WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XX.

"What!" exclaimed Bartley Bradstone. "You don't mean to say that you are not coming to the wedding? Why, I should fancy you will be the only man in the county who won't be there—won't he, Olivia?"

She made a slight gesture which might mean anything, but did not raise her eyes.

"Then my room will be more acceptable than my company," said Faradeane, with a smile. "You will have no difficulty in getting some one to fill so honorable a post, Bradstone. I am sorry I cannot."

"Oh, but you must manage to come to the wedding and the breakfast—or whatever they call it now; it can't very well be breakfast at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon. You must come, Faradeane—mustn't he, Olivia?"

She looked up for a moment, and past Faradeane, avoiding his eyes.

"Mr. Faradeane says he is engaged," she said, quietly.

"Oh, but—" began Bradstone; but Faradeane stopped him with a certain compression of the lips which Bartley Bradstone remembered seeing on his face when he seized him by the arm outside the terrace.

"It is impossible," he said, almost curtly.

Bartley Bradstone shrugged his shoulders.

"I counted upon you," he said. "But if you can't, you can't, and there's an end of it. I'm awfully disappointed, and so's Olivia, I'm sure."

Olivia said nothing, but, directly lunch was over, rose to leave the room. As she did so Faradeane took a morocco case from his pocket.

"You must be quite tired of presents, Miss Vanley," he said, "but I have ventured to bore you with one, if you will accept it," and he placed the case in her hand, and turned aside to speak to Bradstone.

"Eh?" said the squire, "let us see what it is, my dear," and he put up his eyeglasses.

She opened the case, her hands trembling and her color coming and going, and revealed a superb necklace of gems in an antique setting.

It was no "wedding present" of the commonplace type, but evidently a rare and costly, perhaps priceless, specimen of ancient jewelry.

The squire uttered an exclamation. "Why, Faradeane, this is— isn't this rather too big a present for my little girl?" he said, with a smile, but a grateful and affectionate light in his eyes. "If she had been a princess, instead of the daughter of a country squire, you could not have been more generous."

"Miss Olivia is a princess to all of us, sir," he said in the half-sad and melodious voice which rendered even his commonplace significant. "It is an old relic I have had by me for some time, and I thought that Miss Vanley would forgive its old-fashionedness."

"Which I expect increases its value; and that must be great, apart from the antiquity of the thing. These stones are very large and very lustrous. Look at this, Bradstone!"

"Yes?" said Faradeane, carelessly. "I am no judge of gems. None could be too pure for Miss Vanley."

"Yes, very jolly," said Bartley Bradstone. "Put it on and let Faradeane see how you look in it." She did not offer to comply, but stood with the necklace in her hands; and he took it from her and put it round her neck, and struck an attitude. "What do you think of it, Faradeane?" he exclaimed.

"Faradeane looked at her for a moment and smiled.

"The old gems were never so honored before," he said; and, though he tried to speak lightly, there was a perceptible quiver in his voice.

"They are beautiful," said the squire. "Take care of them, my dear. I am sure they are extremely valuable, although Mr. Faradeane treats them so cavalierly."

Olivia put up her hands to unfasten the necklace, but could not do so.

"Let me try," said Bradstone. "They like you so well that they don't care about parting from you. I can't do it! Where's the spring, Faradeane, do you know? Just come and see, will you?"

Faradeane came slowly forward, and as he did so Olivia put up her hands again.

"I—I think I can do it," she said, with a strange tremor in her voice.

"Don't you try," said Bradstone, with a malicious enjoyment of her embarrassment. "Let Faradeane do it; he knows the trick of the fastening, I dare say."

"It is very simple," said Faradeane; "will you allow me?" and he forced his voice into a tone of ordinary politeness.

She bent her head, and he touched the hidden spring lightly; but, as the necklace parted, his fingers touched her, and her face and neck grew crimson as she raised her eyes to his face.

Then she took the necklace from his hand, and without waiting to put it in its case, left the room.

Bartley Bradstone thrust his hands into his pockets, and looked after her, and then at Faradeane's pale, set face.

"What ingratitude!" he said, half-mockingly and with a loud laugh. "She didn't even say 'Thank you!'"

Olivia went up to her own room, her heart beating, her neck still burning where Faradeane's fingers had touched, and as she opened the door she started and uttered an exclamation. But it was only Bessie who rose to meet her.

"Bessie!" she exclaimed. "How you startled me!" and she sank into a chair, panting.

Bessie looked at her gravely, and brought her a bottle of sal volatile from the dressing-table; but Olivia put it away with a faint laugh.

"No, no; I am not so badly frightened as that," she said; "but I did not expect to see any one, and—with a piteous little smile—"I have grown nervous lately, Bessie."

"I am so sorry, miss," said Bessie, meekly. "They told me to come upstairs and wait as usual—"

"Yes, yes; quite right," said Olivia, quickly, "and I am very glad to see you. Take your things off and let us have some tea. Have you come to say 'good-by' to me, Bessie?" and she smiled again.

"No, not good-by, miss," replied Bessie; "I've come to ask you to take me with you."

"To take you with me! Why—"

"Yes, miss," she went on, with downcast eyes, "I am going out into service, and I've come to ask you if you'll engage me for your maid."

"Why, Bessie!" exclaimed Olivia, catching at her arm and drawing her toward her. "You are going out to service! I thought your father could not spare you?"

"Yes, he can now, miss," she said, as if she were repeating a well-rehearsed speech. "He has got my cousin Polly to keep house for him, and he wishes me to go out."

"It is wonderful!" said Olivia, more brightly than she had spoken for weeks. "And you came to me, of course! How good of you! Of course I will take you—and how glad!"

"I'm sure you'll be glad! Why, it is too good to be true! I nearly engaged a girl from Wainford, yesterday—my old one went to-day. How glad I am I didn't do so quite! And you only just made up your mind to go into service! How fortunate I am!"

"It is me that's fortunate, miss."

"And when will you come?" asked Olivia, eagerly.

"Now, miss," said Bessie, quietly. "I presumed so far as to bring my box, for he said I was to stay if you'd let me."

"You dear, thoughtful girl!" exclaimed Olivia, pressing her arm.

"But who is 'he'—your father? How kind—" She stopped short, noticing that Bessie's face had suddenly grown crimson. "What is the matter? Who is 'he'?" she repeated, fixing her lovely eyes on the girl's downcast face.

"Answer me, Bessie! Of whom do you speak?"

"Must I tell?" whispered Bessie.

"Certainly you must," replied Olivia. "I don't understand—"

"It was Mr. Faradeane, miss," said Bessie, in a low voice.

Olivia drew her hand from the girl's arm, and sank back into the chair.

"Mr. Faradeane!" she said, almost inaudibly.

Bessie dropped down beside her.

"Yes, miss. It was he who brought me to think of it. He said he'd heard that your maid was going, and he said to me how nice it would be for you to have some one—he said some friend—with you in that big, new house of Mr. Bradstone's, and he put it in my head to come and ask you. He knows how I love you, Miss Olivia! Nothing escapes him—he thinks of everything! Are you angry, miss?" she half-whispered.

Olivia put her hand from her forehead, and turned her face—it was very pale—to the girl.

"Angry? No, Bessie. And so it was Mr. Faradeane who sent you? Yes, it was very thoughtful."

"Yes, miss," said Bessie, with a sigh of relief. "He said that you might feel lonely when you were away on your travels abroad and when you get back to The Maples, and that you'd like to have some one you knew and loved, he said, to be near you, and—and I came at once. We all do whatever Mr. Faradeane says," she added, with a little, suppressed sigh.

"Yes, it was very thoughtful, and I am very much—obliged—to him."

Olivia in a low voice. "And now go and get some tea; bring it up here."

"Yes, miss," said Bessie, with a sigh of relief.

ECZEMA

Dr. Chase's Ointment

and—keep near me. Yes, it was like him to think of it!"

And long after Bessie had left the room, her mistress sat with her hands tightly clasped, her eyes fixed on the necklace in her lap.

The following day was one of bustle and excitement. Some of the wedding guests, connections of the Vanleys, were coming from a distance, and had been asked to sleep at the Grange; Annie and Mary, who were also to stay the night, arrived soon after breakfast, and at once plunged into the business in hand with infinite gusto and enjoyment. The wedding feast was preparing in the kitchen, and upstairs the dressmaker was working frantically at the finishing of the wedding garments.

In the afternoon the bishop—Aunt Amelia had insisted upon a bishop—arrived, and he and the squire wandered about the place in the aimless, shiftless manner peculiar to males on these occasions.

"I'm sure I don't know whether you'll get any dinner to-night, my lord," said the squire, "the whole place is in such confusion."

"I dare say we shall have something to eat," said his lordship, with bland conviction. "You must remember that I am used to this kind of thing. Let me see! the last time I saw Miss Vanley she was in short frocks. She was very pretty then, she is beautiful now. I think this Mr.—Mr.—What's-his-name?—Bradstone, thanks—is a very lucky young man. He is very rich, is he not?"

"Yes," said the squire.

"Well," said the courtly bishop, "he will not have in all his treasure-house a more precious gem than your sweet child. By the way, I think I have seen him before."

"Indeed!" said the squire.

"Yes; I met him as I was driving in, I think. He was riding a remarkably good horse; a tall and exceedingly handsome young man, with a rather grave and pale face. The kind of man that attracts one's attention. It was a dark chestnut horse."

"No, that was not Bradstone," said the squire; "that was a very great friend of mine—Mr. Faradeane."

The good bishop looked puzzled.

"Dear me! A tall man with a mustache, and a—certain distinguished bearing?" he said.

"Yes, that was Mr. Faradeane," said the squire. "Do you think you have seen him before?"

His lordship stopped and knit his brows.

"I could have been certain of it, if you had not mentioned his name; but I suppose I must be mistaken, for I do not remember it. And it was not your future son-in-law?"

"No, no," said the squire. "You will see him this evening; I have asked him to dine with us."

"Yes, yes, delighted," purred the worthy bishop. "Strange mistake of mine, and yet I felt quite sure I had seen this Mr.—"

"Faradeane," supplied the squire.

"Thanks, yes. I don't remember the name in the least, and, as you may be aware, I pride myself on never forgetting a name. Who and what is this Mr. Faradeane? One of the local magnates?"

"No," replied the squire. "He has purchased a small house here—there it is, you can see the chimneys—and settled among us. I like him extremely."

How Hungary is Affected by the Russian Advance

Parliament at Budapest Faces Problem of Reassuring People's Count of Reverses.

(From the Christian Science Monitor, Budapest, Aug. 7.—The news caused in Hungary by the reverses on the Russian front has given expression in the parliament by the leaders of the opposition, and although the opposition demanded that the minister should find some means of assuring the anxious Count Tisza's reply was even was not calculated to satisfy the public. It was stated by M. Stankovitsky that over 100,000 soldiers had fallen during the recent Russian advance and that people, especially those in the army, were very anxious as to the fate of the army as well as that of Transylvania. He demanded that the officers of the army who were brought to account. No answer, however, forthcoming from the minister on this subject. The independence members of the opposition met after the sitting was over to discuss the situation and to decide what was to be done in the future.

The fact is that those members of parliament who have been sent to the front have taken part in battles during the last six months in Italy and on the Russian front. They arrived home with most distressing stories, and have stated that they are bringing to the officers of General von Pflanzer-Baltin's army, it is estimated, losses on both fronts during the last six weeks exceeded 500,000 killed, wounded and missing. A great majority of losses fell among the Hungarians, and the Italian front there are Croats, Serbians and Croats. It was quite clear that the Hungarians had in the recent engagements suffered over 100,000, and what Tisza referred to as the "merely a passing episode" of the independence movement, strongly roused against the government for treating such a matter so lightly.

Austria Criticized.

M. Just interrupted the statement by remarking that he had no shame to allude to the episode, and that it was owing to the brutality of the officers and their inclination to the Hungarian soldiers in the dangerous positions that had been inflicted on them. He insisted that the Hungarians the army were still being sent to the front. We have, he added, to send people to alien interests. Anxiety is no doubt aggravated by the fear of a Russian invasion of Transylvania, for it is quite recognized in Hungary that the debacle of the Pflanzer-Baltin in the Bukovina there is little to be gained by the Russian advance can be by the passes of the Carpathians. The army were still being sent to the front. Transylvania the situation is once more being studied, for while the Hungarians have been and are continuing to fight for an opportunity to thus to realize their dreams of uniting the Balkans outside their kingdom with the rest of the country, the fact that at present gaining on all fronts, and that the time was to have arrived when the of the monarchy in men might will practically guarantee of Roumania if she chooses to intervene, makes the dread of intervention loom large in the of the people of Hungary.

Parliament at Budapest Faced With Problem of Reassuring People on Account of Reverses.

(From the Christian Science Monitor) Budapest, Aug. 7.—The depression caused in Hungary by the recent reverses on the Russian front has been given expression in the Hungarian parliament by the leaders of the opposition, and although they emphatically demanded that the Prime Minister should find some means of reassuring the anxious population Count Tisza's reply was evasive and was not calculated to satisfy the public. It was stated by M. Stephen Rakovsky that over 100,000 Hungarian soldiers had fallen during the recent Russian advances and that the people, especially those in the capital, were very anxious as to the fate of the army as well as that of Transylvania. He demanded that the leaders of the army who were responsible for the debacle should be brought to account. No answer was, however, forthcoming from the Prime Minister on this subject either, and the independence members and other parties of the opposition decided to meet after the sitting was over to discuss the situation and to decide what was to be done in the future.

The fact is that those members of parliament who have been serving as officers and have taken part in the battles during the last six months in Italy and on the Russian front, have arrived home with most discouraging stories, and have stated that according to the officers of General Bothmer's army, it is estimated that the losses on both fronts during the last six weeks exceeded 500,000 men killed, wounded and missing. The great majority of losses have been amongst the Hungarians, for on the Italian front there are chiefly Hungarians and Croats. It was made quite clear that the Hungarians killed in the recent engagements numbered over 100,000, and when Count Tisza referred to the fighting as "merely a passing episode," the feeling of the independence members was strongly roused against the Premier for treating such a matter so lightly.

Austria Criticized.

M. Jusch interrupted the Premier's statement by remarking that it was a shame to allude to the event as an episode, and that it was doubtless owing to the brutality of the Austrian officers and their inclination to place the Hungarian soldiers in the most dangerous positions that such losses had been inflicted on them. M. Stumeg insisted that the Hungarians in the army were still being persecuted. We have, he added, to sacrifice our people to alien interests. All this anxiety is no doubt aggravated by the fear of a Russian invasion of Transylvania, for it is quite clearly recognized in Hungary that after the debacle of the Pflanzer-Baltin army in the Bukovina there is little hope that the Russian advance can be stopped by the passes of the Carpathians. In connection with the invasion of northern Transylvania the attitude of Roumania is once more being anxiously studied, for while the Roumanians have been and are constantly watching for an opportunity to intervene and thus to realize their national dreams of uniting the Roumanians outside their kingdom with the mother country, the fact that the Allies are at present gaining on almost every front, and that the time would seem to have arrived when the exhaustion of the monarchy in men and material will practically guarantee the success of Roumania if she chooses to intervene, makes the dread of this intervention loom large in the thoughts of the people of Hungary.

The reassuring statements made by the men in power and the military authorities to the effect that "the Russian might had been utterly broken," the war was actually won, there could be no further material change on any of the fronts, this incessant deception practiced upon them by those in a position to know the true state of affairs, has brought about a tremendous reaction since the Russians took Czernowitz. The people begin to realize that these assurances were all intended to calm their fears and to encourage them after the terrible privations they had to undergo last year. They blame the government for not disclosing the fact that neither the Russians nor any of the other Allies were yet beaten and that the war would not cease with the occupation of Serbia and Montenegro.

Terrible Awakening. It has been a terrible awakening for the people in Hungary and Austria, and the daily bread riots and other minor troubles are beginning to develop into a temper of revolt among the entire population and even the soldiers who are on leave or invalidated out of the army.

Until recently the false hopes with which they were buoyed up, together with military successes, enabled the population to put up with the unimaginable hardships imposed on them by the scarcity of foodstuffs and the dearth of living. Now, however, they have lost even this faith and there is nothing to alleviate their condition. The lower classes have had to suffer all along, but the effect of the Russian success is being felt by all, rich and poor alike. On the stock exchange, for instance, such depression has not been experienced since the outbreak of the war. Hungarian investments and even the war loan bonds have fallen to such an extent that many who were rich yesterday are poor to-day. Especially is this so with respect to Transylvanian concerns, among which there are many industrial and mineral companies which have gone under within a week's time, also showing that there is little hope in financial circles as to the fate of Transylvania. The oil fields of the Transylvanian highlands, which were well up in price have depreciated far below their face value, and the coal shares in Transylvanian mines have also fallen more than 50 per cent.

Another feature of the situation, probably the most characteristic of all, is that there has been no silver or copper in circulation for weeks and those who need copper and silver change in their business, such as the head-waiters in cafes, and banks, are buying copper and silver coins 30-40 per cent above their actual value. In one of the Hungarian papers a reporter who made some inquiries upon the situation says that the head-waiters give 12-14 kronen in paper for 10-12 kronen worth of copper and 11-12 kronen for silver worth 10 kronen. It seems to be a fact that the people are hiding the silver and even copper, fearing the depreciation of the paper currency. It is also stated to be a matter of common knowledge that when there is a collection being made for charity in the streets people prefer to give a two-kronen-paper bill rather than part with one kronen silver coin, as they doubtless consider the latter more valuable.

Your Boys and Girls.

In our training of children we are constantly tempted to contradict ourselves. At one time we appeal to their bravery, we solicit courage for doing this or that, for enduring pain or discomfort. Shortly we have occasion to call upon fear of injury, or of disapproval. In the one case we exalt courage and laud it as among the highest of virtues and remind the child of all the heroes we have not yet forgotten. But in a few hours we exalt prudence and remind him of the miserable fate of the foolhardy who did not look twice before they leap.

It is not necessary, however to suppose that courage and caution exclude each other. Fear as a help in training is a double edged weapon. We have learned that obedience based on fear will turn into defiance at the critical point. Parents who rule through a sympathetic understanding and firm hold of the child's needs are far more successful than those who arouse fear.

HEADACHES AND BEAUTY.

Although a headache is looked upon as a very ordinary ailment it sometimes grows to be an annoyance as well as a defiler of beauty. No one can look really charming, or even fail to show traces of pain, while suffering from a blinding headache.

A headache always has a cause, usually in some other part of the body, although the eyes are often the cause. Of course a nervous shock, worry or some trouble may be the cause of the headache, which, while painful, is not necessarily alarming. But if a certain kind of headache recurs at frequent intervals, it is time not only to find a cure, but a cause.

One should not try headache remedies promiscuously without a doctor's advice, unless one knows what is in the dose, because headaches which show a tendency to become chronic are not properly headaches at all and cannot be reached by headache medicines, or at least permanently cured, as such headaches are sympathetic messengers from the brain recording a disturbance somewhere else in the body.

The trouble may of course be in the head, the ears, the eyes, the nerves, or adenoïdal growths—all cause headaches and the first symptom of an abscess in the inner ear is a headache. Kidney trouble is often indicated by a headache, and we all know that most of the ordinary headaches are directly due to the stomach.

Probably it is as well that such a forcible reminder tells us something is wrong if we are only wise enough to listen to the persistent hammering.

A headache is often due to an empty stomach or a stomach overloaded with indigestible food.

Household Notes.

It is said that an omelette is the true test of civilization.

A portable fire extinguisher should be in every home.

Platter meals are a great help to the housekeeper in hot weather.

A sewing machine run by electricity is a great saving of energy in hot weather.

Pens and corn should always be canned a few hours after they are gathered.

Fish or eggs may be served in many ways as the chief course of a summer meal.

A high cutting table, such as tailors use, is of the greatest service in the sewing room.

Be sure to remove seeds from the lemons sliced for tea, and put a clove or two in each slice.

When a worn place or hole appears in the matting it can be darned with strands of raffia.

A lump of camphor placed near silverware that is not in use will prevent it from tarnishing.

If you use whole spices, tied in a bag, to flavor your catsup, it will be bright and clear in color.

A shirtwaist box stood on end and fitted with shelves makes a good little cupboard to hold hats in.

PROGRESS ALL ROUND!

The continued ability of both the Allies to forge ahead in this methodical and scientific manner is most reassuring. With equally satisfactory omens our Allies' campaign in the East proceeds. Its general direction is worth noting. Roumania's entry might have been hailed as sealing Bulgaria's fate, as indeed it was in most quarters. This may be its ultimate result, but it is clear that it was not chosen for its immediate object. And the reason is not difficult to see. A concerted and concentrated attack upon Bulgaria would be very powerful, but it is doubtful if it could completely achieve its purpose before winter, which sets in early and is of great severity in the Balkans. Bulgaria and Turkey can give their great Allies little help, and will be kept sufficiently innocuous by General Serrail and the Grand Duke. That being so, the Allies' strategy found more favourable a blow at the weak member of the confederacy, Austria. It has been made and with instant success. Roumania holds already the keys to Transylvania in Kronstadt and Hermannstadt, and her capture of Szekely marks a rapid and considerable inroad. Coincidentally, the Russians have renewed with great power their storming of the Carpathian passes, most of which appear now to be in their hands. So great has the pressure become that it is considered possible by some that Austria will abandon the whole province of Transylvania, an act which would not be calculated to make more cordial her already doubtful relations with Hungary. It is very unlikely, but Austria's problem must be a hard one and will become desperately difficult of solution if Russia comes over the Carpathians in force.

The only other point to notice at present in this most interesting situation is the general report of the Russian advance through Dobruza, apparently unchecked by the Bulgarian counter-demonstration. If it is at all considerable it will be regarded with considerable apprehension by both Bulgaria and Turkey. The course of events will shortly show whether there is any foundation in the frequent rumours of the intention of both these nations to seek peace before irremediable disaster overtakes them.

The Air Raids.

Count Von Reventlow's estimate of the British character will be welcomed by the subjects of his philosophizing. They are accustomed to hearing their determination to fight to the end in a righteous cause termed stubbornness and obstinacy—in fact they are fond of calling it that themselves—but it is welcome to know that their enemies are beginning to recognize its existence and what it means. It is not, however, the possession of these qualities but reliance upon their despised military abilities that allows them to regard with equanimity threats of the "destruction" of London. They want nothing better than that the attempt should be made. Here is the German balance-sheet of the last raid: debit, one Zeppelin destroyed and its entire crew killed; credit, two persons killed, about a dozen injured and a score of buildings slightly damaged—no military loss whatever. Britain will be content to let Germany do as much business as she likes on this basis. There is compelling evidence that the same high mark of efficiency that has been reached in the art of submarine hunting is being approached by the anti-Zeppelin service, though its difficulties are much greater. There was always this material excuse for the submarine campaign, that if its losses were high it also did considerable damage; the same cannot be said of these senseless air-raids, and those who order them must know it. There is only one effective way of dealing with them, engineered as they are to please an infatuated and furious nation, and that is to bring down the raiders. Many of them have been brought down, but the fact has been wisely kept a secret in all its important details. The destruction of the other day of a Zeppelin, which could not be kept a secret, will both encourage the British and dispirit the German people, to whom it is almost certain to become known. Let us hope that every succeeding raid will pay the same price.

Lukewarm Reception

To Returned Heroes Yesterday. Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—May I trouble you for space in your influential columns to comment briefly anent the lukewarm reception accorded the Churchill brothers on their arrival at the railway station yesterday evening. The matter was one of the principal topics of talk at the various club rooms last night and in most places around town this morning, and much adverse criticism, and justly so, was manifested on all sides in regard thereto. I think all who were present on the station platform will unanimously agree with me when I say that it was the poorest exhibition of patriotism witnessed for some time. In fact it was "patriotic" with a vengeance and very slack returns indeed for what our soldier young men have done on historic Gallipoli and are doing now on the memorable plains of France for us stay-at-home prate-boxes and armchair warriors. The Churchill officers, Ernest and Maxwell, played their part and did their bit nobly and well. They are now invalided home, having been pronounced to be further unfit for active service. When in harness they were found to be soldiers tried and true, their promotions to the rank of Second Lieutenant amply testifying that.

But to return to what happened when the train pulled into the station yesterday. The Churchill brothers were greeted by their father with typical paternal affection. There was no cheering, no words of welcome from any one else and as a wag remarked, one could almost hear a pin drop. Then the heroes were given a handshake by two ladies of the Patriotic Association, one of whom I think was Mrs. J. A. Cuff, after which they were escorted to a motor car by their father.

Yours very truly,
PUBLICUS.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place this morning at the C. E. Cathedral, when Mr. Harold Moore and Miss Florence Crocker were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. J. Brinton. The bride, a well known young lady, was assisted by Miss Florence Hampton and the groom by Mr. J. Bugden. The bride was dressed in sage silk velvet with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of lilacs of the valley and maiden hair fern. After the wedding a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Spencer Street, where a sumptuous breakfast was partaken of. The health and happiness of the bride and groom was toasted by Mr. F. Noseworthy, and the reply to the toast of Our Guests was made by the Rev. J. Brinton, who in most suitable terms wished the happy couple a pleasant voyage on the sea of life. After the reception the bride and groom drove to Forest Pond where the honeymoon will be spent. The Telegram joins in extending felicitations.

Thick fog was experienced close on the land, but fortunately the ice which jammed the harbours below Hopedale has disappeared. She will sail at 5 p.m. on Thursday over the same route.

New Business Stand.

Mr. M. J. O'Keefe, an enterprising and industrious young man and one who has had considerable experience in the wheelwright line, has just taken over the carriage business lately conducted by Mr. S. G. Collier. He asks the old customers of the firm to continue their patronage and he assures new-comers of satisfactory workmanship. There is no doubt that the new business will prosper, in view of the perseverance and attention to work of the proprietor. The Telegram wishes Mr. O'Keefe abundant success.

MINNARD'S LINIMENT CURE FOR DIPHTEA.

Another Nfld. Contingent Landed Safely in England.

The knowledge that the last contingent of our soldier boys, who left here a week ago yesterday on the Allan Liner Sicilian, have arrived safely across the Atlantic, will be received with gratification and pride throughout the country. A cablegram was received this morning at Government House from Capt. Carry, who went over in charge of the last draft, stating that the steamer had reached her destination safely and that all on board were well. The run across was made in seven days, and Liverpool is supposed to be the port of disembarkation.

Suspect Arrested.

CHARGED WITH GROSSLY IMMORAL OFFENCE.
A few days ago it was brought to the notice of the authorities here that an offence of a serious and revolting nature had occurred recently in a northernmost section of the country and Detective Byrne was sent to investigate. Suspicion rested on a certain young man who quit the place. Byrne got wise quickly and shadowed the suspect and this morning "put the grips" on him at Avondale. The accused and his escort reached town by the noon train to-day. He will be arraigned in the Police Court to-morrow morning.

McMurdo's Store News

TUESDAY, Sept. 5, 1916.
Gault's Digestive Syrup is most valuable in cases of dyspepsia associated with sluggish liver or constipation, and where the appetite is poor or below normal. Gault's Syrup will quickly restore the appetite and if used with a little persistence tend to correct the constipated habit and liver trouble. The dose is small as the medicine is of high concentration, and its curative effects usually begin almost with the first dose. Price 50c. a bottle.
For diarrhoea, McMurdo's Wild Strawberry Compound is an outstanding remedy, especially when there is much pain. Price 25c. a bottle.

Reids' Boats.

The Argyle leaves Placentia to-day for the west.
The Clyde left Lewisporte at 1.45 p.m. yesterday.
The Dundee left Port Blandford at 9.30 a.m. yesterday.
The Ethel is due at Flowers Cove from the north.
The Glencoe left Fortune at 2.55 p.m. yesterday, coming east.
The Home left Fortune Harbour at 1 p.m. yesterday outward.
The Kyle left Port aux Basques at 12.45 a.m. to-day.
The Meigs is due at Port aux Basques to-day.
The Sagona sails for the Labrador at 6 p.m. Thursday.
The Wren left Clarendville at 9.30 a.m. yesterday.

Sagona From Labrador

The S. S. Sagona, Capt. Parsons, reached port at 1 p.m. to-day from the Labrador Mail Service, bringing a large freight, consisting of whale oil, cod oil, and fish in drums, also several passengers most of whom were landed at Carboner and St. Grace. The captain reports slight improvement in the fishery at several places north, and on the southern part of the coast hook and liners were doing well. Thick fog was experienced close on the land, but fortunately the ice which jammed the harbours below Hopedale has disappeared. She will sail at 5 p.m. on Thursday over the same route.

Prospects Encouraging
Plenty of Bait.

The following reports have been received by the Board of Trade:—
Sept. 2nd. From J. Devereaux, (Cape Race to St. Shott's).—The catch to date is 9470 qtls. with 80 for last week. Two motor boats and 43 dories and skiffs are fishing. The dories get from 1 to 2 qtls. daily when bait is obtainable but neither squid nor herring are plentiful. There is a good sign of cod on the grounds and prospects are fairly good.

Sept. 2nd. From T. McCarthy, (Renews to Seal Cove).—There is a good sign of cod but dogfish are numerous and are hindering operations.
The total catch is 3950 qtls. and for last week 700. Seven boats, 18 dories and 27 skiffs are fishing. Prospects are fair and there is plenty of squid.

Sept. 2nd. From R. Brown (Upper Amherst Cove to Cape L'Argent).— Prospects for the Fall fishery are very bad. The fishermen say the inside grounds are clean and there is practically no cod on the other grounds.
Squid is very scarce, not half enough for bait being obtainable. About 300 dories and skiffs and 15 large boats and motors are fishing. The catch is 14,500 with 500 for last week.

Sept. 2nd. From W. White (English Har. to Spaniard's Cove).—The men with motors and trawls who go to the centre of the bay secure excellent catches and hand liners get from ½ to 1 qt. daily. Squid is plentiful and prospects are very good. The catch 18970 and for last week 530.

Sept. 2nd. From W. J. White (Aguaforte to Caplin Bay).—The total catch is 7476 qtls. with 1004 for last week. Mostly trawls are being used and with very good results. Prospects are very encouraging and there is sufficient squid bait. Six whale boats and 85 dories and skiffs are fishing.

Hot Weather
Philosophy.

In this hot weather it will make us feel a little more comfortable to think of cool things, like snow and ice. So, first let us remember that there is a wet season ahead, and after that the snowy and frosty season. We shall have to be out in all kinds of weather, and the only way to enjoy life under all the different conditions is to be comfortably clad. For instance, if your feet are encased in nice, stylish, well-fitting Bear Brand Rubber Shoes,
the state of the streets will not worry you in the slightest degree. Of course, nobody is buying rubber shoes just yet, but the time will soon come, and then, isn't it better to buy one good, well-fitting pair that will last you the greater part of the winter, rather than half-dozen pairs of shoddy shoes, that you will always find broken on the mornings that the slush is inches high?

INVITATION TO AUTUMN.

Come, gentle
Fall! Imparal
Autumn, come!
Heat long endured has knocked us out of plumb; sagged in the back and wabbly in the knees, humbly we beg a breath of Autumn breeze.
Long have we watched the red-hot days drag by,
panting and sick beneath a well-done sky; as people long, when Winter has his fling, long for the glow and genial warmth of Spring, so do we yearn our backs against the wall, yearn for your chill. O life-preserving Fall! Bring on your frost, regardless of expense! Bid Summer quit, bid heat go humping hence!
Willst we stand, a weary, washed-out band, hoping that snow will come and 'hide the land, muttering low, amid the endless heat. "Fall, when you come, bring forty kinds of sleet!
Let every gust be born of arctic snows, freeze all our ears, put chilblains in our toes! Cover our spin-ach with a coat of rime, let us be cold, for three months at a time!" Let us repeat, ere heat hath made us dumb, Come, gentle Fall, imperial Autumn, come!

Everyday Etiquette.

"How should one congratulate the bride and groom after the ceremony?"
asked Lillie.
"After shaking hands with the bridegroom it is sufficient to simply say, 'Hearty congratulations,' supplemented by whatever other remarks the degree of your acquaintance warrants. It is quite proper to wish the bride much happiness in whatever manner you can most gracefully word it," answered her aunt.

Household Notes.

A little jar of salad helps out a school child's lunch greatly. Choose the jars with covers that screw on.
A good cocktail is made from red raspberries and diced oranges, or watermelon and diced pineapple with lemon juice.

Leftover corn and tomatoes can be made into an excellent chowder with the addition of sliced potatoes, milk and seasoning.

Tanned shoes should always have a professional polish put on before wearing; then scratches will affect only the surface.

An excellent celery salt can be made at home by drying the celery leaves, crushing them to a powder and mixing with salt.

An easy and quick way to clean tarnished silver is to boil it in water to which has been added a small lump of washing soda.

Fine linens and pieces of lingerie will last much longer if they are wrung out by hand and not put through the wringer.

Those Old Days.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How much of our mental visualization comes from early associations! I was reading the other day a story which spoke of a woodpile in a cellar. All at once I became conscious that in my mental eye I was seeing the woodpile in which my children used to play. It wasn't in our cellar because we had no woodpile, there being no open fireplace in the house to require one. I write it with grief. It is the one big lack in my memories. Our house was built in that unfortunate, after the Civil War period, whose architects, some one has said, must have left their brains instead of their bodies upon the battlefields. It had marble mantels with registers in the center instead of fireplaces. Loving fireplaces as I do what amounts almost to a passion, it is sad to have only registers and "air rights" to remember. I would rather deny any luxury to children of my own than a fireplace.

To Return To The Woodpile. However, to return to the woodpile. The woodpile I see is the one which appeared every year in a neighbor's yard and about which we children used to play. To conform to the story I transplant it in my mind to a corner of our old cellar, where, to be sure, it seems rather ill at ease. The point is this, I have had woodpiles of my own since, but when called upon to picture one, my mind does not instinctively picture these, it goes back to those powerful associations of the early days. Again when I read "Hide His Light Under a Bushel" in the Scripture, I always see an old bushel basket that used to hang from a cellar rafter. It had a handle in the middle and the cover was divided into two flaps. I always vision a candle inside it and am obsessed by an uneasy sense that it may be burning the cover.

They Appeared In Our Old Furnace.

Again, Shadrach, Meshack and Abednego are always uncomfortably crowded into the small, old-fashioned furnace which used to occupy the center of that cellar.

In a way, I suppose those last two are unfair examples, since they are conceptions that I formed long ago and still hold.

Nevertheless I think it is true of new visualization, too, that we oftenest go back to the old days for our mental pictures.

Just for the fun of it, watch yourself some day and see.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake. Zylex, London. sold

A new Orleans individual salad is made of a thin slice of onion, a slice of tomato and a slice of green pepper, dressed with oil and vinegar. Good crackers to serve with salad are made with a half-inch cube of cheese set in the centre of each cracker, which then is browned in the oven.

THE BATHING BEACH.
The bathing beach is a public resort, where the populace is allowed to congregate and pose. It is also allowed to expose to a certain extent, some of these exposures having a time fuse attachment.

The bathing beach is a modern innovation, and was invented for the purpose of doing away entirely with the bath tub. In the old days it was the custom to keep a bath tub in every home where refinement and culture dwelt, and force the male members of the family to frequent the same on every recurring Saturday night, rain or shine. This was one of the most cruel edicts ever promulgated and enforced by woman, and caused more bitterness to arise in the home than an altercation over a just division of the white meat. But nowadays the bath tub is as much out of date as the family photograph album on the center table, and everybody troops to the bathing beach in as few clothes as possible.

The purpose of the bathing beach, as at present conducted in our large centres, is to show how the human form has fallen since the days of the ancient Greeks. Nobody with a sincere mind and a pair of opera glasses can go to a modern bathing beach and gaze upon the exhibits draped around on the sand without believing that man is not only a fallen creature, but that he also pulled down woman with him. Why is it that a man who is constructed like a human knitting needle will crawl into a bathing suit four sizes too small and then mingle among perfect strangers who would rather look at something else? We are taught to reverence man as the noblest work of creation, but there is nothing noble about a bow-legged bather with a mole-bedecked neck except his self-possession.

The bathing beach has come to be used mainly by people who do not know how to swim and who have no present intention of learning. When a woman pays $72 for a bathing suit which will not wash, she would rather sit on the beach and have her photograph taken for the Sunday paper. A bathing costume can thus be used over and over again without running or causing anyone to run. This shows woman's thrifty and economical nature.

The bathing beach is a splendid institution, but it is a poor place for a married man to visit unless chaperoned by a vigilant wife.

Boy Missing.

A boy named Avery, who has a mania for absenting himself from home as long as a week at a time, is again reported missing. He disappeared from the parental abode on Pleasant Street on Thursday last and was not seen around the city since. He has a particular fondness for roaming in the woods, his favorite sport being the South Side Hills. He was seen there several times, but it is not known where he gets food from. However, the lad's absence is causing anxiety to his parents, relatives and friends, and a search is being made for him.

Lieut Jeffery.

Lieut. Edward Jeffery, son of the Rev. Mr. Jeffery, of Pouch Cove, formerly attached to the 3rd Battalion, C. E. F., and latterly Bombing Instructor with the 17th Reserve Battalion, C. E. F., is coming home on two months furlough. He is expected to leave the Old Country en route to his native home on Thursday next.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

All is ready for the final spurt in the last lap of the Pennant Race to-morrow and strenuous efforts will be made by all four teams to win out. The first game will commence at 2 p.m. and will be between the Cubs and Red Lions. This should prove the best game of the year as fans consider both teams to be of equal strength. The line up will likely be:—
Cubs. Pitcher, Cooney; Clouston, Power; Carter, Catcher; Duggan, 1st Base; Murphy, 2nd Base; Hall, 3rd Base; Pearce, Short Stop; Thomas, Right Field; Tessier, Centre Field; King, Left Field.

This was perfectly correct, as first base must be occupied before the rule governing the dropping of the third strike can apply. See Rule 51, Sec. 6. Second—First, second, and third bases are filled—no one out—batter hits an infield fly. Batter is automatically out, and under American League interpretation of the rules the baserunners cannot advance until the ball is either caught or dropped, when they do so at their own peril.

What happened was this: With the bases filled, batter popped an infield fly and before ball was caught, St. John tried to advance and was tagged between first and second. Chief Cheshman put him back on first, which was correct. But, had runner remained on first until infield-fly play was completed, tried to reach second and was then tagged or ball put to first before he could return there, the baserunner would then be out.

Or, again, if the runner on third had stolen home before infield play was completed, the umpire would have had to place said runner back on third. For the information of the fans, we may say that the National League ruling is somewhat different on this point, but all Newfoundland games have been played under American League rules, and precisely the same play happened in one of the Inter-town series with Grand Falls, and the same ruling was applied as in the Cubs-Wanderers game.

Third—Runner from third stealing home—ball is thrown to catcher who tags runner before reaching plate—Chief Cheshman calls runner out instantly, but before play is complete the catcher drops the ball, and Umpire then reverses his former decision and calls runner safe.

This is the correct decision; read last paragraph but one on page 205 of Spalding's Rule Book, which states:— "The ball however must be held by the fielder after he has touched runner." Some players and fans contend that an umpire cannot reverse his decision. This is not so. As an example, we may state that in the American League last year, at a game played in Boston, between Detroit and Boston a runner was on first base, batter made a two bagger into ground rule territory, the ball striking the fence close to the foul flag. The baserunner on first advanced to third. The umpire judged the hit a foul and ordered the runner back from third to first. The captain of the batting team had the umpire walk over to the fence (which by the way was whitewashed) and the ball had left a mark where it struck just inside the foul flag showing that the ball was really into fair territory and that the runner was entitled to advance his two bases from first to third. The umpire then allowed runner to go to third and batter to second base. Some reverse decision!

Before bawling at an umpire, just how keenly would you cherish his job? THIS HAPPENS EVERY GAME. The batters come, the batters go. They get 'em up and ground 'em out. They know the pitcher's going to blow. They bunt when they try to bunt; they biff the ozone when they swing; and when they fan, you hear 'em grunt. "That poor old guy ain't got a thing."

The batters grin and then they swear. They had the pitcher has them stalled. They try to chop and miss for fair; and when they fall the strikes are called. They fall to slam the slow ball toss and hate to hear his fast one sing; they sit on the bench they tell the Boss "Why, gee, that guy ain't got a thing."

The batters come, the batters go. They hurry up and amble back. They get nine doughnuts in a row and none gets by the second sack. They've been stood on their ears to-day. From lead-off man to clean-up king; but they're shut out, still they say, "That bird ain't got a doggone thing."

Elegant Show at British.
There was a record attendance at Rossley's last night and a better show has never at any time been given than that produced by this clever company. Miss Dot Marshall was encored many times for her singing; Miss Edwards sang beautifully; Little Kathleen, the child wonder, had to respond to many encores; but the bit of the evening was Miss Clara Squires—she has taken the town by storm, as a comedienne, there is no cleverer child before the public anywhere. Mrs. Rossley and Clara had the crowd in roars in their sketch: "A Much Married Man." The pictures were splendid.

Gallipoli Veterans

Return.

By yesterday's express Lieuts. Ern and Max Churchill returned on furlough after an absence of close on two years. They were met at the station by the ladies of the Women's Patriotic Reception Committee, who extended a hearty welcome home to the two brother officers. They were then taken by automobile to Government House where in the absence of His Excellency, Sir Joseph Outerbridge welcomed them home on behalf of the people of Nfld. As already stated in the Telegram a few days ago, both are Gallipoli heroes and won their promotion as officers step by step from the ranks. Lieut. Ern was wounded in the ankle a few days after going in the trenches on the Peninsula and was taken to the dressing station whence he was soon able to be back in the firing line. He took part in the second attack on Caribou Hill, and was shortly after stricken with jaundice. He was then sent to different hospitals at Malta, Sicily and England and was only released a short while ago, when he was granted two months' furlough. Lieut. Max contracted dysentery at Gallipoli and on reaching England was placed in Wandsworth Hospital, where he was confined for several months. A few days before the big drive he was ordered to France in command of a detachment of "Ours," but was not privileged to take part in the famous charge, having to be content with doing reserve work. On returning to headquarters in England he was granted furlough, and leaving with his brother he crossed to Quebec and from thence by rail and boat to St. John's. They report seeing Lieuts. Len and 'Bob' Stick doing well. The former is now attached to the depot at Avy, having fully recovered from his gunshot wound in the head. The latter is still confined to hospital suffering from a fractured leg. Second Lieut. Ralph Herder is now at Kinross, taking a course in training, having escaped with a slight wound on July 1st. Lieut. Bert Dicks is also getting along nicely. The officers mentioned are lifelong friends and school chums of the Churchill brothers.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Hon. H. J. B. Woods were consigned to their last resting place at the General Protestant Cemetery, in the presence of a large gathering of citizens. The funeral cortege on leaving Bemister Place, proceeded up King's Bridge Road, along Military and Queen's Roads and from thence via Church Hill, Parkworth Street, McBride's Hill and Water Street to the cemetery and was made up as follows: The boys of Cochrane St. Sunday School, the Methodist clergy of the city, Rev. C. A. Whitmarsh of Brigus, the former pastor, and the Rev. J. S. Sutherland of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; the hearse decorated with floral tributes from the different church bodies, relatives and friends; the remains, the immediate relatives Messrs. Sidney and Chesley Woods, brothers of the deceased, grandsons and sons-in-law Messrs. Arthur Mews, Arthur Peters, Eugene Lindsay and Alex Marshall, Trustees and Quarterly Official Boards of the Cochrane Street church and members of the Executive Board of the Meth. College, Hon. Robert Watson, representing His Excellency the Governor and Hon. J. H. Bennett, the Act. Prime Minister walked together; Judges of the Supreme Court, the Speaker of the House of Assembly with the members of the Legislature and clerks of the House; Geo. W. LeMesurier, Esq., Acting P.M.G., David Stott, Esq., Supt. of Postal Telegraphs, and about 80 officials of the Postal and Postal Telegraphs' Departments with whom Mr. Woods had been associated during the past fifteen years. The service at the graveside was read by Revs. Dr. Curtis and Bond, Rev. N. M. Gray, M.A., and the Rev. J. S. Sutherland, of St. Andrew's Church. The favorite hymn of the deceased, "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," was sung by the large congregation. After the concluding prayers all that was mortal of the late Henry J. B. Woods were lowered to mother earth to await the resurrection.

IMMENSE CROWDS AT NICKEL THEATRE.

A delightful programme was given at the Nickel Theatre yesterday and the hundreds of patrons were highly delighted with it. The continuation of the grand serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page" was very closely followed by all. The chapter was entitled "Dawning Hope." The Lubin Co's great social drama "The Sporting Duchess," in which Rose Coughlin played the leading role ably assisted by Ethel Clayton and others, proved to be one of the finest pictures ever shown in St. John's. To-day the programme will be repeated. To-morrow there will be a special holiday bill.

BRILLIANT WORK BY FRENCH.

PARIS, To-day.—A bloody battle is going on on both flanks of the Somme, says an official issued by the War Office to-night. The French have made fresh progress east of the Village of Forest, north of the river, and south have successfully attacked objectives along a front of 20 kilometres (12½ miles) from Barleux to Châlons. The village of Soyecourt was brilliantly carried by assault, as well as part of Vermandevillers. Over 5,000 prisoners have been taken north and south of the Somme in the last two days. Progress was also made on the right bank of the Meuse in the Verdun sector in the Fleury region.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, To-day.—An official statement from General Headquarters issued to-night reads: This morning the enemy made a counter attack against our newly won position northwest of Moquet Farm. He was easily repulsed. North of Faltemont farm our troops gained further ground during the afternoon. Heavy fighting continues on this portion of our front. Beyond heavy artillery actions between the Ancre and the Somme there is nothing to report.

CAPTURE OF DAR-ES-SALAAM.

LONDON, To-day.—Official: A German East Africa statement says that British naval forces, in co-operation with troops from Hagamoye Sandak are now occupying Dar-es-Salaam, south of Morogoro. The pursuit of the German forces continues to the south-east. The main body, the statement adds, is in the region of Matombo on the eastern slope of the Ulqurn Mountains. Lieut.-Col. Vander-Venter in command of the British force has reached Kikumi, 42 miles south of Kilossa. Brigadier General Northey at the head of another British force has occupied Newiranga. Dar-es-Salaam is the most important seaport in German East Africa. Before the war it was the residence of the Governor and contained a military station. It is on the Indian Ocean about 275 miles below the frontier of British East Africa. The town evidently fell before a British column which had been pushing down the coast, one of several expeditionary forces sent out by the British, French, Belgian and Portuguese, which are fighting surrounding the remaining German forces.

ZAIMIS TAKES CHARGE.

ATHENS, Sunday.—Seizing the opportunity offered by the presence at Piræus within gunshot of Athens of the large fleet of the Entente nations, Premier Zaimis assumed unobtrusively what amounts virtually to dictatorial powers. All is now in readiness for the final act to end the neutrality of Greece.

RETAINS HIS TITLE.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., To-day.—Freddie Welsh retained his title of champion lightweight pugilist of the world to-day after going the full scheduled twenty rounds with the challenger Charlie White, of Chicago. The referee awarded Welsh the decision on points.

NELD. SCHOONER ABANDONED.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., To-day.—The schr. Maggie U., Capt. Kennedy, which left here on Friday with a cargo of 280 tons of coal for Newfoundland ports was picked up abandoned two miles off the coast by fishermen and taken into Ingonish. An examination of the abandoned craft revealed the fact that she had been on fire. The cabin was partly burned, the mainmast was scorched and everything in the forecastle was gone. A dory remained on the deck but a large boat was missing, indicating the manner in which the crew had taken their departure. There was no sign of the missing crew. It is thought possible that they have been picked up by a passing steamer and taken up the Gulf or elsewhere. The schooner was owned in St. John's, Nfld. Probably five men besides the captain were aboard.

French and British in combined attack made a further important advance on the Somme: the British on a front of three thousand yards to an average depth of eight hundred yards, capturing the strongly fortified village of Gaillemont and the greater part of Glanchy. er degree, but politically and economically to the limits of her resources, are due to her tenacity and stubbornness. It is these qualities, apart from her insular position, that have made her what she is. For this reason it is not only futile for us Germans, but on the contrary, it leads to results exactly the reverse of those hoped for, to indulge in threats and similar talk. We find such threats in Dr. Paul Rohrbach's latest article. He speaks about the destruction of London by Zeppelins in case Britain should refuse to revert to old international law.

The idea of the destruction of London is by no means unpleasant to contemplate, but to speak of these and similar things publicly, after the manner of the ancient precepts, is particularly, in view of the British character, worse than useless. Indeed we must fully recognize the importance of the Angli-Saxon tenacity and energy, since the outcome of the war will depend entirely on whether or not we are stronger than the British in these respects.

It is a good idea to reduce the weekend work by preparing early in the week a large cake of the kind that will keep and a jar of cookies.

To have hot foods perfectly served, the dishes should be hot and a pewter dish cover set over the food as soon as it is placed on them.
