Labor difficulties are looming quite prominently in New York, where 10,000 of the unemployed held a public demonstration in Union Square on Saturday, while 15,000 reserves stood ready armed to prevent any attempt at rioting and the premature explosion of a bomb, intended for the police, would be assassin and his companion met their fate and a score of others were hurt. A peril of the most menacing and grave nature must be recognized in this spectacle—an army of uncontrolled and for the most part vicious men and women arrayed against the representatives of law and order and that civilization which is both the origin and product of municipal law. It did not need the singing of the Marseillaise—with which the crowd regaled its spirits to recall all too vividly the scenes and historical events with which that famous national air is associated. The employment of the unemployed is the problem of today and one with which governments must deal promptly and effectively or trouble in unestimable measure must surely follow. Nor can they ignore the most prominent factor of this evil, unrestricted immigration. It is with the incoming riff raff of the population of other lands that danger lies. If a nation accepts the responsibility of adopting such individuals it is plainly her duty to exercise, as it were, a parental care and become responsible, no less, for their physical well-being than for their moral welfare.

A correspondent has sent us a series of papers on the New Eminent movement which is being introduced in Brooklyn, New York by Rev. Robert MacDonald, the first of which appears in this issue. It will be read with special interest by Dr. MacDonald's numerous friends and relatives in this county, and by many others who are interested in the development of the organ.

PAIR OF HORSES KILLED ON RAILWAY CROSSING.
THURSDAY, March 29.—No. 13 train, local, between Halifax and Truro ran into and killed a pair of horses, belonging to Geo. Craig, Willow street, last evening. The team was in charge of a colored man who was a teamster for Mr. Craig, and was engaged in hauling lumber. The man walked into town and after demanding and receiving his week's wages, informed the owner of the loss. Mr. Craig claims his loss to be about $200.

HOW HARRY SOVERBY EARNED PROMOTION

"May I go to Blainston on your special, Mr. Gannon?" asked Harry Soverby, the telegraph operator at Hammond's.

"What do you want to go for, huh?" replied the superintendent of the Lexington and Danville railway. "It's a nasty night for travelling, and—"

"I may not have another chance for a long time, and it's near Christmas. I can report the departure of your train to 'X' office, and then there's nothing more to be done here till 6.45 to-morrow morning."

"Come on, then, answered the superintendent. He knew that Harry Soverby, the youngest telegraph operator on the road, was anxious to see his mother and sisters, and he knew what a lonely place Hammond Station was.

The squalor clicked rapidly for a few moments as Harry noticed the night train-despatcher at 'X' office that the superintendent's special was passing westward. Then he quickly cut out the telegraph instruments, quenched the office lamp, and jumped aboard the car as it slowly rolled past the glare of the bright platform light and out in the black rain. He could not remember having ever heard such a heavy down-pour. The snow that had hidden the earth for weeks was fast melting under it.

Harry Soverby was only sixteen years old. He had been at Hammond one year and he was heartily tired of it. The nearest house to the station was a quarter of a mile away. He was anxious to be promoted to the train-despatcher's staff at 'X' office, that mysterious place where the orders came that governed all the trains on the road. But Mr. Gannon had cut him off, telling him that he was too young.

"When you've had more experience, huh," said the big, good-natured superintendent, "maybe" the department will need you. You're young, yet you know."

This was a tender point with Harry. He knew he really looked as old as most fellows of eighteen, and he felt that he had more experience than many fellows of twenty-five. Besides if he was sent to 'X', his pay would be increased to sixty-five dollars a month, and he could send his sisters to a better school.

Suddenly steam was shut off. Harry knew it by the silence with which the light train plunged forward, with out a sound from the engine or the firemen. Then came the sharp hissing of the airbrakes, but the train ran on unheeded. One blast of the whistle called the brakeman to the platform, where he shared the brake wheel as if his life depended on that one act. A grinding noise, forward and a starting from the driving wheels told Harry's experience that the engine had thrown her over and given her sand—that is, he had reversed the lever and opened the sand box, so that the driving wheels, now turning backward, might grip the wet rails more firmly.

Mr. Gannon, in his hip boots and mackintosh, was out in the snow and mud and up ahead in less than half a minute. The front of the locomotive was within thirty feet of the beginning of the Williston cut. Tom Jackson had not stopped her a moment, but the engine had thrown her over and given her sand—that is, he had reversed the lever and opened the sand box, so that the driving wheels, now turning backward, might grip the wet rails more firmly.

Harry twisted the loose end of the copper wire that stuck up, so that the telegraph line should not be broken and then he slid down the pole.

THROW AWAY LINIMENTS

Here's the Prescription to Cure Rheumatism.

Liniments only reach the skin and the muscles directly under the skin. Now, liniments can't cure Rheumatism. They simply deaden the nerves and the muscles, and the pain returns worse than ever.

If the corvols do not move regularly, it is because the muscles are strained or weak—if the skin is dry or harsh—the blood is sure to be filled with impurities or uric acid. This uric acid changes into uric acid which is the poison that causes rheumatism.

Now, the only possible way to cure Rheumatism is to prevent uric acid from being formed. Logically, the only way to do this is to keep the bowels and skin in good working order, and prevent the stomach from being too acid. And the only way to do this is to take "Fruit-Laxatives," Limited, Ottawa.

These marvelous tablets of fruit juices and tonics act directly on the three great eliminating organs—bowels, skin and kidneys—and put them in perfect condition. That is the only secret of their great success in curing Rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, etc.

Do a box—4 for $1.50. "Fruit-Laxatives," Limited, Ottawa.

The superintendent's special train from No. 576, the way freight that was due thirty minutes later. Suddenly the light flickered out. The wind and rain were too much for it. Harry knew that the same thing might happen just as the freight train came along. It sickened him to think of what would follow. He thought of the train crew scattered on the snowy ground, bruised, perhaps killed.

The boy's head throbbled with excitement. If he only could do something to save the train! He had the recollection of how King the line-man, had once said it was possible for a "good man" to telegraph from any point on the line.

There flashed across his mind the recollection of how King the line-man, had once said it was possible for a "good man" to telegraph from any point on the line.

"Bring a torch, Phil," he said to the fireman. Away he ran down the track, the coil of wire in one hand and a pair of pliers in his pocket. Harry began to climb the nearest telegraph pole, while Phil helped him all he could with his free hand.

The young telegrapher soon threw his leg over the cross-arm and braced himself securely. Fireman Phil held the flaming torch as high as he could so that the light was only fifteen feet below the wire. The torch was liberally soaked with petroleum that the wind could not blow it out.

Harry felt thankful when he saw, on the opposite end of the cross-arm, which held the single telegraph line, a glass insulator that had been placed for another line which was soon to be strung. That made his work easier. Using his pliers dexterously, he quickly slipped one end of the coil of copper wire around the wire of the telegraph line about six inches away from the cross-arm. He twisted the copper wire around and around the live wire so that it clung like a wild-goose vine tendrils to a tree bough.

Then he took three turns of the copper wire around the empty insulator. Now was the trying moment. If he cut the line, would its sagging weight break the splice of copper wire? Yet, if he was to carry out his plan, he must separate the telegraph line into two parts, so that by bringing the ends together he could make the Morse signals. With a few nips of the pliers he could cut the telegraph line and although it fell away with a sharp snap, the copper wire splice held it safely hung to the new insulator.

Now he was in possession of a rude but effective telegraph key. By touching the west end of the broken line, which was the jagged bit of wire that stuck up from the old insulator, against the east end of the line which was the end of the copper wire that had been cut from the live wire, he could complete the electric circuit. He tapped the end of the copper wire upon the line wire that stuck up. A tiny blue spark flashed out, and he felt sharp pains in his right hand as the current shot through it. But what mattered the pain? Because the current shocked him so, he felt sure that the line was "O. K." Now he began tapping again. He let the wires barely touch to make dots, and held them together an instant to make dashes. He began to call up the station at Woodside, where No. 576 was due to pass within the next ten minutes. Then he held the wires together to receive an answer. He soon could feel the stinging burning current bite the dots and dashes into his hand like this:

Now he telegraphed this order: "Operator, Woodside—Flag and hold all west bound trains. Williston cut blocked, and a special is stuck at east end."

He signed Mr. Gannon's name to this. Then he held the wires together while the operator telegraphed back the order, according to the railway rules, to show that he understood. The man at Woodside was surprised at the message but he quickly understood its importance.

Harry twisted the loose end of the copper wire that stuck up, so that the telegraph line should not be broken and then he slid down the pole.

Job-or Get Out

responsibility—that's the thing that the industrial world seems to need more than any other commodity, insofar as concerns the bank and file—not only a willingness to work, but a realization of what is due the employer, and goes with the position. The man who uses a hammer on the business which betters his bread is a beast—a coward and a cur—a thief whose crime is far greater than though he merely robbed the cash register.

International law decrees that the traitor is a creature to be loathed and promptly shot—he had betrayed a trust for which he stood, and merits ignoble death. Salary by no means signifies that the employee is a slave—only that he or she is one of the component parts of a business enterprise, on whom the heads of that enterprise depend and on whose loyalty they can count.

As matters of government the officer represents and is in honor bound to carry out the policies of his superior, so the employee should stand for the house which provides him with a home. If he must knock he should first get out into the open, and cease to be a sneak and assassin beside whom the burglar is a gentleman and the highwayman a hero.

The acceptance of a position should carry with it an assumed responsibility—should be an obligation and contract to make good. Is it that today? Labor has lost sight of business integrity as concerns itself—authorized and accepted scales are repudiated at the drop of the hat, and employees quit work at a moment's notice without a remark that there are plenty of other places.

There is far more concern about hours than duty done. Time was when responsibility was an important factor in holding any position—when the employee was always an employe and ready and willing to protect and advance the interests of the people he represented, whether at leisure or at work.

Today very few have a realizing sense that in helping the boss they help themselves. To dodge duty is damnable—any form of dishonesty while on the payroll to the hand which buys bread and builds up a bank balance is just as bad. And yet few means promotion to the limit of equipment room-temperature and life-long position—that the man who can be hired upon, indoors and elsewhere, never has cause to worry about either hours or wages.

If an employe, try to put yourself in the shoes of the plain citizen, to reduce the stammering ingratitude of the man that takes your money as he cuts your throat. If an employer, try to understand that the business office has cross enough to carry without a literally dodging the cowardly bravo who takes in the back. If an employe get in line with your job-or-get-out.

"Phil said Mr. Gannon, as he stepped aboard Harry's right hand, "I guess you've had enough experience to go to 'X' office. We need men as quick-witted and plucky as you in this business. I'm going to report your conduct to the directors of the road at their next meeting."

That languid, lifeless feeling that comes with spring and early summer, can be quickly changed to a feeling of buoyancy and energy by the judicious use of Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

The Restorative is a genuine tonic, to invigorate, run down nerves, and but a few doses is needed to satisfy the user that Dr. Shoop's Restorative is actually reaching the liver spot. The invigorating effect of the Restorative leads to sluggish bowels, and to sluggish circulation in general. The customary lack of exercise and outdoor air ties up the liver, stagnates the kidneys, and oftentimes weakens the heart's action. Use Dr. Shoop's Restorative a few weeks and all will be changed. A few days test will tell you that you are using the right remedy. You will easily and surely note the change from day to day.

The object of this motor is to utilize the flow of tide particularly at sea-level places in proximity to towns or manufacturing places. It promises to be a valuable invention.

An unpleasant sensation occurred here on Sunday last when a boy was discovered in the arboretum creek by a couple of boys, containing the bodies of two infants. They were exposed to view a couple of hours and gazed upon by a crowd of people before the affair came to the notice of the town clerk who ordered their disposal. An investigation revealed the fact that they were the still-born offspring of a domestic of one of the families in the neighborhood.

One of the most successful Y. M. C. A. entertainments of the season was given on Monday evening, thus closing the winter classes of the gymnasium. Much credit is due Mr. W. A. The young men and boys of the town have benefited in many respects by the privileges of recreation and reading which have been open to them, and finances have been found adequate to the outlay which is also a source of satisfaction to the directors.

Building Moved at Gulliver's Cove

THE OWNERS SLEPT AND ATE IN THE HOUSE WHILE IT WAS ON ROLLERS—CLOCK NEVER STOPPED.

(Digby Courier.)

Mr. W. A. Chute of Bear River, called on us Friday and informed the Courier that he had just completed another engineering feat at Gulliver's Cove.

He referred to the moving of Mr. Reuben Raymond's dwelling house from almost down to the beach, along the Gulliver's Cove road to a nice level site near Mr. Matthew Raymond's home a half a mile away from where the building was formerly erected. He was not allowed to cross private property which gave him a lot of inconvenience, but he says he got there just the same, in eleven days. Notwithstanding that sometimes the building was high enough from the ground, while crossing creeks or valleys, for teams to drive under it, the family continued to live in the house. The fire was kept burning and the clock never stopped. Mr. Chute, himself occupied a room in the building every night and he also wished us to say publicly that he appreciated Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Raymond's kindness very much while in their employ, and for the prompt manner in which Mr. Raymond conducted the above business transaction from two times the contract was made until completed. Mr. Chute is kept busy in the "moving" business and his success with difficult propositions in the past warrants his employment when and wherever a building of any description requires to be moved.

THE APPLE TRADE.

Mantral advice on the apple market says:—

The local market is quiet, and very irregular as regards prices for the great bulk of offerings and consequently it is difficult to give quotations, especially for the consigned lots of apples sent to this market. Stocks held by dealers here are comparatively small but the shipments from the West are crowding the market with medium to poor qualities that are not wanted and these are being auctioned off at very low prices to the detriment of the better quality; and consequently the market remains in a very unhealthy condition. The medium qualities are sent to the auction rooms where they are sold for whatever can be realized. Sales at auction have been made at $1.25 to $2.00 for some No. 2 while at the store dealers are getting $2.25 to $2.75 for No. 2. Number one's were disposed of at the auction rooms at $2.75 this week while at the store, $3.00 to $3.50 was obtainable and even higher prices for fancy Spice Western shippers therefore who are looking for an full report as it is possible give them will understand that the irregularity in prices is caused by the difference in quality, the poorer grades being sent to the auction rooms as the only means of selling them off. Stocks in the West have been considerably reduced of late, as holders there concluded that the longer they held on to them the greater would be the loss.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Mar. 29.—Between fifty-five and seventy men, it became known today, lost their lives in two explosions yesterday and last night in coal mine No. 1 of the Union Pacific Coal Company at Hanna. The explosions were caused by gases and coal dust and each was followed by fire.

The first explosion occurred at three o'clock, killing eighteen miners, including a superintendent and three houses.

The second explosion occurred at 10:30 o'clock last night, costing the lives of from forty to fifty miners, including State Mine Inspector, D. M. Ellis.
