The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

12X

16X

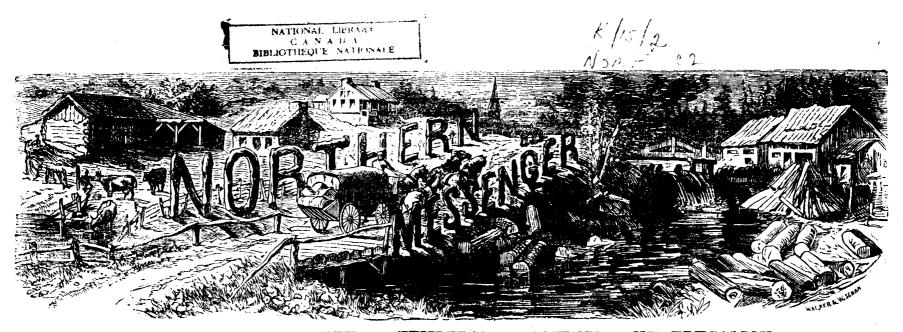

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

	Coloured covers/							Coloured pages/
	Couverture de couleur						Pages de couleur
[]	Covers da	maged	/								ſ		Pages	dama	nod/
	Covers damaged/ Couverture endommagée								Pages		-	éec
				3							•		. ages
	Covers re	stored	and/o	r lami	nated,	1					I		Pages	restor	ed an	d/or i	am	inated	d/
	Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée							Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
	Cover title missing/							Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
	Le titre d	e couv	erture	manq	ue						Į		Pages	décol	orées,	tache	etée	is ou j	piq	uées
	Calaviad	/											_
	Coloured	•											Pages
	Cartes géo	grapn	iques (en cou	neur					Pages détachées
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	Coloured	ink (i d	e oth	er tha	a hlue	or bl	ack)/					,	Show	hroug	ь/
	Encre de							ro)					Show1 Transj	-	-
		Jodica	• (•••••	Judic	que o		u 1101	67			L	¥1	1191121	Jarent	e
	Coloured	plates	and/o	r illus	tratio	ns/					г		Qualit	vofo	rint v	aries/	,
	Planches of	•	-			•••						\mathbf{v}	Qualit	• •				sion
											-				u			5.0.1
	Bound wi	th oth	er mat	erial/							Continuous pagination/
]	Relié avec d'autres documents						Pagination continuc
	Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion						Г		nclud	les ind	lex(es	}/
]	along interior margin/							L		Comp	rend u	ın (de	s) ind	ex
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure								Title c					•
	Biank Ion			-:									Le titr	e de l'	'en-tê	te pro	vie	nt:
	Blank leav within the						• •	•			-		F :el			,
	been omit			-	022101	e, the	se nav	/e			1		Fitle p	-				_
	Il se peut			•	s hlan	ches :	aiouté				L	•	Page d	etitre	e cie la	IIIVIai	ISOT	נ
	lors d'une						-				г		antio	n of i mais, lors							•			Caption of issue/ Titre de départ de la livraison
	pas été fil			•
											Masthead/
									Générique (périodiques) de la livraison
																•
1	Additional comments:/
	Commer.	lires su	ıpplén	nentai	res:
.		•	•		-	-
	tem is film
	cument es	e filme		ux de	reauc			e Ci-de	ssous	•
10X	ور المراجع ا		14X	-	_		18X				22 X				26X					30 X
																						T
										 												$ \checkmark$

20X

24X

28X

DEVOTED TO AGRICULTURE, TEMPERANCE, SCIENCE, AND EDUCATION

MONTREAL & NEW YORK, JULY 1, 1876.

SEMI MONTHLY, 30 CTS, per An., Post-Paid.

VOLUME XI., NO. 13.

JOHN BUNYAN.

Many there were who stopped for a moment at the Bedford prison door and bought laces In the third picture we see the same man, around his ankle and sell his wares to support his family, amongst whom was a little girl who had been blind from her birth; but was there or e amongst them all, or in the world one, who, for a moment, imagined that the memery of this man would that the memory of this man would live for centuries or that perhaps soure absent-minded remark was occasioned by a passing glimpso of that vision which was to be a confort to all Christendem, to the beathen and in-fidel as well as the Confort. fidel, as well as the Coristian, p inting out the way to the life beyond, its pleasures and comforts, its difficulties and dangers ? The daughter only receives sympathy; and the "stubbern tinker" who continually answers those who offer to release him from prison if he promise not to preach the Gespel of Christ, with the words, " If you let me go to-day I will preach again to-morrow," is doubtless scoffed at by many, mocked by others, while perhaps some, most deeply interested, p int out to him his family who are suffering cruelly from the need of that provision the head of the family should provide. But it was this misery that indeed occasioned the relaxation of his imprisonment, and he was allowed first to preach to the Baptist con-gregation of which he had been pastor, and afterwards, in 1672, after twelve years confinement was released through the interposition of Dr. Barlow, Bishop of Lincoln. He immediately returned to his chosen work. With him from the prison he brought his "Pilgrim's Progress" in manuscript, and on show-ing it to his friends received but little encouragement to publish it, and many criticisms. But he decided to give it to the world, and in 1678 the first part was published, describing the "Pilgrim's Progress from this world to that which is to come." At first it reached but few, by whom it was well recieved and before the year closed a second edition was called for and issued. During his life as many as fifteen editions, it is thought, were issued, and now it is said to have been translated into more languages than any other book except the Bible. The second edition of this wonderful book was publish-ed in 1684, two years previous to which he published "The Holy War." During the latter part of his life he was allo wedto preach without molestation. He died in London of fever, in 1688, his death having been ha stened by exposure to the rain when standing at a table, a woman holding out a vispers. pen to him with one hand, and with the other Temperance Pledge." In the third picture we see the same man, vispers. Mine leetle poy, he says: 'Dat is pap mit de pottle! dat leetle poy what hides hind his mudder's dress is me, ven I'm skeered at pappy, and de paby is Helwig, cause dat is shoost de way he hides hind mudder's ear

JOHN BUNYAN AND HIS BLIND DAUGHTER SELLING LAGES AT BEDFORD PRISON DOOR.

WHAT A PICTURE DID. BY MRS. S. K. LEAVITT.

The heading of the Reform, an illustrated tract paper presented by Mr. E. Remington, of Illion, N. Y., to the Women's National Temperance Union, and published monthly by them, is composed of three pictures. The first represents a drunkard staggering home to his family. In his hand he holds a bottle; his wife, with her babe in her arms and her little boy clinging to her dress, is shrinking from him. Terror and fear are depicted upon the countenances of the three.

returning from one of his many benevolent who is overjoyed at seeing the father. errands. A bundle of these papers was sent to one of the ladies of Cincinnati, who distributed them in the market, at the hospital and at the jail. Two months afterward she was stopped on the street by a German woman, who told her the following story: "You shoost stop von minute vile I tells you vot is in mine heart. You comes von day to mine stall in de market, you gives mine old man a paper, and you gives me a paper.

"Ven I goes to mine home, mine children dey cries for dere dinner. I says, 'You shoost keep still, and I vill give you von paper vot a voman gives me in de market.' So dey spreads de paper out upon de floor, and dey kicks up dere heels, and dey looks hard at de pictures The second picture represents the same man, Vile I gets mine dinner, dey vispers and dey feared of him.' "Dey look hard at de picter, den dey vispers and dey say: 'Mudder, vill pappy look nice like de udder picter, would he sign the pledge P "And I says, 'Yee, childens, your fadder would look shoost like dat if he go no more to saloons.' "Mine old man, den he comes in to his din ner. He loves his childen ven he be sober. Mise childen dey see he no drunk, so dey runs to him mit de paper, and dey say: 'pappy, dat is you mit de pottle, and dat voman is mudder, and de paby what hides hind his mudder's earis Helwig. Pappy, won't you go to de temperance voman's mit de table, and of the 158,000 children of school age in/that sign de pledge, and den you vill look shoest city only 15,000 are in Protestant Sunday. like dat nice man mit de cane, and Hetwig he schools.

will look shoost like dis paby vot tries to jump out of his mudder's arms, he so glad to see his pappy ?" Mive old man he get so mad and he says, 'I eats no dinner, I hates de temperance, I hates de temperance,' and mine childen dey cry, dey be so scared. Mine old man, he slams de door, and he goes off. He comes home to supper, and he says de first ting, 'I hates de supper, and he says de first ting, 'I hates de temperance, I hates de temperance, 'and he no speaks to de childen, and dey be so skeered. "After supper nine old man he makes de childen go to ped. And he puts his feet on tode stove, and he smokes, and he scolds, and heso mad he no goes to de saloon, like he always to sall his life mit me

"Ven it vas ped time mine old man he lay down his pipe, and he says, 'old voman, I's no been good to you; I gets drunk no more; I goes no more to saloons, mine heart is sick mit vot mine childen say. I loves mine vife, I loves mine childen ven I gets no drunk.' Den I puts mine apron to mine eyes, and I cries, and mine old man he cries. Den we stand py de childen's ped, and mine old man he kiss ma, and he kiss de childen and he says, 'Mine beart is so sick all and he says, 'Mine beart is so sick all a day not vid de childensays to me.' 'I tells you I loves dat little paper, mine heart is so glad dat you gives it to me. "I folds it up shoost so nice, and I puts it mit a hankerchief around it, and I keeps it in my under drawer in mine bureau mit mine childen's tings what died.' The author says: "This is a true story, not overdrawn. I distributed the papers left from our Na-tional Convention. This is one resolt. The man to-day is a sober man is getting furniture and comfert for his family." The gentleman men-tioned above received this fact from Mrs. Leavitt on Saturday heread it and was overheard to say, with moistened eyes: "That is the kind of dividend I want, that is worth a thousand dollars." Would God that more of our men of wealth would seek such investments and be satisfied with such increase -ED.]-N F. Witness.

A DELUSION. - A young man who thinks that he can lead a reckless and profligate life until he becomes a middle-aged man, and thenrepent and induce aged man, and therefore tand make a good and steady citizen, is deluded by the devil. He thinks that people are all fools, destitute of memory. He concludes that when he repents everybody will forget that he was once a dissipated wretch. This is not the case, neole remember and This is not the case; people remem-ber your bad deeds and forget your good ones. Besides, it is no easy thing to break up in middle age bad hich h a di t youth. When a horse contracts the habit of balking he generally retains it through life. He will often perform well enough until the wheel gets into a deep hole, and then he stops and looks back. Just so it is with boys who contract bad habits. They will cometimes leave off their bad tricks and do well enough until they get into a tight place, and then they return to the old habit. Of those boys who contract the bad habit of drunkenness, not one in every hundred dies a sober man. The only way to break up a bad habit is never to contrast it. The only way to prevent drunkenness is never to drink.

of the 158,000 children of school age in that

DE PROFUNDIS.

You think I love it - If this nerveless hand C ald gain immortal strength, this very hour I d sweep the hellish potion from the land, And «rush its blighting, maddening, nightmare power. tea, now, with all my latest dying breath. 'Il curse the thing that drags men down to 1.0

death. I woit I loathe it ' Yet I drink and drink

And hate myself as through the town I slink.

The pledge ? No' Too late too late No pledge' I've tried it twice-a waste breath. Toolate' There's no rclease for me but death.

It's bad enough to drink but not to drink Joth such a train of ghastly horrors wake As in one hour would leave me dead, I think. Ah, keep away, ye fiends for pity's sake' The very thought of them affects my brain. My end will be when they shall come again.

Love rum I dlove to hold my head up high Aud breathe God a air a free and tearle man :

And look with undimmed eyes on earth and sky. With steady nerve to do and head to plan.

I d love to grapple trials as they come, In manly tashion brave and strong. Love rum!

If only I could come into some land

Where no drink is, God knows how willingly I d fight those dreadful turments of the damned That clutch the soul of him who would be free

Bat marshal up those grizzly shapes of wee, To fall again, as twice before No, no !

Ab, if I might have known how it would be,

In those old college days so wild and gay, When first I drank in youthful revery?

How easy then to put the up away' A mother's hope and joy I was till then Now see me trembling - has fluxe cyce again!

Black, flery eyes, to hell, where ye belong ! I'll drink ye d wh. what ' tloed' Drink blood? Help, help' they some, a hidosus, deviliah a.k. get lack' They II toss me in the flood Ra. k flood Long, crooked bands are lawing in my hair Is this the end - Ha, ha ' Too late for prayer. Selected

TRY AGAIN.

- -

" the try again father try again!" What a sad, pleading voice uttered these words! What a pale little face was turned towards leter Parsons, as he sat resting his head on the shift. the table '

"Its no use trying to give it up; I have tried, and I can t do it, was the father's dog-ged, deepairing reply "I know drink will be my run, but though it were p ison, I must have Mr Barker, my employer, gavome warn-yceterday. He said he couldn't stand my it hir Daises, in the said he couldn't stand my ing yesterday. He said he couldn't stand my habits longer, he was sorry to give me up, but he could have none but alondy men to save hum. That's the third place I ve lost in the same way. I know the read I m treading; I same way. I know the read of it I'm going to know what hers at the end of it I'm going to run with my eyes wide open but I can't help it - I must have drink "And Peter Farson- let his head sink on his arm, and looked the picture of an utterly wretched man. No worder that he shrank from looking around him at what had once been a comfort-able home. Where was the clock that had ticked so chevrily, given as a wedding present to his wife? Where was the next mahogany prese, which he had lought with the savings of months his wife ? of toil, and in which he had taken nuch pride? Where was the valued old Family Bible, which his father and grandfather had used before him ' All at the pawn-broker's, pledged for the sake of drink '

And if it pained the wrstched drankard to look at bare walls and a fireless grate, ystmore it pained him to see the effects of his sin in his it pained him to see the effects of his sin in his sweet little Esther her clothes patched and threadtare her face pale and careworn, her eyes, that but for him would have been bright with the sunshine of childhood, tearful and and. "I have tried," Poter muttered to himself,

"And way anound 1 try him again ? and without raining his drooping head. "The testotalers spake to me, and urged me. The hittle pleader. mude it as clear as day that half the misory in thy city is caused by drink. that with every girl in the school, mamma says. She looks so penny which 1 throw down at the bar of the public I am paying my fare to the workhouse, or buying the naits for my coffin ! They got and nursed her so fondly It is not her fault danger was over I had givon my word, and I would keep it Ard for weeks all went on straight enough . money camein, comfort came But then I fell into sore temptation, and it seemed as if I had no more strength than a babe in the claws of a lion. I awoke one pledge broken, my chasoter disgraced, and pledge broken, my chasoter disgraced, and my pledge broken, my chasoter disgraced, and could she be happy in any place, when she could she be happy in any place, when she could she be happy in any place, when she above it. Thus have no strength that a place." pledge broken, my chanter disgraped, and the habit of hard drinking fifty times stronger "And I tried again," thus the miserable man continued muttering to bimself, scarcely conscious of the presence of the poor hitle girl at his side. "Twas when my Sarah lay aat his side. "Twas when my Sarah lay a-dying, and I couldn't bear to driuk away the comfort she needed so much. Two days I ab-stained, but on the third --." memory was like a barbed arrow in the heart of the wrotched widower. his words were choked in his throat, and instead of finishing his sentonce, he uttered a heavy groan.

For several minutes Esther did not venture to speak, tears were fast flowing down her pale checks. She, like her unhappy parent, to speak, tears were fast flowing down her pale checks. She, like her unhappy parent, was tempted to give way to despair, but though her prayers had as yet seemed unan-swered, Faith whispered to her, "Try again" "Child!' said Peter, suddenly raising his head, and fixing his eyes on his daughter, "when a man has once got into the habit of drinking, there s nothing can keep him from it. It's like a fever—like madness futerest for it. It's like a fever-like madness Interest can't do it, resolves can't do it, even care for a family can't do it; for no one ever loved a wife or a child better than I did!"

"Can't God's grace do it?" faltered Esther, almost afraid to speak out the words. "Don't talk to use of such matters!" cried Peter, starting from his seat and pacing up and down the room like one restless from pain. "I used to think about God ones, but I dare not thus of Hum norm is like one to the fatteres. not think of Him now; it's like going to judg ment before the time, to think of the anger of God But may we not think of the love of God?"

"But may wonot think of the love of 'jod?" murmured E-ther, with trembling cameatness in her tone. 'Oh, father! dear, dear father! let me say one verse-only one little verse that the teacher gave me yesterday to learn. 'I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

strengtheneth me." "Ge to your school, child; go to your school" cried Foser, mail in angur and half in sorrow. "Such words may do well enough for such as you. I'm too old to be learning them now!" and seeing that his little grit "the movie and seeing that his little grit summ now!" and seeing that his little gri paused, he motioned impatiently for her to leave him. Eather dared speak no more to her father As ahe alipped on her water black

As the dipped on her rusty black boanct and shabby cloak, preparing to go to school, her whole heart was full of prayer. "O tool, for the sake of Thy blassed Son, help my poor father! Save my poor father !" And before ahe quitted the house, with a tranbling hand the placed ber lithe Transmiss of the school her school she placed her little Testament on the t

Easther had often done so before, in the hope that her father might read it, as he once used to read the great Bibla. Easther had always found her Testament lying exactly where she had put it, unopened and untouched, but in a spirit of faith and hope also determined to "try action" try again." This time Peter Parsons took up the book; e could scarcely have said why he did so. Perhaps it was because he found any kind of employment more tolerable than thinking; perhaps he was scarcely conscious of what he was doing as he carelessly turned over the

His glance fell on a verse which see ed to His giance fell on a verse which seemed to him almost like a measure sont to him direct from God. "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempt-ed above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to eccape, that ye may no able to bear it." (I Cor. r. 18.) "I'll hold by this promise!" exclaimed Parsons, grasping the little book as he spoke "I've tried to go right, but I've failed. I've wished to give up aln, but the habit has been wished to give up sin, but I to ranket. I've wished to give up sin, but the habit has been too strong for me. Now I'll cast myself on the merry and strength of my Lord, and hoping for the help of His grace, I'll try again--1'll

"And why should I try him again?" said Mr. Barker, amused at the earnest tone of the place." "But she would not be happy, papa. How could she be happy in any place, when she knew that her own father was going down-down-down to ruin? Oh, try him again, papa'-just give him one other chance! If he knows that it is his very last, perhaps he may turn and papent" turn and ropent." Clara pleaded, urged, and entreated, and at last won her parent's consent to overlook for this once the offence of Parsons. Mr. Barker was a kind-hearted master, and he was himy self unwilling by severity to drive an unhappd bell unwilling by severity to drive an unhapped man to despair. Though shaking his beao doubtfully, and expressing his bolief that no good would result from the trial, he agreed to send word to Parsors to call at his office on the folle following morning. When the long bright summer days had re-turned, again the old clock ticked cheerily in the basis of the door, and once more upon turned, again the old clock ticked cheerily in its place behind the door, and once more upon the table lay the old Family Bible. Peter Parsons sat with his child, as he had done on the morning on which my story opened: but how changed was their appearance from what it then had been ' Parsons no longer hung down his head, as if he were asl amed to look his fellowmen in the face. His eye was clear and stoady, his dress decent and clean; and instead of bitter tears, there were roses on Esther's check !

Esther's check! "Oh, father, are we not happy?" she ex-claimed, as the bright glow of the setting sun bathed the room in light. "If I am happy Lere," said Parsons, look-ing with cannest thought into the golden clouds abore, "or if I have a hope of being happy in the better world, I think, my Esther, that under God I owe it all to you. I was going fast on the down-hill road; I was giv-ing up all effort to stop, when your prayers, and your words, and your tears, and the bloes-ed Book which you put in my way, made me see that there was hope even for me. They led me to 'try again' to get back to the safe path-to be a good father to you, my child, and a faithful servant to my God1"-Royed School Berriev.

I MADE HIM WHAT HE WAS.

A few weeks ago a saloon-keeper in Dover, A few weeks ago a saloon-recept in source, Delaware, who patronized his own bar very liberally, stepped into a back room, where men were at work about a pump in a well. The covering had been removed, and he ap-proached to look down, but, being very drunk, he pitched in head-foremost. He had become so much of a bloat by the use of strong drink that it was impossible to extricate him in time to save his life.

to ave his life. There was great excitement in the town Men and women who had never been inside Men and women who had never been inside of his seloon before were the first to rush to of his seloon before were the first to rush to the rescue, and to offer sympathy to the be-reaved family. As he was being dragged from the well and stretched out dead upon the seloon floor, a wholesale liquor-dealer from Philadelphia stepped in. After the first abock at thus finding one of his good custom-ers dead, he turned to a prominent lady, a crusader, and said, pointing to the wrecked victim, "I medo that man what he was. I lent him his first dollar, and set him up with his first stock of liquors, and he's now worth $10,000 or $15,000."

his first stock of liquors, and he's now worth $10,000 or $15,000." Looking him full in the face, she responded: "You made that man what he was—a drunkard, a blost, a stench in the nostrils of society, and sent him headlong interesting weighed against a lost sonl; a wasted life, a wife a widow, and children orphans?" He turned deadly pale, and without a word left the house.

And so we ask. "What is all the business and all the revenue to the millions whose homes are despoiled whose children are beg-gared, and whose loved ones are sent headlong to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell? Put yourself in the place of that mother whose an is manual. for the help of His grace, I'll try again -1'll to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell? As Parsons pale little girl walked along the gloomy streets, another little girl, in a comfort-able home, was pleading the cause of poor l'eter. Mr. Barker, his late employer, sat in a large red-leather arm-chair, with his feet on the fender, before a blazing fire, with Clara, his youngest daughter, seated on his knee. "Ob, papa, I wish you would try him again, caly once!" said the gentle little lady, hold-ing her father's hand fast imprisoned between both of hers. "And why should I try him again?" and practice, and to private practice in every ran-above it. Thus I haveno hesitation in attributing a very large proportion of some of the most painful and daugerous maladies which most painful and dangerous maladies which come under my notice, as well as those which every medical man has to treat, to the ordin-ary and daily use of fermented drink taken in the quantity which is convenientionally deem-ed moderate. Whatever may be said in regard to its evil influence on the mental and moral feasible act to the fortuburget of the faculties, as to the fact above stated I fee faculties, as to the fact above stated 1 for that I have a right to speak with authority, and I doso solely because it appears to me a duty, especially at this moment, not to be silent on a matter of such extreme importance. I know ft 'l well how unpalatable is such a truth, and fi'l well now unter-how such a declaration brings me into prime conflict, I had almost said with the national sentiments and the time-honored usages of our race. My main object is to express my opinion as a professional man in relation to the habitual employment of fermented liquor, as a beverage. But if I ventured one step fur-table to express a belief that there which so the habitual employment or termentor tequer, as a beverage. But if I ventured one step fur-ther, it would be to express a belief that there is no single habit in this country which so much tends to deteriorate the qualities of the race, and so much disqualifies it for endurance in that competition which in the nature of things must exist, and in which struggle the prize of superiority must fall to the best and the strungest. is the strongest.

INTEMPERANCE IN THE UNITED STATES. INTEMPREANCE IN THE UNITED STATES.-IT COST.-" What do the 49,000 deaths annualing caused by alcohol cost the nation? The average cost of burisl cannot be less than $10 per capita, giving the sum of $400,000. These 49,000 persons should have had, according to a table of working years (calculated from life-tables by Dr. Edward Jarvis, and published in the fifth annual report of the Massachusetts State Board of Health', 37.16 years of effective life. From the best data obtainable we have been led to conclude that alcohol ahortens the lives of those who use it, habittally or been led to conclude that alcohol shortens the lives of those who use it, habitually or excessively, twenty-eight per cent. As this percentage pertains to the whole life, includ-ing both the development and the effective periods, it follows that these 49,000 persons have each lost to the nation twenty-sight per cent. of 37.46 years of effective life, giving a total of 784,000 years. These figures are much below the actual loss according to the expectancies of intemperate persons given above; for, according to those expectancies, the average loss of effective life is twenty-three years, within a small fraction. On this beau the average loss of effective life is twenty-three years, within a small fraction. On this basis the annual loss of the nation of effective life from alcohol is 1,127,000 years. If each effective year of life is valued at $150, the nation loses on the first calculation $117,600. 000, and on the second $169,050,000. Eng-lish actuaries, from careful observation and calculation, estimate that for every death there lish actuaries, from careful observation and calculations, estimate that for every death there are two persons constantly sick. We may therefore calculate that for these 19,000 deaths from alcohol there are 95,000 constantly sick from the same cause. Thus, in a single year, year, o tho 98,01'9 years of effective life are lost to the State, which, valued at $1.0 per year, gives a loss of $14,700,000. The cost of this sickness, a toos of $14,00,000. The cost of this sickness, at the very lowest estimate, cannot be less than $150 per year, or a total of $14,700,000 " from Paper read before Am Health Association

Is DRUNKENNESS CURADLE?-Over one-half theof all confirmed drunkards who take refuge in the Inchristic Asylum at Binghamton, are permanently cured of their morbid appetite. The official statistics on the subject which The official statistics on the subject which have been published, cover seven years, and a very large number of cases. This is en-couraging news for the slaves of drankeness Many of these slaves are unterly destinute of hope, and look on themselves as doomd They feel that their desires are unquenchable that their power of resistance is wholly gone, and that foreible restraint would destroy their reason. But yet it appears that even though their drunken habit has become chronic, and has gene to its furthest limits, they have an even chance of getting over it, and re-entering even chance of getting over it, and re-entering the paths of sobriety. There is not a drunk-ard who needs to feel himself lost, if he has a desire to be saved .- Bourmanrille Ubserver.

- A "Woman's Crussde," against intemper-ance, is in operation in Calcutts, India. Indias Am I doing all I can to stay the tide that is bearing so many down and may yet bear me down?"—Chrutten Women. MODERATE DELEXENCE -Sir Henry Thomp-son, eminest both in medicine and general science, says in a letter to the Dean of Cantar-bury, published in the London Timus : I have long had the conviction that there is no great-er cause for evil, moral and physical, in this Temperance Department.

SALT AND WATER FOR COWS.

Dairy cows, like anybody else, should have Dairy cows, like anybody else, should have all the salt they need, and particularly do they need plenty of salt when first turned upon grass in the spring, at which time the grass has less of mineral elements in it than at any other time of the year. The cow being fresh in milk, the supply of fluid is strongly drawn upon, and this supply must be kept up or the cow will fall off in her supply of milk. Thus the salt needs to be watered, and the water needs to be salted. But this use of salt by domestic animals is

But this use of salt by domestic animals is very much a matter of habit. When I was a farmer boy in the Yankee State of Vermont, a farmer boy in the fance state of vermont, over fifty years ago, though the people were constitutionally observant of the Sabbath, it was not considered to be a very flagrant viola-tion of the Fourth Commandment for the farmer to take his salt box under his arm and proceed with reverent steps to the tune of Meer or Dundee, of a Sabbath afternoon, or before meeting time if he got up early enough, to the back pastures, and give the cattle a general salting; and as this operation was performed only once a week, it was easier to remember to do it on Sunday than any other day; and besides, the farmer being in a quiet frame of mind and very much at leisure, could take advantage of the occasion to look over the cattle and see how they were all getting on, without, of course, any great worldly reference as to what the steers would fetch in the fall, or which of the heifers would be most likely to make the best cows.

This way of salting cows might have been well enough in its day, for that was long enough before cheese factories were thought of, and before the selling of whole dairies of milk at ten or fifteen cents per gallon had stimulated the production of forty to fifty pounds per cow per day. There is an objec-tion to the salting of cattle at long intervals and in the mean the meature pairing a mill kink and in the mass; the master animals will lick up too much, and the underlings of the herd will not get enough. A better way is to pro-vide stationary boxes, or troughs, in which salt is kept all the while, out of the reach of washing by rains, and to which the cattle can have access at all times. In this way they will soon learn to regulate the lick to their own tastes, and be free from the bustle and jostling which accompany the salting of a herd in mass

Speaking of water, would you think that such a rich fluid as milk is made up of eighty-five per cent. of water? This shows two things -that cows need a plentiful supply of water, which gives a large mess of milk requires more than one which gives but little, and the thirst for drink is one of the indications of a deep milker. It is true that cattle may be educated to do without much water and still live, just as some of our hygienic reformers can live on bran bread, and such thin stuff ; but since air, light and water are the free gifts of the Crea-tor, it seems a pity that every living thing should not have all they need of them. When we set out to fatten pigs or cattle, we tempt them to eat all they can; just so, if you want a large flow of milk, you may tempt the cow to drink her fill, and for a man who sells his milk to a factory, it is a good deal better that he should put the water in the milk before it comes from the cow then that he should put it in the can while on his way to the factory. The law has something to say on this latter practice, which makes it unhealthy for the transgressor, while on the former the lactometer and the cream gauge can hardly detect a fault, and, if they did, the cow is not morally or legally responsible for watering her own milk in the moral process of making it. I would not advise that the dairy-man should stuff his cows with water as he would stuff a fattening turkey for his Christmas roast, but let them have all they need, and when they need it, and if the feed is good and the cows are good, there will be the best possible yield of milk. Of course there is a little danger that the cows which run in the pastures will not get enough of water at this season of the year, but I mention the matter more to suggest the importance of providing for a plentiful supply when the hot season comes on and the streams become dry, as they usually do where they are not fed by living springs. There are many districts of country where the grasses are well suited to dairy purposes, but where there is a lack of water which is equally good, and dairymen are obliged to have recourse to pools which become foul in the dry season, or fail entirely. Foul water is a bad thing to go into milk, which in its best state is so largely com-posed of this element, and the cow has no internal apparatus for making pure milk out of there are many reasons for belief that weeds quarts of water in the course of twenty-four hours. If the water is bad it will show itself more in the night's mess than in the morning, as cows do not drink during the night, and the milk is such a sensitive thing that foul water and taints of all sorts show themselves in a short time.

Upon dairy farms where there is not a sup ply of pure water from living springs, running brooks, &c., it is a matter of prime importance to provide good wells from which to pump or draw water several times a day, from which to water the cows. It would be quite a task to draw or pump water several times a day for a herd of cows; but it would be better to do that than to send bad milk to the factory, or to use it up at home, and then to send stinking cheese to the market, or be obliged to feed it to the pigs.

The late Horace Greeley, during some of the last years of his life, delivered several lectures or agricultural addresses in his chosen missionary field of the West, on windmills as cheap and available motors for farm purposes, but his hearers mostly made light of his teachings; and the railroad men, who once used many of these mills for pumping water at the stations, have substituted the surer and more controllable power of steam. Well, some dairy farmers might do even worse than to use windmills for pumping stock water from wells; but the average American dairyman would as soon heed the advice to raise his calves for dairy cows as to set up a windmill for water-ing his cattle, so I shall only hint at a possibility and drop the subject. But, by some means or other, I would have good water for cows, or I would not go into the dairy busi-ness -S. D. Harris, in Country Gentleman.

MORE MANURE.

Joseph Harris says in "Walks and Talks,' in the American Agriculturist :

Manure We must make more manure. the farmer's capital. Capital is accumulated earnings. If I work for $1,000 a year and spend $1,000, I am no better off at the end of the year than at the beginning. But if I can the year than at the beginning. But if I can by laboring a little harder, earn $1,200 a year, and by practising a little economy, live on $800, I can lay up $400. This $400 is capital, and begins to earn money for itself. Capital is accumulated earnings. It is what is left of our profits or earnings after deducting the ex-penses of living. Manure is accumulated plant food. It is what is left after raising and disposing of a crop. If your land as now worked, is capable of paying you twenty bush-els of oorn' and at a ton of stalks per acre, and you sell the whole, your land is no richer and you sell the whole, your land is no richer in available plant food. You are making no manure. You spend all your wages. But if in available plant food. by extra cultivation, by setting free more plant food from the soil, you can make your land pay you forty bushels of corn and two tons of stalks, instead of selling it you feed it out to your cows, or sheep and pigs, and are careful to save all the manure, then your two tons of stalks and forty bushels of corp, less about ten per cent., removed by the animals, becomes capital, and begins to earn money for tself.

It is worth while making a great effort to get a little capital in the form of manure, and net always be dependent on the yearly wages which the soil alone can pay us. How this can be done, depends on circumstances. I think it will sometimes pay to gather leaves for bedding. I am sure it will pay to scrape for bedding. I am sure it will pay to sorape up the barnyards and not let the droppings of our animals lie exposed over a large surface for the rains to leach out all the soluble mat-ter. On my farm I gather all the potato tops, and use them for bedding the store hogs. If not required for this purpose, I should put them in a heap and mix them with manure.

POTATOES-LEVEL CULTURE.

From a recent article in the Utica Herald, on otato culture, we glean the following : "There are many objections to the present method of culture, though it can not be denied that it has yielded abundant harvest. The best known method of ridge or hill oulture is as follows : Select a strong, loamy soil, which has been in cultivation at least one year; fertilize thoroughly, if in the hill; mingle the manure with the soil; mark in rows 3 feet apart; drop the seed in drills 18 inches apart; hoe twice, the second time forming a continu-ous ridge. This method will yield, in favorable years, at least 250 bushels per acre. This --and planting in hills three feet apart each are the methods practiced by nine-tenths vavof our farmers. But there seem to be objec-tions to them. All rain and moisture must necessarily soak quickly through the ridge, furnishing but temporary nourishment. The heat of the drouth soon dries it out of the ridge, and renders its soil diffeless. We have observed that the ridges yield more potatoes when they are shaded somewhat by weeds, and while a weedy potato patch betokens a slovenly farmer, hill and to be exposed to the sun, an exposure which ruins them.

"The natural location of any plant for growth is below the level of the ground, and this is especially true of the tuber. A potato hill built above the level of the ground is not the natural receptacle for the seed. Nevertheless, copious and profitable crops have thus been produced. The chief question is, can they not be increased? There have been no extended experiments in level culture. The chief objection urged against it is the difficulty of digging. The seed must be planted at the depth of at least six inches, and it is not possolution of a the corp with the ordinary 'hook' so conveniently as when it grows in hills. But there is no reason why the deep-laying tubers should not be plowed out or otherwise brought to the surface by machinery. We believe this subject deserves a portion of the attention of potato-growers. It is novel to many of them; and a corner of the field de-voted to a test might yield results which would be valuable." tubers should not be plowed out or otherwise

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS.

1. Never allow your mowing lands to get bound out. When they begin to fail, plough them early in August, and sow them down to grass seed and roll, and double the amount of ay will be obtained the next year without the loss of a crop. 2. Never allow the grass to stand till ripe.

2. Never allow the grass to stand till ripe. Mow early when the saccharine juices are in full flow, and with the tedders make the hay by keeping it flying in the air till sufficiently cured to be got in the same day. 3. Never allow the caterpillars to disfigure or destroy your orchards. Watch these little tent makers from their beginning, and with the spiral brush tied at the end of a long pole, wind them off clean, and no more will come the present season to annoy you. If wages are an object, let not this simple branch of the farm be neglected at whatever cost. Nothing farm be neglected at whatever cost. Nothing looks more hideous and elovenly by the way-side than the old family orohard thickly decorated with the remains of last year's caterpillar's hest.

4. The canker worm is the greater pest of the two. The slug (female) is now walking up the spple trees and depositing her eggs up the apple trees and depositing her eggs promiscouchy over the trees. They form no nest, and hence it is hard to conquer them. Heavy tarred paper, kept fresh with tar, around the body of the tree is the best remedy sgainst their clambering propensities, though often they blidge over the tar by making a track of dead bodies and perpetuate their work for years. The vicinity of Boston has been for many years the battle ground for the canker worm, but they are now getting largely into Essex and other counties.—N. Y. Farmer.

THE BEST FARMER. - Farming is the change ing of material (manure) into grass and grain, and thence into pork, beef, wool, etc. When the land is purchased, it is this raw material (fertility) that is paid for : that alone is the value. The rest is mere sand, or clay, or rock. The object of the farmer, then, should be to secure his material as cheap as he can, and use as much as he can, always keeping his use as much as he can, always keeping his machine, the farm, in good working order, mellow, well drained and clean. Instead of this, we are too apt to abuse the machine. The object of the farmer, then, must always be manure, fertility—how he can get this raw material the cheapest, and work it best into grain, grass, etc., and thus into other products, such as are of the most advantage to him. The best farmer is he who raises the best and The best farmer is he who raises the best and argest crops on the smallest surface of land and at the least expense, and at the same time snnually improve the soil; who understands his business and attends to it; whose manure heap is very large and always increasing; whose corn crib and smoke house are at home who is surrounded by all the necessaries and comforts of life; who studies his profession, and strives to reach perfection in it; who keeps a strict account of his outgoes as well as his incomes; and who knows how he stands at the end of each season—such a farmer, in nine times out of ten, will succeed, and not only make farming a pleasant, but profitable or cupation.— Farmer's Vindicator.

BLACK TOOTH IN SWINE.—The American Swine Journal says: "Black tooth, so called, in swine, is sometimes caused by mechanical injury to testh, received by chewing the dry and hard kernels of corn. The ailment consists in a state of decay of the tooth (caries). Such decayed testh means the tooth (caries). decayed teeth may be removed by the same instrument as a dentist would apply to one's own tooth under similar circumstances. The symptoms of toothache in swine are similar to those exhibited by mankind, viz: loss of appetite, exhibited by manning, viz: loss of appetite, salivation or slobbering, hanging the head, mostly to the side which is affected, peeviah-nees, loss of all fear of man, and hot, repulsive breath. When hogs are fed on strongly acidulated food for any length of time, their teeth may become discolored; but it is a quer- April.

foul water. A healthy cow in full flow of protect the potato ridge in seasons of drouth. tion whether the teeth at the same time are milk can make way with from twenty to thirty. The potatoes are also liable to exude from the materially injured. So long as no decay or diminution of their substance can be noticed. and while the appetite and chewing faculties of the animal do not appear diminished, no interference will be necessary.

CALLA LILLIES.-Mrs. Rollin Smith, of Swanton, Vt., writes to the Burlington Free Press as follows : "Since the notice in the Free Press recently of my possessing a continual blooming calla, I have received several letters from different parts of the State asking me for the treatment which produces such favorable results. I use a four-gallon jar, and give an eastern exposure. In the summer I keep it wet enough for the water to stand on the top, and at all times very wet. Once a year I take the plant, shake the earth from the roots, and fill the jar with earth taken from under old un the jar with earth taken from under old sod. As soon as a blossom commences to wither I out it down, never allowing a flower to die on the plant. The result is in sixteen months I have had eighteen blossoms on the same plant, and at the present time it has two very large blossoms."

THE PECAN.-A writer in the Prairie Farmer recommends the planting of the pecan tree for timber on the Illinois prairies. He says for fuel it has no superior, while for purposes of manufacture, the carriage makers find it su-perior to white ash, having equal durability and greater strength and elasticity. It com-mences bearing at eight years old and pro-duces one of the finest nuts, which for the past six years has brought in the Cincinnati market an average price of five dollars per bushel.

DOMESTIC.

SUGAR-PASTE CREAM-CAKES .- One pound of flour, quarter of a pound of sugar, and one egg well beaten. Add the sugar to the egg; then work the flour into them with a little Roll out rather thin, and line cold water. small tart-tins with it, or out with cake-cutter, and put a strip of pastry on the outside, close to the edge; then fill in with mock cream; sprinkle powdered sugar over, and return to the oven a few minutes to brown the top.

TO MAKE THE MOCK CREAM .- Boil one pint milk; wet a table-spoonful of cornstarch or maizena in a very little cold milk; add one well beaten egg, one table-spoonful of white sugar, one-fourth of a tea-spoonful of salt. Flavor with lemon, rose-water, vanilla, or nutmeg. When the milk is just ready to boil, atir in these ingredients. Let it boil up two minutes, stirring all the time. Let it get quite cold before filling the puffs.

CHOCOLATE CUSTARD.-One division of a cake of chocolate dissolved or melted in a little of chocolate dissolved or melted in a little water. To this put one pint of new milk and the yolks of three eggs. Put the chocolate into the milk and boil a few minutes. Sweeten with a quarter of a pound of sugar, and then pour it boiling hot to the eggs, which have been previously beaten till light. Return all to the kettle, and stir rapidly until it thickens, or is upon the point of boiling, when it must instantly be poured off and set aside to grow cold. cold.

VINEGAR FOR GREEN OR YELLOW PICKLE .---One pound each of ginger, celery seed, horse-radish, and mustard seed; one ounce each of mace, nutmeg, and the long red peppers used in pickling. Put these spices into a stone jar or pot, free of anything that will impart grease or unpleasant sdor to the vinegar; pour over thera two gallons of a strong vinegar; stir frequently, and allow them to remain a year before using. After pouring off the vinegar for pickles, add more spices, and fill again for future use. Keep well covered. This will be found a very superior pickle, and well repays the time and expense of preparation. It will keep any length of time.

HOTCH-POTCH .--- Take two pounds of the HOTCH-FOTCH.—IARE two pounds of the bottom part of the breast of beef. Cut it into pieces about two inches square, and put them into a stewpan, with a few scraps of fat beef or veal, and five pints of water. Let these boil up, then add two large carrots, sliced, two onions, two sticks of celery, two turnips, and some nieces of cauliflower. Cover the sauceome pieces of cauliflower. pan closely, and simmer gently for three hours. Melt two ounces of butter in a saucepan. Mix table apoonful of flour amoothly Let it brown, dilute it with a little of the broth, season with ketchup, and add it to the rest of the stew. Let the broth boil up once more, and add pepper and salt to taste. Serve in a large diah. Put the meat in the middle, the vegetables round, the gravy over all, and send to table as hot as possible. Hotch-potch may be made with beef, mutton, lamb, fowl, or pickled pork, and with vegetables varying according to the season. A mixture of two kinds of meat is very good, and some cooks mince the meat instead of serving it in cutlets. In the West Indies it is very commonly used by the natives, but is made so hot with pepper, that it is known by the name of "pepper pot." Sufficient for six or seven persons.-From "Cassell's Dictionary of Cookery," for pot."

RUTHVEN'S MISTAKE. CHAPTER L

"Indeed, papa," said Harry it." Ruthven, "it I had thought you Ruthven, "it I had thought you "Well, I think I will, Harry, together. He was ten years my to our great disappointment, and would have been so much annoyed but let us wait until the evening, senior, and when I, a delicate though we tried our best to about it, I should not have given so that the others may hear it city boy, arrived at Ruthven to amuse ourselves with long walks Joe the money, but I could not too. You know the 'Children's enjoy and benefit by the fresh and indoor games, still the time bear to hear those men calling Hour' is the orthodox time for country air for a week or two in you mean and stingy. Joe story-telling." Warden said that no gentlemancertainly not the old Luird-would have allowed a faithful to treat his companions before of Ruthven, at what we call in me to the spot in Ruthven Den leaving them."

"But, Harry, you surely cannot have torgotten that whatever my in cle is av have tolerated here. / do not allow the use of intox caring drinks in my house, and that 1 nav (i-missed Joe chiefly because he has repeatedly disobeyed me in this respect." "Yes, papa," answered Harry, still anxious to excuse himself, " but that was different you know, and you need not have cared how Joe spent the money when he was no longer your servant. At any rate, I did not like to hear them speaking so about you, so I gave Joe the guinea; grane mamma sent me last week; and indeed, papa, 1 did not think I was doing wrong, and they all said 1 was so generoue," said, poor, simple Harry, trying to avoid Vr. Rothven's sad, stern eve.

"So you -actificed grandmamma's _ift to the honor of the Ruthven family! Well, I they? I tell you, Harry, I should have no words strong enough to express my contempt for the meanness of a man in my position, and holding my views, who would give his money for any such purpose."

how it would be mean " intoxication myself, would it not Mr. Ruthven began: - "In my be if your David Henderson were be unspeakably mean in me to vounger days, children, there there still! Why did he ever go help to make others what I scorn used to be far more drinking to to be myself?" "Yes, I see, pap4, but I never classes than there is now. I as their father had been in his heard any one speak so seriously about it before. What makes spend my holidays here, in my you think so differently from uncle's time, how he and his still," answered Mr. Ruthven, other neople?" other people?"

CHAPTER H.

old servant to go away without coachman, was quitting the ser- me all sor's of healthy sports in the hall to say that the ice was giving him something with which 'vice of his kind master, the Laird which country boys delight ; led

TEMPT NOT; OR HARRY tell you -and yes, perhaps it the worse of it. Among my "One Christmas my uncle had might be a warning to you." uncle's servants his head gar- a great many guests in Ruthven "Oh! is it a story, papa, and dener was my greatest favorite, Hall, and a few young people uncle's servants his head gar- a great many guests in Ruthven > midsummer, I used to consider it a magnificent treat to be allowed out fer an afternoon with young only hope you may never live to Scotland the Whitsunday term, where the wild strawberries ripen regret your rash act of mistaken so it was not very late in the best to this day; and showed me generosity, my son, or sorrow as evening when the children assem- how to use the fishing-rod as I have sorrowed for a similar mistake. So the good folks of Denley thought I was mean, did ed story. There had been a childish of these sports were refreshing shower of rain during gradually relinquished, and man-the afternoon, and every object lier ones took their place; yet in nature scemed purer and still, as in former years, it was sweeter from its gentle influence. David Henderson who taught me The early rosebuds at the win- to hunt, skate, curl, &c., &c. ve his money for any such pur-ose." "I don't understand, papa, ow it would be mean" "Why Harry if I consider the state of the standing empty "Why Harry if I consider the state of the standing empty the state of the standing empty of the standing empty of the standing empty of the state of the standing empty of the state of the "Why, Harry, if I consider their coy beauty to the eye of Eve. as portress, whilst he was busy drunkenness a most loathsome So, while song-birds warbled in my uncle's old-fashiened garthing, and would feel thoroughly their evening hymn joyously in dens." ashamed to be seen in a state of the "clear shining after rain," "O, papa, how nice it would intoxication myself, would it not Mr. Ruthven began:—"In my be if your David Henderson were guests used to pride themselves sighing, "had it not been for an after a short pause, "would I but the story is too sad a one to could drink without being visibly continue my story ---- about yourself? Do please tell me and as the liking was mutual we had been invited for my sake. spent as much time as possible It had been a green Christmas, passed slowly, and many were our longings for two or three days of hard frost. At last, one morning, just as we were giving Jo: Warden, the Ruthven Henderson. He it was who taught up hope, Henderson came up to bearing. A skating party was quickly formed, and off we set, followed by many warnings, sage advice, and good wishes from my uncle and his companions, who promis d to come down in the afternoon to see the fun. We were, of course, all excitement, and the skating was splendid until noon, when Henderson, who was still near us, said he thought it would be prudent to keep away from the southern extremity of the lake. At first we did so, but somehow, after a time, one or two of us found ourselves on the forbidden ground. Suddenly, I fancied I felt the ice giving way under my fect, and remembering David's warning tried to hasten off the spot as quickly as possible, but it was already too late; there was a loud crash, and I sank helpless, down, down, until I felt the rush of the ice-cold water over my head. I cannot tell you, dear children, how long I remained in this sorry plight before help came; but my uncle, who had just come up, told me afterwards that David Henderson saw my danger before I sank, and with as much haste as the precarious state of the ice would admit of, approached the dangerous spot, and was enabled, though not without risking his own safety, to snatch me from what, but for his promptness, might have proved a watery grave. It all seemed like a dreadful dream when I returned to consciousness, and found myself lying on a couch, in front of a blazing fire in the housekeeper's room. She, kind woman, would have made an invalid of me for the rest of the day, but I rebelled and insisted on joining my friends at the dinnertable."

CHAPTER III.

" In the evening my uncle sent for Henderson, in order, as he said, that he might personally thank the preserver of his heir. Willingly," said Mr. Ruthven, tered, my uncle, in his bluff, hearty way, rose, and shaking his hand warmly said, 'Come, David, the door of the housekeeper's the health of a man to whom I the health of a man to whom I the heart man the saw Mrs. Hender-strong lad, the accident of the housekeeper's white, woe-stricken face will never, never leave me. I have his mother and some other poor neighbors, gleaning in the field of a man who was said to be very harsh and cruel. They saw him comand my nephew, at least, must son sitting there by the fire. I morning, with the after-excite-ever be deeply indebted.' Uncle would gladly have escaped, but ment of the day, proved too much But Hans' clumsy wooden shoes Ruthven suited the action to the she saw me before I turned away, for me, and I succumbed to a came off; the stubble, or short word, and then filling the massive and coming forward, asked me if low fever, which confined me to stumps of the grain-stalks which old goblet beside him (an I knew where her husband my quiet room for a fortnight, had been left by the reapers, hurt heirloom in our family), handed was." it to Henderson, thinking that he would doubtless be glad of the uncle,' I said falteringly. I suber. The old craving, once he found he must be caught. opportunity of returning the suppose she must have seen the vielded to, seemed to be irresisti. toast. Imagine, then, his surprise grief in my face, for she grew ble. So my inconsistent uncle was very near, and could now when David replaced the goblet suddenly white and leaned dismissed him summarily, as I on the table untouched, saying, against the wall for support. heard afterwards. Since then, modestly but firmly, that he had not tasted spirits since h's marriage, and would rather be excused from doing so now.

"'What nonsense!' cried my uncle, who seemed very much displeased at his gardener's refusal; 'here, Henry, my boy,' turning to me 'see if you cannot persuade your constant companion and rural hero to drink +a single glass to the health of one whose life he has so lately saved. If his attachment to you is real, and not politic, he cannot but grant you this favor.' Now 1 had my own reasons for wishing to preserve peace between my uncle and David, and besides, I was foolish and vain enough to wish to show my uncle's guests what an attached follower 1 had in David Henderson; so, in spite of the pleading look in his honest brown eyes, I he d up the fatal goblet to him, saving, "One glass on such an occasion surely cannot hurt vou, David; do not let such a triffe come between us to cool our friendship or I shall really think that, after all, you do not care much for the life you so gallantly risked your own to save to-day.' 'Will you answer for the consequences?' was David's only reply, as he took the goblet into his trembling hands. 'To be sure, David; I'll settle matters with the little wife down at the lodge.'

so lightly answered!

"Henderson returned the old to break it nor?" goblet to the table with a n.w anxious question, accompanied son. How splendid it would light in his eyes. 'Just another, by the mute entreaty of her eye, be," continued Harry turning, to show that there's no ill feeling pierce. my very heart. Never as youth will, to the hopeful side between us, master,' he said, till that moment did I realize of things, "if we could find him with a strange, nervous laugh. what it was to have such a sin out yet and bring him back to 'Ah! I thought your scruples brought home to one. Turning Ruthven, to begin his life over would soon give way,' said my my guilty face away I cried out again! uncle, filling a smaller glass for him. How often this was repeat ed I cannot tell, for at last I mise, Mrs. Henderson, but it was could no longer bear to see not the laird who tempted him; David's flushed face and excited it was I, his friend.' I fled up- sweet tales of the Danish writer,

During the first week, I believe,

'Oh, Mr. Henry,' she cried, 'you in spite of many enquiries, I have don't mean to say that they have heard nothing of my boyhood's never saw Davie so had as he Harry, do you wonder that I promised me then that he would conduct this morning? never be the same again. He has "Oh, papa," said the boy kept that promise faithfully for with tears in his eyes, "I never been tempting him to taste spirits friend, whose character and life, Tell me anything but that. He in a thoughtless moment, I fear is so excitable, that the smallest I ruined. I shall always consider quantity is quite enough to make myself to have been David Henhim lose his self-command. I derson's worst enemy. And now, was on our wedding-day, and he was so pained and hurt by your

"Such a solemn question, and five year; surely, Mr. He are, thought such a little thing could the laird has not persuaded him do so much harm. I shall never The wife's forget about poor David Hender-

(TO BE CONTINUED.) "GOD SEES YOU."

Many children have read the basket of good things to be sent but I think the memory of her told in a sketch of is hlife :-- had been left by the reapers, hurt his tender feet, so that he could "In the dining-room with my Henderson was scarcely ever seen not keep up with the others, and The rough owner of the field almost reach him with his heavy whip; when Hans, whose hopeless case now suddenly filled him with new courage, stopped, and turned, and looking into the man's face said : "How dare you strike me when God sees you?"

The anger of his pursuer was sub-lued at once. Instead of striking the boy, he gently stroked his cheeks, asked his name, and gave him some money. The truth, of which little Tinns reminded him when about to do a mean and cruel act, seemed to make him ashamed of it at once, and to cause him to speak and act kindly.

How many wicked words and acts children as well as grown people might be kept from saving and doing, if they could at the right time be reminded, as that man was, of the presence of God! When you rise in the morning; through all the hours of the day; when you go to bed at night; in the darkness when you are fast asleep; when you are faithful in duty; when you are careless; when you are kind and loving, and when you are unkind and selfish and sinful-always, everywhere, God sees you. When you are tempted to speak harshly to your little brothers or sisters, or undutifully to your parents; when you are tempted to lie, cheat, or steal, to speak a profane or naughty word-ask yourself, "How dare I do this wicked thing, when God can see me? "----Mother's Magazine.

-A poor woman had a supply of coal laid at her door by a charitable neighbor. A very little girl came out with a small fire shovel, and began to take up a shovelful at a time, and carry it to a sort of bin in the cellar. We said to the child :-

"Do you expect to get all that coal in with that little shovel?" (Child, quite confused with the question), "Yes, sir, if I work long enough."

-Seek not to be rich, but eye; so, stung with remorse, I left stairs to my room be ore the Hans Christian Andersen. A happy. The one lies in bags, the the room and went to order a poor woman could speak again; pleasing story of his childhood is other in content, which wealth can never give.

The Family Circle.

SLANDER

Among the loathsome vices of the age, The most revolting to the saint and sage Is that of slandering an honest name, And rolling Virtue of ther spitless fame

The slanders rs and scandal mongers are

More to be dreaded than the scourge of war, Fheir poison'd tongues, like to the serpent s fange,

1.1 many a breast with sad and bitter pangs

And yet these vile calumniate is try Their guilt to hide, their deeds to justify They feign a grief, would rather not reveal This awful secret which they can't concent

" Ind you hear what happen'd poor Miss S ---- F

" I m gr +v d to think of her mamma's distress,

" And, Is said, there is not h bitter strife B-tween young B and his light-headed wife end Mr. D., I m told, can't pay his way,

And Mrs 1 and daughters dress to , gay. "Y m know the U's have always been too vain. " And Mr. G. was filted by Miss Jane

" All this, and more, I heard from dear Miss P

" But don't be telling what you hear if m me.

" For I was promised but you must excuse " My breach of faith to let you have the news "

And then in whispers from their fetid cents The standal flice like Satan a fiery darts Aud calumny, that foul and deadly blight Aud calumny, that is a man and stain 1 the robe of purest Has marr d and stain 1 the robe of purest S Moon.

JANEE MASON'S TROUBLES

(From the Sunday Magazine

CRAPTER X - C + te + 4

So they set off cheerfully from the ortfee-stall, and walked away down the street, with pretty brisk stops at first, but before they had walked for a couple of minutes peor Tabby was panting again "It's just something catches me here. It's such a rum sort o' feeling, said Tabby, forced once more to stand still 'I feel so horrid suck too," she said after a fex moments It's แปลก ส silence licere was nothing for it but to sit down again, and they sat down, this time both of them together, and stayed so, side by side, for a long time It was early in the morning still, and not very many people were about. They sat without doing anything for perhaps in hour, only talking a little now and then, and by the hour send Janet had begun to lasp her cold little hands about her neck, and to bent upon the pavement with her feet to try and seep them warm. It was a damp and shill December day, not the kind of day that anybody would choose willingly for sit-tung upon doorsteps. I winder if you could get on a little bit ing upon doorsteps. I wonder if you could get on a little bit now she axid at last. "Do you think you could get as far as the carpenters' yard: It would be so nice and warm there " "Oh yes, I can get on," suscered Tabby, Huntly, and she rose up, and they went to the yard but when they got there her little lumbs were trembling under her, and her face limits were accounting. u is white to her lips. They sat down together on one of the heaps of wood, and lanet stayed for a little max by herself and while, and then went away by hereof and begged, and towards the middle of the day begged, and towards the middle of the day she returned with a half-anxious, half-hopeful face. She had brought a little loaf with her, and some pieces of cold frue fish. "Look Tabby" she said "I got this from the shop in Albion street, you know, where there's the nice woman. I went in to huy the bread, and then what do you think I did?--I asked her it she would give me something for a little girl that was ill, and she gave me all this lovely fish. Just think ' gave me all this lovely fish Just think" eried Janet, quite flushed with pride at the brilliancy of her success. "Welt, it looks good," said Tably, regard-ing the pieces of fish with a rith success almost irritably. And then Japet finished her dinner in silence, and put the fish that Tabby had not eaten into her pocket. "It'll keep till supper time. I darosay you'll like it for supper," she said.

"Oh, yee, I dareasy I'll like it for supper," abby answered wearily. She had leant her head back against some I'll like it for supper," Tabby

"1 and then put it down. "I don't want no mere," she said abruptiy, "Ob, Tabby," cried Janet anxiously, " don't you like if?" "Oh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-the low of the white, too, with fear "Oh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-the white, too, with fear "Oh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-the better to-mor-"Oh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-the better to-mor-"Oh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-"Uh, yes, I dareesay I'll be better to-mor-"There ain't much wrong with mo. You should see what some people's like after they'ye been -; "che'l into But I suppose I'd best a should see what some people's like after they'ye a time some some the solut a some bene be bed when she spoke again. "I tain't nothing but a bruise. You'll be is sore sometimes, but they ain't nothing to signify. I've had 'em worse than that many a time. Just go to to sleep now, and think no more about 'em." "Uh like a deen o' mater," acid Tabby you like it?" So the went to bed, but when sho had got "Oh, yes, I likes it," said Tabby. "It's beautiful fish. Only I ain't hungry." "Do you-do you feel your chast so is in the down, and she got fevered and restless as "No, it sin't particular bad," answered the weary hours went on. Lato in the even-Tabby in an indifferent way "It sin't no ing her mother came home, more sober than better, and it ain't no worse. Ob, it don't she often was, and stared as she saw the signify-I'm all right enough," she said child stiting up with her heated cheeks. So she went to bed, but when she had got here she could not sleep. Through the long

"Why, it don't she often was, and stared as she saw the "she said child sitting up with her hoated checks. "Why, what have you been a doing with dinner in yourself?" she exclaimed, standing still as bby had not she looked at her, with the candle she had lighted in her hand.

I ain't been a doing nothing," replied Tably shortly. "Then why don't you lie down and go to sleep ' asked her mother. "Cause I can't," said Tabby. "I can't piled up planks of wood she seemed so tired lie down. There's something broke." that Janet said something to her presently "Something broke in the bedstead.

"I ve been a trying that dodge already." The child gave a curious laugh as the answered Tabby, "but some ow I gets caught, woman asked her this. up. Seems as if the bellows wouldn't go, "No, it ain't in the bed-tend, it's in me,"

"What bellows?' asked Janet, opening "Stuff and nonsense" exclaimed her mother, "you don't know what you're a saying of Lie down, I say, at once. You'd beter, or I II make you" "Tabby, I think if you would go home i and go to bed "They stayed in the yard till it was growing dack, and then they walked slowly back along the streets by which they had come. As they went Tabby, red to they had come. As they the streets by which they had come. As they the streets by which they had come. As they the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the few heroic things in this poor little desolate the adverte break down under it, as a child mot endure to break down under it, as a child mot or allow herself to be conquered her it the adverte to break down under it, as a child mot endure to break down under it, as a child mot endure to break down under it, as a child mot endure to break down under it, as a child mot endure to break down under it as the they have adverte to break down under it as the to break down under it as the top and the it there is a light the street it to be conquered her it there is a light to be conquered her it the top is a light to be conquered her it the top is a light to be conquered her it the top is a light to be conquered her it the top is a light to be conquered her it top is a light top top is a light top is the set of the set is the set of the set is the set of the set of the set is the set of the set is the set of the se more tenderly brought up might have done, nor to allow herself to be conquered by it. By a kind of natural, half-savago instinct she fought against it, and hardly—now or after-wards—would let it wring a cry from her. She could scarcely, panting at every step, when they got back to the house, climb up the long starcase that led to their attr. She the long staircase that led to their attir. She est down when at last they had reached the room, with her lips quivering. "Well, I guess I m beat for to-night," she said

"Ferhaps you li be better when you've had sleep. Don't you think you li be better the a almp hard and bad that she could see her ill and in pain and not try to do anything at all for her. She wont up to the bedudh after a few minutes, and stood there looking at her. "If you've took the fever, it'll be a nice to do," she said presently. "I ain't took no fever." replied Tabhy sharply. "Fover' It ain't fever. It was that there candleatick you throwed at me" "If you says that to any one else I'll give it you, 'tried her mother sayagely. "I ain't a going to say it to no one," replied Tabby sullenly.

said

upon it Her tone had got a little subdued when she spoke again. "It ain't nothing but a bruise. You'll be right enough in a day or two. Them bruises is sore sometimes, but they ain't nothing to signify. I've had 'em worse than that many a time. Just go to to sleep now, and think no more about 'em."

"I'd like a drop o' water," said Tabby. So her mother gave her some water, and labby. Bo her mother gave her some water, and then put the candle out and got into bed, and the long weary hours went on in silence while the child tried in vain to rest.

There was no going out next morning for Tabby when morning came she was too ill even to attempt to rise. Janet got up, and looked at her with a frightened face.

"I don't know what's a going to come to me," said Tabby, speaking still with that same painful cat h in her voice. "I feel so queer all over. Shouldn't wonder I was a voing to dia." going to die "Oh, Ta Tabby !' cried Janet, with a great gasp of terror. "Well, that's what I've been a thinking,

'cause I can't breathe, you know, and when you can't breathe you has to die. It'ud be rum-wouldn't it? But I don't know as I should mind," said Tabby carelessly. "I'd most as soon die, I think, as live to grow up and be like mother." With her heart sinking within her Land and be like mother." With her heart sinking within her Janet put on her clothes. When Tabby's mother got up sho ventured to ask her if they ought not to get a doctor, but the woman put her down angrily. Naturally she was afraid to send for a doctor, because if she had sent for one she knew that she should have to tell him how she had thrown the candlestick at the child the child. "She don't want no doctor.

Sho's just bit foverish. Let her stop in bed, and she'll come right enough,' she suid. So Tabby stopped in bed, and Janet went out alone to her usual wandering in the streets. It seemed such a long, lonely, weary day to her. It was half ended before anybody gave her so much as a halfpenny: abe was faint with hunger before ahe was able to buy her first morsel of bread. She did not dare to return home till she had got a little money to return home till alle had got a little money to take hack with her, and it was evening and quite dark before she got any money except the penny or two that she was obliged to spend in food. But at last she had three-pence in her pocket, and with that she went book to the house.

The room was all dark as she eagerly opened the door and went in. "Tabby' she called quickly as she stood on the threshold, and then Tabby's voice answered her. "Ob, do come along and make a light; I've been a looking for you such a time," she said. Janet struck a match, and lightod a candle.

Janet struck a match, and lighted a candle. Tabby was still sitting up in bed, as when ahe had left her, but the foverish color had left her cheeks now, and the thin little face was all white and drawn. "Mother stopped in all morning," she said to Janet, "but I ain't seen nebody this long while now. I thought you'd ha' been in before it was dark." "I tried so to come sooner," suid Janet, earnestly, "but I couldn't get anything. I've only got threepence now; but I couldn't stop any longer. I wanted so to get back. Tabby, do you think—do you think you're any better?" said the child with her wistful eyes.

"Oh no, I couldn't do that, same serv-quickly. "What's to hinder you?" asked Tabby. "Nobody 'ud know if you didn't tell. Just yon take it, and don't mind nothing." But Janet would not take it. "It'll keep till to-morrow. Perhaps you'll be better to-morrow. I've got a bit of bread for supper here," Janet mid. "I wish I could eat a bit o'bread again. But I don't think I shall eat no more suppers," said Tabby quietly.

"I ain't a going to say it to no one," replied "I don't believe the candlostick did no-thing to you. It ain't likely is should. It one thick of a dumb animal. Not caly now

Whither pdyruns are you going Going each with staff in hand '

Comp each with staff in hand ' What is the answer? The question suppos-es the persons addressed to be so evidently pilgruns, that the difference between them and those around attracts notice. Is it so, dear friends, as it applies to us? Does the world see such a difference in our habits, lik-ments, that is, obligad to ask. "When world see such a difference in our habits, lik-ings, Λc , that it is obliged to ask, "Where are you going?" Oh'it is a blossed testimony when lookers-on see a Christian so taken ur with the things of another world that they are led to enquire the reason. I am afraid many are so like the world in their ways that they are not known to be pilgrims at all, they just seem satisfied with the same home, the same conversation, the same pleasures. But when '' No, "she said, "Has Sammy are hous the same to may it from 'won' to have a draid of being wif'. '' Has Sammy asked your for givenes?'' conversation, the same pleasures. But when the question is asked, if you can say it from the bottom of your heart, and your life bears out what you say, and people know it to be all true, it is such a blessed thing to be able to answer :

We are going on a journey Going at our King's command We are going to Hispalace Going to the better land stranger, it is not worth while for me to do as the people of the land." Buildes, if we are in a foreign land, the language will be atrange to us, and however we may be inclined to set-tle down, the sounds we hear will always re-mind us that we are not at home. If we were to go to France or Gormany, we might learn to speak the language, but we would know very well it was not our own. Now God a pilgrims feel his this when they go into the world. There is such a difference in the conversation that they cannot feel at home, for though they understand the words, they cannot understand the things, and they say," How I with I could get among my own people?" Just as an Englishman would long to get back to England. I want you to understand that if you are pilgrims, yon will be as foreigners here. You will have many blessings by the way that the inhabitants of the land do not get, and they will have many things that you are not able inhabitants of the land do not get, and they will have many things that you are not able to seek after. They will get some kind of amusements they think very gay and merry; and money, perhaps, in a way you could not; and in earthly gains they may seem to prosper more than you, but you will have, as they cannot, a peace, s calmness, a satisfying joy, that will enable you to take any present loss very eraily, and to give up things that you would otherwise like to have, just because you feel there will be plenty of time for the enjoy-ment of them when you get home, and that it is not worth troubling about them by the way.

"I'm a stranger."--Dear friends, do not try to cast off that thought. Some of God's own people, very, very anxious to be useful to souls, for it is one of the first wishes of a con-varted heart to be a blassing to this poor world, mistake the way. You will never do them any good if they see you sitting down as though this were your reat, and grasping with the same engerness as they do its pleasures and though this were your rest, and grasping with the same engerness as they do its pleasures and its gains. I have seen Christians lose the power of doing good, or of witnessing for God, because they were not bearing the stamp of "strangers and pilgrims." People turn around and say, "These people care as much for money as they ever did," or, "They are just as selfah and unwilling to lend e hand to a neighbor. Look," they say, "how they run after pleasure; bow they spend their time in this or that, though they talk about the joy they have. Why, they are not a bit more matisf ed than we are!" I say again, dear friends, if you want to be

At one time my sister had trouble with her httle boy, and the father said, "Why, Sammy, you must go now and ask your mother's for-giveness." The little fellow said he wouldn't. The father says, "You must. If you don't go and ask your mother's forgiveness I shull have to undress you and put'you to bed." Ho was a bright, nervous little fellow, never sull a moment, and the father thougat—he will do it, he will have such a dread of being un-dressed and put to bed. But the little fellow wouldn't, so they undreesed him and put him when he came home at noon he said to his wif , "Has Sammy asked your for givenes?" "No," she said, "he hasn't." So the father weat to him and said, "Why, Sammy, why don't you ask your mother's forgiveness?" The little fellow shook his head. "Won't do it." "But, Sammy, you have got to." "Couldn't". The father went down to his offics and stayed all the afternoon, and when he came home he asked his wife, "Has Sam-my asked your forgiveness:" "No, I took something up to him and tried to have him eat, but he wouldn't." So the father went up to see him, and said: "Now, Sammy, just ask your mother's forgiveness and you may toong to the better land Remember, if you are a pilgrim, you will eat, but he wouldn't." So the father went be a stranger. The Apoetle puts together "strangers and pilgrims," and they cannot be separated, because every one whose name is enrolled in the heavenly city is a foreigner "Couldn't do it." The father coaxed, but the up to see him, and said "Now, Sammy, just ask your mother's forgiveness and you may be dreased and come down to supper with us." enrolled in the heavenly city is a foreigner "Couldn't do it." The father coaxed, but the up to earth. People say, "why don't you do this or that?" and our answer is. "I am a stranger, it is not worth while for me to do as the people of the land." Besides, if we are in the hardest thing a man has to do is to bewell he could, but he didn't want to. Any the hardest thing a man has to do is to be come a Christian, and it is the easiest. That may seem a contradiction, but it isn't. The hard point is because he don't want to. The The The hardest thing for a man to do is to give up his will. That night they retired, and they thought, surely early in the morning he will be up ready to ask his mother's forgiveness. The father went to him,-that was Friday morning,—to see if he was ready to ask his mother's forgiveness, but he "couldn't." The father and mother felt so bad about it, they could not est: they thought it was to darken their whole life. Perhaps that boy thought his father and mother didn't love hin. Just what father and mother didn't love hin. Just what throughout the day. So we many sinners think because God won't let they, if, ignoring the closet, them have their own way. The father went intus for it the mere extemp to his business, and when he came home he of prayer, which are pressed said to his wife. "Has Sammy asked your mergencies of business as the forgiveness?" "No." So he went to the little Trylor, D. D. fellow and said, "Now, Sammy, are you not "Can't," and that was all they could get out of him. The father could not eat any dinner, it A hen trod on a duck's for was like doath in the house. It seemed as if the mean to do it, and it did no how was going to "conquer his father and But the duck sad:

 of him. The father could not eat any dinner, it A hen trod on a duck s foot. She did not was like death in the honse. It seemed as if the mean to do it, and it did not hurt her much.

 boy was going to "conquer his father and But the duck sad:

 mother. Instead of his will being broken, it looked very much like as if he was going to break theirs. Late Friday afternoon. "Mother, so her wing struck an old goose who stood mother, forgive," says Sammy,—"me." And dose by.

 the little fellow said "me," and he sprang to his feet, and said "I have said it, I have she flew at the duck; but as she did so her said it. Now dress me, and take me down to foot tore the fur of a cat who was just then in see father. He will be so glad to know I the yard.

 have said it." And she took him down, and "I'll pay you for that" cried the cat, and when the little fellow came ho said, "I've she flew at the goose; but as she did so her said it, I've said it." Oh, my friends, it is tail brashed the coyo of a sheep who was near.

 ro easy to asy, "I will arise and go to my
 "I'll pay you for that" cried the sheep,

 God." It is the most reasonable thing and he ran at the cot; but as he did so his log you can do. Isn't it an unreasonable foot bit the foot of a dog who lay in the sun of powers and thou shalt be saved."

 "I'll pay you for that!" cried she as she

 D. L. Moody.
 "I'll pay

When Daniel was watched by his adverse. ran at the cow. When Daniel was watched by his adversa. ran at the cow. rice, it was discovered that he was in the habit. What z run there was' The horse flew at three times a day, of praying to God Now, the cow; and the cow at t. dog; and the dog of course, I do not mean to affirm that the rr.le. at the sheep, and the sheep at the cat. and which he had Inid down for himself is a law, the cat at the goose, and the goose at the for every one, so far, at least, as the number duck, and the duck at the hen. What a in this or that, though they tark about the joy which he had hid down for himself is a law, the cal at the goode, and the goode at the they have. Why, they are not a bit more in order one, so far, at least, as the number duck, and the duck at the hen. What a satisfied than we are!" I say again, deer friends, if you want to be order in order to keep up their spiritual "Hi, hi! What is all this?" cried the man of any use in winning the souls of others, con-fees yourselves "strangers and pilgrims," and while reservation of high this noise. You may stay here," he said to while ready to do a kind act for anyone, show toned religious health, that we should all have the hen. But he drove the duck to the pond, that you care nothing for the straws the world sense consecrated to devotion and the geose to the field, and the care to the too, most wholesome and important,-yet we must not allow it to overlay this other truth, that we can continuously maintain that high spirituality of daily life only by observing stated sees ins of communion with God. The stated sees ins of communion with God. The apostolic precept "Pray without ceasing," must not be so expounded as to explain away the injunction of the Master. "Enter into thy closet an, shut thy door." The daty of serv-ing to at all times, and on all days, must not be so enforced as to rule out of every day the "still hour" of the closet, or to shut out of every week the special and new lar blacks. of every week the special and peculier blessing of the Sabbath Yet at is undenable that this is the tendency of much that is said and written on this subject at present. It is affirmed that it is not so important to go regular-If into the closet, as it is to have the whole life prayerful, and that it is not of so much consequence to give an exalted character to the Sabbath as it is to make every day a Sabbath. But a business man like Daniels bringing his common sense to bear upon this matter, brushes away all these specious and fine-spun utterances, as easily as one sweeps from his path the gossamer of the morning. He sees at once that such a course, instead of bringing the whole day up to the level of the closet, or the entire week up to the level of the Sabbath. will inevitably sink them both into the depths will inevitably sink them both into the depths of carthinese and sin. He knows that periodicity is, in some in-thermal sector of the law of his being, and that if he set that at defiance, disaster must ensue. The tear and wear of the day must be repaired by the s'eep of the night, and the exhaustion of labor necessitates the regular observance of set times for the taking of food. Now it is on the minimum in a minimum metters quite similar in spiritual matters. The maintenance of vigorous The maintenance of vigorous religous life lemands the stated enjoyment of the privileges f the closet

We should ruin our phyiscal constitutions if we were to give up our regular meals, and if we were to give up our regular meals, and think to preserve our health by carrying in our pockets a supply of food, from which we should keep helping ourselves continuously throughout the day. So we shall destroy our plety, if, ignoring the closet, we seek to subtitute for it the mere extempore ejaculations if prayer, which are pressed out of us by the of prayer, which are pressed out of us by the mergencies of business as they arise -W. M

" I'LL PAY YOU FOR THAT."

A hen trod on a duck's foot. She did not mean to do it, and it did not hurt her much. But the duck said: "I'll pay you for that" So the duck flow at the hen, but as she did so her wing struck an old goose who stood who had the care of them. "I cannot have reverently with many a hearty laugh, or the this noise. You may stay here," he said to tears coming into their eyrs. It is their child-the hen. But he drove the duck to the pond, hood come back again in visible shape.— and the genese to the field, and the cat to the Scruber's Monthly.

That is Christ's doctrine about anything that tempts to sin. It may be as harmless as a hand, as useful as a hand, cut it off if it '' a perpetual temptation. It may be as harmless as an eve, as useful as an eye, plu k it out rather than let it lure you to hell. This glass of wine-what harm in it? Is it not one of God's good gifts? Is it not a '' fruit of the vine''? Is it not that which '' cheereth God and man''? Shall I cut it off? Ay 'cut it off, though it were as bright as the eye and as useful as the hand, if it tempts thee to evil. But it does not tempt me: I am strong

But it does not tempt me; I am strong The withes that bind other men have no power over me. I can sleep in Delilab's lap and over me. I can sleep in Delilah's lap and wake and laugh defiance at the Phillstines. It only tempts my brother, my child, my friend: or the poor, weak-willed creature that cites my moderation as an excuse for his self-indulgence. "It were better for one that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones."

little ones.

Till the wine-cup neither tempts you nor your weaker brother to sin, it is surely Christian to cut it off. Is it not?—Christian Weelly

SELECTIONS.

- Friends will not believe you love them if you constantly remind them of their little faults. Parents, above all others, have the privilege with their children; but they, too, should use it so as "not to provoke them to wrath."

— A moment's work on clay tells more than an hour's labor on brick. So, work on hearts should be done before they harden. During the tirst six or eight years of child-life mothers have chief s_n , y, and this is the time to make the deepest and most enduring impressions on the youthful mind.

PRIDE-Dr. Franklin says, Pride is as cruel PRIDE-DT. Frankin says, Fride is as cruci-albeggar 33 Want, and a great deal more saucy. When you have bought one fine thing you must buy ten more, that your appearance may be all of a piece. It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it.

THE SAYRNA WHIP.-Very many years ago when I was serving in one of H. M. ships at when I was serving in one of H. M. ships at Smyrns, I remember my gratification at seeing the gentle method there adopted by the residents for urging on their donkeys—much employed by them in going between their country residences and their various offices and "establishments" in that important mercantile town. Nor stick, nor whip, nor goad, nor spur was everthought of, but simply a small light iron rod about fifteen inches long, having an "eye" or loop at one end, and there or four small rings of the same metal attached thereto These, shaken close to the animal's ear. madu Ğat. These, shaken close to the animal's ear, made him again shake his aural appendages and go him again shake his aural appendages and go ahead forthwith. Let any of your readers try the experiment with a bunch of keys at the end of a small stick, and they will feelinclined, with me, to urge the general adoption of the "Smyrna whip" throughout the length and breadth of the land.—I am, sir, yours, &c. ASHLEY LA TOUCHE (Commander R. N.)— Anumal World.

A FAMILY JOURNAL. -- In a certain farmhouse twenty years ago a great blank book was kept, and labelled Home Journal. Every night some one made an entry in it. Father was sept, and taoened atometry in it. Father set down the sale of the calves, or mother the cut of the baby's cyctooth; or, perhaps, Jenny wrote a full account of the eleighing party wrote a full account of the sleighing party last night, or Bob the proceedings of the l'hi Beta club, or Tom scrawled "Tried my new gun. Bully. Shot into the fence and John-son's old cat." On toward the middle of the book there was an entry of Jenny's marriage, and one of the younger girls had added a description of the bridsmaids' dresses, and long afterward there was written, "This day father died," in Bob's trembling hand. There was a blank of many months after that. But nothing could have served better to bind that family of headstrong boys and girls together than the keeping of this book. They come back to the old homestead now, men and women with grizzled hair, to zee their mother who is still living, and turn over its pages reverently with many a hearty laugh, or the

SCHOLAR'S NOTES.

(From the Barean Questi n Book.) IWALLE IPSONS IN THE . IPK OF SOLONON.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE,- The first quarter closed with a lesson upon Absniom's denth, which occurred B. C. 10, 3 - Over this death David mourned differencely, but maily he arose and returned in trimpph to Jerusalem handly he arose and returned in triumph to Jerusalem His is maining enemies were then sublued after which satan induced him to number the people for which act cool sout fearful pestilence. Through penitence and in-e reasion this was finally stayed, whoreupon David pur-thas d ground, erected an altar, and offered sacritices, which God accepted by sending itre from heaven to con-sume them. By this token David knew this was the when them, b) the total participation of the way to chose spot for Gold permanent worship. 1 Chron. 22 1 2Chron. 4 1. This led him to result his effort a temple to God, and in preparation for this Drwid's hnige to Solomon was given some eight years after Absolom's death

LESSON 1 June 21

DAVIDS CHARGE TO SOLOMON.	(About B	¢,	1015]
READ 1 Chron, 28/1	10

۰.		3
	ionic. Courty to Goldman dr. or-
	, t.
	•	1
	COLDEN TINT -From Couth God
1	of thy father, and serve Pan with a per-	:
	feet heart and with a willing n. nd 1
	Caron 23 9.	•

5

ŝ.

HOME READINGS = M, -1 Chron. 28, 1-19, 7 = 2 and 7 -1-13, W = 1 Chron. 21 -18 (0, 7h, -1 Chron. 2, 1-16, K, -1 Chron. 29, 1-9, Sa, -1 Chron. 29, 0-28, N = Psa, 91, -1 16.

O' TLINE : Ministry to God appointed-1 As to what men shall do, v. 1 ft 2. As to how men shall do, v. 7-10

QUESTIONS, etc.-Recile the TITLE What species and of this charge is stated in the Goldsey TEXT The scheral lesson is stated in the Goldsey TEXT The scheral lesson is stated in the Toric, recite it. Recite the OUTLINE. What was was our last lesson from the Old lessament Reach the INTRODUCTORY NOTE, and tell what had occurred between the time of that lesson and of this. How many years intervened i

1. Ministry appointed as to what men shall do v. 1-6 : Pr 75. 7. Dan 2. 21. Ministry is the act of ministering or serving.

- What proposed ministry to (so d is named in τ , 2.1 flow long before had be proposed this t 2 Sau 7, 1-3.
- 7.1-3.
 Road his desire expressed in Pss. 132, 3.5.
 Who checked this purpose of David's t 2 Nam 7.4.7.1. Kings 5.3. Why checked t
 To what ministry not proposed by David did God call him t v.4.
 What lines of munistry to God were chosen for Solo from t v.5.6.
 Read I Cor 12. --11, and explain how it illustrates our Fourier.
- unr Topic.
- Read 1 Cor. 1. 27. 28. and toll how it illustrate God a independence of men.
- What mip' stry has God assigned you ! 2 Ministry appointed as to how men shall do y. 7 10 Pr

21. 3, 4 , Iss. 1. 16, 17. 24. 3. 4, 188 1, 10, 17. .iow did God require that Solomon should act t v 7, llow does David ask the people to act t v, 8, How does David charge Solomon to act t v, 9, 10.

How does God require you to act ! What light does this lesson shell— I Upon the way to choose a business ? 2. Upon what religious work to do ? 3. Upon whom to consult at all times ?

- UOUTRINE God a sovereign. Ps. 103. 19 145. 1 Tim. 6 14, 15.

LE8505 11

JULT 9.1 SOLOMON'S CHOICE. (About B. C. 1015.)

READ 2 Chron. 1, 17. 25 TOPIC Making choice of divine wise.

GOLDEN TEXT -If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men likes: Hy.-James 1 5.

 \mathbf{X}

HOME READINGS.-M.-2 Chron. 1. 1-17. T.-Prov. 1-19. W.-Prov. 3. 1-18. 73.-Matt. 7. 7-14. F.-Mark 10. 35-45. Sc.-Luke 18. 35-43. S.-Ps. 72. 1 20-OUTLINE:

1. The royal offering, v 1-0.

2. The great opportunity, v. 7. 3. The wise choice, v. 8-10. 4. The Divine bleasing, v. 11-17.

QUENTIONS, etc.-Recit the Title and Ort-LINE. The general lesson is stated in the Toric. recits it. What special encouragement have we in the Golden TEXT I in what year did the orents of our lesson hap-pen I What is the CONNECTING LINE with the preceding lesson I

- Zhe Howal Offering, v. 1-C; 1 Kings 3.4. 1 Chron. 29, 21. Heb. 9 13-14.
 Raplain the three things said of Solomon in v. 1.
 From v. 2 6,tell. (1) Why Solomon want to Gibeon;
 (2) Who went with him; and. (3; What they did
 - What offering grander than this has been made in what respects was it grander i

The Great Opportunity, v. 7 Math. 7. 7. 8. Mark U. 36-51, James 1 5.

Read with v. 7, 1 Kinge J. 5 What was this "great opportunity I" What opportunity equally great have you I

3 The IFise Choice, v. 8 10, Josh 24, 15 Prov. 3 5 6 Matt. 4, 22.

NORTHERN MESSENGER.

For what would most persons ask, " to them Gol should say "Ask what I shall give theet" For what would you ask r

What did Solomon ask i v. 10. Why i

What do Solomon's words in v > 0, which if Have you a spirit like that in him t

4. The Divine Blessing, v 11 17, Prov 21, 21, Mat' 6 38, 25, 34, Rom. 2-6, 7. What blessings were granted Solomon 6 v. 12 Breauso of what did God do so much 6 v. 11 How did God fulfit this great promise 1 v 1.3 17 To what should should be promise 1 v 1.3 17

Fo what conduct should this encourage us

 Whey is Window better thun gold ?
 When one blessing should we mak of God ?
 When one blessing should we mak of God ?
 THEME The free sgency of man 1 / (k 13 11, Mat 11 28 John 5, 10). DALTRINK

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. There is a great hue and cry in some papers about the wicked and wanton cruelty of women in wearing the prepared skins of birds on their hats. It is the same old story over again, "The woman tempted me, and I did eat." Who is it that kills the birds and dresses their skins, and who conceived the idea of using them for adorning the head-gear of woman? Not a woman I'll be bound. More likelv some agaciously wicked man, who saw a market ahead for all the birds he could trap and skin slive. Woman is not cruel—the sight of pain is repulsive and ahocking to her. She wears birds and feathers on her hat, to be sure, and that she does sometimes overleap the bounds of good sense in following fooliah fashions we will freely admit; but convince her that she is doing a cruel thing, and she will abandon it. She would not wantonly kill a bird and pluck its feathers for the adorn-ment of her person, much less flay one alive to bette preserve the brilliancy of the plum-age. It is men and boys who do this—they create the demand by supplying the article, and when women, ignorant usually of tho means used to secure them, wear the glossy trophies of their cruel cupidity, they are called heartless and cruel. trophies of their cruel cupidity, they are called heartless and cruel.

tropnies of their cruel cupidity, they are called heartless and cruel. That it is wrong to thus destroy wantonly and cruelly animal life for the mere gratifi-cation of whim and folly, none will deny, but stop the practice where it begins, with those who supply the market. M., is Western Firme Journal.

A WORD TO TRACHERS -Follow up the scholars. You can never know how power-A WORD TO TRACHERS -Follow up the scholars. You can never know how power-fully they are being won upon b being cared for. Let it quietly grow upon them that they are in your thoughts, and you soon get an in-fluence over them which gives a tenfold power to your teachings. You come to be more than a routine teacher, and as you love your schelars you are loved by them. We call to mind a minister's daughter who was as faithfully looked after as though everything depended on the teacher and nothing on home instruc-tion. The teacher was sorry to miss her from the class. She hoped it was not on account of illness. Should she not see her next Sun-day? and so on, in a few thoughtful, loving words, which showed that she vas never for-gotten and never uncared for. At length the words, which showed that she was never for-gotten and never uncared for. At length the scholar full sick of a fatal and contagious disease, in which it was imprudent for her teacher to see her. But being asked just before she died what message she would send her, "Tell her," she replied, "that she was the best teacher I over had she tanght me most, and I loved her most." Anybody can see that a Christian teacher who can win a scholar's love like this, is almost sure to win a soul to Christ. Nor can any one tell how far in this case faithful teaching may have helped the scholar to have no foar of dying, and to meet the king of terrors with a dignity and courage and quiet trust in God which was impresive and almost sublime.—S. S. Tunts. — Egyntian 'adias would regard it as high.

- Egyptian ladies would regard it as high-ly indecorous to display upon the streets the attractions nature has bestowed upon them, or the magnificence of their dress. When they the magnificence of their dress. the magnificence of their dress. When they go about the streets of Cairo on shopping ex-peditions, they cover themselves with a dismal robe of black. As a general rule, whatever they are compelled to exhibit to the public gaze is of a simplicity frequently amounting to ugliness, while what they reserve for private inspection is gorgeous and ornate in the ex-terne. tre mo.

- The pleasant summer days are the bear for our younger friends to obtain subscribers to the MESSENGER It will take a few more than ten thousand subscribers for it to reach the sixty thousand asked to begin the fall and winter campaign with. The publishers of the MRSERNORN anticipate for it the largest circulation of any paper in America. There is ample field for it, as it is not confined to any particular sect or division in society. It con tains a message for all, and it is cheap enough to be bought by every one. The publishers hope to obtain the ten thousand new subscribers asked for before the end of September, and the fact that the receipts for the months of March, April and May of this yoar were thirty-six per cent greater than those for the corresponding quarter of last year, show that this hope is not entirely unfounded.

NO ICE.

Subscribers finding the figure 7 after their name will bear in mind that their term will expire at the end of the presentmonth. Early remittances are desirable, as there is then no loss of any numbers by the stopping of the paper.

Advertisements.

PHYSI IANS' OPINIONS ON "DRESS AND HEALTH."

It would seem that the necessity of dress re-form is so greathat doctors hold only one opin ion on the subject. Dr. Coderre, whose views on vaccination are so honest and so strong, is at one with the publishers on this question. Dr Watless represents the Homopathists who are always found in sympathy with the dictates of Hygiene. Hygiene. May 18th, 1876.

May 18tb, 1876. I bave perused with much pleasure the pages of your publication, entitled "Dress and Health." The sulject is one the importance of which I am continuously advocating. Your book is well written and very instructive to those who may have a desire to enjoy life in having their internal soft organs right and in the right place, for these organs can only be suited to perform their functions healthfully, when impedes the circulation of the blood through impedes the circulation of the blood through inevitably punished proportioustely without re-commendation to mercy. Your little work is designed to do much good and should be in the precepts practised. If so, the results to the health of the present and succeeding genera-tions would be incalculable. JOHN WANLESS, M.D (Translated from the French.)

(Translated from the French.)

MONTREAL, May 22, 1876 Messre John Dougall & Co .

MARTIANAL, MAY 20, 1010 Marts John Dougall & Co. GENTLEMEN,—It is with pleasure I to-day roply to your letter of the latinst, in which you request my opinion as to the usefulness and worth of your little work "Dreas and Heal-b," which has lately issued from your press. Hav-ing read the greater pait of this little work, I have no doubt that it will produce, in society, the most happy effects Reing essentially ad-dressed to the ladies, it will not fail to mak-them reflect on their manner of dreasing and on the disastrous effects of the fashions of the day. The abuses which are described are in great part the cause of the sickness and freble ness of young people, as well as of mothers, who see with regist premature old age. "Dress and Health" should work great re-form in the dress of ladies, especially on those who will peruse it attentively. I carrently recom mend it to be read by those who desire to preserve their health and that of their darghters, and that thry put into practice the wise and salutary rules i atd down by the E: thors for the moral and physical health of woman. I am gentlemen, yours &c., J. EMERT-CODERRE, M. D.

J. EMERT-CODERRE, M. D.

-- It should by remembered that every new yearly subscriber to the Naw Douision Monthly whose subscription is sent in before the July number is issued will receive the July number free, and his subscription will date from July. The enlargement of and improve-ments in the Magazine will date from that number. number.

- There are but a few hundred of our tem-peratee tracts left, but as yet a fair stock of apples of Gold, which is, however, diminishing rapidy. Those requiring these valuable Gos-pel Mexaengers should order at once. The price is $1 for three bundred, comprising 1,200 pages, the size of the NEW DOMINION MONTHLY

TI

THE	SUBSCRIPTIONS
	for the AIESSENGER are:
1	capy$ 0.30
10	copics
	copies
50	cepies 11.50
100	copies
	copics
	J. DOUGALL & BON,
	Publishers,
	- Montreal.
	JOHN DOUGALL,
	2 Spraco street,
	New York.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

..

COMBINATION PRIZE COMPETITION.

I. We offer the following prizes to the persons who mult us the largest amounts for all the publications on or before AUGUST 15th, 1878 :

For largest r	moun	Jat 1	lat prize, $20
For second l	BERCH	2nd do Fi
For third	40	du	Jrd	do	12
l'or Jourth	do	do	114	do	- 15
For fifth	do	do	5th	du
Forsixth	du -	do	61h	do	7
Forseventh	do	du	7th	do	- 6
For eighth	du	do	816	do	- 5
Formuch	do	do	9th	do	1
Fortensh	do	da	10th

If. We want this year to introduce the NEW DURING ... Mostary overywhere, and will give an additional pr subscriptions to this magazine during the argent mount in subscriptions to this magazine during the time above stated whether they compete for the other prizes or not. All the subscriptions for this prize count in the other re-

iff. To the one who would in the largest number of subscriptions to the New Domistor Mostniry, either for three, six or twelvo months, we will give a prior of $10This price is not open to the winner of No. 2. Three or ix months will count as much as a whole to ar

Mr months will count as much as a whole year IV. To the person whosends us during this competition the largest amount in subscriptions to the Nontingues Muserware we will give a prize of §10. This is one to any competitor for the other prizes, and the at jount's set will count in for the first competition.

V. To the person who sends in the second largest a houst in subscriptions to the Nonthern Missever we will give a prize of $5. This leaded open to all com-petitors and the an constant count in the first comdition.

VI A price of $5 will be given to the person seaded (a the hirpost amount for subscriptions from New to a). Innd

VII. A prize of $5 will be given to the person of here, is the Lirgest amount for subscriptions from Manita

VIII. A prize of $5 will be given to the person so us the largest amount for sub-arty long from 1 Columbia

The following are the prices for the publication of cluded in the competition and the commission. If exto competitors

	Subscript on	In include On Londition en
	post paid.	to as to make
DALLY WITCHS.	$3'00	50
TRI-W REELS	2 00	$
WRKLL1	1 10
NEW DOSINION MONDERS	1.55	30.
BORTHFRY MESSINGER	.0
Club of 10	2 50	ю
WERRAY WITTING WITH ?	12 22.4	50

It will be seen by the above table to it e cry one wo h bg for a prise is surged a full commission on new sub-scribers under sny? request noces, and mar obtain a price as well. It should so to be forget on that no subscriber is as well. Itshould out be forgorien that no subscriber is allowed a commission on bisown subscription, it is only given to canvasters who obtain subscription. All com-peti or should invariably collect the full subscription prices that the context be a sharp one-one worth win-ning. All competition lass must be marked 'in compa-tition'. Without this or similar notice the mount seat channel be read must be no prize list is made no exanot be reco mucod when our prize lise is made up.

> JOHN DOUGALL & SON. ntroal

DRESS AND HEALTH, OR HOW TO BE STRONG

A Book for Ladies. Price 30c, post fre

st free. JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal Publishers.

HISTORY OF THE

St. Catherines News.

GUIBORD CASE !!!

"It is beautifully illustrated and a valuable history record of the conflict between the civil and ecclesinstical configuration of the conflict party sound.

It torms an interesting record well worth porus il "

"A nost roland containing a full and correct h story of this now colchr-tod date."-Bandas Barger 'It may be dejended on as authenit.."-Confederate, Mount Forest. "A case that may often be required for reference in the

"A case that may often be required for reference in the fature '-Oshawa Findicator. "We have perssed with much interest a tail and cor-rect history of the celebrated Guiword ('ase, which hav-justbeen issued from the Montreal 'Virwasi office. ' It is well so up, and as a record of this great case is worth preserving."- Guelpu Mercary. "It will doubtless have a large sale, and will be read with interiat."- Fort Hope Tases. "The Athentic an interesting record of the same

"The publication is an interesting record of the care, and it will be the more esteemed in the by and by when seconds can only be had to books such as it for data per taming to a matter rendered so menforable,"-Kingaton thunk to a many of a many listness to most a crueral want for "This book has been issued to most a crueral want for a full and complete history of this now world famous affair."--Coaucook Oberrer.

Price-in paper covers, foc, post free; neatly bound in clofh, $1, post free. J. DOEUALL. & MUN.

The NORTHINGS MESSRSYCKE is printed and published on the 1st and 26th of every month, at Nos. 21% and 220 St. Jamme street, kunitush, by Joan Dorgan. & Kun, composed of John Boogali, of New York, and John Helpsth Dosgall and J. D. Dongail, of Montreal.

Publishers, Montro, I.