots for six hours with a fuel-oil consumption not greater than one pound per square foot of heating surface. The actual consumption was 0.86 pound, an economy of 14 per cent. on that allowed. This economy is rendered the more remarkable because of the great speed attained of 34.5 knots on the measured mile, and 34.24 knots for six hours' steaming. The "Tartar" another vessel of this class recently averaged 35.86 knots on her six hours' trial.

Suggestions For a Big Baseball League.

(Calgary News.)

Baseball!

Well, yes, perhaps it is a little early to be talking about baseball.

But then a few remarks handed out now would not hurt. On the contrary it is better to get the subject under discussion early than leave it until too late.

What about going into something big in the way of ball next year? Say, for instance, an eight league team, reaching between Winnipeg and Calgary. Let's see now, there's Calgary, Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Brandon, Portage La Prairie and Winnipeg.

What about Edmonton?

Oh, well, there are a number of exciting and interesting pastimes that Edmonton might indulge in. They could play marbles with Strathcona, play snowballs with the Esquimos in the Arctic circle or break into other people's reserves and steal anything from apples to universities.

There are numerous schemes by which the suggested eight team league could be worked out with less expenditure than that incurred by the Western Canada league last year. The league schedule might be arranged on a similar basis to that of the Eastern league, or two teams in the eastern division could be brought up to the west and allowed to remain and play, say a three weeks' series of games, while the other four teams would engage one another in the east. The interchange could be so worked as to give the various towns just sufficient ball without over-feeding the fans.

However something more will be heard on the subject pretty soon, when the brainy ones commence to put their heads together after the bonspiel.

Municipal Publicity.

(Monetary Times.)

"It has been moved, seconded and carried that the Press be not allowed to attend this meeting," was the information given by a member of the Guelph civic committee to local newspaper men. One expects municipal matters to be threshed out first in the committee room. There is thus a slight excuse for the exclusion of the Press in this instance.

The placing of the hand of temporary authority over the mouthpiece of the people is perilously near becoming a fine art. Medicine Hat council recently discussed the municipality's financial position. The Press was not allowed to attend the meeting. The increasing number of such instances makes it an opportune moment to urge the cause of publicity in public matters. In the rarest of cases is it necessary that the pen, which has done so much for the individual and the nation, should be tied down with fastidious objections. In a leaky barrel you may be positive there is a leak; where there is secrecy in municipal business you may be sure of much guessing by the Press. In a measure the newspaper is not to blame. It often has to give the maximum amount based on a minimum amount of available information.

City councils are not elected to emulate the methods of nefarious societies which hold their meetings in privacy and darkness. A municipal body is placed in power to do, so far as the usual human failings allow, the business of the people investing it with authority via the medium of the ballot box. The Press should be admitted to municipal meetings and a gallery placed for the accommodation of the citizen interested in his city's welfare.

Continual complaint is made that the citizen does not trouble to vote He is exhorted to bestir himself and when the town elections come along, take a lively interest in the municipal problems of the day. The next moment the Press is barred from the solemn precincts of the council chamber; the citizen is allowed the privilege of gazing at the city hall front and figuring to himself the accomplishments in secret of the men against whose names he once marked an X. Publicity ensures much. It stops the worship of rumor; it kills the cultivation of corruption; it awakens the sleeping municipal spirit of the citizen; it is the embodiment of straight dealing and fairness.

DURABLE WELSBACH MANTLES.

(British Journal of Photography)

It is announced in Paris that a French firm have succeeded in solidifying the rare earths used for the manufacture of the Welsbach mantle, by means of the electric furnace; at the same time the oxides retain their radiating properties. The results have been controlled by a well known physician, M. Berget, and the Societe Helia will shortly put its "buissons ardents" on the market. This slightly irreverent name is due to the form of the ordinary burner, the substitute for the mantle being cast in the form of a thicket or bush of filaments, but any desired shape can be formed, so that the process lends itself to effects. Since the new filaments resist shocks, tremors or draughts to an enormously increased extent, and can be employed with acetylene Bunsen burners, or for heating in the air by the electric current, as in the Nernst lamp, an advance almost as great as that of the original discovery of von Welsbach is perhaps imminent.

Money History of the Past Year.

Interesting Review of the Year.

New York.—The year 1907 has been one in which there has been the making of financial history. It will go down with 1857, 1887 and 1893 as one of the panic years in American financial history, but despite the remarkable stress and strain to which the financial structure has been subjected, the year closes with conditions stronger and safer than they were when the year began. The year opened with the feeling of conservative quarters that speculations had already been carried to an unwarranted height and that prudence was imposed by conditions upon bankers and capitalists. That this feeling feeling operated to some extent throughout the year and that there was a scarcity of capital for absorbing new securities was indicated by the diminished transactions in stocks and bonds on the New York Stock Exchange. The number of shares dealt in in 1907 fell to 195, 169, 192. Bond sales were $561,51,500. The number of stocks dealt in in 1906 was 288,424,284 and the bond sales for 1906 were $670,817,335. The source of the pressure upon the money market is indicated by the large issues of securities which took place several years prior to the crisis. The statistics compiled by a leading financial journal in Brussels showed that the total issues throughout the world for the five years ending 1906 was about $3,400,000,000 annually.

THE STOCK MARKET

In the United Ftates the issues of stocks for the first eleven months of 1907 were $767,259,900 and the bonds and notes $1,073,990,000 making up a total of $1,831,349,500. Securities of all kinds issued in the United Kingdom for five years ending with 1906 has been estimated by experts at $3,454,978,000. The extent to which capital resources have been strained was not revealed in a striking manner to the general public until the "silent panic" of March 13, now almost overshadowed by later events, but at the time one of the most serious and remarkable breaks which the market has ever suffered. The loss of 19 points in Amalgamated Copper in a single day and 21 points in American Smelting 22 in Reading and 25 in Union Pacific added to several previous declines at a slower rate, wiped out margins, compelled the calling of loans and wrecked the fortunes of many speculators. It was not until mid-October that the storm broke in all its force with the collapse of the corner in United Copper. The appeal of the Marcus-Heinze bank to the clearing house for help and the refusal to extend help until the old controlling interest was eliminated.

Events moved fast and furiously on the heels of these revelations. The Knickerbocker Trust Company was closed October 22, after paying out about $8,000,000 in cash and runs began upon the Trust Company of America, which called for the disbursement of $34,000,000 and upon the Lincoln Trust Company which suffered an early proportionate loss of deposits. The suspension of cash payments by practically all the banks and the decision of Saturday Oct. 26, to issue clearing house certificates on the flag Monday marked the culminating stage of the crisis.

THE BANKS WITH THE GOLD.

The number of banks on November 30, 1907, allowing for mergers and liquidations was 6,665, and their authorized capital was $910,609,775. Since the latter part of 1899, the number of national banks has increased by more than three thousand, while their capital has increased by about $308,000,000. Soon after the panic broke on November 1, 1907, the total bank circulation was $609,988,466. The measures then taken by secretary Cortelyou to promote regulation resulted in an increase of about $75,000,000 during the next seven weeks, so that the circulation stood on December 21, 1907, at $683,795,728.

Accompanying the increase of bank note circulation in order to meet the pressure for currency was the dramatic movement of nearly $106,000,000 of gold from Europe within a period of about six weeks. This inward movement of gold was facilitated by the sharp arrest of imports of luxuries and a combined effort by producers, railways and bankers to ship to Europe our farm produce during the autumn season.

Imports of merchandise which had been $125,806,043 in August fell to $110,270,477 in August, advanced to $204,444,860 in November. From various sources—increase in bank note circulation $75,000,000; gold imports $10,000,000; and public deposits $78,000,000, a total of about $259,000,000 was added by the close of the year in the currency in circulation in the country during the summer. While much of this currency disappeared into hoards during the panic its reappearance in a time of comparative inactivity, it is feared, may be reflected by speculation in the stock market and an outward movement of gold in the spring.

One of the incidents of the period of decline in bank resources has been a fall in the market value of silver bullion. Silver has dropped down not far above the lowest point touched in its history. The price was 24 7-16 pence on December 27. The old year ends with the prices of commodities and securities much lower than a year ago and with liquidation largely advanced in the banking field, if not in the field of commodities. The great source of currency was absorbed early in the period. The plan just taken by the secretary to recall deposits of public money from banks will tend to check the outward movement of gold which in some quarters is expected within the next few months.

The financial structure of the country has stood the strain with only a limited number of serious disasters and will enter upon the New Year under much stronger and safer conditions than it began last year.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE GLEICHEN AND DISTRICT BOARD OF TRADE.

Whereas it is the intention of the government of Alberta to organize a provincial agricultural college and

Whereas the enormous importance of agriculture under irrigation is daily becoming more evident in Alberta, and

Whereas no class of farmers is in greater need of instruction than that which operates irrigated farms, owing to the absolute lack of knowledge and experience available in regard to the proper handling of water for the different crops now being produced under irrigation in this province, and

Whereas millions of dollars have now been expended upon the construction of irrigation systems throughout Alberta by individuals and corporations in addition to the large expenditure for the colonization of these irrigated lands, and

Whereas the time is rapidly approaching when the production of irrigated lands in Alberta will equal in volume that of non-irrigated lands, and

Whereas it is in the public interest that the proposed agricultural college should be located at a point in the province where instruction can be given students in farming under irrigation, as well as in farming without the use of artificial watering, and

Whereas Gleichen is the centre of the greatest irrigation scheme not only in this province, but on the continent of America, and

Whereas a location can be obtained in the vicinity of Gleichen for such a college, embracing both irrigated and non-irrigated lands, and

Whereas the Dominion Experimental Farm under irrigation has been located in the extreme southerly portion of Alberta, where soil conditions are totally unlike those prevailing from Claresholm north and where the agricultural problems are somewhat different, and

Whereas the investigations and experiments to be carried out by the proposed college would, therefore, reach a vastly greater area and a larger number of settlers who are now cut off from such advantages if located farther north, and

Whereas the Gleichen district is unsurpassed in the whole province in yields per acre of the standard crops for non-irrigated lands as well as for irrigated lands, and

Whereas the citizens of Gleichen, through their committee, are prepared to offer to the government of Alberta, free of cost, a suitable site for such a college, consisting of irrigable and non-irrigable land, with adequate water rights,

Therefore be it resolved, that the Honorable members of the government of Alberta be petitioned to cause the said Provincial Agricultural College of Alberta to be located in the vicinity of Gleichen, and

Also, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the various boards of trade, newspapers and members of the Provincial parliament throughout the province requesting their support.

FIVE FOOT SNOWSHOES.

Montreal, Jan. 14.—The heavy fall of snow has delighted the hearts of the sportsmen who are going to take part in the big wolf hunt this week in the Lake Kippewa district of Quebec, because the deeper the snow the greater are the chances of getting within shooting distance of the wolves. Mr. Hope, of the C. P. R. tourist department has left with a guide for the scene of operations, to reconnoitre the country, so that all details will be completed by the time the hunters arrive.

Mr. L. O. Armstrong had in his office at the C.P.R. yesterday a specimen pair of the snowshoes that are to be used on the hunt. As the country in which the hunt is to take place is wooded, long narrow shoes are necessary, and the size fixed on as the best adapted for the purpose is five feet long by twelve inches wide, and of the ordinary surveyor's pattern.

IT CAN HAVE BUT ONE RESULT. IT LEAVES THE THROAT or LUNGS, OR BOTH, AFFECTED.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP IS THE MEDICINE YOU NEED. . . . . .

It is without an equal as a remedy for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Pain in the Chest, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Quinsy and all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

A single dose of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will stop the cough, soothe the throat, and if the cough or cold has become settled on the lungs, the healing properties of the Norway Pine Tree will proclaim its great virtue by promptly eradicating the bad effects, and a persistent use of the remedy cannot fail to bring about a complete cure.

Do not be humbugged into buying so-called Norway Pine Syrups, but be sure and insist on having Dr. Wood's. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and price 25 cts.

Mrs. Henry Seabrook, Hopworth, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in our family for the past three years and I consider it the best remedy known for the cure of colds. It has cured all my children and myself."

Robert Ganthony, as an Actor, Entertainer and Humorist, is known all over the world, either personally or through the medium of his numerous Plays, Books and Songs. He was originally a member of Sir Henry Irving's Company, then Maskelyne & Cooke's Palace Theatre, Alhambra, Coliseum, etc., London, appearing afterwards with the greatest success in Paris, Hamburg, Copenhagen, New York, Cape Town, etc.

As a Society Entertainer he has had the honor of appearing on several occasions before His Majesty King Edward VII., H.R.H. the Princess of Wales—to whom he was presented—T.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and Duke of Connaught. At Copenhagen he lunched with their Majesties the King and Queen of Denmark, and entertained them, as well as nearly all the distinguished people in Europe, when he accompanied the late Mr. W. E. Gladstone round Europe on the now historic voyage of the "Tantallon Castle."—Courier.

First Appearance in Canada a Triumphal Success.

APPEARS AT STANLEY HALL, MONTREAL, IN A RECITAL BEFORE A LARGE AND FASHIONABLE AUDIENCE

GANTHONY ENTERTAINS

Proves Himself to be Comedian of High Order.

The large and fashionable audience assembled at Stanley Hall last evening had not merely the pleasure of aiding a good cause, but of enjoying one of the best entertainments that has been seen in Montreal for months.

It was Mr. Robert Ganthony's first appearance in this city but it took him only a few moments to establish himself in the affections of the house. As a comedian he is of the first order, with a fund of delightful absurdities that kept laughter rippling until it broke into unrestrained laughter and applause.

In the musical sketch that opened the programme he showed himself no unworthy successor to the late Mr. Corney Grain, his mandolin solo, supposed to be given by a girl, and his ludicrous recitation, "The Man with One Hair," being triumphs of humorous art. His "Mathematical Travesty" was another excellent item, exhibiting his skill as a cartoonist. His sketch of a clergymen lecturing to his parishioners on the poem of "Bo-Peep" was instinct with delicate irony, entirely free from offence, and the signal for hilarious applause.

The second part of the entertainment contained a sketch as given before His Majesty King Edward VII. "The Weathercock Concert" followed, Mr. Ganthony assuming the role of a "quick change artist" in a manner that would have done credit to Mr. Robert himself. This brought the performance to a close, and, to judge from the opinions expressed by the audience, Mr. Ganthony's return to Montreal in the near future will be heartily welcomed.—The Gazette.

GANTHONY ENTERTAINMENT

Mr. Robert Ganthony, as a humorous entertainer, has a world wide reputation, and last night appeared before a Canadian audience for the first time. As a lightning sketcher and quick change artist he excels, and his personations of the various villagers taking part in the Weathercock Concert, organized by Major Muddle, were very clever; the whole of the entertainment delighting everyone present and fully sustaining this talented artist's reputation.—Daily Witness.

ROBERT GANTHONY AMUSED HIS AUDIENCE

There was a show at Stanley last night. Robert Ganthony was the show. A large gathering of very select Montrealers were the audience. They seemed to enjoy Robert—laughed at all his jokes. Everybody seemed to have a good time, and Robert had the best of all.

The 'stunts'' were good. Beginning with a musical sketch at the pianoforte, Mr. Ganthony proceeded to give a presentation of a French conjurer—a clever skit. A burlesque lecture on the phonograph and a mock homily on "Little Bo-Peep," detailing the true inwardness of that well-known text, created much amusement. After some very interesting work with Japanese grotesques and sketching chalk, the programme was brought to a conclusion with the Weathercock Concert, in which Mr. Ganthony assumes six different characters. This made a very bright conclusion to a very bright evening's entertainment.—The Star.

'THE GANTHONY RECITAL

Mr. Robert Ganthony, the dramatic entertainer and actor gave a recital last night in the Stanley Hall and scored a signal success. His numbers were enthusiastically encored by the large and fashionable audience which assembled to hear him, and his "Ganthonicals" provoked much laughter and proved their author to be a person of originality as well as talent.

By far the best of his sketches was the "Travestic Homily.' As the Rev. Sant Anthony, Mr. Ganthony was supremely funny. The smug, half-important, half- snubbed demeanor of the reverend gentleman was quite delightful. His "Weathercock Concert" was also appreciated. Major Muddle, the organizer and entertainer of the concert, being, perhaps, the best impersonation; although Captain Cleary, who "managed a recitation with a wooden arm," was possibly more popular than any other who added his quota to the enjoyment of a most pleasurable evening.—Daily Herald.

A FEW COMPLIMENTARY LETTERS

From the late Sir Henry Irving. "Lyceum Theatre, London.

"Dear Mr. Ganthony:

"I am very pleased to hear of the success of your recitals, and have no doubt that your energy, perseverance, and excellence as an actor will enable you to merit no small share of popularity.

Believe me, etc., (Signed) "Henry Irving."

"Egyptian Hall, London.

"The most versatile and accomplished entertainer of the day.

"Maskelyne & Cooke."

The late Mr. Augustus Sala says:

"One of the big items at the Alhambra is Mr. Robert Ganthony."

The late Mr. Clement Scott says:

I never heard more perfect vocal imitations than those in the Musical Sketches of Mr. Robert Ganthony."

ONE OF A NUMBER OF NEW YORK CRITICISMS.

And speaking of versatile actors, have you ever heard Mr. Robert Ganthony's imitation of a boarding house school girl's performances on the mandolin? If you haven't had that felicity, has amiable fate ever afforded you the opportunity of hearing Mr. Ganthony's wonderful impersonation of the three characters in a French father-in-law farce? Unless one excepts his imitation of an amateur soprano singing to a cello obligato, I reckon THE FRENCH FARCE MONOLOGUE IS THE CLEVEREST BIT OF NONSENSE IN THE WORLD.—Morning Daily Telegraph.

Without doubt the most famous humorist and entertainer that has ever visited Western Canada.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

Labor Candidate.

At the monthly meeting of the Trades and Labor Council on Thursday evening, it was suggested that R. J. Twohey should be put in the field in Ward IV., in the Labor interest.

UNION MEN WILL NOT ACCEPT THE SCALE.

(Calgary Albertan.)

A special meeting of the building trades section of the trades and labor council was held in the labor hall last night, at which there was a large attendance. The object of the meeting was to discuss the present situation in regard to the cut in the union scale of wages proposed by the exhibition board.

The following resolution was unanimously passed and ordered to be sent to the exhibition board,—

"That if the exhibition board of the Dominion fair do on and after Jan. 23, 1908, refuse to recognize the union rates of wages as laid down by the arbitration board of Calgary, on their buildings, such work will be declared unfair to union labor in Calgary. This decision shall be also binding on any contractor who may secure any part of the work to be done in connection therewith."

The position of the trades unions as stated by J. Harrison is that the unions are bound by the agreement as fixed by the board of arbitration between them and the builders' exchange and do not wish to break it. If it is once broken there will, in their opinion be constant trouble as in the past prior to the agreement.

In the British House of Commons there are 54 representatives of labor. Thirty of these are members of the Independent Parliamentary Labor party.

JAPS SOCIALISTS.

In a Socialist speech at Edmonton F. H. Sherman is reported as having referred to the Socialists of Japan. At the close of his speech a gentleman arose and asked these questions according to the Edmonton Journal:

"How it was that there was discord in the ranks of the brotherhood of Socialism at so early a date in their history," instancing a cry against the Japanese whom the leader of the meeting had termed as Socialists. Why are the brethren from Japan not wanted in this country? At the great Socialistic convention held in Germany, when there were delegates from all over the world, one of the resolutions was that "every country should be freely opened to the people of another country," but there are the Socialists of United States and Canada opposing the spirit of toleration and brotherly love for the working man. This was replied to by the speaker in a rather evasive way that seemed to leave the best of the argument with the questioner."

BRITISH LABOR PARTY REJECTS SOCIALISM.

Hull, England, Jan. 21.—The Labor Party held a conference here today at which an amendment to the constitution binding the party to Socialism was rejected by a large majority.

THE RAILROADERS AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—About a hundred railroad men representing the different organizations, convened here to-day to discuss the Lemieux Act and also prosecutions that are instituted against railroad men under the criminal code. After a thorough discussion they will make representations to the government for the redress of their grievances.

LABOR CHIEF IS CONVERTED.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 20.—At a meeting for men this afternoon, conducted by Evangelist William Sunday, one of the hundred converts was John B. Lennon, national treasurer of the American Federation of Labor. Lennon also is international secretary for the Journeyman Tailors Union of North America.

The Sob Squad.

The Slush they Serve Up In New York.

New York, Jan. 18.—The Journal expatiates as follows on the eccentricities of emotional writers on the Thaw trial:

Notwithstanding the fact that yesterday's proceedings were about as entertaining as an examination in "math," the Sob Squad got busy, very busy. Nell Brinkley, the new journalistic joy of the Evening Journal, was on hand early with a new line of kiddie stuff, ivory casts and violent wine, and beat all previous records for the distance.

Nell goes to bat with "A sob in every line" inscribed on her 'cutcheon, and the way she is lining out for the wire would have the owners of brackets worried but for the fact that they know there's the full distance to go, and even the back stretch a long way off.

The pace Nell is setting has Dorothy Dix and Charley Summerville anxious and is liable to result in running them all off their feet before they are fairly started. Charlie Summerville began to weep two days ago and Dorothy Dix broke into sobs yesterday. And over the jury-box end of the run the first part of the first furlong.

"I could have taken her in my arms and wept over her with sympathy," is what Dorothy Dix had to say in the Evening Journal yesterday, but it was only a short spurt and still left Nell in the lead.

The grandstand could see nothing but Nell yesterday. It's true the race was just beginning and it's dangerous to set such a pace before the turn is reached, but the way Nell swung into her stride and left all the others looking as though tied to the barrier was a wonderful sight.

BETTYS GET IT NOW.

If it be imagined for a moment that Nellie isn't going some, take a glimpse at the dope for her work of the first furlong. This is it from a recent Evening Journal:

"Evelyn Thaw always keeps on the same little fluffy ruffles suit and black velvet hat with the wine-purple flowers on it. I guess all the Betty folk would love in their little girl souls, to see all the things of the dress and ways of the other poor little Betty who has come to grief—this other little Betty that sits so still like a little brown gnome, the sadness and the wisdom of the ages in her foreign-looking eyes."

What!

Maybe that isn't getting away with the track record for the Gush Stakes! Nell Brinkley would be the one best bet if it were a sprint event. Of course there are those of a captious sort who will cavil at the allusion to Evelyn Nesbit as a "gnome." We have grown used to her as a "Betty" although the bank roll goes back of the bet that there isn't a man in the courtroom who knows what a "Betty" is or whether a "Betty" is ingenuous or not. All know what gnomes are, however, and it is difficult to imagine Evelyn as a gnome.

So far as is known, there aren't any lady gnomes. In the first place a male gnome is the usual artistic caricature of mankind ever imagined by those who place before us in line and color the creatures of mythologic and folk lore.

IS GETTING IT BACK.

It is the most exhilarating incident of the journalistic end of the trial, for Evelyn Nesbit imagined that she had jabbed a poisoned javelin into Abraham Hummel when she referred to him, when she was testifying as "a funny little man that looked like a funny little gnome." And now Nell Brinkley is passing it right back to her. What a pair of gnomes they would make! But Nell hit her gait best when she was working the kiddie lay. Note:

"Till today she has has had on a pair of little pale tan gloves—they were filled on the fingers, and she would spread out her hands, palm up and look at the black insides of them like a bad kid with jam on its fists."

Oh, pink sponge cake!

SOME MORE COLOR.

Further it is remarked concerning this "Betty":

"She carries a little gold, soft linked purse—that all the Bettys are buying their pretty selves now-a-days. She screws and wiggles herself back into her chair, and when she is all settled her feet clear the floor and she swings them like a little baby girl. She has little dull-leathered pumps, with a prim stiff little bow that remind me some way of kiddies whose mammas set them all in a row with their cheeks red, and tells them not to laugh on their lives! Little Dutchy bows below each instep. Her linen collar is about 3 inches wide, with two rows of fancy stitching on it. And the bow under her silken chin is black—black, not blue. Her hat is broad and gloomy black velvet—the crown all choked with deep-red purple flowers—with one old blue flower in the front, above her hair."

Wine-purple, red-purple, any old purple, so it's purple, is Nell Brinkley's play apparently, for this one day. She ought to play the numbers occasionally.

THAT POOR KITTEN.

And then wandering hand in hand with Nell down the lanes that lead through bushland, let us marvel at this chaste bit:

"Dan O'Reilly's brother put a little bottle of something into her hands. She pouted and made a face like next minute she would wail, "I don't want to go to school'! but she soaked her hankie with it and jammed it gingerly against her nose—and then lowered it and looked the most utter indignation and reproach with her wine-purple lips pushed out and her cheeks puffed out. Sometimes she is seized with the fidgets—and she fusses and wiggles and takes deep breaths—and little frowns ruffle her brown brows. Then she tucks herself down into her chair and is very still and good—with her eyes seeing things that we can't see—like my gray kitten looks when she has been eating the feathers on my hat—and I scold her and make her sit in the corner—with eyes as weirdly sad as Egypt's.'

GIBB-CRUICKSHANK.

(Vancouver World.)

A marriage of unusual interest was solemnized at St. John's Presbyterian church at 1.30 p.m. today, when Miss Sarah Jane Cruickshank, the well known and popular superintendent of the Victorian Order of district Nurses, and daughter of Mrs. E. J. Cruickshank of Medicine Hat, became the bride of Mr. John W. Gibb, son of Mr. David Gibb, 1254 Robson street, and partner of the firm of Gibb & Son, contractors. Rev. A. J. McGillivray officiated. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by the Graduate Nurses' Association of Vancouver. The bride, who was given away by Mr. J. L. Gallagher, made a charming picture in her beautiful gown of white duchesse satin, made in Empire fashion with long sweeping train. Beautiful honiton lace trimmed the sleeves and bodice, which were made in kimono style, the latter being finished off, both in the front and back with a deep yoke of tucked chiffon. With this was worn a lace veil and a coronet of real orange blossoms, while the bridal bouquet was composed of white roses. Miss Cruickshank wore among her ornaments the gift of the bridegroom, a handsome pearl necklace, and the beautiful bracelet presented to her by the board of the Victorian Order of Nurses. This was gold set with pearls and aquamarine. After her followed her sister, Miss Laura Cruikshank of Medicine Hat, Alta., who looked very well in a lovely costume of cream net over taffeta, the bodice trimmed with Dresden silk and Irish lace. The lace skirt, which was also worn over a foundation of taffeta, had a band of the silk around the hem. With this was worn a most becoming French picture hat of white felt lined with velvet, the crown being formed of ruched lace, and the whole finished off with one long white ostrich feather. Her bouquet of pink roses gave an effective color touch to a delightfully pretty costume. Miss Nellie Cruickshank, another sister of the bride, who was also present, wore a handsome costume of cream serge trimmed with military braid, with which was worn a cream silk blouse trimmed with Valenciennes lace. Her cream hat was relieved with cerise velvet and flowers. The church was crowded with the friends of both bride and bridegroom. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the happy pair, accompanied by their guests, returned to the Victorian Order of Nurses' home, 1134 Davie street, where a reception was held. In honor of the fact that today, January 22, is the anniversary of the death of her late Majesty, Queen Victoria, and also of the founding of a permanent home for the nurses of the Order in this city, the rooms were decorated in violet, the colour of royal mourning. Mr. and Mrs. Gibb afterwards left for Southern California, where they will be for a month. The bride wore a travelling costume of myrtle-green broadcloth, cut in semi-military style and trimmed with black military braid. With this she wore a green velvet hat, with a sequin crown, trimmed with a green ostrich plume and black ribbon. Among the many handsome presents received by the bride was a handsome electric reading lamp, the gift of the Associated Societies of the city. The Vancouver Graduate Nurses' Association presented her with a silver chafing set with entree dishes; from her mother she received a check, and from her mother-in-law, Mrs. D. Gibb, a handsome green and white dinner service. The bridegroom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bracelet, set with Shamrocks and Scotch thistles, and to the best man gold cuff links, set with Shamrock and maple leaves. On their return from the south Mr. and Mrs. Gibb will spend a short time in this city, and afterwards expect to leave on an eight months' trip around the world. Both of the young people will have the warmest wishes of all their friends in Vancouver and elsewhere for a long life of prosperity and happiness.

On Wednesday the wedding took place at St. John's Manse, of Mr. Victor Heydlauf, a rancher from the Milk River district, to Miss Amelia Garlough, daughter of Hezekiah Garlough of Eagle Butte. The bride was given away by her father, an old timer in the west, who removed from Pincher Creek to the Eagle Butte district five or six years ago. Originally he came from Williamsburg, Ont.

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, N. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or run-down system. For speaker's sore throat I have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Browne, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal. I strongly recommend it.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, Markdale, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. HAND AND ARM ENDANGERED

Zam-Buk Arrests Blood Poison.

Neglect a cut or scratch and it may turn to blood poisoning. Mr. Joseph Lalibertie of 34 Artillerie Street, Quebec, might have lost his hand and arm but for the timely use of Zam-Buk. He says: "I cut one of my fingers on a rusty piece of tin and had no idea it would become so serious, but in two days blood poison had set in and my fingers became terribly discolored, and my hand and arm swollen. I was alarmed and began using one ointment after another but none relieved me. I was about to consult a doctor when a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk. This I did. Zam-Buk began by drawing out the inflammation and in one week the wound was nicely healed. Since then I have had no healing balm in the house but Zam-Buk. I feel so grateful for my speedy cure that I unhesitatingly give my testimonial to the merits of Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, chapped hands, chafings, cold sores, itch, chilblains, eczema, running sores, sore throat, bad chest, ringworm, piles (blind or bleeding), bad legs, inflamed patches, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, abscesses and all diseased, injured and irritated conditions of the skin. Of all druggists and stores, 50c, or postpaid, upon receipt of price, from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. a box, 6 boxes $2.50.

IMPORTANT EXPERIMENTS

MEDICINE HAT NATURAL GAS TO LIGHT C. P. R. CARS

A GREAT TRAVELLING ADVERTISEMENT FOR CITY

During the past week the C.P.R. have carried out a number of experiments with natural gas, with a view to adopting it as an illuminant in their coaches. On Tuesday the two Pintsch gas tanks of car No. 303, each with a capacity of 1160 cubic feet were charged with natural gas at Medicine Hat to a pressure of ten atmospheres (140 lbs.) and for nearly forty hours this gas brightly illuminated the car. During the last half hour the pressure was rather low, and the light gradually decreased in intensity until the supply was exhausted. From this it was founh that the Pintsch gas supply at the same pressure will light the car for thirty-six hours. The light given by the natural gas is much brighter than can be obtained with the Pintsch gas. The burner also can be used at a pressure smaller than is required with the latter gas—two ounces—and thus much less gas is consumed in a given time.

On Friday and Saturday a second successful experiment was made. Master mechanic Woodhouse who came down from Calgary on the latter day was thoroughly satisfied with the results achieved. The tanks were recharged with mixed Pintsch and natural gas, and the coach sent on to Winnipeg Saturday night, and arrived there Sunday evening with the lights still burning.

The series of experiments have been entirely successful. It remains now for the officials of the company to decide to what extent it will be profitable to use the natural gas on the transcontinental service. With the gas in use twelve hours out of the twenty-four a supply obtained in Medicine Hat would be adequate for three days' illumination. This, however, would not be sufficient to last out the return trip—from here to Vancouver, or to Montreal, and if the Pintsch gas is to be entirely dispensed with it will be natural to carry the natural gas to terminal points in special tanks or increase the size of the tanks. The adoption of this system is now under consideration, and should the officials decide favorably, will be an excellent advertisement for the Medicine Hat district and its resources.

The fittings on the cars are equally suited to either gas.

Figuring on the cost of this gas at manufacturers' rates a night's lighting would cost about 4 cents per car. The C.P.R. however, has its own gas well, and even this expense is not incurred. All the additional plant that is necessary in the shops here would be a few feet of hose.

This is the result of a test which has been in the minds of the C.P.R. officials for years, many of them having been confident that Medicine Hat natural gas would lend itself to this use.

School Debentures Sold

Bid of Credit Foncier Accepted

A special meeting of the school board was held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Present: The chairman, W. T. Brotherton; trustees, D. Milne, J. Kennedy, J. C. Colter.

The Merchants bank wrote to say they would try to sell the debentures Aemilius Jarvis desired an option on the issue and thought they could do better for the board by handling the debentures along with the city's, on which they were seeking an option. The fact that the bonds were being advertised would not prevent the board from giving an option, which should be dated from February 1, as by then any other bids, "if there were any," an event of which the bank was very doubtful, would have been received.

Aemilius Jarvis made an offer of 84.13 and interest, or a total of $8,577.968 for the $10,000 issue.

The following bids were also received:

Woods, Gundy & Co., 90 and accrued interest, equal to $9,166.65, or 90.50 on an option for thirty days.

N. Lejer, 90.50. No statement as to interest.

W. C. Brent, $9,125.65 for the issue.

The Credit Foncier $9,505.80, less accrued interest equal to $9,255.30.

The offer of the Credit Foncier was accepted. This institution is a great French loan society in which the poor people of Quebec invest their savings. The bank is allowed to invest their funds in bonds.

During the course of the meeting a letter was received from the Merchants bank, who wrote as follows:

"I have received telegraphic instruction this morning from our head office to the effect that we may promise you your board's requirements for the next four or five months, providing the proceeds of the $10,000 debentures comes to us now. Beyond the four or five months the bank will not agree to commit itself. However, there is no reason to believe that you will not be able to get your requirements for the year but the bank naturally does not wish to bind itself to a long term agreement.

Yours faithfully,

V. C. JAMES."

Mr. Kennedy: "They're trying to do us."

Messrs. Brotherton and Milne withdrew for a short period to interview the manager of the Merchants bank.

The chairman read a letter from G. E. Pentland resigning the principalship of the schools. This was accepted.

Mr. Milne, speaking of the work at the schools stated that there had been marked improvement under the new teachers, Mr. Webb and Mr. Ware, who had thrown themselves whole-heartedly into their duties.

Messrs. Milne and Kennedy were appointed a committee to look into the matter of the principalship.

Mr. Brotherton stated that two rooms in the Toronto street school had had to be dismissed on account of the inefficiency of the heating during the cold weather. Mr. Porter was called into the room and spoke on the matter. The trouble was that the pipe from the meter to the furnace was too small. The gas pressure, when the demand was heaviest (during the cold weather) was great, but in addition to the points most distant from the source of supply, more wells would have to be added to cope with the heavy demand. There were today nearly 400 more consumers on the mains than a year ago.

Mr. Porter agreed to see into the matter at the Toronto street school and, as early as possible, install an improved burner.

Province Will Supply The Readers.

Premier Announces Free Readers to Schools.

Edmonton, Jan. 30.—In moving the second reading of a bill granting certain powers to the Minister of Education this afternoon, Premier Rutherford made the important announcement that the government had decided to provide copies of the common schools of Alberta with free readers and would consider the advisability of providing a free text book on agriculture. This provision, of course, depends upon the legislature providing the necessary estimates, but he did not anticipate any trouble in that connection, and judging from the applause following the statement there need be no fear on that score.

As the law stands at present the Minister of Education may prescribe books for schools, but has no powers to make a contract for the supply of the same and he thought that the time had arrived when it should be given.

The Premier pointed out that the text books now in use were old fashioned and the province should have those in harmony with the institutions of the west. With this purpose in view the government was opening negotiations with leading firms in the province to secure an up-to-date set of books. The readers submitted by Morang & Co., of Toronto, were found to be the most desirable. A thorough revision of the books had been made. The quality of the books were excellent, the paper good, the illustrations clear, the binding good, the price moderate and the books had been endorsed by the Manitoba government and would also be used by Saskatchewan. The readers contained 1304 pages. The contract with Morang & Co. was prepared, with the necessary safeguards. The readers will be available next summer.

LEONARD & HARRIS STOCK SOLD

The Marshall Hardware Company purchased the grocery stock of Leonard & Harris offered last Wednesday. They have moved it to their store next the Alberta hotel and are selling it off.

There were two or three bidders, the stock finally going at a lower price than it would have brought had the stand been available to the purchaser.

NEW CONFECTIONERY STORE

W. H. DOTY IN OLD LEONARD & HARRIS STAND

On or about March 1, the store on the corner of Fourth Ave. and Toronto St., until lately occupied by Leonard & Harris as a grocery store will be turned into a confectionery and fruit store.

W. H. Doty, the confectionery manufacturer, has secured a lengthy lease of the stand, and just as soon as the necessary alterations are made he will place in it a large stock of choice confectionery and fruits. He will continue to manufacture, as formerly.

It is the intention to have an ice cream parlor at the rear.

The date of opening will be announced later in The Times.

Thieves Abroad Several losses Reported

Break into House near City

All over Canada the reports of thieving are more numerous than they have been. Much of this has been due to financial conditions.

Medicine Hat has escaped until the last couple of weeks. Lately, however, thefts have been reported by the C.P.R., and a local merchant has had his house looted twice during January.

Mr. Souch has a house near Dunmore, three miles from the city, where he spends the summer months. A couple of weeks ago upon visiting the house he found that someone had stolen into the house and had climbed into the house and ransacked things pretty thoroughly.

Again, last week, thieves had entered the house and overhauled every cupboard and drawer. Mr. Souch does not know what is missing, but several windows were broken and the furniture badly scratched.

THEFT FROM INDIAN ENCAMPMENT

On the 27th of last month the Mounted Police by a piece of very smart work secured the conviction of a thief among the extra gang men on the C.P.R.

Two or three carloads of extra gang men had been for some time waiting near the Indian tepees, to be transferred home. On the 25th the gang visited the camp and tried to effect the purchase of a belt from a squaw in one of the tepees. The Indian woman did not wish to sell. Shortly afterwards the belt (valued at $6) was missing, and on Monday morning the Indians reported the loss to the Mounted Police and the squaw from whom the belt had been stolen pointed out one of the men to Corporal Humby. This man, J. J. Stewart, not giving a very satisfactory account of his movements on Saturday evening, was brought before Inspector Parker and kept in custody until the other members of the gang be interviewed. Later in the afternoon four other men were brought before the Inspector, and from their statements it became evident that the first man had been lying. It was suspected that Kelly had been concerned in the bad business, and accordingly a warrant was issued and his arrest immediately effected by Constable Harris.

Brought to the police station the man denied all knowledge of the belt, but on being locked up in a cell, separated from Stewart, he confessed to the theft and told Corp. Humby where he would find the belt. Afterwards the belt was found in the place indicated.

In the evening Kelly appeared before Inspector Parker and D. Milne and pleaded guilty. He got off with a light sentence—two months hard labor, and was taken on to Lethbridge the same night. Had Mr. Borradaile been on the bench he would probably have got a pretty stiff sentence on account of his previous record as Kelly had appeared before him the week previous in connection with a boarding car fight.

In the latter case it was pointed out to the prisoner by the justices that he might have been sent up for trial for attempting to prostitute Indian women.

Stewart was released after the Inspector had given him a good talking to on the meanness of stealing from poor Indians. The belt was returned to the owners, much to their joy.

The Indians have frequent cause to be grateful to the police, whom they look upon as their only protectors. The belt was a rather valuable one and its loss would have been a serious one to them.

THE CITY FATHERS

Some Very Warm Talk Regarding Engineer's Conduct. Ald. Baker Says City Overcharged.

Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Penhale.

F. T. Griffin, of the C.P.R. land department, wrote re location of armory. He did not see the necessity of locating the building in Block D. The company had already transferred to the Crown the site originally suggested in Block E and were not prepared to make further concessions than were suggested in their letter dealt with at last week's meeting of the council. They had granted the site to the Y.M.C.A. which was a philanthropic institution, with some hesitation on their part, at the wish of a large number of the citizens, and did not think the park area should be further encroached upon. If the city did not think it necessary to reserve land for park purposes the company were willing to sell a site for the armory at whatever the property was worth and to continue to deal with the remainder in the same manner as occasion arose.

Ald. Penhale did not think the city should place the armory in any place not agreeable to Mr. Griffin. Ald. Baker thought if the city did not accept the offer the C.P.R. would sell to someone else. The Mayor thought it very important that the matter of the gas well should be looked into, that the building should be a safe distance away. It was agreed that the city accept the offer made in Mr. Griffin's letter, and that the solicitor be instructed to ask for transfer of park property.

The Northern Electric and Manufacturing Company wrote pressing for payment of their account for the fire alarm system, as they had heavy obligations to meet. The clerk stated that the fire alarm debentures, ($2,071) were still in the bank. Notified that note cannot be paid at present.

The Merchants bank wrote as follows:

"Messrs. Aemilius Jarvis & Co. requested me to wire them immediately after you decided whether or not you would grant an option to them on the further block of debentures to be sold by this city. I, therefore, wired them this morning as follows:

'City won't give option now. Will consider bids for about forty thousand, five per cent., annual payments, twenty year bonds.'

"Since sending this wire, but before they could have received it, I have received the following telegram from them:

'Letter 22nd received. Subject city satisfying our clients as per conditions our acceptance. City have our undertaking to take delivery eighty-nine, interest to date, delivery provided payable Montreal. Surely nothing fairer. Any delay their fault as option did not say interest. We could have held city but did not desire take advantage. In view our purchase Regina's with accrued interest to us (it) would be city's interest (to) wire option immediately, same terms, as client might purchase additional amounts.'"

A wire from the Canada Foundry Company gave their terms to the city for the completion of the contract for the engines. The John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Co., wrote to similar effect regarding the pumps.

A letter from the director of the provincial laboratory called attention to the fact that the laboratory was prepared to receive specimens. The work of the department, he pointed out, would be especially useful in safeguarding of the public health. Filed.

E. L. Crawford of the Canadian Bank of Commerce wrote notifying the council that the Credit Foncier have funds for investment in mortgages and municipal bonds. The clerk had, on receiving this, asked the loan society to give bids. Filed.

The Union of Canadian Municipalities wrote asking that the date for the municipal convention be fixed. The Mayor thought the city would be in a better position to fix the date when Mr. Hall returned from the east. The letter was filed and settlement of the date referred to a special committee.

The Merchants bank denied the rumor that they had purchased the debentures sold by the city to Aemilius Jarvis. They were unaware of the identity of the purchaser. Their letters with the Aemilius Jarvis Co. might be inspected at any time. Filed.

Malcolm's Western Canneries wrote requesting the installation of a high pressure main, gas lamp and fire alarm box in the vicinity of the Canneries. Ald. Baker said this firm had already been advised that taxes would be put in as soon as possible. Ald. Penhale was not satisfied with such an indefinite statement. He thought the Canneries should be promised something definite. Ald. Baker said there were no lamps in stock and it was impossible immediately to comply with the Canneries' request. Ald. Penhale thought a lamp could be fixed up any old time with the material already on hand. Mr. Porter might easily fix up a lamp. The Canneries had had a pretty tough deal; why they had suffered this treatment he did not know.

There were other things in which economy might well be practised. From his own door he could see gas burning every day, not more than 15 yards from Ald. Baker's residence. Last week one well was down to 80 and another to 150, and he thought the leaks should be attended to. Ald. Baker said that according to Mr. Porter and Mr. Morrison there are no leaks in the mains. The Burns supply had been shut off, but someone turned it on again. The Mayor thought it was pretty evident that some unauthorized person had been interfering with the system. Ald. Penhale: "It's up to the chairman of the gas committee." The matter was referred to the gas commissioners, with power to act. Ald. Baker stated that the water was already available for the Canneries.

Accounts were referred to finance committee.

Reports of committees were then read. The committee appointed to report on the correspondence received from the Winnipeg Safe Works thought it advisable to have further information on the question, and instructed the clerk to wire for further data. Adopted.

Report of chief of police and pound-keeper's report adopted.

The fire, water and light report was read by Ald. Baker. The chief Hatcher reported on the condition of the chemical wagon. This showed that on January 22, the front axle broke, having a very bad flaw in the weld. The tires on all four wheels had worked very loose. Two wheels it had been found necessary to have box-wedged. The defects in the apparatus had caused the paint to chip. The fire chief was of the opinion that the material had not even been properly seasoned. Letters were read from Robert Bickle, Canadian manufacturers' agent, and from the firm's headquarters. They had sent out a new axle free of cost. As, however, the flaw in the axle was only one of the defects, the committee recommended that the report of the fire chief be forwarded to Mr. Bickle and he be asked to look into the matter at once. Adopted.

Ald. McKay read the report of the public works committee, re the right of way to Canneries. Referred to board of works committee for further report.

The chief of police requested that the council take some action in regard to clause 4, by-law 61. Referred to license, police and relief committee to make a recommendation.

The health board made a recommendation that the medical officer of health be empowered to order supplies for indigent patients. Recommendation and report adopted.

The Mayor called attention to the matter of unpaid taxes, some on real estate. They were in many cases long overdue, in some cases over two years. The solicitor stated that it was a matter for the city treasurer to attend to. The treasurer was instructed to carry out the provisions of the charter in regard to the matter.

The question of the alleged failure of the city engineer to carry out the council's instructions next came up. Ald. Penhale thought the special committee on salaries should have consulted with the members of other committees. Mr. Jackson had saved the city hundreds of dollars, and he thought someone had been working against him. Of late work had been standing still and various things requiring attention had come under his notice, notably a water connection on South Railway street. He (Ald. Penhale) liked to see a man well paid, and thought it was a fair proposition, if he were efficient. The Mayor: "It's always a popular proposition." (Laughter.) Ald. Penhale did not like to see good men thrown away. Ald. Baker stated that no man could work ten hours a day all through the winter. Yet the wonderful Mr. Jackson had been getting payment for these hours right along. A few men had been kept on. Most of these were single. If the hours of labor had been cut down, more men might have been employed. The matter largely resolved itself into a duel Alds. Penhale and Baker. Ald. Penhale passed some remark about Ald. Baker's brother-in-law having to play second fiddle. He did not believe the council should be a charitable institution. It was up to them to act in the interests of the ratepayers solely. If men who were thrown out of employment were unable to pay their bills, as Ald. Baker had stated, there was a relief department which was intended to deal with such cases. Ald. Baker thought no one wanted the city to become a charitable institution. It was better to keep the men working than to give out money in relief. Several times during the discussion the Mayor informed Ald. Penhale that he was getting away from the question at issue, which, had he been at the council meeting at which it was brought up, he would have understood. It was no fault of the council that he was not there.

The engineer was asked to make a statement. He said: "I consider I have carried out the recommendations of the committee." He intended to dispense with Mr. MacDonald's services as soon as stock-taking was over. Ald. Baker said that the engineer excused himself on the ground that there was no date on the motion. He noticed that any motion to the engineer's liking went into effect at once, otherwise be found some excuse for not carrying it out. At Ald. Baker's request the clerk brought in the pay roll. Ald. Baker pointed out that certain men had been paid for ten hours' work in December, a time of the year when it was too dark to put in so many hours. The engineer stated that not one hour had been paid for for which work had not been done. Ald. Baker was sure of the contrary. Mr. Morrison: "Then I'm a liar!" Ald. Baker: "Yes." The engineer attempted to cross to the place where Ald. Baker was standing, but was restrained, and in the course of a few minutes the atmosphere became less electric. A committee to look into the pay rolls and find out if the engineer had carried out the instructions of the special committee on salaries was suggested. Ald. Penhale thought a committee of persons outside of the council should be appointed, "as in the Calgary police case." Eventually on Ald. Baker's motion, seconded by Ald. Penhale it was decided to leave the matter to a special committee. The Mayor nominated Alds. Spencer, Forster, McKay and himself a committee to see whether the engineer has or has not carried out the salary committee's instructions, and whether the men have been overpaid.

Ald. Spencer gave notice of a by-law to regulate the sale of bread, and of one dealing with the appointment of a stipendiary magistrate.

The Mayor made renewal of his by-law to amend the price of gas to be brought up at the next regular meeting of the council.

At 10.30 the council adjourned till tonight.

In the Toils Again

(Lethbridge Herald.)

Always an unpleasant task, and in this instance a sad duty to those directly interested, was forced upon a citizen last night, when Harry Green was arrested on a warrant charged with appropriating money and other things not belonging to him.

Green has been out only four weeks after serving a three months' sentence on a similar charge, of which he was found guilty at Medicine Hat. He abused friendly counsel and the kindness extended by being allowed to occupy a room in a home where surroundings would tend to help him to keep straight by making repeated visits to other parts of the house and leaving with more personal property than was on his person previously. Last night a young man in a room adjoining that occupied by Green marked a bill which was promptly nipped by Green. This, as in other instances, was removed from the pocket.

As a result Green was arrested in a pool hall last night and is now at the barracks remanded until tomorrow morning.

LATER.—Green pleaded guilty and was given three months, hard labor.

An old resident says that this winter reminds him of the '84-'85 winter. He remembers, however, periods of warmth that year that surpass even our late mild weather. On Feb. 22, 1885, he saw cattle standing in the river near the bridge, much as they would do in the heat of summer to cool themselves.

Ignorance.

OTTAWA.—The public accounts committee are having their troubles trying to unravel the tangled threads of the Ross rifle company deal. For three hours today the committee sat and endeavored to get information out of Brigadier-General Cotton, who is "master of ordnance." Their work in this direction was rather disappointing as General Cotton had apparently no knowledge of anything in the department under his control, if his answers may be taken as evidence along that line.

His repeated "I don't know," or "You had better ask somebody else," aroused the ire of Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., who was conducting the cross-examination and inspired the members of the committee with the idea that what the witness didn't know about ordnance was remarkable seeing that his official position is "master of ordnance."

His general attitude towards the investigation was rather aptly hit off by the poet of the press gallery in the following couplets:

A MODEL WITNESS.

"Now will you kindly tell us," said
Nesbitt unto Cotton,
"The reason the Ross rifle is put down as simply rotten?"
The general he raised his head, and answered in a trice,
"I hear that the Arena has a lovely sheet of ice."

"Pray tell us all you know about
sleeveblock and firing-pin:
Is it the kind of weapon that would make the soldier win?"
The general smiled blandly (and he, sotto voce, swore)
"I wonder why," he said, "Jerome's
so hard on Evelyn Thaw."

"There's just another question," added Nesbitt, "Now can you Tell us the difference between Mark number one and two?"
The general looked very wise, then said,
"You must be balmy.
What should I know of rifles? Why!
I'm only in the army."

Mounted Police Notes.

Christian Pahl, of Josephsburg, was prosecuted a week ago yesterday for working an estray horse, the property of Thomas McFadden, a rancher. The prisoner pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs, a very light sentence. He had been working the animal for some months and, as was pointed out to him by the magistrate, might have been fined $100 for the offense. By his conduct, moreover, he had laid himself open to a charge of horse stealing.

The preliminary trial of German Brown, the white man who was concerned in the Laframboise horse stealing case has not yet taken place. Brown was known to have left Maple Creek soon after the stealing took place, but whether he went east or west was in doubt. He was traced by Sergeant Egan, first to Taber, then to Lethbridge, where his arrest was effected, after the force had been engaged on the case for about a month, and an amount of work which the general public can hardly appreciate had been entailed. Brown had one or two aliases and gave the name of Smith when arrested.

The preliminary trial should have taken place last night but has been postponed.

"I suppose in a few days now. But I'll let you know all right, never fear."

Victor Durnovo stretched out his legs and made himself quite at home, but Jocelyn did not sit down. On the contrary, she remained standing persistently and significantly.

"Maurice gone away?" he inquired.

"Yes."

"And left you all alone," in a tone of light badinage.

"I am accustomed to being left," she answered gravely.

"I don't quite like it, you know."

"You?"

She looked at him with a steady surprise which made him feel a trifle uncomfortable.

"Well, you know," he was forced to explain, shuffling the while uneasily in his chair and dropping his whip, "one naturally takes an interest in one's friends' welfare. You and Maurice are the best friends I have in Loango."

"Maurice has always spoken of you with gratitude," she said.

"To deaf ears, eh? Yes, he has reason to be grateful, though perhaps I ought not to say it. I have put him into several very good things on the coast, and it is in my power to get him into this new scheme. It is a big thing; he would be a rich man in no time."

He rose from his seat and deliberately crossed the room to the sofa where she had sat down, where he reclined, with one arm stretched out along the back of it toward her. In his other hand he held his riding whip, with which he began to stroke the skirt of her dress, which reached along the floor almost to his feet.

"Would you like him to be in it?" he asked, with a meaning glance beneath his lashes. "It is a pity to throw away a good chance; his position is not so very secure, you know."

She gave a strange little hunted glance round the room. She was wedged into a corner and could not rise without incurring the risk of his saying something she did not wish to hear. Then she leaned forward and deliberately withdrew her dress from the touch of his whip, which was, in its way, a subtle caress.

"Is he throwing away the chance?" she asked.

"No, but you are."

Then she rose from her seat and, standing in the middle of the room, faced him with a sudden gleam in her eyes.

"I do not see what it has to do with me," she said; "I do not know anything about Maurice's business arrangements and very little about his business friends."

"Then let me tell you, Jocelyn—well, then, Miss Gordon, if you prefer it—that you will know more about one of his business friends before you have finished with him. I've got Maurice more or less in my power now and it rests with you"—

At this moment a shadow darkened the floor of the veranda and an instant later Jack Meredith walked quietly in by the window.

"Enter, young man," he said dramatically, "by window—center."

"I am sorry," he went on in a different tone to Jocelyn, "to come in this unceremonious way, but the servant told me that you were on the veranda with Durnovo, and"—

He turned toward the half breed, pausing.

"And Durnovo is the man I want," weighing each word.

Durnovo's right hand was in his jacket pocket. Seeing Meredith's proffered salutation, he slowly withdrew it and shook hands.

The flash of hatred was still in his eyes when Jack Meredith turned upon him with aggravating courtesy. The pleasant, half cynical glance wandered from Durnovo's dark face very deliberately down to his jacket pocket, where the stock of a revolver was imperfectly concealed.

"We were getting anxious about you," he explained, "seeing that you did not come back. Of course, we knew that you were capable of taking care of yourself."

He was still looking innocently at the telltale jacket pocket, and Durnovo, following the direction of his glance, hastily thrust his hand into it.

"But one can never tell with a treacherous climate like this what a day may bring forth. However, I am glad to find you looking so very fit."

Victor Durnovo gave an awkward little laugh, extremely conscious of the factory clothes.

"Oh, yes; I'm all right," he said. "I was going to start this evening."

The girl stood behind them, with a flush slowly fading from her face. There are some women who become suddenly beautiful, not by the glory of a beautiful thought, not by the exaltation of a lofty virtue, but by the mere practical human flush. Jack Meredith, when he took his eyes from Durnovo's, glancing at Jocelyn, suddenly became aware of the presence of a beautiful woman.

The crisis was past, and, if Jack knew it, so also did Jocelyn. She knew that the imperturbable gentlemanliness of the Englishman had conveyed to the more passionate West Indian the simple, downright fact that in a lady's drawing room there was to be no raised voice, no itching fingers, no flash of fiery eyes.

"Yes," he said; "that will suit me splendidly. We will travel together."

He turned to Jocelyn.

"I hear your brother is away?"

"Yes, for a few days. He has gone up the coast."

Then there was a silence. They both paused, helping each other as if by prearrangement, and Victor Durnovo suddenly felt that he must go. He rose and picked up the whip which he had dropped on the matting. There was no help for it—the united wills of these two people were too strong for him.

Jack Meredith passed out of the veranda with him, murmuring something about giving him a leg up. While they were walking round the house Victor Durnovo made one of those hideous mistakes which one remembers all through life with a sudden rush of warm shame and self contempt. The very thing that was uppermost in his mind to be avoided suddenly bubbled to his lips, almost, it would seem, in defiance of his own will.

"Enter, young man," he said dramatically.

"What about the small—the smallpox?" he asked.

"We have got it under," replied Jack quietly. "We had a very bad time for three days, but we got all the cases isolated and prevented it from spreading. Of course we could do little or nothing to save them; they died."

Durnovo had the air of a whipped dog. His mind was a blank. He simply had nothing to say. The humiliation of utter self contempt was his.

"You need not be afraid to come back now," Jack Meredith went on with a strange refinement of cruelty.

And that was all he ever said about it.

"Will it be convenient for you to meet me on the beach at 4 o'clock this afternoon?" he asked when Durnovo was in the saddle.

"Yes."

"All right; 4 o'clock."

He turned and deliberately went back to the bungalow.

There are some friendships where the intercourse is only the seed which absence duly germinates. Jocelyn Gordon and Jack had parted as acquaintances; they met as friends. There is no explaining these things, for there is no gauging the depths of the human mind. There is no getting down to the little bond that lies at the bottom of the well—the bond of sympathy. There is no knowing what it is that prompts us to say, "This man or this woman of all the millions shall be my friend."

"I am sorry," he said, "that he should have had a chance of causing you uneasiness again."

Jocelyn remembered that all her life. She remembers still, and Africa has slipped away from her existence forever. It is one of the mental photographs of her memory, standing out clear and strong amid a host of minor recollections.

"I do not believe," she said, "that you know the risks you are running into. Even in the short time that Maurice and I have been here we have learned to treat the climate of western Africa with a proper respect. We have known so many people who have succumbed."

"Yes, but I do not mean to do that. In a way Durnovo's—what shall we call it?—lack of nerve is a great safeguard. He will not run into any danger."

"No, but he might run you into it."

"Not a second time, Miss Gordon. Not if we know it. Oscard mentioned a desire to wring Durnovo's neck. I am afraid he will do it one of these days."

"The mistake that most people make," the girl went on more lightly, "is a want of care. You cannot be too careful, you know, in Africa."

"I am careful; I have reason to be."

She was looking at him steadily, her blue eyes searching his.

"Yes?" she said slowly, and there were a thousand questions in the word.

"It would be very foolish for me to be otherwise," he said. "I am engaged to be married, and I came out here to make the wherewithal. This expedition is an expedition to seek the wherewithal."

"Yes," she said, "and therefore you must be more careful than any one else, because, you see, your life is something which does not belong to you, but with which you are trusted. I mean if there is anything dangerous to be done let some one else do it. What is she like? What is her name?"

"Her name is Millicent—Millicent Chyne."

"And—what is she like?"

Cash System in the West.

(From Dry Goods Review.)

In Western Canada the outstanding feature of the year just closed has been the curtailment of credit by the retailers and the general introduction in many parts of the country of a strictly cash system of doing business. For three years or more there has been a steady movement in this direction, but the last year has seen scores of merchants in all parts of the west, but particularly in Manitoba take the final plunge and insist upon cash being paid for every purchase before it is taken from the store.

A large number have made the change and there is no doubt that the success that is attending their venture will induce hundreds who are now in the "almost persuaded" class to follow their example. This is one of the good results of a rather unfavorable year, and there is reason for the belief that of the many effects of the late slight depression it will be the most lasting.

Credit has been the bane of the West, and, like most abuses which are necessary under certain conditions, it has lingered on long after the excuses for its existence have disappeared. In the early days when the country was younger credit was, perhaps, absolutely necessary. The West has indeed been built up on a foundation of credit. The first settlers were financed by the implement companies and the general stores until their crops were marketed and the same thing is happening in the case of the poorer homesteaders in the newer districts at the present day. But the practise continued in the older districts much longer. The farmers had developed bad habits. Having been accustomed to a year's credit at the stores in the earlier days of the country when they were hard up and unable to pay their bills when due they expected the same accommodation in more prosperous times. In order to do business on this basis the poor retailer had to get accommodation at his bank or long credit from his wholesale house. To insure against bad debts and to cover interest charges on overdue accounts long profits were absolutely necessary and this gave the catalogue house an opening to undersell for cash.

From time to time spasmodic efforts were made to cope with this evil, but in times of prosperity the average merchant is apt to be careless about such things and no organized movement could be inaugurated. Here and there a merchant would start a cash system on a system of monthly payments, but as his brother merchants did not follow his example he lost good customers thereby and in most cases gave up the system after a short time.

Then came the land boom. Farmers began to buy land and persons living in towns to speculate in town lots, often leaving their store bills unpaid in order to have funds for speculative or investment purposes. It was bad enough when a merchant had to wait a year for his money, but it was much worse when at the end of the year he saw the crop money that should have paid his store paid down as a first payment on another quarter section of land.

Three years ago this was the state of affairs and in all parts of the West it was evident that the country merchants were heartily sick of doing business on this plan. In a time of general prosperity they were hard pressed for money. Strange paradox of prosperity—the more money the farmer got for his crops the less could the merchant get from him in payment of his bill. He was investing every available dollar in land. The prevailing land hunger added to the merchant's troubles.

RETAIL MERCHANT'S WORK

Three years ago the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada was formed and one of its avowed objects was the curtailment of credit. Much valuable educational work was done by this Association and a determined effort was made to induce dealers throughout the West to shut down on credit entirely from November to April each year. This movement met with some temporary success, but, on the whole, the results were far from being satisfactory. It seemed impossible to get the dealers to act together in this matter unless some compelling force were exerted. A few enthusiasts began to look to the wholesalers for help to force the cash system upon the dealers, but this would have been a move of more than doubtful wisdom and the wholesalers took no concerted action.

Then came the summer and fall of 1907, with a slight business depression, tight money and uncertain crop prospects. The banks began to force their customers to reduce their overdrafts, wholesalers were unable to get their usual line of accommodation at the banks, and were forced to call upon their customers to reduce their indebtedness. Pressure was exerted upon their customers by all the wholesale houses, and the retailers were forced to take some action. The result was a general effort to collect accounts and a refusal of credit. Merchants were anxious to shut down on the credit system, they were fully convinced of the wisdom of a cash system and they needed only the compelling influence of circumstances to cause a concerted movement. Up to the present the movement has been most general in Manitoba and southern and eastern Saskatchewan, but it is ignored rapidly and every day one hears of another dealer who has made the plunge.

A few of the retailers who have shut down on credit and inaugurated either a cash system, a system of monthly payments or a coupon system, the coupons being sold either for cash or a note are the following: Hamelin Bros., with their long string of stores in Manitoba and Saskatchewan; McRae & Williams, Plumas, Man.; Clingan, Semes & Carscadden, Virden, Man.; Merchants, Limited, Cartwright, Man.; The Stovin Co., Waskada, Man.; all the dealers in Goodlands, Man.; all the dealers in Gladstone, Man.; all the dealers in Grand View, Man., and Gilbert Plains, Man.; Montgomery Bros., Deloraine, Man. The movement is general on the Estevan line in Saskatchewan and in many other parts of that province. In Carnduff and Oxbow the dealers are using the coupon system.

As every dark cloud has a silver lining, so from the tight money market and business depression of the last few months has come the promise of the Western Retailer's release from the bondage of the credit system.

PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE

Mrs. Jenkins had missed Mrs. Brady from her accustomed haunts, and hearing several startling rumors concerning her, went in search of her old friend.

"They tell me you're workin' 'ard night and day, Sarah Ann?" she queried.

"Yes, I'm workin' 'ard and pullin' the whiskers out of that old scoundrel of a husban' of mine, and under bonds to keep the peace for the magistrate said that if I come afore him ag'in, or laid me 'ands on the old man, 'e'd fine me forty shillin's!"

"And so you're workin' hard to keep out of mischief?"

"I'm what? Not much. I'm workin' 'ard to save up the fine!"—Penny Pictorial.

"Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that I have used $18.00 worth of Psychine, and as a result was cured of very serious throat and lung trouble.

My case was a most difficult one, and the doctors had practically said that I could not get well. I tried Psychine, and it did me so much good that I continued its use until I had taken $18.00 worth, with the result that I am now a new man physically. I have gained thirty-five pounds.

"It is with the greatest confidence that I recommend Psychine to all who are afflicted with throat or lung trouble.

Stop Looking Glum.

Chirp up!

Quit looking at things as if there were dire destruction within the next few days.

You're only scared. But you help to scare others who would view things more sensibly if you didn't run down the corners of your mouth.

There is nothing to be glum about. The spring business is just about to open up, and see that you are ready for it.

The institutions that have their fingers on the pulse of the world have put their watches in their pockets. They can tell from the decided renewal of the ordinary beat that things are all right again.

The bank of England and the bank of France have reduced their bank rate to four per cent. And they know. If they act that way, you needn't spoil good business by scaring yourself.

On Jan. 4 the bank deficit in the States was eleven millions and a half. Just one week later this had changed to a surplus of six millions.

The United States actually requires less money to transact its business than it did a year ago. Gold is being returned to Europe.

Only the other day the New York Central had no difficulty in raising thirty million dollars for new equipment.

Medicine Hat has not felt the strain like the other cities and towns of America. Those of you who know conditions in surrounding cities know that. And the indications of fuller times immediately are many.

Stop pitying yourself and you'll have nothing to pity yourself for.

And success brings success. Look as if you are doing business and you'll do more.

Advertise now because you need the business. Advertise in order to show people you are doing business as usual. Look poor business and you'll get poor business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A letter has been received at The Times office from the Dry Goods Review, the largest and best known trade paper in Canada. It says in part: "We notice with pleasure that a recent issue of The Times advocates the adoption of a cash system. The Review is a warm advocate of the cash system whenever practicable." On another page will be found an article from the January number of the Review dealing with this question.

W. A. E. Moyer, advertising manager for McLaren & Co., St. Catharines, Ont., says: "It is a well-known fact amongst those who are 'next' that the country weekly newspaper is one of the best advertising mediums in existence today. It goes to the home where, perhaps, it is the only paper, and where there is so little reading matter, it is quite to be expected that the very best use will be made of what is available. The natural consequence is that every single advertisement in that newspaper is carefully read by every member of the family and its adherents, perhaps several times over, and what those ads. say must be impressed indelibly upon the minds of the readers. One can easily understand of what good effect an advertisement in such a medium would be."

Regina sold her bonds at 94.382—or she thought she had sold them. Then some mean man showed them where the advertising had been illegal, and the sale is off with $2500 expenses in connection with it.

According to the report of the Inland Revenue Dept. the Calgary district, in which is Medicine Hat, appears to be the only district in Canada selling "genuine" milk. Of the thirty tests not one is reported watered or skimmed, and nowhere else in Canada has the local inspector returned the same report. It looks as though it was the analyst and not the milk that was under test. Good old analyst!

A telegraph report from Leamington, Ont., says a gas well has been sunk there with a pressure of 600 lbs. The report goes on to say: "There is only one well in the Dominion that approaches this well in point of volume, and that is in the Athabasca River." The writer of that only took one guess. Every well in Medicine Hat can show that pressure, and the big advantage here is that the pressure exists wherever a well is sunk. Around Leamington the gas is in pockets, and a well five yards away from the new one might never reach gas.

Sinking a gas well in Southern Ontario is only an experiment until the gas is found—just like it is at Calgary or Lethbridge, but in Medicine Hat any old place will do.

The Lethbridge Herald talks of 300 K. C.'s recently appointed in Ontario, and ridicules the large number. If the Herald is possessed of the facts it must know that the number is only a little over half of 300—namely, 188.

It was about up to the Conservatives to get in a K.C. or two of their own. For thirty years the Liberals have been appointing K.C.'s from their own party only, until the title was becoming a farce. There are a great many more than 188 Conservative lawyers in Ontario who should have received the title before scores of those honored by the Liberal government.

Where is that government commission that was announced almost a year ago, as appointed to look into the express rates and conditions? Was it only another bluff?

The Southern Alberta Land Company has presented a report in London, Eng., stating that they hope to offer irrigated land in March 1909.

Chief English, of Calgary, escaped in the recent investigation into his department as far as legal punishment goes, but Judge Stuart reproved him strongly enough to show that the Citizens' League had grounds for complaint.

The News says:

"The Times says it cost twenty-five dollars to get the opinion of James Muir, K.C., of Calgary. Mr. Muir's bill was received last week, (before The Times was issued) and it amounts to just Ten Dollars. This isn't the first time that the editor of The Times has tried to show that he knows more about other people's business than they do themselves."

For the information of The News, we would refer them to the front page of last week's Times where the correct price and explanation of the editorial $25 is, in a special article by itself. The editorial was printed before the council meeting of Monday night. We might say, a la News that this is not the first time the editor of The News has wilfully misrepresented the editor of The Times. But as we are not competing with The News in personalities, we leave it at that.

And now the ratepayers are wondering how much bluff there was in Ald. Forster's disastrous statement, "No Pay—No Work."

The News, in its circumscribed sphere, cannot see the difference between THE TIMES and THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES. Again last week we have an exhibition of its attempts to answer The Times by publishing personalities about the editor. That's the only kind of journalism the editor of The News knows anything about.

It is, however, becoming more evident every day that Medicine Hat is much too large for that style of editorial work.

From present appearances we have a pretty good council in spite of The News' efforts to pull them into Ald. Forster's salary grab, and the statement that they were afraid when it came to a "show down." Their unwillingness to be bullied into it by Ald. Forster's paper shows that they have pretty straight ideas of their own, and are not influenced by that Ald. and his paper, whether he knocks or tries to lead them.

Advertisers who believe that circulation is the true test of value for advertising can see The Times' lists any time, and always had that privilege. Come in and take a look and convince yourself. Also convince yourself of the smallness of our "dead" circulation—including all papers sent further away than 75 miles, papers never ordered, and cancelled subscriptions which are continued in spite of the cancellation. We have practically none of this circulation which is of no value to you, and yet which is always included where "circulation" is the sole cry used for advertising.

As an illustration of how The Times is jumping ahead, 28 names were added right in the city during the month of January. In addition to this 10 names from post offices within 80 miles were added. This does not include new names outside of the district as we do not consider them of much value to the advertiser.

The school board accepted a figure for its bonds on Friday, which seems to be rather too small in view of the fact that 95 and 97 have been offered several places within the past ten days. Aemilius Jarvis' price was only 84, which increases the general belief that the Merchants Bank and Jarvis may be working together.

Medicine Hat.

Alberta's Growing Town Aspires to be Manufacturing Centre.

(Monetary Times.)

A Westerner with the Conservatism of the East, and Easterner with the enthusiasm of the West—such a man is Mr. J. T. Hall, Publicity Commissioner for Medicine Hat, and formerly secretary of the Hamilton, Ont. Board of Trade. Mr. Hall is now in the East on an interesting mission, and called on the Monetary Times to explain its features.

"I have come to tell the manufacturers of Eastern Canada that the West as a future manufacturing country does not end with the borders of Manitoba. West of Winnipeg there must be in time to come, a manufacturing centre. The development of a large area of Alberta, and the Eastern portions of British Columbia have yet to be accomplished."

SOME REASONS FOR THE MANUFACTURER.

"And you think Medicine Hat is to be one of our Western manufacturing towns?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Hall, "for several reasons. We are in an ideal situation; we have an ideal climate; our transportation facilities are good and, better than all, we have an unique natural gas supply."

Mr. Hall mentioned that many people imagined Medicine Hat's natural gas to be a sort of exhibition novelty. "This is not so," he continued. "The Canadian Pacific Railway do not use in their Medicine Hat yards one pound of coal. The gas supplies light and heat. Its price for the manufacturer is extraordinarily small; and for domestic purposes it is enviable. In one instance, I know the cost of lighting, heating and cooking for a ten-roomed house in Medicine Hat, was eighty cents for two months."

WILL TELL THE CANADIAN CLUBS.

Mr. Hall will address several Canadian clubs and similar institutions in the east. His words should carry weight for he is not an insane Western optimist. "I am a Westerner who sees the West through Eastern eyes." But he is none the less enthusiastic. "When Rudyard Kipling came to Medicine Hat, we all agreed not to tell him that Medicine Hat is the best place on earth. We allowed him to discover that for himself!"

DECLARED INNOCENT.

Regina, Jan. 31.—After being out nearly five hours, the jury at 10 o'clock last night returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of the C.P.R. engineer Hinchey, charged with manslaughter in connection with the Fushimi train wreck.

Previous to the foreman of the jury declaring the decision arrived at, his lordship Judge Prendergrast, warned the large crowd present in court against making any demonstration, as soon however, as the crowd, which was largely composed of railway men, was clear of the court house, a remarkable demonstration took place, the two acquitted men, Hinchey and Alexander, were carried, amid tumultuous cheering, to one of the city hotels.

RESULT DEPENDED ON A WATCH

The result of the trial hinged almost entirely upon a stem-wind watch of the accused engineer, which the defense claimed was of a description liable to sudden eccentricities. A great deal of evidence was called upon this point, a number of instnces being given of similar watches having lost or gained time.

Hinchey, who gave evidence in his own behalf, stated that it was 30 seconds after eight o'clock when he reached Fushimi siding where, according to his orders, he was to remain until eight for the freight.

Industrial Canada.

(Dr. Arthur Shadwell in the London Times.)

Comparatively little attention has hitherto been paid on this side of the Atlantic to the development of manufacturing industries in Canada; but it is a subject of great interest from several points of view. It has interest for the capitalist, the workman, the statesman and the students of economics. A mighty process is going on in the Dominion, which is rapidly becoming a manufacturing country of the first class, with unlimited possibilities of development. The reason why that side of Canadian enterprise has not attracted more attention is that it has been overshadowed by the great agricultural expansion, which has riveted all eyes That is the case in Canada itself; everywhere the talk is of the west, of the land taken up and brought under cultivation, of the number of settlers of the output of wheat and other agricultural produce, past, present and to come. Everywhere the visitor arriving from the Atlantic is asked the same question: Are you going west? And generally he goes west, if he can spare the time and is duly impressed by the vast scale of everything, the endless railway tracks, the prodigious wheat fields, the great granaries, called in the American tongue "elevators," and the new towns springing up in the wilderness, all growing, growing. The west calls the young men and women from the eastern provinces and immigrants too; they have helped and are helping to make it. Some are shed on the way in the large towns, some come back to them; but the west is the great goal. In Europe, naturally enough, more of that plan is heard than anything else. The returning traveller talks and writes of it, the intending emigrant thinks of it. Canada is a thirsty land crying for human beings to make it fruitful. There a man is welcome; he can get for nothing a stretch of fertile ground, and by the bounty of God and his strong right arm he can with great certainty grow a profitable crop on it. He can begin with nothing, and, if he be of the right sort, can within two or three years stand firmly on his feet, an independent and substantial man. Some of those who begin with least succeed best. So vast is the expanse available that, in spite of the rapid increase of settlement and the large scale to which it has attained, only a small fraction of the fertile and workable area has yet been touched.

These things seize the imagination; they have made Canada a great name in Europe, a greater name than Canadians, who still fancy their country neglected or undervalued, fully understand. It is widely known to the young and enterprising as the land of promise beyond all others, and it is becoming more widely known every day. Their ideas are vague, but they look to the west; everybody looks to the west. That is quite right. Canada's first and greatest asset is the soil, and her first business is to get it tilled and made productive. And it is in the interest of the over-populated old world, and of England in particular, to help that process, for what the soil produces is food; it only needs development to feed multitudes. But Canada is not merely a large wheat field or cattle plain; farming is only the greatest of its economic interests. All the others which follow—transport, manufactures, mines—are being developed with equal energy, and have already attained large dimensions; how large and how rapidly growing few people realize. The fact that there are railroads, factories and mines in Canada is doubtless recognized in a way; the world has heard at least of the Canadian Pacific railway and the Klondike. But the all-around character of the economic development, its scope and pace are certainly not understood. That is especially true of the manufacturing element, with which these articles are concerned. We know that there are manufactures in Canada, but they are regarded as small concerns of a somewhat exotic character and carrying on a rather precarious existence. Even intelligent and well-informed Canadians speak disparagingly of the manufacturing interest as a self-assertive element with an exaggerated idea of its own importance. Politics, which touch everything in Canada, have a good deal to do with this attitude; but there seems also to be some real failure to appreciate what is going on.

Whatever of artificiality there may have been or may still be, in the process of building up Canadian industries, the movement as a whole is natural and inevitable. Canada is bound to become a great manufacturing country by reason of its endowments, the endowments of the land and of the people who have it in them. The land is handicapped in certain respects, which will be mentioned later on, but in others it is richly endowed. Of the three materials factors requisite for industrial production—raw material, power and transport—Canada is much stronger in the last two than in the first, though she has great abundance in materials in foodstuffs, wood and minerals. The possession of raw materials, however, tends to diminish in importance with the development of transport, and in that respect Canada is singularly favored by her magnificent system of inland waterways. She shares the chain of great lakes with the United States, to which they are of incalculable value, but she enjoys the additional and enormous advantage of the ocean outlet by the St. Lawrence. Some day, too, the great inland sea, formed by Hudson's Bay, which cuts the whole country in two will be brought into play, and will provide a new oceanic route to the interior; the project is already in shape and seriously contemplated. Another natural advantage which greatly facilitates the problem of land transport, is the general evenness of surface prevailing over large areas. Yet this is combined with sufficient change of level in the water courses to produce an industrial asset of the highest value—namely, cheap water power on an enormous scale and widely distributed. The subject is so large and important that it requires separate and detailed treatment. Here it is only mentioned as one of the dominant factors in the evolution of the country. Canada is the land of waters, of lake and river and sea, beyond all others; Our Lady of Waters would be a better title than our Lady of Snows; and this character, which lends so much charm to the scenery, has an economic value already great, but destined to be much greater.

The combination of water transport and water power on a unique scale is so favorable to industrial development that it could fail to take effect only if the people were wholly devoid of capacity of bent in that direction. But they are the very reverse. I shall give evidence hereafter to show that the Canadian people possess in a high degree all the qualities that have made Great Britain and the United States the foremost manufacturing countries. They possess industry, enterprise, initiative, organizing power and inventiveness; and they have the bent for manufacturing. I believe that nothing could keep them from it. Men are constantly starting manufactures in Canada without previous knowledge or experience from some sheer innate driving force; and, if they make mistakes, as they must, they stick to it, learn, improve and succeed. It is quite remarkable. Manufacturing is not every man's business; the mere pursuit of money does not account for it; there are easier ways of making money, and to fail is easier than to succeed. An essential factor for success is competent directions. Capital and labor are merely instruments; they may be multiplied indefinitely and produce nothing but failure unless they are rightly applied, and that is the function of direction. Modern economists recognize its importance, and some maintain that profits entirely depend on it, and ought consequently to go to it. What is not generally recognized is that the faculty of direction is a gift which cannot be commanded at will. It is the faculty of generalship, of mastering men and means of applying them to the end in view, which in this case is production. The expression "captains of industry" is not only picturesque, it is profoundly appropriate. The faculty is inborn; it may be cultivated and improved, like others, but it cannot be altogether acquired—wherein lies the reason why state or public concerns are often failures. A private concern must have competent direction or drop out; a public one badly directed does not drop out, it goes on badly.

Now the Canadians appear to me to possess the faculty of industrial direction in an exceptional degree; and I find the evidence for that not only in individual cases, but in the fact that concerns started in Canada by American and British enterprise have a general tendency to pass into Canadian hands. Three influences can be detected as contributing to their character. The first is hereditary disposition; the second is the modifying influence of the climate, or the natural environment; the third is the stimulus of American example. The two first produce a distinctive and particularly effective blend. The qualities of the British, and especially the Scottish strain, which is very strong in Eastern Canada, display themselves in steady, cautious effort which makes for stability. The influence of the climate, which resembles that of the contigous American States, but is less marked, is seen in a tendency to greater daring and a fondness for novelty and large designs. Doubtless, the size of the country and the large scale of nature, ever present to the Canadian as to the American consciousness, have something to do with this tendency. Within limits it is good, but when over-stimulated by American example it becomes a weakness. American aspect broods like a great shadow over every aspect of Canadian life, especially in the province of Ontario, and it unconsciously affects every activity. On the whole its influence is unfavorable, and in some things—notably in political life—it is deplorable. Canadians see it themselves, and deplore it. In the industrial sphere it is less strong than in some places, but it exists. It shows itself in ill-considered, and over-large designs, reckless finance, hurry and indifference to quality in the pursuits of quantity of output. Canadians need no stimulus; they are naturally quite adventurous enough without it. Fortunately it is kept in check by the steadier British element, already mentioned, and to a much slighter extent by the French, which is not prominent industrially except in the supply of manual labor, but is a valuable factor so far as it goes. As Canada grows I think the American influence much more likely to wane than to wax with the development of the distinctive Canadian type, which lies between the British and the American and combines many of the best qualities of both.

With such endowments, human and material, a great industrial development is, I submit, absolutely certain. It is already in progress. The number of persons returned by the census of 1901 as employed in manufactures was 344,035, which is just one-twelfth of the whole population over ten years of age. The census does not contain data which would enable one to make a statistical comparison of this group with others, but it evidently represents a numerically important section of the population. In the United States, with its enormous manufacturing activity the proportion is only between one eighth and one-ninth; in other words the industrial interest in relation to population is not half as great again as in Canada. In England, itself, which lives mainly by manufactures, it is not much more than double, so far as an estimate can be made. These facts prove that Canada is already no infant among manufacturing countries, but more than half grown up. The amount of capital invested in manufactures was in 1901, about £90,000,000 and the value of products £96,000,000. And growth is going on at a very rapid rate. Between 1881 and 1901 the amount of capital increased from £33,000,000 to £90,010,000; and the expansion took place mainly in the larger concerns, having a production value of over £10,000,000 per annum; the increase of capital in them was from £17,000,000 to £67,000,000. During the five years following 1901 the number of persons employed in manufactures has increased at the rate of nearly ten thousand a year, and the amount of wages paid by upwards of £2,000,000 a year. Statistics are impressive if there are not too many of them, and perhaps I had better leave the few I have given to tell the story of industrial expansion in their own way. They sufficiently corroborate what has been said above, and prove, so far as figures can, that manufactures are no small and exotic affair in the Dominion, but a great and rapidly growing interest. At present the process is going on very actively. The home market is expanding with the growth of population, and the increasing wealth won from the soil furnishes the means for developing mechanical production. The tide of western settlement which has been, and is flowing so strongly, sends back a reflex wave to the industrial centres, to be presently described, in the eastern provinces. The one is the complement of the other, and the pace seems much more likely to be accelerated than diminished in the near future. At the present time the general financial stress is, perhaps, affecting Canada rather acutely; but that is a temporary condition which does not obscure the wider prospect.

Baking Tests of Western Wheat.

(Free Press.)

A preliminary report on baking tests of flour, made from the grades of wheat in the Manitoba inspection division, crop of 1907, has been made by Charles Saunders, Dominion cerealist. Mr. Saunders says:

The official standard samples of wheat of the various grades received from the western grain standards board last November were ground early in December, but the baking tests of the flour were postponed until the present month, since it would have been quite unfair to publish results obtained before either the wheat or the flour had been allowed any reasonable chance to improve with age.

Some of the most important results from the baking tests, which have just been completed, are here given. The tests were made in tins with sides about half the height of an average loaf. When tins with high sides are used the flour usually shows higher water absorption and produces lighter bread, but when the dough is baked in the form of the English "cottage" loaf the water absorption and volume of bread are generally lower than when tins with sides are employed. The type of tin used in these experiments epresents, therefore, the mean between the two extremes. All the samples of flour were baked from four to six times and the figures given represent the average results obtained. The figures for water absorption, volume and color of bread, are as follows:

	Water absorbed Per cent.	Vol. of loaf*	Color of bread
No. 1 Hard	65.5	...492	...98
No. 1 Northern	67.	...455	...96
No. 2 Northern	66.	...440	96
No. 3 Northern	67.5	...384	...88
No. 4	68.	...398	...83
No. 5	68.5	...367	...80
No. 6	69.	...364	...70

*Cubic centimetres from 100 grams of flour.

The flours, when tested, though low in moisture, had not quite dried out to the usual condition of flour kept in mid-winter in a heated room in Ottawa. Allowance for this extra water, has, therefore been made, and the figures given above have been calculated on the basis of flour containing 7.75 per cent. of moisture. This makes the figures comparable with those obtained in other years in this laboratory.

A SUMMARY.

The summing up of all the observations made on the flour and bread (namely, water absorbed, water retained, volume, shape and texture of loaf and form of crust) gives the following figures for baking strength:

No. 1 Hard	92
No. 1 Northern	88
No. 2 Northern	88
No. 3 Northern	80
No. 4	81
No. 5	77
No. 6	77

Taking the color of the bread also into consideration, the flours may be given the following marks for bread making:

No. 1 Hard	94
No. 1 Northern	90
No. 2 Northern	90
No. 3 Northern	82
No. 4	82
No. 5	78
No. 6	75

The complete details as to the method of determining baking strength and value for bread making have already been given to the public in Bulletin No. 57 of the experimental farm series on "Quality in Wheat." A full explanation of them is, therefore, unnecessary here.

COMMENT.

A few comments upon the figures obtained seem desirable. An examination of results shows that the flours fall naturally into three groups.

The first group consists of the three upper grades (No. 1 Hard, Nos. 1 and 2 Northern), which yield strong flour of good color. No. 1 Northern showed a somewhat higher water absorption than No. 1 Hard, but the latter gave loaves of larger volume and showed its superiority in other ways as well.

The second group contains the two grades, No. 3 Northern and No. 4. The flours obtained from these grades are of about equal value, but the yield was about 3½ per cent. greater from No. 3 Northern than from No. 4. They are both distinctly lower than the upper grades in strength and in color; and in spite of their high water absorption they cannot be ranked as strictly first-class from the standpoint of the commercial baker. No doubt a certain amount of high grade flour could be obtained from No. 3 Northern in large mills, but at this date a good yield of such flour seems impossible. In many cases wheat improves so much with age (for the making of strong flour) when stored under good conditions that No. 3 Northern may, perhaps, be serviceable for the production of strong flour of good color in the course of a few months. At the present date these two grades yield good household flour, which should be satisfactory to anyone not requiring a product of high strength.

The third group consists of grades 5 and 6. The official standard samples of these grades, as tested, cannot be recommended for milling purposes, though it is probable that some good flour could be made from some exceptional lots of No. 5, if the low grade has been given to them on account of the shrivelled skin of the wheat and not because the kernels were lacking in plumpness. Badly "frosted" samples weighing less than 60 lbs. to the bushel I should not expect to yield good flour.

Mullen Committed.

(Moose Jaw Times.)

Macleod, Jan. 27—W. F. Mullen, C.P.R. operator at Pincher Creek, who allowed two freight trains to meet in a head-on collision at Brocket, on the night of Dec. 22, 1907, by negligence when on duty, was today committed for trial at the next sittings of the Supreme Court of Alberta for manslaughter, by H. Primrose.

The evidence at the preliminary trial disclosed the facts in effect that the accused was not attending to duty at the time he was called from Cranbrook. The eastbound and westbound freights collided and caused the death of F. Ormsbee, brakeman.

It appeared from the evidence that every duty was neglected, and a great deal of light was thrown on the facts by the evidence given today. The case is exciting a great deal of interest in railroad circles.

More Terrible Than War!
More terrible than war, famine or pestilence is that awful destroyer, that hydra-headed monster, Consumption, that annually sweeps away more of earth's inhabitants than any other single disease known to the human race.
"It is only a cold, a trifling cough," say the careless, as the irritation upon the delicate mucous membrane causes them to hack away with an irritable tickling of the throat. When the irritation settles on the mucous surface of the throat, a cough is the result. To prevent Bronchitis or Consumption of the Lungs, do not neglect a cough however slight as the irritation spreading throughout the delicate lining of the sensitive air passages soon leads to fatal results. If on the first appearance of a cough or cold you would take a few doses of you would save yourself a great deal of unnecessary suffering. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the life-giving properties of the pine trees of Norway, and for Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough and all Throat and Lung affections it is a specific. Be sure when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to get it. Don't be humbugged into taking something else. Price 25 cts.
Miss Lena Johnston, Toledo, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for throat troubles after taking numerous other remedies, and I must say that nothing can take the place of it. I would not be without a bottle of it in the house."

ROBERT GANTHONY

As an entertainer and actor has appeared in the Lyceum Theatre, when he was a member of Sir Henry Irving's Company; at the Egyptian Hall, in conjunction with Maskelyne and Cooke; at the Alhambra, Palace Theatre, etc., etc.

It would be quite impossible, if desirable, to print private letters which follow nearly every entertainment, but it might be mentioned, as an evidence of social success, that Mr. Ganthony has had the honor of entertaining His Majesty, King Edward, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, to whom he was presented. Has lunched with and entertained their Majesties the late King and Queen of Denmark in Copenhagen. He was chosen to accompany Mr. W. E. Gladstone on his historic voyage in the "Tantallon Castle," entertaining all the distinguished people at every city which he visited.

First Appearance in Canada a Triumphal Success.

Winnipeg Free Press—Englishmen in Winnipeg will be glad to learn that Robert Ganthony will visit city.

Montreal Gazette—As a comedian, he is of the first order, with a fund of delicious absurdities that kept mirth rippling until it broke into unrestrained laughter and applause.

Montreal Daily Witness—As a lightning sketcher and quick change artist, he excels. The whole of the entertainment delighted everyone present, and fully sustained this talented artist's reputation.

Montreal Star—There was a show at Stanley Hall last night. Robert Ganthony was the show. Everybody seemed to have a good time, and Robert had the best of all.

Montreal Daily Herald—His numbers were enthusiastically encored by the large and fashionable audience.

And speaking of versatile actors, have you ever heard Mr. Robert Ganthony's imitation of a boarding house school girl's performances on the mandolin? If you haven't had that felicity, has amiable fate ever afforded you the opportunity of hearing Mr. Ganthony's wonderful impersonation of the three characters in a French father-in-law farce? IN LABOR CIRCLES

[This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

The Calgary exhibition building committee has decided to renew the union wages on February 10. The reduced wages were pointed out as necessary in view of the fact that much of the work was being provided only in order to give many men work to do. In many cases the laborers were unskilled and the cold weather interfered with the amount done. The unions met and considered the decision of the committee satisfactory.

Keir Hardie, M.P., writing in the Labor Leader on the socialist and labor movement in Canada says: "If only the socialists and trade unionists could find some common platform on which to stand their progress would be very rapid. There are four men in Canada—P. M. Draper, Ottawa; James Simpson, Toronto; A. W. Puttee, Winnipeg; J. H. Hawthornewaite, M.L.A., Nanaimo, who, if they could meet and come to an understanding, would unite the forces all over the Dominion. A preliminary which would facilitate matters would be a frank declaration of socialistic principles. "Mr. Hardie believes Mr. Hawthornewaite is destined to fill a commanding position in the politics of the Dominion."

A short time ago a New York Post reporter asked Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L., if he had any stocks, bonds or securities anything from which he could clip coupons?

"Not a share of anything. I have not an investment. I have no estate, and when I die all I will leave my family will be $550, my Cigarmakers' union insurance. I have no other property. I do not care for money. I believe I can get the few things that I want—if not as president of the American Federation, at my trade or some other work. I am poor. I am proud to say that I am poor."

Mr. Gompers said that "such a thing as a servant in the Gompers household never had been known."

William D. Haywood is no longer secretary and treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners. Ernest Mills has been elected to the position by the executive board, and now fills the office. It is rumored that Haywood is out for good, and that he will not in future be associated with the organization in which he has been recognized as the leading spirit, but this is denied by his successor. The change took place some time ago, but announcement of it was deferred until it became known that Haywood was no longer at headquarters, and a rumor got into circulation that there had been a split between him and the members of the executive board.

Haywood is in New York lecturing to large audiences, and says his mission is to bring together all American trade unionists, no matter of what school of thought. As there is an effort being put forth at the present time to unite the metalliferous and coal miner unions into one body and affiliate the Western Federation with the A. F. of L., many think this is Haywood's silent, unannounced mission.

The matter was before the executive council of the A.F. of L., which met at Washington this week, but no announcement as to the decision has yet been made.

Fifty-eight years ago last week, in London, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor first saw the light of day. As the head of the greatest organization of workingmen in the world, he is now an international figure, and the recipient of congratulations, not only from other labor leaders, but from men high in the world of commerce, literature and government. Recent attacks made upon his character and methods have served only to augment the respect in which he is held by millions of his fellow citizens. Gompers was born in London, January 27, 1850, the son of a cigarmaker. He attended school for four years and this was the extent of his formal education, with the exception of a few terms at a night school while working in his father's cigar shop. At the age of 13 Gompers came to America, settled in New York city, and in time became a naturalized citizen of the United States. When only a lad of 14 Gompers began his career as a labor leader by aiding in the organization of the Cigarmakers' International Union, of which he later became secretary and president. In 1881 he was the pioneer of the organization of the American Federation of Labor, and has been its executive head since that time, with the exception of two years. The great labor leader is a man of scholarly, refined tastes, and his appearance is that of a college president, rather than a labor agitator. He is a short, bulky stout man, with a big head, set on square shoulders. His expressive face bespeaks intellect, determination and a wide charity. He is a constant smoker and puffs his cigars in the energetic way that marks all his actions. He is a member of no church or religious organization, although in New York he was a regular attendant at the meetings of Dr. Felix Adler's Ethical Culture Society. He watches closely all labor legislation, and frequently appears before congressional committees to argue the cause of organized labor, in its relation to bills affecting the interests of workers. Labor men throughout the land have benefited by his activities and probably will continue to do so for many years to come, since president Gompers, at the threshold of his 59th year, retains to a wonderful extent all the mental and physical vigor of a man twenty years younger.

LABOR REVIEW FOR THE YEAR.

Ottawa, Jan. 28—This month's issue of the Labor Gazette contains an extended review of the industrial and labor conditions throughout Canada during the calendar year 1907. The condition of industry and of general employment is described in the opening paragraph of the article in part, as follows:

During the first nine months of 1907 the general prosperity of trade and industry and the very active conditions of employment that were more pronounced in 1906 than in any previous year in the history of the Dominion were continued without abatement. Prices and wages, which went steadily upward in 1906, reached still higher levels in the spring and summer of 1907.

With the close of the summer season, however, the growing stringency in the money markets of the world began to be felt in Canada in the way of checking the rapid increase in production and equipment, which had been uninterrupted for some time before. The yield of wheat and grain in the northwest provinces and in Ontario also, showed a falling off as compared with 1906, and although the Atlantic fisheries and coal mines had an exceptionally busy year throughout, with labor in active demand, and though the volume of traffic and the earnings of the railway companies were the largest ever recorded, the output of the manufactured goods and of the various metals was less in the closing months of the year than in the corresponding season of 1906. The lumbering industry both in British Columbia and in Ontario and the eastern provinces was also quiet throughout the autumn, with preparations under way for a smaller cut than last year.

With the close of the season of outdoor activity, more than usual of the unemployed were reported in certain of the larger centres, though the prolongation of mild weather in western Canada allowed an unusually large amount of land to be prepared for the season of 1908. During the closing weeks of the year there was a noticeable improvement in the general tone of the labor market and in industrial and commercial circles following upon the somewhat easier financial conditions. The outlook for 1908 was regarded as very favorable in view of the large amount of railway construction and other work in progress, the vast extent of land still unoccupied in western Canada, and the prevailing opinion that the money shortage would be overcome.

The issue also contains a special review of the trades disputes occurring in Canada during 1907. Altogether 149 trade disputes, affecting 34,694 workpeople, and causing a loss of 613,986 working days, occurred in 1907, compared with 188 disputes affecting 26,014 workpeople and causing a loss of 489,775 working days in 1906.

DR. ERNEST A. ALLARD.

It is the prescription of one of the world's greatest specialists in diseases of the throat, lungs, and stomach, and all wasting diseases. Ask your druggist for it, at 50c and 1.00, or T. A. Foster's Forecast.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—The last bulletin gave forecast of a disturbance to cross continent Jan. 30 to Feb. 3, a warm wave wave Jan. 29 to Feb. 2, and a cool wave Feb. 1 to 5. The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about Feb. 6, cross the Pacific slope by the close of Feb. 7, the great central valleys Feb. 8 to 10, and the eastern states Feb. 11. A warm wave will cross the Pacific slope about Feb. 6, the great central valleys Feb. 8 and the eastern states Feb. 10. A cool wave will cross the Pacific coast about Feb. 9, the great central valleys Feb. 11, and the eastern states Feb. 13.

This disturbance will extend the warm spell of weather expected on the continent from Feb. 1 to Feb. 10 and which will constitute the Feb. thaw. When this disturbance reaches the Pacific slope about Feb. 6, a cool wave will be passing the great central valleys, but, while the cold wave will not bring very cold weather the two storm waves will not reach meridian 90 near Feb. 1 and 9, will cause very warm weather making the nine days' average very warm.

Indications are not favorable to much rain during February and I expect the first nine days of the month to be very dry, particularly in the central valleys. I expect the driest part of the continent to be the section within 200 miles of Washington D. C., with very little rain east of the Rockies during the first ten days of February.

The northeastern States will average cooler and wetter for February than the central Mississippi valley and from these sections temperatures and rainfall will shade off about normal.

Immediately following February severe storms may be expected and thunder storms will reach farther north than usual. The cool wave expected to reach meridian 90 not far from Feb. 11 will be a severe cold wave and with increasing rains south and snows north. This cold wave will be extensive, covering most of the continent and will be the beginning of a long, cold February winter.

Better get ready for that cold wave It looks bad. It will probably reach the middle northwest, between Manitoba and the Rockies not far from Feb. 8 and move from there to the northeastern states.

Burdock Blood Bitters CURES Dyspepsia, Boils, Pimples, Headaches, Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, and all troubles arising from the Stomach, Liver, Bowels or Blood.

Mrs. A. Lethangue, of Ballyduff, Ont., writes: "I believe I would have been in my grave long ago had it not been for Burdock Blood Bitters. I was run down to such an extent that I could scarcely move about the house. I was subject to severe headaches, backaches and dizziness; my appetite was gone and I was unable to do my housework. After using two bottles of B. B. B. I found my health fully restored. I warmly recommend it to all tired and worn out women."

The Man on The Street

The "salary grab" alderman's bluff
Fooled none. They all knew it was stuff.
Now he's sorry he spoke;
Didn't expect all that smoke.
He's eager to cry out "enough."

My! Wasn't that a clever answer in The News to The Times' "salary-grab" editorial?

It is said the bridge gang is out with a warrant for the "salary grab" alderman. It is alleged that he stole the hole for the new pier and crawled into it.

It's somebody's treat—either the Merchant's bank or Aemilius Jarvis & Co.

That funny man on the Montreal Star is after Medicine Hat again. He says: "Medicine Hat people are not displaying their usual enterprise. We miss the story this year of roses blooming in January." No, we aren't going in for roses this January. We're too busy ploughing.

A man out in the country stopped ploughing for a few minutes last week to pick a rose, and was stung with a bumble-bee which was in the rosebud.

Down in New York they had to shovel their way to the post office to receive the news of trees budding in Medicine Hat.

A bunch of under-secretaries are to be appointed at Ottawa. All good Liberals may apply.

The name of the insanity that the defence hopes will free Thaw is "Manic Depressive Insanity." The name of the special brand that will relieve the "salary-grab" alderman of responsibility must be Kleptomanic Oppressive Insanity.

The Calgary papers say there were no charges proven against their chief of police. But after reading the judge's finding one wonders whether it wouldn't be better to be found guilty legally and to be kicked out, than to remain in office after such a criticism.

It is now reported that two Japs are watching the American armada away down in S. America. Next week we'll have a report of these two Japs being caught in the act of carrying a dozen of the ships on their backs across continent.

Now stop jeering, Montreal Star. I see you had 30 degrees below zero last week. Medicine Hat never got within 20 degrees of that this winter.

Demands of Labor Delegates Presented.

OTTAWA, Jan. 31—The annual deputation of the Dominion Trade and Labor Congress waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Minister Lemieux this morning. It included A. Verville, M.P., president; James Simpson, Toronto, vice president; J. G. O'Donaghue, Toronto, counsel; P. M. Draper, Ottawa, secretary.

The requests were:

1. Legislation based on Mackenzie King's recommendations as to conditions of employment in Bell Telephone service, Toronto.
2. Passing Dominion Workmen's compensation act.
3. Increase of letter carriers' wages.
4. Inspection of running gear of vessels for protection of longshoremen.
5. Passing of Mr. Verville's Bill for eight hour day on government works.
6. Commission on technical education.
7. Public lands of Dominion to be preserved for bona fide settlers.
8. Passing of Monk's bill to provide for organization of co-operative societies and applying of this principle to banking as well as to trading and commerce.
9. Old age pensions.
10. Amendment of Lemieux act to prevent importation of strike-breakers while negotiations are in progress.
11. Abolition of immigration bonuses.
12. Exclusion of Hindoo labor.

With regard to Japanese arrangement affected by Mr. Lemieux deputation stated that organized labor was willing to judge by practical result.

The main reply to the demands was made by Mr. Lemieux, Sir Wilfrid also spoke. The minister said labor interests are at the present well looked after, but in the event of a re-arrangement of Cabinet portfolios a minister of labor might be appointed.

The control of telephones is being vested in the railway commission which body would be able to protect the interests of the operators.

Mr. Lemieux observed that the claims of the letter carriers would be dealt with effectively by the civil service commission which will make its report soon.

It was the policy of the government the minister said to have Dominion lands go to bona fide settlers.

As to the banking proposal care should be exercised. People sometimes needed to be protected against themselves.

Sir Wilfrid was not enthusiastic over the old age pensions proposal. He did not think the time had come for it in Canada. Such a scheme would induce undesirables of other countries to come to Canada to qualify for pensions. The Lemieux act will be tested for a year or two before being amended the delegation was told.

Mr. Lemieux gave assurance that the Japanese question has been definitely settled. The protection of longshoremen, technical education commission, workmen's compensation act and the government eight hour proposals were all promised consideration.

J. T. Hall Returning.

Our publicity commissioner has been negotiating with a large floral establishment that intends to open a branch in the west. W. H. McKinnon gave Mr. Hall the information that led to an interview with the florists. Mr. Hall expected to leave for the west the latter part of last week. He will stop a few days in Winnipeg to interview some men.

JOHN T.'S OPINION.
(Hamilton Times.)

John T. Hall, Publicity Commissioner of Medicine Hat, and formerly Assessment Commissioner of Hamilton, who is here trying to induce Eastern capitalists to help build up the Western town, offered to bet Mayor Stewart a silk hat today that the Hydro-Power commission would never supply Hamilton with power at the figures it has quoted. He says it will fall on the cost of distribution, as estimated. The cheapest power Hamilton could get he says, is natural gas at 25 cents a thousand feet, if it were sure of the supply. This would figure out, he explains at about $12 per horse power.

RAILWAY MEN MEET GOVERNMENT.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—A delegation from the railway conference here, representing all the operating branches of the service throughout the Dominion met the Premier and the Minister of Labor this afternoon. The delegation's case was presented by Harvey Hall and George Wark of the firemen's organization asked for an amendment to the section of the railway act under which prosecutions being pressed, which declares that every officer, servant or employee, who wilfully or negligently violates any rule, by-law or regulation of the company, or order or notice of the Minister of Railways or board of railway commissioners, if such violation causes injury to person or property, is guilty of an offence and liable to a fine or imprisonment or both. The delegates claimed this is too severe and caused injustice in many cases and wished "negligently" dropped from the clause, and that they be only liable for wilful disobedience.

The Premier promised consideration, but did not hold out much promise that the request would be granted. The safety of the travelling public and the trainmen themselves required careful protection. He admitted the railway men had some grievance and promised to say if it could not be remedied without removing the element of protection the law now provides.

EASING HIS CONSCIENCE.

In a Scottish town a commercial traveller who called upon a tradesman at long intervals made a visit at Christmas time. "Here's box of cigars," he said to the tradesman, "and I hope you'll enjoy them."

"Na, na!" replied the trader, "I couldna tak them—I never dae business that way."

"Tut, tut—nonsense, sir!" exclaimed the traveller, "it's just a Christmas box."

"Na, na, mon! I never tak' anything for naething."

"Well, well—give me a silling for the box," said the traveler, "if that will ease your conscience."

"Ay, ay! Weel, let me see," said the honest shopkeeper, running his eye over the silver he took from his pocket: "I see I've got a florin here—I'll tak' two boxes."—Reynolds Newspaper.

MEETING OF SCHOOL BOARD

Parent Makes Complaint Re Draughty Classroom

The regular meeting of the school board was held last night at seven o'clock. Present: The Chairman, W. J. Brotherton; trustees, J. C. Colter and Kennedy.

Mr. Colter thought Mr. Pentland's resignation was not accepted at the last special meeting of the board, but discussed and left over till the regular meeting. The meeting at which Mr. Pentland's resignation was read was called for a special purpose—to discuss the matter of selling the bonds, and he thought any action the board took on matters apart from the sale of the debentures would have to be ratified at the next regular meeting of the board. The chairman stated that according to statute any other business apart from that for which the special meeting was called might also be dealt with.

The chairman read the report which has been prepared for the board of education. This showed that the number of pupils enrolled for January, 1908, was 604, and the average attendance 484. The average was low on account of the prevalence of colds and grippe amongst the pupils. A number of teachers had also been temporarily incapacitated for their duties from the same causes. It was further stated in the report that the fees for the term end-June 30 had been collected with the exception of eight. The progress in the schools during the month had been quite satisfactory. Report accepted and filed.

Mr. Hay stated that Miss Kennedy is working by the month, having been hired as a substitute for Mr. Ware until such time as he might be relieved. It was decided that Miss Kennedy should receive a salary of $50 monthly during the time she continues to substitute for Mr. Ware.

A letter was read from W. McF. Evans, stating that his daughter, who complained at home of earache and sore throat, had been compelled to sit in a draughty room at school. Complaint had been made to Miss Rae, who said she could not do anything in the matter. She explained that in the particular room in which Mr. Evans' child was taught the only ventilation was from the bottom of the windows. Mr. Hay stated that he had spoken to Miss Rae on the matter and she stated that she had not allowed the child to be exposed to draught. He thought she must have misunderstood his question.

He did not think any teacher would be inconsiderate enough to unnecessarily permit her pupils to suffer exposure.

A petition was introduced and handed to the committee already appointed to look into the matter of the principalship.

Mr. Colter stated that Mr. Pentland would accept the principalship if there were a possibility of extra help being provided. He (Mr. Colter) thought the board should obtain more help.

Mr. Brotherton stated that the committee appointed to deal with the question of principalship had not yet anything definite to report, but reported progress. There would be a special meeting called in the course of a few days when the committee have prepared a recommendation. Mr. Colter stated that he would like to see Mr. Pentland re-engaged.

A smoker was given in the new addition to the Royal hotel on Monday the 4th inst., in honor of J. C. Reid, locomotive foreman, who has been transferred to Cranbrook. About 60 or 70 fellow railroaders were present mostly enginemen and firemen or of the mechanical department and during the evening a presentation was made on their behalf by J. A. Cameron, trainmaster, who acted as chairman and A. Hobkirk, yardmaster, who acted as assistant chairman and brought in Mr. Reed.

The gifts were a silver tea service, gold locket and chain, tokens of the esteem in which the donors held their departing chief.

Messrs. Cameron and Hobkirk were the principal speakers, and were supported by a number of others, all of whom testified to the pleasant manner in which Mr. Reed has carried out his duties while in the Hat, and expressed regret that he was leaving.

After the presentation refreshments were provided and the rest of the evening spent in the enjoyment of songs and recitations, the party breaking up at about midnight.

H. A. Ireland, trainmaster's clerk, came into the city from Lethbridge last Tuesday morning. The staff has been temporarily transferred to Medicine Hat, which is really the centre of the district. Mr. Ireland was in Hat last fall, leaving for Lethbridge in November and is well known here. He expects to return in the course of a few weeks.

Four freight engines for the Crow line started yesterday to use the Coleridge roundhouse instead of coming into the city. The passenger trains will transfer passengers here instead of at Dunmore Junction.

GAS EXPERT IN TOWN

Pittsburg Man Brought Over by Irrigation Co.

Speaks Highly of Our Gas

W. H. Hammon and wife, of Pittsburg, Pa., are spending some days in the city. Mr. Hammon is one of the best versed men on natural gas in America, having been connected with it for a great many years. He has been brought over by the Southern Alberta Land Company to give his opinion on the gas at Bow island.

Mr. Hammon arrived last Thursday morning and has examined the Bow Island, Red Cliff Brick Company's wells, as well as one of the city wells. He speaks very highly of our gas, saying it is equal to the Pittsburg gas and better than the Kansas gas in heat quality. The gas is pure marsh gas, and Mr. Hammon thinks that oil is not very near the gas area at present in use. He thinks the government should take most strenuous means to stop the blowing off of wells, such as the one at Dunmore Junction.

Around Pittsburg they have to bore from 2000 to 3000 feet to secure gas now, as the upper areas are exhausted. At the rate for digging there it should cost no more than $1500 to drill a well here. In Pittsburg the domestic rate is 28 cents; manufacturers 12 to 15 cents in winter and 10 cents in summer.

In Mr. Hammon's opinion the city should charge at least 20 cents for gas, as the cost of land, production and distribution should be figured on a commercial basis. The city has not sufficient wells for the service required now.

He considers the city system good, as far as he has examined it. He left for Lethbridge last night.

ANOTHER RAILWAY

NEW ROAD TO RUN TO PEACE RIVER DISTRICT

MONEY BEING PROCURED IN ENGLAND

Edmonton, Feb. 4.—Fletcher Bredin, member for Athabasca, stated in the Legislature in a motion for the second reading of the act to amend the charter of the Alberta and Northwestern railway which aims to open up the Peace River district, that the company are making financial arrangements in the Old Country by which operations will be soon commenced. By amendment THE ROUTE OF THE RAILWAY WILL BE FROM MEDICINE HAT to Rocky Mountain House, to Edmonton, and thence to Lesser Slave Lake and Peace River. Attorney-general Cross will introduce the Workman's Compensation act on Thursday, and on Wednesday, Hon. Mr. Cushing will bring in an 8 hour bank to bank day in mines bill.

The new company will build from Medicine Hat south to the boundary and according to the despatches will run a line from here to Nanton, to Keith, across the Red River in township 35, range 26, west of the 4th, thence northwesterly to the Rocky Mountain House. Whether this is the branch that will connect the city and Edmonton is not known.

In Search of His Little Daughter

J. D. English, of Grassy Lake, visits the Indian Camp

A pathetic mission brought J. D. English into Medicine Hat on Thursday last. He is in search of his little eight year old daughter who has now been missing from home for over seven months.

On a Sunday morning in June last Mr. English set out from his ranch near Grassy Lake en route for the town, taking with him two of his daughters. The departure was hurried, and the little eight year old girl, not being ready to accompany her father, was left behind in tears. Determined not to lose the outing she dressed quickly and ran after her father and sisters who were now well on their way and did not notice her. She did not overtake them and only in the evening, on the return of the party, was the child missed. Mrs. English never having suspected that she was not safe under her father's care in the nearby town.

A search party was organized in which all the neighbors for miles around (over 100 in all), took part, but to no avail, and the conclusion was reached that the child had fallen into the river, (by the banks of which she would pass) and had been drowned. Grappling proved fruitless, no trace of the missing child being discovered, and it appeared all hope of ever seeing her again was gone. As a last result Mr. English consulted a clairvoyant, who informed him that he would find his daughter in the home of a certain Mr. Sanderson, in the district. A visit was paid to Mr. Sanderson, whose little daughter it was found bore a close resemblance to the lost girl. Since that time Mr. English has consulted a number of clairvoyants, who have all assured him that his daughter is still alive, and he has on his forlorn hope, visited every spot in Southern Alberta where he thought she might be found. Recently he heard that there was a white girl in the Indian camp at Medicine Hat, and on Thursday morning he arrived here on the Crow train, and explained his errand to Chief Medicinehorn and visited H. de Savoye's studio with a faded photo of the lost girl which he thought might be reproduced with the faded portions brought out more distinctly. He visited the encampment only to find there a half-breed girl about the same age as his daughter. In the evening he returned to the ranch on the Crow train.

Moving Picture Show

On South Railway Street

Successful Opening Last Night

A new entertainment feature which will add much to the gaiety of the city was opened last night by Messrs Ness and Williams on South Railway street. The Idle Hour Animated Picture Show will supply a long-felt need, the need of a bright, breezy entertainment parlor where one may drop in at any time when time hangs heavy on one's hands and chase dull care away by the light and laughable. A splendid repertoire of pictures will be obtained and the subjects will be changed every two or three days, with a complete change of program each week. That the theatre is likely to be extremely popular is shown by the fact that last night, in spite of the Ganthony concert with its crowded house, the Idle Hour Theatre was packed—all the chairs occupied and every available inch of standing room taken up.

Dear Editor,

Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to express my appreciation of the Medicine Hat fire department. I was told a little time ago that the Medicine Hat fire department had smart horsemen, and, having personally seen some of the best fire teams in the world hitched up, I thought I would visit the Medicine Hat fire department, which I did a couple of weeks ago, and was fortunate enough to see both teams hitched up several times and I wish to say that such good horsemanship would be hard to beat.

Ald. Forster Attempts to have Charter Amended Motion Lost on a Tie Vote-Price of Gas to Remain Unchanged

The adjourned meeting of the council was held on Tuesday night. Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Penhale.

In regard to the $10,000 debenture issue for market purposes, the solicitor stated that an amount of $361.82 on principal, raised annually as a sinking fund and placed out to interest, would be sufficient at the end of twenty years repay the bondholders. The bookkeping would be simplified by the adoption of this system of repayment, and of half yearly payments of interest.

The council went into committee of the whole for the consideration of by-laws. The committee reported on the by-laws relating to market site, $10,000; waterworks extensions, $40,000; gas extensions, $25,000, and by-law No. 139 amending the price of gas. The by-law, as amended, provides for the payment of a sum of a dollar a month by all gas consumers as a minimum charge, in other respects the price remains as before.

The matter of the spur track to the Canneries next came up for discussion. This question, of the track going right along the road allowance was referred back at previous meeting to Board of Works committee. In answer to a question by the Mayor on the subject of damage claims in the case of the road allowance being used, the solicitor said the allowance was a government road and a fee would be due to the government. He thought it would be necessary to confer with the Minister of Public Works. The property owners affected would have to make claim on the city. He did not see how any damage could arise. The Mayor had no doubt that if people thought there was anything in it they would make the best of their opportunity. The solicitor stated that he had written to the provincial secretary to know what course of action would be necessary, and had received reply that the matter was referred to executive committee. That was a month ago and since then he had had no further word.

The Agricultural Society wrote asking for a grant for Demonstration Farm and for the usual annual grant. Their previous letters on the matter had been laid on the table pending an improvement in the financial situation. It was decided to lay the new communication on the table for the time being.

Ald. Baker gave notice of motion to amend by-law No. 164. This is intended to make the cost of testing meters fall on the consumer, in case the readings are found to be correct or in his favor. Each meter test costs about $2, and in no instance has a meter been found to be registering to the disadvantage of the consumer complaining.

Ald. Forster moved that the solicitor be instructed to prepare an amendment to the charter providing for the payment of Mayor and Aldermen. Ald. Baker moved as an amendment that the question should be referred to the people first. The Mayor had no doubt that the government would grant the amendment and it would be up to the council then to decide what should be done.

Apropos the salary the Mayor of Edmonton is paid as an ex-officio member of the commission. Ald. Penhale wanted to know what the difference was between an alderman and a commissioner. "Is a commissioner a better man than an alderman?" The Mayor, "He is expected to devote all his time to the work." Ald. Penhale saw very grave dangers in "this commission business." He thought commissioners got too long a string, too much power. The Mayor considered that that was the good point about a commission—that they "had a longer string" than the Aldermen. Alds. Baker and Spencer both spoke strongly in favor of submitting the matter to a referendum vote of the ratepayers. Ald. Forster wished to see the matter dealt with this session. If this were to be done the amendment should be prepared immediately. To refer to the ratepayers would incur too much delay. Ald. Penhale thought that if the council were to wait till the people voted them salaries they might wait forever. He was five or six hundred dollars hard cash to the bad already on council work and did not want to wait longer. Ald. Spencer was of the opinion that the question should be voted on when the by-laws came up on the 16 March. The solicitor said that if the vote were taken on a by-law it would not be a referendum vote of the people, but only of burgesses. If the council were to get the matter forward this session it would be advisable to take it up immediately. The motion was lost on a tie vote. The Mayor and Alds. Baker and Spencer voting against it; Alds. Penhale, Forster and McKay for it.

The Mayor brought up the matter of the city's finances, which he ascribed as being in a very unsatisfactory condition. Cheques were sent to him to sign when he was unaware whether funds existed for their payment or not. The treasurer, the Mayor stated, claimed that he could not do the extra work entailed by keeping the books in better shape unless he had assistance. The solicitor stated that the council might provide a by-law to empower the auditor to audit all accounts before they were passed. The Mayor did not wish to employ an auditor whom it would be necessary to keep employed continuously. Referred to finance committee for report.

Ald. McKay stated that before progress could be made with the by-law relating to sewer debentures the levels of the district down at Seven Persons creek would have to be taken and sent on to Edmonton. The engineer was short of assistance and thus the work was tied up.

The council adjourned at 11.15, Ald. Forster leaving the room and breaking the quorum.

New Liquor Store North of the Track

A new liquor store will be opened north of the track in the course of a few days by A. F. Foster and W. Hamilton, who are going into partnership.

On Thursday the granting of the new license was recommended by the License Commissioners and all that remains is to obtain the assent of the government authorities at Edmonton.

The application first came before the commissioners, W. J. Brotherton, C. [illegible], J. H. Vockeroth on the 7th inst., and was adjourned to the 14 and then to the 6th of this month on request of the applicants, who wished to secure further evidence.

The License Commissioners may refuse to grant a license on the ground that it is not required, if a petition signed by seven of the nearest twenty residents is presented. In this case a protest signed by nine was presented at the first sitting, four of the subscribers afterwards wishing to withdraw. This, however, could not be allowed. A rumor was in circulation that the gentleman who canvassed the petition had stated that the store was to be run by a Chinaman, but these charges were denied on oath, and it was conclusively shown that the rumors afloat had come from some other source.

Wright-Rudnicki

(Fernie Free Press.)

At the home of the bride's parents 16 Victoria Avenue, a quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning last when Mr. Clayton C. Wright, jeweler, son of Mr. A. M. Wright, of this city, and Miss Annie Josephine Rudnicki, daughter of J. F. Rudnicki, of the Home Bank staff, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony in the presence of intimate friends only. The ceremony took place at 8 a.m., the Rev. Father Tavernier officiating.

To the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" played by V. Rudnicki, the high contracting parties took their places before the Rev. Father who was to pronounce them man and wife. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. J. F. Rudnicki. Miss Lizzie Rudnicki, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, while the groom was assisted by Mr. T. Rudnicki.

The beautiful young bride was married in her going away gown which was a handsome creation of castor satin.

After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a sumptuous wedding dejeuner.

The happy couple left on the westbound express for Rossland, Spokane and other points. While in Rossland they will take in the festivities of the Carnival.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside in one of the Trites residences on Howland Avenue.

Church Notes

A very enjoyable social was held in the basement of St. John's Presbyterian church on Thursday evening last. The members of the Sunday school and Young People's Society joined in rendering an excellent program of music, and recitations and games were indulged in throughout the evening. Among the items were duets by Mr. Fraser and Mr. Irwin, Misses Nicholson, Miss Taylor and Miss Rae. Mr. Campbell, in inimitable style, recited one or two of Drummond's sketches. Miss Cully also contributing to the enjoyment of the evening by her elocutionary powers. Mr. Hay presided.

Last night a meeting of the Missionary Society was held in St. John's church. It has been decided that a monthly collection for missions shall be taken up at the Sunday services.

The Home Mission offerings were taken up at the Baptist church on Sunday, over $315.00 being realized. In the afternoon the Rev. M. McLaurin conducted a special children's service. There were large congregations throughout the day. Mr. McLean sang at all three services. Sunday was the last day of the mission, which has been productive of very satisfactory results.

Three years ago I had a very severe attack of Dyspepsia. I tried five of the best doctors I could find but they could do me no good. I was advised by a friend to try Burdock Blood Bitters and to my great surprise, after taking two bottles, I was so perfectly cured that I have not had a sign of Dyspepsia since. Baseball in Calgary

(Albertan)

Last night the Albertan representative called upon Bruce Robertson, President of the Western Canada Baseball League, with a view to getting a line on the prospects of professional ball in this section of the country for the coming season.

Mr. Robertson, who has just returned from a trip from the northern towns, was very reticent at first, pointing out that it was not up to to make any statement in the matter in his official position, but when it was pointed out that some person would have to take the initiative, Mr. Robertson kindly consented to give a few scraps of information that he had gathered in the past few weeeks in connection with the matter.

"The prospects for professional ball this season in Alberta are very bright," remarked Mr. Robertson, "and I may say that, outside of Calgary, the rest of the towns are practically organized and waiting for us. When in Edmonton last week I was approached by a few of the enthusiasts of that city, and on Friday we had a very good meeting, in which the matter was thoroughly discussed, the following gentlemen being present: Messrs. Stuart, Mills, Good, Gooderich and Hosten.

"During the course of the meeting they asked for my views on forming another league, and I pointed out to them that there were two essential facts they would have to hold to. The first was the mad system Calgary and Edmonton indulged in last year in spending all kinds of money to get new stars during the season, for fear the rival town would beat them out; and secondly they would have to cut out the training trip feature. I am strongly in favor of the teams starting the season on the home grounds, and being organized on the home grounds.

"This is where all the teams lost money last year—they were away in the hole before the league opened.

"The Edmonton men were very enthusiastic about having a league of say four or six teams, to take in Strathcona, Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Calgary and Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, provided they work on a suitable basis in bringing in the two south teams. The idea is to have the league run on a fifty per cent. basis in the Class D., the same as last year.

"When at the meeting the Edmonton fans asked me if I would approach Wetaskiwin and Strathcona, and I agreed to stop over a day in each place on my way down. At Strathcona I found the people very anxious to break into the game, and all the men I approached were well to do and willing to help the game through. At Wetaskiwin I did not see many of the boys but met a few of the principal ball enthusiasts, and they were also anxious to come in, tough they expressed a desire to hold a public meeting before making any definite statement. As for Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, from what I have learned of the people there they will be glad to come in if the matter can be put on a good basis, and I am sure it can.

"Professional ball in this country can be made a paying concern, that I am positive of and the people who support the game will get just as good ball for their money as they did last year, when we all went behind.

"One reason why we have a better show this year to make money at it, or at least break even, is the fact that all ball players will be plentiful this year, and we can get first class men at from $50 to $60 per month, and they will pay their own transportation here at that. And these figures will look mighty good to a lot of them who have been out of a job this winter. I believe there will shortly be a meeting held of the Calgary club, and after that if the local men decide to start in, we will call a league meeting. There will be no trouble in getting representatives from each place, as I am confident they are enthusiastic enough to come here on receipt of a notice by wire."

There will be a meeting tonight of the Calgary baseball club at eight o'clock sharp in the Alberta club rooms. In conversation with the Albertan last night, Dr. Stewart, the president of the Calgary club, stated that after talking the matter over with Mr. Robertson, he thought the time had come for the local men to make a move in the matter, and asked the Albertan to publish the above notice of a meeting.

A meeting of the Calgary Baseball club was held last week and it was unanimously decided to have a professional team in Calgary this year and enter the provincial league. A. D. Fidler was appointed to represent Calgary at the league meeting.

Hockey Team at Calgary

A team of C.P.R. boys journeyed up to Calgary on Friday night to meet the railroad employees of that city in a friendly game of hockey. The ice was, like the curate's egg, good in parts; in fact, was in splendid condition except on one side where the sun was shining. Here a slushy pool was formed where the skaters frequently came to grief. The game was enjoyed by all who took part and was entirely free from rough play. The gas city team throughout had the worst of the game, which resulted in their defeat by 4-1. Reber scored for Medicine Hat, and he, Medley, and Ritchie proved themselves the star players, while Dalton did some cracking good work in goal.

After the game the Calgarians entertained their guests at dinner at the Palmetto Cafe. Speeches were made by members of the rival teams and a merry evening was spent. On Saturday week the Calgary boys will play the return game in Medicine Hat, and may be assured of the same hospitable reception as the Hat team received in Calgary.

The teams lined up as follows:

Referee, Dan McLeod.

On Sunday morning, five of the boys, L. Hopper, Hume Pingle, Anderson and J. Gilmore, of Medicine Hat and Mr. Doolittle, of Calgary, went on to Banff, where a highly enjoyable day was spent, luxuriating in the scenery and the hot springs baths at the Sanatorium Hotel. The party returned to Medicine Hat on Monday morning.

BY HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

He leaned back and, interlocking his fingers, stretched his arms out with the palms of his hands outward, a habit of his when asked a question needing consideration.

"She is of medium height. Her hair is brown. Her worst enemy admits, I believe, that she is pretty. Of course I am convinced of it."

"Of course," replied Jocelyn steadily. That is as it should be. And I have no doubt that you and her worst enemy are both quite right."

CHAPTER XIII.

RUMOR met Maurice Gordon almost at the outset of his journey northward. "Smallpox is raging on the Ogowe river," they told him. "The English expedition is stricken down with it. The three leaders are dead."

Maurice Gordon had not lived four years on the west African coast in vain. He took this for what it was worth. But if he had acquired skepticism he had lost his nerve. He put about and sailed back to Loango.

"I wonder," he muttered as he walked up from the beach to his office that same afternoon—"I wonder if Durnovo is among them."

And he was conscious of a ray of hope in his mind. He was a kind hearted man in his way, this Maurice Gordon of Loango, but he could not disguise from himself the simple fact that the death of Victor Durnovo would be a distinct convenience and a most desirable relief.

Thinking these thoughts, Maurice Gordon arrived at the factory and went straight to his own office, where he found the object of them, Victor Durnovo, sitting in consumption of the office sherry.

Gordon saw at once that the rumor was true. There was a hunted, unwholesome look in Durnovo's eyes. He looked shaken and failed to convey a suggestion of personal dignity.

"Hello!" exclaimed the proprietor of the decanter. "You look a bit chippy. I've heard you've got smallpox up at Msala."

"So have I. I've just heard it from Meredith."

"Just heard it! Is Meredith down here too?"

"Yes, and the fool wants to go back tonight. I have to meet him on the beach at 4 o'clock."

Maurice Gordon sat down, poured out for himself a glass of sherry and drank it thoughtfully.

"Do you know, Durnovo," he said emphatically, "I have my doubts about Meredith being a fool."

"Indeed!" with a derisive laugh.

"Yes."

Maurice Gordon looked over his shoulder to see that the door was shut.

"You'll have to be very careful," he said. "The least slip might let it all out. Meredith has a quiet way of looking at one which disquiets me. He might find out."

"Not he," replied Durnovo confidently, "especially if we succeed, and we shall succeed; we shall!"

Maurice Gordon made a little movement of the shoulders as indicating a certain uneasiness, but he said nothing.

There was a pause of considerable duration, at the end of which Durnovo produced a paper from his pocket and threw it down.

"That's good business," he said.

"Two thousand tusks," murmured Maurice Gordon. "Yes, that's good. Through Akmed, I suppose?"

"Yes. We can outdo these Arabs at their own trade."

An evil smile lighted up Durnovo's sallow face. When he smiled his drooping, curtain-like mustache projected in a way that made keen observers of the human face wonder what his mouth was like.

Gordon, who had been handling the paper with the tips of his fingers as if it were something unclean, threw it down on the table again.

"Ye-es," he said slowly, "but it does not seem to dirty black hands as it does white. They know no better."

"Lord!" ejaculated Durnovo. "Don't let us begin the old arguments all over again. I thought we settled that the trade was there. We couldn't prevent it, and therefore the best thing is to make hay while the sun shines and then clear out of the country."

"But suppose Meredith finds out?" reiterated Maurice Gordon, with the lamentable hesitation that precedes loss.

"If Meredith finds out it will be the worse for him."

A certain concentration of tone aroused Maurice Gordon's attention, and he glanced uneasily at his companion.

"No one knows what goes on in the heart of Africa," said Durnovo darkly. "But we will not trouble about that. Meredith won't find out."

"Where is he now?"

"With your sister at the bungalow. A lady's man—that is what he is."

On hearing that Jack was at the bungalow with Jocelyn, Maurice Gordon glanced at the clock and wondered how he could get away from his present visitor. The atmosphere of Jack Meredith's presence was preferable to that diffused by Victor Durnovo. There was a feeling of personal safety and dignity in the very sound of his voice which set a weak and easily led man upon his feet.

But Victor Durnovo had something to say to Gordon which circumstances had brought to a crisis.

"Look here," he said, leaning forward and throwing away the cigarette he had been smoking, "this simiacine scheme is going to be the biggest thing that has ever been run on this coast."

"Yes," said Gordon, with the indifference that comes from nonparticipation.

"And I'm the only business man in it," significantly.

Gordon nodded his head, awaiting further developments.

"Which means that I could work another man into it. I might find out that we could not get on without him."

The black eyes seemed to probe the good natured, sensual face of Maurice Gordon, so keen, so searching was their glance.

"And I would be willing to do it, to make that man's fortune, provided that he was my brother-in-law."

"What the devil do you mean?" asked Gordon, setting down the glass that was half raised to his lips.

"I mean that I want to marry Jocelyn."

And the modern school of realistic, mawkishly foul novelists, who hold

"Besides," he said, "I may succeed without any of that—eh?"

that love exculseth all, would have taken delight in the passionate rendering of the girl's name.

"Want to marry Jocelyn, do you?" answered Maurice, with a derisive little laugh. On the first impulse of the moment he gave no thought to himself or his own interests and spoke with uncl guised contempt. He might have been speaking to a beggar on the roadside.

Durnovo's eyes flashed dangerously and his tobacco stained teeth clinched for a moment over his lower lip.

"That is my desire and intention."

"Look here, Durnovo," exclaimed Gordon, "don't be a fool! Can't you see that it is quite out of the question?"

"No," he said, "I can't see that it is out of the question. On the contrary, it seems only natural that she should marry the man who is her brother's partner in many a little speculation."

Maurice Gordon, sitting there staring hopelessly into the half breed's face, saw it all. He went back in a flash of recollection to many passing details which had been unnoted at the time; details which now fitted into each other like links of a chain, and that chain was around him. He leaped forward in a momentary opening of the future, and saw himself ruined, disgraced, held up to the execration of the whole civilized world. He was utterly in this man's power, bound hand and foot. He could not say him no, and least of all could he say no to this demand, which had roused all the latent chivalry, gentlemanliness, brotherly love that was in him. Maurice Gordon knew that Victor Durnovo possessed knowledge which Jocelyn would consider cheap at the price of her person.

"I don't think," said Durnovo, who seemed to be following Gordon's thoughts, "that the idea will be so repellent to your sister as you seem to think."

And a sudden ray of hope shot athwart the future into which his listener was staring. It might be so. One can never tell with women.

"I don't want you to do anything now," he went on more gently. It was wonderful how well he knew Maurice Gordon. The suggested delay appealed to one side of his nature, the softened tone to another. "There is time enough. When I come back I will speak of it again. Your sister is very fond of you, and—I think I have one or two arguments to put forward which she would recognize as uncommonly strong. I would not bring forward those arguments except as a last resource. I would first point out the advantages. A fourth share in the simiacine scheme would make you a rich man—above suspicion—independent of the gossip of the market place."

Maurice Gordon winced visibly, and his eyes wavered as if he were about to give way to panic.

"You could retire and go home to England—to a cooler climate. This country might get too hot for your constitution. See?"

Durnovo came back into the center of the room and stood by the writing table. His attitude was that of a man holding a whip over a cowering dog.

He took up his hat and riding whip with a satisfied little laugh, as if the dog had cringingly done his bidding.

"Besides," he said, with a certain defiance of manner, "I may succeed without any of that—eh?"

"Yes," Gordon was obliged to admit, with a gulp, as if he were swallowing his pride. And he knew that in saying the word he was degrading his sister—throwing her at this man's feet as the price of his own honor.

With a half contemptuous nod, Victor Durnovo turned and went away to keep his appointment with Meredith.

* * * * * * *

Guy Oscard was sitting on the natural terrace in front of Durnovo's house at Msala, and Marie attended to his simple wants with that patient dignity which suggested the recollection of better times and appealed strongly to the manhood of her fellow servant Joseph and her whilom master.

"I hear the sound of paddles," she said.

"My ears are not so sharp as yours," said Oscard.

He listened, and after a moment heard the regular glug-glug of the paddles stealing over the waters of the still tropic river, covering a wonderful distance.

"Yes," he said, "I hear. Mr. Meredith said he would be back tonight."

She gave a strange little low laugh—almost the laugh of a happy woman.

The two boats came on to the sloping shore with a grating sound, and by the light of the waving lanterns Oscard saw Durnovo and Jack land from the same boat.

The three men walked up to the house together. Marie was at the door and bowed her head gravely in answer to Jack's salutation. Durnovo nodded curtly and said nothing.

In the sitting room, by the light of the paraffin lamp, the two Englishmen exchanged a long questioning glance, quite different from the quick interrogation of a woman's eyes. There was a smile on Jack Meredith's face.

"All ready to start tomorrow?" he inquired.

"Yes," replied Oscard.

And that was all they could say. Durnovo never left them alone together that night. He watched their faces with keen, suspicious eye. Behind the mustache his lips were pursed up in restless anxiety. But he saw nothing—learned nothing. These two men were inscrutable.

At 11 o'clock the next morning the simiacine seekers left their first unhappy camp at Msala. They had tasted of misfortune at the very beginning, but after the first reverse they returned to their work with that dogged determination which is a better spirit than the wild enthusiasm of departure, where friends shout and flags wave, and an artificial hopefulness throws in its jarring note.

In less than a week they had left the river, hauling their canoes up on the bank and hiding them in the tangle of the virgin underwood. A depot of provisions, likewise hidden, was duly made, and the long, weary march began.

We have not to deal so much with the finding of the simiacine as with the finders, and of these the chief at this time was Jack Meredith. It seemed quite natural that one duty after another should devolve upon him, and he invariably had time to do them all and leisure to comment pleasantly upon it. But his chief care was Victor Durnovo.

When they had been on the march for two months—piloted with marvelous instinct by Durnovo—Meredith made one or two changes in the organization. The caravan naturally moved slowly, owing to the enormous amount of baggage to be carried, and this delay seemed to irritate Victor Durnovo to such an extent that at last it was obvious that the man would go mad unless this frightful tension could be relieved.

An advance column, commanded by Meredith and Durnovo, was selected to push on to the plateau, while Oscard and Joseph followed more leisurely with the baggage and the slower travelers.

Victor Durnovo would never know rest now until he reached the spot where the simiacine should be. If the trees were there, growing, as he said, in solitary state and order, strangely suggestive of human handiwork, then Victor Durnovo was saved. If no such spot was found, madness and death could only follow.

"Yes," he cried; "it's simiacine!"

To save his companion's reason Meredith more than once drugged his food, but when the land began to rise beneath their feet in slight billowlike undulations—the deposit of the glacial

Provincial Seed Fair.

The Second Annual Provincial Seed Fair for Alberta, conducted under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, assisted by the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture will be held this year at Lethbridge on the 18, 19 and 20. In addition to the liberal prizes offered for the various classes of grains, grasses and clover seeds, Farm Crops Magazine of Winnipeg, has offered a valuable silver trophy known as "The Farm Crops Trophy," for the best bushel of spring wheat. The trophy will be supplemented by a cash prize of $50 to the winner, $30 as a second and $20 as a third prize. In this class, as well as all other classes of wheat exhibitors must have at least 50 bushels of seed for sale, as represented by the sample exhibited. On exhibits sent to the Fair all express charges over fifty cents will be paid by the Department of Agriculture. The Grain Judging Competition in which all farmers and farmers' sons will be allowed to compete, will also be conducted.

An interesting programme in which prominent speakers will take part is being prepared. Among the speakers will be Prof. Atkinson, Agronomist, from the Agricultural College, Bozeman, Montana.

Arrangements have been made with the railways whereby convention rates will apply to all attending the exhibition. Prize lists, which contain all information, can be had on application to the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

THE COMMON MAN.

The Common Man, unknown to fame,
Cuts no dramatic capers,
In vain you seek to find his name,
Or portrait in the papers.
Your ear with speech he troubles not;
His sole concern is toiling
To keep the pot—to keep the pot—to keep the pot a-boiling!

From day to day, from dawn to dark,
Creating no sensation,
The Common Man without remark
Pursues his avocation,
For weekly wage is only got
By grim, persistent moiling
To keep the pot—to keep the pot—
To keep the pot a-boiling!

He gains no place on history's page,
Nor wins the heroes praises,
He simply works from youth to age
Then sleeps beneath the daisies.
He only knows (Life's mystic plot
His comprehension foiling)
One stern decree—to keep the pot
To keep the pot a-boiling.

Yet if the Common Man strode out
Upon the higher ranges
Where preachers preach and lawyers spout
And brokers throng exchanges
And traders brawl, he'd find the lot
Intent, like him, in toiling
To keep the pot—to keep the pot—
To keep the pot a-boiling.

And they who make the loudest noise
And fill the foremost benches
Don't always get the greatest joys,
Or wed the fairest wenches.
But one and all with purpose hot
They go, their souls embroiling—
The common lot—to keep the pot—
To keep the pot a-boiling!

The Common Man, then, let us prize
That 'mid the world's rough riot
He doesn't shout or advertise
But does his work in quiet.
Though interviewers know him not,
By mute, incessant toiling
He boils the great Imperial pot—
And keeps the pot a-boiling.

Aldermen Who Represent the People.

All honor to the Mayor and Aldermen Baker and Spencer. By a tie vote they defeated the men in council who supported the "salary-grab" Alderman who insists upon putting his hand into the public treasury to his own profit without consulting the people.

Here we have men elected to represent the people who, after they have reached office, candidly admit that they are doing a thing they know the people would veto. Ald. Penhale said plainly that if the salary question were submitted to the people it would be vetoed, and yet he insisted upon having an amendment to the charter whereby the Aldermen would be able to pay themselves without getting the consent of the people. When the "grab" was turned down in council Ald. Penhale left the council chamber, as much as to say that he was in the same boat with Ald. Forster—No work, no pay.

Alds. Forster and Penhale, the supporters of the "grab" movement, were the strongest critics of the Mayor in his refusal to put through a by-law (re Canneries) passed by the people. It was their most vivid belief that the Mayor should have resigned, a belief held by The Times. But now these two aldermen do almost precisely the same thing and, up to the writing of this, retain their seats.

It is just possible that they may see that they are practically bound to resign. Ald. Forster said he wouldn't work if he weren't paid and Ald. Penhale urged the council to adopt a measure which he admitted the people would not favor. Ald. Penhale has this in his favor; that he attempted to bring up the matter of payment to Aldermen before last year's term was over, and said he would urge it this year.

Neither represent the people and, accordingly, both should resign.

Who Pays for Your Advertising?

(From the Bookseller and Stationer, February, 1907)

Who pays the cost of advertising? At first sight this question looks easy. One is apt to say off-hand that the advertiser pays it. But upon closer investigation it becomes apparent that an advertiser, who advertises properly, gets back all the money he spends in advertising, and a good deal more—else what would be the use of his advertising?

The purchaser doesn't pay it, because he gets the goods as cheaply from an advertising firm as he could from a non-advertising firm. In many cases he buys cheaper. Then who pays the cost of advertising?

The non-advertiser does. By the lack of enterprise in bringing his goods before the attention of the public he loses customers, who buy from advertising people. The profits which are lost by non-advertisers find their way into the coffers of those who do advertise.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The men we want in council are the men who represent the people. The Times believes the people should have the final word in the salary question as in everything else of sufficient importance.

Medicine Hat still stands alone on the natural gas proposition. Calgary went down 3300 feet, spent $71,000, used pages of her papers to tell of the wonderful flow of gas—and then ripped the plant up and left.

Lethbridge has had her little flurry in gas searching. The electric company had a contract to go 1600 feet in search of gas. They went, after a by-law to take over the well by the city had passed. A little puff of gas was struck, but nothing further, and now the company wants the city to take it over or pay $10 a foot to go further.

The well now is six inches at the bottom, and the borers attempted to make the council believe it could be continued to 3000 feet.

When the proposition was put to a number of local men who have had experience in gas boring, (including among them A. C. Ginter, who has been at it all his life) they laughed at the idea of such a small sized well going 1400 feet further. The company would no doubt be glad to have Lethbridge city take the well over now, in spite of the assurance of the drillers that gas will be struck in 200 or 300 feet more.

Another instance of the small value of dodger advertising without using the papers. On Feb. 5 there was to be a poultry meeting at which the Alberta government were going to help poultry raisers. The only advertising done was by means of big bills; and the result was that a man who went out to find the meeting, not only could not find it, but couldn't find anyone who knew anything about it.

Had the government seen fit to spend a few dollars in the advertising that people read, everyone would have known of it.

A new industry applied to the council to see what could be done for it if it started here, and some aldermen thought cheap fuel, free site and exemption from taxation was sufficient. And so it should be. Any industry that seeks more than that in these times has no right to be in business. This same industry has been negotiating with Lethbridge. If that city is willing to put up sufficient to overcome our gas, free site and no taxation they are welcome to the industry.

There is a decided difference between contradicting a man and calling him a liar. And there is also a great difference between answering "yes" to a man who says "then I am a liar," and calling him a liar point-blank. Ald. Baker did NOT call Engineer Morrison a liar as reported in The News. He did not use the word at all. It is a very serious charge for a newspaper to make against a city official, especially when it is absolutely untrue. The hot words on both sides are regrettable, but not so much so as the attempted verbatim report, with the word "liar" in it, when that word was not used by the person accused.

Because a paper dislikes an alderman is no reason for misquoting him so seriously.

Leaving out of the question the details of the disagreement between Ald. Baker and Engineer Morrison, and without expressing an opinion on the grounds for Ald. Baker's remarks, all will do that alderman the justice of thinking that he was right. Under those circumstances, he had, as an alderman, a perfect right to draw the attention of the council to the facts as he saw them. In fact, had he not done so he would have been failing in his duty. It is much easier for an alderman to allow such things to pass, but there is altogether too much of this done already.

Naturally, with Ald. Baker criticising him Engineer Morrison felt it, and the passage of words is not a terribly serious thing under the circumstances. It would have been better had the Engineer not suggested the word "liar" as each had contradicted the other, and thus one had as much reason to use the word as the other.

Men can disagree without calling each other "liars."

The committee appointed to look into the matter will see who is right.

The News roasts the aldermen for not supporting the "Salary-Grab" Alderman and again compares the Alderman with the railwayman, the bricklayer, the carpenter, etc.

The News knows there is no comparison. Railwaymen, bricklayers, carpenters are railwaymen, bricklayers and carpenters for their living, but we hope the aldermen are not aldermen for their living. In fact, we have three railwaymen, a rancher, two real estate men and an editor serving as aldermen.

They are drawing their wages, or making their money in their several positions, without regard to their civic positions.

It seems awfully silly for The News to keep harping on the similarity of the alderman and the railwayman. The alderman is in the same position as the officials of the railwaymen's and carpenter's unions and how many of them are paid unless they devote all their time to the work.

The "Salary-Grab" alderman will be much more likely to get the money he seems to be serving for, if he confines his arguments to the work an alderman has to do, than to comparisons between an auxiliary position and a man's livelihood.

The argument is not (as The News is striving to bring up in order to cover the weakness of the Salary-Grab alderman's position) whether the aldermen of Medicine Hat should be paid or not, but, whether the aldermen should have the right to decide on their own pay.

If Ald. Forster were in closer touch with the ratepayers he would see how his position is viewed in the city. Naturally, the ratepayers view with just suspicion the alderman who slides into his position without a word about his intention to get into the coffers, and then refuses to submit the question of pay to the ratepayers.

It is most unfortunate that one precipitate alderman should spoil the chance of a just reward to the council for their labors. Had the question been submitted to the people in the first instance it is probable that a verdict for pay would have been given. But you can blame nobody for being unwilling to place the power of paying himself in the hands of an alderman who states plainly that he is sitting only for the money that is in it, unless one can interpret "No Pay-No Work" in any other way.

It sounds funny to hear a paper say editorially "fifteen cent gas will continue to be Medicine Hat's incentive to growth and development" only two weeks after saying (also editorially) that Medicine Hat profits nothing by its gas. Guess it sees the size of its first editorial by this time.

Even a pin has head enough to keep it from going too far.

Keep up to the times by reading The Times—the anti-graft paper, the people's paper.

The "Salary Grab" aldermen made a fine display of themselves at the last meeting of the council. Ald. Penhale left as soon as the aldermen decided to have nothing to do with depleting the treasury. This just left a quorum. Then when a question arose which did not please the other "grab" artist, Ald. Forster, he rose and went out thus breaking the quorum and stopping further business—one of the most contemptible tricks to close a meeting.

The committee appointed to look into the city's payroll books must bring in a report without fear or favor. The men interested must be lost sight of entirely and the facts revealed as they stand. The city wants the question settled.

On the coldest day this year the natural gas supply in St. Catharines stopped. The manager of the gas company states that the supply is petering out. Well, St. Catharines industries can come to Medicine Hat and be sure of a steady supply, cold or warm.

The attention of marriageable young men is called to a letter from Montana in another part of The Times. Ranchers preferred, but probably money would be a consideration. Think of the warmed slippers and darned socks, boys. And remember, the supply is limited.

The Power of the Small Ad.

(Bookseller and Stationer.)

Within the Canadian business man's reach there are more than five millions of people. His is on the straight road to fortune if he can do two things: First, have the goods; second, get the fact into the people's heads. Having the goods is easy, but getting the fact into other people's heads is a different proposition. It's far harder, first, because most people are hard headed, and secondly because it's hard to get at 'em anyhow.

The problem is, how to do it.

There are various ways of going about it.

First, you can tell your friends that you have the goods. That's doing it in a small way.

Or you can stick some of the goods in your window and with them a sign card. That's doing it on a little bigger scale.

Or you can pay a boy to distribute dodgers at your door to people who go by. That's going one better.

Or you can send out letters. OR, FINALLY YOU CAN BUY SOME SPACE IN THE NEWSPAPERS AND TELL THE READERS. THAT'S BEST OF ALL.

Each of the plans mentioned, however, belongs under the same head. They are all advertising. Merely a difference in degree.

MOST BUSINESS MEN PREFER THE MEDIUM OF THE NEWSPAPER.

Why?

Because it takes his story to the greatest number of people. It does this with the smallest amount of effort on the part of the man behind the goods. He merely writes the ad., or hires somebody else to write it for him, and pays the newspaper's bill for space when it's due. The newspaper attends to circulating his ad. It tells its subscribers what that particular merchant has to sell every time it comes out.

CONSIDER THE SMALL DEALER.

In these days of department stores and "Limiteds" and full page ads., the small dealer is apt to feel a good bit smaller than he is. The impressiveness of the big black headlines overpowers him. He gazes at the sweeps and curves of the big ad.-artist with bulging eyes. "Just see me?" cries the big fellow. "Now I describe the commercial world like a Colossi-octopus! The Terror of the Twentieth Century! I am IT!"

The little fellow stands in blank astonishment. He's only a drop in the bucket. What's the good of his little ad—His little inch-and-a-half? Why, 'twould never be seen! Throwing his money away! Putting in wee ads. in short pants for the Big Fellow to mock at!

Are you, Mr. Merchant, one of those little fellows? Do you ever find yourself thinking in little circles like over-whelmed by mere Size?—y Big that? Do you allow yourself to be Type?—by Sweeping Assertions and Broad Claims? If you do you are making a mistake. You are allowing yourself to be deceived.

You are thinking in the wrong channel, a channel that narrows as you go along. Get out of the rut. Shake yourself—freshen up your ideas. If you are one of those unhappy "always scared to death" men when you look at the handiwork of the Big advertiser, don't think of the Big Man at all. We know he is Big. We know he is Successful and "does things." We know he is a power to reckon with. But we needn't let him worry us. Let us think a bit of some of the Little men we know of. Don't some of them "do things" too?

The question before us is the power of the small business man with the small ad. What can advertising do for the small man who has much larger houses to compete with? How is he to advertise effectively in a small way? These are questions not easy to answer, but in these days of almost universal advertising it's up to every man to answer them in the best way possible, and act up to the answer, for advertise we must.

PERSISTENCY THE KEYNOTE.

In advertising there can be no set rule—except Persistency, with a great big P. General advice and general plans are very nearly useless. First of all we must realize that we have to fight a hard fight on a business battle field where the contestants give no quarter. The idea is for everybody to take all the quarters he can get, by hook or by crook, and sometimes by crookedness. The lines on which the smaller advertiser can successfully fight the battle with more formidable rivals must vary according to the field of conflict and the conditions under which the strife is waged.

The Big advertiser is very much a Reality. To the small man who is easily discouraged his armor doubtless looks like a wall of adamant. But the small man has no need to be discouraged. To paraphrase an old legend, and bring it up to date, the faint heart "don't get there." As I said before, the small man is apt to feel smaller than he really is. And he's apt to think the Big Man is bigger and more impregnable than HE really is. "Tell me what you think and I will tell you how big you are"—whether you feel able to hold your own against all odds, or like two cents in the Bank of Montreal.

We are all to quite a large extent very much creatures of our own thoughts. Those words will stand careful thinking about. If you "think" in small circles you'll "act" in small circles, and there's not much chance of your working in bigger ones.

If you want to fight with the Big advertiser for your share of trade, look for the weak spots in the Big fellow's armor, then keep jabbing there.

Maybe the advertiser in your line of business lives and thrives on a bargain-giving basis—he generally does. His flood o "bargains" never seems to cease. Each day brings its list of attractions, counted on to draw people in and lead them to buy other things in regular lines which show a large per cent. of profit. His bargains are his bait; they are his most powerful way of advertising. Take that power from him and he'd be as helpless as a great big whale flopping about out of the water. He'd be out of it for certain. His full-page ads. would be like soup with the salt left out. His two-inch black type would "tell of" a great deal, but they wouldn't "tell for" much. His one-hundred-dozen lots would lie upon his hands. He'd be IT no longer.

The small man cannot hope to meet on his own ground the advertiser who thrives on bargains and cut prices. The Big fellow can cut-do him in bigness and splurge and space. To attempt to copy those tactics in small space would be out of the question.

TALK QUALITY AND MERIT.

How then can the small ad. be made to same? It can't be done by talking Price. It can't be done by talking quantity. But it can be done by talking Quality. It can be done by talking Satisfaction. It can be done by talking Excellence of Merchandise—up-to-dateness of Style. The Big fellow preaches Price and Quantity. He can be exclamated by preaching Quality and Merit, and by everlastingly hammering at it in strong, clear notes. When the small advertiser has a point to make let him make it in no uncertain distinctness. Let him leave no room for doubt in the mind of the prospective purchaser.

Here is where the small advertiser can make his small ad. shine and scintillate and twinkle. He can give his little ad. a lustre that would turn the Big ad. green with envy. His little ad. can be set up in a neat clean-cut, distinct style, with his firm name plain and bold, and it can be kept always in the same garb. The reader will recognize it at a glance. He will know that Jones' ad. always has something fresh and interesting and pointed to say, and he'll read it as sure as a gun.

The Big ad. must divide its fire. It has forty songs to sing at each appearance—all different.

Now, the small ad. can focus its fire on just a few vital points and keep pounding. It can sing at each appearance just one simple song, and if it's sung well it will "stick." Eternal harping on one or two strings may not be picturesque to the harpist but, where it is done with skill and power, with repetition of subject but with change of word and form, it will in time make an indelible impression on the public mind.

BARGAINS GAIN CREDENCE.

The advertiser who harps on Quality and Merit and Exclusiveness, if he happens to have an occasional bargain to offer will tell it to wide open ears. The public will flock to his store, because they know that they will surely GET a bargain. They know that Jones is celebrated above all things for Quality and Merit and Reliability. The advertiser, therefore, who builds his business on the solid rock of Dependability and Trustworthiness builds better than he knows, and it will pay him a thousand fold to Advertise. In proportion to the Big full-page advertiser he will cast no mean shadow—a shadow that won't "grow less" as it grows older.

The small man's business has its own points of Excellence in which it need play second fiddle to nobody, not even the Biggest houses. If it hasn't, it's a pretty washy affair. These Points of Excellence should be taken up one by one and laid before the reader. They might be worked into the small advertising space under the general heading, "Jones' Points of Excellence." In each change of copy one point only should be dealt with, and the most should be made of it. Careful thought will be called for in framing each ad. Even a trained hand can't do a small ad. of this sort justice by "dashing" it off in a minute." It is harder to say a whole lot in a few words and make a clear impression on the reader's mind, than it is to say it in unlimited space. But once a point is made and made clearly in a few expressive words, it will "stick" in the reader's mind far better than a long-winded argument.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The liver is the largest gland in the body; its office is to take from the blood the properties which form bile. When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fulness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, bowels irregular coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, etc.

"Barkis Is Willin'" If the Man Suits

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 1.—Exasperated over having lost a contest for the county printing because she was a woman, Miss Elizabeth Soham editor of the Storm Lake Vidette, asserted her leap year prerogative, and in her current issue makes the following proposal:

"A constant fight for what rightfully belongs to her is a wear and tear on the nervous system of any woman, and we have come to the belief that in order to stay in newspaper work and maintain our health we will have to marry some good printer who can do the fighting and swearing for us. It is leap year, and this may be considered as a proposal by anyone who is qualified to fill the vacancy so evident in The Vidette office."

G. A. Craig, the bachelor editor of the Lytton Star, believing that a proposal of marriage coming from such a talented woman could not be turned down, has written his acceptance. In his paper he says:

"We believe we are eligible to fill the vacancy which Sister Soham feels exists in her print shop. We're a Missouri Democrat of forty years' standing; considered a smooth printer. As to our fighting qualities, suffice to say that we come from a family that kills; on the swearing proposition, our pressfeeder says that we should be there with the goods, as we swear in seven different languages at once when things go wrong on press night. But before we agree to take up Lizzie's burdens she will have to show credentials as to her eligibility to the vacancy which we have known existed for some time at our wigwam. She must know how to make pancakes, fry ham and eggs and make good coffee; she must have the staying qualities to chase a soiled shirt up and down a washboard until it becomes clean; she must know how to darn socks and the gable end of our trousers, etc. If the fair editress feels like filling a vacancy for a vacancy being filled, we stand ready to close the deal."

In her next issue of The Vidette Miss Soham will assure editor Craig of her ability to deliver the goods and all Iowa newspaperdom is preparing to extend congratulations to two of the brightest members of the fraternity.

Brandon to Have Professional Ball

Brandon, Jan. 31—At an enthusiastic meeting of baseball fans held in the Empire hotel to-night, it was decided to proceed with the organization of the Brandon baseball club, and to place a professional team in the Northern League for the coming season. The committee appointed at the Wednesday night meeting to canvass the citizens to purchase stock reported that the canvass had been only hastily made but they had been able to sell stock to the amount of $2600 and from the encouragement they received the committee felt confident that in a week's time this amount would be easily swelled to $5,000. It was decided to organize a joint stock company to be known as the Brandon Baseball Club, with a capital stock of $10,000 in 1000 shares at $10 each. A ten per cent. call will be made at once and a 20 per cent. on April 15, further calls to be made at the discretion of the directors.

The following board of provisional directors was then elected: W. J. Weatherstone, A. P. McInnis, A. E. O'Connor, Dr. E. J. Peltier, J. Dillon. The following provisional officers were elected: President, Dr. Latimer; vice-president, H. Maley; secretary, Rupert Magree; treasurer, W. J. Weatherstone. R. Clement was appointed as solicitor for the club. Dr. Latimer was appointed delegate to attend the meeting at Fargo next Wednesday.

Hockey Proverbs

Where there's ice there's hockey.

A slippery centre is a dangerous thing.

Half a game is better than your money back.

There's many a slip 'twixt the shot and the net.

A goal in the last minute makes all rooters kin.

A game on keen ice is worth two in the slush.

Championship teams make the money go.

Take care of the timekeeper, but let the referee take care of himself.

Too many rooters spoil the silence.

It's a long game that has no penalties.

All are not goals that go into the net—it depends on the goal umpire.

It's a poor player that can't skate both ways.

A faint kick never won a fair penalty.

A goal in time saves overtime.

Timekeepers were deceivers ever.

As you make your ice so shall you skate on it.

A player is known by the money he gets.

The best made shots of both wings gang aft agley.

You cannot gather hockey players off golf links.

When the home team cometh to the fore the visitors look out of the window.

A poor rooter and his money are soon covered.

A rolling puck gathers no goals.

Death Roll of The Ocean.

List of Wrecks & Deaths of Past Year

Gideon Young, the statistician of the Maritime exchange, has completed his annual table of wrecks at sea and he announced yesterday that the year 1907 was one of the most disastrous to life and property on the deep in several decades. Aside from the sinking of the Joy liner Larchmont in collision with the schooner Harry Knowlton in February, which disaster cost 134 lives, and the destruction of the Great Eastern Railway company's steamer Berlin, off the Hook of Holland, whereby 128 were drowned, the recorder of the Maritime exchange shows that upwards of 1000 persons went to death in ten other marine disasters.

A total of 120 members of the French battleship Iena were killed in an explosion which destroyed that ship at Toulon, march 22. When the Pacific Mail company's steamer, Santiago, founded off Chili in June, 90 passengers and crew went down with her. The steamer San Pedro sank the steamer Columbia off Point Delgado, Cal., July 22 and 110 found watery graves. The Kaplan, a Turkish steamer, foundered November 24 and drowned 112. Sixty lost their lives through the sinking of the Sultan in the Black Sea, January 24. The Hong Kong, a Chinese steamer, drowned 120 when she foundered.

The wreck of the Great Northern steamship company's steamer, Dakota a March 3 last, cost the insurance companies more than $35,000,000. The list of vessels that went away and never reached their destination is an appalling one. Those that turned into the port of missing ships during the year are the Nicaragua with a crew of 40; the Dulverton with 2; Arthur Sewell with 32; Adolph Obig, with 28; the Theodor, formerly a Cunard steamer, with 19; the Hautot, with 28; Ormsay, with 21; Daniel, with 24; Siberton, with 27; Marie, with 23; Netherby, with 24; Guiana, with 20; and a half dozen French fishing vessels, the latter with scores of men.

The Norwegian steamer Freysdale was worth $55,000 before she stranded on the Maine coast. She sold for $189 to a junk dealer three days after she struck. The old sailor superstition as to a bride on board bringing misfortune held good in the case of the L. A. Von Romondt, which was abandoned in a sinking condition October 10. The Viking with the bride of her captain making her first voyage at sea, was run into by the ship Atlas off Cape Horn and the captain and bride were lost.

Warships sent some of the craft to their last accounts. The French cruiser Kleber ran into and sank the Hugona, drowning seven of the latter's crew. The British cruiser Assistance sank the Marie. Regular liners, too, sent some fine vessels to the bottom. The Red Star liner Vanderland rammed the steamer Naworth Castle in the English channel drowning three. The Leyland liner Winnifredian sank the Ellen F. Gleason. The White Star liner Roumania sent the Natalie B. Niekenson to the bottom. The Joy liner Tennessee sank the Myronus, drowning five.

Some of the steamers lost by foundering or being abandoned were the Neptune liner Tampico, with $150,000 worth of copper among her cargo; Clavering, with 29 lives; Yoero, with 15 lives; Jabba, Lucifer, and the Hazel Branch. The number of suicides in wrecks was unusually large.

Three men were out rather late one night last week. As they were separating they discussed a little nervously the receptions that awaited them at their wives' hands, and agreed that he who didn't do what his wife told him on getting home should have to treat the others to a turkey dinner. The first man after reaching the house stumbled about the dark bedroom till he kicked the cat. The cat squalled and the man's wife raising her head from the pillow, moaned: "Well, go on; kill the poor cat and have done with it." The man frowned and muttered to himself: "It's a case of kill the cat or pay for the dinner." So he killed the cat.

The second man on his arrival could not find any matches. As he looked for some in the drawing room he bumped against a chair, and his wife yelled, "Why, don't you break the chair, careless?" Determined not to lose his bet the man got a hatchet and the sound of crashing blows soon filled the house.

The third man, getting home, stumbled on the way upstairs. His wife screamed angrily: "Go on, fall downstairs and break your neck." "Not me," said the third man, after a moment's thought. "I'll pay for the turkey dinner."

MONTREAL BOY AND GIRL HEALED BY Zam Buk

Keep Zam-Buk Handy!
Accidents will happen to the best regulated families, and the necessity of keeping handy a box of Zam-Buk—the valuable "first-aid" cannot be too strongly insisted upon.

Mr. E. Webster, 519 Seigneurs Street, Montreal, says: "One day as I was lifting a pan of water off the stove, my son Eddie ran toward me and knocked the pan upwards. The water ran over his neck and scalded him very badly. It is a very awkward place on which to keep a plaster and several things which we tried failed to give him relief. We then applied Zam-Buk (which we had used some time before for a bad gathering on my little daughter's head) and this acted like a charm. It drew away the pain and healed the scald. We have proved Zam-Buk an invaluable remedy."

Later: "I wish to add that my voice, since using Psychine, is stronger and has much more carrying power than it had before I had bronchitis, and the vocal chords do not tire with speaking."

LABOR NOTES

The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

The Trades and Labor council met last week. They was to intimate that their meetings are open to all card men in the city. Their regular meeting nights are on the fourth Thursday of every months in the court room, city hall, at 2pk.

The council does not intend to run a labor man for Ward IV this election, but are unanimous in wishing Mr. H. Morrow success, as they hold the opinion that Ward IV could not have a more fair and honest representative.

The council expect to have a visit from Mr. Leheney, a delegate from the Alberta political committee, Calgary, and expect to arrange public meetings while he is in the city. They wish to advise all union men that when the general elections come, to make strict enquiries and cast their vote irrespective of politics to the member that will assist labor legislation.

The council unanimously support Ald. Baker in the principle of the employment of married men as a first consideration, and the division of work among as many men as possible even at shorter hours of work.

LEWIS SUCCEEDS MITCHELL.

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—Thomas L. Lewis, of Bridgeport, Ohio, was declared elected president of the United Mine Workers of America at today's closing session of the annual convention.

LABOR LEADER SHOT.

St. Louis, Feb. 7.—John T. Wilson, of St. Louis, President of the International Brotherhood of Railroad Maintenance of Way employees, was shot twice Wednesday night by his brother-in-law, Frank G. Engleman, of Kansas City, Mo., and is in a critical condition.

The shooting occurred at the Wilson home here and Wilson, in a statement to the police, alleged that his wife "started a row" and Engleman joined with her.

Wilson brought suit for a divorce from his wife a few days ago and Engleman came here in connection with the case.

John T. Wilson is well known in Winnipeg and western Canada. He visited Winnipeg several times in connection with the conferences being held with the C.P.R. and their employees, the last time two years ago.

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,

Permit me to draw the attention of the readers of your labor column to the program of social reform now before the British house of Parliament, and thus to indicate the moral to be derived therefrom.

Just two years ago the Independent Parliamentary Labor Party first became an accomplished fact. A few labor members had been elected on previous parliaments, but these were by the orthodox party lines. In 1906 for the first time a compact body of thirty men took their seats in the House, pledged to a policy of complete independence—pledged to a policy of radical social and industrial reform.

For generations the Liberal party had been profuse in their promises, had posed as the historic friend of the workers, but in actual accomplishment their record had been singularly barren. In point of fact, some of the most democratic measures of recent years have been the work of the Conservative or Unionist party. The Free Education Act, the first Workmen's Compensation Act, were carried by the Salisbury administration.

That the Liberal party as a workers' party would not do, was increasingly borne in upon the working class voters and after rather more than a decade of agitation and education the efforts of the advocates of independence bore fruit in 1906, when by a coalition of the Labor and Socialist forces, the new party was returned to the House.

In the two sessions past the Labor party has succeeded by its activities, the government has, getting a number of radical reforms placed upon the statute books, notably the Trades Disputes Act, a measure which was first introduced by the government in an altogether unsatisfactory form, and amended at the bidding of the Labor party and the advanced wing on the government benches. The Liberal administration has adopted in its platform some of the main planks of the "hitherto" back Labor section.

And today the "Poor Man's Parliament" is in session. It was mainly A miners' eight hour bill, a bill to deal with land taxation, and an old age pension scheme are among the proposed measures. The reconstruction industrial legislation is the most comprehensive ever outlined in the Houses of Parliament at St. Stephens.

Yours,
Labor Omnivorous.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Irvine

(Too late for last week.)

Mrs. E. Nicholson was at home to a number of her friends in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. Hooper, leaving this mission, on Monday evening, when a very enjoyable evening was spent at games and music.

The Rev. and Mrs. H. C. L. Hooper left for Langley, B. C. on Monday evening's train. A number of friends were there to bid him God speed, though through the late train several were unable to see them off.

The first meeting of the Irvine school board was held in the office of the secretary-treasurer on Thursday Jan. 30. Present: Chairman, John Koenig; Trustees: George Schaller and Jacob Bollinger. Herbert S. Newby, secretary-treasurer.

Moved by George Schaller, seconded by J. Bollinger that Herbert S. Newby be elected the secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year. Carried.

By-law No. 1. Moved by George Schaller, seconded by John Koenig that we borrow the sum of $326.00 by way of a note from the Merchants Bank, and to be repaid as soon as this year's taxes are collected, and to pay the current rate of interest. Carried.

Moved by John Koenig, seconded by George Schaller that we pay the debenture due the Bank of Hamilton, Winnipeg, from the proceeds of the note. Carried.

Moved by George Schaller, seconded by John Koenig that we pay all outstanding accounts as far as the cash on hand will permit. Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

John Koenig, Chairman.
Herbert S. Newby, Sec-treas.

Mrs. W. J. Corbett was at home to a number of her friends on Thursday evening, when a very enjoyable time was spent.

Whist parties are in full swing in the district just at present and the young people seem to enjoy themselves in the many games that take place during the week. The order—everybody welcome.

Addison Day, the well known rancher of Medicine Hat, was in the district for the greater part of last week. We are given to understand that he expects to be in a position to ship three cars of beef at an early date.

Mr. Gottlieb Weiss has been spending several days in the Cypress Hills country, having returned at the end of the week.

The social dance given in the Irvine hall on Friday evening by the social people of Irvine, proved to be a great success. The only thing noticeable was the absence of "Gobbler" Weiss, our leading dance enthusiast. Several persons from outside points were present. Dancing was kept up until after five in the morning.

Are we ever going to have fire protection?

Constable Ashe seems to be doing some tall riding these days, and this looks as if we have got a good man at this detachment, and one that knows his job.

Doctor Ferguson is still on the trail.

Contracts are being arranged to erect more buildings on the north side of the track.

All persons still owing taxes to the Irvine school district No. 892, are requested to call in and pay same to the treasurer at his office on or before the 15th inst.

At a very near future date Irvine and district will have a piece of ground consecrated for the use of the public as a cemetery.

Mr. Cooley, who is well known to our residents of the district, has just taken a position with the post office store on South Railway Avenue as assistant postmaster. We all wish him the best of luck in his new sphere.

There is great talk among the council of having the village of Irvine incorporated as a town. They say that we shall have more power then. We certainly do need power.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Snell, from South of the Cypress, were in town for a few days last week.

On Monday the Laing Brothers gave a most entertaining show which was well attended.

There was considerable excitement here on Friday when a number of persons were summoned for non-compliance with the village ordinance in keeping pigs within one hundred feet of a dwelling house. All the defendants were fined and had to pay the costs of the court.

Benwell were the J. P.'s who were Messrs. H. J. Ferguson and E. G. on the case.

Mrs. Price was to have been at home to her friends on Friday night, but owing to her baby being taken ill she was unable to receive them. We are glad to hear that the child is doing well.

The Rev. H. Lewis Hooper, just before he went away gave the St. George's church at Irvine a very beautiful silver font.

Seven Persons

Mrs. George Murray, of this place, and Mrs. E. McDonald, of Toronto, Ont., were in town Saturday. Mrs. Murray was on her way to the Hat. Mrs. McDonald returned to the Murray ranch the same day.

We have had lots of dances at this place this winter—one almost every week. The last one was at Mr. Ed. Levin's. All report a good time.

Another successful meeting in regard to the Farmers' Store was held at Mr. John Meyers' Saturday. It was well attended and the prospects are very bright for the forming of a stock company to put up a building and operate a general store at this place.

A petition is in circulation requesting the C.P.R. company to put up a freight shed at this place, and it would appear that they are very blind to their own interests as well as the interests of the public if they don't comply with the wishes of the people. So far every homesteader and rancher who has had the opportunity has signed the petition.

Mr. Cargill has gone east to attend the Horse Breeders' convention at Ottawa, and will take in the Toronto Horse Fair before returning.

The Misses Miller and Mr. Belford were the guests of P. Lousley and wife Saturday through an accident by which their buggy was disabled. Fortunately, no one was hurt, nor much damage done.

There have been five runaways at this place within the past two months, a majority of them caused by the trains.

Mr. H. H. Foster attended the meeting at Mr. Meyers' last Saturday, and is prepared to make a flattering offer for the store site.

Mr. J. W. Butler will move on his homestead in a couple of days. He intends to keep "Bachelor's Hall" and see what Leap Year will bring forth. There are about a dozen bachelors here in fear and trembling lest the young ladies will let the year and their opportunity pass by.

Mr. Barker of the Medicine Hat ranch and Mr. Fred. Hoer of Chin Coulee took in the sights at Seven Persons this week.

Coleridge

We were all pleased to note a new feature in "The News of the District" recently introduced in The Times, and trust that it will be both interesting and instructive to those taking any interest or seeking information.

Mr. Arthur Tennison, 88 London Street, Toronto, writes enthusiastically of the merits of Psychine for all stomach troubles.

"For seven years I have had indigestion and dyspepsia. I tried scores of remedies. My room resembled a drug store with nostrums which I had bought. Eventually I used Psychine, and every dose brought permanent relief."

All throat, lung and stomach troubles quickly cured by Psychine. It is the prescription of a great specialist. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

To relieve the monotony.
Now they're putting up bets on each spat.

It is said that someone heard the City Hall bell ring at 7 a.m. the other morning. No one has yet been found, however, who will swear to it.

Medicine Hat is not the only district that is ploughing in mid-winter—only elsewhere, it is snow-ploughing.

Is it true that Dr. Boyd gnd D. G. White started to lay bets when they saw Engineer Morrison start for Ald. Baker.

Here's a secret. I have already sent in my application for first choice of the marriageable maidens making for Medicine Hat from Butte, Montana.

"Do things rather than people," would be a good thing for a few aldermen to remember. That has been changed to read: "I wont do things, unless I can do the people." Now he'll do neither.

Even the Toronto Telegram pictures winter as a special Medicine Hat production. Horrible carelessness, selecting as a cartoonist a man who has travelled no further from Toronto than Little York or Eglinton. On second thoughts methinks I remember that McCutcheon, the artist whose name appears on the picture, is the cartoonist for a Chicago paper. Then the Telegram stole the cut. Still more horrible!

Most of the performance at the Opera House comes from some drunken loafer in the audience.

Among the many Coleridge visitors to Medicine Hat last Monday were Messrs. Geo. Jenkins, Geo. Miller, Mrs. Conlin, Messrs. Leo. Conlin, Geo. Harper, Ed. Baker, Henry Cavan, Alec. Pedie and Mr. Leppard.

Mr. A. Middleton received word last week of the death of a niece, Miss Wilde, of Taber and formerly of Bowell. He is assured of the sincere sympathy of all his many Coleridge friends.

Mr. Klaiber, also, is sincerely condoled with, by all in this locality in the sad bereavement which has befallen him in the death of his wife, who passed away at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 1st inst., under the most unfortunate circumstances.

The old Dunmore depot has now been removed to Coleridge and all here. The depot, the agent and all his staff moved up here last Wednesday and the connections between the Crow's Nest train and 96 and 97 are now being made at Coleridge in place of Dunmore. The roundhouse is now finished and awaits occupation, being in full working order. The large water tanks are also in use with water pumped frfrom Ross Creek, but we hear that there is to be a new pipe line laid from Medicine Hat to here as the water there is thought to be better. Natural gas is now a feature of Coleridge, it being laid in the roundhouse and bunkhouse and offices. Altogether the prospects for the coming year are excellent.

The business partnership entered into by Messrs. W. J. Rahn and G. A. Kalish has been dissolved, Mr. Rahn continuing the business alone, while Mr. Kalish seeks fresh fields and pastures new, although we are all sorry to lose him, the ladies especially.

The heavy fall of snow here has spoiled the sport of the young people, so far as skating goes, though all are eagerly looking for every sign of more favorable weather.

One of our young men has lately been running around with mysterious remarks of having found a father-in-law, but so far fuller details are not to hand. However, we are anticipating some interesting event (very shortly when more information will be given our readers.

Walsh.

Mr. Ginter, real estate magnate from Medicine Hat spent Wednesday in town.

J. A. Grant shipped four cars of sheep to his sheep feeding station at Moose Jaw on Friday.

J. A. Grant is in Moose Jaw.

Dr. Hargrave is down from the Hat for a few days.

Mrs. Sinclair entertained a few friends on Friday evening.

Rev. Mr. Haviland conducted Anglican services on Sunday and Mr. Cameron Presbyterian services.

Rev. Mr. Ernst went to Coleridge on Friday night.

Several new settlers have arrived during the past week.

Red Cliff

Mr. Dickison arrived last week from Kansas to take charge of the Stoner Brick plant in the capacity of superintendent and has moved into the house formerly occupied by Rev. Brubaker.

Mr. Cahoun and Mr. Slattery of Bowell were Red Cliff callers one day last week.

Miss Dodge drove over to the Hat Friday.

Rev. Brubaker and family moved into their new house last week.

Fred. Courtnell was on the sick list a few days last week.

The new ice house erected for the Stoner Company is now completed and filled with ice. It is always but to prepare for warm weather while you can for we never know what day it will be 80 or 90 in the shade.

Billy Dodge took two ladies out sleigh riding one evening; they all got back alive too, strange to say.

Elmer Brubaker and family, of Bentinck visited with Rev. P. Brubaker and family last Sunday.

Fred. Courtnell drove over to Medicine Hat on business Saturday.

The most important item of this week is the fact that that bloodthirsty individual mentioned a few weeks ago in these notes has not yet captured Bab's scalp and, what is better, he isn't likely to, for forewarned is fore-armed, you know, and Bob isn't losing much sleep now-a-days.

The surveyors are again at work in Red Cliff surveying more town lots.

Mr. Buck, after quite a long absence from the plant, was again among us this week.

Seven Persons

(Later Notes)

H. H. Foster was a guest of P. Lousley and wife Saturday.

A committee of five met at John Meyer's Saturday p.m. to draft a constitution and by-laws for the Farmers' Store Association.

Mrs. George Murray, who was on her way home, after spending a week at Medicine Hat, was detained here over night on account of her horse breaking out of the stable and getting away.

Section foreman Moss and man had a narrow escape, not having time to get the hand car off the track before it was smashed by the train. This is the third hand car from Bull's Head that has been run into in the past two months.

Mrs. J. W. Brown, who has been sick, is reported convalescent.

The world's famous clairvoyant and palmist, Madame Dunbar, recently located in Calgary, is now in Medicine Hat. All should consult her.

Mounted Police Notes.

A fine of $60 and costs each was imposed on L. Howard and Stella Hartley for selling liquor without a license.

On Wednesday last Gustav Pahl was committed for trial on a charge of fraudulently taking a cheque. The cheque was sent by the provincial government to his brother Christian Pahl, in payment for road work he had carried out. Another cheque was issued to Christian Pahl on his complaining that the first had not been received. The first was cancelled. An attempt was made at the bank to cash it, and after some investigation it was traced to Gustav Pahl. He pleaded that the offense was committed innocently as only the initials of his brother appeared on the face.

The trial lasted all day, the Justices being six hours on the bench, and having a large number of witnesses to examine. The case will be tried by the Supreme Court, which meets some time in March.

The preliminary hearing in the Laframboise-Brown horse stealing case was held yesterday, occupying most of the morning and afternoon. T. Clarke and F. Downs, of Webb, and S. Goudray, of Swift Current, were the principal witnesses and, of course, the Indians. Laframboise and Brown are both committed for trial at the [illegible] court.

The evening the prisoners were [illegible] made a confession of having tried for the theft of Mr. Evans' horse, which was recaptured along with a part of Chief Porcupine's herd.

Throughout the hearings the prisoners treated the matter with levity and gave frequent expression of their jovial feeling.

Alois Zemick thought to beat his way from Chaplin to some point west. However, he didn't get any further than Medicine Hat, where he was arrested on the train on Sunday night and found a night's lodging in the Mounted Police barracks. Yesterday morning he was given a month's imprisonment for stealing a ride on the train.

Police Court News

Alfred Koenig, an old offender, again appeared in the police court last week. He was convicted of drunkenness and indecent exposure and goes to jail for three months.

There have been two more fines imposed for driving over the sidewalk. Alma Kuns, $1 and costs, and J. E. Colter, $2.50 and costs for using the sidewalk for a heavy rig.

John Endersby was convicted of assault and fined $5 and costs.

Jim Birett, the drunken navvy who made such a nuisance of himself at the Opera House on Saturday night, was charged with being drunk and disorderly and fined $5 and costs.

After several months work Chief Meiklejohn has succeeded in tracking down the jail-breaker, Frank Gallagher, who broke jail in Teston County, Mont., where he was imprisoned for larceny. A reward of $50 was offered for information which might lead to the arrest of Gallagher. The chief secured his capture at Fernie, thus earning for himself the reward. Gallagher is fighting extradition and it will take some time before the papers can be forwarded.

AN UNFORTUNATE MALADY.—A newspaper down in Maine, in telling of the death of a man through being struck by a railroad train, adds that "it will be remembered that he met with a similar accident a year ago." It is to be hoped that the habit which he appears to have contracted will not become chronic.

TIM'S JOKE.—"Did yez notice about th' joke me brother Tim played on wan av them chauffeurs?"

"I heard a turrible thing happened to him. Poor Tim."

"'Poor Tim,' the divvle! He had a shtick av dinnamite in his pocket when he wor run over."

WEAK TIRED WOMEN

How many women there are that get no refreshment from sleep. They wake in the morning and feel tireder than when they went to bed. They have a dizzy sensation in the head, the heart palpitates; they are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and the lightest household duties during the day seem to be a drag and a burden.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

are the very remedy that weak, nervous, tired out, sickly women need to restore them the blessings of good health.

They give sound, restful sleep, tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart, and make rich blood. Mrs. C. McDonald, Portage la Prairie, Man., writes: "I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and weak spells. I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking them I was completely cured.

ALMOST A DISASTER

ANOTHER MOVING PICTURE SHOW GOES UP IN SMOKE

ONE MAN BADLY BURNT, SEVERAL SLIGHTLY INJURED

A disastrous fire broke out at the new Idle Hour theatre on Thursday night, resulting in the entire loss of the new plant.

Since the opening on Monday the house had been filled each night, and on Thursday there were fully 125 persons present, every one of the 104 seats being occupied, and all standing room taken up. A large number of people were trying to gain admission to the building at the time the fire broke out, but were kept back by Mr. Williams for the second performance at nine o'clock.

Charlie Ness was operating the Cinematograph on a platform at the front of the hall, and the long spool hung over the side of the platform. By some means the films below caught fire. There was a loud explosion and in a few seconds the building was in flames. The audience rose and rushed pell-mell towards the back door, which had been thrown open immediately. About two-thirds of the people made their escape in this way. In the mad scramble three or four ladies at the rear were trodden upon, and the youngsters, of whom there were a score or so present, also had a pretty bad time. Joe Leonard tried to break the glass in the windows facing on South Railway street and cut his hands severely. After that in trying to effect an exit through the back door he got under and was trampled upon. The prompt opening of the back door by the pianist, W. J. Fleming, enabled the audience to quit the building in a very short space of time. Both doors open inwards and would have formed a death-trap but for his promptitude, as the pressure of the crowd behind would have made the opening of the doors an impossibility a few seconds later. The door on South Railway street was opened by Tom Bell, who was rather badly burned on the left hand and the left side of the face. Charley Ness was the worst sufferer, his hands and face being severely burnt, necessitating his removal to the hospital. Mr. Bell was incapacitated from business for a day or so.

The alarm was given by T. Bullivant, who was about to enter the building when the explosion occurred. Another resident who was supposed to have gone to call out the brigade was found waiting patiently at the foot of the pole for someone to come and take the alarm.

The brigade were on the scene of the fire in a remarkably short space of time. People who heard the bell, (it gave eight or ten bangs and then stopped), and rushed to the spot, found the fire boys already at work. W. T. Finlay and the chief who were in the curling rink when they heard the alarm, immediately ran to the fire hall, but both the chemical wagon and the hose wagon were away down Main street before them. The chemical wagon reached the fire first and immediately was put into commission, the flames, in a few minutes, being brought under control. All the people had escaped from the hall before the brigade arrived, but an attempt was being made to rescue the piano by J. Dalton, W. Toms and Walter Turnbull. The fumes from the chemical extinguisher and the smoke overcame them, however, and they were compelled in the end to abandon the instrument to its fate.

Some idea of the rapidity with which the fire was got under control by the brigade may be gathered from the fact that while the piano frame is badly charred, the keys all burnt and the instrument ruined, a number of sheets of music on the top of the piano were scarcely touched by the fire. The walls and ceiling of the theatre were covered with cotton, over which paper was pasted and and through this the flame ran in a flash.

While the fire lasted it was a very fine sight from without. A tongue of flame shot up to a great height (eye-witnesses say it appeared to reach to a height of forty feet) carrying with it chunks of burning material, and the reflection seen from a distance was very brilliant. The films burn brightly and it was not until the woodwork caught fire that there was any quantity of smoke.

At 11 o'clock the brigade were called out a second time—the fire having broken out again at the back of the building. This was soon extinguished.

The total loss sustained by Messrs. Williams & Ness, the proprietors of the theatre, is $1000. The building is owned by James Mitchell, who is at present out on the ranch.

A plucky act was performed by Oliver Barreau, a twelve year old boy, who was at the show when the disaster occurred. He knew that exposure of the electric wiring by the burning of the insulation, would be dangerous, and he had the presence of mind to throw out the main switch, thus cutting off the current. The engine was thrown off by Pete Smith.

Mr. Williams had his hair singed and his arms cut in breaking the front glass. One woman lost a fur coat and piles of caps, mitts, gloves and ruffs were carried out by the firemen.

That there were no fatalities is due only to good fortune and the fact that the flimsy structure was a one-storey building.

This was the first practical test of the chemical engine and the brigade boys said it worked well, holding the fire down until the water could be turned on.

The proprietors have the greatest faith in the moving picture idea, and state their intention, as soon as a building can be arranged for of going forward with the project.

BABY BACHELORS' BALL

THE BEST BALL OF ALL GIVEN BY THE BOYS

ABOUT SIXTY COUPLES WILL LOOK FOR ANOTHER NEXT YEAR

No one in Medicine Hat thought the Opera House could be made such a presentable hall as demonstrated at the ball on Friday night. Not only was it presentable, but the boys had secured an artistic effect that was worthy of much better rooms than the place where the boys in the "gods" whistle to catchy tunes, hiss the villain and clap the hero. There was nothing of the kitchen chairs, the damaged walls, and the punctured scenery in view. All was beauty from the decorations to the ladies.

The boys had worked night and day for a week to beat previous efforts—and they succeeded. The bunting hung in the centre was relieved of its stiffness and monotony by Japanese parasols and lanterns. Along the walls, up to a height of nine feet, red bunting hid the plaster and lack of it. At the back easy chairs and couches were fronted by beautiful rugs, all partially hidden by draperies. Even the "belle" looked better in these easy seats. So comfortable was it in there that many preferred to sit and watch the dancing, although the floor had been as well attended to as was possible.

On the stage were the orchestra and more easy chairs. A wide stairway planked by palms, led up the centre, and at the back the refreshments were served, with none of the rush and scramble that usually attends such occasions.

Leonard's orchestra played at its best; and the swing of the music, the beautiful decorations, the pretty, well-dressed ladies, the easy chairs, the order of the whole affair, made the evening a delight from beginning to end.

There were eighteen dances with a number of extras and encores and about eighty people were on the floor for each dance, there being about 120 in attendance.

Among the ladies present were: Mrs. W. T. Finlay in a beautiful black gown with gold girdle and pearl and diamond ornaments; Mrs. Cousins, black, amethyst and pearl ornaments; Mrs. V. C. James, embroidered point de esprit over Dresden silk, beautiful lace on the corsage and diamond and turquoise ornaments; Mrs. C. D. New Principal Appointed

To Supervise Work In Both Schools

A special meeting of the school board was held on Friday night. Present: The chairman, W. J. Brotherton; trustees Milne, Niblock and Kennedy.

The report of the committee appointed to go into the matter of the principalship was read as follows:

Gentlemen:

Your committee appointed to report to you regarding the principalship of your schools beg to state that we have gone very fully into the matter with the best educationalists available.

We are convinced that two qualified teachers could do all the work in the high school and not be overtaxed.

We also find that the supervision of the public school classes demands more attention so as to have a continuity of studies throughout the schools and the teachers put into closer touch with the extra work.

First: We suggest that a principal be engaged to take charge of the high school and superintend the public schools.

Second: That Mr. Hay, as assistant principal, be requested to relieve the principal as far as possible of public school work and supervision for this term, to allow the principal to devote his time more fully to high school work.

D. MILNE,
J. KENNEDY.

Mr. Milne went on to say that the committee had consulted with Dr. Scott of Calgary, who thought two men should be capable of doing all the work in connection with the high school if they were men trained according to the teaching methods in vogue in Alberta, but when it was necessary to keep bringing men from the east it was more difficult. Dr. Scott was opposed to separation between the high school and public school, as continuity in the work was spoiled thereby. He also thought it was essential to get more supervision in the public schools. It was necessary to get a teacher who was, first of all, a man—a manly man, who would enforce discipline, who would gain the respect of his pupils without adopting high-handed methods. They required a man with experience in Alberta. A difficulty which the board were likely to encounter was that the best men were continually being snapped up for inspectorships. It was a difficult thing to get qualified men to fill the positions.

Continuing Mr. Milne said the committee thought the best man possible should be obtained. The past season had been a hard one, owing to the lack of proper organization in the schools. In making a decision it had been the aim of the committee to do the best thing for the schools, while not throwing away needlessly the ratepayers' money.

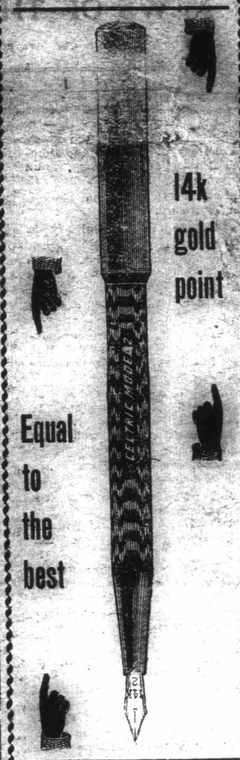
The report was adopted.

Mr. Kennedy stated that up to the present time there was a part of the high school work which had never been taken up.

Mr. Brotherton stated that the high school pupils had petitioned the board asking that a third teacher be appointed. Messrs. Webb and Ware had waited on Mr. Milne in regard to the matter. If a new man were obtained Mr. Ware would be able to continue to do high school work.

Mr. Niblock wanted to know if the suggestion of the committee was that the supervisor of public schools has too much work to do. Mr. Milne explained that at the present time there were teachers of different standings, with different methods of teaching. They came from different parts of the province and from the east, and the result was that there was an overlapping of work between the standards.

Mr. Milne said that the present was the hardest time in the history of the schools. He thought the board would be in a better position at midsummer.



Mr. Niblock thought the committee's report rather peculiar. He did not exactly understand what it meant. Was it correct that the board had not been getting sufficient

THE CITY FATHERS

ENGINEER COMES IN FOR MORE CRITICISM —STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATE WANTED NO BIDS FOR DEBENTURES

Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Penhale.

The Union of Canadian Municipalities wrote regarding the work of the Union and asking the council to become members of that body, enclosing an account for $15, the fee being $3 per thousand for all towns with a population greater than one thousand. The communication reviewed the various activities of the Union, and the results accomplished in the protection of streets and highways and prevention of monopolies. The amendment to the Dominion Railway act, which protects streets and highways in the matter of electric railway charters, was brought about through their influence. The government telephone policies of Manitoba and other provinces were the fruit of their work. The matter of the fee was referred to the finance committee.

The letter went on to state that the convention to be held in Medicine Hat in July and August would prove the most representative gathering of municipal men ever held in Canada. It was hoped that every municipality in the Union would arrange to have a delegate here.

The Merchants bank wrote asking that the new block of debentures be handed over to them as promised. Filed.

The Canada Pipe Company wrote asking payment of account for wooden pipe supplied in September last. Laid on the table.

A communication from the solicitor regarding the appointment of a city magistrate stated that such appointments were made by the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council, and it would be necessary to present a petition to him asking that a magistrate be appointed and agreeing to pay a stated salary. Ald. Spencer thought the appointment of a stipendiary urgently needed. It was the usual thing in cities the size of Medicine Hat. In answer to a question relating to fines and fees for arrests the solicitor stated that these should be paid in to the city treasury. Ald. Penhale knew that the police did not get a cent of such monies.

As regards the salary of stipendiary magistrate, the solicitor did not think a suitable man could be obtained for less than $600. He thought about $750 would be a reasonable salary. The Calgary magistrate had for many years past been receiving $1200. In Winnipeg $2500 was paid. Ald. Penhale moved that the necessary application be made to the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council. Ald. Baker was in favor of the appointment but thought the matter should be left over till there was a full council. Ald. Penhale's motion was carried, Ald. Baker dissenting.

A. B. LeBlanc wrote asking for payment of account against Mrs. Jas. Chapman for provisions supplied. Ald. Spencer stated that the money was spent without the knowledge of the council. Mr. LeBlanc to be notified that the city could not accept responsibility for the account.

No bids have been received on the debentures. O. Lejer wired asking for an option till the 14th inst., at 90. Woods, Gundy & Co. asked for an option for one month at 92½.

The Merchants bank wrote as follows:

Dear Sir,

I have the following telegram from Messrs. Aemilius Jarvis & Co., Toronto:

"Not bidding for sidewalk debentures. If not satisfactory offer received, endeavor to secure option, best terms possible."

If their request is considered please communicate direct with Aemilius Jarvis Company.

Yours truly,
V. C. JAMES, Man.

P.S.—I have received a letter from Messrs. George Stimson & Co., 10 King street west, Toronto, asking me to secure, if possible, an option for them on the bonds now for sale for a reasonable time and on a fair basis. If the council wish to consider this they might communicate with the above firm. V.C.J.

The George Stimson Co., wrote asking an option on the debentures as they had a client at the moment for a reasonable amount.

The clerk stated that the Woods, Gundy Co. had, since their telegram, been asking for a reply. The Mayor did not think anything should be done until the financial statement was presented. The communications were, accordingly, laid on the table.

Accounts were referred to finance committee.

The Mayor said he had spoken to Mr. Lawrence in regard to the proposed spur track. The superintendent had been engaged in correspondence in reference to the matter. Ald. Baker thought there would be a decided objection to the use of the road allowance for track purposes.

The Mayor brought up a matter in connection with the instructions issued to the engineer to obtain all supplies by tender. The engineer had not carried out his instructions but had merely asked a number of firms for estimates for what was required. The engineer, the Mayor said, was causing far too much trouble. He got things muddled up and would not do what he was told to do. The city was in some cases being charged five, or even ten, times the retail prices. Ald. Penhale did not think the question amounted to anything. Referred back to special committee to report along with tenders obtained by the engineer.

Finance committee recommended payment of the following accounts:

T. Morrey	$ 3 75
R. Sinnister	5 00
C.P.R. Telegraph	4 00

Ald. Baker gave notice of introduction of a bylaw to levy a special waterworks tax annually, of five per cent. per foot frontage on all properties past which water mains run, and reducing rates to consumers to the amount they are charged for special assessment.

A by-law making the cost of testing meters chargeable to consumer complaining, in case meter is found to be correct, was read a first and second time, considered in committee and passed. In committee it was decided to make the charge $1, in place of $2 as was originally proposed. The money will be returned to consumer if meter is found to be defective.

The council adjourned at 10.15 till the 25th, when the financial statement will be ready.

help in the schools? Mr. Milne said things had not been right in the schools since mid-summer.

Mr. Niblock: "That is because the principal has been sick."

Mr. Milne said it was necessary to get a man who was not sick. Mr. Brotherton pointed out that according to the committee's recommendation it was not necessary to appoint three teachers for the high school.

Mr. Kennedy thought it was advisable, so far as possible, to harmonize the teaching in the schools. So long as the board continued to draw on Ontario for teachers there would be lack of uniformity.

Mr. Niblock: "We must draw on the east. We cannot get teachers from Alberta and Saskatchewan." The board were not likely to be able to do so for the next five years.

Mr. Brotherton asked Mr. Hay what success he had met with in his attempt to harmonize the work in the different classes in the Montreal street school. The results, Mr. Hay said, were very satisfactory. He had organized monthly teachers' meetings and asked the teachers to hand in a plan of the work done each month. The scheme had proved highly beneficial. Over-lapping and lack of continuity in school work, which had been the greatest difficulty, were eliminated. He had been handicapped in carrying out his plan, as he was only vice-principal and the teachers might have refused to carry out his suggestions. They had, however, supported him in the carrying out of his ideas.

Mr. Niblock did not believe in temporizing; if more help were required now was the time to get it, at whatever cost. Mr. Brotherton said that the first thing to do was to establish the principal as the one head of the system; help could be obtained later if it were found to be necessary.

In answer to Mr. Milne Mr. Hay stated that the plan of co-ordination had been carried out in the Montreal street school only.

Mr. Milne thought an extra teacher might be put on at Easter if the necessity were apparent.

An application for the position of principal from Clarence Sansom of the Central School, Calgary, was read, and also testimonials from Dr. Scott, of Calgary, and an inspector of schools in New Brunswick. The application was accepted, Mr. Sansom to be notified by wire and letter.

The new principal has had six years experience, always in high school work, except last year, when he was science master in the Prince Albert high school. He is a B.A. of New Brunswick university, where he obtained first class honors in mathematics and physics. In his application he stated that he might be unable to come to Medicine Hat before the end of March, but would make arrangements to be here as soon as possible.

A MEDICINE HAT WOMAN SAID TO BE ADRIFT.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

MINOT, N.D., Feb. 14.—Adrift with four babies, far from home and with no friends or acquaintances to fall back on, Mrs. Anna Wilbam landed in Minot recently without a penny.

Mrs. Wilbam lived formerly in Medicine Hat, Alberta. Her husband died and left her without resources. She thought that she could work her way through to St. Paul where she has friends, so got on the Canadian Pacific train at Medicine Hat and started for the east. She soon found that she did not have more than half enough money and was forced to get off at Minot.

She was found at the Soo depot byspecial agent Welch, who took her and the babies to the office of Judge Murray. Judge Murray has never been known to fail to help a woman who was in trouble. He took her to the Windsor hotel and it was not longbefore enough money had been secured to buy her a ticket for St. Paul.

So far as can be gathered nothing is known of Mrs. Wilbam in the city.

HOTEL EXTENSIONS

An extension to the American hotel will be put under way on the 1st of March. A three-storey brick building is to be erected of which the ground floor will include bar-room, store rooms and wash house. The old frame building will be moved to the rear. Day labor is being employed.

The Cosmopolitan also is planning large extensions this year, which will be carrie out at an early date.

Jimmy Turpin expects to take an extended trip in the near future to Dunmore, Coleridge and points east.

Mr. Jeremy who has been head of the drygoods department in Stewart & Tweed's has resigned his position.

Mr. Sherwood, C.P.R. despatcher here, left for Cranbrook last week.

The Red Cliff Brick Company expect to do their first burning this week.

Shortly after lunch on Friday the completion of the cement work on the new bridge was celebrated. The tooting of the engine whistle brought a rush to the fire hall. It was thought to be another fire alarm.

The Misses Barker of Killarney who have been the guests of their aunt, Mrs. J. H. Cunliffe, left for their home last week.

Miss Jennie Marshall of New Westminster, B.C., is the guest of the Misses Cunliffe.

The Misses Hardy, of Lethbridge, were the guests of Miss Cousins for the Bachelors' Ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen have gone back to Calgary.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin and Master Harold went Friday night to Edmonton for a week's visit.

A letter of protest at the action of the Board has been received from the High school scholars which was crowded out this week but will be published next week.

A GREAT SHOW COMING.

Owing to a sudden and unexpected change in the routing of the compnay which was to appear here for an entire week early in March Medicine Hat theatre goers and music lovers have a treat in store here on WEDNESDAY FEB. 19 for FOUR nights of one of the largest, strongest and highest salaried repertoire companies on the road today, the famous Arrington Comedians, who will play at the Opera House on the above date. This company carries twenty people and their own Ladies' Orchestra, the Polmatier Sisters, five young ladies, beautiful, accomplished, and each a solo artist. The Ladies' Orchestra, in addition to furnishing the incidental music for the play and specialties renders a program of high grade musical novelties each evening, a half hour before the curtain rises on the play. The comuany is up in forty-five different plays, selected from the great dramatic successes of the present and past two seasons. Each play presented will be mounted with every attention to scenic and costume detail. There will be a change of play and specialties at each performance. Six special vaudeville acts are carried, prominent among these being the clever children Inez, Ady and Helen in brilliant and up-to-date singing and dancing specialties, brilliantly costumed. This company has been remarkably successful, is now in its fifth year and has broken the record at many places. At Deadwood on its third return date since August, it played to the largest house since the opening of the new theatre. This is only one day's notice, but we urge everybody to turn out. Prices 50 cents and 75 cents; children 35 cents.

Recently The Garbutt Business College of Calgary has installed a complete equipment for a telegraphy department, and is now in a position to teach thoroughly both railway and commercial operating. This department is in charge of Mr. A. Low, who has had twenty-seven years' experience with the G.T.R. As there is a great demand for competent railway operators, at very remunerative salaries this department is bound to grow and to succeed.

No combine here; straight forward dealing.

No occasion for a Saturday bargain, as you get bargains here every day.

I am going to Thompson's Furniture Store across the track, as his prices are only half what others charge.

I saw Burdock Blood Bitters recommended for just such a case as mine and I got two bottles of it, and found it to be an excellent blood medicine. You may use my name as I think that others should know of the wonderful merits of Burdock Blood Bitters."

ATHLETICS

There was a large turnout on Tuesday evening to see the return match against the Maple Creek team. Throughout there was intense excitement, the game being very close and the teams pretty evenly matched, though the Maple Creek team were the heavier. Play was very fast and the spectators were kept in a state of tense expectancy and interest during the whole match.

Half time found the game to the advantage of the Creek team, who scored one goal. In the second half the score was tied by a goal from a side shot of Hawke's. As no other score was made the game stood a draw when time was called, and the spectators asked that the tie be played out. The Maple Creek team would not agree to this unless the bets were declared off and, as the referee did not see his way to grant their request the match ended, the score standing 1-1.

The line-up was as follows:

Referee—C. S. Pingle.

Judge of play—Wm. Curley.

Timekeeper—James Fleming.

The Maple Creek Signal says that all the playing for the Medicine Hat boys was done by two Calgary players. We don't know who they could have been, but The Signal should know. This paper also says "the teams refused to play any longer to break the tie on account of the referee not declaring bets off." The refusing was all done by the Maple Creek boys.

The annual general meeting of the Medicine Hat Cricket Club will be held in Mr. Fred. S. Pingle's office, on Tuesday next, Feb. 18, at 8 p.m. Business—The reports of the secretary and treasurer and the election of officers for the coming season.

Vancouver is after Deacon White, manager of last year's Edmonton baseball team.

The following curlers went to Winnipeg last week to participate in the bonspiel there: D. C. Barker, H. W. Campbell, F. S. Pingle, skip. In Winnipeg G. W. Pingle joined the team. Their first game was played against Johnstone of the Thistles, and the score was 21 to 2, the wrong way. Their next appearance before the footlights was in a game with Stocking of Duluth. This time they did better, but the other fellows did best. The score was 18 to 8. The special train ordered to bring back the prizes has been cancelled.

On Friday Pingle beat McMillan of Brandon by a score of 12 to 11.

AMATEUR BASEBALL.

The amateur baseball enthusiasts are anticipating a busy season this year. Efforts are being made to form a City league composed of four or five teams, including last year's champion Bachelor Club Nine, C.P.R. Y.M.C., and possibly an independent city team. Much may be expected in the way of sport from this source in the absence of professional ball. Already a magnificent trophy in the form of a silver cup has been donated to the league by G. W. Elliott, jeweler, which will be known as the Elliott Cup. Get together boys, and be prepared to enter your club at a meeting which will be called shortly.

NEW RACE CIRCUIT.

This summer, for the first time, a racing circuit will include Medicine Hat, the dates having been fixed for July 21 and 22. Judge Mitchell is expected back in the city during the course of a week or so, and on his return the reorganization of the Turf Association will take place. A few weeks ago the Turf Association took over the forty acres which the Agricultural Society have been holding. There was a payment of $175 which the Society lose, but this is partly balanced by the gift of $100 from the Turf Club.

A large number of the Turf Club members have not paid up their subscriptions and these are to be notified that their names will be struck off the books after a certain date unless they make good all payments.

Henry Keech and August Thurn paid Irvine a business trip on Thursday.

Walter Ranton and Mary Koenig returned from Medicine Hat on Saturday morning.

Mrs. Chas. Lye, of Graburn, spent several days in town this week the guest of Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Campbell.

W. D. Reesor the well known Liberal politician from Graburn favored us with his genial presence this week.

Tenders are now advertised for carrying mail between Walsh and Graburn on Fridays. Mr. Chas. Briggs, who has so long and efficiently performed this service as well as acted as postmaster at Graburn, has, we believe, tendered his resignation, with the intention of severing all connection with what is, in his case, a thankless—and in the case of every country postmaster under the present regime—an ill-paid position.

The hotel is commencing to appear above ground. Wonder how the proprietors and owners expect to get a license—that is if the liquor license act is to govern the granting of one.

We understand it is the intention of the C.P.R. to make considerable improvements here this year. A new station is to be built, a water tank erected, the water being piped from the hills, and a new sidetrack laid. It is to be hoped, however, that faster time will be made in completing whatever improvements the C.P.R. has decided upon than has been made in the erection of the section house.

Seven Persons

Mr. Cargill returned from the east last Thursday.

Mr. Wickett, the despatcher at Medicine Hat and Mr. Rice of the same place were visitors Sunday at Seven Persons.

The by-laws and constitution for the Farmers' Store were adopted at Saturday's meeting. The Store expects to be in running order by May 1, with a capital stock of $10,000. The next meeting will be March 7, at the section house.

Mr. Foster called on Seven Persons friends Saturday, also attended the store meeting.

The next dance will be at Mr. Wellington's next Tuesday evening.

Mr. Logelin is coming into town this spring and make a business of locating settlers in this vicinity.

Mr. Rob. Endersby is going east to take a position. The community is sorry to lose him, as he is considered one of the best bronco breakers in this part of Alberta.

School is to be opened about the first of March. We are sorry Miss

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

To save his companion's reason Meredith more than once drugged his food, but when the land began to rise beneath their feet in slight billowlike inequalities—the deposit of the glacial age—Durnovo refused to stop for the preparation of food. Eating dry biscuits and stringy tinned meat as they went along, the four men—three blacks and one white—followed in the footsteps of their mad pilot.

"We're getting to the mountains, we're getting to the mountains! We shall be there tonight! Think of that, Meredith—tonight!" he kept repeating with a sickening monotony. And all the while he stumbled on. The perspiration ran down his face in one continuous stream; at times he paused to wipe it from his eyes with the back of his hands, and, as these were torn and bleeding, there were smears of blood across his cheeks.

The night fell. The moon rose, red and glorious, and the beasts of this untrodden forest paused in their search for food to watch with wondering, fearless eyes that strange, unknown animal—man.

It was Durnovo who, climbing wildly, first saw the break in the trees ahead. He gave a muffled cry of delight, and in a few minutes they were all rushing, like men possessed, up a bare slope of broken shale.

Durnovo reached the summit first. A faint pleasant odor was wafted into their faces. They stood on the edge of a vast tableland melting away in the yellow moonlight. Studded all over, like sheep in a meadow, were a number of little bushes and no other vegetation.

Victor Durnovo stooped over one of these. He buried his face among the leaves of it, and suddenly he toppled over.

"Yes," he cried as he fell; "it's simiacine!"

And he turned over, with a groan of satisfaction, and lay like a dead man.

CHAPTER XIV.

ONE morning three months later Guy Oscard drew up in line his flying column. He was going back to England with the first consignment of simiacine. During the twelve weeks that lay behind there had been constant reference made to his little body of picked men, and the leader had selected with grave deliberation that promised well.

The lost soldier that was in him was all astir in his veins as he reviewed his command in the cool air of early morning. The journey from Msala to the plateau had occupied a busy two months. Oscard expected to reach Msala with his men in forty days. Piled up in neat square cases, such as could be carried in pairs by a man of ordinary strength, was the crop of simiacine, roughly valued by Victor Durnovo at £40,000. Ten men could carry the whole of it, and the twenty cases set close together on the ground made a bed for Guy Oscard. Upon this improvised couch he gravely stretched his bulk every night all through the journey that followed.

It was on the open ground in front of the tents that Guy Oscard drew up his quick marching column before the sun had sprung up in its fantastic tropical way from the distant line of virgin forest. As he walked along the line, making a suggestion here, pulling on a shoulder rope there, he looked stanch and strong as any man might wish to be. His face was burned so brown that eyebrows and mustache stood out almost blond, though in reality they were only brown. His eyes did not seem to be suffering from the heaviness noticeable in others; altogether, the climate and the mystic breath of the simiacine did not appear to affect him as they did his companions. This was probably accounted for by the fact that, being chief of the hunters, most of his days had been passed on the lower slopes in search of game.

Oscard gave the signal for the men to start, and the long caravan defiled. The porters nodded to Meredith with a great display of white teeth, while the head men, the captains of tens, stepped out of the ranks and shook hands.

Before they had disappeared over the edge of the plateau Joseph came forward to say goodby to Oscard.

"And it is understood," said the latter, "that I pay in to your account at Lloyd's bank your share of the proceeds."

Joseph grinned. "Yes, sir; if you please; presumin' it's a safe bank."

Meredith walked a little way down the slope with Oscard.

"Goodby, old chap!" he said, when the parting came. "Good luck, and all that. Hope you will find all right at home. By the way," he shouted after him, "give my kind regards to the Gordons at Loango."

And so the first consignment of simiacine was sent from the plateau to the coast.

Guy Oscard was one of those deceptive men who only do a few things and do those few very well. In forty-three days he deposited the twenty precious cases in Gordon's go-downs at Loango and paid off the porters, of whom he had not lost one. These duties performed, he turned his steps toward the bungalow. He had refused Gordon's invitation to stay with him until the next day, when the coasting steamer was expected. To tell the truth, he was not very much prepossessed in Maurice's favor, and it was with a doubtful mind that he turned his steps toward the little house in the forest between Loango and the sea.

"And when did you leave them?" asked Jocelyn, after her visitor had explained who he was.

"I left them forty-four days ago," he replied.

"And were they well?"

"Oh, yes," he replied. "You know Meredith?"

"Yes," she said. "We know Mr. Meredith."

The visitor did not speak at once, and she looked up at him over the flowers, with grave politeness.

"Meredith," he said, "is one of the most remarkable men I have ever met."

"Really," she replied, with a kindly interest. "How?"

"He is not the man I took him for. He is so wonderfully polite and gentle and pleasant."

"Are you going back to—them?"

"No, I leave tomorrow morning early by the Portuguese boat. I am going home to be married."

"Indeed! Then I suppose you will wash your hands of Africa forever?"

"Not quite," he replied. "I told Meredith that I would be prepared to go up to him in case of emergency, but not otherwise. I shall, of course, still be interested in the scheme. I take home the first consignment of simiacine; we have been very successful, you know. I shall have to stay in London to sell that. I have a house there."

"Are you to be married at once?" inquired Jocelyn, with that frank interest which makes it so much easier for a man to talk of his own affairs to a woman than to one of his own sex.

"As soon as I can arrange it," he answered, with a little laugh. "There is nothing to wait for. We are both orphans, and fortunately we are fairly well off."

He was fumbling in his breast pocket and presently he rose, crossed the room and handed her, quite without afterthought or self consciousness, a photograph in a morocco case.

Explanation was unnecessary, and Jocelyn Gordon looked smilingly upon a smiling, bright young face.

"She is very pretty," she said honestly.

Whereupon Guy Oscard grunted unintelligibly.

"Millicent," he said, after a little pause—"Millicent is her name."

"Millicent?" repeated Jocelyn. "Millicent what?"

"Millicent Chyne."

Jocelyn folded the morocco case together and handed it back to him.

"She is very pretty," she repeated slowly, as if her mind could only reproduce—it was incapable of creation.

Oscard looked puzzled. Having risen, he did not sit down again, and presently he took his leave, feeling convinced that Jocelyn was about to faint.

When he was gone the girl sat wearily down.

"Millicent Chyne," she whispered. "What is to be done?"

"Nothing," she answered to herself after awhile. "Nothing. It is not my business. I can do nothing."

She sat there alone, as she had been all her life, until the short tropical twilight fell over the forest. Quite suddenly she burst into tears.

"It is my business," she sobbed. "It is no good pretending otherwise; but I can do nothing."

* * * * * * * *

Four months elapsed and the excitement created in the small world of western Africa by the first dazzling success of the simiacine expedition began to subside. The thing took its usual course. At first the experts disbelieved and then they prophesied that it could not last. Finally the active period of envy, hatred and malice gave way to a sullen tolerance not unmixed with an indefinite grudge toward Fortune who had favored the brave once more.

Maurice Gordon was in daily expectation of news from that faroff favored spot they vaguely called the plateau. And Jocelyn did not pretend to conceal from herself the hope that filled her whole being, the hope that Jack Meredith might bring the news in person.

Instead came Victor Durnovo.

He came upon her one evening when she was walking slowly home from a mild tea party at the house of a missionary. Hearing footsteps on the sandy soil, she turned and found herself face to face with Durnovo.

"I was coming along to see you," he said, and there was a subtle offense in his tone.

She did not trouble to tell him that Maurice was away for ten days. She felt that he knew that.

"When do you go back?" she asked carelessly.

"Almost at once," in a tone that apologized for causing her necessary pain. "I must leave tomorrow or the next day. I do not like the idea of Meredith being left too long alone up there with a reduced number of men. Of course, I had to bring a pretty large escort. I brought down £60,000 worth of simiacine."

"Have you had any more sickness among the men?" she asked at once in a tone of half veiled sarcasm which made him wince.

"No," he answered; "they have been quite all right."

"What time do you start?" she asked. "There are letters for Mr. Meredith at the office. Maurice's head clerk will give them to you."

She knew that these letters were from Millicent. She had actually had them in her hand. She had inhaled the faint, refined scent of the paper and envelopes.

They had reached the gate of the bungalow garden. She turned and held out her hand in an undeniable manner. He bade her goodby and went his way, wondering vaguely what had happened to them both. The conversation had taken a different turn from what he had expected and intended. But somehow it had got beyond his control. He had looked forward to a very different ending to the interview. And now he found himself returning somewhat disconsolately to the wretched hotel in Loango—dismissed—sent back. The next day he actually left the little west African coast town, turning his face northward with bad grace. Even at that distance he feared Jack Meredith's half veiled sarcasm. Durnovo had only been allowed to come down to the coast under a promise, gracefully veiled, but distinct enough, that he should only remain twenty hours in Loango.

Jocelyn avoided seeing him again. Four days later she was riding through the native town of Loango, accompanied by a lady friend, when she met Victor Durnovo. The sight of him gave her a distinct shock. She knew that he had left Loango three days before with all his men. There was no doubt about that. Moreover, his air was distinctly furtive—almost scared. It was evident that the chance meeting was as undesired by him as it was surprising to her.

"I thought you had left," she said shortly, pulling up her horse with undeniable decision.

"Yes, but I have come back for—for more men."

She knew he was lying, and he felt that she knew.

"Indeed!" she said. "You are not a good starter."

She turned her horse's head, nodded to her friend, bowed coldly to Durnovo and trotted toward home. In the forest she applied the spur, and beneath the whispering trees, over the silent sand, the girl galloped home as fast as her horse could lay legs to ground.

CHAPTER XV.

ON nearing the bungalow Jocelyn turned aside into the forest where a little colony of huts nestled in a hollow of the sand dunes.

"Nala," she cried, "the paddlemaker. Ask him to come to me."

In a few moments a man emerged from a shed of banana leaves. He was a scraggy man, very lightly clad, and a violent squint handicapped him seriously in the matter of first impressions.

"I came to you," said Jocelyn, "because I know that you are an intelligent man and a great traveler."

"Where do you wish me to go?"

"To Msala, on the Ogowe river. When can you leave?"

"Now."

"You can hire a dhow," she said, "and on the river you may have as many rowers as you like. You must go very quickly to Msala. There you must ask about the Englishman's expedition. Some of the men are at Msala now. They were going up country to join the other Englishmen far away—near the mountains. They have stopped at Msala. Find out why they have not gone on, and come back very quickly to tell me."

She gave him money and rode on home. Before she reached the bungalow the paddlemaker passed her at a trot, going toward the sea.

She waited for three days, and then Victor Durnovo came again. Maurice was still away. There was an awful sense of impending danger in the very air, in the loneliness of her position. Yet she was not afraid of Durnovo. She had left that fear behind. She went to the drawing room to see him full of resolution.

"I could not go away," he said after relinquishing her hand, "without coming to see you."

Jocelyn said nothing. The scared look which she had last seen in his face was no longer there, but the eyes were full of lies.

"Jocelyn," the man went on, "I suppose you know that I love you. Will you marry me?" he asked.

"No!"

"Why?"

"Because I not only do not care for you, but I despise and distrust you."

"Then," he said, "I will be candid with you. I intend you to marry me. I have intended it for a long time. I am not going down on my knees to ask you to do it. That is not my way. But if you drive me to it I will make your brother Maurice go down on his knees and beg you to marry me."

"I don't think that you will do that," answered the girl steadily. "Whatever your power over Maurice may be, it is not strong enough for that. You overrate it."

"Suppose," he said in a low, hissing voice, "that I possess knowledge that I have only to mention to one or two people to make this place too hot for Maurice Gordon. If he escaped the fury of the natives it would be difficult to know where he could go. England would be too hot for him. They wouldn't have him there. I could see to that. He would be a ruined man, an outcast, execrated by all the civilized world."

"What is your knowledge?" asked Jocelyn in a coldly measured voice.

"If you will have it, your brother, Maurice Gordon, is a slave trader."

She drew back as she might have done from some unclean animal. She knew that he was not telling the truth. There might be extenuating circumstances. The real truth might have quite a different sound, spoken in different words, but there was enough of the truth in it as Victor Durnovo placed it before her to condemn Maurice before the world.

"Now will you marry me?" he sneered.

HOLDS STOP WATCH ON KISS.

Makes Emma Abbott Look Like a Fixer and Sapho an Amateur.

New York, Feb. 14.—A new kiss has come to town! Not a soft wafted butterfly brush of the lips or a detonating labial salvo that starts the horses. It is not even like the "Nethersole," "Emma Abbott," or any other of the much exploited brands of mercury raising kiss-as-kiss-can whereof the old timers used to blither.

This kiss is a new one in New York It takes twenty-five seconds to complete and can, at a pinch, be dragged out even longer. But no one seems to grudge the time. Not even in hustling Manhattan. Nor is it a cheap skate or piker variety kiss. It is not on the free list. One must save more money for it pro rata than for two weeks of an Adirondack vacation. It is estimated to cost $6.87 per, or $89.28 per hour.

It is the "Louise kiss," imported from France for Oscar Hammerstein by Mary Garden and Charles Dalmores. It is the uncommon or Mary Garden variety of kiss. The kiss occurs for the first time in the opening of Act III. of "Louise." Dalmores is situated "down stage," reading. Enter Miss Garden. She steals upon the unsuspecting tenor and before he knows it the lucky man is encased in a dreamy half Nelson. Down goes the book (what chance has literature, anyway?) and the half Nelson is countered by an ardent strangle hold.

Even the Prompter Retires.

Then the kiss begins.

There is nothing platonic, nothing fraternal, nothing perfunctory about it. There is no hint of slurring or shirking full duty. Never before did two performers earn their salaries with such an evident willingness.

The kiss has begun, but it doesn't stop.

The man in the prompt box lays aside his score, wipes his forehead and lights a cigar. Mr. Hammerstein stops counting the house and worriedly pulls out his watch. For those two young people on the stage are kissing on his time and he has to keep on paying them high C prices just as if they were emitting the golden arias. But still the kiss goes on. The orchestra reels off the bars and a half of slow, dreamy-meet-me-at-the corner melody. For the musicians are here to work and not to kiss No one pays them $6.87 for osculation.

"Somebody must keep on the job" Conductor Campinini tells them, "so get busy, and maybe by and by, if we're lucky, the kiss will stop." So they play along earnestly and warmly.

But still the kiss goes on.

And Still the Kiss Goes On.

The audience begins to grow interested. Watches are furtively consulted. Pulses trained to sedate, operatic tempo get clear out of time and scamper off at a furious erratic pace, and fluffy young girls glance speculatively at their staring escorts. The matrons eye their interested husbands with an unspoken rebuke. "Home was never like this!" murmurs one rail bird, sadly.

But still the kiss goes on.

Outside, on unsuspecting 34th street, the autos wizz eastward past 5th avenue. They will reach Broadway before that kiss ceases. A man on the corner strikes a match. The light travels 186,000 miles a second. The flare of that match will have travelled 4,650,000 miles before the lips of Dalmores and Miss Garden part. The earth still whizzes through space, in spite of all this osculatory excitement. It will have travelled 462.5 miles between the start and finish of the kiss.

But still the kiss goes on.

Shames New Jersey Quotation

Miss Garden gets $1,500 and Dalmores $900 a performance. Granting the opera lasts two and one-half hours, the couple are using up in those twenty-five seconds of their impressario's time the sum of $6.66 2-3, to which the ninety orchestra members raise the cost by another modest 20 1-3 cents—$6.87 in all. Count it. And yet a New Jersey justice lately appraised the best kisses on the local market at only $1 apiece.

But still the kiss goes—NO! It's over. Actually over.

With reluctance, as if the muscles of the tongue were cramped from lack of motion, four arms relax. Two pairs of lips draw apart with all the unwillingness with which a lifelong office-holder quits his sinecure. Kissing is easier than singing, when one does it at union rates.

A low, regretful, wondering, "at last-some" sight sweeps the audience. The prompter sits up and Campinini signals.

The love duet winds up with a second edition of the kiss, so does the act, but by this third time the sporting members of the audience are ready. Stop watches flash out.

Yes, just 25 seconds. What 25 1-5? O, well, what's a fifth of a second, anyhow; nobody grudges it.

Fire Lessons.

It is very easy to moralize after an accident—and it is just as necessary. It is only by experience we learn; and assuredly the recent moving picture theatre fire has given the city an experience from which it can learn much.

The most important fact brought out is that a most rigid inspection should be made of all buildings where meetings are to be held. It should almost go without saying, that a gathering should not be allowed in such clap-trap buildings as many of those that curse this city on South Railway Street. The only justification this building had was that it was one-storey. Had it been two-storeys, instead of a couple of burns, and a few sprains, the city would have been under the shadow of several deaths. As it was, children and women, and even strong men, were trampled upon and saved only by the comparative ease of exit. The fact that there was no danger in that building to a strong man, counts for nothing, as not one out of fifty would stop to think that the flames could not do him much harm in such a short time as it would take to get outside.

Whether the city is empowered, as the Charter stands, to control meeting houses, we do not know. Nor is it a matter of moment. All modern cities place the oversight of such things in the hands of the chief of police and fire chief—the latter to recommend and the former to enforce. No frame structure should be allowed; exits should be carefully considered (a most important matter and one not attended to here); the number allowed inside at one time should be definitely specified under a heavy penalty; blocking of the aisles in any way should be stopped and the strength of the floors examined.

While it might seem a hardship in some cases, it would obviate a great part of the danger of fires if seats had to be screwed to the floors; it is the tripping over chairs that leads to nine-tenths of the trampling at fires. A glance at the Idle Hour Theatre after the fire would show how seriously handicapped anyone would be in getting out.

The matter of exits has put many an opera house out of business until it made improvements. And this is perfectly right. A trivial fire is just as dangerous as a big one, since it is in the stampede that the danger lies. How many people could gain safety out of one door and down a steep flight of stairs with one or two turns. When a dozen people lie lifeless is not the time to improve exits.

If the rush of a hundred people in a one-storey building with front and back entrance can trample down a big strong man as was the case at the Idle Hour Theatre, what would happen with five hundred people in a second-storey forced to scramble out one door and down a crooked, steep flight of stairs.

The matter is too serious to mince words. It is in the power of the city council to enforse regulations that will, sooner or later, save lives. It is also their duty.

There is, too, a lesson to be learned by the general public. It is never in the fire that the danger lies, but in the stampede to safety. No theatre fire that ever originated was dangerous to the audience if it kept its head. The biggest crowd can be on the street before the fire reaches it, if it only goes at it coolly. Sit and wait until the crush is over and you'll walk to safety at your leisure. This was the case at the Idle Hour theatre, flimsy as it was, and it is to be hoped Medicine Hat will never see another theatre lined with cotton and paper.

Still another slight danger is brought to mind by this fire. We know of two instances of fatal trampling from a stampede caused by nothing more than the rush of fireman from gatherings at the sound of a fire alarm. At such a moment the slightest thing will lead to a stampede. Last night a few firemen were attending a concert when the alarm was rung in.

Lock the stable before the horse is stolen. We have had all the benefits of an experience at a cheap cost.

Advertising.

The average merchant usually gives advertising too much or too little credit. If the store management and service are bad—if the stock is poor and the sales force inefficient and discourteous—he is likely to have a poor opinion of the efficacy of advertising, for advertising can do very little for a store of that sort.

On the other hand, the merchant who has a fine store, with a good stock of merchandise and excellent service is apt to think that it is not necessary to advertise. He thinks he can get along without it on the presumption that the store will advertise itself. That's where he is wrong. The better the store is the more this fact should be advertised.—From the Hardware and Metal, June 15, 1907

EDITORIAL NOTES

The News still persists in its statement that Ald. Baker used the word "liar," and says The Times' representative didn't hear properly. The Times dismisses the subject by saying that in a disputed case like this it believes in consulting others present. Of all those attending, not one of the half-dozen asked, supports The News.

Nobody is going to sue you for libel, News! You, no doubt, believe what you say, and it is a desperate case when a paper is sued for libel. Belongs to Emmerson and Freddy Borden—that does.

Down at Claresholm they have tapped a gas well a la Calgary. The report says it is "a splendid flow of gas," and goes on to say "the flame' es shoot up a distance of six feet." My! What a terrific pressure there must be to send up all that flame! And indications are that gas in abundance, sufficient for manufacturing and lighting purposes will be found when a deeper depth is reached." So thought Calgary—for a short (very short) while.

Speaking about Calgary gas—a man who came to this city about a month ago to reside, on his way up from the States, met a Calgary booster. And this is the special brand of boost he had served up to him: "Oh! Don't go to Medicine Hat. There's nothing there. Come to Calgary. Medicine Hat has not gas that can touch what we have in Calgary, (the only true touch). I live in Calgary and our gas pressure is miles better than Medicine Hat's." Is it any wonder people get suspicious of a town that breeds such a prevaricator as a booster.

The News went out of its way three weeks ago to inform us that it was no cheaper to live here with our natural gas, than it would be if we had to burn coal. This is the same as saying that it is cheaper to light and heat a house in Edmonton, cheaper to supply power for a factory in Edmonton, than it is in this city. For coal is bringing on! $3.25 delivered in that city, according to an ad. in an Edmonton paper; whereas it is worth $3.50 here.

Perhaps some day The News will realize how hard and how unjust a knock it tried to give Medicine Hat when it said that. At least it is to be hoped it sees this before it injures the city and itself any more.

This kind of talk scarcely coincides with what our publicity commissioner has been telling down east, and all Medicine Hat residents know he is right. Among the figures quoted by Mr. Hall in his addresses delivered on the trip are that it costs to develop power, from $2 to $2.50 per horse power per year of ten hour days. This is verified by Mr. Hammon, the gas expert who recently visited the city. Mr. Hammon considers that, at 5 cents per thousand feet and considering the quality of our gas, power should cost us about $2.10. At consumers' rates of gas this would cost $5.65 only. No coal can develop power at that rate, nor anything like it.

Mr. Hammon figures on $2.10 per horse power per year on engines under 100 horse power, and much less than this on more powerful engines.

The Times has seen the entire correspondence between the Merchants Bank and Aemilius Jarvis & Co., re the sale of city bonds and can state that the Bank had no connection with the sale, except to draw the brokers' attention to the bonds offered.

The Times mentions this rumor editorially (as a rumor, of course) and wishes to deny it in the same columns.

The Times appreciates very highly the support it has received from the ratepayers upon its stand on the "salary grab" question. Until such a method of pay is suggested again, it is eager to drop the discussion, now that the proposition has been defeated. There is still, however, the question of the pushers of the scheme not representing the people.

Talk about the shifting of civic officials, western cities are certainly cleaning up things. Winnipeg, Calgary and Regina and Moose Jaw have fired their engineers, and now Edmonton has dismissed its health officer, his assistant, the foreman of the scavenging department. Boomday methods do not find favor now.

A report recently handed in to the council by the City Treasurer states that he will have to have assistance in his work. Is it not reasonable to expect that the Treasurer should give ALL his time to the work for which he is engaged. Our City Treasurer spends a week (or thereabouts) in Court every quarter as Clerk of the Court. Some of his time is taken up with Court business all the year round. Whether his insurance business occupies much of his time during business hours The Times does not know. However, there are several weeks of time in a year occupied with Court affairs. It is probable that a Treasurer giving all his time to the city could do the work. At least his Court time is a big hole in his city time. A city treasurer should be compelled to give all his time to the city, whether the $1200 is sufficient remuneration or not.

The City Clerk receives only $900 and devotes all his hours to city work, in addition to a forced attendance at council meetings. Whatever increases are going should fall his way.

That the City Treasurer is rushed with city and Court work is no doubt true. The Times had occasion to ask for some figures on the gas receipts, immediately after last Supreme Court sittings and was told by the Treasurer that he had not time to look them up, although a very few minutes would have done the work. No doubt a week's attendance at Court had put him behind with his city work. However, the figures were never obtained. A ratepayer is rather reluctant to beg for figures that should be his at his convenience.

If a first class official should have a higher salary, the city should pay that amount, but should insist upon all the time of its treasurer.

A CONFLICT OF INTERESTS ANTICIPATED.

Victoria, Feb. 13—The Socialists yesterday gave notice of a resolution to be introduced Friday, asking the Legislature to memorialize the Imperial government to appoint a royal commission to enquire into the circumstances in connection with the treaty and The Natal Act, declaring a conflict of interests will endanger the present relations between Japan and B.C. The government will oppose the resolution for which there is no precedent.

Over 170 Japs who arrived two days before the Natal act was passed are held at the quarantine station here for the usual period of eighteen days, while nearly 250 are also held en route to the United States. No difficulty is expected over the latter but should the former be released, landing at Victoria, to which they are ticketed, will be denied them should they fail to pass the educational test of the new act.

A case in court will probably result as the Japanese consul may contend that their arrival preceded the passing of the act which would not apply, not being retroactive. The steamship companies are also likely to precipitate the case in court. The fine for violation of the act is $500 and imprisonment in default of payment.

The Chinook and Its Work

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The chinook is one of the most interesting climatic phenomena of North America. The name is derived from the name of the Chinook Indians, who occupied a district at the mouth of the Columbia. As originally applied, it stood for a warm south-west wind blowing over this locality. It was then thought to be due to the influence of the warm Japan current, which could not possibly be accountable for the widespread influence of this wind. It is still popularly considered to have this origin. The warm properties of the wind, when it strikes the prairie on the east side of the Rocky Mountains is thought not to be compatible with the cold of mountain altitudes, and it has been naturally concluded that it must be simply a current of air of Pacific warmth that finds its way through the passes and low gaps of the mountains.

The Scientist.

This theory has, however, been exploded by the investigations of the scientists. The name has extended in use, and applies not only to the original southwest winds along the Oregon coast but also to the warm winds of the prairie, though these are different in origin. The coast winds are no doubt due to oceanic influence but the chinook of the prairies, though it has stolen the name, is quite different in origin.

The movement of air represented in a chinook wind must be referred to conditions incident to atmospheric movement at any time or place, that is, adjacent to area of low pressure, which, of course, explains all cases of atmospheric movement. The existence of a high pressure area on the plateau west of the Rocky Mountains with a contemporary occurrence of low pressure on the eastern side is the first cause of the chinook. Observations have shown that a variation of three or four degrees of pressure between the plateau of Utah and the plain of Manitoba and the Northwest has invariably preceded the occurrence of the chinook.

The Balm of the Chinook.

But this does not exhaust the warmth of the chinook. The path of the movement of the high pressure area is over the Rocky Mountains and it is the passing over the divide that is accountable for the moderate temperature of the chinook. The temperature of the air lowers as it climbs the slope, but this lowering is accompanied by a condensation of the water vapor of the air. Just as it takes heat to convert water into vapor so heat is liberated in the condensation of vapor into rain. This not only checks the lowering of temperature but by expansion increases the rapidity of movement of the air. On the east slope of the mountains also the force of movement which carries the current below superimposing strata of air subjects the travelling to compression by which its temperature is raised so the chinook is a warm wind. The increase in temperature is said by the United States weather authorities to be one degree for each six hundred feet of descent. The appearance of the "chinook clouds," popularly so called, is the condensation of vapor in the chinook which has climbed the western slope of the divide and is coming our way.

May in December.

The effect of the chinook is phenomenal. Changes in temperature are very rapid. A rise of forty-seven degrees is reported to have occurred in seven minutes in Montana and thirty inches of snow has been melted or evaporated in twelve hours. Correspondingly great changes have occurred in southern Alberta. The winds come roaring down the passes of the mountains in such places as Frank, with great force. They have a high rate of speed at Lethbridge, Macleod and Calgary. Their influence is great at Medicine Hat and to a considerable distance farther east and is slightly perceptible at Regina. As far north as Edmonton and even into the Peace River valley, soft warm south-westerly winds are felt contemporaneous with the more violent wind of the south, though at these points their characteristic influence is greatly attenuated. In southern Alberta they blow the snow violently about for a time and finally lick it all up and leave a dry prairie, though sometimes part of the snow is melted on the ground.

In Cattleland.

The economic importance of the winds is great. It is the chinook that has given to Southern Alberta its fame as a ranch country. Cattle, horses and sheep graze out all winter without any food except the prairie hay which cures on the stem.

Once in ten years an exceptionally hard winter occurs which decimates the herds of those who do not provide supplementary food for stock in prolonged hard weather but generally little hay is fed. Range horses and cattle take on a heavy coat with the approach of winter. If the Lord does not temper the wind to the shorn lamb and the cow and the horse, he covers them with a suitable blanket during hard weather. The cattle can "intuit" the wind better than the cowboy and while still surrounded by the frozen crust and numb with the stupefying frost faces the west and with nose aloft heralds its coming. Then they get out on the knolls soon to be bared and begin to feed. The rancher is passing. The Saxon settler has pierced into cattleland at all points and his furrow is blackening the tawny prairie.

The Nester in the Chinook Country

He likewise has his problems. The rancher profits by natural conditions; the farmer in combating them. His great need is moisture and the chinook is on the side of the rancher and opposed to the farmer. Winter snows and spring rains alike are licked up and carried away by the thirsty chinook. The farmer has about three times as much rainfall as his crop of cereals demands for its maturing, but the problem is to hold it.

He will succeed. His rugged furrow will stop the wayward tossing and sweeping of the snow to cut-bank and coulee. His well disked field will take the rain and hold it from washing over the hard face of the prairie and his cultivator will keep over it a dust blanket to keep it from joining the restless wind on its travels. His forest plantations will join in the work. Alberta will blossom as the rose and give tribute anew to man's command over nature's forces.

MACHINISTS ACCEPT DECREASE

The employees of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, who were on strike, returned to work, having accepted the reduction of 15 per cent. in their wages. The men have realized that this was the best thing to do under the present conditions. James Somerville, the International vice-president of the machinists' union settled the dispute.

Alberta's Natural Gas

(Toronto World.)

John T. Hall, well-known as a patriotic Hamiltonian, and recently engaged in booming the west, gave some interesting information to the Empire Club yesterday regarding manufacturing possibilities in Alberta, and warned eastern manufacturers against over-confidence in the matter of competition.

By the "last west" he meant the province of Alberta. There was fuel there for the purposes of a great industrial development, coal being found from the southern boundary right up to the Peace River. It might surprise them to hear that power could be developed in Medicine Hat for $2 a year per horse power for 10 hour power from the natural gas found there. In the United States the value of natural gas produced in 1906 was nearly $47,000,000. He feared that the development of the gas resources of Alberta would be due to American and not Canadian capital. Up till the present the ranchers had held the land, but the farmer was now coming in and mixed farming would drive out the rancher.

It was a mistake to think there would be no manufacturing in the west. Mr. Hall did not think there would be in Manitoba or the middle west, where fuel was too high. In Winnipeg power was $60 a horse power. He recommended Ontario manufacturers to establish branches in Alberta or they would find that the American manufacturers would get ahead of them and steal the market.

It was cheap power that made Hamilton the manufacturing city of the east, and cheap power would make the west a manufacturing district.

The spirit of extravagance was a detrimental factor in the west. This was not his own opinion, but a general verdict of various observers. Rudyard Kipling who only stopped at Toronto, Winnipeg, the coast and Medicine Hat, examined into the natural gas consumption and, remarked after some investigation:

"Well, you people out here seem to have all hell for a basement." (Laughter.) Other observers considered that another Pittsburg would eventually be established there.

The fertility of the northern region was remarkable, and grains grown 700 miles north of the American border, in the Peace River basin, equalled the best of other localities.

No conception could be entertained of the possibilities of the west, he declared without personal knowledge and the more he saw of it the less he felt he knew about it.

Mr. Hall concluded by reading the Khan's poem, "The Men of the Northern Zone."

In reply to a question, Mr. Hall stated that the gas pressure was 600 lbs. in Alberta; there were ten wells 1010 feet deep, but only one was used. Hamilton uses 2,000,000 feet of gas daily, but this would not be equal to the produce of one Alberta well, which is over 3,000,000 feet daily. In Medicine Hat taxation was only nine mills. In 1891 two bags of wheat were brought from the Peace River, which weighed 65 lbs. to the bushel, and Dr. Gorgin confirmed from his own experience the accounts of coal and oil and gas fields in northern Alberta, the climate of which is also exceptionally mild.

Coleridge, Alta., Feb. 1908

The Times:

In your issue of January 28, 1908, I see that your correspondent for Coleridge in reporting the ratepayers meeting for the Dunmore school district No. 173 held on the 18th inst., states that Francis Wright, sec.-treas., etc., etc., for the above district has created quite a feeling by refusing to open public books at a public meeting to a ratepayer.

As I am the individual mentioned I beg to state that your correspondent is what Noah Webster calls a ———. If I remember correctly it was proposed by one of the ratepayers present at the meeting that this ratepayer was not entitled to see the books. I did refuse to show the books to this ratepayer with a feeling, until he stated what the charge was which he had to make, which, on investigation, proved to be none at all. If this correspondent would like to know, this ratepayer and himself with the feeling, neither of them were entitled to see the books.

As secretary-treasurer I beg to state, in contradiction to your correspondent's statement, that the school books are open for inspection to any ratepayer in this district at any time (I mean anyone whose taxes are paid up). If not, I please myself whether I show the books or not unless ordered to do so by the board.

If I surmise correctly, your correspondent is not a ratepayer at present nor anyone he represents, and as one of the trustees of the above school I don't need his advice on school matters at all. He can pass it on to the next. When I need advice I go to the lawyer and pay for same.

Yours respectfully,
FRANCIS WRIGHT,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Instructions re Making Application for Seed Grain Advances.

Department of the Interior,
Ottawa, 4th February, 1908.

By arrangement between the Dominion, Saskatchewan and Alberta governments, it is proposed to advance seed grain to settlers so desiring in Saskatchewan and Alberta, who lost their crop by frost or hail last year, or had their crop so damaged that it is unfit for seed, and saleable only at a loss.

Forms of application for seed grain advances are being freely distributed throughout the two provinces. THE APPLICATION MUST BE FILLED OUT IN DUPLICATE AND DECLARED BEFORE THE SECRETARY-TREASURER OF THE LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT OR MUNICIPALITY in which the applicant resides. The secretary-treasurer will give the applicant a receipt for his application on the form supplied, which receipt must be preserved. Applicants will be notified when grain is ready for delivery, and must present their receipt as identification to the railway agent at the station at which they request seed to be delivered.

IN SASKATCHEWAN the original application form must be sent by the secretary-treasurer immediately to R. E. A. Leech, Regina; the duplicate to be presented to a special meeting of the council of the local improvement district or municipality for consideration, possible amendment and approval, and then forwarded to R. E. A. Leech, Regina.

In ALBERTA, the original application must be sent immediately to the Dominion Land Agent, Edmonton, and marked "Seed Grain Application" on the outside of the envelope.

All duplicate applications duly certified to by the Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer should be in Regina and Edmonton respectively, not later than February, 22.

When the applicant is within a local improvement district, application must be made before a Dominion Lands Agent, sub-Land Agent, Homestead Inspector, Immigration Agent, or member of the R.N. W. Mounted Police, for the district within which the applicant resides. Such officer shall amend and subscribe to the certificate "Recommendation of Council" forwarding original and duplicate copies immediately, according to above instructions.

It is impossible to state now what the prices of seed grain will be; but it has been decided that the cost to farmers will be the actual cost of the grain, including the freight, recleaning and sacking as near as can be ascertained.

As the time is very short until seeding will begin, it is of the greatest importance that prompt action be taken by all concerned. It is doubtful if any applications not received by the 22nd of February can receive consideration.

While the governments interested are taking every precaution to secure suitable seed grain at the lowest possible price and the highest grade of excellence, vitality and freedom from weed seeds, still the cost will necessarily be high; and, notwithstanding every care in purchasing and recleaning seed, it is possible that there may be some foul weed seeds distributed to those who avail themselves of this medium of securing seed. It will, therefore, be advisable for farmers to reclean seed supplied, and thus further minimize the possibility of introducing noxious weeds.

New District Court

Sat Last Week

The first case at the district court was that of Strong vs. Benwell, an action on a promissory note given for the price of a horse. The defendant claimed that the note was given on the condition of the horse being gentle which it had proven not to be. Judgment for the defendant. D. G. White appeared for the defendant; Wm. A. Begg for the plaintiff. This is the first case of its kind in the western provinces, and is interesting as establishing the right of a purchaser of an animal to refuse payment if the guarantee is not fulfilled.

The next case was that of Trimble vs. Schram, an action to recover $400, balance claimed on contract for building house for defendant Schram. The defendant Schram put in a counter-claim for certain work which had not been completed. J. J. Mahaffy appeared for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant Schram, W. A. Begg for defendants the British Columbia Land Co., mortgagees on the property.

W. A. Begg asked for a dismissal of the action, citing sections of the Mechanics' Lien Act and precedents in support of his contention.

The plaintiff gave evidence to the effect that he began operations on Mr. Schram's house on the 20th March, 1907, having contracted verbally for the job about the middle of February. Mr. Schram originally asked for a one-storey frame building, with basement, later asking for a figure on a house with another storey. The figure quoted on the one-storey house was $1500; on the two-storey building $2000 complete. The contract provided for excavating, brick work, carpentry and glass work. The contract was made verbally in the presence of both contracting parties, and of members of the plaintiff's family, in the plaintiff's house. Later Mr. Schram wanted a mantel and grate, value $85, in exchange for which he agreed to do the excavating, work valued at $80. Other changes were afterwards desired, notably, the substitution of sliding for swinging doors in the house, defendant Schram agreeing to accept a plainer verandah than was at first contracted for, in exchange therefor. The first load of material was drawn on the 20th March, 1907; one day's work was done and the workmen knocked off on account of bad weather. The excavating (done by Mr. Schram) was ready on the 23 March.

Mr. Mahaffy—"How were you to be paid for this work?"

"I was to receive $1000 when the building was ready for plastering, and the balance on completion."

"When was the job completed?"

"On September 13th."

"How much has been paid you on the job?"

"$1650."

"Did you tender for this work?"

"No."

"Anyone else give tender?"

"I don't know."

"The contract was a verbal one?"

"Yes, it was made verbally in my own dining-room."

Witness further stated that he had been twice in Schram's house to discuss the matter before the job was begun. Plumbing and piping were not included in the contract. On plumbing, Mr. Trimble figured, $300 would cover all the work. Mr. Schram had told him that he wished to get the complete job inside o $2200.

The plaintiff was subjected to a keen cross-examination by D. G. White.

Plaintiff knew of houses which cost more to build than Schram's which were renting at $80.

In answer to questions witness said that a written contract had never been mooted. Mr. Schram's son had never asked figures on a house similar to his father's.

Frederick Schram, defendant, was next placed in the box.

Mr. Begg—"Did you ask for tenders on this work?"

Defendant stated that he asked for figures and was given estimates by Messrs. Preston, Kinley and Trimble. Mr. Kinley quoted $1825 to $1850 as the price for which he could build the house called for in the plans. There was no mention of $2000. $1800 was the contract price agreed upon with Trimble. Subsequently defendant decided to have burlap instead of wainscoting in his house, and himself to put on a moulding. The contract price was to cover everything except plumbing. The cellar floor was to be of cement, but later the defendant asked for a tongued and grooved wooden floor in place of the cement floor called for in contract. Trimble said the cost of this would be no greater. The job was to be completed by the 1st May. Defendant could not get in the house before the middle of June and was thus two months rent to the bad.

Mr. Begg—"What would you consider a fair rental for the house?"

"$50 a month."

"What would be the difference in cost between the verandah ordered by you and the one supplied?"

"Fifty to sevety-five dollars."

The workmanship was unsatisfactory.

Defendant had paid $1650 on account of the contract.

Witness stated in cross-examination that he had first asked for an estimate for a one-storey house. The figures quoted, he believed, were in the neighborhood of $1300."

Reference was made to a visit made by Messrs. Marshall and Yuill to the Schram house.

"Will you swear you didn't say on that occasion 'Come in and see the best finished house in town?'"

Defendant didn't think so, but couldn't remember just what he said at so distant a date. "I wouldn't run down my own house that's certain, of getting a loan on it." (Laughter). Defendant was at the time negotiating for a loan on the property.

Mrs. Schram's evidence was mainly corroborative of that of defendant J. L. Kinley was next sworn in. He testified to having figured on the job at $1850. His estimate included a verandah such as that around Mr. Downey's house.

The judge said that it appeared to him an impossibility to arrive at a logical result from the contradictory evidence given.

Mr. Mahaffy raised a point in connection with the evidence of Mrs. Schram. She had been very positive about a certain kind of grate having been ordered. While he did not believe she would intentionally misrepresent he thought she might have been influenced strongly by talking the matter over with her husband. He did not think it probable that anyone would be so particular about a certain design.

His Honor—"You don't know what ladies are, Mr. Mahaffy." (Laughter).

The judgement was: $175 is allowed on the plaintiff's claim; $15 is allowed on the counter-claim of the defendant Schram, leaving a balance of $160 to plaintiff. The costs of the claim to be paid by the defendant Schram and his wife; no costs on the counter-claim. Mr. White stated that Judge Mitchell was concerned in the B. C. Permanent Loan Company and as he was away at present, he asked time during which to make the payments. His Honor Judge Mitchell might assist defendant in paying costs.

The Judge tentatively made order that the payment shall be paid within thirty days; in default of which the property will be sold.

The next case was Higdon vs. Wales, action to recover $80 for ice supplied to defendant during the last season. Defendant had paid $43.75, the amount which he admitted owing. Judgment was for plaintiff for a further sum of $8.75. J. J. Mahaffy for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant.

Trimble vs. Tom. Plaintiff sued for $60, which he claimed w s due on a contract. Defendant admitted $8.20 which was paid into court with the defense. Judgment was given for plaintiff for a further sum of $7.65 O. W. Kealy for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant.

Le Blanc vs. Richardson. Action brought to recover store account. The defendant (Mrs.) Richardson, claimed that the bill was properly chargeable to her husband on the ground that he was obliged to furnish necessary provisions. Jud ment reserved. J. J. Mahaffy for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant.

The preliminary hearing in the Laframboise-Brown horse stealing case was held before Inspector Parker on Monday the 10th inst., resulting in the committal of both prisoners for trial.

On Tuesday, the prisoners, Isidor Laframboise and George Germain Brown, alias Cosre, were arraigned before Judge Winters. They elected to have a speedy trial. Both prisoners pleaded guilty. On the first two counts they were tried separately in order that Laframboise might give evidence against his confederate. On the last count both were tried together. Sentence was pronounced on Thursday afternoon. Laframboise was charged with the theft of fifteen horses, the property of chief Porcupine, and sentenced to five years in Edmonton penitentiary. For the theft of a horse from Chief Dark Night a similar sentence was pronounced, to run concurrently with the first. For the stealing of Chas. N. Evans' horse he was sentenced to five years, to be undergone at the expiration of the first term. Brown also was convicted on all three charges to three years' imprisonment for each offense, the terms to run concurrently. Thus, although nominally Laframboise is sentenced to fifteen years and Brown to nine, the actual terms undergone will be only ten and three years respectively. The full record, however, will go against them should they be convicted of an offence at any future date. The law allows fourteen years as the maximum term for horse stealing. The prisoners might both have been sentenced to forty-two years.

Prisoners maintained their usual cheerful mien throughout the trial and are not at all depressed at the prospect of the few years' residence in the Capital. Just after leaving the court room "Mexican Pete" was heard to announce his intention of being out of jail before his partner and when he did get out there would be something doing.

Corporal Humby and Constable Chalkey took prisoners up to Edmonton the same night—Thursday.

[This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

Edmonton, Feb. 15.—Yesterday afternoon in the House Hon. Mr. Cross moved the second reading of the Compensation Act.

In a speech of an hour's duration he reviewed the growth of similar legislation and outlined the aim, scope and effect of the bill.

He stated that the real principles of the bill were similar to the principles of the various systems of workingmen's compensation insurance which, during the past 15 years have been in force in Europe. There were four qualifications of the European principle referring to the following four clauses:

First—A doctrine of common employment whereby the employee could not obtain redress or damages for injuries because he is held to be engaged in a common employment with the person causing the injury.

Second—That a man does not come to his injury by his own free will, but that the employer could defeat the action of the employee by showing that the workman had voluntarily accepted or continued to do work in a dangerous position, knowing full well his danger.

A third principle there was whereby the employer could defeat the application by proving that the workman contributed to the accident to such an extent that it rendered the employer's implication nil.

The fourth qualification is that the act shows no ground for a claim in case of the death of the workman, as the right of action is personal to the workman and dies with him.

C.P.R. DISCIPLINE

Beginning February 1 a new system of discipline was established on western lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that is the territory extending from Fort William west. A circular covering this change has been issued in the office of assistant general manager Bury.

By the new system it is intended to insist on a more rigid compliance with the company's rules. All employees are being started with a clean sheet. In the past discipline was meted out by suspension. Demerit marks will now be placed to the credit of an employee. For every repetition of an offence by an employee the number of demerit marks will be doubled. When demerit marks against any employee number sixty his services will be dispensed with. For every twelve consecutive months of good service free from demerit marks an employee will have twenty demerit marks deducted from those that may stand against his record. There is the sliding scale of demerit marks for offenses of greater or less importance.

JAIL TERM REDUCED.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—The division court has given judgment on the appeal of James McGuire, convicted by the police magistrate of Cobalt, and fined $500, or six months imprisonment for having unlawfully incited the employees of the Nipissing Mining Company to go on strike. The court finds the conviction defective and orders an amendment, the terms of imprisonment being reduced to 3 months. A lengthy argument was given by Mr. Justice Magee, which is practically a review of the Lemieux act. According to His Lordship's presentment, the act appears to be as full of defects as a sieve is full of holes.

The Workman's Compensation bill was given its second reading in the legislature at Edmonton on Friday. The measure was subjected to caustic criticism by A. J. Robertson, member for High River, who pointed out the very unsatisfactory nature of the conditions governing compensation in the building trade. Under the clause relating to this matter, a workman must fall from a height of forty feet or more before he becomes entitled to any compensation whatever. If the unfortunate man breaks his neck by a fall from a height of thirty-nine feet his relatives will get nothing. He expressed his opinion that in framing the bill it was an omission not to have stated that an injured workman might not make any contract with his employer, as he might then in distress be induced to take a small sum in lieu of his rights to compensation. He had heard this evil existed in New Zealand. He also stated his opinion that no provision had been made in the bill for compensation in cases of industrial diseases, as was contained in the English act. He particularly specified workers in lead, who suffered from lead-poisoning. Mr. Robertson concluded with his belief that the bill was of benefit to the workingman only on the surface.

It is noteworthy that this bill now before the legislature at Edmonton, while ostensibly drafted on the plan of the English act, omits the provisions which alone can give vitality and real usefulness to a compensation law. The present measure contains most of the weaknesses of the first British law, passed in the nineties—a law which it was found necessary to radically amend by the new act in 1906. The first British compensation law gave rise to endless litigation, the employer with his financial advantage frequently being able to fight a claim on technical points until the resources of the claimant were exhausted. The measure of 1906 provides for ALL employments, and for all forms of industrial diseases.

In the Dominion House on Friday last, Alphonse Verville, a labor member of Montreal, introduced a bill to apply the eight hour day to public works.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 168 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

ALEX. McRAE,

FATHER'S ECZEMA AFFLICTED CHILDREN.

Mr. Chas. Noble, of 375 Colonial Avenue, Montreal, the assistant chief operator of the G.N.W. telegraph Co., and several of his family have been cured of Eczema by Zam-Buk, the great herbal balm. He states the facts as follows: "The disease started in the backs of my hands in the form of small sores and eruptions. These were very irritating and when rubbed and scratched turned into very painful sores. I tried waters, lotions and salves, but the disease continued to spread, so I consulted a doctor. He treated me for a time, but still the disease spread and I got no relief. Then to my alarm the eczema spread to several of the children. The pain and irritation in all our cases was very great, and we were very much disheartened, as all we tried proved unavailing. Zam-Buk was recommended and I obtained a supply. I tried it first on a small patch of the Eczema, and this showed so much improvement that I was convinced Zam-Buk would do good if persevered with, and therefor obtained a supply. Each application greatly relieved the itching, pain and soreness, and it was not long before the eruptions and sores dried up and disappeared. In a few weeks from commencing with Zam-Buk every spot was removed."

"The children who had also taken this disease were treated in the same way and have each been cured. Unlike all other preparations used Zam-Buk seemed to search to the roots of the evil and it was really surprising how quickly the sores were healed. In my case and that of my children the cure was most effectual and permanent, as it is now some months since we were cured and there have been no signs of any eruptions or sores returning."

Of all druggists and stores, 50c. box or postpaid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. No home should be without Zam-Buk.

Natural Gas in Riding Mountains

(Winnipeg Free Press.)

There are prospects that an abundant supply of natural gas will soon be secured from the Riding Mountains district equal to that now available at Medicine Hat. The government boring outfit has been working 18 miles north of Neepawa for some time and last week they were down 150 feet. At that depth they struck gas in sufficient quantity that when a lighted paper was thrown in the well the gas burned and the flames shot 20 or 30 feet in the air and the roaring could be heard for a long distance. The gas, however, burned out after a short time, but experts have examined the situation and say that when the shaft is put deeper there will be a plentiful supply.

Calgary Gas-Puff!

(Calgary News.)

The Calgary Natural Gas Company issued a report yesterday in which notice is given to the stockholders that drilling has ceased at the well after a depth of 3400 feet had been reached. Regret is expressed that this has been necessary, as it seems certain that if it had been possible to drill another 400 feet the furthest gas-bearing zone would have been reached and the supply would be sufficient to be commercially profitable. The report points out that it has now been demonstrated that there are gas zones in Alberta both east and west of Calgary. The spot where drilling has been done is about 12 miles west of the city.

The company thinks it advisable to sink the next hole to the east of the city, and have decided to do so. They are now engaged in taking up the casing at the old well and dismantling the premises, preparatory to making an early start at the new site in the spring. With the experience gained it is thought that the depth of the old well can be much exceeded if necessary.

Envy or only Facetiousness?

Chicago Record-Herald: Communications received from Medicine Hat refer to the banana belt weather of that town and complain of misrepresentations.

Medicine Hat, it appears, is not engaged in manufacturing zero weather, but is a warm proposition. From the data furnished we are quite willing to agree that it is decidedly all right. And though minus 8 and minus 10 are set down in the meteorological tables, the people have the high temperature of a buoyant optimism which starts a thaw before the cold has a chance to affect anything but the mercury.

Besides the advantages of a temperate climate which "are not being overlooked by the new settlers pouring in" there are others too numerous to describe. But here is a market which should not be overlooked: "Medicine Hat sells gas to manufacturers at 5 cents per thousand feet." And a mighty good quality, too, as we can testify after a perusal of the literature of promotion that is printed in the capital of the banana belt. In fact, we would unhesitatingly prescribe gas from Medicine Hat as a cure for all kinds of melancholy. It is refreshing, stimulating, glorious and it comes from a glorious country

Police Court News

Jim Spratt has been blowing in his money pretty fast during the last week or two. After a too free indulgence at the cups the idea struck him that he had lost a number of horses and his instinct naturally led him to The Times office to see about their recovery. The Times promised to do their best for him and conducted him safely down the steps. His next adventure was at the customs office where he expected some dutiable goods. He found nothing doing, however, but on the return trip the stairs were difficult to negotiate and he was picked up by the police in a drunk and incapable condition. He was fined $5 and costs.

MEDICINE HAT CROPS AGAIN LEAD

PROVINCIAL SEED FAIR AGAIN SWEPT BY THIS DISTRICT

THE SECOND YEAR IN SUCCESSION

For the second time Medicine Hat district has demonstrated that it raises the best crops in the province, which means the best in Canada. Last year at the provincial seed fair in Edmonton, Medicine Hat carried off the honors, although the distance of the fair from this district meant great trouble in getting to it, and prevented the display of a large number of samples. This year the fair was held at Lethbridge and Medicine Hat captured the majority of the honors, with 2 firsts, 3 seconds, 2 thirds, 2 fourths, and 2 sixth prizes.

The big prize was the "Farm Crops" trophy for the best bushel of spring wheat. Last year an equivalent to this prize was captured by Medicine Hat district, but this year a Granum man succeeded in just squeezing out E. H. Earl for first place, the latter getting second easily.

The first prizes for this distrct were won by E. H. Earl for Red Fyfe spring wheat, and A. Woolley for barley, any two-rowed variety.

The seconds were: E. H. Earl, for Banner oats, and best bushel of spring wheat, and A. Woolley for peas.

The third prize went to E. H. Earl for barley, any six-rowed variety; and Jos. Atkinson, for Red Fyfe spring wheat.

Fourth prizes were: A. Woolley, for Red Fyfe spring wheat; and A. W. Woolley, for oats, other than Banner.

The sixth prizes were taken by A. Woolley, for spring wheat, other than Red Fyfe, and for oats, any short or feed variety.

In all Medicine Hat secured eleven prizes, five of them being firsts and seconds, in competition against the entire province.

It is a significant fact that although the majority of the samples for competition came from the north, ALMOST ALL THE PRIZES WENT TO SOUTHERN ALBERTA, proving the relative merits of the two sections of Alberta for grain growing. Every sample went beyond standard weight, the heaviest wheat weighing 66 pounds and the heaviest oats 46 pounds.

The greatest thing for this district next to securing the largest total of prizes, is the fact that in the most important grain—Red Fyfe spring wheat—Medicine Hat district secured first, third and fourth prizes.

The success of Medicine Hat district for two successive years, competing against the entire province is all that is necessary to convince prospective Alberta settlers that we stand right at the top in grain growing. Our beautiful climate, our fertile soil, are proving to our farmers that they have selected the best spot in the west for farming. The thousands of acres still open for homesteading, or for sale at low prices, in this district should, and will, fill up rapidly this year.

Another line will run from Humboldt, Sask., to Calgary. This line will pass north of this city.

W.C.T.U. ORGANIZER

SPEAKS IN THE CITY

On Sunday and Monday Mrs. M. Hyslop, the Dominion organizer and lecturer for the W.C.T.U., addressed meetings in the city on the temperance question.

The afternoon service on Sunday was held in the Methodist church, where Mrs. Hyslop delivered an address before a mass meeting of the scholars, touching on the agitation for the suppression of cigarette smoking. The speaker dwelt at some length on the evil effects of the cigarette habit amongst juveniles, on the great physical and moral deterioration which the vice causes in the growing boy. Reference was made to the legislation to be introduced in the British House of Parliament with the object of suppressing juvenile smoking, making the sale of cigarettes to boys a penal offense.

At the evening service in the Baptist church Mrs. Hyslop spoke to a large congregation on the progress and prospects of temperance work the world over, and, more especially, in the Dominion. The present year was referred to as the century mark of the temperance movement, as in 1808 the first total abstinence pledge was signed. During the hundred years past wonderful progress had been made. Notable was the change which had come over the attitude of the church toward the liquor question, and the revolution which progress in medical science had brought about in relation to our ideas on the effects of alcohol on the human system.

A highly optimistic note was struck when the speaker referred to the progress of temperance sentiment over the whole Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the past year. Of the Maritime provinces, prohibition was an accomplished fact in Prince Edward Island, while in Nova Scotia no issue received more attention during 1907. In New Brunswick, also, increased interest had been aroused in regard to temperance legislation. In Quebec there were today six hundred municipalities under prohibition by-laws. Splendid work had been done by Archbishop Bruchesi, and the Catholics generally were engaged in a vigorous temperance campaign amongst their own people. Ontario had one hundred and fifty-three municipalities under local option, while in a hundred and thirty-three cases licenses had been refused for various reasons. The last vote in January brought up the number of prohibition towns to over two hundred, the new law to come in force on May 1. In Manitoba there were fourteen municipalities which had adopted the local option by-law.

Referring to the new provinces Mrs. Hyslop said that in Saskatchewan and Alberta there was no provision made for a municipal ordinance. But this was only because such a short time had elapsed since the legislatures were created. Temperance people were already carrying on a strenuous campaign in favor of such an act, and the outlook was very hopeful. At present there were three towns in Alberta in which prohibition was in force—the Mormon towns of Raymond and Cardston, and Kitsworthy. In British Columbia temperance workers were engaged in a vigorous local option campaign with prospects of success of the best.

The speaker urged her hearers not to use their Christian liberty in such manner as to cause their weak brother to offend. What was liberty for one might degenerate into license in another, and it behooved the Christian to avoid all conduct which which exercise of his liberty might prove a stumbling block in his brother's way.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Hyslop addressed a meeting of the W.C.T.U. in the Methodist church.

She leaves this city today for the towns on the Crow line, where she will address meetings in connection with the work of the organization.

Brick Yards Under Way

ALL THE BRICK YARDS COMMENCING WORK

On Monday a representative of The Times went through the brick plants of the Canadian Brick Company and L. H. Pruitt. At noon the first kiln of the former was opened, a 28,000 kiln having been started a week ago Saturday. At present the plant is employing only seven men as the machinery is not completed. The buildings are all up and ready for the new grinder, the kiln now being burnt being an experimental one. The dry rooms have a capacity of 33,000 brick, and the plant can produce 10,000 a day. In the summer the capacity will be 20,000. Everything is done by natural gas, of course, from the engines to the burning. There are two engines, a 20 h.p. for the plant and a 4 h.p. for pumping water from the creek. The staff will be increased to about 16 men when the plant gets running to its full capacity.

L. H. Pruitt has installed new dry kiln to take the place of the pulverizer which was found scarcely suitable for the clay there. The new piece of machinery is an enormous affair, weighing 21,000 lbs., and costing close to $3,000. Work will be commenced just as soon as the ground is in shape. A new kiln is being built ready for burning. The capacity of this plant is 2500 pressed brick an hour. Natural gas does the work at this plant, as well.

The Red Cliff Brick Company, also, will show its first brick in a couple of weeks. So that in a couple of months the Medicine Hat brick plants which include the Parmal plant, will be producing in the neighborhood of 100,000 brick a day.

GYMNASIUM ALMOST COMPLETED

All the alterations to the old building are completed, including new floor, secretary's office, reading room and library, bath room, dressing room, etc. The ceiling has been raised in order to allow for trapeze and hanging ladder work. Most of the apparatus is here and another shipment is expected before the gymnasium opens. Seventy-five lockers have been built.

The club has engaged the services of Mr. T. H. Cawlay, of Vancouver, a fine athlete, and one who has had a lot of experience in Y.M.C.A. gymnasium work in that city. He leaves Vancouver next Monday.

Those desiring to join should hand in their names to M. A. Brown.

Does It Pay?

A certain merchant in Medicine Hat who started advertising in The Times a couple of weeks ago met a representative of that paper last week with the following unsolicited words of appreciation: "Well, that ad. has certainly paid me. I wanted to give advertising a good trial, and I selected The Times. I am more than pleased with the results. I kept track of the results as well as I could, and I never did as much business before. My trade, too, has run along the lines I advertised, so that I can check up pretty accurately how well it paid me. I have been more than pleased and surprised."

The name of the merchant can be had by any enquirer. He had gone into advertising thinking it would not pay, and the first two issues changed his mind.

This is the kind of recommendation upon which The Times bases its appeal to advertisers. RESULTS—That's what you are after, and that is all The Times will talk to you.

PRINCIPAL OF UNIVERSITY

DR. TORY SPENDS YESTERDAY IN CITY

ENTERTAINED AND ENTERTAINS

Dr. Tory arrived in the city Sunday morning from the south, and spent Sunday and Monday here. On Monday morning he spoke to the teachers and high school pupils on higher education. In the afternoon a couple of carriages drove the Doctor around the city calling at the Power house, the high school site, the Canneries, the rosery and the C.P.R. shops.

At 4 o'clock a reception was held for the visitor at the City Hall, at which a large number of guests invited by the school board, attended.

In the evening the Doctor gave his talk on "Higher Education in the Province."

There was a fairly large company present in the council chamber at 8 o'clock, the notable feature being the large number of ladies present. Possibly the fair sex were better represented on this occasion than at any previous public meeting held in the city.

On the platform were Dr. Tory, the Mayor, Messrs. Brotherton, Kennedy and Milne of the school board. At a quarter past eight the hall was well filled and Mr. Brotherton rose and in a few words expressed gratification at the large number who had turned out to hear Dr. Tory, especially as there were a number of important counter-attractions. The Mayor spoke briefly, introducing the speaker of the evening, who was greeted with applause.

In his opening remarks Dr. Tory said that he could not express in too strong language his deep appreciation of the kindness that had been shown him both by the Mayor and the members of the school board. He especially appreciated the kindness of the teachers, who had given him the opportunity of becoming acquainted with a large number of citizens—an acquaintance he would look forward to renewing at an early date.

Coming on to the subject of his address, the speaker said that it was his intention to attempt to answer the question as to what was the meaning of educational work. This, in spite of the fact that in doing so it would be necessary for him, to a certain extent, to cover familiar ground.

There was one distinct line of cleavage between the progressive and non-progressive races—it was in their manner of viewing their relation to great educational problems. The late Lord Salisbury had, during the Spanish-American war, referred to the difference between Spain and America as the difference between the living and dying nation. This difference was constituted in the attitude of mind which a people adopted towards progress. It was the distinction between the intelligent and the unintelligent.

If enquiry were to be made of the speaker as to what line modern educational movements must take, he would make a division into four classes. Under the first he would place industrial schools. In the older countries where enormous populations congregated in the slums of the large cities, where in such adverse environment children were brought up without training in the power of self-control, there it was necessary to provide special schools for the benefit of our morally weak brothers. It might, with reason, be expected that such institutions would be unnecessary in a new country such as Alberta; yet it was a striking fact that so early in the history of the new province, provision had to be made for moral cripples. He hoped this problem would be dealt with in such a manner that it would never become a very difficult one in Alberta.

There were three other very definite lines on which education could be considered. The first was that of the public or elementary school; the second that of the secondary school; the third that of the university and college. All technical education might be classified under one or the other of these headings.

During the past hundred years a great change had come about in the attitude of mind of the civilized nations with regard to education. There were three specific points of difference. The first was in the attitude of the State, generally towards the question. A century ago the governing classes of the world looked at the matter from their own viewpoint. Those below were not thought of in this connection, or it was considered a highly dangerous thing for knowledge to be scattered broadcast among the common people. The modern State, on the contrary, believed in the principle of universal education, and was willing even to use force to compel the requirement of its benefits.

The second thing which differentiated the modern from the ancient, (referring to a century ago) viewpoint, was the determination to impress the stamp of the State on education. Then the seal of the ecclesiastic was first imprinted on the education of the day, and the State was content to derive any indirect benefit which might accrue therefrom. Today little of this spirit remained, in some degree it survived in one of the Canadian provinces, where there were five different systems of schools, each deriving support from the government. Generally, however, the modern State considered it a duty to impress its education directly on the minds of its children. There was a tendency to break away from the class spirit—to allow all a chance to rise to the highest place that the nation could offer.

He would beg the attention of his audience for a few moments to some American statistics to note in what manner the modern communities were willing to pay for the education of their youth. In the State of Massachusetts $17,500,000 was spent in 1906 on public schools alone. This in a country with 479,000 school children, worked out at an average of $37.50 per child, or the equivalent of a tax of $6.30 per inhabitant. On the high schools $2,500,000 was spent, which, for an attendance of 45,000 pupils worked out at $57 per child, while $3,000,000 was spent on university education, the greater part of which was provided for by the endowments of wealthy citizens. By direct taxation of the people the approximate sum of $22,000,000 was raised. In New York State $41,000,000 was spent in the same year on the public schools and $7,250,000 on universities. To come further west, where conditions more closely approximated our own; in the State of Ohio $16,300,000 was spent on the public schools, or with an attendance of 825,000 pupils, $20 per child. On high schools $2,700,000 was spent, on the universities and colleges $1,800,000. In our own banner province, Ontario, $12,92 per child was spent in public school education, $85 per head on the high schools. Ontario spent less on her public schools than did Massachusetts and New York. No province of the Dominion has yet been willing to tax herself sufficiently for educational purposes. In Alberta more money proportionately was spent in this way than in any other province, with the possible exception of B.C.. Alberta had been able to obtain the very best of the educationists largely because school trustees had been willing to give large compensation for the teachers' labor.

The speaker went on to say that he had been deeply impressed during his short stay in Medicine Hat with the splendid work being done by the teaching staff here. He thought the time would come when it would be realized that the community ultimately owed more to her teachers than to any other of her servants. At present the spirit of self-sacrifice with which the best of teachers threw themselves into the work was apt to be overlooked. He would bespeak for the teachers of the province of Alberta the sympathy and co-operation of all well thinking citizens. (Applause.)

MEDICINE HAT CROPS AGAIN LEAD

PROVINCIAL SEED FAIR AGAIN SWEPT BY THIS DISTRICT

THE SECOND YEAR IN SUCCESSION

For the second time Medicine Hat district has demonstrated that it raises the best crops in the province, which means the best in Canada. Last year at the provincial seed fair in Edmonton, Medicine Hat carried off the honors, although the distance of the fair from this district meant great trouble in getting to it, and prevented the display of a large number of samples. This year the fair was held at Lethbridge and Medicine Hat captured the majority of the honors, with 2 firsts, 3 seconds, 2 thirds, 2 fourths, and 2 sixth prizes.

The big prize was the "Farm Crops" trophy for the best bushel of spring wheat. Last year an equivalent to this prize was captured by Medicine Hat district, but this year a Granum man succeeded in just squeezing out E. H. Earl for first place, the latter getting second easily.

The first prizes for this distrct were won by E. H. Earl for Red Fyfe spring wheat, and A. Woolley for barley, any two-rowed variety.

The seconds were: E. H. Earl, for Banner oats, and best bushel of spring wheat, and A. Woolley for peas.

The third prize went to E. H. Earl for barley, any six-rowed variety; and Jos. Atkinson, for Red Fyfe spring wheat.

Fourth prizes were: A. Woolley, for Red Fyfe spring wheat; and A. W. Woolley, for oats, other than Banner.

The sixth prizes were taken by A. Woolley, for spring wheat, other than Red Fyfe, and for oats, any short or feed variety.

In all Medicine Hat secured eleven prizes, five of them being firsts and seconds, in competition against the entire province.

It is a significant fact that although the majority of the samples for competition came from the north, ALMOST ALL THE PRIZES WENT TO SOUTHERN ALBERTA, proving the relative merits of the two sections of Alberta for grain growing. Every sample went beyond standard weight, the heaviest wheat weighing 66 pounds and the heaviest oats 46 pounds.

The greatest thing for this district next to securing the largest total of prizes, is the fact that in the most important grain—Red Fyfe spring wheat—Medicine Hat district secured first, third and fourth prizes.

The success of Medicine Hat district for two successive years, competing against the entire province is all that is necessary to convince prospective Alberta settlers that we stand right at the top in grain growing. Our beautiful climate, our fertile soil, are proving to our farmers that they have selected the best spot in the west for farming. The thousands of acres still open for homesteading, or for sale at low prices, in this district should, and will, fill up rapidly this year.

A certain merchant in Medicine Hat who started advertising in The Times a couple of weeks ago met a representative of that paper last week with the following unsolicited words of appreciation: "Well, that ad. has certainly paid me. I wanted to give advertising a good trial, and I selected The Times. I am more than pleased with the results. I kept track of the results as well as I could, and I never did as much business before. My trade, too, has run along the lines I advertised, so that I can check up pretty accurately how well it paid me. I have been more than pleased and surprised."

The name of the merchant can be had by any enquirer. He had gone into advertising thinking it would not pay, and the first two issues changed his mind.

This is the kind of recommendation upon which The Times bases its appeal to adversers. RESULTS—That's what you are after, and that is all The Times will talk to you.

The boys had been at work during the day and, with admirable taste, had succeeded in imparting to the bare walls of the schoolroom a gay and pleasing appearance. The early part of the evening was given over to the musical and elocutionary features of the program, shortly after the conclusion of which the gathering was augmented by many who had been attending Dr. Tory's address, and the rest of the evening was devoted to games ancient and modern, which were productive of much merriment. Afterwards ladies and gentlemen waited on the company with light refreshments, and the party, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all who took part, broke up shortly before midnight.

DR. TORY SPENDS YESTERDAY IN CITY

ENTERTAINED AND ENTERTAINS

Dr. Tory arrived in the city Sunday morning from the south, and spent Sunday and Monday here. On Monday morning he spoke to the teachers and high school pupils on higher education. In the afternoon a couple of carriages drove the Doctor around the city calling at the Power house, the high school site, the Canneries, the rosery and the C.P.R. shops.

At 4 o'clock a reception was held for the visitor at the City Hall, at which a large number of guests invited by the school board, attended.

In the evening the Doctor gave his talk on "Higher Education in the Province."

There was a fairly large company present in the council chamber at 8 o'clock, the notable feature being the large number of ladies present. Possibly the fair sex were better represented on this occasion than at any previous public meeting held in the city.

On the platform were Dr. Tory, the Mayor, Messrs. Brotherton, Kennedy and Milne of the school board. At a quarter past eight the hall was well filled and Mr. Brotherton rose and in a few words expressed gratification at the large number who had turned out to hear Dr. Tory, especially as there were a number of important counter-attractions. The Mayor spoke briefly, introducing the speaker of the evening, who was greeted with applause.

In his opening remarks Dr. Tory said that he could not express in too strong language his deep appreciation of the kindness that had been shown him both by the Mayor and the members of the school board. He especially appreciated the kindness of the teachers, who had given him the opportunity of becoming acquainted with a large number of citizens—an acquaintance he would look forward to renewing at an early date.

Entering on to the subject of his address, the speaker said that it was his intention to attempt to answer the question as to what was the meaning of educational work. This, in spite of the fact that in doing so it would be necessary for him, to a certain extent, to cover familiar ground.

There was one distinct line of cleavage between the progressive and non-progressive races—it was in their manner of viewing their relation to great educational problems. The late Lord Salisbury had, during the Spanish-American war, referred to the difference between Spain and America as the difference between the living and dying nation. This difference was constituted in the attitude of mind which a people adopted towards progress. It was the distinction between the intelligent and the unintelligent.

If enquiry were to be made of the speaker as to what line modern educational movements must take, he would make a division into four classes. Under the first he would place industrial schools. In the older countries where enormous populations congregated in the slums of the large cities, where in such adverse environment children were brought up without training in the power of self-control, there it was necessary to provide special schools for the benefit of our morally weak brothers. It might, with reason, be expected that such institutions would be unnecessary in a new country such as Alberta; yet it was a striking fact that so early in the history of the new province, provision had to be made for moral cripples. He hoped this problem would be dealt with in such a manner that it would never become a very difficult one in Alberta.

There were three other very definite lines on which education could be considered. The first was that of the public or elementary school; the second that of the secondary school; the third that of the university and college. All technical education might be classified under one or the other of these headings.

During the past hundred years a great change had come about in the attitude of mind of the civilized nations with regard to education. There were three specific points of difference The first was in the attitude of the State, generally towards the question. A century ago the governing classes of the world looked at the matter from their own viewpoint. Those below were not thought of in this connection, or it was considered a highly dangerous thing for knowledge to be scattered broadcast among the common people. The modern State, on the contrary, believed in the principle of universal education, and was willing even to use force to compel the requirement of its benefits.

The second thing which differentiated the modern from the ancient, (referring to a century ago) viewpoint, was the determination to impress the stamp of the State on education. Then the seal of the ecclesiastic was first imprinted on the education of the day, and the State was content to derive any indirect benefit which might accrue therefrom. Today little of this spirit remained, in some degree it survived in one of the Canadian provinces, where there were five different systems of schools, each deriving support from the government. Generally, however, the modern State considered it a duty to impress its education directly on the minds of its children. There was a tendency to break away from the class spirit—to allow all a chance to rise to the highest place that the nation could offer.

He would beg the attention of his audience for a few moments to some American statistics to note in what manner the modern communities were willing to pay for the education of their youth. In the State of Massachusetts $17,500,000 was spent in 1906 on public schools alone. This in a country with 479,000 school children, worked out at an average of $37.50 per child, or the equivalent of a tax of $6.30 per inhabitant. On the high schools $2,550,000 was spent, which, for an attendance of 45,000 pupils worked out at $57 per child, while $3,000,000 was spent on university education, the greater part of which was provided for by the endowments of wealthy citizens. By direct taxation of the people the approximate sum of $20,000,000 was raised. In New York State $41,000,000 was spent in the same year on the public schools and $7,250,000 on universities. To come further west, where conditions more closely approximated our own; in the State of Ohio $16,300,000 was spent on the public schools, or, with an attendance of 825,000 pupils $20 per child. On high schools $2,700,000 was spent, on the universities and colleges $1,800,000. In our own banner province, Ontario, $12.92 per child was spent in public school education. $35 per head on the high schools. Ontario spent less on her public schools than did Massachusetts and New York. No province of the Dominion is so well willing to fax herself sufficiently for educational purposes. In Alberta more money proportionately was spent in this way than in any other province, with the possible exception of B.C. Alberta had been able to obtain the very best of the educationists largely because school trustees had been willing to give large compensation for the teachers' labor.

The speaker went on to say that he had been deeply impressed during his short stay in Medicine Hat with the splendid work being done by the teaching staff here. He thought the time would come when it would be realized that the community ultimately owed more to her teachers than to any other of her servants. At present the spirit of self-sacrifice with which the best of teachers threw themselves into the work was apt to be overlooked. He would bespeak for the teachers of the province of Alberta the sympathy and co-operation of all well thinking citizens. (Applause.)

Strange Story of Le p Year

The way in which the months which form our year have been shaken up and juggled around, pared down here and padded out there, makes a mighty interesting story.

The first European division of the year that we know anything about had only ten months and 304 days. This was the invention of Romulus, who must have had a lovely time patching up things so as to come out even.

They evidently did get into a pretty bad mess, for Numa Pompilius, the second King of Rome, had to add two whole months, January and February. January, named after Janus, the god who presided over the beginning of the year, was made the first of the twelve months.

February, from a Latin word, meaning to expiate, was clapped on to the end, that being considered the appropriate period for repentance. It stayed there for 200 years, before it finally got itself promoted to second place. And it has somehow always been February which was tackled first if anybody wanted to do anything to the calendar.

Even with Numa's twelve months the year had only 354 days. The trouble was that the ancients had a very great regard for the moon and were trying to make the months follow exactly the moon's revolutions. The result was that the year was eleven days too short and the seasons were climbing over themselves in the most confusing fashion.

Something had to be done, and of course February was chosen as the month to be tinkered with. The change was so clumsy that one wonders how anyone could manage dates at all under such a system.

Every alternate year a whole month was donated to the year, but for some reason, instead of putting it between two months, it was thrust squarely into February, between the 24th and the 25th of that long suffering month. The length of this intercalary month, as it was called, was itself alternated every alternate year, and so the length of the year was made pretty nearly correct.

It was now one day too long, however, instead of being ten days too short, so that still another clumsy device had to be arranged for correcting this. The year was of different lengths at different times, but once in twenty-four years it came around to the right point and then started all over again.

Shrewd Priests.

That is, it would have come around all right if it had been left alone. But the management of the calendar was in the hands of the priests, who could alter the length of the intercalary month—poor February again!—to suit themselves. These shrewd gentleman, therefore, used to spin out the month when they wanted to hang onto an office for themselves or friends, or would cut it short if they were in a hurry for the annual elections.

As may well be believed the common people had no comprehension of the right way of running their complicated calendar. They didn't know whether the priests were doing the thing properly or not; so it was confusion worse confounded as time went on, until in Julius Caesar's time the year was hopelessly muddled up. The Winter months were in the Autumn, the Autumn months in the summer, and so on.

Something had to be done again, and Caesar was equal to the occasion. He planked in two extra months between November and December, in addition to the intercalary month in February; so that the year contained fifteen months and 445 days. This was 46 B.C. and was known as the year of Confusion.

It really was the last year of confusion. It cancelled all past errors, and the next thing was to make subsequent years the proper length.

Fortunately there was a philosopher of Alexandria, named Sosigenes, who had the thing all worked out. Caesar adopted his plan, and the result is our modern year, even to our occasional leap year.

But poor old February still had to come in for some tinkering. Caesar decreed that the months of the year should be of thirty and thirty-one days alternately except February, which in ordinary years was to have 28 days, with an extra day every four years. The only foolish thing about this arrangement was that the extra day was not placed at the end of the month, as at present, but between the 24th and 25th, where the intercalary month had been.

It was Caesar therefore who introduced leap year. In order that the name of Julius Caesar might forever be associated with this new calendar the month in which his birthday occurred was named after him.

It is our July, formerly known as Quintilis. This was a very proper recognition of Julius Caesar's services, but it contained the seed of more trouble for February.

Jealous of Caesar.

When Julius died, and Augustus succeeded him, the latter was rather jealous because of that month which perpetuated the first Caesar's name. He decided to have one named after him too, so when his army won some victories in the month following July he picked that one out to be called Augustus.

That was all right, as far as it went, but there was one serious drawback. Augustus had only thirty days, while Julius had thirty-one.

Horrid thought! Augustus was not the man to put up with a smaller month than anyone else, so he calmly tacked another day onto August.

The wonder is that he did not tack on two so as to be not merely equal to but ahead of July. He made trouble enough as it was.

The length of each of the last four months had to be changed so that they would alternate in their number of days, and as he had added a day to the year one had to be lopped off somewhere. Needless to say, it came off February.

The year was now of the right length except for the fraction of an hour but this slight error, only 11 minutes and 10 seconds a year, was allowed to grow until in 1582 it amounted to ten days. In that year Gregory XIII. decreed that October 5 should be October 15, thus catching up those ten lost days.

Some countries, however, stuck to the old dates. Russia still holds to the old style, and in some places in Great Britain certain terms are regulated by it, although the new style was adopted by England in the eighteenth century.

The British people thought they were being robbed of something when the change was made, and crowds of them paraded with the demand "Give us back our eleven days!" For by that time the difference had increased another day.

Having corrected past errors Gregory decided to keep things straight in future so he decreed that only those century years which are divisible by 400 should be leap years. For instance 1600 and 2000 would be leap years, but 1700, 1800 and 1900 would not be.

That makes things come out so exactly that there now will be a difference of only one day in 3,900 years. It is proposed therefore to make the year 4000, which would be a leap year, a common year, and then we will be all right again for another 4000 years.

Just why leap year received that name is not quite clear. That it dates back a long way is certain, for it is found to be in vogue in the middle ages.

Some authorities say that it is because the days following February 29 leap a day beyond where they would have been had the year been an ordinary one. For instance, if March 1 would have come on Tuesday leap year puts it on Wednesday instead.

Another reason is that in England formerly the 29th and 28th of February were one in the eve of the law. The 28th as the regular day was considered that one; and the 29th, though civilly held as a day was not one legally. So that the legal year did really leap that day.

One name for it is bissextile year, a name which goes back to old Roman times for its origin. At that time the days were counted backward from the beginning of the next month. February the 25th was the sixth day before the Kalends of March—sextus ad Kalendas Martias. The additional day that Caesar put in between the 24th and 25th was called bissextum, and so the year came to be known as the bissextile year.

ATHLETICS

Hockey.

On Saturday the Calgary C.P.R. boys came down to Medicine Hat for the return match, which was played on the worst ice imaginable. The thaw which had continued throughout the day left the rink in a slushy condition, as many of the players who came to grief had reason to remember. In spite of the state of the ice a pretty fast game was played. The Calgary team were clearly at a disadvantage. Being accustomed to a large rink it was no easy matter for them to adapt themselves to a smaller one, but a very good fight was put up, nevertheless. During the first half the play was pretty even and its close left the score 4-3 in favor of the home team. The second half saw a keen contest, and some rather dirty checks resulted in one or two players being put on the fence. The visitors had the worst of the game throughout the second half. Medley and Reber did some fine work and rapidly ran up the score for the Hat. Turnbull and Deane, and Dalton in goal, played their usual good game. At the close of the play the score stood 11-4 in favor of the local team. After the match the teams and a few friends adjourned to the Royal Hotel where a supper was served and while music and interesting recollections held sway any unpleasantness which occurred during the game was soon forgotten and the Calgarians showed their true sportsmanship by leaving on the best of terms with their victors.

The line-up was as follows:

FUNERAL OF JACK IRVING.

Orangeville, Feb. 22.—In a driving rain storm, the funeral of Jack Irving, goal keeper for the Dufferin lacrosse team, intermediate C.L.A. champions in 1897, and who died at Medicine Hat on the 8th inst., took place to Forest Lawn cemetery. He was but 32 and leaves a widow, but no children.

The pall bearers, members of the Dufferin lacrosse club, were Messrs. Fred. Menary, Harry Gillespie, Adam Clarridge, Valker Kearns, W. E. and James Irving.

Curling.

Fred Pingle has been doing better in Winnipeg. On Wednesday he beat Westall of Mather by 10-6 and Emerson of Yorkton by 12-0. Later he beat Playfair in the Royal Caledonia 11-10. The Telegram says: "Pingle ran away from Westall of Mather, the Mather skip not being able to get anywhere near his adversary."

He came out well in the Royal Caledomian, running up to the semi-finals. Dow, of Pilot Mound, was beaten by 14-8. In the semi-finals, however, Matheson of Russell knocked him out by 13-9, the victor making 11 of his scores in three ends.

In the O'Grady Pingle beat Forbes of Napinka 8-6, but McKillop of Calgary, who was holding up the other half of the double team play, was beaten by 12-5, thus putting Medicine Hat and Calgary out of the running.

A Youthful Paragon.

Alberta is a great province. We claim, with reason, that this province has before it a future which faces no other province in Canada. We have grounds for this belief, have a right to think so, and, within certain limits, can talk the future wherever we go, and in whatever terms we wish to select.

But there are limits—if we wish to keep within reason, if we do not wish to make ourselves the laughing stock of Canada.

Alberta is a young province, and, like any other youth, must leave some room for itself to grow. Naturally, we do not know it all—and the less evidence of omniscience that we show, the more quickly will we arrive at the level we know is before us.

There is no lese-majeste in believing that Alberta as a young province has many things to learn. There is foolishness in working on the assumption that we are a most striking improvement as a youngster on the old men of Canada..

This introduction is brought out by a report regarding Medicine Hat's educational matters secured by our school board from Dr. Scott, superintendent of the Calgary schools.

As that gentleman probably gave his advice free, and upon request, it would scarcely be proper in this place to attack his conclusions by showing where he might err from personal qualifications.

In the report as presented by Mr. Milne at the board meeting, Dr. Scott said that two teachers could do the work in the high school here, "if they were men trained according to the teaching methods in vogue in Alberta." However highly we may think of our training of teachers we only bring ourselves into ridicule by thus openly declaring that no place but Alberta can train a teacher. Granted that the curriculum of Alberta calls for something different from that demanded in Ontario or New Brunswick, very few will say that the standard is higher here than in the older provinces. There are just as good teachers turned out in Ontario as Alberta can produce—and there are a great many more of them Dr. Scott, himself, is a product of the east, and of very recent origin, and he must consider himself fit for his position—one of the highest in Alberta.

Dr. Scott goes further in his bid for popularity by urging a striking innovation, as far as the older provinces are concerned. That is, the employment of the same man as head of the public and high schools. This is never done in the older provinces, and, on the face of it, it scarcely seems reasonable that the youngest province should have hit on such a simple but momentous improvement Our Calgary adviser would have us believe that different principals means a break in the continuity of the studies. Ninety out of a hundred of the present residents of Alberta have been through the thing as well as Dr. Scott, and we doubt if any of us were heavily impressed with any "break in the continuity" of our studies in going from the public to the high school. Surely the men who prepare the curriculum have brains enough to maintain the continuity. If they can't they are not fit for their jobs.

But, apart from precedent it must appear to any thinking person (Dr. Scott notwithstanding) that entirely different qualifications are required in the man who manages youths of sixteen to twenty, from what public school teaching demands. The kindergarten teacher is a specialist. She might be a star in teaching boys and girls under six or seven, and worth nothing in higher grades; just as the successful teacher of Standard V. might be a spectacular failure in the kindergarten.

And the same thing holds in considering public and high schools.

It seems almost too ridiculous to argue the fact that a high school principal and a public school principal require as different methods both of teaching and discipline as can well be imagined.

Is there the slightest similarity in the methods of instructing boys of eight and boys of eighteen? And can any man retain discipline in the same manner in two such cases. The entire principle of education is an alteration of methods as the age of the pupil or his education increases. It is almost impossible to secure the qualifications for both styles of teaching in one and the same man.

What is most serious is the fact that both public and high school pupils attend the same school in one instance, and a teacher who can maintain his discipline by practising the different methods in the presence of the two classes of pupils is a marvel. If a high school pupil commits a breach of the rules the teacher can scarcely punish as he would a younger child, and the younger delinquent will wonder why, and resent it.

We in this city do not have to go to Dr. Scott to find out the evils of a common principal.

The trouble seems to be that Dr. Scott has felt (or imagined he felt) a demand in Alberta for someting different from the ordinary trend of educational methods—a system we could call our own, something we could look at with thumb in vest and say, "That's mine. I did it all myself. I may be young, but gee! I'm clever. The old man isn't in it." Dr. Scott may believe what he says, but we are of the opinion he is trying to cater to public taste. Of course, one could scarcely expect him to say that different men should control the different classes of schools; for there would be less money then in the position open to him, since he controls both schools in Calgary.

Dr. Scott is young in experience, as also is Alberta. And it seems much more sensible that the opinion of an older man—in age and experience—should be taken for the management of such an important thing as education. If the east does not produce the proper men for teaching, then Dr. Scott's advice should have no weight, as his experience is from the east.

We all like Alberta, and think she is THE BIG PROVINCE, but many of us resent the reputation undeservedly given the province by such rather quackish methods of pampering our egotistical ideas. We profit by the experience of the older provinces, but we only rouse a laugh when we try to show that we are superior in educational attainments to provinces which have made their experiences in fifty years of study. There is a great danger that Alberta will acquire some of the characteristic which amuse us in some residents across the border. We have to learn and we have to show we are willing to learn. If, at our age and experience, we set ourselves up as teachers of provinces that have both age and experience at their back, we not only provoke ridicule, but also put ourselves in a fair way never to improve

What the east has selected in educational methods stands a fair chance of being better than what we would select with no experience to go on but that of a few years.

And after all it comes back to the fact of different standards of education for different provinces. As The Times has said before, education should be a Dominion affair, not a provincial. Education is education, spelt and pronounced in the same way, whether in British Columbia or Prince Edward Island. The same standards, the same examinations, the same requirements in teachers should be demanded, all over Canada. Education is not a matter of passing an examination that entitles you to enter the high school or the university, but knowledge, and knowledge is the same the world over.

If the Alberta Educational Department can show any reason why Alberta should demand any more or any less than, or different from, Ontario or New Brunswick, we would like to see it. We are only injuring ourselves in this special education system. People travel west, and the Ontario child that comes to this province to be a good Albertan is handicapped right at the start by an entire change in his studies and educational requirements.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Up to the present the Alberta government has kept pretty free from charges of graft. But it looks as if graft was not such an unknown word after all. In answer to a question of the Opposition it was stated that in two years and four months the government had spent $58,376.85 in advertising and printing, and of this big sum, no less than $46,859.28 went to the Edmonton Bulletin, only a paltry $11,517.56 being spent among the dozens of other papers in the province.

If this isn't the worst kind of graft, the word has lost its meaning In the last year and two months of that period The Times got the immense sum of $26. And the government wouldn't even spend money to advertise the poultry meetings of recent date.

The policy outlined by the government in answer to another question, was to have the printing done "where it can be obtained with despatch and lowest possible prices." Such falderol doesn't go down with anyone. No other printing office had a chance to quote prices. Work from the government of $20,000 a year, as The Bulletin has been receiving, would almost keep that paper without income from any other source.

It is a safe wager that the same work would be done in most other offices at thousands of dollars less. The Bulletin has been certain of all the work and it is scarcely likely they would do it at "the lowest possible price."

Manitoba is going into an aggressive prohibition campaign. Instead of a three-fifths vote being necessary to establish local option, as in Ontario, a majority vote alone is necessary. Prohibition is sweeping all over America. The sections of United States that have had the worst reputation have suddenly turned around and carried prohibition by large majorities. Alberta's turn will come soon.

A young man from Vancouver spent a day or two last week in Medcine Hat soliciting advertisements from the merchants. These ads. were to appear in a "Union Labor Directory," which contained nothing but the ads. and names of the officials of the local unions. The latter made nothing out of the deal, but were given the books. The merchants paid their $8 or $10 a page according to how much they could be mulcted. The young man took from the city over $200 and spent not more than $50 in town. The point we wish to make is this: A great many of these merchants spend nothing or next to nothing in the local papers, but they are willing to send good money out of the city. These same merchants decry the purchasing of goods at Eaton's. They say "spend your money in the city," and then at the first opportunity spend their's out of the city. The newspapers do their best to keep the buying among these very merchants who turn around and do what they complain of the residents doing.

And with a great deal less excuse. The space for which they paid $10 in this booklet could be secured in BOTH local papers at the same price for almost two months. And the results cannot be compared. The booklet was not prepared by the unions, and therefore has no bid for union trade. The booklet is of almost no interest even to union men, and will scarcely ever be looked at; so that it is doubtful if they get a cent's worth of value for their money.

The rule of spending your money in town is just as binding upon the merchants as upon the ordinary consumer, and it is a rather one-sided affair to expect the consumer to buy in town while the merchant sends his money out for what he could buy here to better advantage.

Here are merchants complaining of the tightness of money, and cutting down their advertising on that account; and then sending money out of town, uselessly, for the very same purpose.

A square deal all around is all that is necessary to make business perfect in this city.

A number of the merchants who advertised in this booklet are advertising in both papers, and therefore are free from the above.

At the same time it would seem that it is scarcely right for the Trades and Labor Congress to allow an outsider to solicit advertising in their name. The merchants appreciate the union trade and the advertising solicitor holds them up in the name of the unions.

Medicine Hat's capture of most of the prizes at the provincial seed fair is only one more feather in our hat. The Times has always believed in the future of this district for farming.

It looks as if another swindle has been worked on the public of Medicine Hat. A man toured the city last October selling "Hurbut's Story of the Bible," for which he was asking $2.50. He was fairly successful, and in several cases collected the money, the books to be sent later. As a receipt he gave a yellow slip at the top of which was printed "Publisher's Guarantee to Subscribers," which explained that the purchaser was under no obligation to buy if the books were not up to sample. The paper was not even a receipt, but rather a proof that the money was owing. The agent's name was written on the paper, but no name of publisher or address appeared. The paper is absolutely useless for a receipt, and further, contains the sentence, "unavoidable delays in the delivery of the book shall not invalidate this order." The book was to be delivered Dec. 1, but nothing further has been heard of "D. L. Porteous," whose name appears as agent.

SUFFERING WOMEN

who find life a burden, can have health and strength restored by the use of

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

The present generation of women and girls have more than their share of misery. With some it is nervousness and palpitation, with others weak, dizzy and fainting spells, while with others there is a general collapse of the system. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart and make it beat strong and regular, create new red blood corpuscles, and impart that sense of buoyancy to the spirits that is the result of renewed mental and physical vigor.

Mrs. D. O. Donoghue, Orillia, Ont., writes: "For over a year I was troubled with nervousness and heart trouble. I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and after using five boxes I found I was completely cured. I always recommend them to my friends."

Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

"Thank you, doctor," murmured the patient, turning away. A moment later, however, the office door was opened and the patient sidled in.

"Say, doc," said he, with an ingratiating smile, "where do I get the ten-cent piece?"

Having been requested by a large number of the ratepayers of Ward IV., to offer myself as candidate for Alderman to represent that Ward during the coming term, I have agreed to stand for election. "Supposing," said Jocelyn, "for one moment that there was a grain of truth in your fabrication, who would believe you? Who on this coast would take your word against the word of an English gentleman? Even if the whole story were true, which it is not, could you prove it? You are a liar as well as a coward and traitor! Do you think that the very servants in the stable would believe you? Do you think that the incident of the smallpox at Msala is forgotten? Do you think that all Loango, even to the boatmen on the beach, ignores the fact that you are here in Loango now because you are afraid to go through a savage country to the simiacine plateau, as you are pledged to do? You were afraid of the smallpox once. There is something else that you are afraid of now. I do not know what it is, but I will find out. Coward! Go! Leave the house at once, before I call in the stable boys to turn you out, and never dare to speak to me again!"

He heard her close the window after him as he walked away beneath the trees.

Jocelyn went out by the open window, and presently Nala came grinning toward her. He was evidently very much pleased with himself—held himself erect and squinted more violently than usual.

"I have been to Msala," he said, with considerable dignity of manner.

Nala squatted on the chunam floor and proceeded to unfold a leaf. The operation took some time. Within the outer covering there was a second envelope of paper, likewise secured by a string. Finally the man produced a small note, which showed signs of having been read more than once. This he handed to Jocelyn with an absurd air of importance.

She opened the paper and read;

To Marie, at Msala—Send at once to Mr. Durnovo, informing him that the tribes have risen and are rapidly surrounding the plateau. He must return here at once with as large an armed force as he can raise, but the most important consideration is time. He must not wait for men from elsewhere, but must pick up as many as he can in Loango and on the way up to Msala. I reckon that we can hold out for three months without outside assistance, but after that period we shall be forced to surrender or try to cut our way through without the simiacine. With a larger force we could beat back the tribes and establish our hold on the plateau by force of arms. This must be forwarded to Mr. Durnovo at once, wherever he is. The letter is in duplicate, sent by two good messengers, who go by different routes.

JOHN MEREDITH.

When Jocelyn looked up, dry lipped, breathless, Nala was standing before her, beaming with self importance.

"Who gave you this?"

"Marie, at Msala."

"Who is she?"

"Oh, Mr. Durnovo's woman at Msala. She keeps his house."

"But this letter is for Mr. Durnovo!" cried Jocelyn, whose fear made her unreasonably angry. "Why has he not had it?"

Nala came nearer, with upraised forefinger and explanatory palm.

"Marie tell me," he said, "that Mr. Meredith sent two letters. Marie give Mr. Durnovo one. This—other letter."

Jocelyn Gordon rose to the occasion.

"Can you go," she said after a moment's thought, "to St. Paul de Loanda for me, at once—now?"

"Oh, yes," with a sigh.

Already Jocelyn was writing something on a sheet of paper.

"Take this," she said, "to the telegraph office at St. Paul de Loanda and send it off at once. Here is money. You understand? I will pay you when you bring back the receipt. If you have been very quick I will pay you well."

That same evening a second messenger started northward after Maurice Gordon with a letter telling him to come back at once to Loango.

* * * * * * * *

Guy Oscard was dining alone in Russell square when a telegram was handed to him. He opened it and read:

Meredith surrounded and in danger. Durnovo false. Come at once.
JOCELYN GORDON.

In due time Guy Oscard landed on the beach at Loanda. He had the telegram still in his pocket, and he went, not to Maurice Gordon's office, but to the bungalow.

Jocelyn greeted him with a little inarticulate cry of joy.

"I did not think that you could possibly be here so soon," she said.

"What news have you?" he asked, without pausing to explain. He was one of those men who are silenced by an unlimited capacity for prompt action.

"That," she replied, handing him the note written by Jack Meredith to Marie at Msala.

Guy Oscard read it carefully.

"Dated seven weeks last Monday; nearly two months ago," he muttered half to himself.

"But you will go?" she said, and something in her voice startled him.

"Of course I will go," he replied. He looked down into her face with a vague question in his quiet eyes, and who knows what he saw there? Perhaps she was off her guard. Perhaps she read this man aright and did not care. With a certain slow hesitation he laid his hand on her arm. There was something almost paternal in his manner which was in keeping with his stature.

"Moreover," he went on, "I will get there in time. I have an immense respect for Meredith. If he said that he could hold out for four months I should say that he could hold out for six. There is no one like Meredith once he makes up his mind to take things seriously."

"Le' go!" he gasped.

It was not very well done, and she probably saw through it. She probably knew that he was as anxious as she was herself. But his very presence was full of comfort. It somehow brought a change to the moral atmosphere.

"Where is Durnovo?" Oscard asked suddenly.

"I believe he is in Loango. It is not likely," she went on, "that he will come here. I—I rather lost my temper with him and said things which I imagine hurt his feelings."

"I'm rather afraid of doing that myself," he said; "only it will not be his feelings."

"I do not think," she replied, "that it would be at all expedient to say or do anything at present. He must go with you to the plateau. Afterward—perhaps."

Oscard laughed quietly.

"Ah," he said, "that sounds like one of Meredith's propositions. But he does not mean it any more than you do."

"I do mean it," replied Jocelyn quietly. There is no hatred so complete, so merciless, as the hatred of a woman for one who has wronged the man she loves. At such times women do not pause to give fair play. They make no allowance."

Guy Oscard smiled.

"I think I will go and look for him," he said.

At dusk that same evening there was a singular incident in the barroom of the only hotel in Loango.

Victor Durnovo was there, surrounded by a few friends of antecedents and blood similar to his own. They were having a convivial time of it, and the consumption of whisky was greater than might be deemed discreet in such a climate as that of Loango.

Durnovo was in the act of raising his glass to his lips when the open doorway was darkened and Guy Oscard stood before him. The half breed's jaw dropped; the glass was set down again rather unsteadily on the zinc covered counter.

"I want you," said Oscard.

There was a little pause, an ominous silence, and Victor Durnovo slowly followed Oscard out of the room, leaving that ominous silence behind.

"I leave for Msala tonight," said Oscard when they were outside, "and you are coming with me."

"I'll see you cursed first!" replied Durnovo, with a courage born of Irish whisky.

Guy Oscard said nothing, but he stretched out his right hand suddenly. His fingers closed in the collar of Victor Durnovo's coat, and that particolored scion of two races found himself feebly trotting the one street of Loango.

"Le' go!" he gasped.

But the hand at his neck neither relinquished nor contracted. When they reached the beach the embarkation of the little army was going forward under Maurice Gordon's supervision. Victor looked at Gordon. He reflected over the trump card held in his hand, but he was too skilful to play it then.

CHAPTER XVI.

It was nearly dark when the little coast steamer secured by Maurice Gordon for the service turned her prow northward and steamed away.

"The truth is," Durnovo took an early opportunity of saying to Oscard, "that my nerve is no longer up to this work. I should not care to undertake this business alone, despite my reputation on the coast. It is a wonderful thing how closely the nerves are allied to the state of one's health."

"Wonderful!" acquiesced Guy Oscard, with a lack of irony which only made the irony keener.

"I've been too long in this country," exclaimed Durnovo. "That's the fact. I'm not the man I was."

Guy Oscard smoked for some moments in silence, then he took his pipe from his lips.

"The only pity is," he said judicially, "that you ever undertook to look for the simiacine if you were going to funk it when the first difficulty arose."

Without further comment he walked away and entered into conversation with the captain of the steamer.

"All right," muttered Durnovo between his teeth—"all right, my sarcastic, grand gentleman. I'll be even with you yet."

In due time Msala was reached. As the canoes suitable for up river traffic were by no means sufficient to transport the whole of the expeditionary force in one journey, a division was made. Durnovo took charge of the advance column, journeying up to the camp from which the long march through the forest was to begin, and sending back the canoes for Oscard and the remainder of the force. With these canoes he sent back word that the hostile tribes were within a few days' march, and that he was fortifying his camp.

This news seemed to furnish Guy Oscard with food for considerable thought, and after some space of time he called Marie.

She came, and, standing before him with her patient dignity of mien, awaited his communication. She never took her eyes off the letter in his hand. Oscard noticed the persistency of her gaze at the time and remembered it again afterward.

"Marie," he said, "I have had rather serious news from Mr. Durnovo. It will not be safe for you to stay at Msala. You must take the children down to Loango. I will send two men down with you, and will give you a letter to Miss Gordon, who will see to your wants at Loango."

"Yes," said she softly, "I know." And she went into the house.

The next morning brought further rumors of approaching danger, and it seemed certain that this news must have filtered through Durnovo's fortified camp farther up the river. This time the report was more definite. There were Arabs leading the tribes, and rumor further stated that an organized descent on Msala was intended. And yet there was no word from Durnovo; no sign to suggest that he had even thought of securing the safety of his housekeeper and the few aged negroes in charge of Msala. This news only strengthened Oscard's determination to send Marie down to the coast, and he personally superintended their departure before taking his seat in the canoe for the up river voyage. The men of his division had all preceded him, and no one except his own boatmen knew that Msala was to be abandoned.

Despite disquieting rumors, the expedition was allowed to depart from the river camp unmolested. For two days they marched through the gloomy forest with all speed. On the third day one of the men of Durnovo's division captured a native who had been prowling on their heels in the line of march. Victor Durnovo sent captor and prisoner to the front of the column, with a message to Oscard that he would come presently and see what information was to be abstracted from the captive. At the midday halt Durnovo accordingly joined Oscard, and the man was brought before them. He was hardly worthy of the name, so disease stricken, so miserable and half starved was he.

"Ask him," said Oscard, "whether he knows that there is an Englishman with a large force on the top of a mountain far to the east."

Durnovo translated, and the man answered with a smile. In reply to some further question the negro launched into a detailed narrative, to which Durnovo listened eagerly.

"He says," said the latter to Oscard, "that the plateau is in possession of the Masais. It was taken two months ago. The blacks were sold as slaves; the two Englishmen were tortured to death and their bodies burned."

Oscard never moved a muscle.

"Ask him if he is quite sure about it."

"Quite," replied Durnovo after questioning. What a pity! But I always knew it. I knew it was quite hopeless from the first."

He passed his brown hand nervously over his face, where the perspiration stood in beads.

"Yes," said Oscard slowly, "but I think we will go on all the same."

"What!" cried Durnovo. "Go on?"

"Yes," replied Guy Oscard, "we will go on, and if I find you trying to desert I'll shoot you down like a rat."

* * * * * * * *

"About as bad as they can be, sir. That's how things is." Joseph set down his master's breakfast on the rough table that stood in front of his tent and looked at Jack Meredith.

Meredith had a way of performing most of his toilet outside his tent, and while Joseph made his discouraging report he was engaged in buttoning his waistcoat. He nodded gravely, but his manner was not that of a man who fully realized his position of imminent danger. Some men are like this. They die without getting at all flustered.

"There's not more nor two or three out of the whole lot that I can put any trust in," continued Joseph.

Jack Meredith was putting on his coat.

"I know what a barrack room mutiny is. I've felt it in the atmosphere, so to speak, before now, sir."

"And what does it feel like?" inquired Jack Meredith, lightly arranging his watch chain.

But Joseph did not answer. He stepped backward into the tent and brought two rifles. There was no need of answer, for this came in the sound of many voices, the clang and clatter of varied arms.

"Here they come, sir," said the soldier servant, respectfully mindful of his place even at this moment.

Jack Meredith merely sat down behind the little table where his breakfast stood untouched. He leaned his elbow on the table and watched the approach of the disorderly band of blacks. Some ran, some hung back, but all were armed.

In front walked a small, truculent looking man with broad shoulders and an aggressive head.

He planted himself before Meredith and, turning with a wave of the hand to indicate his followers, said in English:

"These men, these friends of me, say they are tired of you. You no good leader. They make me their leader."

He shrugged his shoulders with a hideous grin of deprecation.

"I not want. They make me. We go to join our friends in the valley."

He pointed down into the valley where the enemy was encamped.

"We have agreed to take £200 for you. Price given by our friends in valley"—

The man stopped suddenly. He was looking into the muzzle of a revolver with a fixed fascination. Jack Meredith exhibited no haste. He did not seem yet to have realized the gravity of the situation. He took very careful aim and pulled the trigger. A little puff of white smoke floated over their heads. The broad shouldered man with the aggressive head looked stupidly surprised. He turned toward his supporters with a pained look of inquiry, as if there was something he did not quite understand, and then he fell on his face and lay quite still.

Jack Meredith looked on the blank faces with a glance of urbane inquiry.

"Has anybody else anything to say to me?" he asked.

There was a dead silence. Some one laughed rather feebly in the background.

"Then I think I will go on with my breakfast."

Which he accordingly proceeded to do.

One or two of the mutineers dropped away and went back to their own quarters.

"Take it away," said Meredith, indicating the body of the dead man with his teaspoon.

"And, look here," he cried out after them, "do not let us have any more of this nonsense! It will only lead to unpleasantness."

Some of the men grinned. They were not particularly respectful in their manner of bearing away the mortal remains of their late leader. The feeling had already turned.

The position was not a pleasant one. For three months the plateau had been surrounded by hostile tribes, who made desultory raids from time to time. These the little force on the summit was able to repulse, but a combined attack from, say, two sides at once would certainly have been successful. Meredith had no reason to suppose that his appeal for help had reached Msala, infested as the intervening forests were by cannibal tribes. Provisions were at a low ebb. There seemed to be no hope of outside aid, and disaffection was rife in his small force. Jack Meredith, who was no soldier, found himself called upon to defend a weak position, with unreliable men, for an indefinite period.

A little puff of white smoke floated over their heads.

Joseph had a rough knowledge of soldiering and a very rudimentary notion of fortification. But he had that which served as well—the unerring eye for covert—of a marksman. He was a dead shot at any range, and, knowing what he could hit, he also knew how to screen himself from the rifle of an enemy.

Above all, perhaps, was the quiet influence of a man who never flinched from danger or seemed to be in the least disconcerted by its presence.

"It seems, sir," said Joseph to his master later in the day, "that you've kinder stumped them. They don't understand you."

"They must be kept in check by fear. There is no other way," replied Meredith rather wearily. Of late he had felt less and less inclined to exert himself.

"Yes, sir. Those sort o' men."

Meredith made no answer, and after a little pause Joseph repeated the words significantly, if ungrammatically, "Those sort o' men."

"What do you mean?"

"Slaves," replied Joseph sharply, touching his hat without knowing why.

"Slaves! What are you talking about?"

The man came a little nearer.

"Those forty men—leastwise thirty-four men—that we brought from Msala; Mr. Durnovo's men that cultivate this 'ere simiacine, as they call it. They're different from the rest, sir."

"Yes, of course they are. We do not hire them direct; we hire them from Mr. Durnovo and pay their wages to him. They are of a different tribe from the others—not fighting men, but agriculturists."

(To be continued.)

"I tell you, Ma'am, you ought to use
St. George's Baking Powder
if only for the reason that it is wholesome and healthful."
"The knowledge that you are NOT eating alum, lime, ammonia and acid in your food—should count for a great deal."

Is Gas More Healthful than Electricity?

(Literary Digest.)

In all systems of illumination where flame is used either to give the light itself or to heat to incandescence some auxiliary body, as a Welsbach mantle, the nature of the products of combination is a very important matter. In the early days of the gas industry it threatened to wreck the future of gas for indoor illumination, as we are reminded by Vivian B. Lewes in a lecture delivered before the British Institution of Gas Engineers and abstracted in Technical Literature (New York, October). Mr. Lewes believes that gas as now made is more healthful than the electric light. He notes that the first crude gas in use was rich in sulfureted hydrogen, and gave rise to such discomfort when consumed that ventilating burners of clumsy device had to be employed, while leaky fittings gave at all times an objectionable aroma. Says the lecturer:

"A very short period served to convince the gas manager that the purity of the gas was a matter of even greater importance to him than to the public, as the latter could escape the results of the cape the effects of the sulfurized products of combustion by adopting other illuminants; while the gas manager's livelihood depended upon keeping his customers. As a result, purification from sulfureted hydrogen was adopted, and the use of coal gas increased with enormous rapidity.

"With the advent of the electric light as an illuminant, great stress was laid on its enormous advantages from the hygienic point of view; and its supporters still make the claim that it must of necessity be far more healthful to use as an illuminant than coal gas. It has not unnaturally been assumed that, owing to incandescent electric lighting adding nothing to the impurities in the atmosphere, and—what is quite as important—withdrawing no oxygen from it, it must be the most hygienic form of illumination to employ; but in the years which have elapsed since electricity was pressed into the service of man for illuminating purposes, it has become perfectly clear that though it is inactive as regards vitiation of the atmosphere, a gas lighted room will nearly always be more pleasant and healthy to live in than one lighted by the newer form of illuminant."

In all processes of ventilation the writer goes on to say, the great factors which enable us to change the atmosphere in our dwelling-rooms are the air currents set up by alterations in temperature and diffusion between volumes of air at different temperatures. It is this, he claims, which gives coal gas its great advantages as an illuminant over electric lighting. He says:

"Using an incandescent mantle on an atmospheric burner, about four cubic feet of gas per hour are consumed; and this gives two cubic feet of carbon dioxid, which would very soon suffice to raise the proportion of carbon dioxid above the sanitary limit of six parts in 10,000. But tho everything be done to render the room as air tight as possible, it will be found that the proportion of carbon dioxid is enormously less than it should be by theory; this being due to the fact that alteration in the temperature of the air of the room sets up currents and actions which tend to bring about a change of the atmosphere.

"Carbon dioxid is a gas considerably heavier than air; so much so, indeed, that it can be poured from one vessel to another almost like a liquid. But, like all other gases, it is expanded by heat; and, as the foul air coming from the lungs, and containing some five per cent. of carbon dioxid, is at practically the temperature of the body—i.e., 980 F.—it at once rises towards the ceiling while the products of combustion from the gas burner, being at a still higher temperature, also rush up to this point, so that the foul air is always to be found at the top of the room. One might think this foul air when cooled down would descend into the room again. But here comes into play the process of diffusion—a process by which gases, instead of arranging themselves, like other forms of matter, according to their weight, undergo a mingling or diffusion, the rate of which is dependent upon their weight—a light gas mixing rapidly with others, while a heavy one diffuses more slowly. It is found that once mingled, the gases remain in perfect admixture; so that in the present case the heavy carbon dioxid will not again separate from the air into which it has become diffused."

An interesting series of experiments is described by the author, who believes that they show conclusively that the air of the lower portion of a room, if one or two people only are present, is as pure with gas lighting as with electric lighting, while if a large number are present the advantages are enormously in favor of gas—the air with electric lighting becoming rapidly so impure as to be dangerous. He continues:

"If a number of people are in a room, the organic exhalations as well as the carbon dioxid and water vapor evolved during respiration rise, and, reaching the level of the gas burners, are rapidly swept up to the ceiling by the rush of hot gas from the burner—the flame and heat destroying and charring a large proportion of the germs. The hot air reaches the ceiling and diffuses through the plaster and walls in the upper part of the room, and in doing so the charred organic matter is left behind, filtered off on the surface of the plaster, and rapidly causes that discoloration of the ceiling which is invariably found in a town atmosphere above the burner, and which is often wanting with country air. That this is the case is amply verified by the fact that if beams are present at the back of the plaster, diffusion is prevented at these points and their position is plainly mapped out on the discolored surface.

"When the room with its occupants was lighted by electric light there was no rapid up-rush in this way of the products to the ceiling, and the organic impurities and carbon dioxid leaving at body temperature remained diffused throughout the whole of the atmosphere of the room, causing a far more rapid fouling of the air and injury to health. If such a room were entirely left for its ventilation to diffusion through the walls, it would soon acquire that sour smell which is noticeable in many rooms of the poor, in which, in order to keep in the warmth derived from their own bodies, all ventilation is cut off. This smell is due to the decomposition of organic matter, filtered off during the diffusion by the wall surface and undergoing putrefactive decay, giving the offensive odor, the only way to get rid of which is to strip the paper from the walls and lime-wash them as well as the ceiling. Then, and then only, does the smell pass away.

"When, however, this same diffusion through the ceiling and upper part of the walls of a room takes place in a gas-lighted room, this unpleasant human smell, so characteristic of the 'tube' railways, is never detected, as the small quantity of sulphur compounds present in the gas (as was shown in the researches by Mr. Otto Hehner and Dr. Rideal) is largely absorbed and fixed by the lime and lime salts present, and acts as a disinfectant, destroying all forms of germ life. Here, again, the hygienic superiority of gas is manifest, as in a gas-lighted room or hall not only are the germs present in the air and often of an infectious character, destroyed and burnt up by the flame itself, but also undergo destruction and disinfection from the trace of sulfur dioxid present in the products of combustion—an action which is entirely wanting when the illumination is due to incandescent electric light."

Immigration Rush Will Soon Start

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

Within three weeks the first of the year's immigration influx from the European countries to Western Canada will begin. Immigration officials at Halifax and Winnipeg are making preparations for the annual rush of thousands of settlers which will commence in a short time.

The steps which have been taken by those in charge of the work both in Canada and on this side of the line point to every indication that the immigration figures for the coming year will eclipse all past records. Those in charge of the immigration work at Halifax are making preparations for the handling of from four to five thousand per week after the rush begins, and on this basis, if this keeps up during the remaining months that European steamers are running to the port, the numbers will surpass those of the most successful year in the history of Canada's European immigration. About the first of March it is expected that the rush will begin from the British Isles. Then seven or eight boats will be docking each week which will mean an average of well over four thousand.

Many British.

The bulk of the European immigration during the past year was from the British Isles. The efforts of the officials in charge was chiefly directed towards securing settlers from England and Scotland, and as a result the percentage of British subjects bore a larger proportion to the total than it did in any previous year. Likewise the attention of the immigration authorities this year has been turned towards the matter of inducing as many as possible from the mother country to take up their residence in Western Canada. The reports from the steamship companies show that there are now as many passengers booked as ever before of those who will soon be on their way to Canada.

Anticipated Rush.

Other agencies report the anticipated rush to be greater than ever, once the winter breaks up and newcomers can arrive in the country without suffering the inconvenience of the winter weather. Last season the severity of the winter and the late spring placed immense difficulties in the way in the matter of the distribution of the immigrants and the forwarding of their effects to their respective points of destination in the west. The difficulties of the past season are not anticipated this spring, and in addition the railways are in far better condition to handle the traffic than they could attempt to do a year ago.

Applications are also beginning to pour into the immigration offices for farm help. At the immigration offices now there are about seventy-five jobs open, while at the immigration office of the Salvation Army double this number of enquiries have been received.

Calgary Suffers Too

The following letter appeared in the Calgary Herald last week, showing that Calgary objects to such frequent changing of teachers as Medicine Hat has had:

To the Editor of The Herald.

Sir,—The report is abroad and has been confirmed from the two sides directly concerned, that Mr. Smith, the principal of the high school, has resigned, as also has Mr. Sansom, of the Old Central. And it is but a short month since Mr. Smith of Victoria, quit his work.

Now, inasmuch as such numerous breaks in the staff—and there have been an unprecedented number within the past year, including Mr. Sinnott's and Mr. Parker's resignations—are very demoralizing to our schools, is it not time for us who have children at the schools to enquire the reason for the exit of so many of our teachers. It is especially deplorable that there are so many changes among the men teachers. There is only one man on the staff today of all those who were here a year ago. We should like to hear from the board or from the superintendent as to the reason for so many changes. It may be that the latter can be freed from the blame that rumor so persistently attaches to him in this connection. Yours truly,

CHAS. E. BROWN.

Calgary, Feb. 15, 1908.

And the answer was written by Mr. Sansom, who comes here as principal of our schools. Here it is:

To the Editor of The Daily News.

Sir,—I have read with considerable surprise the letters which appeared in The Daily News and the Daily Herald of February 17, with reference to the resignation of certain members of the Calgary school staff. Especially was I surprised at that part which had reference to Dr. Scott, the city superintendent of schools. The writer insinuated that a possible reason for so many changes in the staff has been a lack of harmony between the superintendent and the teachers.

As one of those who recently resigned I feel constrained to state that so far as I am concerned the insinuation is entirely without foundation. No relationship could be more cordial than that which has existed between Dr. Scott and myself during the time I have been on the Calgary staff.

As an indication of my appreciation of Dr. Scott's management, I might say that a short time ago I even refrained from applying for a high school principalship in this province, though I have reason to believe that my application would have been favorably considered. I have resigned now to accept an appointment in a city where I shall have charge of both high and public schools at a salary considerably larger than that which I now receive.

Further, as principal of one of the large schools of this city, I have necessarily come into close contact with a considerable number of our city teachers, and I feel safe in stating that Dr. Scott is held in the highest esteem by the present staff.

Of those resignations which have been sent in since last August, when I came to Calgary I have never understood that in any case they have been caused by the condition of affairs hinted at in the letter referred to.

Personally I am of opinion that Dr. Scott is the right man in the right place, and that the citizens of Calgary are fortunate in having as the head of their educational system a man of his executive ability and wide experience in educational matters.

JUST COUNTING.

A dentist in Rochester was visited by a native of Dutchess county to be treated for an ulcerated tooth.

"That's a bad tooth," said the man of the forceps, "and I should advise you to spare yourself pain by taking gas. It will only be 50 cents more." And the dentist showed his machine to the doubtful person from Dutchess county, explaining its workings, how he would fall asleep for a moment or two, and then awake with the tooth and pain gone. At last the patient consented and took out his wallet.

"Never mind paying now," said the dentist, patronizingly.

"I wasn't thinking of paying," responded the Dutchess county person. "But I thought that if I was going to sleep I'd like to count my money first."—Harper's Weekly.

Fake Advertising

Devices That Have Become a Nuisance in Many Cities.

On checking over the various small sums paid here and there for advertisements in programmes, year books, church, school and society announcements of different kinds the average Toronto business man finds that he has spent a sufficient sum to have paid for a year's contract for real advertising in a really good daily or weekly newspaper, where the actual returns are sure to be profitable.

Why does he do it?

For divers reasons.

He belongs to the church. He and his family attend regularly and contribute their full share to its maintenance. A concert is projected, programmes are required. The committee go out to get ads. enough to pay for printing and perhaps a little over. They check over the list of the business men of their congregation—and there he is. They call. It's only $2.50 a page. Time is valuable. "All right. Put me down for a page. Miss ——will write something to put in it." He knows he can't expect one cent of return, so copy is really a matter of no importance. How can he escape?

His lodge, his regiment, his favorite charity, all get after him in like manner. The "help along" argument is worked. The canvassers in many cases don't really try to prove that any benefit will ever come to him as a result of the expenditure—"help along a good cause."

In cities like Toronto this trafic has come to be so profitable that professional fakirs are making a business of getting out these programmes, often paying the committee in charge a considerable sum in addition to the cost of furnishing so many hundred programmes. In return the committee furnishes a list of names of members who are regarded as legitimate prey.

Forth goes the programme fiend; not to talk advertising. Oh, no! That's not his best card, and he knows it. But to get the "member" to "help along." There are tears in his voice as he presents the claims of the "good cause." They are trying to make the entertainment a great success. The committee asked him to call on Mr. Merchant to see "if he couldn't please aid them by paying $10 for the back page." (Dummy programme is here produced.)

And so he puts up the $10, feeling that, while he may not be doing a good stroke of business, he is at least assisting the finances of some worthy institution. In many cases not a dollar of his $10 ever reaches the treasury of that organization. The programme fiend gets it.

If a man ever allows his name to appear on one of these programme schemes he is sure to be hounded for all time by the others.

Their name is legion, theatre programmes, horse show programmes, Massey Hall concert programmes, pure food show programmes, poultry show programmes, exhibition programmes, dog show programmes, Woodbine racing programmes, baseball programmes, lacrosse programmes, sporting schedule and musical curriculum, and so on, ad. infinitum.

In many cities the leading business men have banded together and made an agreement to withhold their patronage from the many and varied advertising schemes to which they are called upon to contribute from time to time. There is not a city in the country where the business men would not profit by making the same sort of an agreement and be money in pocket at the end of the year. If the solicitors for the many schemes referred to were given a firm refusal it would only be a question of time before these fake advertising schemes disappeared entirely.

This is the cure: Turn all down promptly and firmly. Make no exceptions.—From the Canadian Grocer, May 10, 1907.

Why Some Towns are Failures.

A writer in Printer's Ink makes an interesting diagnosis of the reason why some towns are "slow." He says: "Anybody who has had experience travelling among the small cities and towns of this country knows that wide differences are seen between the places of the same population, and in much the same locality, and enjoying what would seem to be equal opportunities for trade. One place of 10,000 people, for instance, will be thoroughly alive, its shops bright, its people brisk, and prosperity apparently on every hand. Another, perhaps but 25 miles away, will be thoroughly dead, its stores deserted, dull, dusty, its people given to the habit of cracker box conversation. In one town it is a pleasure to step off a train and look for business, while in the second, an experienced traveling man has no sooner alighted than he wants to know the time of the next train out."

The diagnosis is ridiculously simple. In one, the newspapers encourage advertising, by charging a rate which includes setting up new ads. as often as the merchant cares to change. In the other, an antiquated rate system is in vogue, making a low charge for space and an extra charge for every change of advertisement. It's just worth while considering what good, live advertising by the merchants does for a town and its trade.—From the Canadian Grocer, August 28, 1907.

The clerk was most obliging but the young lady customer was hard to please. Roll after roll of blankets did he take from the shelves, none suited. For fifteen minutes this mock sale went on, then the young woman said, condescendingly, well I don't intend to buy. I was just looking for a friend. Wait a moment, madam, said the clerk, there is one more blanket on the shelf, perhaps you will find your friend in it.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Seven Persons

Quite a bunch of horses passed through here this week, going north.

Mr. W. G. Reed was here Wednesday. He was on his way to the Hat to pay a visit to the dentist chair. He returned Friday.

Frank Stephenson and C. F. Leonard also went to the Hat this week.

School Inspector J. W. Brown was in town Wednesday.

Mr. Weiss unfortunately fell from his horse Saturday breaking his leg and dislocating a finger. He was taken to the Hat for treatment.

Mr. George Murray's son drove into town today to meet his father whom he expects on the train.

Mr. Babbage of Cummings is here visiting his cousins, the Butler brothers.

The farmers around here are digging post-holes, building fences and getting ready for the spring work.

Mr. Iverson, Mrs. Nesting's father, who spent part of the winter in Oregon has returned to Seven Persons and expects to remain through the summer.

Irvine.

The Very Reverend Archdeacon Harding, from Indian Head, took both the morning and evening services in St. George's church on Sunday the 16th inst. After the evening service he was in conversation with the wardens and the parishioners and expressed his satisfaction for the way in which things had been conducted, and he trusted that they would continue so in the future. The wardens speaking to the Archdeacon, expressed their wish, on behalf of the parishioners, of obtaining a resident priest as soon as possible.

Dr. L. H. Dawson, of the Gros Ventre, was in town on Saturday.

It is understood that the Irvine Rifle Association will be re-organized at a very near future date. We would ask all persons that are interested in rifle shooting to give their name and their ideas to the Secretary, H. S. Newby, at his office as soon as possible, so as the Association can commence practise in the early spring.

M. Sackrider, the builder and contractor from Medicine Hat was in Irvine for the day on Thursday, and it seems as if large buildings will be under erection early in the spring.

Mr. Will McNeeley of the Medicine Hat Milling Co., was in Irvine for a couple of days last week. He reports that the price of wheat is still on the decrease, and that it is likely to take a sudden jump at any time.

Joe Mort returned from the west on Saturday morning's train. It will be remembered that he went up west at the end of last month, with the Reverend E. C. L. Hooper, leaving him at Vancouver. He went down into the States and took in the sights of the American western cities. He claims that things are all on a "buzz" there.

Sam Kalmbach took a flying trip up to Medicine Hat on Tuesday evening's train. Sam can make quick moves at times.

Bert Allen, who is with A. P. Burns of Medicine Hat was in Irvine on Saturday. He claims that Irvine is growing fast. It will be remembered that he was in Irvine for a few months in the summer of 1906.

The real estate firms in town could sell all sorts of land if they would only take the people's notes for same. Ready cash seems to be the only thing that talks these days.

R. H. Scott, of Calgary, the provincial manager of the Northern Life of Canada, spent the greater part of last week with his agents, Newby & Company. We had the opportunity of seeing this gentleman and he said that the company had a certain amount of money to loan on well improved farm land. This should be a great advantage to the farmers of this district.

Three families came up from the States last week, and all these people require a homestead and more or less a half a section of good farm land, which, without a doubt, our real estate men will be able to sell them.

Mine host at the Alberta hotel is rushing the Masonic hall for all it is worth. Is it possible that he has a bet on that he will finish it by the 17th of "Ireland."

AN OPEN LETTER.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL BUNCH.

To the School board:

We, the pupils of the high school, have heard with much regret and surprise the resolution you have made to have Mr. Stanson and Mr. Webb only, to teach us instead of three teachers. We do not believe you have paid proper attention to made to have Mr. Samson and Mr. sixth teacher we have had since September. Very few of us have hope of passing the summer examination now on account of the peculiarity of the board of looking at things always at a money standpoint. Whenever you do start anything beneficial to the public school or high school you only carry it half through, thus wasting the little thought you have put on it. We hear you are putting in a course of manual training for the public school which will be very expensive. If you cannot afford an extra teacher in the high school how can you afford that? For just $500 you would ruin the standard of the high school which we pupils worked so hard for last summer, Mr. Pentland helping us. If you had been willing to spend a little for this purpose you would in time have an exceedingly large high school, as young people from the rural districts would all be eager to come to a high school whose standard was high.

But now, our standard will be lowered and we and the school will be disgraced and the money already spent useless.

More than that, none of you, but Mr. Colter, had children in the high school. Very seldom did you ever visit the high school, and never in school hours. So what do you know about the high school, anyway, and what it needs? Indeed, one of you thinks so little of the school that he must needs send his children out of the city to a Catholic convent. We are all indignant at your huge mistake and can only say that you will find it out some time. Everyone will know who to blame for the low percentage next summer.

FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL BUNCH.

Death Of J. B. Lindsay

One of the best known and respected ranchers in the district passed away on Monday the 17th inst., at his home at Bull Head Lake, near Eagle Butte. Mr. Lindsay was a native of Nova Scotia, but spent many years in the west, coming up from Montana to this district about seven years ago. For a time he was in partnership with Mr. Shaw in the sheep-raising business, later branching out for himself at the ranch at Bull Head Lake.

Deceased had been suffering from pneumonia for some time and had been twice attended by Dr. Smythe. The immediate cause of death was heart failure.

The funeral service was held at the ranch on Thursday morning, by the Rev. Jas. W. Morrow, the funeral taking place on Friday morning at 10 o'clock. Mr. Lindsay's brother, who lives in the east, was wired for and came up to attend the funeral. At the cemetery a large number of ranchers paid their last respects to the departed. Many of these were present at the service on Thursday, staying in the city over night.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

[This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, news of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news put in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

Perhaps the most striking of recent tendencies in politics the world over is the ever-increasing attention given to legislation affecting the workers. In continental Europe, in England, in America—throughout the industrialized world, advanced programs of social reform are taking the foremost place. In Great Britain, in continental Europe, on the great American continent, even in the far off Orient, a great social awakening is taking place. The whole commercialized world seems to be entering on a new phase. The workers of the world are becoming conscious of their power, the parliaments of the world are beginning to turn their attention to legislation affecting the poor.

Notable at this time is the message of President Roosevelt to the Congress of the great republic to the south. In all other civilized countries reforms are being inaugurated by the conscious efforts of the people themselves. Personalities are of secondary importance. In the United States the work falls upon one man, and that one to all intents and purposes an autocrat—yet, an autocrat who represents the aspirations of the American people. A man of independent mind and audacious temperament, Roosevelt has launched forth on his last year of office with a program the principal features of which are its violent attack on the classes of criminal wealth, and its advocacy of measures to place in security the life and liberty of the great mass of American people.

The cast-iron American constitution has been the cause of an unconscionable amount of trouble to the would-be reformer. Eight-hour laws have been passed in some of the States—to be declared unconstitutional by the lawyers. The latest example of an important industrial reform "getting up against the constitution" is provided by the rejection of the Employers' Liability law by the Supreme court. Of this, the President says: "As regards the Employers' Liability law, I advocate its immediate re-enactment, limiting its scope only to the class of cases as to which the court says it can constitutionally apply, but strengthening its provisions within this scope." The President also advises that an act be passed providing for compensation to all employees injured in the government service. Of workmen's compensation in general he says: "This (that there is no law) is an outrage, it is a matter of humiliation to the nation that there should not be on our statute books provision to meet and partially to atone for cruel misfortune when it comes upon a man through no fault of his own while faithfully serving the public. In no other prominent industrial country could such gross injustice occur; for almost all civilized nations have enacted legislation which places the entire trade risk for industrial accidents, (excluding of course accidents due to misconduct by the employee), on the industry as represented by the employer."

On injunctions in labor cases, while he considers them necessary in some extreme instances "to check disorder and violence," the President urges that limitation of their scope and action be imposed.

Touching on the railroads, Roosevelt states his belief that "in some form the Federal government should exercise supervision over the financial operation of our inter-state railroads." He also thinks "that the Federal government must also assume a certain measure of control over the physical operation of railways in the handling of inter-state traffic."

The forms of stock gambling the results of which press so heavily on the shoulders of the wage earner, he declares unremitting war are upon. The federal government is advised to forbid the use of the mails, telegraph and telephone wires for mere gambling in stocks and futures, just as it does in lottery transactions.

The President goes on to justify his attacks upon the feudalism of privileged wealth. The forms of business which are injured by exposure are injured to the ultimate benefit of the country. His deliverance on this question is worth quoting at length.

"The special pleaders for business dishonesty.....also denounce it, (the administration) for endeavoring to secure sorely needed labor legislation, such as a far-reaching law making employers liable for their employees. It is meet and fit that the apologists for corrupt wealth should oppose every effort to relieve weak and helpless people from crushing misfortune brought upon them by injury in the business from which they gain a livelihood. The burden should be distributed. It is hypocritical baseness to speak of a girl who works in a factory where the dangerous machinery is unprotected as having the 'right freely' to contract to expose herself to dangers to life and limb. She has no alternative but to suffer want or expose herself to such dangers, and when she loses a hand or is otherwise maimed or disfigured for life, it is a moral wrong that the whole burden of the risk.....should be placed upon her weak shoulders, and all who profit by her work escape scot-free. This is what the opponents of a just liability law advocate, and it is consistent that they should usually also advocate immunity for those most dangerous members of the criminal class—the criminals of great wealth."

An employee's compensation bill and a miners' eight-hour bill are before the House at Edmonton. It is "up to" the labor men of the province to see that these measures are passed in a satisfactory form. We have no rigid constitution of the States type, and an opportunity occurs this year to get placed on the statute book measures, clear and unmistakable in meaning, which shall save Alberta from the ill-effects produced by industrial oppression in the older countries.

The Spectacle.

The male society writer never gets a chance. Every society write-up you ever saw confined itself to the you ever saw confined itself to the gowns. I haven't studied under Lady Gay or Peggy, but I'm going to try my hand at a description of the Baby Bachelors' Ball from a man's standpoint, and with the same care of the men's dress as the female society specialist devotes to female attire in her writings.

I'm not just sure what kind of a production it will be, but any slight deflections from the orthodox can be laid to the fact that instead of writing this with a gold pen, on a mahogany table in a pink and white boudoir, with a batch of notes at my side and nothing to do but write, I am using a two-for-five pencil, on a $3 table, in a dirty office, with my coat off, my feet on a chair and a cheap cigar a traveller gave me sticking out of my mouth. I suppose if I took my feet down I could write better, but, by the way, I like to keep my feet up my wits must be there, and I have to handle myself like a fountain pen (ink up) to get my thoughts to flow. It might make a difference if I left my mouth free to chew the end of my pencil, but it (the latter) has a brass end, and dulls my teeth.

Well!

All was gay as a marriage bell (I rather like the sound of that, there's something original about it). The general effect of the Japanese parasols, that made you feel like turning your coat collar up when you went under them, in order to keep the rain off your collar—the general effect I say, of the parasols, the colored cloth, the lounges, the grub, Leonard's rag-time, the beautiful dressing rooms, was heightened by the handsome costumes of the men, their bright vivacity, (that's a good touch) their sparkling eyes, wits and words, and their chivalrous attention to the needs of the ladies.

Among those present were Mr. Gordon, in a dove of a suit of some dark colors, which he wore well; Mr. Ireland, in black, with expansive white shirt front and pearl stud; Mr. Johnson, in a coat with divided train and black trousers; Mr. Smart, in black dancing pumps, inside which I suppose, were socks of the same color; Mr. Beveridge, in beautiful white tie and shirt, making a striking contrast with a black suit; Mr. Sharp, wearing coat with silk lapels, and neatly gloved hand in which lay another; Mr. Grant, with white bodice and vestiet, and black bolero (?) with skirts attached to it; Mr. Dunham wore a high white collar, which suited his style of beauty; Mr. Turpin, with patent leather Walk-Over shoes (this ad. not paid for) and 20th Century suit (nor this one either); Mr. Cousins, with beautiful white silk handkerchief and carefully cut hair; Mr. Termill in a lovely combination of black and white, with black goatee; Mr. Everard, in linen shirt front and laundered collar; Mr. Benwell, in unfinished worsted suit with black buttons; Mr. Wright, with long trousers and coat skirts and carrying a Waltham watch (bill will be sent out later); Mr. Forster, with collar and tie in white, the latter around the former at the bottom; Mr. Strong, wearing a smile and other things; Mr. Hansuld, daintily gowned in black and white; Mr. Honibal, in a fascinating Parisian costume; Dr. Boyd, with his blond beauty enhanced by his black suit; Mr. James, stunningly dressed, as usual; Dr. Smyth, looking very smart in an imported gown; Mr. Bassett, looking very spirituelle in white with touches of black; Mr. Will Finlay, becomingly garbed; Mr. Stewart, in close-fitting tuxedo with white yoke; Mr. Carbert, looking most dignified and correct in conventional costume; Mr. Dean, his fluffy hair becomingly arranged, made a queenly figure; the Taylor twins were the centre of attraction, as usual; Mr. Tweed, in black and white, with pearl ornaments; Dr. Ross, looking radiant, as always; Mr. Malcolm, in a simple costume of sombre hue; Mr. Keobane, radiant in white with touches of black; Mr. Legh, Mr. Day, Mr. Oakes, Mr. Allen and several charmingly dressed in perfect good others were charmingly dressed in perfect good taste.

THE SPECTATOR.

The difference in complexions is due, more often than you would imagine, to the difference in soaps.

To prove it, just change to Witch Hazel Toilet Soap, and before one cake is used you'll notice an improvement—a fresher, clearer tone and a softer, more velvety texture to the skin.

The pure vegetable oils, from which this soap is made, cleanse and open up the pores, which, in turn, absorb the witch hazel, and the skin benefits by the refreshing, healing, softening, tonic properties of this marvellous skin beautifier.

The Lethbridge Herald calls Lethbridge "Alberta's third city." They left out only one word—i. should read "third-rate city."

The Calgary Herald heads the results of the provincial seed fair, "Calgary District is King." As a matter of fact there were not more than three prizes of any kind within 75 miles of Calgary, and nine-tenths of them were captured by farmers 100 miles or more away. Of course, Hogtown papers claim everything good within 200 miles, but it is stretching it a little far even for them to claim the prizes at the Seed Fair. First thing Calgary papers know, "Calgary district" will be getting credit for the fierce snow storms down around Toronto.

Mounted Police Notes.

A. J. Brower was arrested on Monday on a charge of unlawfully selling poison to the half-breeds. Corporal Humby prosecuted and prisoner was defended by W. A. Begg. At request of defence the case was adjourned till last night.

Complaint having been made by Mrs. Hoover of the loss of $25, the case came before Inspector Parker and Mr. Borradaile on Friday. Corporal Humby assisted in the prosecution and J. J. Mahaffey appeared for the defendant, who was honorably acquitted.

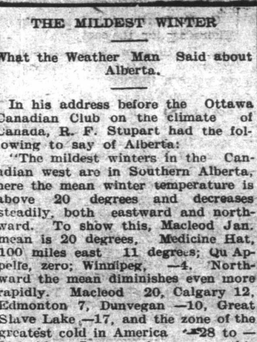
The court sat two hours yesterday morning when Brower was tried before Inspector Parker, Corporal Humby prosecuting for the Crown and W. A. Begg appearing on behalf of the defendant. Two additional witnesses were brought forward by the prosecuton, and defendant was then placed on the stand to speak in his own behalf. There was a little wordy warfare between the defence and the prosecution, into which the magistrate was drawn. Mr. Begg contended that no proof had been brought forward that the powder sold was strychnine while the Inspector thought ample proof had been given. The defendant was fined $25 and costs.

WHITE WEEK FOR POLICE COURT.

There have been no cases for the city police during the past week.

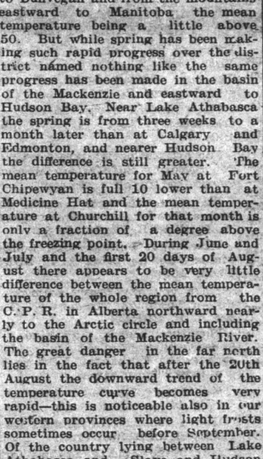
MORE GALL.

Lethbridge Herald:—"The Calgary Herald wants to grab all again. Its heading over the prize winnings at the provincial Seed Fair read, "Calgary District is King." What are the boundaries of the Calgary district? Peace River on the north and the boundary on the south presumably. As a matter of fact all the prizes of importance were awarded to a district within a fifty mile radius of Lethbridge. Put that in your pipe, Mr. Calgary Herald, and smoke it!"



Lethbridge's claim is about as far off the mark as Calgary's. How about the eleven prizes that went to Medicine Hat, including 3 of the first 4 in spring wheat—the most important grain of all?

THE MILDEST WINTER



What the Weather Man Said about Alberta.

In his address before the Ottawa Canadian Club on the climate of Canada, R. F. Stupart had the following to say of Alberta:

"The mildest winters in the Canadian west are in Southern Alberta, here the mean winter temperature is above 20 degrees and decreases steadily, both eastward and northward. To show this, Macleod Jan. mean is 20 degrees, Medicine Hat, 100 miles east 11 degrees; Qu Appelle, zero; Winnipeg, —4. Northward the mean diminishes even more rapidly. Macleod 20, Calgary 12, Edmonton 7, Dunvegan —10, Great Slave Lake —17, and the zone of the greatest cold in America —28 to —30. After January, however, this contrast between north and south and west and east gradually becomes less pronounced until May there is comparative uniformity northward to Dunvegan and from the mountains eastward to Manitoba the mean temperature being a little above 50. But while spring has been making such rapid progress over the district named nothing like the same progress has been made in the basin of the Mackenzie and eastward to Hudson Bay. Near Lake Athabasca the spring is from three weeks to a month later than at Calgary and Edmonton, and nearer Hudson Bay the difference is still greater. The mean temperature for May at Fort Chipewyan is full 10 lower than at Medicine Hat and the mean temperature at Churchill for that month is only a fraction of a degree above the freezing point. During June and July and the first 20 days of August there appears to be very little difference between the mean temperature of the whole region from the C. P. R. in Alberta northward nearly to the Arctic circle and including the basin of the Mackenzie River. The great danger in the far north lies in the fact that after the 20th August the downward trend of the temperature curve becomes very rapid—this is noticeable also in our western provinces where light frosts sometimes occur before September. Of the country lying between Lake Athabasca and Slave and Hudson Bay I cannot speak with any great certainty but I am very dubious as to whether it can be ever used for agricultural purposes. At Fort Churchill the mean temperature of June is no higher than that of Macleod for April and the mean for July is not as high by several degrees as in the Mackenzie River at the Arctic circle.

Hoax—"Lots of sympathy in this world is just wasted."
Joax—"Yes! Now the hen realizes that it is impossible to reform a bad egg."

Bronson—"Has Rounder made any advances towards a reconciliation with his gay young wife?"
Woodson—"Yes, I think he has made an advance of several thousand dollars."

Newpop—"Some people say he's the image of me."
Visitor—"I wouldn't get sore about it. I wouldn't pay attention to them."

How to Boost the Town's Growth.

(Mail and Empire.)

No doubt there are hundreds of small cities and towns in Canada that want to grow a little faster than if there were no thought taken of their stature for a town is not like a man, in that it can help or retard its growth by considering the matter. To such towns a series of lectures delivered to the prominent business men of Marshall, Mich., by E. S. Batterson should be helpful. Mr. Batterson is president of the Chicago Municipal Service League and has given much attention to the question of municipal expansion.

FIRST CAUSES.

Getting down to the first causes, two factors are necessary for the growth of a town, or for that matter a city, apart from the natural increase of the people who comprise it. The first essential is that it shall have attractions, and by attractions is meant both opportunities for a newcomer to earn good livelihood, and surroundings in which he can enjoy himself after the day's work. Industries, the town must have to begin with, and then it must have places of entertainment, schools were children can be well educated, churches, recreation grounds, sodial life and a good climate. Unless the town has these to begin with it would be wise to acquire what is lacking before it starts the real campaign for more industries and more citizens. The fact that a town has a good theatre is enough, other things being equal, to attract a thousand families from another town that has no theatre.

HAVING THE "GOODS."

The analogy between the town and the individual merchant is fairly close. The merchant must have a stock of goods that people want to buy, and the town must be the sort of place that people want to live in. But many a merchant who has had the goods to sell has failed to draw customers, and the trouble with most towns whose growth is slow is that they have the attractions necessary for stimulating immigration, but no one knows them. They are mere names on the map. They have never been heard of by the outside public except when they have a big fire or a murder or some other kind of a disaster. They are in the same class with the merchant whose name gets in the papers only when his wife has a son, or when someone sues him, or when he has an employe arrested.

GET PUBLICITY.

The town, like the merchant, must advertise if it wants to draw people. If it has the attractions in the first place, advertising will bring people to investigate, and if there are no false pretences, an enquirer becomes a citizen. That is the whole question in a nut-shell. It resolves itself into an advertising problem. On this point Mr. Batterson says: "One of the first things necessary to "town publicity" is that you believe in your town. Believe that it is going to advance. You should get to work to make the town, and you should absolutely believe in your town. Be enthusiastic about it. This matter of publicity is important. Live to boost your town. The greatest factor in the publicity of your town is the local press. No matter if it has published something about you that you do not like. Large business firms use and receive thousands of clippings each day, and information from small towns is regarded as valuable. You should make your advertising as interesting as possible. Have it read so that it will be news. How is the commercial club of a town going to benefit from a newspaper? Nothing is more read than the industrial news of the town Have a continued activity in your business men's organization."

BE CHEERFUL ALWAYS.

The big papers in the state or provincial capital can also help the town's growth by publishing real, live news of the smaller place. It devolves on the authorities to see that someone collects the news and sends it in while it is news. By this process the town gets publicity that is more valuable than frank advertising It gets what the merchants calls a "reading notice," and instead of paying double rates it gets it for nothing. Good hotel accommodation is also necessary and the lecturer cited the case of a hotelkeeper who cheerfully loses $3,000 every year on his hotel by making it so attractive that it draws visitors, and helps to make them citizens. Commercial travelers should have nothing but cheerful tidings, or they are apt to carry "hard luck," stories to the next town, which is probably a rival.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS.

Every effort should be made to beautify the district surrounding the railroad station. First impressions are usually lasting. A market day is a good thing for a small town, and so, the expert thinks, is a bargain day. Although on the second point there is a difference of opinion. It is plain, from the foregoing, that if a town is to "boom" there must be unity of purpose among its citizens. One also gets the idea that another generation will see a press agent elected every year, like a reeve or town clerk.

HILL ROAD COMING

FURTHER REPORTS FROM WINNIPEG

INTERESTING NEWS FOR THIS CITY

That the Hill railway was going to reach Medicine Hat has been known for a long time. For some years plans have been out and had it not been for some financial depression Medicine Hat would now have this line.

Last fall the Great Northern secured a charter in the Saskatchewan House for continuing their line from Brandon west. The rivalry of the C.P.R. has been keenly felt, and now the Great Northern is planning to get back at that railway by paralelling the main line of the C.P.R. with Medicine Hat as the headquarters of the new line.

It has been known that Hill holds a great quantity of land through this district.

The following despatch from Winnipeg has been received:

J. J. Hill has spread hundreds of engineers along the stretch of country fourteen hundred miles from Brandon to Calgary, and is said to be preparing to parallel the C. P.R. throughout that distance.

Two years ago Hill made elaborate preparations for this scheme, but withdrew the force because of the depression. He owns large sections of land in the three provinces which he has owned for fokr years. His headquarters are said to be established at Medicine Hat, where lines radiate far north to Edmonton.

The School Board

Miss Rae Resigns—Financing Discussed

A special meeting of the school board was held at seven o'clock Friday evening. Present: The chairman, W. J. Brotherton; trustees Niblock, Colter, Milne, Kennedy.

The resignation of Mary Rae was read and accepted. Mr. Brotherton said he supposed that would mean that Mr. Ware might take Miss Rae's place. The secretary said he understood from Mr. Hay that such would be the case.

The secretary stated that the Credit Foncier to whom the debentures here sold had insisted upon the board paying for the legal advice in connection with the taking over of the bonds. He had replied that such was not the usual practice, but they maintained that it was usual with them. To save the cost of going over the whole matter again he had paid the amount, $10. He further stated that the Aemilius Jarvis Co. paid the fees in connection with the city bonds sold to the Credit Foncier, and the latter claim that they never pay these legal expenses on any deals. The action of the secretary was ratified.

The question of the bank arrangements for the year was next raised. Mr. Niblock wanted to know what the present bank conditions were, if the whole year had been arranged for. Mr. Brotherton stated that by letter the bank had said they would not carry the board through the whole year, but by word of mouth they had expressed their willingness. James' letter, Mr. Milne thought, to do so. The statement made in Mr. was that the bank would not guarantee to carry the board more than 3 months unless the bonds were sold. Mr. Niblock thought the refusal of the bank to guarantee funds for more than three months was most unreasonable.

Mr. Kennedy thought that if the debentures were worth 100 a year ago, there was a likelihood of their coming to that again, if the board could meanwhile make some makeshift to tide over immediate requirements. Mr. Brotherton said that a few dollars might be spent meanwhile to fix up the roof at the Montreal street school.

Mr. Milne brought up the question of Mr. Hay's salary. Mr. Hay had asked for an increase to $1200. Mr. Niblock: "I suppose its coming to him." Mr. Milne said that no increase had been given Mr. Hay since he started. Mr. Brotherton said there was no question of raising the schedule, which remained as before, but Mr. Hay was entitled to the increase, as he was to take charge of the public schools. In answer to Mr. Milne, the chairman said that Mr. Hay would work under the supervision of the principal. It was agreed that Mr. Hay's salary from Jan. 1, 1908, should be $1200.

The blackboard in Miss Simpson's room at the Montreal street school, was said to be in bad shape. It was cracked in several places and also was very difficult to read on account of the reflection from the side light. Mr. Hay had suggested that green shades which might be raised or lowered be tried on the windows. It was stated that the board in question was in such a state that Mr. Plumbley who had fixed up the other boards had been unable to do anything with it. Mr. Kennedy thought if such were the case it would be advisable to put in slate. This could not be obtained within less than a month or six weeks. Mr. Colter was requested to look after the matter.

It was understood that Mr. Sansom, the new principal, was to have been present at the meeting, but he did not appear. Mr. Milne said that Mr. Sansom had expressed himself as very pleased with the Montreal street school, which he considered a very fine building, better than he had seen in Calgary.

Mr. Niblock thought that had the building not been botched, it would have been a school to be proud of in every way.

Canadian Brick Plant Burned

Unknown Cause Burns Up $5000—Will Rebuild Immediately

The whole of the plant of the Canadian Brick Company was destroyed by fire on Friday last after a blaze of about twenty minutes duration. The men left the brickyards at twelve with everything apparently in good shape. A few minutes later the building was in flames and blazed fiercely till everything was destroyed.

The work on the second kiln had just been started, the first brick having been turned out early in the week. Most of the employees were in the city at the time as witnesses in the Hinckman vs. Hoffman case.

The company will rebuild immediately. The loss on the old plant is $5,000 with $3,000 insurance.

The first kiln of brick made by this company was opened a week ago Monday and the brick was excellent.

Around the Station

On Friday O. Ludwig of the C.P.R. machinists, left the city on three months' leave of absence, which he will put in on his homestead. Other machinists are taking advantage of the slackness in the shops to get away for a short holiday. J. Snowdon left on Friday for a couple of weeks at Cranbrook. H. Hanna and L. McFarlane go together to Edmonton for a short trip.

The freight engines and crews on the Lethbridge section are now stationed at Coleridge, the new arrangement having come into force on Saturday. This does not apply to mixed freight.

There are signs of an early revival of freight traffic. During the past week the amount of freight handled has greatly increased and with the advent of new settlers with implements and stock there will be a still larger increase in freight traffic. On Friday No. 97 came in three sections and in all there were seven trains.

A. Hobkirk has been appointed district master mechanic at Cranbrook. J. A. Kennedy of Macleod takes his place as trainmaster and is now located with his staff in Medicine Hat. The change came into effect on the 23rd ult.

C. P. R. OFFICIALS IN THE CITY

G. J. Bury, western general manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and general superintendent Price spent Thursday in the city on a tour of inspection.

While in the city Mr. Bury gave orders to cap the C.P.R. well at Dunmore Junction, which has been burning for months. Mr. Bury, in conversation with Mayor Cousins expressed the opinion that Medicine Hat should not allow its gas lights to burn all day long. "You will not get many to stop here as long as you appear so wasteful," he said, "people will think you are too extravagant to make a good city."

The Y.M.C.A. will hold an opening banquet on the evening of March 12. Tickets can be secured for $1 from S. McClellan. The number will be limited to about 75.

A large door has been cut through from the opera house into the Green Block, according to the fire chief's recommendation. This provides ample escape in case of fire.

J. R. Allen is on a trip to British Columbia.

Mrs. W. P. Morrison returned on Thursday accompanied by her brother who has been so ill but is now recovering rapidly.

C. R. Mitchell returned from the east on Friday.

Does It Pay?

Two weeks ago a Medicine Hat merchant advertised a certain article in The Times, as a special Saturday inducement. On the day of the sale he sold 89 of the thing advertised and all for spot cash. His name can be secured at The Times office.

Is it any wonder advertisers believe in the "results" talk of The Times.

Western Canneries

F. H. MALCOLM RESIGNS AS MANAGING DIRECTOR

A meeting of the shareholders of the Western Canneries was held at Maple Creek last Tuesday afternoon. While not many shareholders were present, about three-quarters of them were represented. The financial statement showed that there was $18,000 in the banks after the present plant had been installed.

F. H. Malcolm retired as managing director. The head office was moved from Winnipeg to this city, and the following directorate was elected: F. G. Forster, managing director, C. R. Mitchell, W. J. McLean, S. T. Hiller and A. Shaw, all of Medicine Hat; Colin Dixon and Arthur Burnett, of Maple Creek; C. A. Flower, Winnipeg; C. P. Palmer, Birtle.

The directors then came to Medicine Hat to inspect the plant.

It is estimated that about $150,000 additional capital is needed to put things on the best basis, and the directors think they will have no trouble in securing this.

In answer to a question in the Dominion House Hon. Mr. Oliver said that his department had received complaints that the timber on the Cypress Hills was being rapidly used up and action was promised to preserve the timber for the settlers.

FIRE CHIEF RECOMMENDS PROTECTION AT OPERA HOUSE—COMMITEE ON ENGINEER'S PAYMENTS BRINGS IN REPORT

The regular meeting of the council was held last night at eight o'clock. Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Huckvale.

A letter was read from an English firm offering for sale a number of motor busses built for the use of a Birkenhead (England) company, who had been put out of business by an injunction obtained against them by the municipality who owned a street railway system. The busses were stated to to be new and of the most up-to-date type and to be obtained at a very low figure. Filed.

The secretary of the Hospital board wrote thanking the council for the use of the council chamber on the 10th ult., and notifying them that they were to elect one of their number to sit on the board of directors. Ald. Huckvale was appointed to take the position.

J. T. Hall wrote accepting the assessorship, the matter having been considered by the council of the board of trade on the 26th ult. The question would come up at the annual meeting of the board on the 10 inst. Meanwhile he was prepared to take the oath of office, as he understood the majority of the board were in favor of his accepting the position. It was explained that Mr. Hall would not receive the money himself, but it would go into the treasury of the board of trade.

The secretary-treasurer of the fire department wrote asking permission to have the three drivers placed on the accident insurance policy of the department. A letter from the Ontario Accident Insurance company stated that an extra $4 per man was required for men placed on the salaried staff. The charge for volunteers was $4, for salaried men $8. A total increase of $12 on the three would be necessary. Ald. Huckvale thought the figure was rather high. Ald. Baker said that, apparently, should any fireman be injured in the course of his duty before an arrangement was reached with the company, no compense could be obtained. The Mayor thought the city would be liable under the new Workmen's Compensation law. The solicitor stated that this was not in force as yet. He did not know how far it went in regard to such cases. Referred to fire, water and light committee.

The fire chief wrote asking that a wooden stairway be placed in the hose tower, that a fire alarm box be put up on the corner of Main street and the East Road Allowance, near the Canneries and another acquired as a reserve. The cost was stated to be $74 each. The cost of the hose tower stairway would be about $60. A request was further made for the installation of lockers on the main floor for the use of the firebys. Referred to fire, water and light committee for a report.

The Merchants Bank wrote asking for an option on the debentures on behalf of the Aemilius Jarvis Co., and The Geo. Stimson Co. Aemilius Jarvis & Co., thought 91 and interest to city a reasonable offer; Geo. Stimson asked for an option for a week or ten days. Handed to finance committee.

The Winnipeg Safe Works wrote re their representative, Mr. Morris, who had been asked to pay a traveler's license. The letter stated that Mr. Morris sold only safes and cash registers, that he had been given the choice of locating in Medicine Hat, Calgary or Macleod; that he had lived in the city two years; was a householder and his family were living here. He had never been asked to pay a license before. This firm were anticipating building a safe works here, but if he had to pay the license it would be necessary for him to move from the city. The by-law compelling commercial travelers to pay a license the firm considered vicious in principle; moreover their solicitor did not think it applied to Mr. Morris' case. The Mayor said that other sellers of safes in the city were paying license. The by-law was intended to protect the merchants and Ald. Huckvale thought it would be inadvisable to make fish of one and flesh of another. Mr. Morris was present and in a few words defined his position. In answer to a question he stated that he was a ratepayer. Ald. Forster thought the tax might be remitted, after it had been paid. The solicitor said that the council might do as Ald. Forster suggested, they could not override the by-law. Mr. Morris was informed that the license would have to be collected and the council would take up the question of refunding afterwards.

The solicitor wrote advising the city to defend any action which might be brought in reference to Mr. Fewing's claim. D. G. White to be instructed that the city was not responsible for any damages.

Ald. Spencer read the report of the special committee appointed to go into the matter of fees received by the police for arrests, etc. This recommended that all fees be turned into the city treasury; and that an increase of salary be given to the police tooffset their loss. The Mayor thought, as they had no claim on the fees, there seemed no reason for increasing the salaries. It was generally supposed that they had been getting paid for their full time. Ald. Spencer said that these fees were never asked for and in other towns the police received them. After some discussion it was decided to increase the chief's salary by $100 a year and the others by $60 a year, and that they should receive witness fees.

The report of the medical officer of health showed that there was one case of infectious disease (scarlet fever) and two or three of tuberculosis in the city. It stated that an immigration hall was badly needed, as the state of the waiting room when used by immigrants of low class for sleeping became danberous to the health of the public. On Ald. Spencer's motion it was decided to write the immigration department calling their attention to the necessity of an immigration hall being provided.

The letter from auditor Krauss, which was laid on the table at the last meeting, was referred to the finance committee.

Ald. Baker introduced a by-law to raise a special water rate on all property past which mains were laid; and a by-law to amend the building by-laws. The former was read first and second time, and considered in committee. The committee rose and reported progress.

Inreference to the proposed building by-law the solicitor stated that this, if passed, would not empower the city to compel the proprietors of the opera house to make the changes desired. It would only apply to new buildings. He suggested that a by-law licensing opera houses be introduced. The license could then be refused unless the regulations were complied with. At present there was no licensing by-law for places of amusement. He had such a by-law prepared and would suggest that it be given two readings and referred to a special committee. This course was followed in the case of all three by-laws.

Ald. Huckvale then brought up the question of holding a civic meeting to discuss the money by-laws to be voted on on the 16th inst. This it was decided to hold on Monday next.

The Mayor stated that the Union of Municipalities had asked for a postponement of the convention for one year. Calgary, Lethbridge and other places were to assist in their entertainment, and these desired a postponement—Calgary because the Dominion Fair would be held there this summer. Mr. Hall had written to draw their attention to the fact that the decision to hold the conference here this year was arrived at at the annual meeting.

COUNCIL MEETING FEB. 25.

Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Tweed, Huckvale.

The Mayor read the auditor's report. This stated that the system now in force is incomplete and entails an unnecessary amount of work. At the time it was introduced it no doubt served its purpose but was inadequate for the increased volume of business. The report also recommended the purchase of a proper system of filing cabinets. An increase of the bonding of the city clerk and treasurer to $2,000 and $10,000 respectively. In conclusion the report stated: "The city office work does not receive the attention it should; this is principally caused by the lack of sufficient clerical assistance, but the fault is also occasioned by the fact of work other than that of the city being attened to in these offices."

A letter from V. C. James of the Merchants Bank stated that he had received a telegram from Aemilius Jarvis & Co., as follows:

"If given two weeks option feel can place at 91 and interest net to town."

Mr. James had also received request for option from W. A. Mackenzie & Co., a Toronto firm which he did not know. Mr. Mackenzie was formerly in the employ of the Aemilius Jarvis Co. The Mayor stated that he had just received a further message by telephone from Mr. James relating to another offer for debentures. Woods, Gundy Co. wired offering 91, less ¼ per cent. commission for the $40,000 debentures, subject to immediate acceptance by the city. Ald. Spencer moved that the information asked for should be supplied the Credit Foncier and that they be notified that the city was not in a position to give options. Ald. Baker thought the whole matter should be referred to the finance committee, and made a motion to that effect. Ald. Huckvale thought this was rather a big order for the finance committee to deal with. Ald. Baker said he merely referred to the statement requested by the Credit Foncier. Ald. Spencer did not see any reason for referring to finance committee since all options had been turned down. Finally, on Ald. McKay's motion, the clerk was instructed to wire the Credit Foncier that no option could be given, and to supply the information asked for. The Mackenzie and Aemilius Jarvis companies to be notified that no option could be given. The woods, Gundy Co. to be notified by wire that the city would not accept 90¼ for the bonds.

The fire chief recommended regarding the opera house that another exit be made into the Green Block; that a stand-pipe and hose be placed in the building, and two firemen could attend each performance that hotels, schools, halls and clubs have stand-pipes and hose.

River Breaking Up

Mack Higdon Loses a Load of Limestone

There was a little mishap up the river a short distance above the island last Tuesday, fortunately ending in nothing more serious than the loss of a load of limestone.

For several days Reg. Bray had been hauling limestone to the yards of the Red Cliff Brick Co., in fulfillment of a contract made by Mack Higdon with that firm. The warm weather which was prevalent about that time had begun to take effect and as Mr. Bray was crossing a weak spot near the bank the ice gave way and wagon and team were precipitated into the water, the load being tipped up and lost. After considerable trouble the team and wagon were extricated and for the rest of the week hauling was abandoned.

Last week the river had begun to break up in earnest no higher up than Crockford's mine. Since the cold snap it has become frozen over again.

ATHLETICS

Baseball.

THE FANS WILL NOW BE HAPPY.

(Edmonton Journal.)

Edmonton, Feb. 26.—Edmonton is to have baseball this year. This was settled finally and emphatically at the annual meeting of the shareholders held in the Liberal clubrooms last evening. Officers were elected and F. J. Fields was appointed a delegate to go to Calgary and talk with Bruce Robinson, president of the league, about ball for 1908.

(Sporting News.)

LOWELL, MASS., Feb. 24.—The Canadian Northwestern league, with its associated towns, is a long jump from this New England city, and yet Lowell was a prime factor in the construction of that far-away league, particularly concerning the Calgary club.

A team for the Calgary club was recruited from Lowell. A Lowell player, who was the only one left at the close of the season, opened up in the first game. Two managers were engaged from Lowell, and it was Lowell where Mr. Kirby, the Calgary club's agent, made his final headquarters. The writer was concerned in the matter as a disinterested party and I am moved to make comment on an article published in the Sporting News from a Calgary correspondent.

This article announced the failure of the Northwestern League, upon which text a baseball sermon might be rendered. Facts known to the writer would suggest, failure is largely due to avarice and reckless extravagance, engendered by inexperience, in that far Northwest. About this time one year back, Mr. Fidler, of the Calgary club, addressed your correspondent regarding its affairs, explaining its team was being recruited from New England players, and seeking information. I was more than pleased to render Mr. Fidler every assistance in my power, and assured Mr. Fidler that I would extend a hearty welcome to Mr. Kirby, soon due in Lowell, Mass., as a servant of the Calgary board of trade, and incidentally a representative of the Calgary baseball association.

I also enclosed a letter of introduction to Mr. Jacob B. Morse, secretary of the New England league, requesting Mr. Kirby to present this to Mr. Morse, feeling sure that he would do all in his power for the gentleman from Calgary. Mr. Kirby assured me that he met with a very cordial reception in Boston.

Finding his club affairs not exactly to his liking he came on to Lowell, where he met your correspondent at the Highland club, explaining that he found the Calgary team as organized wholly incapable of sustaining a reputation in the new league, and that he had arrived in Lowell a thoroughly discouraged man.

Some of the younger element embraced in the Highland club membership at once "got busy." Messengers were at once sent out and at 11.30 Billy Merritt was rounded up and hustled to the clubhouse to meet Mr. Kirby.

Incidentally, I might mention that Mr. Kirby while awaiting the messenger's return, had so extolled the business opportunities and natural advantages of Calgary, Alberta, that there bid fair to be an extensive exodus to that quarter of the globe.

In one hour from the time Mr. Merritt had arrived he had contracted to manage and organize a new team for Calgary, and the great responsibility which had burdened him for days had been lifted from Mr. Kirby. All day Sunday Merritt kept hot both telephone and telegraph wires. He cancelled all games arranged between Lowell and the Northwest, and when he arrived at his first scheduled league town, he had a very respectable lot of representatives of New England. They lost their first game, it being the first time they had played as a team.

Lowell had supplied at a moment's notice one of the best known baseball men in the business. In ten days' time he had gotten together players and presented a team in the far Northwest on scheduled time. Mr. Kirby felt pretty good until he reached home, to find his efforts undervalued by unappreciative or jealous club officials, his good standing in the community even threatened with impeachment. Mr. Kirby then promptly resigned all club connection and it was then that Mr. Merritt foresaw trouble. It came, but not until he had begun to get the team in the running. First the club endeavored to repudiate the agreement made in my presence when the contract was consummated between Mr. Merritt and Mr. Kirby. I had a letter from Mr. Fidler stating that Mr. Kirby was their authorized agent and so informed Merritt. The salary was a stumbling block. The club directors went over Merritt's head and at a large outlay of money Mr. Fidler went to Chicago for players. He sent from there four players, among them a catcher, pitcher and second baseman.

Before these men (who had lasted but a short time) had been on a ball field Calgary had released Merritt, a pitcher, catcher, shortstop and second baseman. Merritt's last week with the team presented a record most any club official would consider going some. He won the first game 3 to 1, lost one by a narrow margin and tied the third 5 to 5 at Medicine Hat. Then going to Lethbridge he won two and lost one, all by close scores. Then came his release and refusal to live up to the terms of his contract with Mr. Kirby, which embraced transportation both ways. Merritt received his full remuneration, however, and returned to Lowell, finishing the season as a New England umpire—and a good one he made.

Merritt has a good word for Calgary people and the country. He feels that had he been unmolested in his management he would have got'em his boys going good, would have land his team well up in the standing and won out financially.

That the reverse has eventuated your Calgary correspondent has explained. His people lost the goldim baseball opportunity by letting go one of the most competent baseball men of the present day.

Billy Merritt knows more players, can get them together and secure co-operation from baseball managers and men interested in the game than any available player-manager that I know.

Merritt will again umpire New England games, unless he is promoted to a higher class, which is more than possible.

To my Calgary friends I send greeting and much regret that they did not hold fast to managerial talent, to my mind the best they will ever have in the Northwest.

CALGARY IS IN THE FIELD.

Calgary, Alta., Feb. 28.—An enthusiastic meeting of the Calgary Baseball Club was held yesterday in the Alberta club rooms. The question of the financial state of the club was first taken up and thoroughly discussed with the result that in five minutes time those present subscribed over $1,100, which shows that the enthusiasm among a certain number of followers of the game is far from dying at present.

A motion was then brought up and passed that Bruce Robinson, president of the Western Canada League be requested to call a meeting of the league at an early date for the purpose of organizing the game for the coming season.

Calgary has already mailed contracts to Chandler, Russell, Rodgers and several other good players. Everything looks very promising for good ball this coming season.

Calgary has been roused over the possibility of boxing bouts being stopped in that city. The papers, with the exception of the Calgary News were loud in their praise of the cleanness of the sport. One of these papers heads the description of the late Lauder-Lombard fight "fast and clean."

Here are selections from the article by rounds, in order to show how "clean" it was. The fight lasted 15 rounds.

Round 2.—Billy jams him with shoulder in clinch. He slaps Lombard with open glove.

Round 3.—Billy butted Lombard hard in stomach with his head.

Round 5.—Billy worked the shoulder trick again, and was warned for hitting close to the belt.

Round 7.—Billy is warned again.

Round 8.—Lauder slaps Lombard's cheek with open glove.

Round 3.—Billy jams Lombard with shoulder again.

In the introduction the article says: "Once or twice during the first eight rounds Billy was warned that his body blows were coming pretty close to being low, and all during the bout he worked his shoulder-butting trick and tried the "muffle" dodge with his glove."

Quite a list of things for a paper to report in its anxiety to show how clean the fight was.

Kid Ford Goes.

(Edmonton Journal.)

On Saturday next Kid Ford, the brilliant catcher, who helped to make baseball here so classy last season, leaves for New Orleans, where he will join the Philadelphia Athletics, for hereafter. The Kid is to wear a mask in the American league and have his photograph published in the sporting page of metropolitan papers.

Clinton Ford, for under that name the Kid can conceal his identity, has been getting baseball experience every season since 1898, when he started with the Nonpareils in Seattle, and what he does not know about his position only the big leagues can teach him. It is a big jump from here to New Orleans and from the Edmonton club to the Athletics, but Connie Mack is always on the lookout for talent and the Kid's record has caught his eye.

Born in North Carolina twenty-seven years ago next July, the Kid has lived in the west since he was a year old, when his parents moved to old Mexico, subsequently settling in the state of Washington, where most of the Kid's life was spent and where he calls Walla Walla home. Beginning his athletic carreer as a pitcher with the Nonpareils in '98, the Kid went catching with the Monarchs the following year, and has caught ever since. In 1900 he was with the Mount Vernon, Wash., team, and remained with that club two years. In 1902 he caught for Sedno Woolley, Wash. In 1903 he was with the Centralia club and in 1904 he managed the Aberdeen club. In the latter part of 1904 he caught for Victoria, B. C. In 1905 the Kid again wore a mask for Aberdeen, playing in the then Southwest league, and in 1906 he played first for Stanwood, Wash., in the Puget Sound league, and later for Calgary, his first introduction to the prairie west. His work last year is familiar to all the fans from here to Medicine Hat, and the local club will find it hard to fill his place.

Good catchers are as scarce as gallinaceous molars, far scarcer than pitchers and outfielders, so it is not surprising that Connie Mack is coming through with fifteen hundred simoleons as compensation to the Kid for the season's work.

On Saturday Ford leaves for Little Rock, Ark., from whence, after one day's stop-over, he will go to New Orleans. There he will begin to earn his money by going into three weeks training and practise, after which exhibition games will be played at Galveston, Texas; Memphis, Tenn., San Francisco and Los Angeles. From there the team will jump clear to New York, where they will open the league season, finally arriving in Philadelphia, the club's home town.

The Educational Report

The long delayed annual report of the department of education of the province of Alberta for 1906 has at last come to hand. While the length of time elapsing between the period covered by the report and the appearance of the book makes it of comparatively little value, there are some statistics which might be found interesting.

The salary question is a live one, and the report says that 924 teachers were employed in 1906, of whom 280 were male and 644 female. The average salary earned was $614.13 or an increase of $14.84 over the average of 1905. Of the teachers employed 176, or 19 per cent., held first class certificates, 657, or 71 per cent. held second class certificates and 87, or 9.05 per cent held provisional certificates or permits.

One of the features commented upon is the fact that in 159 cases or nearly 20 per cent. of the departments in operation were in charge of more than one teacher during the year. The report remarks: "This is undoubtedly one of the most discouraging features of educational work in the province and one which should occupy the attention of all thoughtful school boards."

During 1906, 201 teachers obtained certificates in Alberta on standing obtained outside the province while 104 teachers obtained their professional standing in Alberta.

During 1906 the schools were attended by 38,784 pupils, an increase of 4,530 over the previous year. The high school standard had 761 pupils. The average attendance for the year was 51 per cent.

The highest salary paid to a man was $1600, and the lowest was $540 with an average of $807.10 to first class certificate men.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Western Canneries did well to change its directorate, if for no other reason than to show that the control was not in the hands of one man. The local members—F. G. Forster, C. R. Mitchell, W. J. McLean, F. T. Miller and A. Shaw—should convince the shareholders of the seriousness of the industry.

To our confrere on The News we offer our heartiest congratulations on his selection as General-Manager, and our best wishes for his success in that position.

A most interesting report has come to hand. It deals with the results of germination tests of wheat, oats and barley from Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for November and December, 1907. In everything Alberta stands so far above Manitoba and Saskatchewan as to make one wonder where those two provinces got their reputation. For instance, in wheat, in Manitoba less than 5 per cent. of the samples tested 100 per cent. good; in Saskatchewan only slightly over 3 per cent.; while in Alberta over 11 per cent. of the samples were perfect. And, strange to say, every perfect sample came from Southern Alberta, or, 25 per cent. of the total number tested. In oats only 2 of 163 samples in Manitoba were perfect; in Saskatchewan not one sample of about 350 came up to that standard. In Alberta, although only 2 out of 200 were perfect, the average was very much higher, and in Southern Alberta it was especially good. In Southern Alberta frost did almost no injury.

Some months ago The Monetary Times made mean insinuations about The Times regarding its stand on the Western Canneries. It hinted that this paper was bought by a little advertising. If anyone wants to know what forces were at the back of The Monetary Times' criticism of the Canneries, (and everything else for that matter), he has only to read the attempt of that paper in its last issue to defend the present banking system in its entirety.

The city auditor did his duty when he drew the attention of the people he drew the attention of the council to the fact mentioned in The Times that a great part of the reason for the inadequacy of the city treasurer's staff is the amount of outside work that is being attended to in that department. From the present way in which the office is handled the council has no way of determining whether more help is needed or not. The auditor, too, is forced to do more than he should do. His work is to audit, not to keep the books.

The Times would suggest that, before it goes to the expense of employing more help in the treasurer's office, it try the experiment of seeing how much a treasurer can do with nothing but his city work to attend to. In this case, too, the city might be spared the loss of Mr. Kraus' services as, with less work, he would no doubt accept less pay than he demands at the present time.

Had The News cared to get the correct report of the two jobs of sewerage work done by the city, it would not be laboring under the accusation of misrepresentation. That paper states editorially in support of its contention that council should have nothing to say about the class of men to be employed, that the job done by the engineer's men cost 46½ cents a foot, and that done by the council's men cost 34.36½ a foot. On the face of it the difference was too great for anyone to take seriously.

Had The News taken more than one interested man's word it would have found that in the more costly job the increase was caused by about three feet of frozen ground and seven feet of tunnel work. As a matter of fact, too, only one and sometimes two, of the men selected by the council were employed. In addition to this, an alderman, who saw the expensive job going on, stated to a friend at the time that the men were loafing and he believed it was for no reason but to show the difference in cost of the two gangs. Subsequent statistics, as published in The News, support this belief.

It is not likely that the engineer is a party to such a support of his methods, and the employment of them by a friend only injures his case.

The fire chief made some very sensible recommendations regarding alterations in the opera house in order to protect patrons. His advice to cut a five foot door into the Green Block is an excellent suggestion. The standpipe and hose and two firemen in attendance, also shows that he has made a thorough and intelligent study of conditions. Another suggested improvement would be to remove one of the turns in the stair by having the stair run straight to the street instead of back the other way.

In spite of the fact that Calgary has accepted 90 for $45,000 of waterworks bonds, Medicine Hat did well not to accept 90½ from the same people.

Even that strong party paper, the Lethbridge Herald, is not enraptured with the way the post office department is handled. It remarks that "along the Crow's Nest the postmaster-general can easily find a way to dispose of a good portion of the million dollar surplus he announces this year."

At last council meeting Mayor Cousins stated that the city was paying much more for its supplies than regular prices. This matter should be cleared up. If this is a fact the purchaser should be made to suffer, if not he should be relieved of the odium. People are talking about the city being over-charged, and if it is not so they should know.

It has been discovered that Ald. Penhale told a workman employed by the city that he would have a job all the year round. A good thing for the council to decide once and for all is whether any alderman has the right to make promises of this nature on his own authority.

BEGGAR PRINCE COMIC OPERA CO. COMING.

An exceptionally strong cast, a wealth of beautiful costumes, pretty girls and funny comedians are among the promises made concerning "The Beggar Prince," which comes to the Opera House Monday and Tuesday, March 9 and 10. This is the same "Beggar Prince" company which created such a stir in theatrical circles lately. Indeed, the company has scored such a triumph that numerous reasons have been advanced why the performances have been so well attended and critics have endeavored to discover the cause of their popularity. The real secret of their success, however, is due to the clever cast and the capable manner in which all their operas are staged. And the Beggar Prince company which will be presented here is one requiring elaborate costuming and it is said the requirements have been filled to the letter in Fra'-Diavolo and The Circus Clown.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

(This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.)

RESOLUTION PASSED BY TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL.

The Japanese Imperial Ordinance No. 352 of July, 1899, rigorously forbids all foreigners whether European, American, Canadian or Chinese from working in Japan as laborers in agriculture, fishing, mining, manufactures and other classes of industry outside the narrow residential settlements defined in former treaties, except by special permission of local authorities.

What is Sunny Alberta going to do about this?

The following resolution was passed at the last meeting of the Trades and Labor Council and forwarded to Trades and Labor Congress of Canada:

Resolved that we, the Trades and Labor Council of Medicine Hat shall use our best endeavor and work to have the above law of the Imperial Japanese Ordinance No. 352 made operative as a Dominion or Provincial law against the encroachment of the Oriental laborer, as we consider it to the best interests of the white laborer; and be it further added to the above law that all Orientals who carry concealed or dangerous weapons shall do so on pain of exportation; and be it further resolved that all said treaties in reference to the above law be added and made operative with the above law.

We believe this is the only solution to the present influx of Orientals into this country, which is, and always should be, a white country for a white man.

The council would also remind the union men of the city to be sure that the goods they purchase are union made and bear the label.

Meetings of the Trades and Labor council are held every fourth Thursday of the month at 20k.

LABOR INTERESTS IN THE INSURANCE PROGRAMME.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—J. G. O'Donoghue, parliamentary representative of the trades and labor congress of Canada, presented in writing before the insurance committee a request for a government department of industrial insurance. The conditions offered by the companies for this class of insurance he declared too onerous, expenses heavy for the security given and lapses frequent. In passing, he commended the government annuities as a step in the direction of old age pensions. Further communications protesting against limitation of expenses were read from life insurance agents of Quebec City, of Ottawa and Alberta.

Cleveland, Feb. 27.—A new national political party planned to embrace at the outset 4,600,000 voters of the labor organizations was given its start here last night. The Cleveland Trades and Labor council, the Central body of all Cleveland unions voted in favor of the proposed organization of the party, against which Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, has advised a ballot of the union men of this city.

If it will carry here it will spread throughout the country, embracing at once the American Federation of Labor with its 2,000,000 membership, the northwestern farmers, 1,000,000, Socialist party, 500,000; and, unattached labor unions of at least another 1,000,000 members.

It is declared that the campaign has been carried on quietly and hundreds of cities are now in line.

In Germany, the boy, after leaving school, is compelled by law to attend either a continuation or a technical school for six hours weekly up to his eighteenth year, and his employer, if he is at work, is bound to see that he does so.

The great body of carpenters and joiners was never in better condition than at present. During the last year it has added over 50,000 to its membership, and forces are now in motion for the erection of a fine building in Indianapolis to be used as the headquarters of the brotherhood, plans for which will probably be presented at the next meeting of the executive board. It is stated that at its last meeting the executive board was invited to attend a meeting of the civic Federation at Chicago, and found some 300 delegates present, 50 of whom were unionists.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 26.—The report of the commission appointed last year to investigate the question of old age pensions in Nova Scotia decrees against a general pension scheme because of its cost. It recommends that the pension scheme be confined to coal miners, who already have their relief societies. It also recommends the formation of a provincial relief society with all relief societies in the province as branches under the same constitution and by-laws; the establishment of an old age pension and disability fund entirely separate from relief society funds; the creation of emergency or disaster funds and the establishment of a pension board to administer the various funds.

The Workman's Compensation bill introduced in the Manitoba legislature has been shelved until next year.

A HANSARD FOR THE ASSEMBLY.

The resolution placed on the order paper by Mr. Hiebert asking the government to provide a Hansard for the House, was carried in the legislature yeseerday afternoon. Only one member took sufficient interest in the resolution on the part of the gokernment to say "Nay" and that was Mr. Simmons, who has spoken of the resolution, condemning it very strongly (albeit that carefully prepared and revised versions of his own speeches appear in the South country papers.)

The Premier did not oppose the resolution. He felt that it might possibly be desirable to have a Hansard. He was inclined more to taking the matter into consideration, and they will probably do that. Mr. Simmons thought a Hansard was simply a nuisance. It had proved to be so in Ottawa. Mr. Hiebert replied to that by saying that the honorable member was aspiring to a seat at Ottawa to help out that nuisance. Messrs. Puffer, Moore and Robertson contributed to the subject.

So far about 47 bills have been introduced. One has already received assent and forty are now ready for assent.

The Compensation Act was passed yesterday afternoon. The Drainage Act was recommitted to the committee of the whole House and the Industrial school bill stands over until today.

BREVITIES AND ODDITIES.—I never forget a joke that I once hear" remarked Borem. "No," replied Gyer, "and you don't give any of your acquaintances a chance to."—The Standard.

Having been requested by a large number of the ratepayers of Ward IV., to offer myself as candidate for Alderman to represent that Ward during the coming term, I have agreed to stand for election. As I have considerable interests in that Ward and have, in addition, the general good of the city at heart I solicit your support. Beyond this I do not desire to go, in securing votes.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Flotsam's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

"Ah"— Joseph paused. "Strange thing, sir, but I've not seen 'em handling any of their pay yet."

"Well, that is their affair."

"Yes, sir!"

Having unburdened himself of his suspicion, the servant retired, shaking his head ominously. At any other time the words just recorded would have aroused Jack Meredith's attention, but the singular slothfulness that seemed to be creeping over his intellect was already acting as a clog on his mental energy.

The next morning he was unable to leave his bed, and lay all day in a state of semi-somnolence. Joseph explained to the men that the leader was so disgusted with their ungrateful conduct that he would not leave the tent. In the evening there was a slight attack made from the southern side. This Joseph was able to repulse, chiefly by his own long range firing, assisted by a few picked rifles, but the situation was extremely critical. The roll of the big war drum could be heard almost incessantly, rising with weird melancholy from the forest land beneath them.

Despite difficulties the new crop of simiacine, the second within twelve months, had been picked, dried and stored in cases. Without on the plateau stood the bare trees, affording no covert for savage warfare, no screen against the deadly bullet. The camp was placed near one edge of the table land and on this exposed side the stockade was wisely constructed of double strength. The attacks had hitherto been made only from this side, but Joseph knew that anything in the nature of a combined assault would carry his defense before it. In his rough and ready way he doctored his master, making for him such soups and strength giving food as he could. Once, very late in the night, when it almost seemed that the shadow of death lay over the little tent, he pounded up some of the magic simiacine leaves and mixed them in the brandy which he administered from time to time.

Before sunrise the next morning the alarm was given again and the little garrison was called to arms.

He took his station on the roof of a hut in the center of the little stockade, and from there he directed the fire of his men. Crouching beneath him he had a disabled native who loaded each rifle in turn, and just by way of encouraging the others he picked off the prominent men outside the stockade with a deadly steadiness.

If Joseph detected anything like cowardice or carelessness, he pointed his rifle with a threatening frown toward the culprit, with instant effect. Presently, however, things began to get more serious. This was not the sudden assault of a single chief, but an organized attack. Before long Joseph ceased to smile. By sunrise he was on the roof running from one weak point to another, encouraging, threatening, fighting and swearing very hard. More than once the enemy reached the stockade, and, ominous sign, one or two of their dead lay inside the defense.

He was everywhere at once urging on his men, kicking them, pushing them, forcing them up to the stockade. But he saw the end. Half dazed, the blacks fought on in silence.

In the midst of it a hand was laid on Joseph's shoulder.

"There," cried a voice, "that corner. See to it."

Without looking round, Joseph obeyed, and the breached corner was saved. He only knew that his master, who was almost dead, had come to life again. There was no time for anything else.

For half an hour it was a question of any moment. Master and man were for the time being nothing better than madmen, and the fighting frenzy is wildly infectious.

At last there was a pause. The enemy fell back and in the momentary silence the sound of distant firing reached the ears of the little band of defenders.

"What's that?" asked Meredith sharply. He looked like one risen from the dead.

"Fighting among themselves," replied Joseph, who was wiping blood and grime from his eyes.

"Then one of them is fighting with an express rifle."

Joseph listened.

"By heaven!" he shouted. "By heaven, Mer—sir, we're saved!"

The enemy had apparently heard the firing too. Perhaps they also recognized the peculiar sharp smack of the express rifle amid the others. There was a fresh attack—an ugly rush of reckless men. But the news soon spread that there was firing in the valley and the sound of a white man's rifle. The little garrison plucked up heart, and the rifles, almost too hot to hold, dealt death around.

They held back the savages until the sound of the firing behind them was quite audible even amid the heavy rattle of the musketry.

Then suddenly the firing ceased—the enemy had divided and fled. For a few moments there was a strange, tense silence. Then a voice—an English voice—cried "Come on!"

The next moment Guy Oscard stood on the edge of the plateau. He held up both arms as a signal to those within the stockade to cease firing, and then he came forward, followed by a number of blacks and Durnovo.

The gate was rapidly disincumbered of its rough supports and thrown open.

Jack Meredith stood in the aperture, holding out his hand.

"It's all right; it's all right," he said.

Oscard did not seem to take so cheerful a view of matters. He scrutinized Meredith's face with visible anxiety.

Then suddenly Jack lurched up against his rescuer, grabbing at him vaguely.

In a minute Oscard was supporting him back toward his tent.

"It's all right, you know," explained Jack Meredith very gravely; "I am a bit weak, that is all. I am hungry; haven't had anything to eat for some time, you know."

"Oh, yes," said Oscard shortly, "I know all about it."

CHAPTER XVII.

THREE days after the arrival of the rescuing force at the plateau Guy Oscard had organized a retreating party, commanded by Joseph, to convey Jack Meredith down to the coast. He knew enough of medicine to recognize the fact that this was no passing indisposition, but a thorough breakdown in health. The work and anxiety of the last year, added to the strange disquieting breath of the simiacine grove, had brought about a serious collapse in the system which only months of rest and freedom from care could repair.

Before the retreating column was ready to march it was discovered that the hostile tribes had finally evacuated the country, which deliverance was brought about not by Oscard's blood stained track through the forest, not by the desperate defense of the plateau, but by the whisper that Victor Durnovo was with them. Truly a man's reputation is a strange thing!

And this man, the mighty warrior whose name was as good as an army in central Africa, went down on his knees one night to Guy Oscard, imploring him to abandon the simiacine plateau, or at all events to allow him to go down to Loango with Meredith and Joseph.

"No," said Oscard; "Meredith held this place for us when he could have left it safely. He has held it for a year. It is our turn now. We will hold it for him. I am going to stay, and you have to stay with me."

For Jack Meredith life was at this time nothing but a constant, never ceasing fatigue. When Oscard helped him into the rough litter they had constructed for his comfort, he laid his head on the pillow, overcome with a dead sleep.

"Goodby, old chap," said Oscard, patting him on the shoulder.

"G'by," and Jack Meredith turned over on his side as if he were in bed, drew up the blanket and closed his eyes. He did not seem to know where he was, and, what was worse, he did not seem to care. Oscard gave the signal to the bearers, and the march began. There is something in the spring of human muscles unlike any other motive power; the power of thought may be felt even on the pole of a litter, and one thing that modern invention can never equal is the comfort of being carried on the human shoulder. The slow, swinging movement came to be part of Jack Meredith's life—indeed, life itself seemed to be nothing but a huge journey thus peacefully accomplished. Through the flapping curtains an endless procession of trees passed before his half closed eyes. The unintelligible gabble of the light hearted bearers of his litter was all that reached his ears. And ever at his side was Joseph, cheerful, indefatigable, resourceful. There was in his mind one of the greatest happinesses of life—the sense of something satisfactorily accomplished—the peacefulness that comes when the necessity for effort is past and left behind—that lying down to rest which must surely be something like death in its kindest form.

The awe inspired by Victor Durnovo's name went before the little caravan like a moral convoy and cleared their path. Thus, guarded by the name of a man whom he hated, Jack Meredith was enabled to pass through a savage country literally cast upon a bed of sickness.

In due course the river was reached and the gentle swing of the litter was changed for the smoother motion of the canoe. And it was at this period of the journey, in the forced restfulness of body entailed, that Joseph's mind soared to higher things and he determined to write a letter to Sir John.

The next moment Guy Oscard stood on the edge of the plateau.

He was, he admitted to himself, no great penman, and his epistolary style tended, perhaps, more to the forcible than to the finished.

"Somethin'," he reflected, "that'll just curl his back hair for 'im; that's what I'll write 'im."

Msala had been devastated, and it was within the roofless walls of Durnovo's house that Joseph finally wrote out laboriously the projected capillary invigorator.

Honored Sir [he wrote]—Trusting you will excuse the liberty, I take up my pen to advise you respectfully—while writing this word Joseph closed his left eye—that my master is taken seriously worse. Having been on the sick list now for a matter of five weeks, he just lies on his bed as weak as a newborn babe, as the saying is, and doesn't take no notice of nothing. I have succeeded in bringing him down to the coast, which we hope to reach tomorrow, and when we get to Loango—a poor sort of place—I shall at once obtain the best advice obtainable—that is to be had. However, I may have to send for it, but, money being no object to either master or me, respectfully I beg to say that every care will be took. Master having kind friends at Loango, I have no anxiety as to the future, but, honored sir, it has been a near touch in the past—just touch and go, so to speak. Not being in a position to form a estimate of what is the matter with master, I can only respectfully mention that I take it to be a general kerlapse of the system, brought on, no doubt, by too long a-living in the unhealthy platters of central Africa. When I gets him to Loango I shall go straight to the house of Mr. and Miss Gordon, where we stayed before, and with no fear but what we will be received with every kindness and the greatest hospitality. Thank God, honored sir, I've kept my health and strength wonderful and am therefore more able to look after master. When we reach Loango I shall ask Miss Gordon kindly to write to you, sir, seeing as I have no great facility with my pen. I am, honored sir, your respectful servant to command,

JOSEPH ATKINSON,
Late Corporal Two Hundred and Seventeenth Regiment.

With a feeling of considerable satisfaction Joseph approached the bungalow at Loango three days later. The short sea voyage had somewhat revived Meredith, who had been desirous of walking up from the beach, but after a short attempt had been compelled to enter the spring cart which Joseph had secured.

Joseph walked by the side of this cart with an erect carriage and a suppressed importance suggestive of ambulance duty in the old days.

As the somewhat melancholy cortege approached the house, Meredith drew back the dusky brown holland curtain and looked anxiously out. Nor were Joseph's eyes devoid of expectation. He thought that Jocelyn would presently emerge from the flower hung trellis of the veranda, and he had rehearsed over and over again a neat, respectful speech, explanatory of his action in bringing a sick man to the house.

But the hanging fronds of flower and leaf remained motionless, and the cart drove unchallenged round to the principal door.

A black servant—a stranger—held the handle and stood back invitingly. Supported by Joseph's arm, Jack Meredith entered. The servant threw open the drawing room door; they passed in. The room was empty. On the table lay two letters, one addressed to Guy Oscard, the other to Jack Meredith.

Jack Meredith tumbled rather feebly at his letter. It was distinctly an effort to him to tear the paper.

My Dear Meredith—Just a line to tell you that the bungalow and its contents are at your service. Jocelyn and I are off home for two months' change of air. I have been a bit seedy. I leave this at the bungalow, and we shall feel hurt if you do not make the house your home whenever you happen to come down to Loango. I have left a similar note for Oscard, in whose expedition to your relief I have all faith. Yours ever,

MAURICE GORDON.

"Here," said Meredith to his servant; "you may as well read it for yourself."

He handed the letter to Joseph and leaned back with a strange rapidity of movement on the sofa. As he lay there with his eyes closed he looked remarkably like a dead man.

At that moment Marie came into the room, dignified, gentle, self possessed.

"Ah, missis," said Joseph, "I'm glad to see you. You're wanted badly, and that's the truth. Mr. Meredith's not at all well."

Marie bowed gravely. She went to Meredith's side and looked at him with a smile that was at once critical and encouraging. Nestorius, holding on her skirt, looked up to her face, and, seeing the smile, smiled too. He went further. He turned round and smiled at Joseph as if to make things pleasant all round.

Marie stooped over the sofa, and her clever dusky fingers moved the cushions.

"You will be better in bed," she said. "I will get Mr. Gordon's room made ready for you—yes?" Then she turned to Joseph with that soft, natural way which seems to run through the negro blood however much it may be diluted.

"Help Mr. Meredith," she said, "to Mr. Gordon's room. I will go at once and see that the bed is got ready."

* * * * * * *

By daybreak next morning Joseph was at sea again, steaming south in a coasting boat toward St. Paul de Loanda. He sent off a telegram to Maurice Gordon in England, announcing the success of the relief expedition, and then proceeded to secure the entire services of a medical man. With this youthful disciple of Æsculapius he returned forthwith to Loango and settled down with characteristic energy to nurse his master.

Meredith's progress was lamentably slow, but still it was progress and in the right direction. The doctor, who was wise in the strange maladies of the west coast, stayed for two days and promised to return once a week. He left full instructions, and particularly impressed upon the two nurses the fact that the recovery would necessarily be so slow that their unpracticed eyes could hardly expect to trace its progress.

It is just possible that Meredith could at this time have had no better nurse than Joseph. There was a military discipline about the man's method which was worth more than much feminine persuasion.

"Do y' know what I would like, missis?" he asked briskly of Marie one evening.

"No."

"Well, I'd like to clap my eyes on Miss Gordon just a-stepping in at that open door; that's what we want. That sawbones feller is right when he says the progress will be slow. Slow! Slow ain't quite the word. No more ain't progress the word; that's my opinion. He don't take no interest in nothin', least of all in his victuals, and a man's in a bad way when he takes no interest in his victuals."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"BY the way, dear," said Lady Cantourne to her niece one fine day, "I have asked a Miss Gordon to come to tea this afternoon. I met her last night at the Fitzmannering's. She lives in Loango and knows Jack. I thought you might like to know her. She is exceptionally ladylike and rather pretty."

And straightway Miss Millicent Chyne went upstairs to put on her best dress.

We men cannot expect to understand these small matters, these exigencies, as it were, of female life. But we may be permitted to note feebly en passant through existence that there are occasions when women put on their best clothes without the desire to please. And, while Millicent Chyne was actually attiring herself, Jocelyn Gordon, in another house not so far away, was busy with that beautiful hair of hers, patting here, drawing out there, pinning, poking, pressing with all the cunning that her fingers possessed.

When they met a little later in Lady Cantourne's uncompromisingly solid and old fashioned drawing room, one may be certain that nothing was lost.

"My aunt tells me," began Millicent at once, with that degage treatment of certain topics hitherto held sacred which obtains among young folks today, "that you know Loango."

"Oh, yes. I live there."

"And you know Mr. Meredith?"

"Yes, and Mr. Oscard also."

"Ah, yes," said Millicent unblushingly. That was her strong point, blushing in the right place, but not in the wrong. "Mr. Oscard. He is associated with Mr. Meredith, is he not, in this harebrained scheme?"

"I believe they are together in it. The simiacine, you mean?" said Jocelyn.

"Yes; the simiacine. Such a singular name, is it not? I always say they will ruin themselves suddenly. People always do, don't they? But what do you think of it? I should like to know."

"I think they certainly will make a fortune," replied Jocelyn—and she noted the light in Millicent's eyes with a sudden feeling of dislike—"unless the risks prove too great and they are forced to abandon it."

"What risks?" asked Millicent, quite forgetting to modulate her voice.

"Well, of course, the Ogowe river is most horribly unhealthy, and there are other risks. The natives in the plains surrounding the simiacine plateau are antagonistic. Indeed, the plateau was surrounded and quite besieged when we left Africa."

"But," cried Millicent, "of course something was done. They could never leave Mr. Meredith unprotected."

"Yes," answered Jocelyn quietly, "Mr. Oscard went up and rescued him. My brother heard yesterday that the relief had been effected."

Millicent smiled again in her light hearted way.

"That is all right," she said. "What a good thing we did not know! Just think, auntie dear, what a lot of anxiety we have been spared!"

"In the height of the season, too!" said Jocelyn.

"Yes-es," replied Millicent, rather doubtfully.

Lady Cantourne was puzzled. There was something going on which she did not understand. Within the sound of the pleasant conversation there was the cliquetis of the foil; behind the polite smile there was the gleam of steel. She was rather relieved to turn at this moment and see Sir John Meredith entering the room with his usual courtly bow. He always entered her drawing room like that. Ah, that little secret of a mutual respect! Some people who are very young now will wish, before they have grown old, that they had known it.

He shook hands with Lady Cantourne and with Millicent. Then he stood with a deferential half bow, waiting for the introduction to the girl who was young enough to be his daughter—almost to be his granddaughter. There was something pathetic and yet proud in this old man's uncompromising adherence to the lessons of his youth.

"Sir John Meredith—Miss Gordon."

The beginning—the thin end of the wedge, as the homely saying has it—the end which we introduce almost every day of our lives, little suspecting to what it may broaden out.

"I had the pleasure of seeing you last night," said Sir John at once, "at Lady Fitzmannering's evening party, or 'at home,' I believe we call them nowadays. Some of the guests read the invitation too much au pied de la lettre for my taste. They were so much at home that I, fearing to intrude, left rather early."

He was beginning to wonder why he had been invited—nay, almost commanded—to come, by an imperious little note. And of late whenever Sir John began to wonder he began also to feel old.

Physical Culture and The Mental Faculties

Captain A. F. Hunter recently delivered the following address to the Argonaut Rowing Club on "Physical Culture as a Department of Mental Alienation:"

There is no liberty dearer to the human heart than the liberty to make fools of ourselves. Most of us get in a little practise at this sort of liberty in our ordinary daily affairs, but unfortunately in business we generally had to go through some form of apprenticeship, and have had to discard our originality and a hundred quaint ways of making a mess of things. We are restricted by our training to the conventional business ways of being foolish, such as buying more than we can sell and trusting the fellow that we should have choked.

Now things are much better managed in the realm of bodily exercise, or as some prefer to call it, "Physical Culture." Anybody is entitled to enter tumultuously into this sort of thing. Also anybody is at liberty to call himself an expert who can hit hard, run fast, or perspire and shout loudly. If a man by reason of his strength and agility can implant the loose ends of his arms on another's snout we at once look up to him as to a physical teacher, though he couldn't tell a piece of his own lung from a piece of his own liver if he had them in his own hand to look at.

ALL ARE MINOR EXPERTS.

Not only are experts easily made in physical culture, but we are all minor experts, absolute and positive in our prescriptions; all human beings being exactly similar and practices in exercise clothing, bathing, eating and abstaining from drink that agree with me being certain to agree with you though you be lean and I be fat, though you be bilious and I anæmic, though I love water and you are the heir of a hundred hydrophobic ancestors.

The results are, of course, foolishness. This foolishness may be classified as either temporary, transitional or permanent. The temporary insanity leads a man to take up a sudden course of training until such time as nature asserts herself and his mere vindictive self power succumbs to the inconvenience to which it has given itself. Thus, Mr. A. decides to be a prize fighter and buys a little book of exercises. He gets value for his money, for it likely contains fifty 44 pound exercises for the biceps and other scenic muscles that he intends to develop, and also sadden say for a number of muscles he has never heard from until they begin to send up word about the third day. This course of training is usually progressive and lasts according to strength, vitality and the slow reassertion of common sense from four to ten days. On the tenth day we may make a rough arithmetic al calculation. Our strong man is now doing his exercises thirty times each. Each exercise would be equivalent to lifting say five pounds a distance of three inches, that is to say fifteen inches. 450 foot pounds which, multiplied by 44 exercises, makes a trifle over nine tons lifted one foot.

CHARACTERISTIC CASES.

Let us pass for a moment to the permanent forms of physical mental alienation. Some characteristic cases are:

A structurally delicate, light boned man, persisting in exercises appropriate to the "understander" in a tumbler's pyramid; or, a civilized man living continuously on some fancy diet, such as nuts and raw cotton.

Or a slow pulsed, chill blooded mortal chattering his teeth, winter and summer, under the cold shower because it is invigorating; or sleeping with his head out of a window, although sober; or doing a number of other things in imitation of Mr. Bernarr McFadden.

Human nature being queer stuff and the human animal being the hardest of all animals to kill, some of these freaks live to be octogenarians, being gracefully preserved to us as a punishment for their sins. But most of those who keep up these extremes of foolishness soon occupy those pleasant offices with the green grass on the roof and the marble shingle outside to be read by Gabriel—on which shingle one of the kind caused to be inscribed, "I was well, I tried to be better. I am here."

PHYSICAL CULTURE LUNACY.

Now, the third class of physical culture lunacy is that which has slightly touched all of us members of this club, namely, the transitional. Having no apprenticeship to exercise, we have, according to our zeal, done a lot of things to ourselves which we ought to have practised on our enemies. Having no one with authority to tell us when to quit, we have produced in ourselves that exquisite soreness of muscles that is inevitable and unnecessary as the measles in children. Old Torquemada himself with all his apparatus could no have established so much misery without actually breaking some bones or tearing some ligaments.

Another highly satisfying result of our own efforts is that nauseous shortwindedness which follows unaccustomed and furious exercise. There are several learned theories as to the exact process going on inside which in a few minutes makes a healthy looking citizen snort like the exhaust of a locomotive, and his complexion very like the 57 varieties, and his feet turn heavy, and his head light and his stomach enjoy a complimentary trip to the Old Country. If these be among the beneficial results of rowing, they can also be produced with less effort by blowing out the gas.

THIS FORM TRANSITIONAL.

I call this form of mental alienation transitional, because that of the survivors some get indurated to the practise of self-cruelty, and others find the sinecures of exercise, such as the bow of a four where one compensates for his lack of brute dorsal muscles by the intelligence of his left foot.

Some day physical culture will be taken out of the hands of magazine writers who would cure hernia by rolling you on a barrel, and of trainers who muffle you up in sweaters and try to substitute the pores of your skin for the proper egress to your colon.

But you and I have to live, and take our exercise in this scientific age where they say every man at forty is either a fool or a physician. As a physician, his first cure has generally been to cure himself of any desire for vigorous exercise. If he has ceased to be a fool, it is because at 40, becoming skeptical, he has ceased to take advice. Many of you being of immature age, pardon me if I continue this course of admonition.

A MODERN NOVELTY.

To resume: Physical culture is a modern novelty invented concurrently by numerous advertisers in the American 10 cent. magazines, who will sell you its secrets for $10 per system. True, a rival system was invented by Pythagoras at a time when people were still worshipping Apollo and a lot of other athletic marbles that remind one in purity of appearance of an Argonaut eight. Pythagoras, perhaps, knew something, and he no doubt pirated old Agamemnon's notes on "Bathing as a Source of Long Life," and old Hercules criticism on the "Use of the Sweater for Reducing Flesh," which sweater you will no doubt be pleased to learn was invented by a horse doctor of Bel Nessus. But all these old animals are out of print, and you had better suspend judgment until they are re-published.

In the meantime, do be careful of your diet, because the United States department of Agriculture, after the most exhaustive enquiries, has discovered that the ordinary foods such as meat, vegetables, fruit, flour, fish, cheese and so forth, apparently contain all the elements necessary to sustain human life.

JEM MACE AND JOE WRIGHT.

Also listen for suggestions more attentively to healthy old people than to strong young people who haven't had time to break up. In this respect the evidence of Jem Mace, former fistic champion, but still able to spar with agility at over three-score and sixteen years, is valuable evidence, if true. He says: "Moderation in all things," and adds, "even in fighting." A moderation he was sometimes accused of by backers who should have practised moderation in betting on him. When Mace attains four-score I hope he will write out his rules of living, and that they will be discussed in the press by Joe Wright and other athletic octogenarians for the benefit of succeeding generations.

If you don't like the effects of what physical culture does to you, you might consult a physician. It is true that the average doctor is too busy patching up broken and morbid anatomy to spend time investigating the injury that comes to healthy young fellows from being too strong. Of course, a few doctors get their livelihood examining the students, and the effects of their athletics at the larger American universities. But these are like lawyers who confuse themselves by collecting the facts. Go to a regular practitioner.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

The real physician is a mine of wisdom on the physiological effects of exercise. If he needs you to pay his rent, it is possible he may make you run upstairs, call attention to the beating of your blood pump, and give you a course of treatment for what he calls athlete's heart. But generally he will say, "You went too hard at it at first. Better ease off for a few days and go at it gradually." That, however, is to treat you as a sensible being, and not a physical culturist, and the subject tonight deals, of course, only with the normal and not the rational type of man who takes exercise.

Gentlemen, I thank you very much for your attention to so difficult and abstruse a topic, and if you have detected anything in what I have said that you think will be of value in training, then it is probable you have unfortunately misunderstood the lecturer.

Mrs. A. Lethangue, of Baltyduff, Ont., writes: "I believe I would have been in my grave long ago had it not been for Burdock Blood Bitters. I was run down to such an extent that I could scarcely move about the house. I was subject to severe headaches, backaches and dizziness; my appetite was gone and I was unable to do my housework. After using two bottles of B. B. B. I found my health fully restored. I warmly recommend it to all tired and worn out women."

Lethbridge After Another Well

The city council seems to have decided to forsake the present gas well and go "a-boring" on their own account.

Committee meetings of the council are held in secret, at least the representatives of the press who are supposed to convey the views of the council to the public, are not permitted to enter into such a sacred affair as a committee meeting.

There was a conference between the Electric Light Co. and the council about the gas well last night. That is all the Herald knows authoritatively but a few other things that we have heard prove to us that the meeting was of a lively character and that warm words were passed between several of the parties.

The general feeling of the director of the Electric Light Co. is that the well is on their hands, contrary to the wish of the people expressed last fall. The council is bound not to take over the well unless the company guarantees gas will be found. As the company are not prophets or the sons of prophets they are not guaranteeing gas but it is said they offered to forfeit $10,000 to the city if the well could not be carried to 2,000 feet and $5,000 to 2,500 feet the directors think the council expert's advice ought to be followed especially since he said that gas in it is to be met at this point ought to be found "most probably in the neighborhood of 2,000 feet."

The Herald was informed this morning that the company felt that after making various propositions to the special committee for the taking over and continuance of the present gas well, it was evident that no offer they could make which provided for any compensation for the present hole would be considered and as the company did not feel disposed to give away the hole, the meeting broke up and immediately steps will be taken to draw the casing.

The council, on the other hand, want the company, it is understood, to let the city carry on the hole if gas is found the company will be reimbursed.

The company maintains, that the people's wishes, as expressed by vote should be carried out and the hole taken over.

A citizen remarked to The Herald this morning, "I believe the city is under a moral obligation to take over the present hole from the Electric Light Co., and I also believe there is as much chance of finding gas there as any place else. The citizens should oppose any scheme to start boring six miles away from the city. We want a well in the city or none at all."

A Putlic Liar

Did it ever occur to you why country editors are such cheerful liars? The cross-road town today would boycott the man who dared to tell the truth and nothing but the truth in a country newspaper. Strange as it may seem to some, editors as a class are born with a conscience, but as they rub up against the lying public who have some selfish motive in view, their early training at their mother's knee is too often forgotten in the scramble for the almighty dollar.

Mother Swell-head has a tea-party, twelve present. She asks the editor to say there were fifty present and a four-course banquet followed. Mr. Blow-hard orders nine dollars' worth of goods and asks you to say that he has nine hundred dollars' worth on the road.

Let the meanest old cuss in town pass in his checks and the preacher and editor laud him to the skies. No matter if he has been a wife-beater, a chicken-thief and a drunken reprobate, who "bucks the tiger" while his wife chases dirty undershirts up and down the washboard to feed her half-starved family; when this man's carcass is deposited in the bone orchard, then it is that the public expects the editor to be a smooth liar and whitewash his benighted soul.

Next comes the flannel-tongued scandal-monger of the female persuasion, who has ruined the lives of many a young girl, and who has kept the social circles of the town in hot water for years by the use of her deceitful, lying tongue; she becomes an angel in the columns of the newspaper the moment death paralyzes her.

A preacher may be an ordinary pulpit-pounder and a bore to the community, but every time he talks the editor is no good if he fails to say "the sermons are musically deep and dramatically interesting."

Every "dinky" entertainment must be grand, every school-ma'am proficient and every business man progressive, every city dad religiously perfect, every new-comer a valuable acquisition to society; the climate must be delightful, the women the prettiest in the county, the men the most public-spirited in the state, or the paper is not worth reading and the editor is too slow.

If an editor fails to conform to these standards of public deception and downright lying he will not have a friend in town, and yet the town howls for a purer press!

Is it any wonder under these circumstances that the editor lives in hell on earth and dies with nothing better in sight?—Ex.

'Now, my friends,' said the candidate, making another effort to rouse the enthusiasm of his hearers, 'what do we need in order to carry this country by the biggest majority in its history?"

The response was immediate and enthusiastic.

"Another candidate!" yelled the audience as one man.

Are Winning The Battle

The Struggle Against Consumption in England and Wales.

London, Feb. 24.—That consumption—the white scourge—may become as rare as leprosy in our midst in the not distant future may seem a Utopian idea. It is, however, the optimist outlook presented by Dr. H. Timbrell Blustrode in his exhaustive and most valuable report on Sanatoria for Consumption and Certain other aspects of the Tuberculosis Question, issued by the local government board.

In so far as it deals with the history and the treatment of tuberculosis, Dr. Bulstrode's report must be of the highest value to medical practitioners. At the same time, it is of equally high value to all persons concerned in public administration, and in social problems affecting the welfare of the masses.

At the outset Dr. Bulstrode rather alarms the lay mind by quoting Dr. Osler's declaration that "the germ of tuberculosis is ubiquitous; few reach maturity without infection; none reach old age without a focus somewhere."

Dr. Osler, however, reassures us by adding: "That we do not all die of the disease is owing to the resistance of the tissues; in a word to an unfavorable—i.e., rocky—soil in which the seeds have fallen." Many persons (we read) harbor the bacillus with impunity.

Races as well as individuals are more susceptible than others to tuberculosis. The Celts, wherever they live, are more prone than the Saxon or Scandinavian. The Irish, for instance, suffer greatly from the scourge. Poverty and emigration, have however, greatly aggravated the suffering of Ireland in this respect.

CAUSE FOR HOPE.

So far as England and Wales are concerned, there is cause for high hope rather than alarm. "The public attention," Dr. Bulstrode says, "which has been drawn to the subject of pulmonary tuberculosis during recent years has led to the belief that the malady is increasing, whereas it has undergone an altogether phenomenal decline, which will continue in years to come, may result in the total extinction of the disease."

In another place he emphasizes this by saying that if the decline in the phthisis death rate is continued it may "result ere long in the total extinction of the malady; that the malady may, indeed, follow the course taken by such diseases of leprosy, relapsing fever, typhus fever, malaria, etc., all of which diseases have, at least, for the time being, practically disappered from this country."

As bearing out this hopeful view, Dr. Bulstrode gives figures from which the following return showing the decline in the death rate from phthisis in England and Wales in quinquennial periods since 1858 is compiled.

Year.	Total Deaths.	Rate per 10,000 living.
1858	50,142	25.9
1863	51,072	24.7
1868	51,423	23.3
1873	51,335	21.9
1878	52,856	21.1
1883	50,053	18.8
1888	44,248	15.6
1893	43,632	14.6
1898	41,335	13.5
1893	40,132	12.0
1908	39,746	11.5

In connection with the greatly accelerated decline in the last thirty years it is important to remember the passing of the Public Health Act of 1875, the discovery of the tubercle bacillus in 1882, the passing of the Housing of the Working Classes Act in 1890, and the commencement of notification and sanitariums in 1899.

It is a fact worthy of note that males suffer worse than females from consumption. This was not formerly the case, for from 1864 to 1868 the rates were practically parallel. Then the rate amongst females began to decline, until the present time, when "males suffer to the extent of some four deaths per ten thousand more than females." The explanation of this, as given by Dr. Bulstrode, is of peculiar interest. It is the improvement of the homes of the poor which affect the women, who spend most of their time there. "It has, too, been suggested that the greater resort of males to the public-houses and to common lodging houses, where they are more likely than at home to come in contact with infection, is a factor in the problem."

Breathing foul air is, of course, a fruitful source of consumption. Certain trades are more dangerous than others in this respect, those of shoemaker, draper, tobacconist, tailor, hairdresser, hatter, musician, printer and bookbinder being especially deleterious.

The prevalence of consumption is contributed to by many causes, "but, Dr. Bulstrode says, poverty "stands out prominently above all others." "Although," he says, "it is matter for dispute which elements of poverty are mainly operative, there is much evidence in support of the view that poverty as a whole, with all that it comprises and implies, may be regarded as one of the most potent predisposing causes of the malady. Poverty acts in many ways: it may, for instance, diminish resistance by promoting overcrowding of persons, semi-starvation, lack of sunlight, of ventilation, and of cleanliness; it may induce occupational predisposition and increase opportunities for infection."

A DELICATE HINT.—Two very cadaverous looking tramps looked in at the window of a railway-station where a telegraph operator sat at his key.

REALISM.—Star Actor—"I must insist, Mr. Stager, on having real food in the banquet scene."

More Terrible Than War!

More terrible than war, famine or pestilence is that awful destroyer, that hydra-headed monster, Consumption, that annually sweeps away more of earth's inhabitants than any other single disease known to the human race.

"It is only a cold, a trifling cough," say the careless, as the irritation upon the delicate mucous membrane causes them to hack away with an irritable tickling of the throat. When the irritation settles on the mucous surface of the throat, a cough is the result. To prevent Bronchitis or Consumption of the Lungs, do not neglect a cough however slight as the irritation spreading throughout the delicate lining of the sensitive air passages soon leads to fatal results. If on the first appearance of a cough or cold you would take a few doses of you would save yourself a great deal of unnecessary suffering. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the life-giving properties of the pine trees of Norway, and for Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough and all Throat and Lung affections it is a specific. Be sure when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to get it. Don't be humbugged into taking something else. Price 25 cts.

Miss Lena Johnston, Toledo, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for throat troubles after taking numerous other remedies, and I must say that nothing can take the place of it. I would not be without a bottle of it in the house."

The Times for Job Printing

Principal of University

In a nutshell, Dr. Tory continued, his statistics showed that on the continent of North America five hundred million dollars were being spent on education and the value of school property totalled fifteen hundred million dollars. And the cause of this enormous expenditure by which the school was brought almost to the door of every home where the English language is spoken, the cause of this changed attitude was the conviction of the people that education was absolutely necessary for our democratic institutions. They realized that education was the Alpha and Omega of success in democratic government. The communities were determined to raise the standard of their manhood and womanhood. It was realized by the educationist, by the psychologist, by the statesman and politician, that it was absolutely unsafe to allow the children in a democratic community to grow up with anything less than a good public school education. The three R's, a little geography, the mere beginnings of history, a little nature study, these made up the public school course, and should be the absolute minimum. He was glad to observe that the man or woman without that minimum was looked upon as a disgrace to the community. Illiteracy must not be submitted to for one moment.

As for the secondary school, there were a few today who held that the public should not be taxed for this higher branch. Recently he had spoken to a wealthy man on the matter and had been informed that secondary education was a huge mistake, that it put ambitious notions into the heads of those who should be serving in his kitchen. That, said Dr. Tory, was a concept of the ancient world, when divisions hard and fast prevailed in society, and the best way to keep the populace under was to keep them ignorant. Today that spirit was best represented in Russia, where revolution and anarchy prevailed, as the ignorant masses blindly struggled against the forces that oppressed them. The secondary school ante-dated the university. In the middle ages the place of the modern public school was filled by private tutors, who could be engaged by the very rich only.

One thing which had given him great joy since coming into the province was the eagerness for education displayed by the pupils. He had never witnessed anything superior to the enthusiasm of Albertan youth in the quest for knowledge. It behooved those in whose care educational affairs were entrusted to see that no efforts were spared to make Alberta's educational facilities equal to anything to be obtained on the American continent. A good public school training should be the minimum. No Anglo-Saxon community, however, would rest content with the minimum. The British Empire was not built by men who were thus easily satisfied. The men who made our literature, who made our history, were of a far different stamp, for whom the very best was not too good.

Another argument he would put forth on behalf of the secondary school. When a child had passed through the public school course, he had just reached the stage in life when mind most needed guidance. The best safeguard was in his securing a broad conception of our history, of the place our race had occupied in the field of scientific research and in the arena of the Empire. He should be taught the meaning and history of our great traditions. Ours was the most glorious literature in the world. The greatest critics all admitted this. And in all these things he included the great Republic, which was one with us in language and literature. (Applause). In culture lay the safeguard of the democratic state, against the wiles of the demagogue, who seeks to break loose the bonds that hold society together. The youth must be taught to consider all questions without class prejudice. He must be taught that reason and judgment which should underly his every act in relation to the lives of other men. In the general culture of the community lay the best assurance of domestic peace.

Another fact for which he would ask careful consideration was the increasing demand for the mentally cultivated in business life. Seventy-five per cent. of the graduates of Yale university of recent years had entered upon business careers.

Then he would make a plea for the secondary school in the interests of the public school itself, since from the former source their supply of teachers would have to be secured in the future. Before the speaker came to Medicine Hat he could say he had not met a single teacher who had received public school and normal training in Alberta. He could not say that now as he had that day been introduced to three splendid teachers who had been educated in the province.

In closing his remarks on this phase of the subject, he would state his belief that the people of Alberta were too biz, too Canadian, too British, to be, in the last analysis, negligent of this important branch of educational work.

Dr. Tory then passed on to discuss the meaning and status of the university, which he defined as a high high school. In the universities of the world we had the best institutions representing national feeling and brotherhood and the highest learning. When he visited a university in any part of the Empire he did not feel that he was in a strange land. The university trained man was at home in any part of the world.

The function of the university was two-fold. It was for utility and for training. One of the greatest boons to any country was the spread of general culture. The nation's ideals must come down from the top, or they would not come at all. The teachers of the high school must be recruited from the university. There was an imperative reason why Alberta should get ready to meet the demands of the secondary schools as they arose. If a start were made in September it would be four years before graduates could be turned out.

He would say a word in reference to the clergy and the university. He did not care as to the religious views they might hold. What he did wish to see was that men with well trained minds should enter this profession.

Then some attention must be paid to training for the professions. Within the last ten years the death rate in this country had decreased from 19 to 15 per 1000, and this had been brought about by the advance in medical training. The saving which this represented alone was sufficient to equip the university.

It would be some years before the need for technical education would arise; they must be prepared when that time did come to supply the best of training. The speaker had the profoundest respect for the engineer. It was he who had changed the face of this continent, who had blazed the trail of civilization across the vast prairies, through the mountain fastnesses. A hundred years ago the white race in America lived only between the Alleghanies and the Atlantic ocean. Today, through the energy and quiet, calm determination of the engineer, our race had colonized a continent. He hoped in the near future Alberta would be in a position to give her quota of well-trained engineers to the world.

An agricultural department would soon be undertaken. Every country in the world had attached such a branch to its university work. This was the case even in Cambridge, the conservative, and one of the most significant experiments was now being carried out in the laboratory there in the crossing of English grains with others of the Canadian variety. If that experiment should prove a success it would mean an enormous gain to Alberta. The increased value of the grain would be sufficient in one year to equip and endow a university here in perpetuity. There were three ideas of the function of the university which had held sway in different periods of the world's history. The idea of the old world was ecclesiastical. All other phases of life were ignored. Next came the university of the political school of thought, of which Thomas Jefferson was a representative. At this period it was believed that the university should be an institution for the training of statesmen, of politicians. It was an academy in which the future rulers of the nation were to study the science of government. The modern university sought to relate itself to every phase of life, with every branch of human knowledge. It was a recruiting ground for the highest intellects in the country. And no nation could afford to neglect its bright boys and girls.

A man recognized as one of the world's greatest economists, had stated that fifty per cent. of the men of genius of the world had risen from the ranks of the poor. (Applause). In Canada, he might add, seventy-five per cent. of the men of mark had come from her farm homes. It was her glory that her log cabins had been the recruiting ground of her heroes. (Applause). Another need of the province was a big, well-stocked library, that her citizens might have access to all the greatest thoughts of all nations and all time. The future of this province would depend on men who were not content to rest on their oars, to be satisfied with what we already knew. Those who had unlocked the gates of knowledge in the past were made of better stuff. Men like Faraday, like Newton, had not been thus content; they had been ever eager to venture forth on new paths of thought and research.

A university course added fifteen years to a man's life, since it enabled him to know well at twenty-five what otherwise he might know ill at forty. And the institution which could add these years of usefulness to a man's life, we should cherish as the apple of our eye. If the day should ever come when we neglected all these higher things of life, in that day would be written across the pages of our history, "Desolation."

Some day upon the banks of the Saskatchewan river, there was going to arise a great university. The students would not be scattered in a great city, but would live together in a residential college with the staff in close relation to the students. Some day in that university surrounded by a beautiful park, ten thousand students would be at work. He might not live to see it, but many of those in his audience would. He hoped to have the joy of shaping, in some measure, its traditions.

Dr. Tory resumed his seat, amidst applause, after speaking for almost an hour and a half, during the whole of which he kept his audience in a state of eager interest and enjoyment.

Mr. Brotherton said he had made a mental calculation as to the amount of money spent on education in Medicine Hat, which he estimated roughly at $36 per head, so that they came out pretty high. As far as the school board was concerned they intended to spend more money. The schools were now nearly full. They planned in the near future, to undertaken course of manual instruction. He would like to mention a matter not referred to by the Doctor. It was—perhaps a materialistic argument—that education would facilitate in the development of the country's resources. In the added wealth which the work of geologists, chemists and other men of applied science would create, the nation was amply repaid for any outlay they might make.

Ald. Huckvale proposed a vote of thanks to Dr. Tory for his address. It was a source of much gratification to see so many of the mothers and sisters of the children of the schools present. The mothers, he considered, were generally more interested in the education of their children than were the fathers, and their attendance and the fine address they had heard from Dr. Tory might make easier the extraction of money from the pockets of the citizens; it might enable them to face higher rates uncomplainingly. It was a source of gratification to those who had spent most of their lives in this western country, who had seen the railroads come, and the wonderful development of recent years, to think that they were going to have, on the banks of the Saskatchewan river, a university, to be presided over by a man of such eloquence and ability.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Waldock, who said that in educational matters Alberta, in the future, would be (where she might be expected to be) always equal to the best. (Applause).

Dr. Tory briefly responded, expressing his deep appreciation especially of the interest taken by the mothers of the city in educational matters—as shown by the large number who had come to hear his address. He had that day been introduced to a youth in the high school who had said, "I intended going to McGill, but Alberta for me."

Seven Persons

Messrs. Duncan and Tyrell who have been boarding at Mr. Sam Carlson's for about two weeks have moved onto their homesteads.

On Monday night a number from Seven Persons took the morning train for the Hat. They were Geo. Murray and daughter, school inspector J. W. Brown, Messrs. Stephenson, Butler, Duncan and Tyrell, Friday John Meyers and wife, T. Nesting, Master John Kraft and Mr. Rasmusson were also Hat visitors.

We believe a teacher has been secured for the school for the ensuing year, but have not heard yet who it is.

Mrs. E. McDonald and Miss Murray were in town Saturday.

Peter Welch is expecting a sister from the east to visit him.

We hear a post office has been granted to Bull's Head, the name of the office to be Bentinck, the P.M. to be Mr. Sam Baker if he will accept.

A gentleman from Regina has been looking up a location for an elevator and inquiring about Seven Persons. We think about next fall we may need one here.

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Store Association will be held at Mr. Sam. Carlson's next Saturday March 7.

Tim Moffatt is returning from the east with his bride.

R. S. Further returned on the 22nd. from Berlin, Ont., where he has been on a business visit.

Ab. Lemon, wife and family will be out on the farm on the 3rd of March.

Will Arthur is expected up from Woodford, Ont., with a carload of effects about the middle of March. His wife and family will follow about June.

L. Olson is building on his homestead.

Ab. Day is digging a well and building on his place.

"Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that I have used $18.00 worth of Psychine, and as a result was cured of very serious throat and lung trouble.

My case was a most difficult one, and the doctors had practically said that I could not get well. I tried Psychine, and it did me so much good that I continued its use until I had taken $18.00 worth, with the result that I am now a new man physically. I have gained thirty-five pounds.

"It is with the greatest confidence that I recommend Psychine to all who are afflicted with throat or lung trouble.

Yours truly, C. A. PINKHAM.

D. G. White wrote in reference to Mr. Fewing's claim, that the levels had been supplied to George Worthy when W. N. Adsit was city clerk. A letter to the engineer from Mr. Charlesworthwas read, stating that in 1905 Mr. Fewings had asked the writer, who was then engaged on work for the Northwest government a short distance out of town, to show him the grade. Mr. Charlesworth had shown the grade and told him what the fall was. That the wall had been built on the level was Mr. Fewings' own fault or that of the builder. Matter referred to the city solicitor.

A ratepayer wrote requesting that payment of his water account ($2.85.) be allowed to stand over till he could obtain the required amount. The clerk stated that the applicant was already one quarter in arrears, in addition to the present quarter. Referred to water commissioners with power to act.

C. A. Krauss wrote that he did not think the matter of his salary had received full consideration from the committee, pointing out that he had accepted a low salary last year on the understanding that he would be given ample remuneration later. There were now three courses open to him: To give the city an audit worth only $300, (the salary recommended by the committee); to give the time necessary for a full audit; or to resign his position. The first course he could not consider for a moment; for the second he could not spare the time at the salary offered; if the council could not see their way to make the salary adequate he would be compelled to follow the third course. Mr. Krauss was asked to speak on the matter and said that when he undertook the work last year he asked for $300, but accepted $250 on being advised that the amount would be substantially increased later. He further drew attention to the fact that he had had a large amount of extra work to do on account of the treasurer's staff being unable to cope with all the work in their department. Ald. Tweed thought the $400 asked for should be granted, much work had come on his shoulders which rightly belonged other departments. Ald. Baker: "It seems to me the auditor has been doing the treasurer's work and the treasurer has been doing something else." Laid on the table till next regular meeting.

T. A. Navin wrote that he would present his note due on March 5, on that date, and asked the city to oblige by being ready to pay note when presented. Referred to finance committee.

E. Jackson, M. Downey, A. C. Hawthorne and A. DesBrisay, owners of land in Block 53, facing on Toronto street, petitioned the council that a sidewalk be laid opposite their property. The Mayor thought this should be left over until Mr. Navin's matter had been dealt with. Laid on the table.

Ald. Baker gave notice of motion regarding fire provision in the opera house and places of entertainment.

Ald. Baker moved that the engineer be instructed to lay on the table at the next regular meeting of the council, a full account of cement loaned out to private parties—showing what amount and to whom it had been loaned, when returned, etc. Mr. Krauss stated that his report covered all such cases till the end of the year. He read the portion of his report dealing with the matter.

The letter from the Merchants bank asking that the debentures be handed over to them, which was laid on the table at the last meeting, was referred to the finance committee.

The matter of the assessorship next came up. Ald. Spencer said the subject had been under consideration by the finance committee. Mr. Crosskill had stated that he could not do the work for less than $780 per annum. Mr. Hall, of the board of trade, was willing to accept the position at $600, if the board were willing that he should do so. Some of the board of trade members Ald. Spencer had spoken to were favorable to their secretary undertaking this additional work. Ald. Tweed thought the present year was likely to bring heavy demands on the board of trade secretary. It appeared to him that Mr. Hall would either have to shirk the work of assessing, or publicity would suffer. He did not wish to stand in the way of Mr. Hall taking the position. On Ald. Spencer's motion it was decided to offer the position to Mr. Hall at the salary asked.

A committee was appointed to look into the matter of the police receiving fee for making attendance at court, etc.

Ald. Spencer read the report of the special committee appointed to look into the payrolls and find out if the engineer had carried out the instructions of the special committee on salaries, and whether men had been overpaid. The committee found, in the first place, that Mr. Pruitt had carried a pipe line into the city limits which he was not instructed to do, and extra expense to the engineer's department had been incurred through repairing and tightening of the joints on Mr. Pruitt's work. The committee further found that Messrs. Jackson, McIntyre and MacDonald had been allowed and paid for 10 hours a day in November, December and part of January; other employes had been paid for 9 hours. The reason for Jackson being allowed 10 hours was that he had other duties to perform in the morning and evening. McIntyre was working as subforeman part of the time, for which he was allowed ten hours a day, instead of receiving the higher scale of pay. MacDonald's salary was fixed at $65 a month. He had been entered up for some unknown reason as being employed by the day. The committee recommended that a conference be held between the heads of the gas, water and public works committees, to arrange and lay down different plans for the engineer, for the carrying out of the council's instructions.

Ald. Baker wished to be informed by the chairman of the special committee as to which two aldermen had promised Mr. Jackson a permanent job. Ald. Spencer thought Ald. Penhale and another alderman had induced him to stay when he was offered a good job elsewhere by telling him that he would be given an all-year-round job by the city. Ald. Baker thought that if Mr. Jackson was the wonderful man he was made out to be, he ought to have been able to lay out the work for the small gang of men under him the day previous, without putting in extra time at night for this purpose. If it were necessary for him to do this the sooner the state of affairs was altered the better. The committee had been appointed to INVESTIGATE—they had turned out a report whitewashing the whole business. The Mayor said they did take the question up from the standpoint of investigation only. Ald. Baker said that he took the view that it was a whitewashing affair because he was notified that he wasn't wanted to confer with the committee. Ald. Spencer: "You were notified weren't you?" Ald. Baker: "No." Ald. Spencer stated that he first asked Ald. Baker to attend, but later thought it was unnecessary. The Mayor said, though the engineer had made a mistake, he couldn't see anything very serious about it. Ald. Baker said that throughout the whole business their had been an attempt to cast a slur on the efficiency of the workmen employed by the city whose only stock-in-trade was their good name as workers. These men had given thorough satisfaction when employed by the railway. Why should they be unable to do so when under Mr. Jackson? There was another matter in connection with an editorial in The News. Here a comparison had been made between some work done by the engineering department, and that done by the men whom the council ordered to be employed. The first cost 46 cents a foot; the second $1.30, and an attempt was made to show that this difference in price was due to the difference in men. As a matter of fact there was no comparison. The first work was done when the ground was soft—the second when there were 3 feet of frost to break through. Moreover, there was only one, or sometimes two, of the men ordered to be employed by the city who were working on the job mentioned. He felt very strongly on this matter. The Mayor thought, with regard to Ald. Baker's complaint about not being consulted in any work done in committee, the members of other committees should be consulted. The report was adopted.

4 YEAR OLD BOY COULDN'T STAND!

Limbs Weakened by La Grippe Made Strong by Zam-Buk.

Mrs. T. Brixton, of 5 Woodworth Ave., St. Thomas, Ont., says: "I had had some experience as to the efficacy of Zam-Buk in healing sores, cuts, etc., and had heard good reports from friends who also tried this balm, so when a year ago my little lad, four years of age, was left weak in the limbs as the result of a severe attack of influenza, I began rubbing in the Zam-Buk. His legs were so weak he would tremble and shake and was unable to stand for any length of time. Frequent applications of this ointment well rubbed in, seemed to strengthen him daily, and in a very short time the shaking and trembling in his limbs had been banished and he soon got strong and able to run about, thanks to Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is a splendid embrocation for rheumatism, sciatics, etc., and is without equal as a healing balm.

MEDICINE HAT TO BE CENTRE OF MUCH IMPROVING

LARGE STAFF NECESSARY

All doubt as to the employment by the C.P.R. of a large number of men from Medicine Hat has been set at rest. The Times learns on excellent authority that fully as many crews as last year will be employed within three weeks, and before the summer comes it is almost certain that the staff will be larger than ever.

While the falling off in business of the past couple of months has altered some of the railway plans which were to bring bigger results to Medicine Hat, we can announce positively that this city will have no complaints to make on the score of employment.

If the weather continues open extensive alterations and improvements will be commenced on April 1 south and east of the city. Towards Lethbridge a large amount of money is to be expended in ballasting and levelling the road bed. Between here and Swift Current the work which was commenced last year will be continued. This includes ballasting and remaking the line.

From 12 to 15 work train crews will be regularly engaged in this work, in addition to a number of extras.

The intention at present is to increase the passenger service on the main line by placing on three daily trains each way. One of these will probably start shortly after the first of April, the additional passenger train depending upon the traffic.

It was planned to add a passenger train to the Crow's Nest service to run in the daytime between here and Lethbridge. This has been dropped for the immediate present, but depends upon the traffic on that line. As the number of settlers going south is very large, and as the prospects for full work on the mines are bright, this extra train may come sooner than expected.

The rumors sent out by a Lethbridge paper as to the sidetracking of Coleridge have been denied, but with the cutting out of Dunmore Jc. all passenger and mixed trains will run from Medicine Hat. The resumption of the Soo-Spokane is doubtful. This is of trifling importance to the city, however, as it did not come in to the station.

Already the men laid off at the shops some weeks ago have been ordered back to work. Freight traffic is picking up very fast and within a month or six weeks Medicine Hat will be busier than it ever was.

CLASSES HAVE STARTED

BANQUET ON THURSDAY

Mr. Gawley, the trainer, arrived from Vancouver last Tuesday and has been busy ever since with the help of the boys in getting the apparatus up and the library ready. The classes at present are Senior, 8 to 9.30 Mondays and Fridays; business men, 7.30 to 8.30 Tuesdays and 4 to 5.30 Thursdays.

The School Board

The regular meeting of the school board was held last evening. Present: The chairman, W. J. Brotherton; trustees Colter, Milne, Kennedy and Niblock.

The resignation of Miss Moulton was read and accepted.

Mr. Allen wrote asking for a refund of $4.50 of the $7 school fee paid for the term ending in June, he having left the city. The amount asked for was considered excessive. On Mr. Milne's motion it was decided to grant a refund of $4.

D. R. Ware wrote asking that his salary be continued at the rate of $100 a month until June, in view of the fact that while taking charge of Standards III. and IV. he is also giving assistance in the high school. Mr. Brotherton understood that the agreement made with Mr. Ware that his salary was to be at the rate of $700 per annum was to hold good. Concessions had been made to meet his views when the matter came up in December. Mr. Sansom said that Mr. Ware was giving valuable assistance. He was taking three subjects in Standard VI., this without hindering the work in his own class. If Mr. Ware were worth $700 to do the work he was paid to do in III., and IV., he thought he was worth considerably more on account of the services he was rendering in the high school. Mr. Niblock stated that when the original engagement was entered into it was because Mr. Ware was considered a "handy man" who could give assistance in the high school, that the $700 rate was decided upon. Application laid on the table for the time being.

The Merchants Bank wrote saying that the statement as reported in The Times, that they had agreed to carry the board three months only was incorrect. The Bank had granted credit for the next four or five months, and they thought the board would have no difficulty in getting any reasonable amount. Filed.

The state of a blackboard in Montreal street school next came up for discussion. A letter was read from the Western School Supply Co., offering to supply slate boards at a cost of 44 cents a square foot. It was decided that the communication should lie on the table until the secretary had obtained further particulars from the firm.

An application for the position left vacant by Miss Moulton's resignation was read. This was from A.M. Walker on behalf of his sister, Florence Walker of Ingersoll, Ont. Miss Walker possessed the certificate qualification and had had four years experience in Dawson. Decided to offer the position to Miss Walker at the scheduled salary.

Mr. Sansom's report was then read. This showed that during the month of February the school had averaged 569, the public school averaging 34 per class. The month's attendance at the high school has averaged only 77 per cent. This figure was considered very low as to as to militate strongly against the success of any class. Mrs. Bake had substituted for 11 days for various teachers. In conclusion the report stated that the attitude of students on the whole was very encouraging and prospects were good for the rest of the term.

The report was adopted. Mrs. Baker to be paid for her services rendered.

It was decided to have the auditors' report published in accordance with the motion made at the annual meeting.

A discussion ensued on the advisability of providing fire escapes of the sheet type for the schools. Mr. Niblock considered it was unnecessary to make this provision in a two-storey building. Had the schools been three-storeys in height he would have favored the escapes being procured.

It was decided to alter the regular meeting hour of the board to 7.30.

The question of forming a cadet corps was considered at some length. Lieut. Reid explained that all the regulations would be sent in from the government and instruction as to method of training. The ordinary school work would not be interfered with and all that the board would need to do in connection with the matter was to give its sanction. Corps had already been formed at Lethbridge, Winnipeg and Calgary in the western provinces.

Mr. Milne and Mr. Kennedy were appointed a committee to confer with the principal with power to act in the matter of obtaining physical apparatus.

CATHOLICS MUST QUIT THESE ORDERS.

Hamilton, Ont., March 2—A pastoral letter from Bishop Dowling was read in the Roman Catholic churches of the Hamilton diocese yesterday which threatens excommunication to any member of the faith who persists in being identified with secret societies. The orders named are the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Masons and Sons of Temperance.

COMING.

NORTH PORTAL, Sask., March 6.—Immigration from the United States to the Canadian West has started in earnest. Every passenger train arriving here is loaded with landseekers, and from ten to fifteen cars of settlers' effects are arriving daily.

TORONTO, March 4.—About three hundred people left for Western Canada yesterday by the first settlers' excursions of the year. The crowd was much smaller than anticipated on account of the blocked condition of the railways, but the average will probably be fully made up in next excursions.

Miss Jessie Johnstone is at present away on a visit to friends at Gull Lake.

The death of J. B. Lindsay has cast a gloom over this neighborhood. He was a busy, active man and held in great esteem by all who knew him. Pneumonia was the cause of death. He had only been sick for about a week, the news of his demise coming as a shock to everyone. Much sympathy is extended towards Mrs. Lindsay and family.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaghn and family from Medicine Hat are expected to be residents in the district very soon. Building operations are being gone on with.

Irvine.

Mrs. E. Nicholson was at home to a number of her friends on Monday when quite a number of young and old people, passed the evening at games of whist, etc.

W. J. Waldock of Medicine Hat was in Irvine on Tuesday of last week. He attended the town council meeting and gave the town full details of one of the 45-gallon Obenchain-Boyer chemical fire engines and after much discussion the Council decided to order one. This will be the greatest asset the town will have.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Corbett had quite a surprise. It having been learned that Wednesday was their wooden wedding and quite a number of their friends not wishing to let this great opportunity slip decided to be on the spot, and they sure gave the culprits a jolly time in accepting the presents, which were very numerous and coming from all parts. The rest of the evening was spent at progressive whist, there being five tables, Miss M. Gray winning the first prize and Mr. Will Dunn obtaining the consolation. Refreshments were served about 11.30 when the party broke up after enjoying a very pleasant evening.

Several business changes are being made in the firm of Weiss & Co., which we have no doubt will be known more fully by the next issue.

Ed. F. Racey, of Edmonton, general agent of the Winnipeg Fire Co., was registered at the Alberta on Monday of last week. Coughs and colds seem to be very prevalent in Red Cliff at present.

A photographer was seen taking a snap-shot of a cowpuncher on Sunday. Who was it?

One of the palatial residences of this city was moved by the wind last week.

Mr. Brubaker drove to the Hat Saturday on business.

Beggar Prince Opera Co.

Those who were fortunate enough to see Fra Diavolo last night will be sure to go again tonight. Without a doubt the Beggar Prince Opera Company gave Medicine Hat a production which was several planes higher than anything ever presented here before.

As a rule a play or opera of high class is ruined by the average company, where a less ambitious play would have been appreciated. But the Beggar Prince company were fully up to Fra Diavolo and that is saying something for them.

The soloists, Ethel Balch, Vivian Forrest and Jos. Combs were fully up to their parts, the former possessing a full, sweet voice, well controlled and attractive. But the star from a musical standpoint was J. C. Taylor, with a baritone or tenor robusto voice that possessed great range and volume. The chorus work was especially good and more of it was clamored for by the audience, but no encore was allowed.

The comedy parts were carried out by G. Murray, Fred Godding and Robt. Taylor. The first two kept the crowd laughing as long as they were on the stage, and the laugh was a healthy one, at clean well-acted comedy.

No doubt, the house will be packed tonight. Those who miss it will be sorry.

The fire door provided much better egress for the crowd after the performance.

RATEPAYERS MEET

BY-LAWS DISCUSSED LAST NIGHT

There was a fairly representative gathering of ratepayers in the city hall last evening when the new money by-laws came up for discussion. On the platform were the Mayor; Alds. Forster, Huckvale, Tweed, Spencer.

The Mayor, in opening, briefly explained the objects for which the money was required. A large part of the sum to be raised for gas extension would be spent in the sinking of a new well. This was in accordance with the advice of experts who claimed that with an additional well to draw upon there was more likelihood of the supply remaining dry than would otherwise be the case. As to the water extension by-law, if this were not passed it would be impossible to go on with the work in connection with the pumps. Reviewing the financial situation the Mayor stated that Medicine Hat was in a better position than most cities in the west. He thought the council realized that expenditure must be cut down to a minimum. Touching upon the dissatisfaction which had been expressed with regard to the sale of the last issue of debentures at 89 cents, the Mayor traced the chain of circumstances which led up to the giving of an option to the Aemilius Jarvis Co. The city's debentures had always sold at par previous to the financial collapse of last year. While the council were negotiating with a Manchester (England) firm of brokers the slump in the money market occurred. The English firm wrote to say they could not make any offer. In September the Mayor had seen a number of brokers in Toronto but could obtain no offer. While here he met the Aemilius Jarvis Co., who promised that the city's bonds should not be peddled, but sold only to accredited firms. An option was given for thirty days at 90 cents, [illegible] the brokers eventually making an offer of 89. This had been accepted, as there appeared no other course open. They were losing more by paying the high rate of interest for temporary loans than the acceptance of a low figure for the bonds entailed. If there were any blame in the matter it lay at the door of the council for 1906, which had incurred the debts without seeing its way clear to pay them. In this respect, however, they were only like a great many of us, in that they could not forecast the future.

Ald. Forster, chairman of the finance committee followed. He stated that the auditor's statement was ready and open to the inspection of ratepayers. Referring to the by-laws he said that two—those for gas and water, it was absolutely necessary to pass, while he considered personally, that the passage of the $10,000 for market site was highly desirable for the building up of better relations between city and country. The $40,000 bonds for water covered a certain amount of expenditure incurred last year.

The next speaker was Ald. Huckvale, chairman of the parks committee, who said that Ald. Forster had largely cut the ground from under his feet and had expressed better than the speaker could do the reasons for voting for the market by-law. He went on to explain the nature of the work to be done on the market site in the putting up of sheds, providing of water and a small stock of hay. The small charge to be levied was calculated to pay the expenses of caretaking, and he thought would eventually pay for the outlay incurred. The Rev. Wm. Nicoll said he was thankful to see there was something doing in connection with the market site. In studying trade relations he had come to the conclusion that the railroad business had been catered for at the expense of that of the farms. He would move that "this meeting of the ratepayers of Medicine Hat heartily endorse the action of council in endeavoring to pass a by-law relating to improvements on market site and recommend the by-law to the favorable consideration of the ratepayers."

A discussion followed in which the wording of the by-laws came in for some criticism in that no mention was made of past expenditure which the proceeds of the new debentures were to cover. Mr. Benson referring to the market site by-law thought that while the provision of market accommodation was highly desirable it might with advantage be allowed to stand over until there was an improvement in the financial outlook.

Ald. Spencer briefly addressed the meeting. He believed the council of 1907 had had some very difficult questions to deal with and had done their best to cope with them and the same was true of the present council.

Mr. McCutcheon believed that the use of the word "extension" in the by-law was misleading, as a large portion of the money would be required for expenditure incurred in the past. If elected he would be in favor of economy in the city's affairs, would not represent any one body of men, would be in a position to take a stand if necessary. He was sorry that Mr. Morrow, his opponent was not present.

The resolution on the market site question was carried, Mr. Luno being the only dissentient.

Mr. Brotherton brought up the matter of gas wasted in the district. He thought the time had come when the street lights should be turned out. The present practise was false economy. He thought something should be done—though this was probably outside the sphere of the council—to put an end to the waste at Dunmore. The prodigality of workmen on the river had been a great source of loss. In reply the Mayor said the city could not afford at present to put out the lights. Ald. Forster thought it was hardly fair that the people of the city should be expected to economize when in the neighborhood gas was being wasted. The supply could only be conserved by the passage of a stringent law.

Mounted Police Notes.

Mike Maksymik, a Ruthenian, called at the Mounted Police barracks on the third of the month to ask what chances there were of his obtaining work in the city. He stated he had only five cents in his possession. The Inspector advised him to look around the town for a job, but the Ruthenian was noticed instead to take to the railroad track. As he was leaving Inspector Parker pointed him out to Constable Chalkey, and it was not long before his identification of Mike was required. That gentleman left a reputation behind him at each place he passed on the line and when a letter box was broken open at Suffield suspicion fell on him and the Mounted Police were notified. Meanwhile the globe-trotter had passed on to Tilley and here he was arrested by Constable Chalkey, who brought his prisoner down on a freight train on the evening of the 5, returning later for his horse.

Maksymik appeared before the Inspector on Friday afternoon, but as he could "no speak Engleesh" was remanded till Saturday when an interpreter was obtained. When asked if he broke open the letter-box at Suffield he exclaimed in his native tongue, "Who saw me open it?" The foreigner was a believer in the simple life, and did not wish to sully his soul with sordid toil. Briefly, his plea was that work was not in his line, did not agree with him. The Inspector banished him to one monware not drawn tightly in the contest th's unromantic labor at Lethbridge.

Corporal Humby was away last week on a long patrol.

ATHLETICS

Billy Hulen (Hamilton) for Seattle

(Seattle Times.)

All close followers of the game agreed that the Spokane team of last year did not finish as high up in the race as the strength of the club warranted. The players themselves realized this, and it was intimated that Captain Charley Swindells was too good a fellow to make the men play their best all the time. The Spokane team made more runs than any other club in the league yet finished next to last. It was composed of fast fielders and good hitters, yet could not win. Scorers all over the circuit know that some of the Spokane men thought more of a hit than they did of winning a game, and that spirit is never found on a winning club.

Manager Eddie Quinn realized the position as well as anyone, and he announced that he would have a captain this year who would fight for games and keep his men right up on their toes all the time. He has landed Bill Hulen for the job and he has surely landed a scrapper in the old timer. Bill played bang-up ball for Dugdale in 1902 in the closing weeks of the season and Dugdale was so pleased that he made Bill captain of the 1903 team. There is no denying the fact that Bill is a swell batter, a fast base runner and an intelligent inside player, but he did not have much success handling the Seattle team. That was the year of the baseball war and conditions were so unsettled that it was hard to enforce discipline on the players, but Bill has a fiery temper and he literally drove more than one man off the Seattle team. Speck Hurlburt jumped because he could not get along with Hulen. George Babbit was put down and out and Harry Lietmann was chased by Hulen.

Bill won a pennant for Ekerett a few years ago by playing a smart trick on McCloskey who was manager of the Vancouver club and the next year he dropped out of sight so completely that he was mourned as dead. Last fall, however, players coming back from the Twilight League up in Canada, reported that Bill was playing for Medicine Hat under the name of Hamilton, and that he has lost none of his old time cunning is evidenced by the fact that he was one of the best hitters in that league. It is reported that Bill is going to play first base for Spokane. He must be slowing up for second base was his favorite position, and he had few superiors playing the key stone bag. He was a shortstop on the Philadelphia club in the National league years ago, and was one of the few left handers who ever held down an infield position other than first base. He is one of the best hunters in the business and he can also hit it out when the play demands it. When he was in Seattle he used to burn up the base paths, and was one of the prettiest fielders ever seen in action here. He is no longer a kid, though the nickname "Kid" Hulen still sticks to him, so he probably is not as fast as he was when he wore a Seattle uniform. He will make the Spokane team scrap even if he has do the scrapping himself, and there will be none of that loafing that was so characteristic of the Spokane club last year.

Billy Hulen, who is to captain the Spokane team this year, has grabbed six of the best players in the Twilight league and will give the youngsters a chance this spring. Billy was captain of the Medicine Hat team in that league last year and won the pennant, so he had a good chance to look over the talent there. He has signed Worky, the champion batsman of that league; Machlin, a second baseman who was first in sacrifice hitting and second in base running; Kippert, an outfielder, who led the league in base running; Fogarty, the winning pitcher of the league, and Rogers, a promising young catcher. He has also grabbed Chandler, who was fourth in hitting. He is a first baseman, but as Billy intends to cover that bag himself, Chandler may be switched. The line-up of the Spokane team now reads something like this:

Catchers—Reniker, Ripley, Rogers and Burnstein.

Pitchers—Jensen, Killilay, Claflin, Dunn, Wright, Mallory, Osborn, Myers, Mullen, Loucks, Works, Fogarty.

Infielders—Machlin, Chandler, MacMurdo, Hamilton, Hulen, James Waters, Runkle.

Outfielders—Carney, Swain, Suess, Howell, Northrup, Works, Kippert.

HAT PLAYERS SOLD.

(Calgary Herald.)

Medicine Hat, March 7.—The management of the Medicine Hat baseball club has completed a deal with Spokane whereby Bill Hamilton (Hulen) will manage the northwestern league team in that city during the coming season. Hamilton takes with him Benny, Westcott and Totman from Medicine Hat.

The local club gets $3,500 out of the deal, $1,000 each for Hamilton, Benny and Westcott and $500 for Totman.

Manager Hamilton has already picked up Fogarty, Machlin, Kippert and Rodgers, of last season's Lethbridge team. Benny and Rodgers with one other will do the catching for Spokane. Hamilton will hold down first, Macklin second and Westcott short. James, who was with Spokane last year, is named for third bag. Fogarty will be on the pitching staff and Kippert and Totman are booked for the outfield. Managing Director Fleming of the Hat club, has been trying since the first of the year to persuade the other clubs in the western Canada league to give him a chance to place their players for them, but could make no headway. This is unfortunate as all went on the free list on March 1. Lethbridge is a good $3,000 short through not getting into line when the chance was given, as that Club gets nothing for the four men who now go to Spokane.

CITY LEAGUE.

Keen rivalry is promised this season among the amateur baseball boys in the city in the battle for the handsome Elliott trophy. The different clubs are getting together the best amateurs in the city and rattling good ball may confidently be looked for in the city Twilight League. Last year's champion organization, The Bachelors' Club, will be out stronger and better than ever and will keep the company travelling. The Y.M.C. and C.P.R. boys can also be relied upon to make a strong bid for the trophy. Much interest should be taken in the organization of this league and every baseball enthusiast in the city is requested to be present at the meeting to be called next week, date of which will be announced later.

The following letter has been received at The Times office:

"Sporting Editor of The Times,

"Lyn Truscott, who is now in Calgary seeking a match with Billy Lauder, would like to box Kid Davis in Medicine Hat if the bout could be pulled off within three weeks. Truscott was a boxer of note and has had seventy-five fights. His best wins were over Rudolf Unholz, who lately defeated George Memsic and Battling Nelson in Los Angeles; Jim Holloway, lightweight and welterweight champion of South Africa, and Hock Keys, lightweight champion of Australia. If Davis is not over-anxious anyone in the neighborhood of 138 or 140 lbs. can be accomodated. Truscott can be communicated with through Mr. Kelly, sporting editor of the Daily Herald, Calgary."

(Lethbridge News.)

The Lethbridge Athletic Association have practically abandoned all ideas of entering any professional ball league. An amateur league consisting of teams from Lethbridge, Taber, Macleod, and other southern Alberta towns is in process of formation.

Arty O'Dea, who captained the Lethbridge baseball team in the Western Canada league last season has been signed on as the playing manager of the Brandon team in the re-organized Northern League.

The N. B. Turn-Over

The complete turn-over in the New Brunswick elections has staggered the Liberal party. Even explanations are few.

A telegraphic report says: "Premier Robinson (the defeated leader) seen last night states that the result of the New Brunswick elections is explained by the fact that a succession of events contributed to influence the public."

Such a lucid explanation makes one wonder why so clear-headed a man exposed himself to such an overwhelming defeat. From a majority of 24 in the House the Liberals dropped back to a minority of 22.

No amount of explaining on the part of the defeated government can account for the defeat with credit to themselves. Premier Robinson's explanation that "a succession of events contributed" is true; and when it is considered that the succession of events is made up principally of Dominion influences, the seriousness of the result of the election to the Liberal party cannot cause any surprise.

For it was an undoubted fact that the issues were Dominion rather than Provincial—as they were at the Colchester bye-election of some months ago.

When Provincial elections take place around the time of a Dominion election, the fight is almost entirely along the larger lines, and it was so in this case. Even the big men brought in to speak for both parties were members of the Dominion House.

And herein lies the deepest significance of the defeat of the government. The two men engaged to talk the people who know them best Dominion Cabinet Ministers from the Maritime Provinces. They were the two Cabinet Ministers who have been more in the public eye recently than any others—Pugsley and Emmerson. Both these men, as has been said, come from this section. They were practically on trial for the charges made against them. And the prople who know them best turned them down so hard that their usefulness to the Dominion government is much impaired.

The stainless Emmerson, whose libel suit against a Maritime paper was dropped for evident reasons, desired another chance and he got it—and he got several other things that will make his desire much less pressing.

The new Honorable Pugsley, he of the undecided politics (or rather of the often decided politics), whose blank cartridges at the Hon. R. L. Borden made too much noise and too little destruction to suit him, wanted to go down to New Brunswick, where he felt more at home, and where he could swing his fists, get red in the face and dare any old thing that wasn't in sight. Well, he swung his fists—and hit a stone wall. His "hold me back" tactics only provoked a laugh, and nobody held him.

And, strange to say, arrayed on the Conservative side was G. W. Fowler, the man the Liberals have been trying to use as a screen to the infamous acts of their leaders—the man who exposed many of these acts, and who had to bear the brunt of the personal attacks of the government. Emmerson, Pugsley and Fowler are all better known in New Brunswick than in any place in Canada, and the "blue noses" are a pretty sensible, upright people. About these men with whom they were familiar these people expressed an opinion which lacked nothing in definiteness.

In this way they showed what they thought of the choice of the Dominion government in their Cabinet Ministers. But also the election can be taken as an expression upon the acts of the Dominion government as exposed during the present session. Coming as the election did so soon after the timber steal exposure, the original document incident, the refusal to explain a $47,000 expenditure in the department of Marine and Fisheries, must be understood as the first opportunity the people have had to show their appreciation of the work of the opposition, and their recognition of the steals of the government.

The only conclusion the Liberal government can come to is that they are losing ground every day. The bye-elections have almost all demonstrated this. Twelve years of Liberal misrule has shown just how bad a combination of men can become. As in Ontario, it is time for a change.

And the change is coming.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What a bright post-office department Canada has. A letter came to The Times the other day from the Deputy-Postmaster General, addressed to "Medicine Hat, Sask." Irvine and the other towns around are still carrying post office stamps reading "Assa." This wonderful post office department saves some millions at the expense of securing reasonable information about the things it should thoroughly know.

The Calgary Albertan Special of sixty interesting pages has been received. The production of this large number has taken a great deal of time and expense on the part of the Albertan staff and is in every respect a credit to the paper. The matter is carefully prepared and is valuable in being of wider interest than if it dealt only with local affairs.

But the title of the edition as an "Alberta" number is a slight misnomer. Only Calgary and a district within fifty miles south and a hundred miles north, and only a small part of that is treated. In an issue that attempts to aspire to the dignity of a provincial write-up there should be more than this small area. Okotoks, Calgary, Olds, Alix, Clareholm, High River, Nanton, Lacombe, Taber, Red Deer, Crossfield, Macleod, Didsbury, Stettler, Carstairs and Strathmore are a very small part of Alberta. To pick out Macleod, Taber, Clareholm, etc., in the south, and miss Lethbridge and Medicine Hat is unfortunate and looks like a thoughtful omission.

This criticism does not reflect upon the particular merits of the Special issue, which are undeniable and gladly acknowledged by The Times. However, the issue should not have been called provincial; nor is it descriptive of the Calgary district, as several towns were passed over to make room for others farther distant. And Taber, Lacombe, Stettler, Macleod and others can scarcely be included in Calgary district.

The terrible disaster in a Cleveland schoolhouse demonstrates the value of fire drill in all public schools. In Montreal not long ago a similar holocaust occurred because there was no systematic method of emptying the building. Immediately all the public schools in Ontario ordered fire drill, and within three months the value of it was demonstrated in a Toronto school, when, in a school fire not a single child was injured.

The Alberta government has done a good thing in its dying moments. Temperance legislation was demanded earlier in the session but refused. Now the House turns around and in its dying moments gives the province a step in the right direction. The time of closing bars has been brought down from 11.30 to 10 o'clock, the Saturday 7 o'clock remaining the same.

Temperance legislation has secured so much all over America that Alberta cannot show herself the only one to deny the demand.

The Dominion Fair at Calgary promises to be one of much importance. That city is making elaborate preparations and with the government grant there is no reason why a great advertisement should not accrue to the country.

In this advertising Medicine Hat might have a share. Lethbridge city council has appropriated $2,000 towards a Lethbridge exhibit, and this city has an opportunity of making itself much more widely known by the same means. We could do a lot by the showing of grains at our disposal—an exhibit that would dispel the peculiar ideas many people have of this district.

But with the ordinary exhibits something spectacular is required to attract attention. And in this Medicine Hat has unparalleled opportunities.

Now that it has been demonstrated that our natural gas can be tanked and used for lighting purposes at any distance The Times would suggest that we adopt this means of securing an unique exhibit. The gas tanks could be expressed to the exhibition as often as needed and the gas could be kept burning all the time, with an announcement of the source of the light. It is safe to say that no more unique exhibit would be at the Fair.

The expense would not be great and we have a publicity commissioner who could engineer the affair.

Oswald Smyth, editor of the Swift Current Sun, has given up his paper for his law practise. To succeed him comes one of the former proprietors of the Moose Jaw News, T. R. McMillan. To Mr. McMillan The Times offers its best wishes, and is glad to have him nearer the only part of the west.

Within the past month The Times has received about two solid columns of matter from the Alberta government, which we were asked to print without charge to the government. Not one cents' worth of advertising accompanied it, nor has the government spent a cent in this paper in three months. As a matter of fact The Times has not been paid enough money in the last year to pay for more than a quarter of the free matter it has been asked to publish within the past month. And when this same matter which this paper was supposed to publish free appears as a paid advertisement in the Edmonton Bulletin, we wonder at the gall of the officials who ask it.

The information we were asked to publish was concerning the seed grain supplies. While this is of some importance The Times considers that the newspapers can scarcely be expected to bear all the expense in connection with the publicity of it, especially when the graft journal of Edmonton, which is already pulling $20,000 a year out of the government is paid for the space it devotes to the question.

All last year The Times willingly published everything sent by the government, but the limit has been reached. The government that can pay a little over $47,000 to The Bulletin in a little over two years, and only $11,000 to all the other printing offices and papers in Alberta, is not going to have The Times on its free list. We do not object to helping out the government and the people if others do the same, and if the government shows that it is trying to save consistently but The Times is not going to help out the Alberta government in order to give it more money to turn over to The Bulletin. Any we're not blaming The Bulletin to any great extent.

Nearly all of them have been subject to croup, and that's when I find Coltsfoote Expectorant useful. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you wish."

"HIPPO" JOHNSTON CAUGHT IN STATES.

(Lethbridge News.)

"Hippo" Johnson, whose escape from Macleod barracks four years ago caused a sensation at the time, has been arrested at Great Falls. It will be remembered that Hippo was charged with butchering cattle that didn't belong to him and disposing of them through a meat market in Macleod.. When arrested he made the crack that if he was sent down to Stony Mountain "he would not go alone." It was suspected that a number of prominent men in Macleod and district were "in" with Hippo in his nefarious business and that if brought to trial he would give them away. While in the barracks awaiting trial Hippo climbed through the transom of the room in which he was confined and was reported to have overcome the guard who was asleep; but the general opinion in Macleod at the time was that the guard had been "got at" by those who were implicated with Hippo and whom he had threatened to "give away."

Anyhow he escaped from the barracks and procuring a horse got safely across the line and all trace of him was lost. He was, however, reported to have been seen in Macleod last summer..

Hippo was arrested several months ago and is strenuously fighting extradition. He has retained a firm of lawyers reckoned to be one of the best in Montana and is out on bonds of under $500.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

At that moment the door opened and there entered a complex odor of hair wash and perfumery—a collar which must have been nearly related to a cuff, and a pair of tight patent leather boots, all attached to and somewhat overpowering a young man.

"Ah, my dear Mr. Grubb," said Lady Cantourne, "how good of you to call so soon! You will have some tea. Millicent, give Mr. Grubb some tea."

Then Lady Cantourne went to the conservatory and left Sir John and Jocelyn at the end of the long room together. There is nothing like a woman's instinct. Jocelyn spoke at once.

"Lady Cantourne," she said, "kindly asked me to meet you today on purpose. I live at Loango; I know your son, Mr. Meredith, and we thought you might like to hear about him and about Loango."

"Yes," he said, with a strange hesitation, "yes, you are kind. Of course I am interested. I wonder," he went on, with a sudden change of manner—"I wonder how much you know."

"I know," she answered, "that you have had a difference of opinion—but no one else knows! You must not think that Mr. Meredith has spoken of his private affairs to any one else. The circumstances were exceptional, and Mr. Meredith thought that it was due to me to give me an explanation."

Sir John looked a little puzzled, and Jocelyn went on rather hastily to explain:

"My brother and Mr. Meredith were at Eton together. They met somewhere up the coast and my brother asked Mr. Meredith to come and stay. It happened that Maurice was away when Mr. Meredith arrived, and I did not know who he was, so he explained."

"I see," said Sir John; "and you and your brother have been kind to my boy. And I dare say," he added, with a somewhat lame attempt at cynicism, "that you have heard no good of me?"

But Jocelyn would have none of that. She was no child to be abashed by sarcasm, but a woman, completed and perfected by her love.

"Excuse me," she said sharply, "but that is not the truth, and you know it. You know as well as I do that your son would never say a word against you."

Sir John was looking at her keenly, his hard blue eyes like steel between the lashless lids.

"You disquiet me," he said. "I have a sort of feeling that you have bad news to tell me."

"No," she answered, "not exactly. But it seems to me that no one realizes what he is doing out in Africa—what risks he is running."

"Tell me," he said, drawing in his chair. "I will not interrupt you. Tell me all you know from beginning to end. I am naturally somewhat interested."

So Jocelyn told him. And what she said was only a recapitulation of facts known to such as have followed these pages to this point. Suddenly he broke into the narrative. He saw, keen old worldling that he was, a discrepancy.

"But," he said, "there was no one in Loango connected with the scheme who"—he paused, touching her sleeve with a bony finger—"who sent the telegram home to young Oscard; the telegram calling him out to Jack's relief?"

"Oh," she explained lightly, "I did. My brother was away, so there was no one else to do it, you see."

"Yes, I see."

And perhaps he did.

Sir John took his leave. He bowed over Jocelyn's hand, and Millicent, watching them keenly, could see nothing—no gleam of a mutual understanding in the politely smiling eyes.

"Perhaps," he said, "I may have the pleasure of meeting you again?"

"I am afraid it is doubtful," she answered, with something that sounded singularly like exultation in her voice. "We are going back to Africa almost at once."

And she, also, took her leave of Lady Cantourne.

* * * * * * *

One afternoon Joseph had his wish. Moreover, he had it given to him even as he desired, which does not usually happen. We are given a part, or the whole, so distorted that we fail to recognize it.

Joseph looked up from his work and saw Jocelyn coming into the bungalow garden.

He went out to meet her, putting on his coat as he went.

"How is Mr. Meredith?" she asked at once. Her eyes were very bright and there was a sort of breathlessness in her manner which Joseph did not understand.

"He is a bit better, miss, thank you kindly. But he don't make the progress I should like. It's the weakness that follows the malarial attack that the doctor has to fight against."

"Where is he?" asked Jocelyn.

"Well, miss, at the moment he is in the drawing room. We bring him down there for the change of air in the afternoon. Likely as not, he's asleep."

And presently Jack Meredith, lying comfortably somnolent on the outskirts of life, heard light footsteps, but hardly heeded them. He knew that some one came into the room and stood silently by his couch for some seconds. He lazily unclosed his eyelids for a moment, not in order to see who was there, but with a view of intimating that he was not asleep. But he was not wholly conscious. To men accustomed to an active, energetic life a long illness is nothing but a period of complete rest. In his more active moments Jack Meredith sometimes thought that this rest of his was extending into a dangerously long period, but he was too weak to feel anxiety about anything.

Jocelyn moved away and busied herself noiselessly with one or two of those small duties of the sickroom which women see and men ignore. But she could not keep away. She came back and stood over him with a silent sense of possession which made that moment one of the happiest of her life. She remembered it in after years, and the complex feelings of utter happiness and complete misery that filled it.

At last a fluttering moth gave the excuse her heart longed for, and her fingers rested for a moment, light as the moth itself, upon his hair. There was something in the touch which made him open his eyes, uncomprehending at first, and then filled with a sudden life.

"Ah!" he said, "you—you at last!"

He took her hand in both of his. He was weakened by illness and a great fatigue. Perhaps he was off his guard or only half awake.

"I never should have got better if you had not come," he said. Then suddenly he seemed to recall himself, and rose with an effort from his recumbent position.

"I do not know," he said with a return of his old half humorous manner, "whether to thank you first for your hospitality or to beg your pardon for making such unscrupulous use of it."

"Sit down," she said quietly. "You are not strong enough to stand about."

He obeyed her with a little laugh.

"You do not know," he said, "how pleasant it is to see you, fresh and English looking. It is like a tonic. Where is Maurice?"

"He will be here soon," she replied. "He is attending to the landing of the stores. We will soon make you strong and well, for we have come laden with cases of delicacies for your special delectation. Your father chose them himself."

"We did not expect you for another ten days," said Meredith after a little pause, as if anxious to change the subject. "Marie said that your brother's leave was not up until the week after next."

"We do not always take our full term," said she vaguely.

And he never saw it.

"As a matter of fact," she said lightly, "I suppose that you loathe all food?"

"Loathe it," he replied. He was still looking at her, as if in enjoyment of the English ness and freshness of which he had spoken. "Simply loathe it. All Joseph's tact and patience are required to make me eat even eleven meals in the day. He would like thirteen."

At this moment Maurice came in—Maurice—hearty, eager, full of life. He blustered in, kicking the furniture, throwing his own vitality into the atmosphere. Jocelyn knew that he liked Jack Meredith, and she knew more. She knew, namely, that Maurice Gordon was a different man when Jack Meredith was in Loango. From Meredith's presence he seemed to gather a sense of security and comfort even as she did—a sense which in herself she understood (for women analyze love), but which in her brother puzzled her.

"Well, old chap," said Maurice, "glad to see you. I am glad to see you. Thank heaven you were bowled over by that confounded malaria, for otherwise we should have missed you."

"That is one way of looking at it," answered Meredith. But he did not go so far as to say that it was a way which had not previously suggested itself to him.

"Of course it is. The best way, I take it. Well, how do you feel?"

"Oh, much better, thanks. I have got on splendidly the last week, and better still the last five minutes! The worst of it is that I shall be getting well too soon and shall have to be off."

"Home?" inquired Maurice significantly.

Jocelyn moved uneasily.

"Yes, home."

"We don't often hear people say that they are sorry to leave Loango," said Maurice.

"I will oblige you whenever you are taken with the desire," answered Jack lightly. "Loango has been a very good friend to me. But I am afraid there is no choice. The doctor speaks very plain words about it. Besides, I am bound to go home."

"To sell the simiacine?" inquired Maurice.

"Yes."

"Have you the second crop with you?"

"Yes."

"And the trees have improved under cultivation?"

"Yes," answered Jack rather wonderingly. "You seem to know a lot about it."

"Of course I do," replied Maurice boisterously.

"From Durnovo?"

"Yes; he even offered to take me into partnership."

Jack turned on him in a flash.

"Did he indeed? On what conditions?"

And then, when it was too late, Maurice saw his mistake. It was not the first time that the exuberance of his nature had got him into a difficulty.

"Oh, I don't know," he replied vaguely. "It's a long story. I'll tell you about it some day."

Jack would have left it there for the moment. Maurice Gordon had made his meaning quite clear by glancing significantly toward his sister. Her presence he intimated debarred further explanation.

But Jocelyn would not have it thus. She shrewdly suspected the nature of the bargain proposed by Durnovo, and a sudden desire possessed her to have it all out.

"If you mean," she said, "that you cannot tell Mr. Meredith because I am here, you need not hesitate on that account."

Maurice laughed awkwardly and muttered something about matters of business. He was not good at this sort of thing. Besides, there was the initial handicapping knowledge that Jocelyn was so much cleverer than himself.

"Whether it is a matter of business or not," she cried, with glittering eyes, "I want you to tell Mr. Meredith now. He has a right to know. Tell him upon what condition Mr. Durnovo proposed to admit you into the simiacine."

Maurice still hesitated, bewildered, at a loss, such as men are when a seemingly secure secret is suddenly discovered to the world. He would still have tried to fend it off, but Jack Meredith with his keener perception saw that

"Did he indeed? On what conditions?"

Jocelyn was determined; that further delay would only make the matter worse.

"If your sister wants it," he said, "you had better tell me. I am not the sort of man to act rashly on the impulse of the moment."

Still Maurice tried to find some means of evasion.

"Then," cried Jocelyn, with flaming cheeks, "I will tell you. You were to be admitted into the simiacine scheme by Mr. Durnovo if you could persuade or force me to marry him."

None of them had foreseen this. It had come about so strangely, and yet so easily, in the midst of their first greetings.

"Yes," admitted Maurice, "that was it."

"And what answer did you give?" asked Jocelyn.

"Oh, I told him to go and hang himself—or words to that effect," was the reply, delivered with a deprecating laugh.

"Was that your final answer?" pursued Jocelyn, inexorable. Her persistence surprised Jack. Perhaps it surprised herself.

"Yes, I think so."

"Are you sure?"

"Well, he cut up rough and threatened to make things disagreeable; so I think I said that it was no good his asking me to do anything in the matter, as I didn't know your feelings."

"Well, you can tell him," cried Jocelyn hotly, "that never, under any circumstances whatever, would I dream, even of the possibility of marrying him."

And she was gone.

CHAPTER XIX.

FEEL like gettin' up to breakfast, do you, sir?" said Joseph to his master a few days later. "Well, I am glad. Glad ain't quite the word, though!"

And he proceeded to perform the duties attendant on his master's wardrobe with a wise, deep seated shake of the head. While setting the shaving necessaries in order on the dressing table, he went further—he winked gravely at himself in the looking glass.

"You've made wonderful progress the last few days, sir," he remarked. "I always told Missis Marie that it would do you a lot of good to have Mr. Gordon to heart you up with his cheery ways—and Miss Gordon, too, sir."

"Yes, but they would not have been much good without all your care before they came. I had turned the corner a week ago—I felt it myself."

Joseph grinned—an honest, open grin of self satisfaction. He was not one of those persons who like their praise bestowed with subtlety.

"Wonderful!" he repeated to himself, as he went to the well in the garden for his master's bath water. "Wonderful! But I don't understand things—not bein' a marryin' man."

During the last few days Jack's progress had been rapid enough even to satisfy Joseph. The doctor expressed himself fully reassured and even spoke of returning no more. But he repeated his wish that Jack should leave for England without delay.

"He is quite strong enough to be moved now," he finished by saying. "There is no reason for further delay."

"No," answered Jocelyn, to whom the order was spoken. "No, none. We will see that he goes by the next boat."

Jocelyn entered the drawing room with a smile. She met Jack at the door.

"The doctor is pleased with your progress," she said. "He does not seem to want to see you any more, and he told me to be inhospitable. He told me to turn you out. You are to leave by the next steamer."

"This is no joking matter," he said, half seriously. "The worst of it is that you seem rather pleased."

"I am—at the thought that you are so much better." She paused and turned quite away, busying herself with a pile of books and magazines. "The other," she went on too indifferently, "was unfortunately to be foreseen. It is the necessary drawback."

He rose suddenly and walked to the window. It was she who spoke at last.

"He also said," she observed in a practical way, "that you must not come out to Africa again."

He turned as if he had been stung.

"Did he make use of that particular word?" he asked.

"What particular word?"

"Must."

Jocelyn had not foreseen the possibility that the doctor was merely repeating to her what he had told Jack on a previous visit.

"No," she answered. "I think he said 'better not.'"

"However," she added, "you can decide when you get home."

He laughed.

"The least pleasant part of it is," he said, "your evident desire to see the last of me. Could you not disguise that a little, just for the sake of my feelings?"

"Book your passage by the next boat and I will promptly descend to the lowest depths of despair," she replied lightly.

"I wonder," he said slowly, "if you are doing this for a purpose. You said that you met my father"—

"Your father is not the man to ask any one's assistance in his own domestic affairs, and anything I attempted to do could only be looked upon as the most unwarrantable interference."

"Yes," said Meredith seriously. "I beg your pardon. You are right."

He went to his own room and summoned Joseph.

"When is the next boat home?" he asked.

"Boat on Thursday, sir."

Meredith nodded. After a little pause he pointed to a chair.

"Just sit down," he said. "I want to talk over this simiacine business with you."

Joseph squared his shoulders and sat down, with a face indicative of the gravest attention. Sitting thus he was no longer a servant, but a partner in the simiacine. He even indulged in a sidelong jerk of the head, as if requesting the attention of some absent friend in a humble sphere of life to this glorious state of affairs.

"You know," said Meredith, "Mr. Durnovo is more or less a blackguard."

Joseph drew in his feet, having previously drawn his trousers up at the knees.

"Yes, sir," he said, glancing up.

"He wants continual watching and a special treatment. He requires some one constantly at his heels."

"Yes, sir," admitted Joseph, with some fervor.

"Now I am ordered home by the doctor," went on Meredith. "I must go by the next boat, but I don't like to go and leave Mr. Oscard in the lurch, with no one to fall back upon but Durnovo, you understand."

Joseph's face had assumed the habitual look of servitude. He was no longer a partner, but a mere retainer, with a half comic resignation in his eyes.

"Yes, sir," scratching the back of his neck. "I am afraid I understand. You want me to go back to that platter, that God forsaken platter, as I may say."

"Yes," said Meredith; "that is about it. I would go myself"—

"God bless you, I know you would!" burst in Joseph. "You'd go like winkin'. There's no one knows that better nor me, sir, and what I says is, 'like master, like man.' Game, sir; game it is! I'll go. I'm not the man to turn my back on a pal, a—a partner, sir, so to speak."

"You see," said Meredith, with the deep insight into men that made command so easy to him—"you see there is no one else. There is not another man in Africa who could do it."

"That's true, sir."

"And I think that Mr. Oscard will be looking for you."

"And he won't need to look long, sir. But I should like to see you safe on board the boat; then I'm ready to go."

"Right. We can both leave by Thursday's boat, and we'll get the captain to drop you and your men at Lopez. We can get things ready by then," I think."

"Easy, sir."

The question thus settled, there seemed to be no necessity to prolong the interview. But Joseph did not move. Meredith waited patiently.

"I'll go up, sir, to the platter," said the servant at length, "and I'll place myself under Mr. Oscard's orders; but before I go I want to give you notice of resignation. I resigns my partnership in this 'ere simiacine at six months from today. It's a bit too hot, sir, that's the truth. It's all very well for gentlemen like yourself and Mr. Oscard, with fortunes and fine houses, and, as sayin' goes, a wife apiece waiting for you at home—it's all very well for you to go about in this blamed country with yer life in yer hand, and not a tight grip at that. But for a poor soldier man like myself, what has smelt the regulation powder all 'is life, and hasn't got nothing to love and no gal waiting for him at home—well, it isn't good enough. That's what I say, sir, with respects."

DAYLIGHT SERVICE.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

It is likely that this spring the C.P.R. will operate a local passenger train between Medicine Hat and Cranbrook and from Cranbrook to Medicine Hat. These trains will pass through Lethbridge in the daytime, the westbound about 11 o'clock in the morning, and the eastbound about three o'clock in the afternoon. No definite announcement has been made of this fact, but the Herald secured its information from a very good source. It is also understood that the Spokane Flyers will be running again about the first of April.

Salvation Army Praise

"I feel it my duty to testify to the benefit I have received from the use of Psychine. While travelling in New Ontario conducting special meetings I contracted a very bad cold, which gradually developed into Bronchitis of the worst form. I was advised to try Psychine, which I did, and after using but a few bottles I was completely restored to health. I recommend this wonderful remedy to sufferers from Bronchitis and other troubles."

Later: "I wish to add that my voice since using Psychine, is stronger and has much more carrying power than it had before I had bronchitis, and the vocal chords do not tire with speaking."

The Times for Job Printing

Rotation Vs. One-Crop Farming

By Director P. A. Yoder, Utah Experiment Station.

Whether the new hypothesis of toxical excretions of plants into the soil set up by the Department of Soils of the United States Department of Agriculture, or whether the theory of the exhaustion of available plant food is the true explanation of the cause of the infertility resulting from continually planting the same crop, it is agreed by all parties in the controversy that it stands the farmer in hand to rotate his crops wherever possible if he has any regard for the future productiveness of his farm. In the investigations of the Bureau of Soils they found differences in the productiveness of soils which could not be explained on the basis of differences in the data from chemical analyses. They also found cases in which the soil in small wire basket spots became productive by treatment in other ways than by adding "plant food." These facts could apparently be explained satisfactorily by assuming that the infertile soil contained some plant poisons and that these poisons were destroyed or rendered inactive by the treatment referred to. Extending this hypothesis to soils rendered infertile by continuous cropping, the bureau raises the question whether this is not to be accounted for by supposing that the crop secretes such a plant poison during its growth, that this poison is not necessarily a poison to some other crop of a different nature, and that it gradually disappears while the other crop grows or while the land is fallowed. Chemists for the last fifty years and at the present time very generally account for the benefit derived from rotation by assuming that different crops have different feeding power, and that plant food which is unavailable to one crop may be available to another of a somewhat different nature, and that food which is at one time not available to a particular crop may become available in course of a year or so, while the land is fallowed or used for other crops.

Both these explanations are based on assumptions which have not yet been satisfactorily proved, and it need not concern the practical farmer much which the scientists will ultimately prove correct, or whether they will prove both false. The fact remains that judicious rotation is exceedingly helpful in keeping up the fertility of the soil, and until further investigations shed new light on the cause of the running down of fertility and lead us to cheaper and more effective means than we know for restoring the fertility, the rotation of crops should remain one of the main means of keeping up fertility. As practical farmers we welcome the investigations and encourage the theorizing by those in position to carry them on in hope that new principles will be evolved that will lead to better practises, but meanwhile we will protect our interests by using on our farms the best practises now known to keep up the fertility. We will certainly not want to get so enthusiastic over this new speculation on plant poisons in the soil as to assign to such poisons the blame for infertility generally, and assume that the soil has an inexhaustible supply of plant food which needs no replenishing. If we value our farm and care for future prosperity, we will not rest content with rotation and good cultivation, but we will take means of restoring to the soil the plant food harvested off with the crop. In most cases we will combine some form of stock-raising with field cropping and return to the land the manure produced. We know of no way of farming that will succeed indefinitely without taking means to restore to the land plant food. In dry farming the fertility will doubtless hold out longer than under irrigation or in humid regions, because there is not the excessive water supply to leach out of the soil into the drainage some of the plant food, nor is the soil continually in the moist condition so favorable to the decomposition processes which render soluble the plant food constituents of the soil. We cannot hope, however, that even in dry farming we can forever succeed without any attention to keeping up the fertility, and it is to be hoped that the experiment stations or the department of agriculture will discover the most practical means of restoring fertility in dry land agriculture by the time the farms now under cultivation need it.

WEAK TIRED WOMEN

How many women there are that get no refreshment from sleep. They wake in the morning and feel tireder than when they went to bed. They have a dizzy sensation in the head, the heart palpitates; they are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and the lightest household duties during the day seem to be a drag and a burden.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

are the very remedy that weak, nervous, tired out, sickly women need to restore them the blessings of good health.

They give sound, restful sleep, tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart, and make rich blood. Mrs. C. McDonald, Portage la Prairie, Man., writes: "I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and weak spells. I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking them I was completely cured.

Relative Prices in London and Winnipeg.

It happened in the early spring of last year that a country youth "fra Glasgie" was attracted to Winnipeg by the prospect of earning double the salary that his services could command in the land of his forbears. On reaching the city he sought the nearest barber to have the stains of travel removed, and after enjoying the luxury of a shave, hair cut, singe and shampoo, was so thunderstruck at getting back no change for the dollar bill he tendered that he took the next train back to his native shores. The incident is sufficiently amusing, but at the same time it cannot be denied that a succession of similar experiences have gone far to confirm a very mistaken impression which obtains largely among people who have not troubled to examine the question thoroughly. The impression given by the relation of such stories is one that is distinctly adverse to the interests of western Canada; and, as was pointed out by one of the British journalists who were in Winnipeg some months back. No figures have been published that give an accurate comparison between the relative purchasing powers of a dollar in Winnipeg and of its equivalent sum in London. Hence it happens that prevalent ideas on the subject are largely biased by the hastily-formed and inaccurate impressions gained by new-comers on their first arrival in the city. The three first requirements of the average traveller just off the cars are a drink, a shave and a boot shine. In London these would cost from 5d to 8d—ten to sixteen cents. In Winnipeg they will cost him from 35 to 40 cents; and when he has to pay 5 cents for the newspaper that he gets for 1 cent in London, our traveller has reached the conclusion that every thing here is just three times the old country prices. He discusses the point presently with a casual acquaintance, who is pretty sure to tell him that in Winnipeg a dollar is regarded much in the same light as a shilling in the old country as far as necessitates a close scrutiny of weekly bills in order to make both ends meet, and to save a little each week for the family stocking.

Such a one would be in receipt of a salary of $45 or so a week in Winnipeg, or £6 a week in London. For the purposes of our calculation we have before us the August price lists of three large departmental stores in London and also the current prices of several Winnipeg stores.

The results arrived at are summarized in the two subjoined tables, the first giving the comparative purchasing powers of a dollar in Winnipeg and in London, while the second gives, item by item, the weekly expenditure of such a small household as we have indicated, comparing the cost of living in the two cities. The average ratio deduced from this table will give a very fair and approximate solution to the problem we are attempting.

As it is improbable that the salaried individual we are using as an example will be the owner of his own house, the first outlay to be considered is the rent. A small suburban house in a decent London suburb would cost £40 or so a year, and a similar residence in Winnipeg will make a hole of about $7 a week in his stipend. We shall see that the purchasing power of our dollar sustains its purchasing power is concerned. It is the experience of the writer that nine out of every ten Britishers located in this neighborhood will affirm that a dollar is worth half a crown or less in comparisn with what it would purchase in London. They would have you believe in short the cost of living in Winnipeg is about double what it is over there; and that though a man may easily double his salary by coming out, he will still be no better off than at home.

To treat the question from the scientific economic standpoint it would be necessary to express all values in terms of their logical unit, which is the purchasing power of one man's labor for an hour, but it is the purpose of this article to fix as accurately as possible, a definite ratio between the cost of living in Winnipeg and in London, and incidentally to establish a definite value for the purchasing power of the dollar in terms of £ s d so ignoring the question as to whether salaries are 100 per cent., more or less higher here than in England, we shall take the weekly expenditure of two families, one in Winnipeg, the other in London—families whose position is similar in the social scale—middle class householders, whose income tains a heavy drop over this item. being only equivalent to 2s. 3d. (57c.) But the Londoner has a heavier outlay to face for rates and taxes than his Winnipeg cousin. The former is lucky if municipal and imperial collectors are content to relieve him of less than 7s. 6d. a week on the average, while the system in vogue here throws so large a proportion of the rates on the shoulders of the landlord, that a weekly payment of 75 cents should cover all outgoings under this head.

In compiling the average weekly food bills, current prices have been adopted, since such fluctuations as the seasons bring will fairly counterbalance each other, and the average is not likely to so alter as to upset the ratio established. There has been a great to-do of late about the price of butchers' meat in Winnipeg, but on comparing Winnipeg with London prices we find that on the whole, the thrifty housekeeper can supply her family for less outlay than she could in the old country. The London consumer can certainly buy joints of American and Australian meat at prices a shade beneath Winnipeg prices, but the truth of the matter is that very few consumers come to buy foreign meat if they can possibly afford home-grown and English-fed meat rules some ten per cent. higher than butchers are asking here. But we will assume that an occasional joint of New Zealand lamb or a American sirloin graces the London er's table, and by that means we shall find the account balances fairly especially on both sides, with a very slight leaning in favor of Winnipeg. Probably a dollar here would make a good showing in the butcher's shop as would 4s 6d in London.

For poultry we pay more. A pair of chickens costing $1.50 could be bought for 5s 6d in London. From the poultry point of view then the dollar in Manitoba is worth 3s 0d. The average prices of dairy products will be slightly higher than on the other side; a dollar's worth of eggs butter and cheese would cost a Londoner only 3s 10d. All bread stuffs and nearly all groceries cost very much the same in both cities—imported pickles and preserves and all imported canned goods being exceptions, since these will be found quite 30 per cent. dearer than in the old country. The Winnipeg housekeeper will only get the same quantity of these articles of consumption for her dollar, as the Londoner will obtain for 3s 3d (78c).

A few figures illustrating the following discussion are printed below in tabular form, and it will appear that the average weekly expenses of such a household as we have been engaged with will amount to $29.75 in Winnipeg and £4 12s 10d in London. By a simple calculation we establish the ratio between the value of a dollar spent in Winnipeg and in London to be $1.00; 3s 1½d or 10c 75c.

Table 1—Showing the purchasing powers of a dollar in Winnipeg and the corresponding amount in London:

	In Winnipeg.	In London.
For rent	1 00	2s. 3d.
For meat	1 00	4s. 6d.
For poultry	1 00	3s. 6d.
For dairy produce	1 00	3s. 10d.
For fish	1 00	3s. 4d.
Breadstuffs and groceries	1 00	4s. 2d.
Preserves, pickles and imported tinned goods	$1 00	3s. 3d.
Fruit and vegetables	1 00	2s. 6d.
Alcoholic drinks	1 00	2s. 6d.
Fuel and light	1 00	2s. 4d.
Wages	1 00	2s. 1d.
Drugs, &c.	1 00	3s. 6d.
Furniture	1 00	3s. 6d.
Wages	1 00	2s.
Clothing	1 00	3s. 6

Table 2—Relative weekly expenditure of a wage-earning family in Winnipeg and in London:

	In Winnipeg.	In London.
A rental of	$7 00	12s. 6d.
Rates and taxes	75	7s. 6d.
Butchers' bills	2 50	11s. 3d.
Fish	50	1s. 8d.
Bread, &c.	1 00	4s. 2d.
Dairy produce	1 00	3s. 10d.
Preserves, pickles, &c.	75	2s. 6d.
Other groceries	2 00	8s. 4d.
Alcoholic drinks	1 00	2s. 6d.
Fuel and lighting	75	2s.
Fruit and vegetables	4 00	3s. 4d.
Wages	1 00	2s. 1d.
Drugs and toilet requisites	50	1s. 9d.
Interest on furniture	1 00	3s. 6d.
Clothing	6 00	£1 1s.
Total weekly expenses	$29 75	£4 12s 10d.

The above tables, based on a careful comparison of current prices, and on the outgoing of the average family of four or five persons gives as a result the incontrovertible fact that a dollar in Winnipeg possesses a purchasing power of 3s 1½d (75c) when compared with old country values.

They furthermore tend to show that the man who can save 30s a week in London, is able, owing to the vastly higher rate of salaries in western Canada, to live in much the same style as he did at home, and to save $15.00, or rather more than £3 a week.

If these comparisons and calculations serve to eradicate a small proportion of the injurious and erroneous ideas that have been promulgated with regard to the cost of living and the relative value of the currency in this country, the labor of compiling them will not have been altogether thrown away.

EH, MR. BOK?—There was not even standing-room in the six o'clock crowded car, but one more passenger, a young woman, wedged her way along just inside the doorway. Each time the car took a sudden lurch forward she fell helplessly back, and three times she landed in the arms of a large, comfortable man on the back platform. The third time it happened he said quietly, "Hadn't you better stay here?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Habits of the Tarantula.

(By C. E. Hutchison, Scientific American.)

The great tarantula of the southwestern part of the United States, like many another poisonous creature, as well as some that are quite harmless, is much maligned. It is not aggressive upon man, nor is it often intrusive, though many an old miner or prospector has shaken the dirt out of his blankets or boots in the morning. Strange to say, tarantulas thus dislodged are usually "the size of a saucer."

It is often stated that the spider basks about in the sunshine on the hot sands of the desert, but in reality it avoids sunshine when it is hot, and remains well down in its burrow in the ground. About sundown it comes up to the opening and lies in wait just below the surface. It assumes this position whether it desires food or wishes only to get a bit of fresh air. It does not travel about in quest of food, even when hungry, but remains quietly in the attitude described, often for hours at a time. At the near approach of a caterpillar, grasshopper, beetle, or almost any creature of like size, other than its enemy the wasp, it rushes out and seizes it, but rarely goes farther than a few inches from the opening. Should the prey, when first arrested, simulate death, which often is the case, since usually it is not at once wounded, the spider, unless it is very hungry, remains quiet until the insect moves, when the needle-pointed fangs are thrust into it. By pausing, it learns the nature of the object seized. The spider then retreats with it into its burrow, to eat, where the prey is ground up by the powerful mandibles, and the liquid portion, upon which the spider subsists, is sucked out. One fair-sized insect a week is sufficient to satisfy its hunger, because of its inactive existence, while it can live several months without food, even when most active, provided it has water. The spider will fight and destroy its own kind, but when equally matched the combatants spar for an advantage and rarely clinch unless one relinquishes its vigilance, when the other buries its fangs in it. It does not then relinquish its hold until the helpless captive dies of paralysis, induced by the poison injected. Death results in ten or twenty minutes. There are approximately seven or eight females to each male. The adult males are highly energetic and, unlike their phlegmatic mates, cannot be kept long in confinement. They wear themselves out in ceaseless endeavor to escape. This striking degree of activity is an essential attribute, since the females live often remote from one another and take no initiative in the courtship.

The tarantula does not dig its own tunnel. It takes possession of some deserted burrow, usually that of a pocket gopher, which to the adult spider seems highly satisfactory. These burrows run, for the most part, horizontally, but the spider enters through a short vertical shaft. The burrows are two or three inches in diameter, but the spider at once restricts the entrance nearly to the diameter of its own body. It does this in a singular and interesting manner, affording a striking example illustrating the wide resourcefulness of lowly creatures. The spinnerets are two flexible and movable processes upon the under side of which are long rows of pores from which the silk is drawn out in a multiplicity of frail threads. With these organs, free particles of earth on the floor of the burrow are covered with a frail gauze which is then wadded together, along with much of the loose earth, which adheres to it. The wad is then carried up and pressed against the vertical wall, where it adheres, when it is further secured in place with more silk. The wads may be a half inch in diameter and often many are required to finish the task.

In autumn, the spider closes the entrance completely in this manner, frequently using a large quantity of material. It is then ready to pass the winter in a semi-lethargic state, partaking of no food. In the spring it digs its way out. If the burrow is still in good condition it is cleaned, the refuse being placed in a circle not to make the opening of the abode conspicuous. If the burrow proves untenable another one is sought at once. There is evidence tending to show that the spider does not seek another habitation as long as the old one is suited to its needs; and quite often a number have been found that had lived at least three years in one place, judging by the number of discarded skins of suggestive size found in the burrow. During the growth of the tarantula, which requires about twenty years, it sheds its entire skin once each year—in midsummer. The event is an important one to the spider, and as it is then quite helpless, the entrance is previously closed, a sheet of silk drawn across it sufficing.

In June two or three hundred eggs are produced in a mass which is at once covered with silk. The tunnel, unlike that of the trap-door spider, is not lined with silk; therefore to guard the eggs against contamination, while they are uncovered, the spider first incloses itself in a silk bag, sufficiently large to allow it to turn around freely. I think that this feature has not before been described. The discovery was made by watching spiders in captivity, numerous brief inspections having been made at suitable intervals. The subject's aversion to light and to being disturbed at this period is quite apparent, and any prolonged or too frequent inspection causes it to abandon the task, so the entire operation cannot be learned from a single spider. Unless it is captured without a few days of the time that the cocoon is to be made, the spider makes no effort whatever to preserve the eggs. The large envelope inclosing the spider is quite frail, but its distension is insured by attachments to the wall of the burrow; and while it is very thin, it is so closely woven that the finest dust is excluded. The floor of this silken cell is raised a little above the floor of the burrow. Soon after the egg mass is properly inclosed in its covering, the fabric inclosing the spider is torn away. The finished cocoon is over an inch in diameter and shaped like a depressed globe. The young emerge from the cocoon in mid-summer and, after shedding their skins, are found to be divested of it during the su domicile, see but in autumn they leave, one by one, each seeking some hole suited to its size, which it proceeds to clean out and barricade in conventional manner. Nature will favor, two perhaps, out of the many hundreds, and protect them until they die of old age, at the end of twenty-five or thirty years.

I was advised by a friend to try Burdock Blood Bitters and to my great surprise, after taking two bottles, I was so perfectly cured that I have not had a sign of Dyspepsia since. Great Immigratio Rush Begun

...(Montreal Star.)

Nearly twenty-five hundred immigrants have passed through Montreal in the past two days bound for the Canadian West, and it may be said that the 1908 rush is now on, for the officials say that the immigrants are the forerunners of many more and that the next few months will see a very large number of people comin into Canada from European countries, and that the present indications are that the record of former years, large as it was, will be surpassed by the immense number of settlers that are coming over to Canada this year.

For the past few months the tide of travel has been mostly the other way, and the number of people going back to Europe has been larger than those comine to the newer country. The arrival of the Empress of Ireland on Saturday at St. John, New Brunswick, marked the turning point however, and since that boat came in three more have arrived, all bringing a large complement of people seeking homes in the great Canadian West.

The Empress of Ireland brought in all, over twelve hundred passengers. The saloon passengers that left the boat at Halifax, arrived in Montreal on Saturday, but they were only a small part of the total number, and only twenty-two were on the Over-Seas Mail when it arrived here. Yesterday, however, there were several specials from St. John and as fast as the people arrived here they were sent right through to the west. Two special trains went out yesterday morning, one with passengers for Toronto and points in Ontario, and the other for the far west. In the evening the Vancouver train went out in two sections carrying more of these newcomers. Most of these people were English and Scotch and they were a superior lot.

SALVATION ARMY PEOPLE

The first boat of the season of the ones that have been chartered by the Salvation Army to bring out the immigrants coming in their care, arrived in Halifax on Saturday. The boat was the Dominion liner Kensington and carried seven hundred and eighty of the several thousands that are coming to Canada under the care of the Salvation Army during the next few months. Despatches from Halifax, where they landed, say that these men are a superior class and that all are English and Scotch, comfortably situated. About one hundred of the party are for the Maritime provinces and for Ontario and the balance go to British Columbia and will pass through Montreal this afternoon. It is expected that another boat carrying a large number more that are coming under the care of the army, will leave the other side in the course of a week or so.

The Grampian, of the Allan line, also docked on Saturday and brought between two or three hundred more, also English and Scotch and all bound for the west.

A special arrived from New York yesterday bearing four hundred and fifty more immigrants, mostly Russian and Polish Jews. These, with the exception of a small number that stopped here, also go west to find a home. A special carrying them went out yesterday afternoon.

Winnipeg, Feb. 29.—The Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railways have offered to the people of the United States very cheap settlers' rates to the Canadian North West and their action is expected to be followed by most of the lines east and south of St. Paul. Special excursions have been arranged from St. Paul during March, April and May. Thousands of settlers from all parts of the United States will make their homes in Alberta and Saskatchewan this year.

OBJECT TO NATURALIZATION

Vancouver, B.C., March 2—Wholesale objections to the naturalization of a number of Japanese were made today in the county court by F.G.T. Lucas, acting on behalf of the provincial government. The question will apparently be carried to a test case. A decision, it is expected, will be rendered in a week. The grounds of the objection are that the Japanese are the subjects of the Emperor and as such are not free to swear allegiance to any foreign sovereign; that they do not intend to reside permanently in Canada; that they cannot give true allegiance to King Edward and that their objects in becoming citizens are purely selfish.

The Illinois Supreme Court has decided that a labor union's unfair list is in effect a boycott and can be enjoined.

It also, in another case, decides that peaceful picketing during a strike is unlawful, being an attempt to injure another.

This case concerning the unfair list was brought by John E. and John T. Wilson, livery and dray men of Sparta, and owners of the Sparta auditorium. The majority of the Supreme court says that the evidence shows that the unfair list in the case was the same as a boycott. The words, it says, were an euphemism for boycott and it does not change the nature of an unlawful thing to substitute an inoffensive for an offensike name.

The only object of the whole proceeding, the court finds, was to coerce the appellees by injuring their business with the public.

Union labor men have no right to do peaceful picket duty or to congregate in a peaceful manner near a plant where a strike is on. This decision is given affirming the order of the superior court of Cook county, making perpetual an injunction against Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, and others. The injunction was obtained by A. B. Barnes & Co., and others.

ONE WAY.

How's this for an innocent scheme. It has been sent out by the Strathcona graduates:

Dear sir: At a recent meeting of the University graduates of Strathcona it was decided to request the graduates living in other parts of the province to poll one of their votes for a Strathcona man. This request is made for the following reasons:

(a) It is desirable that one of the elected members of the Senate should live in Strathcona, so as to be in touch with the University.

(b). In a fair distribution of the five elected members Strathcona should have one.

(c) Strathcona has the third largest registration of graduates in the province, and these should be represented by a resident member.

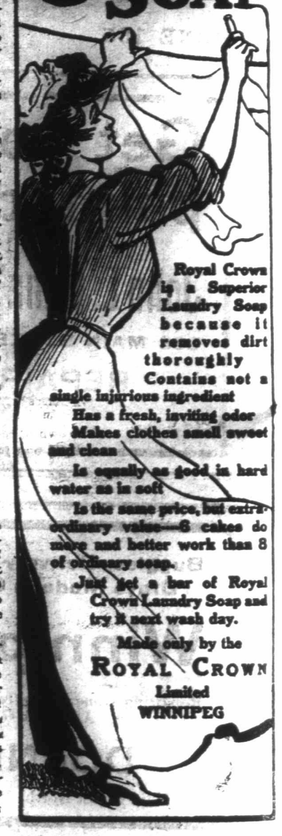
The Strathcona graduates also agreed to place three of their votes in the south.

Will you kindly notify the secretary at an early date of your intention in this matter, and furnish him with a list of candidates from your district?

On behalf of the graduates,
J. M. HOTSON, M.D., chairman.
G. FRED. McNALLY, secretary.

Cattle Sale at Regina.

The Provincial Spring Show and Cattle Sale to be held at Regina bids fair to eclipse anything of the same nature that has ever been attempted in the province. The Secretary informs us that the entries for the Fat Stock Show are already double the number entered a year ago. In the cattle sale where 46 were entered in 1907, 96 will be offered this year. In the Provincial Horse Show the number of entries up to the last of February was exactly equal to the number in 1907.



This Show will furnish a good opportunity for farmers and ranchers to get a start in the stock industry. With 96 pure bred animals to be put up for sale, and in the face of the prevailing financial stringency, there is every probability that many good animals will be sold at very low prices.

The Association will ship to any point in Alberta, Saskatchewan or Manitoba all animals purchased at this sale for $2 per head, except when the distance is over 250 miles the cost will be $3 per head. If March 20th proves too early to turn the cattle out on the range the Association will feed all animals purchased, if so desired, at actual cost until such time as conditions are suitable for turning cattle out.

Among the leading live stock men who will be present are Professor Grisdale, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa; Duncan Anderson, Orillia, Ont.; Professor Rutherford, Manitoba Agricultural College, Winnipeg, and George H. Greig, Winnipeg.

London, March 5.—Owing to the improvement in the monetary conditions the directors in the Bank of England today reduced the discount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent. It was thought in some quarters that no change would be made owing to the South American gold requirements, the less satisfactory position in Berlin and delay in returning gold from New York, but with money more plentiful here, the reserve being over $150,000,000, which probably will be increased from shipments from England and fresh arrivals from mine centers, the bank authorities thought it safe to reduce the rate. The money market already had discounted the change by lowering the rates of three months bills to 3½ per cent.

How Is Your Cold?

Every place you go you hear the same question asked.

Do you know that there is nothing so dangerous as a neglected cold?

Do you know that a neglected cold will turn into Catarrh, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, disgusting Catarrh and the most deadly of all, the "White Plague," Consumption.

Many a life history would read different if, on the first appearance of a cough, it had been remedied with

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

This wonderful cough and cold medicine contains all those very pine principles which make the pine woods so valuable in the treatment of lung affections.

Combined with this are Wild Cherry Bark and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other pectoral herbs and barks.

For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Pain in the Chest, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Hoarseness or any affection of the Throat or Lungs. You will find a sure cure in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. C. N. Loomer, Berwick, N.S. writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for coughs and colds, and have always found it to give instant relief. I also recommended it to one of my neighbors and she was more than pleased with the results."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup 25 cts. per bottle at all dealers. Put up in yellow wrapper, and three pine trees the trade mark. Refuse substitutes. There is only one Norway Pine Syrup and that one is Dr. Wood's.

MOFFAT-FINDLAY.

(Chatsworth News.)

On Wednesday February 12, at 12 o'clock noon, the home of Mrs. M. Ramage, Chatsworth, was the scene of a happy and interesting event, when her youngest daughter, Miss Florence M. was united in marriage to Mr. James G. Moffat, of Medicine Hat, Alta., and formerly of Bognor, Ont.

The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. F. Matheson, took place in the drawing room, which was tastefully decorated with smilax, carnations and ferns. The bride was given away by her brother Mr. Thos. Findlay and was attended by Miss Jessie B. Moffat, sister of the groom, while the groom was supported by Mr. Allan Findlay, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Alfie Findlay, niece of the bride of Meaford. The bride was charmingly attired in a dress of cream silk eolienne trimmed with overlace and Persian applique, and wore a bridal veil caught up by a wreath of white roses, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid wore a dress of India linen trimmed with Valenciennes lace and insertion and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The guests, which numbered about thirty, were chiefly immediate relatives of the contracting parties. After the ceremony and the expression of congratulations the company repaired to the dining room where an elaborate wedding dinner was served. The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful gifts. The groom's favor to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a locket and chain, to the groomsman a pair of cuff links with monogram and to the organist a crescent. The happy couple left by the afternoon train on a wedding trip to Wroxeter, Toronto, Hamilton and other points, prior to their leaving for their home in the west. The bride's travelling dress was a beautiful tailor-made suit of brown chiffon broadcloth and hat to match.

GANTHONY DEFENDED.

E. B., the dramatic critic of the Winnipeg Free Press, has the following to say about Robert Ganthony:

"That eminent actor, author and entertainer, Robert Ganthony, has had rather an unpleasant experience out west, the papers of Lethbridge and Okotoks having treated him with scant courtesy. I did not see the articles in question, but Mr. Ganthony in a letter refers to them as "utterly scandalous notices of my entertainments," adding that "they were not criticisms, but simply scurrilous abuse printed without any justification." The provocation to call forth such strong language from Mr. Ganthony must have been great, knowing as I do, the man's reputation as an artist, sportsman and all-round good fellow. But I think Mr. Ganthony is taking the matter altogether too seriously. Surely a man who has entertained British and other Royalty, who was engaged to accompany Gladstone on his historic "Tantalon Castle" cruise, who was a member of Irving's Lyceum company, who has appeared at the principal theatres in London, Paris, New York, Montreal and other parts of the world, who is a newspaper man of repute, having contributed articles to such papers as the Pall Mall Gazette, The Sketch, Today, Graphic, The Illustrated London News, The English Illustrated News and several comic journals; who is the author of a number of successful plays and hooks—surely such a man need not mind criticism, even if it be simply "scurrilous abuse." I trust Mr. Ganthony met with more courteous treatment as well as the huge success he deserves during the remainder of his tour."

PROOF!

That Zam-Buk Grows New, Healthy Skin.

The unique power belonging to Zam-Buk. From the time he applied skin when it has been destroyed by injury, disease or operation is illustrated by the recent experience of Mr. J. Schofield, of 467 Hamilton, Road, London, Ont.. He says: "A friend of mine (Mr. William Ball, of London) was severely and terribly burned through an explosion of kerosene oil. He was taken to the hospital where he suffered intense pain. The wounds refused to heal, and the doctors decided to resort to skin-grafting, and I consented to have some skin transplanted from my legs to his body. Although this was done on several occasions the skin refused "to take" until Mr. Ball heard of Zam-Buk. From the time he applied Zam-Buk new, healthy skin began to grow. I then used Zam-Buk for the places on my leg from which the skin was removed, and I am glad to report that new skin has grown and therefore consider Zam-Buk the best skin food I have known.

Zam-Buk builds up new tissue in a way that is not possible with ordinary preparations. For healing eczema, running sores, cuts, bruises, burns, boils, eruptions, scalp sores, itch, chapped hands and diseases of the skin it is without equal. All druggists and stores sell it, 50c. a box, or postpaid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Y. M. C.

GYMNASIUM PAC

About 175 people attended the opening banquet given by the Y.M.C. The new gymnasium was filled, but not uncomfortable, the room adapting itself perfectly to three tables running the entire length.

No decorations, other than the crossing of the Canadian and United States flags, were attempted, but the bright newness of the building made anything more unnecessary. The table was supplied by the ladies of the city and was a full menu of relishes, salads, meats, vegetables, jellies, desserts, fruit, chocolates and nuts.

The toast masters were M. A. Brown, the president of the club and W. J. Brotherton, who relieved Mr. Brown of what would have been a much harder task. The president's introductions and toasts were remarkably neat and apropos and did much to complete the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. Brotherton, while playing a minor part, sustained his end of the table to perfection.

A long list of toasts and speakers was on the tasty menu cards, and it was after midnight before the end came, even then a number of the speeches being omitted.

In rising to open the toast list the chairman read letters of regret at their inability to be present from Hon. W. T. Finlay, J. S. Lawrence and Ald. Forster. Mr. Finlay enclosed a check for $20, and Mr. Forster offered the club twenty volumes of any style of literature.

The toast to Sunny Alberta brought out Messrs. J. Kennedy and A. Patterson, the former giving interesting figures about Alberta and what these figures would be a few years from now. Mr. Patterson quoted the case of the man who found a shack away out on the prairie with the following placard on it: "10 miles from the nearest neighbor; 2 miles from a post office; 180 miles from wood; 625 feet from water—I'm off home." The man who found the placard secured the homestead and is now a well-to-do farmer.

"Our City" was responded to by His Worship Mayor Cousins in a humorous speech which dealt principally with the former history of the building which is now a gymnasium. Ald. Spencer spoke of the future of Medicine Hat and its present position financially. John T. Hall referred to his recent trip east, and the prevalent opinions of Alberta in Eastern minds. He enlarged on the reason why Alberta and Medicine Hat should grow and become great.

The chairman announced the toast of the evening as "Our Club" and it was enthusiastically drunk. Rev. A. C. Farrell, in reply, made the speech of the evening. The purpose of the building was his theme and he carried his hearers with him in his recapitulation in the ways of the club. He made a plea for a Canadian and not a provincial patriotism. He spoke of the value of a curfew bell, and expressed his belief in the working together of state and home. S. McClellan gave credit to the committee in charge and attached importance to the reading room. R. South also spoke of the value of the reading room, explaining that already 300 volumes were on hand.

In response to "Our Industries" Dr. Smyth remarked that his connection with industries had been disastrous to him. He branched off to life as the great industry and spoke of the need of greater attention to public health. In Canada 15,000 die from tuberculosis alone and fully half of these could be saved by proper regulations. He advised the establishment of a new Cabin-

MAN TOSSED BY STEER

SUSTAINS SLIGHT CONCUSSION

An accident befell C. H. Ev... last Tuesday afternoon, when he was tossed by a steer and sustained cerebral injuries which confined him to his bed for some days.

A herd of Bell's steers was being driven across the flats near Evans' house. Mr. Evans standing near and, wisely, sheltered himself behind a telephone post. All went well until one of the bunch broke loose, and then Mr. Evans abandoned his previous caution and attempted to turn the truant back into the path of duty. The steer, however, was a true bred Westerner and having decided on a certain course refused to be turned from that purpose. The drovers shouted to the cow-catcher to get out of the way, but were too late, and the steer, reaching him under the shoulder, threw

Y. M. C. BANQUET

A GRAND OPENING OF A GRAND INSTITUTION

GYMNASIUM PACKED WITH DINERS

About 175 people attended the opening banquet given by the Y.M.C. The new gymnasium was filled, but not uncomfortable, the room adapting itself perfectly to three tables running the entire length.

No decorations, other than the crossing of the Canadian and United States flags, were attempted, but the bright newness of the building made anything more unnecessary. The tables was supplied by the ladies of the city and was a full menu of relishes, salads, meats, vegetables, jellies, desserts, fruit, chocolates and nuts.

The toast masters were M. A. Brown, the president of the club and W. J. Brotherton, who relieved Mr. Brown of what would have been a much harder task. The president's introductions and toasts were remarkably neat and apropos and did much to complete the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. Brotherton, while playing a minor part, sustained his end of the table to perfection.

A long list of toasts and speakers was on the tasty menu cards, and it was after midnight before the end came even then a number of the speeches being omitted.

In rising to open the toast list the chairman read letters of regret at their inability to be present from Hon. W. T. Finlay, J. S. Lawrence and Ald. Forster. Mr. Finlay enclosed a check for $20, and Mr. Forster offered the club twenty volumes of any style of literature.

The toast to Sunny Alberta brought out Messrs. J. Kennedy and A. Patterson, the former giving interesting figures about Alberta and what these figures would be a few years from now. Mr. Patterson quoted the case of the man who found a shack away out on the prairie with the following placard on it: "16 miles from the nearest neighbor; 21 miles from a post office; 180 miles from wood; 225 feet from water—I'm off home." The man who found the placard secured the homestead and is now a well-to-do farmer.

"Our City" was responded to by His Worship Mayor Cousins in a humorous speech which dealt principally with the former history of the building which is now a gymnasium. Ald. Spencer spoke of the future of Medicine Hat and its present position financially. John T. Hall referred to his recent trip east, and the prevalent opinions of Alberta in Eastern minds. He enlarged on the reason why Alberta and Medicine Hat should grow and become great.

The chairman announced the toast of the evening as "Our Club" and it was enthusiastically drunk. Rev. A. C. Farrell, in reply, made the speech of the evening. The purpose of the building was his theme and he carried his hearers with him in his recapitulation in the why of the club. He made a plea for a Canadian and not a provincial patriotism. He spoke of the value of a curfew bell, and expressed his belief in the working together of state and home. S. McClellan gave credit to the committee in charge and attached importance to the reading room. R. F. Sourd also spoke of the value of the reading room, explaining that already 300 volumes were on hand.

In response to "Our Industries" Dr. Smyth remarked that his only connection with industries had been disastrous to him. He branched on to life as the great industry and spoke of the need of greater attention to public health. In Canada 15,000 die from tuberculosis alone and fully half of these could be saved by proper regulations. He advised the establishment of a new Cabinet position—the Minister of Public Health.

J. G. Waldock spoke to "Transportation," dilating upon the great railway facilities Canada has compared with other countries on a per-head basis. He contrasted the transportation of today with what it was a quarter of a century ago, and spoke of what it would be in a few years.

Mr. Brotherton introduced "The Youth of Alberta" as the biggest toast of the evening. Mr. Sansom, in reply, agreed with him. W. E. Hay also replied enlarging upon manual and technical training in the schools and the position this would take in future education.

The president proposed the health of the press in some kind words about its importance. W. Lacey Amy replied.

The name of Mr. Webb was connected with the toast to "The Ladies," and after having to stand while Mr. Patterson led "See him smiling," he decided he had not much to say about the ladies and told a story.

The programme apart from the toast list was provided by Mrs. McCarter, Misses Nesbitt, Cooper, Fowler, and Messrs. Symonds, Hall, Stevenson, Brotherton and Barrie.

The club is well pleased with the interest taken in the banquet, and have reason to be proud of the manner in which the function was carried out.

The toast list as carried out was as follows:

THE KING.
God Save the King.

SUNNY ALBERTA.
I hear the tread of Pioneers,
Of nations yet to be,
The first low wash of waves, where soon,
Shall roll a human sea.
J. Kennedy A. Patterson.

OUR CITY.
The Hub of the Last Great West.
Mayor Cousins Alderman Spencer
J. T. Hall.

OUR CLUB.
"The noblest motive, the public good."
"There is but one temple in the universe, and that is the body of man."
Rev. A. C. Farrell S. McClellan
B. F. Sourd.

OUR INDUSTRIES.
Toil and be glad, let industry inspire
Into your quickened limbs her buoyant breath.
Dr. C. E. Smyth.

TRANSPORTATION.
Bands of steel from shore to shore.
J. G. Waldock.

THE YOUTH OF ALBERTA.
The foundation of every state
Is the education of its youth.
O. Sansom W. E. Hay.

THE PRESS.
"Give me a tyrant king, give me a hostile House of Lords, give me a corrupt House of Commons—give me the Press, and I will overturn them all."
W. L. Amy.

LADIES.
Oh, woman, in your hour of ease,
Uncertain, coy and hard to please,
and variable as the shade,
When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou.
Mr. Webb.

Accident To Corporal Humby

Badly Injured in Runaway

As the sequel to a runaway accident, Corp. Humby lies in a somewhat serious condition in the general hospital.

On Thursday afternoon the Corp. was driving out to Josephsburg by buckboard and team. Out on the trail, a mile this side of Coleridge station the board was given a sudden jerk as it passed over a rut in the road. At the same time, the team, for some unknown reason, came to a dead halt and he Corp. was thrown clear over the dashboard onto the whiffle-tree. The team became scared and started off at a gallop, and for a time he remained in a perilous position, where, had the horses been of a vicious disposition he would soon have been killed. As it was he attempted to get his foot on the tongue to throw himself clear of the wheels. He slipped and both wheels passed over his abdomen. James Robinson, who was driving on in front picked up the Corp., who was in great pain, and placing him in his own rig, drove on to Coleridge.

Almost immediately after receiving the news by phone Dr. Smith and Constable Ashe started out by automobile for the scene of the accident. They found Corp. Humby in such a bad state that it was considered inadvisable to subject him to the severe shaking which the return trip by auto would have entailed, and he was accordingly brought on a freight train to the city. Here the ambulance was in attendance and the injured man was taken to the general hospital.

For over a day he was in intense agony but obtained a little sleep on Thursday night by the aid of an anaesthetic and since Saturday morning has been steadily recovering. The sympathy of his many friends will go out to the Corp. in his misfortune, and every hope for his speedy recovery.

As the paper goes to press Corp. Humby is very much improved and his complete recovery appears to be only a matter of time. On hearing of the accident Commissioner A. Bowen Perry, of Regina, telegraphed his sympathy to the Corp. and wishes for his rapid recovery.

CANNERIES MEETING ILLEGAL

NO QUORUM AND MUST MEET AGAIN

It is stated now that the meeting of shareholders of the Western Canneries held in Maple Creek was illegal, on account of there being no quorum. A lawyer interested in the company advised the meeting of the fact, but it was decided to go ahead. Immediately afterwards, it is said, a local director went to Regina to try and arrange with the Saskatchewan authorities to allow the business [illegible] to go ahead, but was refused.

Now, report says another meeting is being held this month in Maple Creek.

Several changes in the directorate are spoken of, principal of which is the bringing into the governing body of a couple of Winnipeg men whose names will assist in the disposing of the stock.

The completion of the Canneries is now only a matter of a very few weeks. The boilers are being put in and this makes the machinery practically complete.

Well Known Evangelists

To Visit Medicine Hat

Evangelists Gale and Hatch have accepted the invitation extended to them by local churches to conduct revival services in Medicine Hat, and will be here on the 25th inst. Representatives of the churches forming a central committee have the preparations in hand. Tonight a United prayer service will be held in the Century church. During the course of the mission, which will be continued for at least two weeks, evening services will be held in St. John's Presbyterian church.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Seven Persons

H. H. Foster and David Ross were business callers at the Hat on Friday, also Mr. Nesting, Mr. Iverson, Mr. Tonbere and Mr. Strand.

Saturday was quite a lively day for this place judging from the teams and people that were here. Those we noticed were Manley Miller, Mr. Huntley and Mr. Belford, M. Zimmerman, Mr. Pettapiece, Mr. Nesting and family, Mr. Tonberg and family, Mr. Strand, J. W. Brown, Mrs. Murray and Mrs. McDonald, D. Boucher and Mr. Levine.

A large attendance was at the Farmers' store meeting Saturday. The officers elected were H. H. Foster, pres.; Manley Miller, sec.-treas.; and directors were D. Cargill, Ed. Levine, T. O. Nesting, D. Boucher and John Meyer. They decided to build a new store building.

Two parties camped here last night with about a dozen horses.

Seven landseekers stopped here one day this week and all went away smiling with the numbers of a free quarter section of land tucked snugly in their vest pocket.

Two homesteaders from Wisconsin got lost on the prairie last night and it took them till two o'clock this morning to get to their lodging.

J. Babbage struck it lucky by running up against a quarter section of homestead land open for entry within a mile and a half of the depot. He promptly took possession.

Mr. Sam Carlson is sojourning on his homestead just now.

The new freight shed is completed and now in use.

Bowell.

G. Moffat and his bride arrived in Bowell on Wednesday to reside on his homestead. They have the hearty congratulations of the [illegible] and do likewise.

Joe Bailing, Geo. Lemon, Albert Lemon and Miss Lebra Lemon, accepted the invitation to Mrs. Drake's party on Wednesday evening. They had a most enjoyable time.

Mrs. Woolven drove to Langevin on Wednesday to visit her brother-in-law, E. Woolven.

Our new surgeon Mr. Larry Cline, successfully extracted a sliver from a person 's hand this week.

Well digging is in full force at Bowell. Although we have several water witches in our midst they have been a long way out in their reckoning.

The secretary of our school committee has received a letter from the Edmonton department saying all previous documents must have gone astray in the mail, or been mislaid. Another set of necessary forms has been sent him, and immediate steps are being taken for another meeting.

The recent invention for killing vermin which is on the market should meet with a hearty approval from the general public. It is called a rubbing-post and is simply constructed. A perforated post with a tank on top containing crude oil is situated in a convenient place. As by the animal leaning against the post causes the valve to open, and a gentle spray issues from the top and sides and is as good a preventive as cure for vermin. The local bachelors are thinking seriously of purchasing one for the Bowell townsite.

Irvine.

This past week saw many real estate deals being put through. It is learned by good authority that the Irvine Elevator company have disposed of their property. The price is not really known, but is in the neighborhood of seven thousand dollars. By one of these deals it will mean that a large American concern will put in a stock of at least thirty thousand dollars. This looks as if the Coleridge rumors might be true.

Herbert S. Newby who was selected to represent St. George's church at the regular meeting of the synod at Regina on Wednesday and Thursday of this week went down to Regina on No. 96 this morning.

Mr. Haverland, who is representing the Josephsburg mission, is attending Regina at the meeting of the synod, taking No. 96 on Monday.

Mat. Wilson has been a guest at the Seldon West hotel for the last week. As usual he has been meeting all his friends.

Mr. Robt. O. Warwick took a flying trip into Irvine last week.

Do not forget to take in the Irish Jig at Masonic hall on Tuesday March 17. Tickets are; gentlemen, $1; ladies free.

Messrs. George and Alex. Mackey shipped from here a fine bunch of sheep, the purchaser being Hugh McAlpine, of Calgary. This shows a good farm for the climate of Sunny Southern Alberta for the month of March.

The Hench Lumber company are opening up their yards in Irvine some time this week, when they expect to place in a thorough stock of all kinds of lumber, the prices of which are not yet known.

Mr. Phil McLay, we are sorry to say, is confined to the house with a severe attack of the grippe. We trust that he will soon be around again.

The doctor is still taking his periodical trips around the district much the same as usual, traveling all hours of the day and night.

We are pleased to state that Mr. A. Schmidt, who has been confined to his bed for the past week or ten days is reported as doing well.

Mr. George P. White who farms extensively to the southeast of here returned from his home in the central States last week. We expected to see him come back married.

Don't forget the Leap Year dance to be given in the Irvine town hall on April 1. The ladies, it is intended will ask the men for the dances.

DEMONSTRATION FARM TO BE PUT UNDER WAY

The farm committee of the agricultural society appointed to handle the demonstration farm mean to get to work early in the season. Some little difficulty has been experienced in regard to the acquirement of land. A section will be required, and this, it is hoped, will be obtained on homestead land on which entry has not yet been made.

Other acres will be broken this season and treated according to the system advocated by Prof. Campbell, and next season the provincial government will take it over and work along with the model farms it intends to establish throughout the province. A government grant of $1,000 will be made this year and a similar sum promised by the C.P.R. will be forthcoming.

The land will be turned over to the Alberta department of agriculture by the department of the interior.

NEW PRIZES FOR FAIR

THREE VALUABLE PRIZES FOR HORSES

James Rae, Sr., goes up to Calgary tomorrow to attend the convention of Agricultural Societies to be held on Wednesday and Thursday when dates for the exhibitions in the province will be fixed.

There will be three new prizes at the fair this fall: Silver cup for best walking team; to be won three times by one party before finally getting cup, given by Jas. Rae.

Prize—Best walking single driver, $10.00, given by H. C. Yuill.

Prize—Best walking saddle horse, $10.00, given by R. E. Starks.

These additions to the prize list will be appreciated, and the gentlemen giving them show their interest in good stock and the exhibition.

Spring Bank Ranch Dance

On March 11 Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Drake entertained at whist and dancing. About 60 people accepted the invitation, a few going out from the city. During the early part of the evening progressive whist was indulged in, dancing commencing at midnight and being continued until 6.30. A delicious lunch was served at midnight and at 6 a.m.

Music was furnished by W. H. McCutcheon of this city, Mr. Lemon and Miss Lemon of Bowell, Mrs. Bishop and others. A feature of the evening is said to have been the step dancing of Jack Rae and Mr. Johnson. It was freely expressed that they had missed their calling.

From the number of letters received at The Times office it is evident that the entertainment provided by Mr. and Mrs. Drake was of the best quality.

The Royal hotel has fixed up a new office where the old bar used to be, and with the improved accomodation, has largely increased its patronage.

THE CITY FATHERS.

The regular meeting of the council was held last evening. Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, Forster, McKay, Spencer, Tweed, Huckvale.

Major Sissons stated that the contractor for the armory building, A. P. Burns, wished to start on the work as soon as possible. Some material had arrived and some place for it was wanted. In answer to Ald. Baker the Mayor stated that the council had accepted the site offered by the C.P.R. The solicitor said he had written three times to the company for the titles but had received no reply. He thought a trade might be made with the Y.M.C.A. The railway so far had only objected to having another building there. The Mayor thought the C.P.R. might take exception to the trade being made.

The Grain Growers' Association wrote asking the council to pass a form of resolution relating to government ownership and operation of storage facilities. They considered government ownership the only remedy for the abuses now prevalent in the grain handling business. The letter stated that the action of the banks during the last year had curtailed the income of the average farmer at least 20 per cent. It might be necessary in the near future to create a producers' bank. The Mayor thought the letter and resolution was of too exhaustive a nature for the council to decide off hand whether it was right or wrong. Ald. Baker said his mind was already made up. "Anything in the nature of a monopoly should be government owned. That's part of our creed." Referred to a special committee.

The sec.-treasurer of the hospital wrote asking for a word in connection for X-Ray machine. Ald. Huckvale said that he, Fenning and Ashton to Ald. Penhale and himself and they had informed him there was no pipe available at present, but that the connection should be made as soon as possible. Referred to water commissioners with power to act.

J. B. Watson, auditor for the city of Calgary, wrote offering his services as auditor to Medicine Hat. He stated that he was studying for his C. A. degree and as he wished to gain experience in municipal audits, he would undertake the work at a nominal fee. Laid on the table pending financial committee's report.

The Credit Foncier wrote declining to consider a further investment in city bonds at present.

A. E. Forester wrote applying for a water connection to a house on Lot 13, Block 83, Braemar street. There was also an application from the manager of the Bank of Montreal for water connection for Lots 1 and 2, Block G. Mr. Martin offering to advance the necessary funds. Referred to the water commissioners with power to act.

A letter from the Merchants Bank dealt with offers made for city bonds. The W. A. Mackenzie Co. had wired "Will give 90 and interest Toronto delivery subject option additional forty one month." The Aemilius Jarvis Co. had wired "Will give 91 for 40,000 provided bonds issued in form and denomination to suit us, delivery payment Toronto conditional our having option same terms on any issued during next three months. All bonds to be subject our solicitor's favorable opinion." In his letter Mr. James stated that the Aemilius Jarvis offer was the better. The option asked for on same terms for any additional issue would not embarrass city as the only issue that would come on the market would be the $40,000 sewerage bonds. It appeared to the Mayor that the time had arrived when the council should decide what was to be done as regards the debentures. Though the new bonds would not be ready for sale till September bids might be obtained beforehand. The Aemilius Jarvis representative, who was in the city recently, was afraid of our bonds being on the market in opposition to others already sold. A protracted discussion ensued, Ald. Spencer was dissatisfied with the way in which the Aemilius Jarvis Co. had treated the city in negotiating the last bonds. They had cut down first in one way then in another, and finally asked for an extension of time. The clerk called attention to the demands of the Jarvis Co. that the bonds must be "in form and denomination to suit us." He pointed out that they could only be in the form for which the charter called. The Mayor thought that if the Bank of Montreal were informed that the city were willing to accept a certain price, they would be prepared to advance money. Ald. Tweed was of the opinion that by the time the other bonds were needed a much better figure might be obtained. Eventually on Ald. Huckvale's motion, it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the finance committee to dispose of at not less than 92.

Finance committee recommended payment of following accounts:

R. E. Walton Hardware	$14 87
C. C. Cooper	3 50
R. E. Walton Hardware	7 91
Marshall Hardware	31 00
H. C. Cooper	2 50
Mrs. Shepherd	1 00
J. H. Preston	20 00
J. Butherford	182 85
Treasurer's expense account	20 30
Quick Job Print Co.	3 75
T. Morrey	2 25
Wm. Barrie	3 40
Stewart & Tweed	1 65
Marshall Hardware	1 30
T. J. Fleager	26 90

A discussion took place while these were under consideration on the signing of accounts.

Ald. Forster read the report of the finance committee on the auditor's salary. They had not come to any definite decision on the matter and thought it better for the council to decide. As to the system of bookkeeping the Alberta government were likely to introduce a system applicable to all towns and cities in the province and it was thought better to let the matter lie for the time being. The committee had discussed with treasurer Adsit the matter of city bookkeeping not receiving proper attention. The committee did not think it necessary to raise the treasurer's bond to $10,000. Ald. Tweed was in favor of granting a salary of $400 to Auditor Krauss. The treasurer was satisfied that the work done was worth that amount. Mr. Krauss, moreover, was residing in the city and paying taxes. Ald. Spencer thought the auditor had been doing a large amount of work which rightly belonged to the treasurer's department. Ald. Baker had heard of considerable dissatisfaction with auditor Krauss' work, but whether there was anyone in the council capable to judge was a different matter.

Mr. Krauss was appointed auditor for 1908 at a salary of $400, to complete auditing of books up to December 31.

The parks committee made a recommendation as to thinning out of trees. They advised replacement of dead trees on the boulevards, that the applications of the public cemetery and Church of England churchyard be filled and private citizens supplied according to priority of application, no single person to have more than one tree to twelve feet of frontage.

Committee on special waterworks tax, and on licensing of theatres, etc., reported that no definite conclusion had been reached but it was thought the matter might with advantage be discussed in committee of the whole.

On Ald. Tweed's motion it was decided to offer the chemical wagon to Manville at $200, hose free to $100.

The matter of unpaid taxes came up for discussion. The solicitor stated that the treasurer had made up bills for these and only a very few places had been advertised for sale. It would be necessary to pass a by-law to enforce interest.

The Mayor referred to the successful celebration of the opening of the traffic bridge, to which the Lieut.-Governor and some legislators, he thought, should be invited. The bridge will in all probability not be ready till the first of May. It was considered advisable to have the formal opening before the bridge was complete.

Council adjourned till Monday next.

Miss Morden opens her millinery establishment on Thursday in the old Ladies' Ready-to-Wear establishment above the city hall. She has a complete new stock and prices will be found most reasonable.

Miss S. B. Alexander of Toronto, who arrived in the city on the 7th inst., is assisting in Miss McLeay's millinery business.

W. B. Marshall intends to build a terrace of six handsome modern residences on the corner of Braemar street and Fourth avenue. The houses will be faced with Menominee brick. Already a portion of the stone for foundation and walls is on the site and operations will be commenced immediately.

The Medicine Hat hospital acknowledges with thanks the following donations for the month of February:—Mr. Farrier, magazines; A Friend, fresh butter and eggs; Mrs. W. Finlay, magazines and books; Mr. George Borradaile, magazines and books; Rev. A. C. Baettig, Wetaskiwin, magazines and tracts; A Friend, fresh butter and eggs; Mrs. Fatt, magazines and books; A Friend, two pair blankets; A Friend, chocolates for nurses.

The H. H. Campkin company, real estate and farm lands agents, of Indian Head, Sask., have failed. This company was known all through the west, and contemplated opening an office in Medicine Hat last year.

MAN TOSSED BY STEER

SUSTAINS SLIGHT CONCUSSION

An accident befell C. H. Evans last Tuesday afternoon, when he was tossed by a steer and sustained cerebral injuries which confined him to his bed for some days.

A herd of Bell's steers was being driven across the flats near Mr. Evans' house. Mr. Evans was standing near and, wisely, sheltered himself behind a telephone post. All went well until one of the bunch broke loose, and then Mr. Evans abandoned his previous caution and attempted to turn the truant back into the path of duty. The steer, however, was a true-bred Westerner, and having decided on a certain course refused to be turned from his purpose. The drovers shouted to the cow-catcher to get out of the way, but were too late, and the steer, catching him under the shoulder, threw him a distance of several yards. Falling on his head, Mr. Evans received a slight concussion. Under Dr. Smyth's care he made rapid progress and later in the week was able to drive out to the ranch.

Mounted Police Notes.

Corporal Barschel came up from Lethbridge on Saturday to fill Corp. Humby's place while the latter remains in the hospital.

Constable Chalkey has been transferred from Medicine Hat to Lethbridge. Constable Marchason comes up from Lethbridge to fill his place.

A jap, K. Matsuyama and a number of his fellow countrymen employed by the railroad at Coleridge got into trouble last week for stealing lumber from the neighborhood of the gas well. W. R. Martin, who is in charge of the well, warned them to desist, but the little brown men played the innocent, and, pretending they could not understand Mr. Martin, continued to make free use of the supply. Corp. Humby drove up to Coleridge and effected the arrest of Matsuyama. The Japs, of whom there were seventy, offered some resistance, but luckily for them thought better of it. On the 10th the arrested ringleader was tried and convicted, and, the C.P.R., not wishing to press the case, it was agreed to release prisoner on restitution of the amount of $80 (divided between the 70 Japs), and payment of the costs of court, $7.75.

On Tuesday last Oscar Long, G. E. Allen, S. McKelvey and N. T. Stetman, cooks and waiters at the Alberta cafe laid information against H. B. L'Hommidieu for non-payment of wages. The Long case occupied the court for the whole day, resulting in the reduction of his claim for $76 to $60 with 35 costs. J. J. Mahaffy appeared for complainant, Mr. L'Hommidieu defending himself. On the 11th Allen's case was heard, J. J. Mahaffy prosecuting and W. A. Begg defending. After Allen had been on the stand for about an hour and a half it was shown that he had never demanded his wages. The magistrate on the bench, Inspector Parker, said that was sufficient for him, and dismissed the case. Stetman and McKelvey not appearing, their case was also dismissed without costs.

Friday last John Schagat laid information against Charlie Smith, a fellow-workman employed on the traffic bridge, for assault and battery. He complained that Smith had struck him a heavy blow upon the nose, causing it to bleed profusely. There appeared to have been a little feud between the two men. Smith gave himself away when in his evidence he stated his suspicions that the complainant had set a trap for him on the bridge thus attempting to justify the assault he claimed he didn't commit. Narrowly escaping a fatal fall, he said he had turned round on Schagat and charged him with having set the trap. Apparently as a result of the mutual recriminations and, strings of choice epithets which followed, Schagat's nose began to bleed. Smith had not used any physical means to produce the effect. A witness who appeared on the stand said that he did not see any blow struck—he only saw the after-effects. The magistrate ordered Smith to pay the costs. That gentleman vigorously protested. However, Inspector Parker put the matter in a new light when he expressed the opinion that defendant ought to consider $5 a low figure for the satisfaction he had "taken out of Schagat." Smith then coughed up cheerily.

A United States passenger went temporarily insane on this side the line and the police detained him in the barracks here for a short time. The Attorney-General had ordered the man to be deported, but his brother-in-law coming down from Edmonton, eventually the prisoner, who had recovered was given into his custody.

Four cases tried before James Robinson at Josephsburg, all of working or illegally detaining estray animals. Jacob Mohr was convicted of working an estray and fined $5 and costs. John and Edward Smyther were convicted, the first of having illegally in his possession an estray, the second with working such an animal. Jacob Good and Albert Mort were convicted of working estrays. A fine of $10 was imposed upon John Smyther and $15 in the other three cases. A large amount of work has been entailed to the police in the threshing out of this bad business. They are determined to put a stop to this kind of thing—which is almost equivalent to theft.

The hearing in the housebreaking case at Josephsburg will come up on Friday, Corp. Humby was on duty in connection with this matter when his unfortunate accident happened.

BEGGAR PRINCE OPERA CO.

Willis & Cosgrove brought to the city last week the best company that has appeared here. The Beggar Prince Opera company was a success in every way. Very few companies attempt opera in the west, and for this we have reason to be thankful, as the average company would inflict something on us that would scarcely be pleasing.

The Beggar Prince Opera company however, carry with them not only good actors, but excellent singers and there is not one weak member.

Fra Diavolo, which was presented the first night, contained lots of comedy, but most of all the music was entrancing. The four sololsts who excelled were J. C. Taylor, as Fra Diavolo, Ethel Balch, as Zerlina; Jos. Combs, as Lorenzo, and Miss Vivian Forrest as Lady Allcash. The comedy work by G. Murray as Beppo and Fred. Godding as Lord Allcash was of a very superior order—not the least overdone.

On the second night the Circus Clown was put on. The comedy work in this play is its special feature. Fred. Godding as Sparadrop continued his good work and can safely carry the palm for a clean comedian as far as companies that have visited Medicine Hat are concerned. The wax figure scene in which Prince Casimir tries to catch Sparadrap showing signs of life is so excruciatingly funny that the audience was weak with laughter. Next to Godding, Miss Vivian Forrest as the flighty Paolo was the centre. As a crazy, freak mountebank she made the audience laugh at

Around the Station

The new arrangement by which freight for the Crow line will be transferred at Moose Jaw, comes into force on April 1.

Many of the roundhouse employees are now working full time.

One of the blacksmiths who has not been working for some time is back to the anvil, and a new striker has been taken on during the past week.

Though the recent experiments with natural gas for coach illuminating purposes were entirely successful it may be a month or two before the Pintsch gas will be superseded on any part of the Canadian Pacific railway. No "plant" will be needed beyond what Nature has abundantly provided in the great gas tank which underlies the whole of this district. All that is required is a high pressure main, to be laid from the gas well to a convenient place near the main track whence a few yards of hose connected up to the Pintsch tanks will suffice for charging purposes.

ATHLETICS

ALL IS DISCOVERED.

At last we are lost! All is discovered. The Calgary News, after a systematic Sherlock Holmes task has found out that Benny wasn't captain of the baseball team last year after all, and that Billy Hamilton is none other than Billy Hulen.

To be sure The News was several months behind in finding it out, but it is now laid bare to the world in all its nakedness.

The News heads an article:

"Did Benny Captain Medicine Hat Team. Enquiry Reveals Fact That Billy Hulen or Hamilton Managed Pennant Winners. Benny Make-Believe Captain. Hulen, as an Outlawed Player, Came to Medicine Hat and Played as Billy Hamilton."

The article in part reads:

"The above Billy Hulen is no other than Billy Hamilton by which name he was known in the Western Canada league last year. But the fans say, 'Billy wasn't captain of the Medicine Hat team, and neither did he win the pennant last year,' while some of the wise ones will say nothing and wink. There is, however, a little story in connection with the above Billy that doesn't seem to have leaked out yet. It is said that one of the big eastern leagues by Billy Hulen got into some trouble in jumping a contract, and came up to Medicine Hat out of the way. While here he went under the assumed name of Billy Hamilton, and although Benny, the recognized captain of the Medicine Hat team always got the credit of piloting that team to victory, Billy Hulen or Hamilton was the man who was always consulted, and who really managed the pennant winners of the Western Canada league."

The fact is that everyone in the league knew long before the season closed that Billy "Hamilton" the star player of the league was Billy Hulen, a former major league man. Again, although Benny did manage the team from start to finish, Hamilton was openly appointed captain several weeks before the season closed.

It comes as a shock to know that Benny was supposed to be captaining the team, even by a Calgary paper.

A meeting of the local fans will be held Wednesday night in the American hotel to make plans for the formation of the local league. There is sure to be a lot of interest in the games this year, as there is no professional ball, and G. W. Elliott has given a fine trophy for competition. All interested in baseball should attend.

PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL GONE

Calgary, March 10.—Apparently the Western Canada baseball league is dead. The meeting called this afternoon by president Bruce Robinson was attended only by L. F. Fields, Edmonton. Lethbridge and Medicine Hat were not represented. Robinson handed in his resignation. Secretary Fred Johnston although in the city did not attend. An attempt will probably be made to organize a league composed of Calgary, Wetaskiwin, Strathcona and Edmonton.

WINNIPEG NOT IN IT.

The Wanderers of Montreal last week clearly demonstrated their superiority over the Maple Leafs of Winnipeg in the Stanley Cup games. In the first game the Wanderers won by 11 to 5 and in the second secured the same majority by the score of 4 to 3. The ice was hard during the first game and soft in the second so that the Wanderers had the best of it on both kinds.

Horsebreeders and others interested in the thoroughbred are circulating a petition throughout the province which will be afterwards forwarded to the Governor-General. The petition asks Earl Grey to exert his influence with the King to have established a King's Plate to be open to thoroughbred horses bred in Alberta. It is pointed out that such a race would be of great benefit to the horse breeding industry, as it would encourage the breeding and importing of thoroughbreds, would improve the standard of brood mares and increase the number of horses fit for army remounts.

Among those who have appended their signatures to the petition are all the members of the provincial parliament, Edmonton Fair directors and Driving Club, and copies are being forwarded to all the larger towns in Alberta. The secretary, George Kyrle Allen, is confident that next year will see a King's Plate in Alberta.

R. McCutcheon is in charge of the petition in Medicine Hat.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by Harper & Brothers

He added the last two words by way of apology for having banged a very mild fist on the table.

Joseph rubbed his hands slowly together and departed, leaving his master to begin a long letter to Guy Oscard.

And at the other end of the passage, in her room with the door locked, Jocelyn Gordon was sobbing in a wild burst of grief because she had probably saved the life of Jack Meredith, and in doing so had only succeeded in sending him away from her.

When Jack Meredith said that there was not another man in Africa who could make his way from Loango to the simiacine plateau he spoke no more than the truth. There were only four men in all the world who knew the way, and two of them were isolated on the summit of a lost mountain in the interior. Meredith himself was unfit for the journey. There remained Joseph.

In coming down to Loango Joseph had had the recently made track of Oscard's rescuing party to guide him day by day. He knew that this was now completely overgrown. The simiacine plateau was once more lost to all human knowledge.

And up there, alone amid the clouds, Guy Oscard was, as he himself tersely put it, "sticking to it." He had stuck to it to such good effect that the supply of fresh young simiacine was daily increasing in bulk. Again Victor Durnovo seemed to have regained his better self. He was like a full blooded horse—tractable enough if kept hard at work. He was a different man up on the plateau from what he was down at Loango. There are some men who deteriorate in the wilds, while others are better, stronger, finer creatures away from the luxury of civilization and the softening influence of female society. Of these latter was Victor Durnovo.

Of one thing Guy Oscard soon became aware—namely, that no one could make the men work as could Durnovo. He had merely to walk to the door of his tent to make every picker on the little plateau bend over his tree with renewed attention. And while above all was eagerness and hurry, below, in the valley, this man's name insured peace.

The trees were now beginning to show the good result of pruning and a regular irrigation. Never had the leaves been so vigorous, never had the simiacine trees borne such a bushy, luxuriant growth since the dim, dark days of the flood.

Oscard relapsed into his old hunting ways. Day after day he tranquilly shouldered his rifle, and, alone or followed by one attendant only, he disappeared into the forest only to emerge therefrom at sunset. What he saw there he never spoke of. Sure it was that he must have seen strange things, for no prying white man had set foot in these wilds before him; no book has ever been written of that country that lies around the simiacine plateau.

Oscard was thinking of Millicent Chyne one misty morning while he walked slowly backward and forward before his tent. His knowledge of the country told him that the mist was nothing but the night's accumulation of moisture round the summit of the mountain, that down in the valleys it was clear and that half an hour's sunshine would disperse all. He was waiting for this result when he heard a rifle shot far away in the haze beneath him and he knew that it was Joseph, probably making one of those marvelous long shots of his which roused a sudden sigh of envy in the heart of this mighty hunter whenever he witnessed them.

Oscard immediately went to his tent and came out with his short barreled, evil looking rifle on his arm. He fired both barrels in quick succession and waited, standing gravely on the edge of the plateau. After a short silence two answering reports rose through the mist to his straining ears.

"It isn't good enough. That's what I say, sir, with respects."

He turned and found Victor Durnovo standing at his side.

"What is that?" asked the half breed.

"It must be Joseph," answered Guy, "or Meredith. It can be nobody else."

"Let us hope that it is Meredith," said Durnovo, with a forced laugh, "but I doubt it."

Oscard looked down in his sallow, powerful face. He was not quick at such things, but at that moment he felt strangely certain that Victor Durnovo was hoping that Meredith was dead.

"I hope it isn't," he answered, and without another word he strode away down the little pathway from the summit into the clouds, loading his rifle as he went.

Durnovo and his men, working among the simiacine bushes, heard from time to time a signal shot as the two Englishmen groped their way toward each other through the everlasting night of the African forest.

It was midday before the newcomers were espied making their way painfully up the slope, and Joseph's welcome was not so much in Durnovo's handshake, in Guy Oscard's silent approval, as in the row of grinning, good natured black faces behind Durnovo's back.

Joseph's arrival with ten new men seemed to give a fresh zest to the work, and the carefully packed cases of simiacine began to fill. Oscard's tent to some inconvenience. Thus things went on for two tranquil weeks.

"First," Oscard had said, "let us get the crop in, and then we can arrange what is to be done about the future."

So the crop received due attention, but the two leaders of the men—he who led by fear and he who commanded by love—were watching each other.

One evening when the work was done Oscard's meditations were disturbed by the sound of angry voices behind the native camp. He turned naturally toward Durnovo's tent, and saw that he was absent. The voices rose and fell; there was a singular accompanying roar of sound which Oscard never remembered having heard before. It was the protesting voice of a mass of men—and there is no sound like it—none so disquieting. Oscard listened attentively and suddenly he was thrown upon his feet by a pistol shot.

He shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

At the same moment Joseph emerged from behind the tents, dragging some one by the collar. The victim of Joseph's violence was off his feet, but still struggling and kicking.

Guy Oscard saw the flash of a second shot, apparently within a few inches of Joseph's face, but he came on, dragging the man with him, whom from his clothing Oscard saw to be Durnovo.

Joseph was spitting out wadding and burned powder.

"Shoot me, would yer, yer skulking chocolate bird? I'll teach you! I'll twist that brown neck of yours."

He shook him as a terrier shakes a rat, and seemed to shake things off him—among others a revolver which described a circle in the air and fell heavily on the ground, where the concussion discharged a cartridge.

"'Ere, sir," cried Joseph, literally throwing Durnovo down on the ground at Oscard's feet, "that man has just shot one o' them poor niggers, so 'elp me God!"

Durnovo rose slowly to his feet, as if the shaking had disturbed his faculties.

"Oh, don't make a fool of yourself," he said in a hissing voice; "you don't understand these natives at all. The man raised his hand to me. He would have killed me if he had had the chance. Shooting was the only thing left to do. You can only hold these men by fear. They expect it."

"Of course they expect it," shouted Joseph in his face; "of course they expect it, Mr. Durnovo."

"Why?"

"Because they're slaves. Think I don't know that?"

He turned to Oscard.

"This man, Mr. Oscard," he said, "is a slave owner. Them forty that joined at Msala was slaves. He's shot two of 'em now; this is his second. And what does he care? They're his slaves. Oh, shame on 'yer!" turning again to Durnovo. I wonder God lets yer stand there. I can only think that he doesn't want to dirty his hand by strikin' yer down."

Oscard had taken his pipe from his lips. He looked bigger, somehow, than ever. His brown face was turning to an ashen color and there was a dull, steel-like gleam in his blue eyes. The terrible, slow kindling anger of this northerner made Durnovo catch his breath. It was so different from the sudden passion of his own countrymen.

"Is this true?" he asked.

"It's a lie, of course," answered Durnovo, with a shrug of the shoulders. He moved away as if he were going to his tent, but Oscard's arm reached out. His large brown hand fell heavily on the half breed's shoulder.

"Stay," he said; "we are going to get to the bottom of this."

"Good," muttered Joseph, rubbing his hands slowly together; "this is prime."

"Go on," said Oscard to him.

"Where's the wages you and Mr. Meredith has paid him for those forty men?" pursued Joseph. "Where's the advance you made him for those men at Msala? Not one ha'penny of it have they fingered. And why? Cos they're slaves! Fifteen months at £50—let them as can reckon tot it up for theirselves. That's his first kwindle—and there's others, sir! Oh, there's more behind. That man's just a hotbed o' crime. But this 'ere slave owning is enough to settle his hash, I take it."

"Let us have these men here; we will hear what they have to say," said Oscard in the same dull tone that frightened Victor Durnovo.

"Not you!" he went on, laying his hand on Durnovo's shoulder again; "Joseph will fetch them, thank you."

So the forty—or the thirty-seven survivors, for one had died on the journey up and two had been murdered—were brought. They were peaceful, timorous men, whose manhood seemed to have been crushed out of them; and slowly, word by word, their grim story was got out of them. Joseph knew a little of their language, and one of the head fighting men knew a little more and spoke a dialect known to Oscard. They were slaves, they said at once, but only on Oscard's promise that Durnovo should not be allowed to shoot them. They had been brought from the north by a victorious chief who in turn had handed them over to Victor Durnovo in payment of an outstanding debt for ammunition supplied.

"I leave this place at sunrise tomorrow," said Guy Oscard to them all. "I never want to see it again. I will not touch one penny of the money that has been made. I speak for Mr. Meredith and myself"—

"Likewise me," put in Joseph.

"I speak as Mr. Meredith himself would have spoken. There is the simiacine. You can have it. I won't touch it. And now who is going with me—who leaves with me tomorrow morning?"

He moved away from Durnovo.

"And who stays with me," cried the half breed, "to share and share alike in the simiacine?"

Joseph followed Oscard, and with him a certain number of the blacks, but some stayed. Some went to Durnovo and stood beside him. The slaves spoke among themselves, and then they all went over to Durnovo.

So that which the placid moon shone down upon was the breakup of the great simiacine scheme. Victor Durnovo had not come off so badly. He had the larger half of the men by his side. He had all the finest crop the trees had yet yielded, but he had yet to reckon with high heaven!

CHAPTER XX.

SIR JOHN MEREDITH was sitting stiffly in a straight backed chair by his library fire. In his young days men didn't loll in deep chairs, with their knees higher than their heads. There were no such chairs in this library, just as there was no afternoon tea except for ladies. Sir John Meredith was distressed to observe a great many signs of the degeneration of manhood, which he attributed to the indulgence in afternoon tea. Sir John had lately noticed another degeneration—namely, in the quality of the London gas. So serious was this falling off that he had taken to a lamp in the evening, which lamp stood on the table at his elbow.

There was nothing dismal or lonely about this old man, sitting in evening dress in a high backed chair, stiffly reading a scientific book of the modern, cheap science tenor—not written for scientists, but to step in when the brain is weary of novels and afraid of communing with itself. Oh, no! A gentleman need never be dull. He has his necessary occupations. If he is a man of intellect he need never be idle. It is an occupation to keep up with the times.

He paused in the midst of a scientific definition and looked up with listening eyes. He had got into the way of listening to the passing wheels. Lady Cantourne sometimes called for him on her way to a festivity, but it was not that.

The wheels he heard had stopped. Perhaps it was Lady Cantourne, but he did not think so. She drove behind a pair, and this was not a pair.

A few minutes later the butler silently threw open the door, and Jack stood on the threshold. Sir John Meredith's son had been given back to him from the gates of death.

The son, like the father, was in immaculate evening dress. There was a very subtle cynicism in the thought of turning aside on such a return as this to dress—to tie a careful white tie and brush imperceptibly ruffled hair.

There was a little pause, and the two tall men stood, half bowing, with a marvelous similarity of attitude, gazing steadily into each other's eyes. And one cannot help wondering whether it was a mere accident that Jack Meredith stood motionless on the threshold until his father said "Come in."

"Thomson," he continued to the butler, with that pride of keeping up before all the world which was his, "bring up coffee."

The butler closed the door behind him. Sir John was holding on to the back of his high chair in rather a constrained way—almost as if he were suffering pain. They looked at each other again, and there was a resemblance in the very manner of raising the eyelid. There was a stronger resemblance in the grim, waiting silence which neither of them would break.

At last Jack spoke, approaching the fire and looking into it.

"You must excuse my taking you by surprise at this—unusual hour." He turned, saw the lamp, the book and the eyeglasses, more especially the eyeglasses, which seemed to break the train of his thoughts. "I only landed at Liverpool this afternoon," he went on, with hopeless politeness. "I did not trouble you with a telegram, knowing that you object to them."

The old man bowed gravely.

"I am always glad to see you," he said suavely. "Will you not sit down?"

And they had begun wrong.

"I suppose you have dined," said Sir John when they were seated, "or may I offer you something?"

"Thanks, I dined on the way up, in a twilit refreshment room, with one waiter and a number of attendant black beetles."

Things were going worse and worse.

Sir John smiled, and he was still smiling when the man brought in coffee.

"Yes," he said conversationally, "for speed combined with discomfort I suppose we can hold up heads against any country. Seeing that you are dressed, I supposed that you had dined in town."

"No. I drove straight to my rooms and kept the cab while I dressed."

What an important matter this dressing seemed to be! And there were fifteen months behind it—fifteen months which had aged one of them and sobered the other.

Jack was sitting forward in his chair with his immaculate dress shoes on the fender, his knees apart, his elbows resting on them, his eyes still fixed on the fire. Sir John looked keenly at him beneath his frowning, lashless lids. He saw the few gray hairs over Jack's ears, the suggested wrinkles, the drawn lines about his mouth.

"You have been ill?" he said.

Joseph's letter was locked away in the top drawer of his writing table.

"Yes, I had rather a bad time, a serious illness. My man nursed me through it, however, with marked success, and the Gordons, with whom I was staying, were very kind."

"I had the pleasure of meeting Miss Gordon."

Jack's face was steady, suavely impenetrable.

Sir John moved a little and set his empty cup upon the table.

"A charming girl," he added.

"Yes."

"You are fortunate in that man of yours," Sir John said; "a first class man."

"Yes. He saved my life."

Sir John blinked, and for the first time his fingers went to his mouth, as if his lips had suddenly got beyond his control.

"If I may suggest it," he said rather indistinctly, "I think it would be well if we signified our appreciation of his devotion in some substantial way. We might well do something between us."

He paused and threw back his shoulders.

"I should like to give him some substantial token of my gratitude."

Sir John was nothing if not just.

"Thank you," answered Jack quietly. He turned his head a little and glanced not at his father, but in his direction. "He will appreciate it, I know."

"I should like to see him tomorrow."

Jack winced, as if he had made a mistake.

"He is not in England," he explained. "I left him behind me in Africa. He has gone back to the simiacine plateau."

The old man's face dropped rather piteously.

"I am sorry," he said, with one of the sudden relapses into old age that Lady Cantourne dreaded. "I may not have a chance of seeing him to thank him personally. A good servant is so rare nowadays. These modern democrats seem to think that it is a nobler thing to be a bad servant than a good one. As if we were not all servants!"

He was thirsting for details. There were a thousand questions in his heart, but not one on his lips.

"Will you have the kindness to remember my desire," he went on suavely, "when you are settling up with your man?"

"Thank you," replied Jack. "I am much obliged to you."

"And in the meantime, as you are without a servant, you may as well make use of mine. One of my men—Henry—who is too stupid to get into mischief—a great recommendation, by the way—understands his business. I will ring and have him sent over to your rooms at once."

He did so, and they sat in silence until the butler had come and gone.

"We have been very successful with the simiacine, our scheme," said Jack suddenly. I have brought home a consignment valued at £70,000."

Sir John's face never changed.

"And," he asked, with veiled sarcasm, "do you carry out the—er—commercial part of the scheme?"

"I shall begin to arrange for the sale of the consignment tomorrow. I shall have no difficulty, at least I anticipate none. Yes, I do the commercial part as well as the other. I held the plateau against 2,000 natives for three months with fifty-five men. But I do the commercial part as well."

As he was looking into the fire still, Sir John stole a long comprehensive glance at his son's face. His old eyes lighted up with pride and something else, possibly love. The clock on the mantelpiece struck 11. Jack looked at it thoughtfully, then he rose.

(To be continued.)

"I can take you to a hundred homes, right around my store, in which St. George's is used."

"You can ask those, who do the baking, what they think of

St. George's Baking Powder

"And every one of the hundred will tell you the same—that St. George's stands every test and never loses its strength."

Forcing An Explanation

The reason for the enforced three days' sitting of the House of Commons has not been given sufficient publicity for the ordinary reader to understand why 57 hours was spent on the floor continuously. Some Liberal papers have tried to hide the true issue by drawing attention to the waste of time and the expense of it all; but most of the papers supporting the government have remained conspicuously silent on the subject and none have had the temerity to explain the importance of the issue.

The reason for the refusal of the Opposition to pass the estimates was simply to protect the public; to force a Minister to explain to the people how he spent $42,000 in his department.

Attempt has been made to show that the objections made by the Conservatives have nothing to do with the matter under discussion. This is wrong however. The Opposition refused to pass appropriations in the department of Marine and Fisheries until the Minister had explained the expenditure referred to. It offered to proceed with any other business, but in that department would let nothing pass.

It appears that something more than a year ago Mr. Brodeur, becoming alarmed at the criticisms of his department, engaged the services of an expert accountant to introduce a system of bookkeeping in his department. Mr. Falkener, the accountant, was to receive $40 a day, and to employ assistants at prices from $10 to $15 a day. All this was pretty stiff payment, but in addition travelling and living expenses were allowed to this staff of experts, board being placed at $5, $4 and $3 a day. With all this munificence the bill presented to the House amounted to the princely sum of $42,000.

Very naturally the Opposition considered that they and the people should know something about how this sum was made up. Mr. Brodeur and the government thought it was a personal matter of their own, and feared the publicity of a detailed statement. At first they refused to submit the papers. Then Brodeur said they were being made ready and tried to get his estimates put through first so that the Opposition would have no hold on him when the papers were produced. But it didn't work.

From Thursday at 3 p.m. until midnight Saturday, it was a test of endurance. The government trying every means to break the Opposition. Brodeur even said it was all being done to injure his health, but the Opposition saw their duty and hung on.

And the results proved that their stand was called for. One of the first papers brought down revealed first of all to one of the members who had boarded with some of the experts all winter, that the government had been paying $4 a day to them for board that had cost them $5 a week only. And Mr. Brodeur was utterly unable to explain it. The Opposition were then more determined to see all the papers. And the sitting continued.

Then more came. It was shown that the agreement between Mr. Brodeur and Falkener was a secret one. Then Falkener had actually certified to his own accounts, to the very bills he made out. At first Brodeur insisted that he had vouchers for the board bills, and afterwards had to admit there were none.

There did not seem to be one straight thing about the deal, from the agreement to the board that cost $5 a week and was paid for at the rate of $28 a week.

The victory for the Opposition was a most complete one and will make the government more careful hereafter. To the fight of the Opposition the country owes a debt of gratitude.

Later word from Ottawa shows that Falkener admits that he was never a chartered accountant, and the firm of which he was a member was only incorporated after the Marine department job was obtained. Which proves, as was expected, that the $42,000 was only another graft scheme.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Y.M.C. deserves the heartiest co-operation of all right-thinking citizens. No institution in the city is in the same class for doing good work among the young men. The men who instituted the movement took a big risk, but the need of something of the kind was their guarantee that it would be a success. To undertake an immediate expense of over $2,000 was a big thing at this time; an instructor has been engaged to make the best of the facilities provided.

Every young and middle-aged man in town should join, both to encourage the work and to get the good that it is the aim of the institution to supply. Business men's classes have been formed and the prospects are bright for a big class. Then there are seniors', juniors' and ladies' classes.

The library is a gift of the people. Over 300 volumes are already on the shelves, and all have been presented by interested citizens. There is room for 5000 more.

The selection of the Board of Trade for officers for 1908 could hardly be improved upon. Quite a sum of money was spent last year and we hope to see the results this year. The expenditure this year, as pointed out by president Pingle, will be confined almost entirely to office expenses. John T. Hall will be working steadily, as usual, but much of his duty will be of a follow-up order. The consideration given to such wildcat propositions as flowed in last year will be brief.

Every town in the west has been offered Krupp works if a few thousand dollars could be secured as a start. Many towns thought they were made and put up the money, but Medicine Hat kept aloof, and with certain limitations she is the better for it.

This city offers sufficient advantages in the cost of power, free sites, etc., to more than equalize the money grants of other cities.

A step the city might take to advantage for a year is to offer gas free to industries fulfilling certain conditions.

The Winnipeg Commercial says:—"In the city of Medicine Hat the gas wells are owned by the municipality and the revenue from its gas wells, after paying all charges for interest and depreciation, was in the neighborhood of $30,000. For a population of 5,000 this is thought to be very gratifying, and it brings the rate of taxation down to nine mills on the dollar."

This shows the manner in which outsiders look on our gas proposition—not so much as making living cheap, but as a source of revenue which makes the taxation rate low. And it will be found that this is the popular conception. Through this, therefore, we must look for our greatest advertisement. In a revenue and a tax rate we have definite figures which every mind can grasp.

And that is one of the reasons why The Times advocated (and does so still) a higher rate on gas; it will increase our revenue and decrease our

---

And talking of gas rates there is a local opinion that Medicine Hat has the lowest tax rate in Canada. This is far from correct. While this city is far ahead of any other growing town in that respect, there are several Canadian cities that can boast of a lower rate than ourselves. Most of them are in Quebec and are under little expense for improvement. Here are some of the lowest rates (with populations) without allowing for any cash discount: Buckingham, Que., 4000, ten mills; Farnham Que., 3800, eight mills; Joliette Que., 5300, ten mills; Lachine, Que. 9000, ten mills; Riviere du Lou 6500, ten mills; St. Hyacinthe, Que. 9400, seven and a half mills; St. Jerome, Que., 3700, six and a half mills; Shawnigan Falls, Que., 3500, ten mills; Sorel, Que., five mills; Strathcona, Que., 4000, ten mills; Summerside, P.E.I., 8000, eight mills; Three Rivers, Que., 12,500, seven and a half mills.

But who wants to live in any of those places?

Another idea that we are getting out of our heads with advantage is the belief that leaving the lights burning all day long is a good advertisement. The wisdom of turning out the lights was pointed out in The Times more than a year ago, and recent expressions on the part of travellers have supported our contention. It is never a good advertisement to appear extravagant. It is better for outsiders to have a good opinion of us than of one of our conveniences. Mr. Bury ordered the lights out at the station in spite of the fact that those lights were no expense and did not affect the pressure on their own well. A great many of the complaints of pressure that have made another well necessary might have been avoided by the stop to this waste of gas.

Mr. Bury, of the C.P.R., discovered that the gas at Dunmore could not be shut off as a change of piping is going on. This accounts for the fact that the gas is still burning.

The lot of the daily newspaper is bad enough at any time. But just now a daily is a burden and many of them are going to the wall, or cutting down the expenses so much as to make the paper of very little value. Several have gone out of business in Canada within the past six months, and things are worse in the United States. The daily that starts before a city is ready for it injures the city as well as itself.

Would it be possible to have a Canadian club in Medicine Hat? Lethbridge, Calgary and Edmonton have them and are well pleased with the results. Even little Camrose boasts of a sturdy club. The addresses that could be secured from prominent travellers would be bright spots in the city life.

It might be possible to secure the Y.M.C. gymnasium for a lunch room and have some local man cater.

The Calgary Albertan, in commenting upon the recent attempt to combine Liberals and Conservatives of that city for clean elections raises a laugh at itself with the following: "It will not be surprising if their (Calgary Liberals) answer is that they have never adopted any other methods in elections. Though there has been some influencing of breeds and that kind of a thing, yet it must be admitted that the elections in Calgary during the last ten years at least have been very free from discreditable features."

"The influencing of breeds and that kind of a thing," is the very thing that makes unclean elections. And how delightfully non-committal is the Albertan in "and that kind of a thing."

New subscribers to The Times go on the same as usual in spite of bargain rates on certain days. As a sample, last week six new subscribers, all from the city, were added to The Times list in one day.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

Cost of Newspapers

Sooner or later the daily newspaper will have to be greatly reduced in size. Already the increase in the cost of white newspaper is such that many publishers in the United States deem it necessary to raise the price of the one-cent daily to two cents. In Canada several papers have built up large circulations at rates away below cost. Certain papers in Montreal and Toronto have accepted annual subscriptions from points beyond the edge of their local field at one dollar per year. In some cases this cheap rate was accepted from any out-of-town subscriber; in other cases the rule was drawn that the cheap rate was open only to those who lived at such a distance that the paper could not reach them on the day of publication. Of course a daily paper cannot be produced at one dollar per year. At that price the subscriber pays little more than half the cost of the white paper used and pays nothing whatever towards the cost of editing, newsgathering and the hundred and one expenses incurred in a modern establishment where blank sheets are converted into newspapers. The advertiser pays all the bills, everything, in some cases huge deficits on circulation. He pays the entire cost of producing the dollar daily, and also subsidizes the subscriber by letting him have it at half the price the white paper costs when bought wholesale by the ton. To a greater or less extent the same kind of thing has been going on all over North America for years, and the dailies selling at less than the cost of white paper have greatly increased the number of their readers. The cheaper and larger a paper becomes the more it will circulate; the more a paper circulates the greater is the volume of advertising it can secure, and at higher rates. Under this system the consumption of paper has become enormous. Papers have become universally read, huge in bulk, multifarious in contents. Writing in the American Review of Reviews, W. S. Rossiter says that ten times as much newsprint is used now in the United States as was consumed twenty-five years ago. Not only are there more publications, but the average of circulation is three times greater and the average of size has doubled. For five cents one buys a New York Sunday paper that equals in substance an octavo volume of 480 pages. "Every Sunday, he writes "there are issued in the United States 456 Sunday editions, which produce an amount of printed matter sufficient to form a library of six million volumes of 500 octavo pages each." Yet these books are but glanced at and thrown away! The forests of pulpwood from which paper is made are being devoured with a rapidity that has caused alarm reaching even to the Washington Government. President Roosevelt in his last message to Congress, suggested that a deal should be made with Canada for a future supply—but many of us think that Canada should, on her own premises, do the work of converting her forests into paper. As was said on this page some time ago, the paper mills of the United States have got to be fed from this side of the boundary, or they have got to come across to show that there are ways by which this side to feed.

No doubt, with diligent experiment other woods than spruce, hemlock, poplar and balsam, can be used in paper-making. But even so, it seems impossible, without vast plans of reforesting, that North America can continue her great waste of paper. It is out of all reason. Experts have been discussing the question gravely of late and all agree that daily newspapers will have to decline in size, sell at a higher figure, and give advertisers less space for the money. It is a reform, however, that will be difficult to introduce, until forced by an actual paper famine—such a famine that will make paper so expensive that advertisers will be unwilling to pay for almost free distribution of unlimited quantities of it and so scarce that only those will be asked to subscribe for a journal who are willing to pay something towards the cost of producing and delivering it.—R. S. Jenkins, of Strathcona.

BRUTE.—"I shall never speak to you again," declared Mrs. Jawback, reduced to tears at the end of the argument.

"Just like a woman," scoffed Mr. Jawback, brutally. "If you can't get your way in any other way you resort to bribery."—Washington Herald.

Although generally described as a disease, can never exist unless some of the organs are deranged, which is generally found to be the liver. ANNUAL MEETING OF BOARD OF TRADE

A COUNCIL FOR 1908 ELECTED

NUMBER OF NEW MEMBERS

Enthusiasm and faith in the city and the work of the Board of Trade formed the keynote of the annual meeting held in the city hall last Tuesday evening.

The first business was the election of new members. Thirteen had been nominated and these were balloted for and unanimously elected. They are as follows: Samuel T. Miller, J. G. Waldock, R. R. Stoner, W. B. Finlay, J. T. Bell, J. S. Lawrence, A. B. LeBlanc, John McNeely, A. C. Sackrider, W. H. Turpin, L. W. McBean, R. S. Becker, Thos. Littleford.

The secretary stated that at the last meeting of the council it was decided that he should take over the city assessorship. He briefly explained the position and asked for an endorsation of the council's action. In the past he had expressed himself to one or two members of the board as not having sufficient work to do, and as anxious to take on additional duties. Recently a member of the city council and a member of the council of the board of trade had approached him in the matter of taking over the assessorship. The city council in their wisdom had seen fit to offer him the position and he had accordingly accepted. The salary would go into the funds of the board of trade and would not mean any increase in his personal remuneration. On the motion of Mr. Fatt, seconded by Mr. Fewings, the action of the council was endorsed.

The president, C. S. Pingle, then read his address as follows;

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

In presenting the seventh annual report it affords me much pleasure to note the progress that has been made by this organization during the past year. Commencing the year with a membership of 50 the increase for the year has been 100 per cent., as our membership now stands at the even 100, and a number of applications will be placed before you for ballot this evening.

There are a few items contained in the retiring address of my predecessor in office, Mr. F. L. Crawford, which I would like to touch on briefly.

Mention was made of the traffic bridge which has now almost reached the stage of completion, and we look forward with pleasure to the opening ceremony which doubtless will take place in a very short time. We understand that His Worship Mayor Cousins and the members of the city council are already taking the necessary steps to celebrate in a fitting manner the inauguration of the bridge for general traffic. We hope every reason to feel proud of this structure, as it is not every city of 5000 inhabitants can boast of a traffic bridge costing $150,000, and we cannot allow this opportunity to pass without noting how much we are indebted to the Hon. W. T. Finlay for this public improvement and for the watchful eye that he has always kept on the interests of the city of Medicine Hat and district in the provincial legislature, of which he is such an honored member.

Reference was also made by Mr. Crawford to farming and experimental stations. This has been advanced to such a stage that we feel its success is assured, the Canadian Pacific company having generously offered to donate $1000 for this purpose.

Reference was also made to the inadequacy of the post-office requirements, and it is with much pleasure that we note the large number of new boxes that have been added during the year, and in this connection we look forward to the completion of the new post office in the near future when we think we will have postal facilities of a somewhat adequate nature for the requirements of our rapidly growing city.

Clause 10 dealt with overhead bridge or subway across the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and we understand that this matter is still under consideration by the railway commission.

A large portion of the retiring president's report was based upon an elaborate scheme showing how the board could be put on a more permanent basis for the year 1907. Through the untiring efforts of a number of the members of the board the fund of $3505 was subscribed, to this the city added a grant of $2500, making a total of $6005. Ground was procured from the railway company under lease and tenders called for a building, the result being the comfortable and commodious board building at the corner of Main and South Railway streets which we value at $1200 and to which we should add for furniture and office total of $1600, and everything in fixtures the further sum of $400, a connection with it paid for. There is still unpaid upon subscriptions the sum of $900 nearly all of which we consider to be perfectly good, and we do not think that we would have any difficulty in collecting this had it not been for the financial stringency which came so suddenly upon us during the year. Half the city grant namely $1250, we received in cash, the balance was put in the form of a three months' note which was placed in our bank as collateral and upon the security of which we discounted a $500 note, in order that we might close up the year in a businesslike manner. Of our membership of 100 only 7 have failed to pay their fees for the year 1907. This, we think is a very good showing, and if we had been able to get in all subscriptions and all fees and all fees had been paid up we would have closed the year with a nominal balance of about $1600.

And now a word or two regarding our correspondence during the year. To inquiries for information there has gone out from the office to the United States 843 communications, in Canada 994, to Great Britain 32, foreign countries 8, and with each of these letter went some printed matter relative to the district and city of Medicine Hat. There have been published during the year 30,000 leaflets and pamphlets. In addition to these we purchased 100 copies of the Christmas number published by the News Printing company, which contained a great deal of useful and interesting matter pertaining to Medicine Hat and district. Special write-ups were also made during the year for the Western Municipal News, Natural Gas Journal New York; Power Magazine, New York; Industrial Canada, Monetary Star Calgary Alberta, Municipal Journal and others, and we have been empowered to act as correspondent for many influential papers throughout Ontario which we trust will have beneficial results in the future in making better known the advantages of the city and district.

On the 17th and 18th of September the Union of the Municipalities of Alberta met here and our board assumed all responsibility for the clerical work in connection with the same and also the printing of an elaborate report of 48 pages containing proceedings and the full text of all papers read before the Union.

During the year your board have kept close in touch with the Canadian Pacific Railway company, and during the month of July Mayor Cousins and a member of the board went to Calgary to interview Mr. R. R. Jamieson regarding the removal of certain train crews from the city of Medicine Hat to some other point on the line. We were well received by him and he informed us that whatever changes the railway company were to make in Medicine Hat it would ultimately be beneficial to her interests. A short time after that we had the pleasure of knowing that Medicine Hat had been created a divisional point, and we welcomed to our midst Mr. J. S. Lawrence as divisional superintendent accompanied by his staff.

We have also been honored with visits from other officials high in the confidence of the company upon several occasions. On the seventh of January all the western divisional superintendents held a convention in our city and they were all exceedingly pleased with the courtesy and attention shown them by the city council and the citizens of Medicine Hat. A member of the board had a very interesting conversation with Mr. Bury, general superintendent in Winnipeg, on Thursday Feb. 13, 1908, who laid before him in an unofficial way what the city and citizens of Medicine Hat are prepared to do in event of their building shops at some point between Winnipeg and the coast. Our representative was very kindly received by him, and we feel assured that our city has a friend in Mr. Bury and that genuine claims put forth by us will have a firm advocate in him. He is fully alive to and thoroughly appreciates the situation and we feel that our city would not be enjoying some of the railway facilities which we have at the present time had it not been for the strong arguments put forth by him in behalf of our city.

From a manufacturing standpoint it is with pleasure that we note the installation of three large brick plants in the immediate vicinity of Medicine Hat during the year. We are also pleased to note the recent change in the personel of the directorate of the Western Canneries Co., and look forward to a large development and an early start in operating this plant, and we feel that the members of the board should feel honored in the fact that one of the members of the board was chosen as managing director for the same.

We were a little disappointed in the recent turn of events in connection with the Rosery, Flower & Seed Company, as we felt certain, and are still confident that this will be an excellent proposition for the city. Unfortunately we were not aware at an earlier period of the financial condition of affairs at the head office in Winnipeg, but we are taking time by the forelock and arranging matters in such a way that should anything happen we will be in a position to protect the Medicine Hat end of the proposition and the western shareholders.

Notwithstanding the general depression and the tightness of money over the entire country we are still optimistic regarding the future possibilities and prospects of the city of Medicine Hat and district and we firmly believe that when the present tidal wave of hard times and lack of money shall have receded that we will find ourselves on the outer edge of a circle of prosperity which will be greater than we have yet experienced and upon a sounder foundation as we think that a good deal of the wild-cat speculation which has been indulged in in the past has been done away with.

As an advertising proposition, we have found that the placing of free stationery and writing materials in the board of trade room is one of the best schemes for spreading abroad knowledge of our city and its facilities, as it has been a matter of surprise even to ourselves the large number of strangers who are waiting between trains who avail themselves of these privileges and their postage carries our advertising matter in every direction.

We cannot close our report without expressing our gratitude to the Bell Telephone company for installing us a service free of charge, and also to M. C. Sackrider for some large stationery cupboards which he kindly donated to the board.

We also deem it our duty to speak in commendation of the spirit displayed by Messrs. Bennett & Hamilton in placing at the disposal of the board of trade and city council some 60 acres of land in Industrial Place absolutely free of cost for the purpose of encouraging manufacturers to locate there, and also Mr. George Luno, who presents under the same terms and conditions Blocks A, B and C and 1, 2, and 3, in Riverdale survey. These acts speak louder and more telling than mere words.

During the year that is past we have been but laying the foundation of our Board of Trade and publicity machinery. We started the year with practically nothing and are looking forward to the work of the year 1908 in a very hopeful spirit, and that when the next yearly report is presented it will show that thorough organization, persistent effort, hard work and horse sense, is bound to produce excellent results.

F. G. FORSTER, Treasurer.
H. W. IRELAND, Auditor.

The president explained that the statement should have been printed and handed to the members before the meeting according to constitution. The matter had been left over till the last minute in order to get a full report which should take account of late subscriptions. The report was adopted.

The nominations for officers for 1908 were announced. Judge Mitchell and Hon. W. T. Finlay were at the top of the ballot for honorary president. Judge Mitchell wished to withdraw. He was more or less out of touch with the business of the city and would be away during a great part of the year. He would, however, keep the board of trade constantly before him and do anything he could when the matter of subscriptions came up.

C. S. Pingle and W. Huckvale were the two named for president. Mr. Pingle said he much appreciated the honor which was conferred upon himself in being again nominated for the high office. He would prefer, however, to withdraw his name. "You have picked two good men, and I will withdraw in favor of the better," he said laughingly. He had had to neglect his private business during the past year and wished to give this more attention during 1908. Ald. Huckvale could not see sufficient reason for Mr. Pingle's withdrawing. It appeared to him that by so doing the object of the nominations was defeated. He (Ald. Huckvale) would be away during the greater part of the season on his ranch. Ald. Forster thought that the fact of there being three vice-presidents this year would make the work of the presidents much lighter than in the past. Eventually Mr. Pingle decided to let his name stand, ruling at the same time that no one else should be allowed to withdraw.

The council were elected as follows: Hon. Pres. Hon. W. T. Finlay; Pres., C. S. Pingle, 1st Vice-Pres., A. E. Whiffin; 2nd Vice-Pres. W. Huckvale; 3rd Vice-Pres., F. O. Sissons;; Treasurer F. G. Forster.

The next fourteen names on the nomination sheets were submitted, and resulted in the election of the following members on the council: W. Cousins, F. L. Crawford, J. Hutchinson, F. S. Pingle, D. G. White, F. F. Fatt, V. C. James.

The president said that a good choice had been made in the personnel of the council, and expressed a wish that things would go as smoothly during this year as had been the case in 1907. This year would not be so strenuous as last and office expenses alone would have to be met. The secretary had instructions to be as economical as possible. There was every prospect of 1908 being the easiest year in the history of the board. They hoped, moreover, to get some results from the good hard work of the past.

A resolution was passed to make a request of the bankers authorizing any of the vice-presidents with the treasurer, to sign checks, etc., on behalf of the board.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

At a meeting of the Calgary Trades and Labor council last week the secretary read a letter or extract from the Fernie Ledger re Compensation Act, casting a reflection on Bros. Leheney and Howell of Calgary, and the Calgary Trade council, calling the Calgary council a minor body and stating that Bros. Leheney and Howell were there as a means more for advertising themselves than to benefit the labor men in the Compensation Act.

Some of the delegates were of the opinion that the delegates who went to Edmonton had gone the wrong way about it when they approached the leader of the Opposition, but it was stated by Bro. Howell that they had first gone to some members. They failed to get an interview with Mr. Cross, and when they could not get in the government side of the House they went to Mr. Robertson, leader of the Opposition, and he was willing to take up the amendments as laid down by the committee regarding the Compensation Act.

A resolution was passed as follows:

That this meeting of the Calgary Trades and Labor council, representing practically the whole organized labor of the city, hereby places on record that J. F. Leheney, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and Geo. Howell, secretary of this council, were duly accredited representatives of organized labor and were instructed to appear before the government in order to press for many amendments that were desired by organized labor and furthermore in order to show our appreciation of the good services of J. F. Leheney, present him with the sum of $25, together with our best thanks for his invaluable services in securing an improved Act.

Macleod, March 12.—The C.P.R. today was fined $200 and costs for working Operator Mullen on Sunday Dec. 15, without allowing him 24 hours rest during six days contrary to the Lord's Day Act. *

Toronto, Ont., March 12.—The Canadian Pacific railway officals are evidently determined to have rules obeyed by employees. Only a few days ago thirty-five men were dismissed for not living up to instructions and yesterday seventeen more were dismissed.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 12.—The National Convention of the United Mine Workers of America met today in Tomlinson's hall to agree upon a course of action because of the failure of the operators and miners of the Central competitive field to agree upon a joint wage conference to fix a scale in place of the present one, which expires April 1. The wage scales for the various bituminous fields of the United States and Canada are based upon the scale fixed in the central competitive field consisting of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

Failure to agree upon a joint meeting to fix this scale has caused President Mitchell to call a national meeting of the miners. Indications are that four propositions will be considered by the convention.

A meeting of Federal labor union No. 8 was held in Cochran's Hall on Saturday evening. B. Randall was elected vice-president. It was decided to change the place and date of meeting for the future. The next meeting will thus be on Friday of this week at 20k., when it is hoped that a number of new members will be enrolled. All interested are requested to attend.

Calgary Aldermen Grabbing

Calgary is undergoing the same experience as was forced on Medicine Hat by the salary-grab aldermen. And the Calgary papers come out on the question as any reasonable paper would. Here is what the Albertan says:

"Though the Albertan is generally of the opinion that aldermen of any other public servants should be paid for work that they do for the public if that work is very extensive, the Albertan is opposed to the present city council paying themselves out of the coffers of the city and believes that the citizens of Calgary will not tolerate the present board of aldermen voting themselves salaries for this year.

"The people of Calgary will not tolerate any salary grab. The citizens believe that the mayor should be paid and will tolerate that, for the reason that the mayor has been paid for the last two years and the principle has been established.

"But with the aldermen it is different. In all Canada, as far as we are informed, in only one or two of the larger cities are aldermen paid, and even there the question was never submitted to the council.

"It is possible that the aldermen will insist upon taking the graft, but it is certain that in this city there are enough public spirited citizens who will serve the city out of loyalty to the citizens without asking any pay for it.

"It is certain, too, that the citizens will not tolerate the action of the aldermen who will dip their hands into the public chests and give it out to all hands.

"The Albertan would not oppose paying a council board of about five members, one from each ward and the mayor, such salaries to begin in 1909. But the Albertan believes that any salary grant to aldermen of this year looks altogether too much like graft. And, moreover, any alderman who favors such a form of petty graft is going to be beaten at the next election.

"Let us despise all this form of petty graft. The Albertan believes that men like Ald. Watson, Ald. Suitor and Ald. Graves, who have devoted so much of their time to the business of the city will resent legislation of this kind until the people in general have had time to sanction."

And The Herald says:

"Almost the only important business transacted by the city council on Monday evening was to arrange for a special meeting to consider voting salaries to the aldermen. Such an action if persisted in would be a flagrant exhibition of graft. The ratepayers of Calgary have not signified their wish to have a paid board of aldermen. The present council was not elected with the understanding that it would be paid. Its members offered their services to the city and solicited the votes of the citizens on an honorary basis. To proceed now to vote themselves salaries would constitute a plain and unvarnished raid upon the city treasury.

"A city the size of Calgary has no need for paid aldermen and cannot afford such a luxury. If any alderman in the council thinks he should be paid let him resign and offer himself for re-election on that basis. He will find other men just as valuable as himself ready to serve the city for the honor of doing so and through a sense of public duty; and the ratepayers will demonstrate to him in short order that they are prepared to give the other man a chance.

"With the act just through the legislature providing for paid commissioners it is almost absurd for the city council to think of voting salaries to its own members. No high-minded alderman will consent to receive pay for his public service under present conditions, at least until the people have been consulted."

And the Calgary News says:

"We agree with The Albertan that the city has expressed no opinion on the subject of salaries to aldermen. If the city fathers feel that civic patriotism needs financial propping for the next few months, let them submit a bylaw and receive instructions from the people who pay the money.

"The alderman who makes a motion to pay himself is making his own municipal coffin lid."

Of the five papers in the two cities where the salary grab was tried only the Medicine Hat News said one word in its favor. And why?

The News must feel mighty lonesome in the support of such a measure.

TORTURING SKIN DISEASE
Afflicted this bright little girl

Mrs. F. Miner, of 311 Suffolk Street, Guelph, Ont., says: "A year since, while while living in Oshawa, Ont., my little daughter Lorinda, six years of age contracted a skin disease on the upper part of her body. This first broke out like tiny water blisters, afterwards taking the form of dry scabs. These would disappear for a short time and then reappear worse than ever. The clothes coming in contact with the skin set up such a severe irritation that it was impossible to keep her from scratching. We tried various preparations yet obtained no good results until we began using Zam-Buk. With each application the irritation and soreness was greatly relieved, and the child rested easier. Thro' continued using, the eruptions and scabs fast disappeared and in a short space of time the skin was completely cleared from the disease. It is now some months since we used Zam-Buk, and as there are no signs of any more eruptions breaking out on her body, we believe Zam-Buk has worked a complete cure." Zam-Buk Cures cuts, chapped hands, itch, ulcers, eczema, running sores and all diseases of the skin. Of all druggists and stores 50c. or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

HAMILTON-FRASER.

The following from the Stratford Beacon of March 11 will be of interest. Mr. Hamilton is well known in the city although a newcomer:

On Tuesday evening, March 10, at 6 o'clock the marriage of Miss Janet Stewart, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fraser, to Mr. George L. Hamilton of Medicine Hat, Alberta, was solemnized at the home of the bride, "Hill Manor," 75 Front street, by Rev. R. M. Hamilton, Weston, brother of the groom, the drawing room being beautifully decorated for the occasion with cream roses and palms. The bride's pretty dress was of white silk and chiffon with an overdress of Limerick lace, yoke and bertha of baby Irish point, trimmed with white satin, lilies of the valley in her hair and carried a sheaf of white roses. After congratulations and the wedding dinner the bride donned her travelling suit of navy blue herringbone stripe with hat to match. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton left for Medicine Hat, via Chicago and Minneapolis. The large number of beautiful and varied gifts testified to the popularity of both bride and groom.

I have secured 150 ACRES of some of the best fruit lands in the Kootenay district. which means the best land in British Columbia.

Instead of demanding an enormous profit, I am offering it for rapid sale at a small profit.

The land is within three miles of a railway station, and is easily accessible, light timbered, and easily cleared---no rocks, no mountain side, nice gradual slope in the heart of a fruit growing district.

It cannot last long at this price. Investigate at once. Already 50 acres have been disposed of.

A HOLIDAY TRIP

TWO LOCAL MAIDS GO SIGHT SEEING

AND CAUSE A LOT OF ANXIETY

The two Medicine Hat maidens, Virginia Degon and Mabel Gay, who took flight last Sunday, and have since caused so much anxiety to the parent of one, Mr. Thomas Degon, and so much work for the police, have been located, and one of them, Miss Degon, dwells once more under the parental roof.

The girls left the city on the Crow train on Sunday night under the impression that they were bound for Calgary. Immediately on Miss Degon's absence being noticed at home, her father, who was engineering out on the line, was wired for. He went up to Calgary on Monday and instituted enquiries, which eventually led to their being located in Lethbridge. A C.P.R. trainman who read the account given in The Albertan telegraphed the Calgary police that two girls answering the description given were staying at the Arlington hotel. The girls had pawned their watches at the Auction Mart, and this in itself had aroused suspicions. At Lethbridge the girls had entrained again, as they thought for Calgary—but again they were mistaken, and at Stirling they got off the train, later returning to Lethbridge. Had the right train been boarded the runaway damsels would have found Mr. Degon on the platform at Calgary, ready to meet them. As it was he travelled down to Lethbridge and brought home his truant daughter on Friday. Miss Gay, who has been employed at the Cypress restaurant, was left in Lethbridge and her trunk sent on to that city, whence, it is thought she may go on to Calgary. She has no relations in Medicine Hat.

This is the first time the Walschaert has seen service west of Winnipeg, though it has been running on the eastern roads for some months past, and it is in fairly common use on some of the American roads.

In this engine a link motion displaces the eccentric for valve gear and there are a number of other points of difference.

Some people have been talking of hard times. One of The Times' exclusive advertisers has been forced to increase his staff and is working the entire staff every night. This merchant commenced his advertising a little over a month ago and, naturally, selected The Times as the medium. Business need not be slow if you advertise in the paper that gives results.

Brougham & O'Hara

To Open New Billiard and Shaving Parlors

The old Alberta cafe has gone out of existence. And in its place will start up in a few days a pool, billiard, cigar and barber room. Charlie Brougham, who has been in the cigar and barber business on South Railway street for some years has taken in with him "Mike" O'Hara, the popular baggageman, who has been running in and out of the Hat, and making a name for himself in several athletic lines.

Two pool tables and an English billiard table are expected any day. The fixture for the barber shop is a dandy, and the same class of fittings will hold throughout.

The entire ground floor will be used. If possible the rooms will be opened before April 1. Mr. O'Hara will not leave the road at present, as the putting on of the extra train will put him in Medicine Hat for most of the nights.

Both boys are very popular and the rooms will be sure to secure their share of the patronage.

THE DEMPSTER METHOD

Medicine Hat is going to have a farm to demonstrate the Campbell system.

Medicine Lodge has adopted a new system of dry land farming and has been demonstrating every month during the winter.

The new system is known as the Dempster system.

In practise it consists of a combination of energy and perseverance—coupled with a moderately heavy snowfall.

Mr. Dempster has been out on his land every possible day during our "winter." He has been turning the sod during every month of the past season and when Inspector Parker was out at the Lodge last week he had the greater part of his land already plowed and disced. He claims he has gained on all the other farmers in the district by plowing the snow under, thus working the moisture into the soil. He claims that in this way the moisture will be conserved when the warm Chinook comes.

The Dempster farm is in splendid shape and Mr. Dempster is putting forth every effort to show what progressive farming can do for this district.

COSMOPOLITAN EXTENSIONS

New Addition will be Commenced Next Week

A fine three-storey addition is to be made to the Cosmopolitan hotel. Contracts for the work will be let at an early date, and it is anticipated that the work of construction will be begun by the first of next month.

The size of the principal addition will be 25 feet by 90 feet. On the first floor will be the dining room, 24 feet by 55 feet and sample rooms. On the second floor will be bedrooms each supplied with wash basins with hot and cold water, four bedrooms having private bath and lavatory. The third floor also will be used for bedroom purposes. Corridors will be 6 feet wide.

There will be a further extension at the rear of the dining room, 22 feet by 45 feet and in height two storeys, the first to contain kitchen and laundry, the second bedrooms.

Under the whole will run a basement, divided into cold storage room, bedrooms for employees and storabe.

The present dining room Mr. Bassett intends to turn into a reading and writing room, with serving room in the rear. The new dining room, all walls of which will be panelled will open from the rear of the rotunda. There will be steam heating throughout. By these changes and additions thirty bedrooms will be added to the present accomodation.

Altogether, the Cosmopolitan will be brought into line with the best hotels in the province and the handsome extension will be an excellent advertisement for the city to all passing through on the line. Wm. T. Williams is the architect who has had the preparation of the plans.

WHEAT SOWN.

It is said that Mr. Potzer, living six miles southeast of Irvine already has 80 acres of wheat planted.

A great many farmers are well advanced with their plowing and discing.

In the matter of moisture the farmers will start out in much better shape than last year, in spite of the little snow. Last year's snow melted and ran off before the ground was soft enough to take it in. This year the rains and light snows of the past month have fallen on soft ground and soaked into the soil.

Cheap Power

The manufacturers in a little Canadian town rejoicing in the name of Medicine Hat, are revelling in what is probably the cheapest power supply in the world. Extensive natural gas fields are owned by the municipality and the supply is so abundant that gas for industrial purposes is sold for 5 cents per thousand cubic feet. The gas has a calorific value of about 1,100 B.t.u. per cubic foot which consists almost entirely of methane, or "marsh gas" (CH_4). Used in an engine having an economy of 11,000 B.t.u., which is a liberal allowance, the cost of fuel would be one-twentieth of a cent per brake horse-power-hour.—Power, New York

EVANGELISTS TOMORROW

Messrs. Gale and Hatch, the evangelists who have been holding meetings in Calgary open a series of services here tomorrow night in the Presbyterian church. The two men have been doing good work in Calgary and are very highly spoken of by the entire press of that city.

A large choir will assist Mr. Hatch.

Medicine Hat Fair

Date Earlier Than Usual

The date for the local Fair has been set for September 22, 23 and 24 instead of early in October as heretofore.

James Rae, who was in Calgary last week at the Fairs Association, has been made president of the Association.

The Y. M. C.

Large Classes and Fine Athletes

Dr. Smith, whose gymnasium work of former years will be remembered by the old timers, is assisting in the Y.M.C. gymnasium. On Friday night he and Mr. Gawley, the instructor, took a class of 85 in the gymnasium and put them through some very interesting work. The doctor has not lost his elasticity. The two instructors got through much more work than one could, and the boys were always on the go.

A class is being prepared for exhibition purposes and will appear here and in adjoining towns. The boys are developing very rapidly into good gymnasts, and it looks as if there will be some interesting work done.

The membership is increasing so rapidly that the senior class will have to be divided. There are about 70 already paid, and about 50 more have handed in their names and will be joining immediately. Forty juniors are in line and had their first class on Saturday morning, some of the youngsters turning up before 9 for the 10.30 lesson. The ladies class starts on Wednesday night, and a number have already signed.

Tonight Dr. Doyd lectures on "Hygiene," and a large attendance should be on hand.

MEDICINE HAT AS GRAIN MART

Calgary prices for No. 1 Northern, No. 2 Northern and No. 3 Northern are 84 cents, 79 cents and 73 cents respectively. For the same grades the Medicine Hat Milling company is paying 90 cents, 87 cents and 84 cents.

The average difference in price is over 8 cents in favor of Medicine Hat which is thus by far, the better grain mart.

SPECIAL NUMBERS.

The Red Deer Advocate has produced a special immigration number of 16 pages that represents a great deal of painstaking work on the part of Mr. Galbraith, the editor, formerly on the Guelph Mercury. The "experiences" of men who live in Red Deer show how firmly they believe in it. The stock is extra heavy book paper and the typography is worthy of a city office. The issue will do Red Deer a lot of good in England and the United States where it is being largely circulated.

The editor of The Advocate used to teach the head pen pusher of The Times on Sundays and Mrs. Galbraith did the same on week days—so we have a deep reverence for the Galbraith production, The Red Deer Advocate.

The Cranbrook Herald celebrated its tenth anniversary last week. "Old Man" Simpson, the editor has a lot of nice things to say about the Herald and it deserves them. The anniversary number is twelve pages filled with Cranbrook pictorial of its leading men, and descriptive of the changes during the ten years. Friend Simpson gives Cranbrook a fine paper, and they show their appreciation of it by their liberal patronage.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Seven Persons

We had a fine exhibition of grit here this week. Master George Murray had his team hitched to a post and as he went to jump into the waggon to get the sack, the horses made a jump, broke the post in two, and ran off full speed with the piece hanging to the halter, but George was equal to the occasion and had his sand right with him, jumped up, rolled up, tumbled up, got hold of the lines and brought the horses up standing, before they had gone more than sixty rods. We admire the boy's grit. It shows the stuff he's made of, but is it wise to risk one's life for the sake of a runaway team and wagon?

Mr. Weiss is home from the hospital and his friends are glad to hear he is progressing rapidly.

Sinclair's gang are laying the ties for the new sidetrack and lengthening and straightening the old one.

Supt. Lawrence was here looking over the track improvements being made at this place.

It is reported that J. F. Leonard will start a lumber yard here.

The doctor from the Hat was called to Mrs. Reed, who was dangerously sick, and took her to the hospital, where, we are sorry to say, she has to undergo an operation.

Mr. David Cargill made a business trip to Peter Welch's this week.

Inspector J. W. Brown and Mr. J. H. Butler went to the Hat Thursday.

The homesteaders who spent the winter in the States are returning, among them Mr. Van Valkenburg, Mr. Weeks, Mr. Elmer Wall and Mr. Ole Torgeson, the latter bringing with him six landseekers.

Considerable farm machinery is being shipped in—Sam Carlson, a new wagon; C. Tonberg, a new disc and W. Strand a plow and drag.

What is the matter with the landowners in this district? Why don't they have their land surveyed and lots laid out. A meeting to locate a store on Monday and so way to locate excepting by mates and bounds.

Ten homeseekers here and six carloads of settlers effects passed through on the train is the record for one day.

The school board has been unsuccessful in its effort to secure a teacher. School was to have commenced the 1st of March and it is now almost the 1st of April.

J. N. Good is about ready to move in his new house on his homestead, and Mr. A. W. Butler, our operator, is contemplating occupying the house vacated by Mr. Good.

One of the N.W.M.P. was interviewing some of the people here and made a very good impression by his gentlemanly manner.

Irvine.

It is understood on good authority that the living vacated by the Rev. H.C.L. Hooper is being taken up by a Rev. Jarrard, who comes up here from the east. The time he will take up his living here is not yet definite, but we all trust that it will be in the near future.

Messrs. H. D. Haviland and H. S. Newby returned from Regina on No. 97 Friday evening, having been in attendance at the synod at that place on Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

Mr. John Hausour, one of the part owners in the Irvine Elevator company who recently sold out to the Pacific Elevator company, has purchased the Irvine Hall and he intends to place in the basement of same a butcher shop and still continue to run the second floor as a public hall, much to the pleasure of the dancing public.

Say, don't forget the Leap Year dance that will be held in the Irvine Hall on April 1. The admission to same is gents, 75 cents; ladies, 25 cents.

The new lumber company that recently bought out Messrs. Fred. Weiss & Son are getting after their new yards in great style, and we see that they have their office buildings very nearly completed.

The C.P.R. surveyors were out at Elkwater Lake for the greater part of last week. This will mean that the C.P.R. intend to get more water for their dam, which at the present time is running very short.

Councillor Sam Kalmbach was up in Medicine Hat last Wednesday on business. Sam we see, is getting in a good supply of new lumber and as he is well known in this district should still retain his business connections.

Mr. E. H. Earl, of the Gros Ventre brought in a sample of the No. 1 Hard wheat, which, without a doubt is the best that is grown in Southern Alberta. A small sample of this may be obtained from Newby & Co. for the asking.

There is a movement on foot to form a club in Irvine, and all those that feel interested in this movement would do well to write H. S. Newby for full particulars of the advantages derived from the promotion of such an institution.

Mr. L. Bodenstub, who has just come down from Edmonton has obtained a position with Weiss & Co. as bookkeper for them in their store at Irvine.

Gros Ventre

A most enjoyable and successful social evening was spent at Mr. Ed. Smith's house last Wednesday evening. It took the form of a box social, organized for the purpose of raising funds to purchase an organ for the Presbyterian church mission.

During the evening songs were rendered by Miss Putnam, Miss Pearl Smith, Miss Pearl Doane, Mr. Coulter and others, while Mr. H. Hamilton gave bright violin selections. Much praise is due to the many friends, who assisted in making the evening the success which it undoubtedly was.

A sum of $40 was the result. Mr. Ramsay, auctioneer, deserves credit for his smart, business-like methods of sale, and his laughable hits at the bachelors made a merry time.

The arrival of Miss P. and Mr. E. Smith from the east, has brought joy to one lonely (?) bachelor out this way.

The farmers are commencing discing in this district.

Mr. Armstrong has his new granary almost completed.

Miss Pearl Doane is a guest at Maple Grove Farm.

Mr. John Bella paid a visit to Maple Grove Farm this week.

Who was the young man that couldn't tear himself away after the social?

The social held at Maple Grove Farm was a great success. The receipts amounting to $47.20. Mr. Coulter acted as chairman. The program was lengthy and enjoyable. Amongst those that took part were Mrs. William Putman, Mr. Henry Hamilton, instrumental music; Mr. Shaw, speech; song by Miss Pearl Smith and Mr. E. J. Smith. Amongst those that were called on for speeches and did not resound were Messrs. J. Harman, J. Brown, S. B. Smith, R. Armstrong, Jr., T. W. Walker. Miss Armstrong played and all joined in singing "The Maple Leaf." I might mention for the benefit of those that did not get there that the ladies in this district are second to none in preparing for a gathering of this kind. After all had satisfied the inner man, the auctioneer in person of Mr. William Ramsay was called on to dispose of the over plus which amounted to twelve dollars and fifteen cents. The proceeds for the purchase of an organ for the services held in Mr. E. J. Smith's house.

SIMPLE SIMON.

Woolchester

Homesteaders are still coming in here. Mr. Smyth, late of Lethbridge, has arrived with Mrs. Smyth and four children; and Mr. Manning, from England, has located beside him.

School opens on the first of April, and with the newcomers, good attendances are expected.

Mr. Windsor and sons are returning home to Minneapolis, after spending six months on their homestead.

Miss Jessie and Master James Johnstone have returned home from Gull Lake.

La grippe, which is prevalent in most places, has not visited many here. The Fenton children were all sick, but have recovered again.

Little Plume

Miss Maizie Weir is away teaching school at Elkwater Lake. This is only her second summer here. She taught at Woolchester last year after coming up from Nova Scotia.

It is understood that Mr. A. Lindsay will shortly be returning home to Montana.

Efforts are being put forward to get school started and it is thought that this will be effected in a short time, to the satisfaction of the parents at least, if not to the children.

Mr. Jim Salmond is leaving the district shortly, and it is said Mr. Gummer is about to do the same.

The coal mine has always a few customers daily. A seam of good coal has been struck which is being timbered up just now.

Mr. W. Boyd will be going back to his homestead shortly, and Mr. Cleveland from the Hat will be taking up residence in his stead.

The poisoning of dogs is giving trouble in the neighbhrhood. Mr. Shaw lost a valuable pedigreed collie which he prized greatly.

THE CITY FATHERS

The adjourned meeting of the council was held last night at 8 o'clock. Present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Huckvale, Morrow.

A petition from owners of property fronting on Toronto street between Sixth avenue and the road allowance was read, asking that a sewer connection be made with the portion of sewer now laid to Sixth avenue. Laid on the table till public works committee report.

The new by-laws relating to expenditure of $40,000 for waterworks extensions, $25,000 for gas works extensions, $10,000 for market site, were read a third time and passed.

The Mayor thought that some guarantee should be given the contractors for the Armory (A. J. Burns & Co.), with regard to the Armory site, so that they might go right ahead with the work. The solicitor stated that it was impossible to guarantee the site at present, as the titles had not been turned over by the C.P.R. The council might, however, guarantee the cost of moving in case this should be necessary. He had as yet received no reply from Mr. Griffin to his letters asking for the title. Ald. Huckvale thought it quite possible that Mr. Griffin was away. On Ald. Tweed's motion it was decided that the city guarantee any loss which might be incurred to the contractors should they have to move their material, in view of the promise made by Mr. Griffin in his letter to the city.

It was decided that J. Gillespie and A. E. Forrester, who wished to make gas and water connections to certain property, be given the city's note at 3 per cent. for the amounts required.

The council then went into committee of the whole to consider special frontage water tax by-law, and amendment to building by-law. After some discussion, progress was reported on the water by-law. The building by-law was amended in committee and passed its third reading, as did the new by-law governing the licensing of theatres and places of amusement.

As the building by-law relating to places of amusement stands, all buildings to which it applies must be of brick, stone, concrete or other incombustible material. The highest part of the auditorium floor must be not more than seven feet above the sidewalk. This applies only to new buildings. Exits, of which there must be at least two, must be placed as far apart as possible. Among other provisions, there must be at least two standpipes on the stage, the water supply to be kept on during occupancy of building. Three or more men competent to handle the apparatus must be kept on duty at each performance. Red lights, with a special connection, must be placed in the rear at the exits of the auditorium. The stage must be separated from the auditorium by a brick wall, 16 inches thick, the entire width of the building.

A by-law was passed to license theatres and places of amusement in accordance with preceding by-law, the cost of license to be $100, or a quarterly fee of $25. In committee the clause which forbids the use of a licensed building from Saturday night till Monday morning was struck out.

Ald. Huckvale thought that the council should give a water supply to property owners who were willing to advance money for the work. The Mayor's opinion was that it would be unwise for the council to make general provision for such cases. The council could consider them on their merits. In reference to this matter Ald. Baker could not see why the city should pay a percentage on money advanced for this purpose. The property owners reaped the advantage and that ought to be sufficient. The Mayor and Ald. Huckvale were of the opinion that the installation of the supply was also an advantage to the city, and it was only fair to pay a percentage on any outlay. Applications to be left in hands of gas and water commissioners to deal with.

Some discussion followed on last Monday's main burst, and the pumping station engineers came in for sharp criticism. Ald. Tweed thought it was a dangerous state of affairs to have both engineers away from the station at one time, one man quitting the station before being relieved by his colleague. Ald. Baker said that frequently the men were unpunctual in going on duty. This would result in no harm if each man stayed until relieved.

Ald. Tweed said the fire chief would be going up to Winnipeg in the near future and wished to be authorised to purchase certain supplies, snaps for use in the fire hall. The value of these would be about $10. The Mayor thought these should be bought locally. Ald. Tweed said they could not be obtained in town.

Another matter brought up related to the railway crossing. The fire chief wanted something to be done to make smoother driving here. At present whenever the wagon passed over the line there was a sudden jolt when they struck the rails. Ald. Tweed said he had noticed a quantity of cinders had been placed on the crossing. Whether these would tend to bring about the desired effect he could not say. Referred to fire, water and light committee.

On Ald. Baker's motion request of fire chief for supplies was granted.

A. DesBrisay returned to the city from the ranch on Saturday.

CHURCH NOTES.

Father Leduc, V. G., of St. Albert, was in the city yesterday.

An entertainment to be carried out entirely by the children of St. Barnabas' church Sunday school, will be given during Easter week, in all probability on Easter Monday. Mr. W. G. Rowe is already engaged in training the children. A maple dance, singing and children's play will form features of the program and a very interesting and enjoyable time may be looked forward to.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Knox church will meet with Mrs. Page, 200 Balmoral street, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Prayer meeting at Knox church will be held on Tuesday night instead of Wednesday.

Evangelist H. L. Gale

A meeting of those interested in the local band will be held in the American hotel next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The band boys are planning good music for the citizens and deserve all the support that can be given them.

The concert which was to be given by some Winnipeg talent for the Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church, as announced in The Times, has been called off, on account of the ruling of the city solicitor that churches that charge admission render themselves liable to taxation according to the Charter.

Dan Williams is opening an office in Creston, B.C., for the sale of his fruit lands. His time will be spent between that town and Medicine Hat. A great interest is being shown in his proposition by local people.

The Medicine Hat Trading company has made application for a change of name to the D. Milne Company, Limited, with an increase in capital stock from $50,000 to $75,000. The new firm will include all the old members, with Mr. Graham, the present manager of the dry goods department.

A most enjoyable time was spent by all present at Springbank Ranch the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Drake, by a large circle of friends from the neighborhood, Medicine Hat and Bowell, on Wednesday March 11. Progressive whist was indulged in until midnight, and dancing followed. The gentleman's first prize was won by Mr. James Dehnke, which was a beautiul silver match case, while the first prize for the ladies was won by Miss Laura Lemon, which was a handsome hand painted China pin tray. The winners of the booby prize were Mr. J. Bishop and Miss D. Ellis. Dancing followed after midnight and a more enjoyable time could not have been wished for by all present. Everyone proclaimed Mr. and Mrs. Drake charming entertainers.—Contributed.

The Methodist church is cutting through a back entrance to the church to facilitate exit.

The spring swimming season has started. Jack Peard and T. J. Fleager were coming across the river on Saturday from the rifle ranges, when Jack struck ice that was only a bluff. A cold bath was the result. The gun he carried saved him, as it caught on the ice and enabled him to crawl out. In the meantime Mr. Fleager was doing a combination salors' hornpipe and Highland fling, (the latter predominating) for the shore. The time was not taken, as Jack's watch had stopped, but it was a record. Now Jack has his annual over. Who's next?

Many settlers are coming into the Irvine district, most of them going out to the Forks at the north.

The summer birds are already flocking to southern Alberta in large numbers, so Inspector Parker reports on returning from his tour of inspection. Prairie chicken are said to be quite numerous in comparison with recent years. These things portend an early opening up of the spring season, if the birds turn out such good weather prophets as they are reputed to be.

A sample of oats was subjected to the government test by the Medicine Hat Flour Milling company last week. The result may now be seen in the company's office. The seeds rapidly germinated and in four days the blades had shot up to a height of an inch or so. The test will extend over ten days.

Mounted Police Notes.

Inspector Parker made a tour of Irvine, Josephsburg and Medicine Lodge last week end, returning to the city yesterday morning. At Josephsburg the house-breaking case came up before the Inspector and James Robinson, Henry and Peter Fehrman were charged with breaking into the house of Adolph Frengen. It appeared Mr. Frengen had left his house at 10 in the morning and returning at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, found that his stove had been removed—and replaced. Portions of the stove fixtures were lying about on the ground out of doors.

On Friday Henry Fehrman was tried, Constable Ashe prosecuting, and subjecting Peter, who was called in to give evidence against his brother, to a severe two and a half hours' cross-examination. Peter denied every charge and the evidence throughout was of a very contradictory character.

The preliminary hearing was continued on Saturday. Peter Fehrman's trial taking up four hours. Both were committed for trial, and in the meantime are out on bail.

Corporal Humby continues to make satisfactory progress and is now able to sit up each day.

The trial of Walter Sheppard for obtaining money on false pretences will shortly come up at Fort Macleod. Accused was arrested last week at Cowley, as the outcome of hard work by the police.

Sheppard obtained cash at Maple Creek for a cheque made out to the order of one Tembrooke, of Medicine Hat, who is supposed to be a myth, as he is not known in town. The prisoner attempted to pass the same cheque in this city last November.

Adolphe Brost and Daniel Hunter Gordon of the Bank of Commerce have both been summoned to appear as witnesses.

A squaw was arrested on Saturday for being drunk in town. She pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, or alternatively, a month's imprisonment.

Fort Saskatchewan, Sask., March 21.—Inspector D. A. E. Strickland, of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, died yesterday after 24 hours illness from heart failure. Inspector Strickland was well known throughout the west, having been stationed at various centres and travelled over nearly the entire country in his capacity as a police officer. He was also given charge of important missions in the far north.

For a number of years Inspector Parker was stationed with the deceased, in the early days of the force.

ATHLETICS

CITY LEAGUE FORMED.

There was more enthusiasm at the baseball meeting on Wednesday night than any professional club meeting ever produced here. In answer to the notice in the sporting column of The Times about 60 fans gathered in the dining room of the American hotel and for a couple of hours talked baseball and nothing else.

There was only one opinion—that a city league must be formed. A number of those present were representing various clubs which wished to put teams in, but it was decided to confine the games to four clubs—the City, the Fire Brigade, the Bachelors' Club and the C.P.R. Each club must pay a fee by March 25 of $10, and can sign 20 players, no players to be signed before April 1, and all must reside within 10 miles of Medicine Hat. Players must be signed 7 days before being eligible to play in scheduled game.

It is likely that a guarantee of $25 to finish the season will be put up by each club. Two games a week will be played, the season lasting about three months, from the middle of May to the middle of August, allowing another month afterwards for outside games. The C.P.R. boys have a fine battery coming from Minneapolis. The Bachelors' Club have some dark horses working out at Dunmore. The Fire Brigade and City clubs were out the next day scouring the city for players. The City club desires to make it known that they will be glad to receive applications from any intending players in the city.

The league officials elected were:
Hon. Pres.—Hon. W. T. Finlay.
Pres.—Jas. Fleming.
Vice-Pres.—G. W. Elliott.
Sec.—W. B. Finlay.
Treas.—C. A. Krauss.
Executive committee.—W. J. McLean, Mayor Cousins, E. D. Bennett and W. H. Turpin.

G. W. Elliott's offer of a cup for competition was made known.

The meeting thanked Messrs. Fleming and Elliott for their kindness and interest in baseball.

THE CITY CLUB.

A meeting of the City club of the new baseball league was held in the rooms of F. S. Pingle on Tuesday night. While the meeting was not large, on account of lack of publicity, those present were very enthusiastic and the future of the Club is exceedingly bright.

About a score were present, and, after putting W. Lacey Amy in the chair, and F. S. Pingle in the position of secretary pro tem, the election of officers was carried on, resulting as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mayor Cousins.
Pres.—F. S. Pingle.
Sec.-Treas.—D. H. Gordon.
Executive committee—Messrs. Long, Tyrrell and Amy.

The president announced that he would donate to the club the entrance fee of $10.

The club fee was placed at 50 cents. The colors are to be grey and red, the professional suits of last year being at the disposal of the boys.

Smythe Fleming was selected as mascot.

After April 1st the club can sign players, and invites all those wishing to play to hand their names in to any officer.

Mr. Pingle was tendered a vote of thanks for his donation and offer of his rooms at any time.

BACHELORS' CLUB BASEBALL ORGANIZATION.

On Saturday evening the Bachelors' Club formally organized their baseball club for the season to compete in the Gas City league for the Elliott trophy.

Elections resulted as follows:
Hon. Pres.—G. W. Elliott.
Pres.—Ed. N. Johnson.
Sec.-Treas.—B. W. Allen.
Manager—A. J. Gilmore.
Captain—W. J. Johnston.

The Bachelors will make a strong bid for the trophy. It is expected that the Club colors, blue and white, will be obtained in the uniform.

Barnstead, Calgary's star twirler last year will play this year with Seattle.

HULEN TALKS OF INDIANS' CHANCES.

Spokane, March 17.—Billy Hulen, looking five years younger than when he led the Everett team to the first pennant of the present Northwestern League organization three years ago, blew into the city yesterday and spent the afternoon meeting old friends and getting off letters and telegrams to members of the Spokane team ordering them to report the last of the present week.

During his trip around town Hulen repeatedly ran across oldtimers who wanted to tell him about a great catch they saw him make make in Philadelphia in '95.

"Now you get away from me," Hulen would say to such. "Don't you talk to me about 1895. Was I alive that far back? Why, I feel like a boy, and like this was my first season in fast company."

If there's one thing the new Spokane captain is touchy about it's his age and his years of experience. Don't ever call him "Oldtimer" or your liable to start something you can't finish. Hulen is proud of his nickname "Kid," and you can pay him no higher compliment than to tell him how young he's looking.

Having been in the business of winning pennants for the last two years as playing-captain and manager, Billy the Kid is prepared to make a modest talk talk about prospects that will be calculated to arouse the enthusiasm of the local fans.

"Spokane hasn't had a real pennant winner in a long time and it would be the proudest trick of my life if I could give them one, the first, I believe, since the days of old John Barnes in 1890.

"From the looks of the material Mr. Quinn has in hand and the men that are coming down with me from the upper country it would not surprise me if we did that thing. But after supporting a team in fifth and tail end positions for several seasons as loyally as Spokane has supported her teams it is reasonable to believe that they will be well satisfied if we turn out a team that's fighting all the way and playing the best baseball we know, and that's what we're going to have this year, and we hope the combination will be good enough to beat all the rest.

"There is some sort of false impression about the men from the upper country league, where I landed the flag for Medicine Hat last season. The boys who are coming down to join the Spokane team are not green kids. Some of them play as fast ball as I have ever seen outside the big leagues. Mackin, Kippert, Chandler, Benny, Rogers and others are all corking good ball players. They are not raw youngsters. They were all brought out to the twilight country from the far east, around Boston and Cincinnati, and everybody knows that these two cities turn out the fastest amateurs of any spot in the country."

Eddie Quinn interrupted here to say that he had good proof of Hulen's statement about them coming from the far east.

"You ought to see this list of transportation I've got to send out this week. Some of 'em are coming almost from Europe."

Hulen expects to play first base himself, moving Bobby James over to third or short, with Mackin at second. Shotstop position will be open to either Chandler or Hamilton, the latter a California State leaguer. In Rogers and Benny Hulen thinks Quinn has lined up two first class catchers, the latter especially catching the eye of the Captain. Benny may not accept the terms offered by Quinn as he has business proposition in sight and wants to quit baseball.

The Indians are being ordered to report the last of the week and a few of them are already getting a little advance batting and catching flies at Recreation park these warm afternoons.

The advance guard will probably start for Lewiston Monday morning.

Dublin, March 18.—Tommy Burns, the Canadian heavyweight made short work of Jem Roche, the Irish champion, in their contest this evening at the Theatre Royal for the world's heavyweight championship. Practically only one blow was struck Burns knocking Roche out when hardly more than a minute of the first round had been completed, by a short hook to the jaw. So quickly did the end come that the great crowd which filled the theatre in expectation of seeing the Irishman put up a good fight for the title, hardly realized what had happened.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

A considerable number of Rugby enthusiasts gathered at the Athletic grounds last Saturday. Two sides were chosen—Possibles and Probables, captained by S. Bannan and E. S. Frost, respectively. The Possibles won the toss and elected to play down the field with the wind at their backs. Tries were scored in the first half by H. Turnbull, converted by W. Wade, for the Probables; and N. Sinclair, unconverted, for the Possibles. Immediately on resumption of the second half the Probables scored through W. Wade, the same player converting. This was somewhat of a surprise score and afterwards, though playing against the wind, the Possibles attacked with great determination, keeping the Probables penned in their own quarters, and scoring two tries in quick succession, both of which were obtained by A. Edsie, the same player converting one. Just on the call of time the Probables rallied and scored through E. S. Frost W. Wade converting. This ended the scoring, and the Probables thus won out by 2 goals 1 try to 1 goal, 2 tries—13 points to 11.

The game was refereed by J. Scales, who kept the players well in hand and gave general satisfaction with his decisions. Though neither side was at full strength, yet all were agreed that it had been an enjoyable game and it was unanimously decided to hold another practice match on the following Saturday, at the same time and place.

It is hoped that there will be an even stronger muster next Saturday. The intention is to get the club well organized during the spring, and to have the players in good trim and with some understanding of each other's methods so that when the fall comes the team will be able to start right in and arrange matches with Calgary, Edmonton and other towns.

Editor of The Times,
Medicine Hat.

Dear Sir,—Just in from our camp, Butler, we call it, and was greatly surprised to see quite a burg. We have nine buildings, and you can only appreciate our beautiful location, what we have done, and what we are doing, by a visit.

I found it very interesting indeed, to watch our expert men handle the big 12-inch tools weighing 5 tons, 60 feet long, solid steel, as if they were mere toys. This great drill makes forty strokes a minute 24 hours a day and at every stroke the earth fairly shakes and throbs. We are down 600 feet, have struck two fine showings of oil, first at 175 feet thoroughly lubricated our drill and new cables, and twice a day when the well is being cleaned out, quite a little oil shows on the water. We are drilling in hard sandstone, strata lying in even folds and formations undisturbed, so that our drillers are positive of great results. This belief in ultimate success is backed by large purchases of stock.

We have a 50-barrel oil tank set up ready, site laid out and timbers cut for second derrick.

Some skeptical people have told us that the rocks stood on end, that eruptions had scattered oil on the surface, etc., etc., but we have proven these theories false and the predictions of Canada's greatest geologist, Doctor Dawson, are coming true.

The company is in fine standing, despite the hard times, owning as it does the most complete plant in Canada, a contractor and drillers of ability and reputation, supplies on hand and money in the treasury.

I honestly believe that if a person had a choice of all the good propositions in Canada today that he could not do better than invest in shares in the Canadian Northwest Oil company. Lawyers, professional and business men agree in saying that never before have they seen a mutual stock company acting in better faith or offering a squarer deal.

The value of its 2000 acres of land lying southwest of Pincher Creek, alone will run into the millions, if oil is found in paying quantities, and shares that are now selling for a nominal sum will be out of reach of many by early fall.

We are past the experimental stage where we have to beg the question. People are learning the merits of our proposition and are daily buying large blocks of stock. Payments arranged to suit all. Alberta has an abundance of coal and gas and where these two are found oil also exists.

Prospects and full particulars.

LETHBRIDGE TO SPEND MUCH MONEY.

Lethbridge, March 18.—The city council has passed estimates for the expenditure of over one hundred thousand dollars on the streets and walks of the city. All the principal streets of the city are to be thoroughly graded and permanent walks will be placed on the streets in the heart of the city.

A new fire hall to cost $25,000 is also to be built, and a market to cost $8,000.

The city will continue boring for gas in the well started by the electric light company and carried to a depth of 1300 feet.

Correspondence.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them

Editor of The Times:

Regarding Demonstration Farm for the Medicine Hat district, and the suggestion as to handling it for the benefit of the district, there is nothing in it of merit in the mind of any rancher or farmer I have spoken to regarding it. Its conception seems to be graft, or getting money out of the people for doing little or nothing for it, and where would be the use of the demonstration were it not self-supporting. And the agricultural meeting was not representative; few ranchers or farmers were there, it not being advertised sufficiently for such an important event. But, however, I believe no person should find fault if he cannot suggest something better.

My remedy is, if the city of Medicine Hat can give $2000 and the C. P.R. are well able to give $1000 and the government can, if they wish, give $1000, that would amount to $4000. Now I would put $3000 of this into twenty-five prizes, the first prize $1000, the other $2000 divided into twenty-four prizes, then you will have twenty-five genuine demonstrations, instead of a few graters idling around in the summer time wiping white collars when the weather is hot and demonstrating deception.

The competitors should not have less than forty acres under crop, all told; wheat, oats and barley 35 acres; potatoes, turnips, roots, etc., 5 acres. He must also plant trees; points to count in all things of the farm, fencing, cleanliness, laying out, simplicity and comfort of the buildings (not elegance or cost of buildings) as the most humble are to have a hand in this game, free-for-all and untainted with graft, no delegating or seconding motions of confidence will be of any use, only pure and unadulterated industry and hard thinking could grasp this $1000 prize. The land can be worked under the Campbell system, or Cains system, that being up to the demonstrator.

Now we have $1000 left call it the government's $1000. Appoint a man that knows farming and ranching and the district from the ground up; instruct settlers how and where to locate; give them advice as to where to put their buildings to advantage, where to homestead or otherwise, explain the uselessness of cultivating poor soils, mastering weeds, improved methods of cultivation, how to grow root crops, work faster but work easier, do more thinking and less work, more planning and scheming, never make two strokes where one will do, buy cheap, study the marketing of his products, what stock to keep according to surroundings, buy good implements of the right kind, never get loaded up with a lot of trash or useless junk from a silver-tongued gentleman however nice he may talk and persuade, avoid debts as far as possible, never give a mortgage, work as if you are going to live and die on your farm, don't be in too big a hurry to get rich by cropping a large area and giving poor cultivation, such as sowing stubble without ploughing, etc., impart good sound facts and knowledge before his money is filtered out on poor methods. By so doing you will have good contented settlers.

A FARMER.

CLAY CLEMENT COMING.

(The Portland Oregonian.)

Not to have seen Clay Clement in one of his most finished creations, "Baron Hohenstauffen," is not to have seen one of the great actors of the day in one of the most charming plays of this or any other day. In "The New Dominion," of which the eminent actor is author, and in which he opened a week's engagement at the Marquam yesterday, there is presented a study in characters that are lovable and altogether human. The charm of the play lies in its ever present simplicity, in that not one strained effort for mere effect mars the beautiful unfolding of the story. The comedy is of that high order one finds in the classics. There is an absence of coarseness and grossness. Mr. Clement's Hohenstauffen suggests intimate association with cultured Germans, an intimacy Mr. Clement enjoyed when a student at Heidelberg, for the Baron in the play is of noble birth and is gentle as an old gardener.

After Colonel R. G. Ingersoll saw Mr. Clement for the first time in this part, he wrote the actor a letter in which he said: "The Hohenstauffen of your creation has the culture of the university, the high breeding of the court, the courage of the army and the courtesy and tenderness of the perfect gentleman." Those words describe beyond the ability of writers of lesser attainments an estimate of Clay Clement's creation and of his exemplification of that character as strong as it is deserved.

Goodwin has his Maxine; Clement his Kathleen. Miss Kerrigan, as the Southern girl, who so completely captivates the German philosopher, that the poor man almost loses his mind in his frantic efforts to make her understand his broken sentences and comprehend his love, is one of the striking beauties of the American stage, and also possesses true dramatic talent. In her love scenes she is irresistibly winning and when she tells her father her heart belongs to the absent baron she fairly scintillates with dramatic fire.

"The New Dominion" was presented yesterday for the first time in Portland by the present company; in fact, except the one performance in the provinces—meaning Astoria—Saturday night, it was the company's first public appearance as an organization. Mr. Clement complemented Portland by assembling his new company in this city, and from their admirable work last night and yesterday afternoon he is to be congratulated on the support he has gathered around him.

Of course, the Baron is the chief character; in great comedies interest usually centers around the star part, and usually, too, stars are rarely surrounded by other than mediocre people. Not so with Mr. Clement's company. There is not a weak spot in his support.

The Southern planter, as portrayed by Martin Rutledge, is second only to Mr. Clement's Baron as a perfect type, and the old-time Southern atmosphere is sustained from the darkeys' singing before the first curtain rises until everybody takes a Christmas mug of nog at the finale.

Little Miss Lucy Blake weeps and sobs through her trials and tribulations until she has her auditors about overcome in their sympathy for her wrongs. Miss Viva and Miss Darling are valuable additions to the company. J. J. Sambrook makes the old darkey house servant one of the sort rapidly disappearing in the South, but who were highly esteemed in the olden days. Mr. Clement, who can be relied upon to always do the graceful thing, appeared hand in hand with Napoleon in response to a recall.

H. G. Lonsdale, fresh from his successes in the east, got into the spirit of the play remarkably well, considering that he knows the South only as knowledge of its home life has wandered to England through books and travellers' letters. His American young lawyer was satisfactorily done. William Conklin is cast in the only character in the play that calls for disapproval. As the scion of a "carpetbagger's family," he makes the hard drinker a chap more to be pitied than despised, and keeps away from overdoing the "relaxation."

It is doubtful if Portland will soon have the opportunity to see again a theatrical production carrying so many finished actors.

SUFFERING WOMEN

who find life a burden, can have health and strength restored by the use of

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

The present generation of women and girls have more than their share of misery. With some it is nervousness and palpitation, with others weak, dizzy and fainting spells, while with others there is a general collapse of the system. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart and make it beat strong and regular, create new red blood corpuscles, and impart that sense of buoyancy to the spirits that is the result of renewed mental and physical vigor.

Mrs. D. O. Donoghue, Orillia, Ont., writes: "For over a year I was troubled with nervousness and heart trouble. I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and after using five boxes I found I was completely cured. I always recommend them to my friends."

Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

A Gowned Accusation Ungowned

Since the reverend gentleman was placed in the editorial chair of the Globe to give a better face to some ugly actions, that great paper has been guilty of unfounded statements that even his cloth cannot conceal in all their falseness. The refusal of original documents was bearing so hard on the Liberal ranks that the party felt an unusual defence was demanded. The method of defence did not much matter, but the means of making it most effective was of greatest importance. So the Liberal organ, with its all-Canada circulation, was made the means of carrying to the people the message that was designed to show why the original papers were not forthcoming—a message that was branded next day in the House of Commons as "a false and malicious lie and scandal."

From The Globe it was published in almost every Liberal paper that such Conservative members as Ames, Kemp and even Borden had taken original papers that had been brought down to the House and had never returned them. It seemed a weighty argument for refusing to run further risk.

But the next day, before the House of Commons, where the truth or falseness of the statement was well known, each of these members, one after another, rose and publicly stated that the accusations were utterly false. Not one original document was ever retained. Mr. Borden stated that he had not yet returned a recent file, but it was a copy, not an original. And several copies were charged to Sir Wilfrid Laurier without return, but, of course, The Globe never mentioned this. Two returns were charged to him (Mr. Borden) but both were in their proper place in the record office. Likewise all the files charged to Mr. Ames had been in the Journal office since December 31, 1907, and a certificate to the clerk to that effect was read. Mr. Foster had never had but one original document in his possession and that was returned two months ago.

And so the denial went on through Messrs. Armstrong, Lake, Kemp, Clements, J. D. Reid and Bennett. And, although Sir Wilfrid Laurier was painfully embarrassed not one word of support for The Globe was uttered by a member of the government.

The Globe not only spoke falsely when it said these members had original documents, but none of them had had copies out since the first of the year. The whole charge was proven to be a lie and on the face of it was published only for the sake of those who might never chance to see the denial. When the big party paper is forced to stoop to this the party must be in even worse position than appears on the surface.

That Dream of a Charter

If there is one thing that is supposed to guard the interests of the city that was constructed as a foundation to all the acts of the city, but that safeguards no interests and confounds even its makers, it is the Charter of the city of Medicine Hat.

The Charter was made by lawyers, of course, and it has to be left to lawyers to decipher in most cases. And in most cases even the lawyers disagree in its interpretation. One memorable case is brought to mind where the present city solicitor differed from the city solicitor of two years ago, in the important matter of the eligibility of voters. Thus in the very basis of city government there was a disagreement as to what that Charter meant.

Differences in interpretation are cropping up every day, but in most cases the decision is left to the city solicitor. And this is as it should be. In several cases the wording of the Charter is directly opposed to common sense. And this should not be.

There is an interesting decision handed down during the past week by the city solicitor based upon his interpretation of the Charter, which is certainly unreasonable, and, The Times thinks, is incorrect. The solicitor is sure he is right, and we think a number will be just as sure he is wrong, and will be supported in their judgement by the apparent intention of all reasonable Charters.

This refers to an edict that a church cannot charge at the door for any meeting held in the building. The Presbyterian Ladies' Aid had secured the services of three soloists from Winnipeg to give a concert in the Presbyterian church, proceeds to go towards their church society. Whereupon a ruling is issued from the city hall, that, according to the Charter, the church will be forced to pay taxes if it charges at the door.

This is the clause upon which the decision is based. It appears under "Exemptions."—"A building used for church purposes and not used for any other purposes or for hire, or reward, and the lot or lots whereon it stands etc." The punctuation is bad and may have something to do with the misconception. In the next clause the punctuation is "for any other purposes, or for hire or reward, and the lot etc." The interpretation that is intended we think is that the church must not be used for hire, or reward, the latter word "reward" meaning much the same as "hire," and covering the instances where the building might be given over for other purposes without a definite hire. That the concert prohibited is for church purposes, no one doubts. The whole thing centers on the word "reward." That being the case why does a fee at the door constitute "reward" more fully than a collection taken inside?

The common sense of the subject supports this interpretation, too. The recent decision means that no church can charge at the door. Scarcely a church in Alberta or Canada, for that matter, has not charged admission to some church event. There have been a dozen instances during the past six months right in Medicine Hat. A church should be allowed to charge at the door for church purposes, but should not be allowed to rent their building, as it would interfere with the renting of other buildings, which are paying taxes.

This, we think, is the intention of the law, and we think it is the only reasonable interpretation. In a case of doubt common sense should control.

The city is breaking its Charter laws and bylaws every day in the year, and it continues to do so. And in cases which are not for one moment in doubt either as to the meaning or good intentions of the law infringed. It does not look right then, that a law which is of doubtful interpretation as to wording and distinct interpretation as to intention, should be enforced when other bylaws and Charter laws not in the least dubious in meaning or intention are broken every day.

The city solicitor and council would be not guilty of breaking the Charter if they accepted The Times' interpretation, (which it honestly believes is right), and avoided forcing an interpretation which is evidently not intended.

The Curfew Wanted

There is some agitation for a curfew bell in the city, and that it is needed must be apparent to everyone. A speaker at the Y.M.C. spoke of his opposition to it when it was started in another Alberta town in which he lived, but it did not take long for him to change his opinion.

The Y.M.C. is doing good work in this respect itself. It will not allow boys under 16 to be in the gymnasium at night. If parents did a little more in the same line the city would not be forced to take the place of a parent. However, in all legislation the State and home can work together to improve.

The trouble seems to be that in addition to too loose parental discipline, there are not sufficient home attractions in the west for the growing boy. There is too much attention paid to money-making to think much of home-making. No provision is made for the entertainment of the boy, either in comfortable homes, literature, games, even a backyard to play in. A patch of grass will keep the boy who has to go to the commons to play.

Boys let loose without the protection of adults develop into undesirable young men. It requires the restraint of an interested parent, the refining influences of an attentive mother to make our boys find less enjoyment in the abandonment of a street life.

No boy ever received anything but harm from running the streets at night, and parents who do not exercise their authority to prevent this should be forced by law to bring up their children to be a credit to the nation. If the parents do not care, the city, Alberta, Canada, do.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If Medicine Hat is going to have an exhibit at the Dominion Fair it will have to get busy and secure its space. Almost every other town in Alberta has made its selection. Is this going to die a natural death as so many other propositions have fared?

The man who has no ambition to be any better than he is will never be any better. It is only the appreciation of faults that leads to remedies. It is so easy to lope along, perfectly satisfied with things as they are. But no town ever grew on that basis. No man was ever converted until he realized his sin.

Saskatoon has formed a company with $100,000 capital to build 20 modern houses. The same kind of a company here would make a lot of money. The terrace being erected on the hill by W. H. Marshall is the first attempt to satisfy the demand for houses.

This is how the brokerage companies make money. Aemilius Jarvis & Co. bought Regina's debentures for 94.882 and sold them in London for 101 making $37,000 on the deal. And the bonds were oversubscribed an hour before they were really put on the market. Two things are evident from this that should be of value to the city council—that the price of debentures is increasing with improving financial conditions, and that it would be a good move to sell the bonds direct on the English market. The Bank of Montreal handled the sale for Aemilius Jarvis & Co.; why not for the city direct?

We are not so absurd as to say that any man with any idea of a business proposition will advertise in The Times, and nowhere else. We simply state, and are always proving it, that The Times makes advertising profitable. We are always ready to furnish examples of results, and not vague talk only.

The paper that adds six new local names in one day without any effort on its own part, and that within a fortnight after a bargain rate offered by a newspaper, has some strong hold upon the reading public.

The Times stands for improvement, not for lazy satisfaction with conditions as they are. Everything, even a newspaper, can improve. It is with improvement growth comes—to a city as to a newspaper.

The Conservative Party is fighting the railway men's battle in the House of Commons. In the discussion of the railway commission personnel, R. L. Borden, McCarthy, Claude Macdonell and McPherson, all Conservative members, urged the placing of a railway employee on the commission. Their reason was that such a man would be a practical man and would consider the rights of the employee as well as the people and the corporation.

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, C. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or run-down system. For speaker's sore throat I have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Browne, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal. I strongly recommend it.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, Markdale, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. It is a great voice strengthener, acting directly on the vocal, respiratory and digestive organs, thus specially adapted to public speakers. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. IMPORTANT DECISION.

(Calgary Herald.)

During the last three days the case of Breckenridge & Lund vs. Travis has been occupying the attention of Mr. Justice Beck at the Supreme Court and yesterday the case was ended, his Lordship finding in favor of the defendant.

The case was as follows: Breckenridge & Lund had sued Judge Travis for the sum of $5,185 on a mechanic's lien for lumber supplied Judge Travis for building houses on Fourth street west on a sub-contract with J. T. Short.

The defence made a counter-claim for $5,500 for damages to conspiracy to defraud.

The case is one of great concern to lumbermen and merchants in Alberta. Judge Stewart in the case of Swanson vs. Mollison, held that the owner was liable to the lien holder for more than the contract price, but Judge Beck refused to hold with this decision, stating that the owner cannot under any circumstances be held for more than six weeks' wages, and under certain circumstances the owner does not have to see to the application of the monies.

The only regard an owner need have is to register lien or loans he has had written notice of, and he is entitled to hold back from the contractor's price, certain moneys to complete his building in the event of the contractor refusing or neglecting to complete his work.

Many smaller cases under the mechanics' lien act in the province of Alberta have been held over pending the decision in this case and the result will undoubtedly create considerable interest in lumber and building circles of the province.

It has always been held in the province that the owner was responsible under the lien to the firms furnishing supplies to the contractors but, according to Judge Beck's ruling, the firms supplying materials to the contractors will have to protect their own interests, and under these conditions it is probable that several of the smaller contracting firms will be forced out of business owing to lack of capital.

It is understood that the case will be appealed.

OLD FRIENDS MEET.

(Calgary Herald.)

Mayor Cousins, of Medicine Hat, was a caller at the city treasurer's office yesterday, where he went to renew old times with his friend, Mr. Burns, and talk over the present financial situation.

He and the city treasurer first met havebeen friends ever since. They in Medicine Hat 25 years ago and have been friends ever since. They spoke of the prosperity of the country since then, and also went into municipal finance. The Mayor thought the city treasurer had done well in finding money to keep things moving in civic work so late last year.

FAME OF DEMONSTRATION FARM

Jas. Rae has received a letter from Port Arthur, addressed to the "N. W. T. Experimental Farm, Medicine Hat." It is an application for seed potatoes grown on "our" farm.

This is by no means the first enquiry for samples of Demonstration Farm products. The fame of our farm has literally gone before it. In the eastern mind the idea of dry farming, of the Campbell system, has come to be inseparably associated with Medicine Hat, and there is an eagerness shown to learn the results of these experiments in Southern Alberta.

Within a very short space of time the first steps will have been taken towards showing what can be done in the direction of dry farming in this locality. During Mr. Rae's stay in Calgary last week he called on J. S. Dennis, assistant to second vice-president of the C.P.R., and received assurances of the encouragement and practical help of the company in this enterprise. The fact of the government's intention to take over the farm next year will not affect the attitude of the railway, and Mr. Dennis stated that the $1000 grant would be turned over whenever required. With this, and the $1000 from the Alberta government a good start can be made and at least 50 acres will be broken up and scientifically cultivated this year.

Lethbridge Still Boring

(Lethbridge Herald.)

Taking up the gas well proposition at the council last night, Ald. Ives, chairman of the committee, explained that though the agreement was passed by the special meeting of the council, it had been necessary to make one or two changes. One was the stipulation of a certain number of cubic feet of gas per day. The other was concerning the driller's bonus which is now definitely settled at 25 feet for $10 a foot or $2500 no matter when he struck gas. The bonus to the driller has nothing to do with the bonus to the company if gas is struck. A third change was the addition of a clause stipulating that the contract shall cease if the drilling is not completed by April, 1, 1909.

While the council looked on in breathless silence, Ald. Ives took pen in hand and wrote the motion that committed the city to the agreement. The wearisome meetings and special meetings, reports and agreements, ad infinitum, ad nauseam, were over, and the gas business settled. Time 21.50, March 16, 1908.

By the agreement (1) the Electric company agrees to re-commence drilling in the well and agrees to go down 2,500 feet, or until gas is struck or until it is practically impossible to go further.

(2) The city will pay $10 per foot for the drilling: if gas is struck so that there is a flow of 150,000 cubic feet per day or more before the 2,500 foot level is reached, the company shall be paid a bonus of $2,500.

(3) The company shall be paid every two weeks for the depth drilled during that time.

(4) The city is to supply the casing as it is ordered by the company and is not responsible for the delay if the orders are placed promptly.

(5) The city agrees to pay $13,000 for the present 1,600 foot well. $3,000 is to be paid when the well is sunk to 2,000 feet, $4,000 when 2,300 feet is reached, and 6,000 at 2,500 feet, when the well and the lots shall become the city's property If gas is struck, as provided in (2), the city is to pay forthwith any balance of the $13,000 unpaid.

(6) If gas is struck as provided in (2) before the 2,000 foot level is reached the city shall give the company a bonus of $7,000 in addition to the $10 per foot, if between 2,000 and 2,300 feet the bonus is to be $5,000 and if between 2,300 and 2,500 feet it is $3,000.

(7) If the city causes delay in the drilling it is to pay $25 a day demurrage.

(8) The city agrees to supply all water free of charge and assumes all claims for damages that may arise from the dumping of the excavated material on the lane in the rear of the lots, provided the company build a fence along the lane.

(9) The company agrees to give and does by the agreement give the city the option and privilege of purchasing all its plant, the value of which shall be appraised by three appraisers.

(10) The price of the plant shall be the appraised value by three appraisers plus ten per cent. The city's option is to continue until three months after the ditcontinuance of the boring.

(11) The city has the right to employ an expert to valuate the plant before the appraisers place their valuation.

(12) Disputes over matters not provided for in this agreement are to be settled by three arbitrators.

(13) The company agrees to call a meeting of its shareholders at once to ratify the agreement.

(14) If the well is not completed either with or without gas by April 1, 1909, the city may cancel this contract.

KINDLY CHARLES LAMB.

Charles Lamb was awakened early one morning by a noise in his kitchen, and on going down to that apartment found a burglar doing his spoons up in a bundle.

"Why d-do you s-a-s-t-t-teal?" he asked.

"Because I'm starving," returned the housebreaker sullenly.

"Are y-you re-re-really ver-very h-h-hung-hung-gug-gery-hungry?" asked Lamb.

"Very," replied the burglar, turning away.

"Pup-pup-poor fuf-fuf-fellow," said the essayist. "H-here's a l-l-leg of L-L-Lamb for you."

And so saying, with a dexterous movement of his right leg, he ejected the marauder into the street, and locking the door securely went back to bed. The burglar confessed afterward that he didn't see the joke for six weeks.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

(Calgary Herald.)

The C.P.R. trainmen, engineers, firemen and switchmen held a conference in the Elks hall, on March 9th and 10th, at which fully 150 were present.

Superintendent Niblock occupied the chair, and Mr. Brown acted as secretary. Among those present was general superintendent A. Price.

The following resolutions were passed unanimously with a standing vote:—

Report of committee on paper read by James Carson on "Temperance."

"Resolved. That it is the sense of this convention that the use of intoxicating liquor by men engaged in the performance of their daily duties as servants of the railway company should be discouraged in every instance, and that the safety of the travelling public, the preservation of property entrusted to railway employees, and the general interest of the company and employees are best secured by total abstinence at all times."

Your committee appointed to report on the excellent paper on the subject of "Profanity," submitted by Conductor E. G. Elson, beg to report:—

"That we deplore the use of profanity and the telling of impure stories, and after fully considering the opinions expressed by all railway men at that conference, your committee would recommend that an earnest effort be made by all concerned in railway service to abolish profanity on the western division for the honor of the company and the general good of the men."

Your committee appointed to report upon the paper read by Mr. Fullar, on "Honesty and Truthfulness," feel that the case is presented in such a form as must, in the main, be accepted by everyone.

"We recognize that the first principle in railroad life is honesty in every department, and that it should be lived up to by officers in the relations existing between them.

"We believe that the real efficiency of work must rest upon sterling individual honesty, because rules and regulations designed as the result of long experience for the safety of life and property, are of very little use unless a large organization such as this can rely upon the individual honesty of the men in whose hands some portion of the responsibility for those rules is placed.

"We respectfully suggest that honor and truthfulness can be cultivated throughout all branches of the service by means of a cordial understanding between officers and men, on which a man, who may not be able to plead his own case, may rely when possibly he is in trouble or difficulty.

"Although to speak the truth in some cases may mean discipline, we believe that even in such a case anything less than the truth is a sacrifice of manhood, which in nine cases out of ten, is easily detected, and which will yield no satisfaction or advantage to either side.

"As the 'Brown system' of checking has been mentioned, we wish to say that in our opinion, the man who is honest in his work has nothing whatever to fear from any system of check, and that if looked upon in the proper light the system will be seen to be intended to take care of the weaker men.

"In conclusion, we feel sure that this conference has contributed largely to a feeling of confidence on the part of the men, and good will on the part of the officers, which will mean a wider acknowledgement of the advantages of being honest in all our dealings, and of speaking the truth under all circumstances."

The Sweated Industries Bill which passed its first and second readings in the British House of Commons, and is now under consideration by a select committee, provides for the establishment of wages boards to have power to fix rates for time or piece work. The board will consist of equal numbers of representatives of employers and employes, with a chairman chosen by the members or nominated by the Home secretary. Imprisonment will be the penalty for payment of less than the minimum wage agreed upon.

The Act provides for tailoring, dressmaking and shirtmaking trades.

Four thousnad persons attended the debate on Socialism held recently in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, England. The Dean of Manchester, Bishop Welldon, occupied the chair, and the debaters were W. Joynson-Hicks, the Conservative who opposed Winston Churchill, the present under-secretary for the colonies, Socialist, at the general election, and Victor Grayson, M. P., member for Colne Valley.

Supreme Court

The Supreme Court sat Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Chief Justice Sifton on the bench. The criminal cases came up on Tuesday, as follows:

Rex vs. Pahl. Gustav Pahl, the accused, was charged on four different counts in connection with fraudulently obtaining possession of a check belonging to his brother and having unlawfully opened a letter not lawfully belonging to himself. The accused had done work for the provincial government last summer on two different occasions and the prosecution produced three cheques endorsed with the prisoner's endorsement. Prisoner denied one of these, claiming that it was a forgery. An expert in handwriting called in by the defence stated that the endorsement of the third cheque was by a different party from the other two. After being out about three-quarters of an hour the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty on all four counts. W. A. Begg prosecuted for the Crown; D. G. White for defendant.

Rex vs. Paul. John Paul was accused on three different counts for obstructing a police officer in the execution of his duty. It appeared a police officer went to Paul's restaurant to arrest another Chinaman, but had no warrant with him, nor had any warrant been issued, the defence therefore being that as there was no warrant, the officer was not there in the execution of his duty. Thus, the defence claimed, a charge of obstructing a police officer in the execution of his duty could not be sustained. The jury found accused not guilty on all three counts. W. A. Begg prosecuted for the Crown; D. G. White defended.

On Wednesday the case of Warwick vs. McLean was heard. Action for specific performance to purchase about 250 head of cattle. According to agreement made by the plaintiff Warwick with the defendant McLean, all the cattle were to have been turned over before October 25, at a price of $24 uer head. If all were not turned over by that date the stragglers, gathered either by McLean or Warwick, were to be charged for at the rate of $20 per head. McLean went to Warwick's ranch on the 18th of October and cut out thirty-five head of beef cattle. By mistake he paid for only thirty-four at $24 per head. He did not go back to Warwick's ranch until the 27th. As to his reason for this delay a dispute arose, McLean claiming that Warwick was not ready to turn the cattle over and Warwick claiming on the contrary that the defendant was not himself ready. The plaintiff was not at home on the 27th of the month and his man wired for instructions receiving back orders to turn over twenty-eight head. It transpired that McLean would not wait for the round-up of these cattle till the following morning and afterwards refused to take over any of the animals at more than $20 per head.

The judge held that both were in default, and refused to order specific performance. Neither, he said, appeared to have lived up to the agreement. If either had done so he would have been entitled to heavy damages. McLean had put in a counter-claim for damages of $1200. This the judge refused also. He gave judgement in Warwick's favor for $34.25, the price of the beef that had not been paid for and for some hay that McLean had taken away. No costs to either party. J. J. Mahaffy appeared for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant.

Whiffin vs. Calkins. Action brought to recover $450, the amount of a liquor bill. The defence was set up that the court had no jurisdiction in the case, but later this defence was dropped and the case will be decided on its merits at the next sitting of the court. Adjourned on account of the absence of defendant's witnesses. D. G. White for the plaintiff; W. A. Begg for the defendant.

Thursday was given over to the hearing of the action of Matthews & Murray vs. Geo. E. Wood, a real estate case which appeared to arouse the interest of all the real estate agents in the city, as they attended court in full force. Plaintiffs purchased Block 18, in the Fuller-Harlow sub-division to the S.W. of city and made a cash payment of $1350. The Block contained forty lots and the plaintiffs brought their action to have the written agreement cancelled and for an order that they should be only obliged to accept the transfer of eleven lots, claiming that all the rest of the lots in the Block were not level and good and within the limits of Medicine Hat, as represented. The case occupied the whole day, until the court awas adjourned at four o'clock. In the morning the witnesses for the prosecution were examined. John Murray, who first went on the stand, testified that a large portion of the property which he purchased as good and level had proved to be rough and stony, and anything but level. A. J. Matthews E. D. Bennett, M. A. Brown, D. Barker followed, the evidence going to show that a portion of the Block was practically inaccessible and that the cost of getting it into decent shape for building purposes would be more than the actual value of the property.

In the afternoon the defence was heard. Geo. E. Wood, of Calgary, the defendant, was the first on the stand. He testified that a syndicate had been formed to purchase the subdivision in question and it was decided that each member should take over a Block to be his own personal property. To Murray and Matthews witness represented the Block correctly, to the best of his ability. Under cross examination witness stated that plaintiffs were not to be required to take over lots which were not reasonably level and good—as much so as the average around Medicine Hat. An average slope he would describe as from three to four feet in a twenty-five foot lot. There were thirty-six lots in Block 18 which he considered level and good. He admitted that there was a cutbank on one of the lots. A. N. Dick, real estate dealer of Calgary next gave evidence, followed by J. J. MacDonald, of Medicine Hat, who had made a survey of the property that morning. Witness explained his plans to the court. C. T. Jones, counsel for the defendant, contended that it had been shown that all the lots except lot 8 were good, on the testimony of Mr. Dick, who had no special interest in the action.

J. J. Mahaffy, counsel for the plaintiffs, would not admit that Mr. Dick was a disinterested party, as the property, were the plaintiffs' action successful, would fall back on his hands. Mr. Mahaffy did not think he was at all anxious to have this property back. According to all three witnesses for the prosecution, the lots in question were not level and good.

The judge ordered plaintiffs to pay for ten more lots at $75 each, together with interest as mentioned in the agreement. No costs to either party. J. J. Mahaffy for the plaintiff. Clifford T. Jones, of Jones, Nicholl & Pescoe, Calgary, and D. G. White for the defendant.

"I must not keep you any longer," he said somewhat stiffly.

Sir John rose also.

"I dare say you are tired; you need rest. In some ways you look stronger, in others you look fagged and pulled down."

"It is the result of my illness," said Jack. "I am really quite strong."

He paused, standing on the hearth rug, then suddenly he held out his hand.

"Good night," he said.

"Good night."

Sir John allowed him to go to the door, to touch the handle, before he spoke.

"Then"— he said, and Jack paused. "Then we are no further on?"

"In what way?"

"In respect to the matter over which we unfortunately disagreed before you went away?"

Jack turned with his hand on the door.

"I have not changed my mind in any respect," he said gently. "Perhaps you are inclined to take my altered circumstances into consideration, to modify your views."

"I am getting rather old for modification," answered Sir John suavely.

"And you see no reason for altering your decision?"

"None."

"Then I am afraid we are no further on," he paused. "Good night," he added gently as he opened the door.

"Good night."

Lady Cantourne was meant for happiness and a joyous motherhood. She had had neither; but she went on being "meant" until the end—that is to say she was still cheery and capable. She had thrown an open letter on the little table at her side—a letter from Jack Meredith announcing his return to England and his natural desire to call and pay his respects in the course of the afternoon.

"So," she had said before she laid the letter aside, "he is home again—and he means to carry it through?"

While she still sat there the bell rang. When Jack Meredith came into the room she rose to greet him with a smile of welcome.

"Before I shake hands," she said, "tell me if you have been to see your father."

"I went last night—almost straight from the station. The first person I spoke to in London, except a cabman."

So she shook hands.

"You know," she said, without looking at him—indeed, carefully avoiding doing so—"life is too short to quarrel with one's father. At least it may prove too short to make it up again—that is the danger."

"The quarrel was not mine," he said, "I admit that I ought to have known him better. I ought to have spoken to him before asking Millicent. It was a mistake."

Lady Cantourne looked up suddenly.

"What was a mistake?"

"Not asking his—opinion first."

She turned to the table where his letter lay and fingered the paper pensively.

"I thought, perhaps, that you had found that the other was a mistake—the engagement."

"No," he answered.

"Millicent will be in presently," she said; "she is out riding."

They talked of his life in Africa, of his success with the simiacine, of which discovery the newspapers were not yet weary, until the bell was heard in the basement, and thereafter Millicent's voice in the hall.

Lady Cantourne rose deliberately and went downstairs to tell her niece that he was in the drawing room, leaving him there waiting alone.

Presently the door opened and Millicent hurried in. She threw her gloves and whip—anywhere—on the floor and ran to him.

"Oh, Jack!" she cried.

It was very prettily done. In its way it was a poem.

"And, Jack, do you know," she went on, "all the newspapers have been full of you. You are quite a celebrity. And are you really as rich as they say?"

"I think I can safely say that I am not," he answered.

Lady Cantourne left them there for nearly an hour, in which space of time she probably reflected they could build up as rosy a future as was good for them to contemplate. Then she returned to the drawing room, followed by a full sized footman bearing tea.

She was too discreet a woman, too deeply versed in the sudden changes of the human mind and heart, to say anything until one of them should give her a distinct lead. They were not shy and awkward children. Perhaps she reflected that the generation to which they belonged is not one heavily handicapped by too subtle a delicacy of feeling.

Jack Meredith gave her the lead before long.

"Millicent," he said without a vestige of embarrassment, "has consented to be openly engaged now."

Lady Cantourne nodded comprehensively.

"I think she is very wise," she said. "I know she is very wise," she added, turning and laying her hand on Jack's arm. The two phrases had quite a different meaning. "She will have a good husband."

"Oh, Jack!" she cried.

"So you can tell everybody now," chimed in Millicent in her silvery way.

Lady Cantourne was not very communicative during that refined little tea a trois, but she listened smilingly to Jack's optimistic views and Millicent's somewhat valueless comments.

"I am certain," said Millicent, at length boldly attacking the question that was in all their minds, "that Sir John will be all right now. Of course, it is only natural that he should not like Jack to—to get engaged yet. Especially before, when it would have made a difference to him in money, I mean. But now that Jack is independent—you know, auntie, that Jack is richer than Sir John."

Lady Cantourne was rather thoughtful at that moment. She could not help coming back and back to Sir John.

"Of course," she said to Jack, "we must let your father know at once. The news must not reach him from an outside source."

"I will write and tell him," said Jack quietly.

Even funerals and lovers must bow to mealtimes, and Jack Meredith was not the man to outstay his welcome. He saw Lady Cantourne glance at the clock. Clever as she was, she could not do it without being seen by him.

So he took his leave, and Millicent went to the head of the stairs with him.

CHAPTER XXII.

Of late Sir John had felt a singular desire to sit down whenever opportunity should offer, but he had always been found standing on the hearth rug by the butler, and, hard old aristocrat that he was, he would not yield to the somewhat angular blandishments of the stiff backed chair.

He stood for a few moments with his back to the smoldering fire, and, being quite alone, he perhaps forgot to stiffen his neck, for his head drooped, his lips were unsteady; he was a very old man.

A few minutes later, when he strode into the dining room, where butler and footman awaited him, he was erect, imperturbable, impenetrable.

At dinner it was evident that his keen brain was hard at work. He forgot one or two of the formalities which were religiously observed at that solitary table. He hastened over his wine, and then he went to the library. There he wrote a telegram, slowly, in his firm, ornamental handwriting.

It was addressed to Gordon, Loango, and the gist of it was—"Wire whereabouts of Oscard—when he may be expected home."

At half past 8 Jack arrived. Sir John was awaiting him in the library, grimly sitting in his high backed chair, as carefully dressed as for a great reception.

He rose when his son entered the room and they shook hands. There was a certain air of concentration about both, as if they each intended to say more than they had ever said before. The coffee was duly brought. This was a revival of an old custom. In bygone days Jack had frequently come in thus and they had taken coffee before going together in Sir John's carriage to one of the great social functions at which their presence was almost a necessity. Jack had always poured out the coffee—tonight he did not offer to do so.

"I came," he said suddenly, "to give you a piece of news which I am afraid will not be very welcome. Millicent and I have decided to make our engagement known."

"You know," said Sir John gravely, "that I am not much given to altering my opinions. I do not say that they are of any value; but, such as they are, I usually hold to them. When you did me the honor of mentioning this matter to me last year, I gave you my opinion."

"And it has in no way altered?"

"In no way. I have found no reason to alter it."

"Will you, at all events, give me your reasons?" he asked. "I am not a child."

"I think," he said, "that it would be advisable not to ask them."

"I should like to know why you object to my marrying Millicent," persisted Jack.

"Simply because I know a bad woman when I see her," retorted Sir John deliberately.

"I am sorry you have said that," said the son.

"Just," continued the father, "as I know a good one."

He paused, and they were both thinking of the same woman, Jocelyn Gordon.

Sir John had his say about Millicent Chyne, and his son knew that that was the last word. She was a bad woman. From that point he would never move.

There was a long silence, while the two men sat side by side gazing into the fire.

"I am getting too old to indulge in the luxury of pride," said the father at length. "I will attend your marriage. I will smile and say pretty things to the bridesmaids. Before the world I will consent under the condition that the ceremony does not take place before two months from this date."

"I agree to that," put in Jack.

Sir John rose and stood on the hearth rug, looking down from his great height upon his son.

"But," he continued, "between us let it be understood that I move in no degree from my original position. I object to Millicent Chyne as your wife. But I bow to the force of circumstances. I admit that you have a perfect right to marry whom you choose—in two months' time."

So Jack took his leave.

"In two months' time," repeated Sir John, when he was alone, with one of his twisted, cynical smiles—"in two months' time—qui vivra verra."

* * * * * * *

There are some places in the world where a curse seems to brood in the atmosphere. Maala was one of these. Perhaps these places are accursed by the deeds that have been done there. Who can tell?

Could the trees—the two gigantic elms that stood by the river's edge—could these have spoken, they might perhaps have told the tale of this little inland station in that country where, as the founder of the hamlet was in the habit of saying, no one knows what is going on.

All went well with the retreating column until they were almost in sight of Msala, when the flotilla was attacked by no less than three hippopotamuses. One canoe was sunk and four others were so badly damaged that they could not be kept afloat with their proper complement of men. There was nothing for it but to establish a camp at Msala and wait there until the builders had repaired the damaged canoes.

The walls of Durnovo's house were still standing, and here Guy Oscard established himself with as much comfort as circumstances allowed. He caused a temporary roof of palm leaves to be laid on the charred beams, and within the principal room, the very room where the three organizers of the great simiacine scheme had first laid their plans, he set up his simple camp furniture.

Oscard was too great a traveler, too experienced a wanderer, to be put out of temper by this enforced rest. The men had worked very well hitherto. It had, in its way, been a great feat of generalship, this leading through a wild country of men unprepared for travel, scantily provisioned, disorganized by recent events. No accident had happened, no serious delay had been incurred, although the rate of progress had necessarily been very slow. Nearly six weeks had elapsed since Oscard with his little following had turned their backs forever on the simiacine plateau. But now the period of acute danger had passed away. They had almost reached civilization. Oscard was content.

When Oscard was content he smoked a slower pipe than usual, watching each cloud of smoke vanish into thin air. He was smoking very slowly this the third evening of their encampment at Msala. There had been heavy rain during the day, and the whole lifeless forest was dripping with a continuous, ceaseless clatter of heavy drops on tropic foliage, with an amalgamated sound like a widespread whisper.
