A Berlin correspondent says that the first accurate account of the strength of the Russian army under the new system has just been published. The entire force, including Cossacks, Militia, &c., would amount to almost three milhon men, but the actual fighting power may be set down at 1 800,000, or about a third stronger than formerly.

A London correspondent says that signs of political activity are beginning.

SPEECH:

Mr. President and Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I have much satisfaction in meeting you at this early and convenient season.

I have to congratulate you upon the organization of the North West police force and the success of its operations. It has materially aided in the creation of confidence and good will among the Indian tribes, in the suppression of the liquor traffic, the establishment of legitimate trade, the collection of duties, and, above all, in maintaining security for life and property in the territory. Another effect of the presence of the police in the North West has been to enable the Government to largely reduce the strength of the military establishment in that country.

A Rout at Lord Lansdowne's. "Tuesday morning, Feb. 26th, 1838:— Lady Mary Fox received us as she pro mised, and most kindly, and I remaine near her all the evening. Lady Lausdowne shook hands with me, and was most kind in her reception of me. The house is beautiful. It stands in Berkeley Square, on a square of ground, surrounded by a high wall, and with a lodge at the gate. We entered at one gate, drove ATLANTIC SERVICE round a circle, and came out another way to avoid confusion. We were received in an immense hall, surrounded with statues, with a parquetted floor of different-colored woods-mosaic. The shape of the hall was a long ellipse; the center part was covered with carpet, and was lower than the two ends which ascended into cupolas, which were lighted, so that the lights were concealed, and had the effect of a blaze of light coming from above without our knowing beautiful, the ceiling ornamented with carving and gilding. From this opened a library through which every one passed to the reception room—a fine room; from this a small boudoir, from this a large drawing-room hung with yellow satin, mirrors, and some beautiful pic tures; and from this the tea-room, at the entrance of which were two of Canova's statues—a Venus, and a cast of his dancer. entrance of which were two of Canova's statues—a Venus, and a cast of his dancer.

"At the end of the room there was a tea-table, behind which stood three women neatly dressed, to give tea and coffee, and a small table of refreshments, behind which stood two or three servant men in livery; there were fruits, ices, cakes, preserves, and champagne. They make very little of refreshments here. In small parties nothing is given but tea. There is a table with tea and cakes, and any one may go and be served; generally some elderly lady sits at tt, or else it is handed; but, unless it is understood to be a grand party, nothing is given but the canon provided the continue of the patron and provided the canon provide small clothes, and point lace ruffles, and wore his sword and bagwig [the dresses were on account of the 'drawing room,' the Queen's birthday]. He is tall and ugly, with large features, and a curious, nervous, rabbit like motion of the nose. I heard him rattling away some nonsense to the young ladies about the dreadful discoveries he had made at the drawing-room about the ladies by means of the cross lights—discoveries which he made a vow never to reveal. They say he is as remarkable for his powers of making himself agreeable in a ball-room as for any others. The Duke of Argyle brought his daughter, Lady Paget, to look at my dress, which he said was o.ie of the handsomest in the room. I never saw daughter, Lady Paget, to look at my dress, which he said was one of the handsomest in the room. I never saw anything like the magnificence of the jewels, stomachers, and head-dresses of diamonds—enough to dazzle one's eyes. We left the room at about half-past twelve, and were in the large hall (iuto which the door opens), and the cloak room, until two, and the noise was enough to deafen one. There were five servants in a row, screaming as if they were mad: 'Lady—'s carriage stops the way; 'Wanted, the Earl of—'s servants; 'Lady—is coming out!' 'Whose carriage next?' and so on, till I thought I should have been deaf. We were very glad to find ourselves at last at home and in bed, though I had a very entertaining evening. I said to Lady Mary Fox that I would rather talk to Lord Brougham than any one else, but he talk ed such nonsense that I told her afterward that I was very much disappointed in him. She had the malice to tell him this, and he returned in an attitude of contrition, saying: 'I'm so sorry! Had I known what you expected of me, I would have brought a little footstool mounted it, and made you the best speech I could.' Of course this made it worse, but we both laughed."—" Some Old Letters," Scribner's for February.

Dante Gabriel Rosseti. at once perceive that he has moved in somewhat narrow range with respect to both the thought and method of his com positions; but that he approaches Tennyson in simplicity, purity, and richness of tone. His dramatic and lyrical powers are very marked, though not fully developed; if he had been restricted to verse as a means of expression, he no doubt would have added greatly to our English song. Sonnets like the "Bri-dal Birth" and "Nuptial Sleep," and poems so profoundly thoughtful as "The Sea Limits" and "The Woodspurge, place him among his foremost contem-poraries. He has had a magnetic influporaries. He has had a magnetic influence upon those who come within his au cole. Should he complets "The House of Life," upon its original projection, he will leave a monument of beauty more lasting than the tradition of his presence. His verse is compact of tenderness, emotional ecstasy, and poetic fire. The spirit of the master whose name he bears clothes him as with a white garment. And we should expect his as sociates to be humbled lovers of the beautiful, first of all, and through its ministry to rise to the lustrous upper heaven of spiritnal art.—E.C. Steadman, in Scribner for February.

ANDREW J. ARMSTRONG,

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color. A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimus decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formascalp arrests and prevents the forma-tion of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.
