STEWART'S Home Made Bread,

THE BREAD MY DADDY LIKES.

Daddy is evidently not one of those back number lords of creation who believes that woman's place is in the home—and only there. His taste in a wife is an up-to-date woman who will prove herself a real companion. He knows that if she is a slave to her kitchen she can't enjoy the poise or have the interest in world affairs that a little extra leisure would make possible; and so he is pleased to eat MRS. STEWART'S HOME MADE BREAD—the loaf with the home made flavor.

The smiling, well-nourished kiddie doesn't look as though suffering because mother is progressive enough to buy good bread made by a bread specialist, instead of wearing out her life in the kitchen.

THE Phantom Lover.

(By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband.")

CHAPTER XI.

"I should have been delighted if you could have come," he said. "But, of course, if your fiancé would not object to it—." He broke off as if there was nothing more to be said.

Esther wondered if Raymond really would mind; at first he had been very jealous, and could not bear her to speak to another man, but latterly—she hated it, because she could not forget that once he had told her she could marry a man with money if she played her cards carefully—the man who had said that seemed a different personality altogether from the man whose letters she had only lived for during the last fortnight.

Was she mean and unfeeling that she continually found herself remembering the quarrels and scenes they had had? She wanted so earnestly to forget them; she went up to June's room with dragging steps.

The door of the room opened before she reached the landing, and June came out.

"I knew it was you," she said. "Poor soul! how tired you sound. Another day of miserable failure, I suppose. Never mind, come and sit down in the warm, and you'll soon forget it."

Esther laughed rather shamefacedly.

"It's been a day of success, strange to relate," she said. "But I'm tired, dead tired—I must have walked miles. She suddenly remembered Micky; she looked round with a quick suspicion. "Have you been alone all the afternoon?" she asked.

"Yes, quite alone," June laughed. "Who did you expect to find here, pray?" she demanded.

"Nobody—I only wondered if you had any visitors."

"I might have known it wasn't the truth that he was coming here," she told herself vexedly.

"Well, and what about the success?"

June asked; she was sitting on the hearthrug stroking Charlie. "You don't mean to say that the old dear at the agency really had something to offer you this time?"

Esther nodded.

"Yes, and she's desperately anxious for me to take it, too. It's quite a good offer, but it means leaving here and living in; and I don't believe I want to leave here," she added ruefully.

June looked dismayed.

"I shan't let you go," she said promptly. "Just as we are settling down so cozily." She put her white hands over her ears. "No, I don't want to hear another thing about it, if that's all, refuse it—write and refuse it at once."

Esther laughed; she pulled June's hands down and held them firmly.

"Tell me," she said. "Do you know any people named Ashton?"

She was longing to find out if June did know them; it seemed such a lifetime since she had seen Raymond or spoken to him, she was hungry to hear him spoken of, even if only by this woman who probably had merely known him as an ordinary acquaintance.

"Ashton!" June wrinkled up her nose. "I know some Ashtons who live in Braymstone Square," she said at last. "A mother and son. A very handsome woman she is, with white hair; she has a sort of grande dame look about her—the sort of woman you can imagine in a powdered wig and a crinoline, curtsying to the queen."

She scrambled up, and, snatching a paper fan from the shelf, swept Esther a graceful curtsy to illustrate her meaning.

But Esther was too much in earnest to be amused.

"It must be the same Mrs. Ashton," she said eagerly. "This is her card—she gave it to me to-day—Mrs. Raymond Ashton."

June glanced at the card and nodded briskly.

"Yes, it's the same. I don't know her frightfully well; she's rather reserved, too; but I admire her immensely—well, go on."

"She wants me to go to her as a sort of companion—she has offered me fifty pounds a year."

June whistled.

"Not bad, is it? But you'll refuse, of course?"

"I asked her to let me think it over; I said I should like to talk it over with you first."

June clasped her hands round her knees and stared into the fire thoughtfully.

"She's a widow, isn't she?" Esther said hesitatingly. "At least—she didn't say anything about a husband."

"Yes, she's a widow right enough," June said. "And delighted to be, I should think," she added bluntly. "I never knew the departed spouse, but from all accounts he was a perfect terror."

Esther said nothing. Raymond had always spoken of his father as being a "rare old sport."

After a moment—

"There's a son too," June said. "A kind of Adonis to look at, beautiful eyes and all that sort of thing."

"Yes," said Esther. She tried hard to keep the eagerness from her voice. "Do you—do you know the son too?" she asked nervously.

June gave a queer little laugh.

"Oh, yes, I know him. That is to say, I say 'How d'ye do' to him when I have the misfortune to meet him, but—"

Esther's hands were clasped in her lap.

"Why—why—misfortune?" she asked.

June Mason shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, I don't know—it's hard to explain—he's never done me any harm, but there are some people one hates by instinct, and Raymond Ashton is one of the people I hate." She smoothed a crease in the skirt of her frock. "He's such a—such an awful outsider," she added, unconsciously choosing the word Micky Mellowes had used a few hours before.

Esther sat very still. Twice she tried to speak, but no words would come. She knew that it was unfair to June to sit there and allow her to go on talking about Raymond, but something in her heart seemed to have set a seal on her lips.

"He's that insufferable kind of creature who thinks himself irresistible," June went on. "Micky has often told me the way he brags about his so-called 'conquests.' Conquests, indeed! What are they but a few poor ignorant girls hood-winked by his handsome face and smooth tongue? Dozens of girls he's had, my dear, literally dozens! Only the other day some one told me that Mrs. Ashton had to threaten to cut him off with a shilling if he didn't give up some little person he was supposed to be going to marry! I don't know how true it is, mind you, but that's the sort of man he is—I've no time for him at all," she finished vigorously.

She turned to look at Esther, and gave a little exclamation of alarm. "How pale you are! Don't you feel well?"

"I'm quite all right—I'm just tired—I don't think I'll go down to supper to-night. I'll just stay here and be quiet. I wanted to hear what you had to say about my future employer."

"Future fiddleticks!" June retorted. "You're not going to her, my dear; I shan't let you. If Raymond came home while you were there, you'd never have any peace."

Esther was lying back now with closed eyes. Over and over again in her mind she was saying to herself—

"I don't believe it—I don't believe a word of it; it's all cruel lies—first Mr. Mellowes and now June. They both hate him, that's what it is; but I don't believe a word of what they say."

June was bustling about the room fetching cushions and a light rug, which she had laid over Esther.

"You have a little sleep, and you'll feel heaps better," she said.

She went away, shutting the door quietly; and Esther hid her face in her hands.

She hardly knew why she was crying, she only knew that she was utterly miserable.

She took Ashton's last letter from her dress and read it through again—that he loved her? How could any one, knowing his careful thought for her, believe that he was the detestable personality June and Micky had described?

She kissed the signature passionately; nobody in all the world counted but this one man.

She got up and went over to June's desk, which both girls used; she felt that she must write to him and tell him how much she wanted him.

When she had finished writing she looked to the head of the paper on which she had written for the address, and then she saw a postscript scribbled in a corner which she had not noticed before.

"Don't write to me here—I shall have left this hotel by the time you get my letter. I will write again as soon as possible."

It was like a door with iron bars being closed in her face; she could not write after all! She could have no relief for all her longing and unhappy-ness; she must just wait and wait, eating her very soul out, till he wrote again.

She tore up what she had written and threw it into the fire.

"The phantom lover"—June's half playful, half mocking words came back to her with foreboding. Was he indeed only a phantom lover? Just a creation of her own brain and desire?

She tried to thrust the thought from her; she was tired and fanciful; in the morning she would be all right; it was not fair to him, it was not fair to herself to be so doubting. She went back to June's couch and curled up amongst the mauve pillows; life was so hard, so disappointing; it gave so little of all that one desired; and her tears fell again, presently she cried herself to sleep.

June came back on tiptoe; she stole across the room and looked at Esther, then she went back to the hearthrug to keep Charlie company.

The fire had died down and she replenished it as quietly as she could, putting a knob on at a time with her fingers.

As she leaned over to poke them softly together she caught sight of a scrap of paper lying in the grate. It looked like part of a torn letter, and without thinking June picked it up—the one word "dearest" stared up at her in Esther's writing.

June looked at it for a long moment, then she turned her head and glanced at Esther, still sleeping.

June frowned; she hunched her shoulders impatiently.

"More phantom lover, I suppose," she told herself crossly; she threw the little scrap of paper into the fire and watched it burn with a sort of vengeful delight.

CHAPTER XII.

"I've decided to accept Mrs. Ashton's offer," said Esther suddenly.

It was the following afternoon, and she had been helping June paste labels on to the little mauve pots. She looked up as she spoke, with the paste brush still in her hand and her fingers all sticky.

"Did you hear what I said?" she demanded guiltily.

"Yes, I heard," June said rather tartly. "And I think you're a mean pig. However, go on! Have your own way! Don't mind me."

"It isn't that at all," Esther declared. "But I must do something—I've

Better Quarters—Better Business

There's efficiency in cheerful business quarters. There's more and better work, where the factory or warehouse office is made private and inviting with Beaver Board walls and ceilings.

The corner you are now using as office space can be transformed practically overnight. Just run up partition studding and nail Beaver Board to it. Immediately Beaver Board is ready to paint. It will last as long as the building itself.

Put Beaver Board on your business pay roll. With it you can build needed offices—employees' lunch rooms—extensions to the store—partitions—clever window trims.

The result is sure if you get genuine Beaver Board with the Beaver quality trade-mark on the back. Look for this trade-mark on other good building material—for example, Vulcanite Roofing, which comes in Shingles, Slabs and Rolls. Beaver Board and Vulcanite Roofing are sold by lumber and building material dealers everywhere.

been idle quite long enough. I shall be sorry to leave you, but I shall still pay for my half of the room."

"Thank you—thank you very much," said June dryly. Esther ushered in distress.

"Don't be so unkind! It's not that I want to leave you. I've been happier here with you than anywhere else, but I must work, I can't live on nothing."

"You could live on three pounds a week if you wish to. What do you suppose the phantom lover will say if he knows that his money hasn't helped you, and that you're going to make a drudge of yourself?"

"I shan't be a drudge—I—"

June broke in impatiently.

"Oh, very well—I don't want to argue, but I think it's mean of you. If you really liked me you'd stay. . . ."

"I shall come to see you whenever I get any time off."

"Yes, once a week for two hours, I suppose—and when I shall probably be out."

"I shall write first and let you know when I'm coming."

June took no notice; she screwed the lid on to a perfume bottle and wiped her fingers on the white over-all.

NO TROUBLE SO FAR.

LONDON, April 1. The country wide cessation of coal production throughout the Great Britain coal area to-day, because of the miners' strike, thus far has not been productive of trouble in any of the mines where the engine men are reported to have stuck to their posts to prevent the pits being flooded. This raises hopes in some quarters that the fight will not be long, especially as the miners lack funds necessary to continue a long struggle. In the meantime certain of the big iron and steel industries in order to preserve the works from the consequences of a stoppage of coal supplies closed down to-day. Others on the north-east coast of England are expected to shut down early next week. So far as negotiations between mine owners and men are concerned some members of the Coal Owners' Association with authority to negotiate have remained in London, while Frank Hodges, Secretary of the Miners' Unions, is here authorized to treat for the men if favorable opportunity offers. Government officials are reported to be slightly more optimistic regarding the situation in view of the action of owners and others in safeguarding the pits from flooding.

U. S. STANDS PAT.

WASHINGTON, April 1. Rumors of controversy between Germany and United States as to reparations payments brought an authoritative statement from administration officials to-day that the attitude of the United States toward Germany is that she must accept her responsibility for the war and pay her obligations to the fullest extent she is able. London advices from Berlin say it was understood Germany had made certain proposals to the United States regarding reparations payments, including the suggestion that she assume liability for part of the debts of the Allied powers to the United States. There was no confirmation of the re-

NOT PROBABLE.

BERLIN, April 1. The suggestion that the United States become a creditor of Germany by accepting German bonds in lieu of debts the Entente powers owe the United States is popular with the Germans, who have proposed it several times before the recent overtures. It is regarded as unlikely, however, in Berlin official circles, that the United States will seriously consider such a proposition until the Entente announcement positively the total reparations claims it will attempt to collect from Germany. After this sum is announced financial experts will be able to judge Germany's ability to pay.

UNDESIRABLES IN REVOLT.

NEW YORK, April 1. The story of how seventy undisciplined deported to Russia in the steamship Esthonia last February revolted on the high seas under the leadership of a woman, Rosa Tradoesky, was told here to-day by H. J. Skeffington, Immigration Commissioner of Boston, who returned from England on the Adriatic. Conditions became so bad that the captain at one time considered wirelessly a United States war vessel for assistance. Instead he had painted on the deck white "dead lines," beyond which the radicals were warned not to advance on peril of death. These lines were guarded by sailors armed with revolvers and ordered to shoot if their commands were disobeyed. Finally Neptune came to the captain's aid. A gale carried furores on the ocean and seasickness quelled the fire of revolution.

OTTAWA, April 1. An amendment of the clauses in the Immigration Act, which permits the deportation after trial by a Board of Inquiry of persons from Canada, including persons of British birth, is being sought in the House of Commons this year.

A FATAL COLLISION AT SEA.

SEATTLE, April 1. Twenty-one persons, including 18 passengers, may have lost their lives when the Admiral liner Governor sank off Point Wilson, Washington, early to-day, after she had been rammed by the Shipping Board steamer West Hartland. A check up of survivors of the West Hartland disclosed the fact that nineteen persons carried on the passenger and crew list were missing.

U. S. ORDERS AEROPLANES.

WASHINGTON, April 1. The first important move since the armistice toward rehabilitating the United States army's air service, was taken to-day when the War Department placed orders for two hundred Thomas Morse type pursuit aeroplanes and thirty-five Martin bombers.

TURKS AND FRENCH FIGHT.

LONDON, April 1. Fighting between Turks and French, in which the latter lost twenty killed, is reported in messages from Cilicia, Asia Minor, forwarded by the Constantinople correspondent of the London Times. The news appears to confirm persistent rumors of the repudiation by the Turkish Nationalist administration at Angora of the Franco-Turkish agreement concluded in London.

TEN LIVES LOST.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 1. The Pacific Steamship Co. this afternoon announced that a complete and careful record of the survivors from the steamer Governor, sunk off Point Wilson early to-day, after collision with the steamer West Hartland, showed seven passengers and three members of the crew unaccounted for. The West Hartland, which arrived here to-day with the survivors, struck the Governor in a slanting direction, according to the ship's officers, crumpling the freighter's bow and cutting the passenger boat almost in two from the starboard side. According to passengers the West Hartland partly supported the Governor with her nose driven deeply into the Governor's side, but as soon as the freighter backed clear the passenger vessel began to sink. The collision occurred less than a mile off shore, directly opposite the Point Wilson lighthouse, near Port Townsend, in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. The Governor is believed to lie in about 25 fathoms of water. According to Purser Polser, the Governor was on her course, it being customary to steam close to the shore in making Point Wilson light.

IMPORTANT MATTERS DISCUSSED.

WASHINGTON, April 1. Finance and industrial subjects ranging from foreign to domestic agricultural situation was discussed at length by President Harding and his Cabinet at to-day's regular meeting. It was indicated that no definite conclusions resulted and that the railroad question among others still awaited a solution, which can be worked out only when the administration has gathered some complete information.

Official Kisses.

M. Millerand has announced that he will no longer embrace recipients of the Legion of Honour when decorating them.

Other high functionaries in France will doubtless follow suit, and the practice of official kissing will soon be as obsolete then as it is (except in the case of a newly-elected mayor, somewhere or other) in England.

George IV. seems to have been the last of our monarchs to indulge in it. When Wellington, Lord Lyndhurst, and Sir Robert Peel resigned after the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Bill, the King, says Charles Grey, "gave them a salute on each cheek, and they returned to London to tell their colleagues."

At one time the English were far more given to promiscuous kissing than other nations. Nicoleus de Bethlen, who visited us in 1663, notes how he and his brother "behaved very rudely on one occasion, being unaware that it was customary in England to kiss the corner of the mouth of ladies instead of shaking hands, as we do in Hungary. We were invited to dine at the house of a gentleman of high rank, and found his wife and three daughters (one of them married) ready to receive us.

"We kissed the girls, but not the married ladies, and thereby greatly offended the latter. Duval apologized for one blunder, and told us that when saluting we must always kiss the senior lady first and leave the girls to the last."

The First Playing Cards.

Playing-cards were invented about the year 1390, in order to amuse Charles VI, then King of France, who was subject to fits of melancholy.

The inventor proposed to represent the four classes of men in the kingdom. The clergy were represented by hearts, for which reason the Spaniards—who look the cards from the French—used, instead of a heart, a cop or chalice.

The nobility and military were represented by the points of spades, and the Anglo-Saxon ignorance of the meaning of the figure led to them being called "spades."

Diamonds stood for citizens, merchants, and tradespeople, not because of their connection with the precious stones, but because the carreau, the red marks that appear upon the cards, were intended to represent the square stone tiles of which the houses of the middle class were built.

The figure we call a "club" was originally a clover-leaf, and alluded to peasants and farmers. Spanish cards bear a stave or basto in lieu of the French clover-leaf, and it is probably because of this that we refer to the suit as "clubs."

Household Notes.

Crab flakes and diced celery, cooked in a well-seasoned sauce of mushrooms, are delicious.

A Wealth of Warmth Without a Pipe

70 DEGREES
70 DEGREES
A COOL CELLAR

WITHOUT a single pipe—WITHOUT tearing up floors and walls—INSIDE OF 24 HOURS—you can have within your own home on Winter's bitterest day all the cheerful heat and comfort of the big summer sun—every nook and corner of your home can revel in 70 degrees of happy, healthful warmth and comfort. The heating engineers of 1921 have ended the days of dirt and mess, have rid the home of furnace pipes, heating stoves and flying ash—have discovered that heat carries itself GLADLY and CHEAPLY to the furthest corners of a home—have pointed the way to EVEN HEATING everywhere, to CLEANLINESS, HEALTH and COMFORT by the new Pipeless method.

Twice the comfort at half the cost is what the new Enterprise Pipeless Furnace offers NEW HOUSES AND OLD—WITH OR WITHOUT CELLARS—an abundance of heat EVERYWHERE from any kind of fuel is what we GUARANTEE.

Hot air rises and cold air falls. Briefly, that explains Pipeless heating—all the heat ABOVE the furnace, none around it—A COOL CELLAR suitable for storing vegetables and free from cumbersome air pipes—an ALL WARM HOME—every degree of heat exactly where you want it—MORE WARMTH from LESS FUEL. And A SINGLE DAY is all it takes to install an Enterprise Pipeless Furnace and turn your home into a NEST OF COMFORT.

Fryatt's Famous Ship

TO PLY THE IRISH SEA.

Capt. Fryatt's famous ship, the Brussels, in which he defied the Germans, has been sent to the Leith docks for reconstruction. After this work is completed she will join the fleet of the Dublin and Loughor Steamship Company, engaged in the cattle trade between Ireland and England. The Brussels will require a thorough overhauling, having been under water for two years, after being badly damaged when sunk by the Germans. Captain Fryatt, it will be recalled, was shot by the Germans for sinking a U-boat.

The Beauty of Honesty.

It is high time that stress was laid on the pernicious hope of getting something for nothing. Corrupt government officials, slot gambling machines and all that comes in between the two are agencies working for a lower standard of morality, agencies that abet the something-for-nothing spirit and agencies which, eventually, if not suppressed and punished must spell a lower state of morals than we now possess. The home, the church, the school, the press, and the thoughtful individual, too, might well give attention to present conditions and preach the doctrine of public and personal honesty. The unfairness of getting something for nothing and the beauty of honesty should now more than ever be stressed and exemplified by those seeking a higher moral tone.—Amherst News.

FAIR COMMENT.

As supplying any information on urgent local matters, the Speech from the Throne is about as disappointing a pronouncement as could be prepared and while it might be permissible to congratulate the makers on having proven the truth of the epigram that "language was given us to conceal our thoughts," it would be decidedly reprehensible to allow this most remarkable (?) document to be dismissed without further comment. Hence the impulse to devote a little more attention to its salient features, if they can be so described, to-day. The settlement of the Labrador Boundary Question is not of such moment as the Government would like to represent. True, as the Prime Minister said, on Wednesday, it would be nice to have such a slice of territory as is under dispute, handed over to Newfoundland. But what prime advantage will that be to the Colony itself? Doubtless if we ever secure possession of it, the areas, the wealth of which is so much boasted, will be given away to speculator friends of the Government, and the cost of administration will far exceed the return in revenue, thus leaving another white elephant on hand, to go in with the other useless and expensive menagerie collected by the Squires-Coaker party. In any case most of the work in connection with this disputed question was completed by previous Prime Ministers and Attorney Generals, long before the advent of the present regime, and any credit arising out of an equitable adjustment will not come to Messrs. Squires and Warren, who merely arranged the titles for signature.

There are matters of importance, far in advance of an immediate settlement of the Labrador Boundary, that require instant attention. The Speech from the Throne states that the revenue for the year ended June 30, 1920, showed a substantial surplus over all expenditures, but there is an expression that the revenue for the current fiscal year, which terminates on June 30th next, will not be sufficient to meet expenditure on current account, and that therefore a readjustment of expenditure becomes necessary. As usual the war is blamed for the great annual burden of expenditure imposed upon the country. Yet the war ended on November 11th, 1918, one year before the Squires-Coaker Government assumed office. Furthermore the late Government in November, 1919, left a handsome sum in the hands of their present successors on surrendering office, after every item of expense on the Colony's account for the period ending June 30 of that year had been paid. And that sum totalled over three millions of dollars, actual surplus in actual cash.

That huge amount has apparently been squandered, together with the alleged "substantial surplus" of the last financial year given such prominence in the Speech. It is not the war burden that has brought about the necessity for readjustment, but the wilful extravagance of the Government of the present day, and the mad policy upon which they embarked in the restricted marketing of the Colony's chief product. The effect of this has already been felt in commercial circles, and the aftermath is being brought home to the Government which fathered the Regulations.

A curtailment of large expenditures will be necessitated, according to the Speech from the Throne, because of the shortage of revenue. Does that mean that public service grants will be pruned down, whilst present ministers and members of the House continue to draw salaries double that of predecessors? Does it mean that there will be no Road and Bridge grants, nor allocations for marine works, which are badly needed in many places, but that the huge salaries being at present drawn by ministers, members and officials are to be continued? Does it mean that the unnecessary and altogether out-of-proportion-in-expense-departments, such as those of Education and Militia will be abolished, together with the expensive machinery attached to them? If it means only the curtailment of expenditures on account of outport public utilities, whilst these useless departments with their congested staffs are allowed to remain like leeches, sucking the life-blood out of the taxpayers, then we think that the outlined economy will be rather in the wrong direction. True economy means the lopping of all useless limbs from the tree of Government and Administration, and goodness knows there are any number of useless branches hanging on to the trunk of the present one, the lopping of which would prove the sincerity of professed intentions. We ask if it is part of the proposed policy of retrenchment to send the Prime Minister on another picnic to England within the next few months, and whether our proportion of the German indemnity will be applied to his expenses, should he succeed in collecting it?

From the Fleet.

VIKING IN CABOT STRAIT.
The following messages were received last night from the sealing fleet:
To Reid Co.
Sagons—Steaming westerly all day; have seen nothing; Neptune, Eagle and Terra Nova in company.
To Bahne Johnston & Co.
Seal—On board and stowed down 9,000; lost considerable pans in Wednesday's storm; fine, and prospects good for fleet. No ships in sight; all well.
To Job Bros. & Co.
Thetis—Position same as last reported; men killed and panned 600 to-day; loose ice as far as can be seen; bad for picking up seals.
Neptune—Position this evening approximately 35 miles N.E. by E. of the Funks; steamed 35 miles N.W.W. through sheet ice, making fair progress; weather bad; strong breeze from S.W. to E. of schools of old seals to-day; Eagle, Sagons and Terra Nova in company.
To Bowring Bros.
Eagle—Since last report steamed 20 miles N.W.W.; now in tight sheet ice, making N.W.; at 6 p.m. position 64 miles N.E. half E. of Funks.
Terra Nova—Very stormy day; jammed until 1 p.m.; position 35 miles N.E. of Funks; all well.
Viking—Picking up pans; several in sight to N.E.; full report to-morrow; position 20 miles N.W.W. of Cape Ray; all well.

A Flour Shortage.

A serious shortage of flour exists at Port aux Basques at present, according to information given by Emmanuel Pike, one of the largest and best known dealers in that place. Mr. Pike is in town to-day, says the North Sydney Herald of March 28, and has a cargo of flour which he is endeavoring to have shipped by the Kyle. He is trying to induce the Reid Co. to have the Kyle come here today from Louisburg, so the flour can be loaded immediately and landed at Port aux Basques, at the earliest possible moment, in order that the present distress may be relieved. Mr. Pike states there is a lot of snow in his town at present the banks in many places being as high as four and five feet on the level, and twice as high in other parts.

Minaud's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

N. I. W. A. Turned Down by Government.

The N.I.W.A. held a largely attended meeting in the L.S.P.U. Hall last night. In the absence of President H. Shaw, the Vice-President, G. H. Tucker, occupied the chair. A reply was received from the Prime Minister, covering a letter of Mr. T. A. Hall, Secretary of the Railway Commission, in reply to a set of resolutions passed by the N.I.W.A. some time ago re the making of the new locomotives for the railway in this country. The letter stated that the locomotives imported were of a new design, which if built here would add considerably to their cost in the drafting department. It was also added that the men to build the engines could not be spared, all the mechanics being engaged at full time repairing the present stock. Other objections raised were that it would take two years to put the locally made engines in service, and that the Commission being guardians of public monies they were anxious to use it with economy. Poor equipment at the shops here prevented engines being made locally, as economically as at the great locomotive works. After some lengthy discussion, the letter was held over for further consideration at a meeting to be held next Friday.

Given Three Months.

A Chilean seaman named Antonio Lopez, was charged with being a loose and disorderly person having no home. The man came here some months ago on a foreign vessel and deserted his ship. Since then he has been wandering about the streets and has already served a term of imprisonment for vagrancy. Judge Morris had no other course open to him this morning but to send him down for three months, but the first chance to repatriate him will be taken advantage of. The man went when he was told that he would have to go down to the penitentiary again and be sent to the Poor House or the Hospital.

A Pertinent Query.

CAN THE COUNTRY AFFORD IT?

In common with many other citizens I have read with interest the account of the opening proceedings of the House of Assembly. The outstanding item in the Speech from the Throne is that the Premier is again going to make another picnic trip to London. And it is because of this that I ask the question, "Can the country afford it?"
The following estimate of the productive earning power of the country may afford some reason for thought and may supply the answer to the query.
The estimated quantity of fish caught in 1920, I believe, that of the Minister of Marine. The value placed upon it may be subject to correction. However, I leave it to the public generally to decide for themselves as to the near correctness of the figures:
1,250,000 qts. of fish at $6.00 per qt. $ 7,500,000.00
Cod Oil 750,000.00
Herrings, etc. 750,000.00
Labor at Grand Falls, etc. 5,000,000.00
Labor at Bell Isld., etc. 3,000,000.00
Total $17,000,000.00
The estimates of the Government for all expenditure purposes is, I believe, about 11,000,000.00
This leaves for living expenses of the population the sum of 6,000,000.00
With the country's population estimated to be 250,000 souls, this net increase will give the magnificent sum of 24.00 per head as an average of the amount that each head of the population will have for all living expenses for a year. I am assuming that all fish will be sold by the end of June which ends our fiscal year.
In the face of the above facts I am led to ask the question, "Can the country afford to have the Premier off on another jaunt that will run the country into an expenditure of another $40,000 or so?" What is the answer—Com.

"Ruddigore."

We have much pleasure in announcing to all lovers of sweet music and keen wit, that Gilbert and Sullivan's celebrated Opera "Ruddigore," or "The Witch's Curse" will be presented by the pupils and ex-pupils of St. Patrick's and Holy Cross during the week commencing April 11. This celebrated Opera, produced for the first time at the Theatre, London, by Mr. B. O'Dwyer Carte on Saturday, 22nd January, 1877, has never been eclipsed as a first-class Opera. Last year it was seen at several of the musical circles in New York by shutting out all other Operas for the season. Prompted by the successes of "The Sorcerer" and "The Mikado," and "Dorothy," and realizing the capabilities of the performers, Mr. Hutson was emboldened to prepare this very difficult Opera for local presentation. The work of preparation is now complete and those competent to opine, say, that a great Opera treat will be given by the performers of Ruddigore.

Farquhar & Co. Suggests Cut in Wages.

Will Pay Same Rate as Relds.
Whether the Farquhar Trading Co. steamer Sable I will make North Sydney a port of call this year in her trips between Halifax and St. John's will depend largely upon the attitude of the longshoremen.
Owing to the general depression throughout the country, the Farquhar Company in conjunction with many other firms and industries, are compelled to make a reduction in the rates and wages paid their longshoremen. If the new schedule meets with the approval of the members of the Union, there is little doubt but what the Sable I will resume her regular sailings from this port early in May, but should they be turned down there is every likelihood that all shipments may be made from Halifax.

IN LOVING MEMORY

of our dear son, William James Martin, aged 18 years, who lost his life in the ill-fated s.s. Southern Cross on March 31st, 1914.
"In our hearts we mourn the loss of him we loved so dear. What would we give to clasp his hand, his gentle voice to hear; His loving smile and welcome voice, that were so dear to us. He's resting now in heaven above—In God alone we trust. We sit and think of you, dear Jim. While tear-drops dim our eyes. You did not say good-bye to us. Before you closed your eyes. May heavenly winds blow softly In that wild and lonely spot; Though life's sea divides his grave from us. He will never be forgotten."
Also, in loving memory of our darling little Jim, aged 6 years, who died March 28th, 1920. "Suffer the little children to come unto Me."

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

UNEMPLOYMENT STATISTICS.

LONDON, April 1.
The coal strike has come at a difficult time for industry generally. Official statistics show there has been an increase of thirty thousand in the ranks of the unemployed this week, as compared with last week. The total on the registers of unemployment exchanges is now nearing a million and a half, exclusive of more than eight hundred thousand who are on short-time. These numbers have been increased by more than a million in the coal fields. John J. Jones, Labor member of Parliament, in a speech at Tilford to-night, asserted that within recent weeks notices have been issued in sixty industries that wages were to be reduced by from ten to twenty shillings per week. A conference in the shipbuilding trade was held at Carlisle to-day, to discuss the claims of employers for a reduction of six shillings on time rates, and fifteen per cent. on piece work.

FRANCO-AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, April 1.
Conferences were continued to-day between Rene Viviani, envoy extraordinary from France to the United States, and members of Harding's administration, in an effort on his part to obtain the moral support of the United States for France in dealing out her problems of peace and reconstruction.

NO CHANCE FOR HAPSBURGS.

VIENNA, April 1.
Austria has granted safe conduct to former Emperor Charles to go to Switzerland, not only in principle but in fact. British, French and Italian ministers called upon Chancellor Mayer this morning and presented a protest of the Powers against Hapsburg restoration.

HUNTING THE CRIMINALS.

NEW YORK, April 1.
Agents of the Department of Justice have known for some weeks the identity of radical group responsible for the Wall Street explosion last September. W. J. Flynn, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation, declared here to-night. He asserted that it was the same group, which had planned the widespread bombings of 1919 when explosions occurred in Washington, New York, Boston and other cities, and the home of former Attorney General Palmer was attacked. Its members have scattered, and some are in foreign lands, according to Flynn, who added that his agents were pressing their hunt for fugitives. Both in United States and abroad.

DIDN'T COME OFF.

PARIS, April 1.
The attempted coup d'etat of former Emperor Charles of Austria Hungary has been a complete failure, according to the impression prevailing in French official circles this evening. While not yet officially determined, officials believe that the effort of Charles to regain the throne of Hungary has been successfully blocked.

THE ST. JOHN'S TIMES will be on the street at 5 o'clock to-day, and will be on sale in the shops. Geo. Ayre's Censored Letter will be in it. Lots of snappy Sunday reading. One cent a copy.—apr.2,11

Nelson's Most Terrible Battle. The battle of the Baltic is sometimes called the battle of Copenhagen, because it was fought in sight of that city. In 1801 Sweden, Denmark, and Prussia were united in an alliance for the purpose of breaking the sea power of Britain, Napoleon being the instigator of this league. Pitt, the English Prime Minister, determined to break it up before it did us any mischief, so he sent a fleet of 18 ships of the line, with smaller vessels in support, to Copenhagen. Sir Hyde Parker was commander-in-chief and Nelson was his second-in-command. They arrived before Copenhagen, and found it protected by powerful forts, besides a long line of Danish warships anchored in front. The Sound, as the water was called, contained many dangerous sandbanks, and Nelson spent two nights in a small boat taking the depths before he could find the true channel. When all was ready on April 2, 1801, he brought his ships in single file up the narrow channel. The "Agamemnon," "Bellona," and "Russell" ran on a sandbank and were immovable. Nelson, following close behind in the "Elephant," swerved off and avoided the danger, and the rest of his ships did the same. As they neared the Danish batteries they came under the fire of 2,000 guns. Nelson anchored close to the Danish flagship, and poured a terrific fire into her. The Danes fought with great bravery, and could supply their ships with fresh men from the shore. But Nelson's men, fresh from the victory of the Nile were full of courage and worked their guns like heroes, though in some of the ships three-fourths of the crew were killed or wounded. "Warm work," said Nelson, "but, mark you, I would not be elsewhere for thousands." The Danish flagship took fire and blew up. Others were reduced to battered wrecks and drifted away. After four hours' fighting Sir Hyde Parker, who was watching the struggle from a distance, hoisted a signal to discontinue the fight. The signal lieutenant reported it to Nelson, who was very angry. "Leave off action," he said, "I've hanged it to do. I've only one eye. I've a right to be blind some times." Then, putting the telescope to his blind eye, he said, "I really do not see the signal. Keep mine for closer to the battle firing." In another hour the Danish fire slackened, most of their ships being out of action. Nelson then sent a letter ashore suggesting that the Danes should cease firing, to save further slaughter of their brave men. The Danes accepted his proposals and the battle ended. A four months truce was agreed upon, at the end of which the enemy league was dissolved. "I have been in 105 engagements, but the battle of the Baltic was the most terrible of them all," said Nelson. Make your skin—"A skin you love to touch"

A BEAUTIFUL skin, soft, smooth, faultlessly clear—any girl can have this charm.

For your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the right treatment, and see how soft and lovely you can keep it.

If your skin is very sensitive and easily irritated, use each night this special treatment:

Dip a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse first with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

Holy Cross Schools' Festivities Close.

A real old-time gathering brought the Easter week festivities arranged by the Holy Cross Extension Committee to a successful close last night. The schools were filled to their utmost capacity and the committee are to be congratulated on the admirable manner in which they carried out their programme. A feature of the event was the dancing of the "Highland Flings" in costume by Masters Healey, James and Murphy, pupils of Holy Cross. Amongst the large gathering were Rev. Fr. Piggy, St. Joseph's, Rev. Bro. Ennis, Mt. Cashel, Hon. E. A. Squires, J. R. Bennett, Esq., M.H.A., W. J. Higgins, K.C., M.H.A., and J. T. Martin, Esq. The Empire Band, under the leadership of Mr. Nicholas Murphy, delighted all present with a choice selection of music and who very generously gave their services free which act is deeply appreciated by the committee.

S.S. Canadian Sailor, Capt. Baker, 3 1/2 days from Halifax arrived in port at 1 p.m. yesterday bringing two thirds cargo to the Furness Withy Co. The ship sails for Halifax to-night taking a small outward freight. The Furness liner Stanmore, Capt. Griffiths, 12 days from Liverpool, reached port at 11 o'clock last night after a stormy trip across. The Stanmore brought 800 tons cargo, four passengers and a large mail. On discharging the Stanmore leaves for Halifax and from there proceeds to Norfolk to load for England.

"I had pimples and a sort of rash on my face and neck. They would burn and itch and when I scratched would become red and scaly and peel off. It was hard for me to sleep and I dreaded to go anywhere. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them. My face began to get smooth and stopped itching and burning, and when I had used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for about a month I was healed." (Signed) Miss Cora Linn, R. F. D. 2, Blackfoot, Idaho, Feb. 23, 1920. Use Cuticura for all toilet purposes.

Fate of Concrete Ship.

Thrilling Experience of Crew. Crawling ashore by means of ladders, and scaling a 350 foot cliff covered with snow and ice before they could count themselves safe from the dangers of the deep which wrecked their ship, was part of the experience told the North Sydney Herald by members of the concrete steamer Permanencia, which recently became a total loss at the northwestern side of St. Pierre.

As stated in a previous issue, the ship ran into such a gale of wind, against which it was impossible to make the slightest headway and she was forced nearer and nearer the great treacherous jagged rocks by the strength of the gale which lashed in fury against them.

It was about four o'clock in the afternoon when the Permanencia struck her last resting place, as it was impossible to make the slightest headway against the gale. Realizing it was only a matter of a few minutes before the steamer would be dashed upon the rocks, Capt. Jerry Lehman, by dint of sheer courage and almost superhuman effort managed to steer between two mighty boulders, one of which stove a large hole in the vessel's side.

In the twinkling of an eye the Permanencia was hard and fast aground, the seas crashing against her side with awful force. The crew, realizing every moment would see the ship crumbling up, succeeded after great risk in making their escape by means of a ladder which they ran from the doomed craft's side to one of the large boulders nearby. From this rock another long ladder was placed which enabled the almost perished and fatigued men to span the icy waters between the rock and the shore.

When this was reached there was only a few feet of dry land between the shore and the almost perpendicular cliff which towered hundreds of feet above them. One of the hardy crew took an axe, and after a long, tedious and thrilling experience succeeded in cutting a sufficient number of footholds in the icy walls, thus permitting the remainder of the crew to ascend to the top after many slips and twists, which on several occasions almost precipitated them to death on the rocks below.

Had the Permanencia struck when night came on, it is possible every one would have met a watery grave.—North Sydney Herald.

HOW LEON JOBIN RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Quebec Man, Long a Sufferer From Sciatica, Can Now Cut Wood Without Being Tired.

Villamontal, Pontiac Co. Que., April 1st.—(Special)—Mr. Leon Jobin, a traveler in many countries, but now a respected resident here, has made a statement as to the benefit he received from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was in bed eighty-five days with sciatica," Mr. Jobin states. "I have been looked after by many doctors, both in Europe and Montreal, but always without results. A friend asked me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took them for six months.

"I have yet a little pain but I can now cut wood without being tired. I advise all who suffer from sciatica to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If your kidneys are troubling you and you don't know Dodd's Kidney Pills, ask your neighbors about them.

Skippers Getting Ready.

Three North Sydney skippers of landcoasting vessels leave by the steamer Kyle this evening for Newfoundland ports to join their ships and get them in commission for the season's work says the North Sydney Herald of March 28. They are Captain George Young of the schooner Bayris, Capt. T. Flander and Capt. Ernest Young, formerly first officer on the concrete ship Permanencia. The two former masters go to Harbor Briton where their ships are located while Capt. Ernest will go to St. John's. All three skippers will engage in the coastal trade this summer, and they expect to do a successful business during the year. Some necessary repairs will be made to the three vessels, and crews shipped from their respective ports, but if it is found impossible to obtain men there, they will be secured at North Sydney.

THE ST. JOHN'S TIMES will be on the street at 5 o'clock to-day, and will be for sale in the shops. Geo. Ayre's Censored Letter will be in it. Lots of snappy Sunday reading. One cent a copy.—Apr. 11

Newfoundland Heroes Under Many Flags

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

In giving an account of some Newfoundland heroes it is not my intention to go back to our early days. I have already performed that task upon more than one occasion. I shall refer to our heroes of a more recent date, commencing with the middle part of the past century, about sixty years ago. It will be seen that the spirit of true patriotism, love of adventure, daring and heroism which animated our ancestors as far back as two hundred years ago, is still to be found amongst our people, and long may it continue so. It was this spirit of patriotism that has made the great British Empire what it is to-day. Patriotism, next to religion, is the noblest sentiment planted in the human breast. Ancient Rome attained the meridian of her glory through the patriotism of her sons, and Greece, which in time with Rome, climbed to that enviable distinction by that in-born love of country, which was the birthright of her people. If we go down the corridors of the ages, we shall find this was the stimulating agency—the talisman upon which rested the lever that raised the nations of the earth into prominence and gave to the world its refinement and civilization. It was the same spirit of patriotism that enabled the heroes who commanded, and those who fought under them, to sink, scatter and capture the supposed invincible Armada of the proud Spaniard and gave to Britain the undisputed title of "Mistress of the Seas."

BROKE NAPOLEON.

It was the same spirit that hurled back the legions of Napoleon at Waterloo and consigned him to the island of St. Helena, and it was the same spirit of patriotism that was to be found in Russia, Afghanistan, South Africa and elsewhere in more modern times, and which culminated in the formation of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, of which Newfoundland forms an important part, and of which we are all so proud to-day. Newfoundlanders are ever ready to give practical proof of their Loyalty and Patriotism. "The Area of Liberty and Equal Rights" taken from the Temples of our Motherland by our ancestors, shine out as brightly and as steadily in the Colonies of the Empire to-day, as they did in England, Ireland and Scotland in the past, and in no country more brilliantly and more steadily than in Britain's oldest colony—Newfoundland, whose sons are ever ready to support Britain's King and Britain's flag. We are proud of our ancestors' "The Area of Liberty and Equal Rights" and when the emblems of their nationality—the Rose, Shamrock and Thistle are united for any one grand object, they can snap their fingers at all competitors, and uphold the honor of King, Country and Union Jack, whether it be amongst the rear and smoke from cannon upon land or sea, or in the more peaceful pursuits of commerce and science.

"England's stalwarts bore it afar,
Scots have raised it high—
Cambria's warriors side by side
With Erin's went to die.
They built the Empire far and wide,
Where Liberty has no lack—
Where Freedom and Truth may safely reside
In the shade of the Union Jack."

THREE CHEERS FOR NEWFOUNDLAND.

To give anything like an extended account of the Newfoundland heroes who have fought for the Empire and distinguished themselves would occupy far more space than is at my disposal in the Evening Telegram, but I must tell your readers about an unpublished story of the siege of Sebastopol in the fifties of the past century. The crisis of the Crimean War came at the siege of this great fortress, and the French and English soldiers had some tremendous fighting. The French upheld the honor of their national flag in the celebrated capture of the Malakoff, the first man to ascend the heights being Lieut. MacMahon, afterwards the Duke of Magenta and President of the French Republic, and the British after a terribly hard attack, captured the Redan. Many of us can remember when the news of this great success reached our country, and there were jollifications and I know of one man's home that was nearly burned down that night. It was a great success for the British arms, and it is a poor heart that does not rejoice sometimes, but I have your readers asking—"Where does our Newfoundland hero come in at this time?" It will be news to many Newfoundlanders, but I can vouch for the fact, and any doubter needs only to enquire for himself to confirm my statement, that it was a man named Robbins from Lower Island Cove, who was the first man to scale the walls of the redoubt in this eventful siege. When Robbins reached the top of the wall, the first thing he did was to shout: "Three cheers for Newfoundland," and the British officer who came next shouted: "Three cheers for England."

HISTORY UNWRITTEN.

It is stories of this kind from our kith and kin amongst Newfoundland fishermen that go to make the history of our country, and goes to prove what I have claimed all along, that the real history of our people has yet to be written. I am very glad to put on record this notable occurrence, and I trust that Robbins' name and glorious achievement will be remembered for the future. I need only mention that there are no men in Newfoundland equal to the Lower Island Cove "boys" for climbing cliffs. They have been brought up to it from their earliest years to climb the cliffs of Baccalieu Island in search of bird's eggs. When I recall this fact, your readers can easily understand where Robbins got his training, and the scaling of the walls of Sebastopol was merely child's play to him. If there should be any German castles to be scaled next summer, if they don't pay the indemnity, Marshal Foch should see to it that the Bay de Verde boys are given a chance.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS AT SEBASTOPOL.

James Stanton, son of the well-known Capt. Stanton, of St. John's, and our late respected old citizen, Mr. John Bulley Ayre, baker, were both on H.M.S. "Terrible" during the storming of Sebastopol in the Crimean War, and were also at the bombardment of Odessa. Mr. Ayre was the recipient of a medal for his heroic conduct, which, I presume, is in the possession of his son, Mr. G. W. B. Ayre, lawyer. George Hutchings, uncle of the late genial and popular gentleman, Geo. A. Hutchings, Esq., of Job's, who died in the West Indies, was Post Captain and commanded the first steam warship that crossed the Atlantic.

George Williams, son of Geo. W. and ands of our hardy countrymen leaving the shores of their native land at every opportunity and entering the American Navy. They were conspicuous for their daring, contempt of danger, agility and capability, and rose to prominent positions. Very few of them took to the Army—they were sailors and were proud of their noble avocations. They sprung from five generations of heroes who battled with the ice-floes and who knew what danger meant. To give some idea of the number of Newfoundlanders who left our shores at that period in search of adventure, it is reliably computed that there were not less than two thousand in the Federal Navy during the great struggle, which occupied a period of three years.

IN THE U.S. NAVY.

In the year 1866 the United States warships Augusta, Miantonomah, and Cachalot arrived in St. John's, and in the year 1868 the American frigate Congress arrived with over fifty Newfoundlanders on board. The number of three warships was 1,100 men, and there were more Newfoundlanders on the Cumberland frigate, and there were seventeen on board the famous Kearsage, Capt. Winslow, which sunk the "terror of the seas," the Confederate privateer Alabama, Commander Semmes, off Cherbourg, on the coast of France. Amongst those Newfoundland heroes who visited St. John's in the above warships in the sixties were to be found the names of Days, Cleary, and Desmonds of Nunney Hill—the Donohoes, Walshes and Byrnes of Flavin's and Delahanty's Lane—the Duggans, Walshes and Donnelly's of the "Barking Kettle," West End—the Percys, Lyman's, Barrys and Kerrys of Limekiln Hill and Dammerell's Lane. William Reid (uncle of Mr. John Ryan, shipwright, Theatre Hill) was quarter-master of the Congress, and Pierce Reid, (brother of William) was Lieutenant with Admiral Farragut at the storming of New Orleans from Mobile Bay. Big Jim Sullivan of Harbor Grace fought through the Civil War, and was wounded in the leg. A few years ago a Newfoundland sailor died in St. John's, who had fought under six flags, a veritable Dugald Dalgetty, the creation of the fertile mind of Sir Walter Scott in one of his Waverley novels. I could go on indefinitely recording the daring, heroism and love of adventure of our fellow countrymen, but lack of space prevents me from doing so.

UNDER OTHER FLAGS.

The early sixties were an epoch-making period in the history of our country, and although I bring my countrymen under another flag besides the one under which they were born and bred in relating their adventures, it will be none the less interesting and show your readers that their daring, heroism and love of adventure brought them to all parts of the world. Those were years of oppression and misfortune, chiefly attributed to the bad fisheries and the small price of fish in the foreign markets, as well as to the large number of square-rigged vessels lost at the sealfishery and on the coast of Labrador. Owing to these events trade became stagnated—the prices of the necessities of life increased—property became a drag on the market and thousands of our people were compelled to sell their homesteads to provide means to emigrate to the United States and Canada. These years may be looked upon as the years of our first great exodus. Of course there were previous years of depression, which occurred periodically, but not to such an extent as in the sixties, more especially in St. John's. At that period commenced the great Civil War in the United States, a war in which in some instances a father was arrayed against his son, and brother against brother. The fame of the Newfoundland seamen was well known in every land, and the fighting instinct and love of adventure were strong within them, and appealed to their daring and hardy natures. They were sailors from their boyhood, trained on board their fathers' vessels, or brought up under the eye of the Vikings who prosecuted that great industry—the sealfishery. They were eagerly sought after by the Federal Government, who were anxious to have their Navy manned by the most intrepid, daring and competent sailors to be found. Thus we see thousands of our hardy countrymen leaving the shores of their native land at every opportunity and entering the American Navy. They were conspicuous for their daring, contempt of danger, agility and capability, and rose to prominent positions. Very few of them took to the Army—they were sailors and were proud of their noble avocations. They sprung from five generations of heroes who battled with the ice-floes and who knew what danger meant. To give some idea of the number of Newfoundlanders who left our shores at that period in search of adventure, it is reliably computed that there were not less than two thousand in the Federal Navy during the great struggle, which occupied a period of three years.

TRIBUTE TO "OURS."

Here is what I wrote about our Royal Newfoundland Regiment in 1916 when everything looked black for the Allies:—"Is it to be wondered at that with such a glorious record bequeathed to them by their forefathers, such a large number of our young men, the best blood of the country, have thrown up remunerative and responsible positions to rally to the Standard in defence of King and Country? Will it not become a matter of future history that Britain's Oldest Colony has sent forth, proportionally, a greater number of her sons to fight the battles of the Empire than has any other colony, or even Great Britain herself? How eagerly we shall watch their movements during the next twelve months, as the Newfoundland Contingent will march across the bridges of the historic River Rhine with the Grand Army of Great Britain, driving the barbaric hordes of the despot of Europe and the self-styled War Lord before them, and when for the first time in the History of the World, the soul-stirring strains of our grand old national melody—"The Banks of Newfoundland"—shall be heard upon the battlefields of the Continent? How our brave boys will rejoice when they chase the Arch Enemy of mankind to one of his numerous castles in Potsdam, or some other dam, and tear from his shoulders that cloak of artificial power and assumed glory with which he has invested himself in his pride and arrogance for the past quarter of a century. As surely as the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, the tyrant shall ride to his fall—a fall as great, that like the fall of Lucifer, he shall rise no more."

Many men of the highest qualifications and experiences are of opinion that in place of guiding the destiny of a great nation, William of Potsdam is a more fitting subject for the pathologist or the alienist, and that the madcap son of his is equally as bad, if not worse. I think it was Juvenal who wrote, "Nemo repente turpissimus factus"—no one can become extremely wicked all at once—but the Tyrant of the Huns has been wicked, continuously wicked and will continue so to the doom which is awaiting him."

"But to accomplish this great event many sacrifices will have to be made. Millions of pounds will have to be spent, but this is easy to accomplish, because the revenues and national credit of the Empire are inexhaustible. Many lives must be lost, but the vacancies in the ranks will be quickly filled up through the patriotism of Britain's sons. In all these great events the sons of Terra Nova will take a prominent part, and will live in History for all time. The proud boast of the Romans of old, "Eris Romanus Num"—I am a Roman citizen—which acted as a passport in every land on which he trod, did not command more respect in the past, than will the words of the Newfoundland Hero of to-day, when in the future he shall say to his countrymen, "I fought in the Great War." In years to come, sitting round his own fireside, surrounded by his wife, children, grand-children and friends, he will relate the events of the greatest struggle in the History of the World, in which so many of his countrymen took such a prominent part, and covered themselves with glory. He will tell them of their trials and dangers, their sufferings and miraculous escapes, their retreats and victories, until the great object was attained, and power of the Tyrant was forever destroyed and levelled to the dust. How his audience will listen to him with gratitude and admiration, and at the conclusion of his remarks, rise from their seats, salute him with profound respect and admiration, exclaiming, "You are a brave man and our Newfoundland Heroes are a noble race. You have fought and bled in the defence of our King, Country and Empire in their difficulties, and by your heroism, valor and patriotism you have nobly played your part in bringing Peace, Happiness, Freedom and Prosperity to the peoples of the whole world. Ah! what a noble heritage they will hand down to their descendants and posterity for all time! And how could it be otherwise?"

"For Freedom's battle once begun
Bequeathed by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft, 'tis ever won."

The all-lace frock of beige or brown is worn with a large brown tulle hat. A dance frock of pale yellow chiffon is trimmed with garlands of silver leaves. Dainty blouses have round collars trimmed with ruffles, which are edged with color. The afternoon dress may be of severe style, or with a draped skirt and fitted bodice. A new frock of serge features a convertible collar, very short sleeves and braid trimming. The vogue for coral jewelry has shown itself in the beautiful coral headbands for evening. Duvelyn jackets are being worn with tweed skirts. The combination has made quite a "hit." A charming evening gown is made of Harding blue and blond lace, the lace forming a side train.
