He said that they were said to have advantageous arrangemaking most satisfactory progress, ments with the ocean lines as regards and, although they had been in their new home only two months, they were in a comfortable condition. The Do-minion Government had granted them the usual homesteads, and two townships have been taken up in this way. All the available land in two other townships has been reserved for further contingents of Welshmen who are looked for. The soil there is of the best quality, and is easily cultivated. The country is covered with poplar bluffs from which large quantities of timber for building and fuel purposes can be obtained.

"When I left," continued Mr. Griffith, "the settlers were actively en-gaged in building homes for themselves, and were well satisfied with the country. The settlers were particularly struck with the richness of the soil, enabling the crops to be produced without irrigation. instrumental in sending the settlers to Canada, intrusted to Mr. Griffith two Welsh ensigns for presentation to the colony. On account of this, and in recognition of the efforts put forth by Sir John on behalf of the colony, it is probable the settlement will be named Llewellyn after him. Mr Griffith has received reports showing that the old settlement in Patagonia, where 2,000 Welsh colonists are still living, has been again visited by disastrous floods.
The people, he said, had been compelled to flee to the hills to save their lives. He believed that this fact would induce many of these settlers to follow the example of the men who had come to Canada. There was also a probability that many Welshmen now residing in the United States would cross the border to join their country-men. These men were all thoroughly acquainted with farming conditions, and it was anticipated that the colony near Saltcoats would become one of the most flourishing districts in the Northwest Territories.

CIRCLING THE GLOBE BY LAND

Railway Will Be Built Some Day-He Does Not Care to Repeat His Journey.

Chicago, Aug. 22.-Harry De Windt, who left Paris to circle the world via the all-land route by Bering Straits, has got as far eastward as this city, and is now at the Auditorium, under the same roof as the Grand Duke Boris, who in San Francisco lately denounced some of De Windt's statements as rubbish.

Mr. De Windt says he landed at Cape Prince of Wales in Alaska June 19, three months to a day after he left Paris. His railway journey from Paris to Irkutsk, the eastern capital of Siberia, occupied exactly nine days. Thereafter for three months he went northeastward into the long tongue of Siberia that juts into the Pacific, and skirted the Arctic Ocean for hundreds of miles to Bering Straits, which he crossed half by boat and somewhat on

De Windt, who had three companions, determined to demonstrate that the proposed Trans-Siberian and Alaskan Railroad was practicable, and that it would be possible to make the jour-ney from Paris to New York by rail if such a line was ever constructed. We have no doubt that the railroad will be constructed sometime, and believe it will not be many years before one may take the trip by rail," said "Ten thousand dollars, however, would not induce me to take ISOLATED. On the Arctic, in extreme Northeast-ern Siberia, De Windt entered a village of exiler who had not seen a white man for thirty years, whose inhabitants were unacquainted with the progress of the world in all that time. That village of Robinson Crusoes welcomed him as a voice from the un-known, and he told them all he could of the world's latest history.

the same trip again as we made it.'

There was a space along the Arctic waste where Mr. De Windt and his companions traveled for three weeks without encountering a soul or seeing a hut. There their sufferings were in vain attempt to thaw out. There the Vicomte Cluichamp got both his feet frozen. It is a country into which no Russian has ever penetrated, said Mr. De Windt, for the reason that nothing exists to draw them. The savages, who are not Eskimos, but a distinct race, are flerce and hostile. At the end of three weeks the first but they came to was filled with persons dying of

to the Siberian officials. "I owe it to the governor-general of Siberia that I got through at all. He telegraphed ahead, sent messages ahead, and had reindeer, dogs, sleds, provisions and hospitality arranged for us. Indeed, the officials at every point did all they could for us and were courtesy itself. Mr. De Windt estimates the distance he traveled from Paris to Bering Straits as 7,950 miles. After leaving Irkutsk, and before reaching the Arctic, he went through an immense territory, into which the Russians contemplate extending a branch of the Trans-Siberian Railway. "That," said he "constitutes perhaps the richest gold region in the world. It is richer than the Klondike. Americans in Alaska, many of them, asked me if I wouldn't advise them to go over to Siberia and stake out claims. An American or any other foreigner has no show in The mines are here by one millionaire under the Czar, and it is utterly impossible for anyone else to get an opening"

COLDEST TOWN ON EARTH. In speaking of the trip of 2,000 miles to Yakutsk, in horse sleighs, De Windt from the world for 30 years, and has says Yakutsk has the reputation of bethe coldest town on earth, and the liles' lot face to face.

goes on to remark:
"The distance was covered by means of 122 drivers and 732 horses. The total cost for each sleigh was $150." From Yakutsk the travelers' jour-ney took them 700 miles to Verkoyansk, thence northward 1,300 miles to the town of Srednikolynisk.

"The sleighs that brought us from Irkutsk were discarded at Yakutsk for small reindeer sleds, about seven feet by three, covered in by canvas and reindeer skins," said Mr. De Windt. "Bear skins formed the beds, and there we lay at full length, day af-ter day, night after night, for the next two months, while a Yakute driver urged on his deer train. Light furs were useless in that region.

IN FROZEN WILDS. "The traveler bound for the Kolyma district must take all his provisions in a frozen state, for food is scarce along that lonely tract of 1,800 miles. The reindeer stations are 150 to 200 miles apart, but shelter huts are located at shorter intervals. These are little houses of wood and water in the form of slabs of ice, but nothing else.
"The stupendous difficulties of that overland journey from Paris to New York can be realized only by those who have encountered them. "From Srednikolvnisk our next dash was 2,000 miles to the shore of Bering Sea, dogs being our motive power. The cold was terrible. At times the thermometer registered 78 degrees below zero, and for 500 miles we did not see a hut.

FOUND ON SIBERIAN COAST. At last the inhospitable seashore was reached, and there the entire party nearly perished from exposure and hunger. They were found at a place called Whadyluk by Capt. Cottle, who supplied them with provisions and offered to take them off in his boat. This offer De Windt declined. After reaching Cape Nome De Windt and his companions went to Seattle, and from there to San Francisco. Twice before De Windt had failed in the effort, once being driven back by unfriendly savage tribes in North-ern Siberla, and once turned back by the war in China.

CLASH WITH DUKE BORIS. In San Francisco Mr. De Windt and Grand Duke Boris clashed. "I made the statement to the reporters," explained the explorer, "that the criminal exiles in Siberia could not be better treated, but that the political ex-iles lived in hell. The grand duke retorted in the newspapers that that was rubbish. Of course, I bow to the grand duke. He no doubt has been in Siberia and has visited a village of political exiles as I have. The duke may have his own ideas of hell, but I would tense from cold and hunger. Nights were spent under a canvas tent in a villages."

The companions of Mr. De Windt were the French Vicomte de Cluichamp-Bellegarde, and George Harding. Harding is with his employer now, but the vicomte embarked at Seattle for Paris, his feet being badly frozen. He will recover, but only after a time and with care.

TWICE FAILED.

In May, 1896, Mr. De Windt started out on his first venture into Siberia. He set out across Canada and British Columbia. From Juneau, on the Alaskan coast, they went to Fort St. Michael, on the Bering Sea. This journey lasted three months, and was one of extreme hardship and exposure. Having crossed the straits success-fuly, De Windt and his companion in-ally landed at Cape Tchaplin, on the Siberian Bering Sea coast. He fell into the hands of Koart, chief of the Tchuktschis. The natives stole his supplies, and after three months of suffering he was rescued by the American whaler Belvidere.

SUMMARY. To sum up: Mr. De Windt took nine days to reach Irkutsk from Paris, about 6,000 miles. He took three months less nine days to travel 1,950 miles, from Irkutsk to and across Bering Straits. Since June 19 he has been traveling down the western coast of North America to San Francisco and Chicago. He has gone where no Cossack dared go, as the Russian officials warned him. He has proved the feasibility of the journey, although not its profit. He has seen a gold country the Russians are working on the sly, has visited people who have been shut off learned the horrors of the political ex-

CARRIED A PISTOL

Robert R. Remington Planned to Kil the Van Alen Family.

New York, Aug. 21. - A Sun special from Newport, R. I., says: A wreath measuring four feet across was sent last night to the undertaker's to be placed on the coffin of Robert R. Remington, who shot himself yesterday at the reading room. It was made of American Beauty roses and lilies of the valley and was tied with white satin ribbon. On a wreath was a sealed envelope with instructions that it was not to be opened.

The wreath and the envelope were sent by Miss Van Alen, whose engagement to marry Remington was broken not long before he shot himself.

Miss Van Alen, it is understood, is nearly prostrated over the affair, and is still confined to her room, attended by a physician. A large number of flowers have been sent to her, but she has denied herself to all callers.

Remington had shown unmistakable signs of an unbalanced mind. Be-cause of this Mr. Van Alen, who with Mrs. William Astor, Miss Van Alen's grandmother, had sanctioned his engagement to Miss Van Alen, insisted that it be broken. This was done, quietly and gradually.

It seriously affected Remington, however, and he wrote numerous letters to Van Alen, his son, James Lawrence Van Alen, and Miss Van Alen, threatening to kill them. Van Alen referred to these when he said, after he was informed of Remington's suicide:

Better one than three." Remington carried a pistol around all day the day before his suicide in his pocket, and those who saw him say that he appeared to be looking for somebody. He saw none of the Van Alons all day, and some persons think that it was very fortunate that he

The Wonderful Electrical Light Is Said To Be Relieving an Ossified Man.

Detroit, Aug. 22.-X-rays are destroying cancers at the Harper Hospital clinic. One patient has already been discharged, his cancer all gone. Two other men are taking daily treatment under the rays, and their cancers are rapidly falling off in much the for destroying cancer will give hope usands who suffer with the dread malady.

The two men now under treatment visit the hospital daily at noon and for five minutes the violet light is turned upon the cancers. One of the patients is an employe of the Solvay Company. He has a big cancer of the nose that, up to a month ago, was steadily eating up his face. The other man is a farmer with a cancer of the lower lip. Both have been under this treatment about a month.

HOW IT WORKS. In one of two ways the X-rays decancer cells. X-rays, if turned for a sufficient time on any part of the body, effect is like severe sunburn, but the X-rays keep on burning deeper and deeper, and would ultimately destroy grasped a few times and died. an entire limb. Cancers are even more healthy tissue, and external cancers by tinfoil armor. Tinfoil is procagainst the most penetrating X-ray. First the sufferer seats himself directly in front of a Crooks tube in which the X-rays are collected and of the man's face, neck and head is covered by sheets of tinfoil, leaving an opening through which only the cancer shows. The electrical machine is started, a pale violet hue fills the tube and all through the cancer shoot the mysterious X-rays. At the end of five minutes the attendant shuts off the switch and the daily treatment is over. In medical terms, the X-rays stimulate the vital processes of repair, and eliminate the waste products.

AS A MASSAGEUR. Another remarkable use is being made of the Harper Hospital X-rays apparatus. It is doing the work of a massageur, and far more effectively. massageur, and far more effectively. There is a young man from out in the country who is afflicted with a rare disease known as sclera-derma, or hard skin. When he came to the hospital his face, neck, arms and body were hard as wood and the affliction was extending down into his lower limbs. In time the patient would have become completely ossified. Only a few cases of the sort are on record, and cure is rare. The skin hardens up like dry leather, and so firmly encases the muscles within that they become useless. The whole body is just as though it were tightly bandaged, and muscles waste away.

The patient was unable to produce even a smile, so rigid had he become, As an experiment, in addition to regular massage, the X-rays were ployed. Each day the hard-skinned man stiffly hobbles down to the electrical room, his board-like face stretches a little-the wasting muscles are trying to smile-the doctors feel of his neck and face and examine his body to note progress, and then he is seated in front of the X-ray machine. The rays are shot through his whole body, neck, face, arms and trunk. It is almost beyond belief, but yesterday the man actually cracked a smile. His malady is being overcome by the strange properties of the X-rays. Anyone troubled with boils, pimples, burns, bruises, sprains, stiff joints, rashes, festering sores or any chronic or malignant skin disease, should use Burdock Blood Bitters, externally, and take internally. It will cure where Company Making Application.

New York, Aug. 21.-A dispatch to the New York Times from Albany says the New York Canadian Pacific Railway Company, which claims ownership of an old charter anterior to the adoption of the amendment to the state constitution prohibiting railroads running through state lands, has applied to the state railroad commissioners for authority to issue a first mortgage for Legislature under the title of the Northern New York Railroad. An extension of the charter was secured, and efforts were put forth from time to time to keep the project alive; but now, since Dr. Webb's St. Lawrence and Adirondack road has been built, it is regarded as extremely doubtful whether any other big company would care to build through the woods, as there is hardly business enough to make it profitable.

The statement that the company will ever develop a railroad which will be a rival to the New York Central is declared to be highly improbable by

JUSTICE HOLMES FRIEND OF LABOR

Motive of President in Giving Him Position.

THE CRITICS MISSED THE MARK

Walter Wellman Gives Reason Why New England Jurist Was Chosen.

Washington, Aug. 22.-Organized labor is to have at least one friend upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. For the first time in the history of the United States, probably, the President has chosen a member of the highest court with a view to securing a justice who is in sympathy with that modern industrial and social institution-organ-

President Roosevelt has been charged with attempting to pack the supreme court because of his appointment of Chief Justice Holmes to be an associate justice vice Justice Gray, the reason for the appointment of Chief Justice Holmes, according to the President's critics, being that he is an Imperialist, and can be safely counted upon to maintain the Imperial doctrine of the court as enunciated in the insular decisions, should that doctrine again come before the court for re-

But the real reason why Chief Justice Holmes was selected rather than one of the other prominent New England lawyers whose names were men- tell an interesting story of the capture tioned was a much more interesting of two thieving train employes who one, and shows that the President have been robbing travelers for sevthinks of other things besides imperialism and fighting. The following put on the case by the Northwestern statement is made on exact authority: has always been deeply interested in and studied as much, perhaps, as any-one, is the labor question. His interest in the subject is shown from even a casual reference to his essays published under the title "The Strenuous Life," and in that collection is an address which was delivered at the Chicago Labor Day picnic, Sept. 3, 1900, in which the President's views are clearly stated. The President realized that one of the greatest problems confronting this country is the labor question in all its varying aspects, and that Congress will be compelled in the near future to enact legislation that may, because of its importance, have to be passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States before its constitutionality can be determined.

In view of this fact he wanted for his new justice a man who was neither the enemy of labor nor one who would servilely truckle to it. In examining into the records of the men whose names were suggested to him, that of Chief Justice Holmes appeared to meet the requirements that he held to be in- Rosa Batt. dispensable. Chief Justice Holmes has shown in his utterances from the bench that he takes a broad, generous view of the class of questions which have arisen as a result of labor organization. Generally speaking, he is sympathetic with the efforts of labor by rganization and intelligent co-operation to lift up society. He might be described as the direct antithesis of Judge Jackson of West Virginia At the same time Justice Holmes is not a radical. Between him and socialism there is the widest possible the crank theorist, the reckless labor has with the capitalist who wilfully violates the laws or the employer of labor who perverts the laws for his his residence. Mechou saw the dog own selfish purposes. President Roosevelt has convinced himself that Chief Justice Holmes could not be influenced by clamor; that he would be as uninfluenced by the clamor of capital as he would be by the clamor of labor: that on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States he would adhere as inflexibly to his convictions and his conceptions of right and wrong as has always marked his course in the past. Believing these things, the President appointed him.

United States Naval Maneuvers. Rockport, Mass., Aug. 21.-The

battleships of Rear Admiral Higginson's squadron defending the New England coast from an imaginary attack by a fleet under Commander John E. Pillsbury were plainly to be seen in the clear atmosphere from this point this morning. The other vessels of Admiral Higginson's command were scattered along the horizon, or in view at nearer points maintaining guard of the coast. The night passed without usual incident, and no trace of the enemy was reported from any of the signal stations along the shore.

ADVENTIST WARNING

Life Insurance Condemned as a Commerce Not Approved by God.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 22.-The Seventh Day Adventists are forbidden by their doctrine to take out life insurance policies. Some of the younger members of the sect who have lately had their lives insured for the benefit officers as follows: Supreme grand of their families have been reprimanded. Their official newspaper this week quotes the following from a message from Mrs. Ellen G. White, a prophetess of the sect:

"Sabbath-keeping Adventists should not engage in life insurance. This is a commerce with the world which God does not approve. Those who are engaged in this enterprise are uniting with the world, while God calls his people to come out from among them and be separate. Life insurance is a worldly policy, which leads our brethren who engage in it to depart from the simplicity and purity of the Gospel. As a people we are in a special sense the Lord's. Christ has bought us. Angels that excel in strength surround us. God has made provision for his people. He has a special care for them, and they should not distrust his providence by engaging in a policy with the world."

STORM DESTROYS CROPS Northwest Swept by High Winds, Rain and Hail.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.-The severest storm of the year prevailed in the Northwest on Tuesday, follow-ing the one of Monday night. The destruction of grain growing and in the shock by wind and rain is extensive. It is estimated that the loss will reach into the hundreds of thousands. At Rolland a tornado blew down a farmhouse, killing a woman and two children. Lightning set fire to hun-dreds of stacks of grain and hay and a great number of cattle were killed. In South Dakota hail prevailed, accompanied by a terrific wind and about two inches of rain fell. A cloudburst in the southern part of the State created great damage.

FROSTS IN MICHIGAN

Cold Weather in Upper Peninsula Makes Corn Backward.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 21.—The week-ly weather crop bulletin reports light rosts in most of the counties of the upper peninsula last week, but the injury to crops was not very great. Drier weather has forwarded the completion of the oat harvest and the bulk of that crop is now mostly secured in fine condition. The cool weather has somewhat retarded the growth of corn, which continues generally small and backward. Corn is earing nicely, but needs hot weather to mature it. Beans have improved, but continue to indicate light yields. Buckwheat is doing finely in all counties. Late potatoes continue to do fairly well. Sugar beets, except on low and poorly drained land, continue very promising. Reports regarding apples indicate that the crop will be a fairly large one; some scab and considerable dropping is reported, but on the whole plenty of fruit remains on the trees, which is of good quality.

In the upper peninsula there is need of more moisture for corn, potatoes and pastures. In the lower peninsula pastures continue excellent, especially for this time of year. Fall plowing is general in the central and southern counties, but the soil turns up rather umpy. In the extreme southern counties some rye has been sown

FOUR SUPPED WITH VISITOR

Reluctance to Visiting Theater Gave Way to Enthusiasm on Arrival.

Chicago, Aug. 22.-Grand Duke Boris Vladimirowitch has met the American chorus girl, and being both gallant and discerning, has promptly surrendered. He saw her-many of herfor the first time Monday night, when he suddenly decided to yield to the pleas of his hosts and sit through at least one act of "The Wizard of Oz." He had expressly stpulated that his stay in the theater should be limited, but when he saw what there was to see he stayed enraptured to the end. He then invited four of the prettiest theatrical enchantresses to dine, or rather sup, with him at the Auditorium, and having received a breathless accept-ance, bowed them into his private carriage and whirled them quickly away into the darkness. Three of the solemn young men in his suite remained steadfastly by his side.

STARTED LEISURELY. The start for the theater was not nade until nearly 9:30, the grand duke being slow to make his appearance among his anxious hosts, who waited patiently in the foyer of the Auditorium and learned anew the privileges of princes. Finally the sprightly cousin of the great white czar came gayly down, smiled at Baron Schlippenbach, Arthur Caton and R. S. Crane, seized Lieut, Greaves' arm and ran out to the nearest cab. A carriage belonging to Mr. Caton slowly followed with the rest of the party, all of them considerably surprised.

No sooner had the grand duke caught sight of the stage, with the rows of pretty girls pirouetting upon it, than he began to applaud throughout the remainder of the performance. At the end of the second act he persuaded Baron Schlippenbach to buy or beg his way behind the scenes and invite four of the chorus girls, or three chorus girls and one of the principals, to let him show his appreciation of their entertainment by reciprocating

Tell me that." Nobody could tell her, and so the four ingenuous maidens tripped > extremely merry. The grand duke told the girls how charmed he was, bowed lowest before the blushing Miss Kimball, and asked if he might not drink her health from her slipper. Then the girls asked him how it felt to be in line for a throne, and if he didn't think American girls were the loveliest of all, and if-if he were having a good time. The royal host replied to the last question first, saying that he had had a good time

NEEDED REST.

When the grand duke arose from his ed at noon next day he announced that he needed a rest, and intended to have one. He kept his word, and in spite of pleas that he would go here. there or somewhere else, as somebody's guest of honor, contented himself with strolling quietly about the streets. He relaxed this rigidity of programme in the evening, however, and attended another in the endless series of dinners that are being given for him.

The Ubiquitous Peanut.

is the lot of the Western Canadian

For a great many years, in fact, ever since its introduction in the North, the peanut has been regarded askance by polite people as a vulgar article. Just how this ill repute came about it would be difficult to determine. Many people who consider themselves wellbred do not hesitate to munch sandwiches and fruit in public places, while they would recoil in horror from a bag of innocent roasted peanuts. If one draws the line close enough it is doubtless vulgar to eat anything in public, but why the enjoyment of the toothsome peanut should be more especially vulgar, is not quite clear. Like the English sparrow, the goober seems rather to thrive, however, on persecution; and it will be glad tidings to its nillions of friends throughout America to learn that the feeling against it is gradually dying out. Every year has seen an increase of millions of bushels in peanut consumption, and yet the goober has remained a plebeian. Now, however, it seems to have lived down its past, to a certain extent, and to be taking its place in good society. The Richmond Dispatch professes to have made this discovery, and is immensely tickled ever it. The Dispatch remarks:

"Time was when peanuts only suggested circus rowdyism, gallery gods obstreperousness, and festive occasions of the proletariat. It is not so long ago that those who bought them from the corner stand did so in a shamefaced way, and concealed the bag lest any acquaintance should see what they had peanut peddlers on the corner, at the doors of cheap shows or at heart sorts. Little corner grocers or keepers of school stores kept them to entice children's pennies, for children and peanuts have always been companions, but they were strangers in the win-dows of the fancy grocery, confectionery, and delicatessen shops. All this has been changed. The peanut is now recognized in the market reports, and its crop prospects and prices are watched with more interest than any other 'nut' that grows above or below ground. The best shops now present the peanut in many enticing forms. As confection, a relish and a health food. Out of it is made a butter which conduces to health and longevity. Its oil, when properly treated, is admirable for salads. Hitherto the salted almond has been the elegant and aristocratic relish at the women's clubs, at receptions, at state dinners, and upon the tables of the 'smart set.' Now that tasteless nut is disappearing, and the lowly salted peanut is taking its place, while for dessert, the peanut bar, that most delicious of all confections, takes the place of wafer nonentities and trifling bonbons."

The Sweet Clover Pest.

There are many complaints about the pread of white millet or sweet clover (melilotus alba) along the country roads of Ontario, and its rapid encroachment on farms and market gardens, says the Toronto Globe. This has become one of the most injurious weeds in some parts of Illinois and other States, and the work of eradipating it has cost large outlays in money and labor. The present year been exceptionally favorable to its growth, and it is seen in abundance during the summer." along the country roads and in the vacant lots of cities and towns, some-times reaching a height of 8 feet and one after another, and I guess he'll more. The pleasant odor of the plant when drying and the clover-like texture and appearance of its leaves are no doubt responsible for its common name, but it is regarded as a most injurious pest of both farm and garden. PROMINENT PICNICKERS

Distinguished Party Attend the R. C. Outing at Ingersoll.

Ingersoll, Aug. 22.-The annual picnic under the direction of Rev. Father Connolly and his congregation was held at Victoria Park yesterday, and was a huge success. Distinguished politicians and other prominent personages were present, and lent assistance to the programme. The countryside and townspeople, who always look forward to the occasion, never turned out better, and the attendance is estimated at 2,000. Both dinner and supper were served by the ladies, the tables being laid in the commodious agricultural palace.

Speeches by many prominent gentlemen marked the opening of the programme, and were heard by a large audience. Sheriff Brady, of Wood-stock, formerly a resident of Ingersoll, made an excellent chairman, gathered around him on the platform were the following: Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, minister of justice for the Dominion; J. J. Foy, K. C., member of the Legislature for South Toronto; Capt. Thomas Robson, of East Middlesex; E. Meredith, K. C., of London; Donald Sutherland, M. P. P., South Oxford; Dr. Andrew McKay, ex-M. P. P., of Ingersoll; S. H. Janes, of Toronto, and R. Shaw-Wood, of London. E. B. Eddy, the Great Manufacturer, 76 Years Old Today.

Short Sketch of a Busy and Useful Business Career.

Today, Aug. 22, E. B. Eddy, the head of the great Eddy industries at Ottawa celebrates the 76th anniversary of his birth. Despite his years, Mr. Eddy is still the shrewd and ambitious business man he has always been and he seems likely to live many years more to control the destinies of the he came in. He asked the girls about huge concern he has built up from

A short sketch of Mr. Eddy's remarkable business career will not be evenings. At length he found work out of place. Mr. Eddy went to Ottawa in 1851 and established a match factory of modest pretensions on the site the paper mills now occupy. In 1856 he commenced to manufacture woodenware, for which the firm from their labeling, bottling and wrapping, the first became famous. He rented a small mill which stood beside his ness. match factory and employed about 100 stayed at home and kept house while hands. Four years later he added the daughters earned the living. petitors. In eight years after starting business he branched into lumbering in a small way, but narrow limits were not designed for men of the indomitable spirit and strenuous ambition of Mr. Eddy. It was not may years until he became king of the trade. little mill soon became the big mill, and the output reached 80,000,000 to 85,000,000 feet of lumber annually. Continuing along these lines newer and their trials and triumphs, but through larger factories and mills began to it all they kept together, and contin arise in rapid succession. In 1886 the concer became a limited joint stock company, at which time Mr. Eddy associated with himself the board directors which still rule the affairs of the company with marked success. In 1889 the manufacture of sulphide pulp was commenced. The mill is in the eastern section of Hull and is the only part of the Eddy works not destroyed in the disastrous fire of April 6, 1900. A few years ago the company abandoned the saw-milling business and commenced the manufacture of paper. The inexhaustible spruce forests revealed a source of wealth which with characteristic decision and enterprise was at once utilized, and the result is the existence today at Hull of the leading paper mills of Canada. The capacity of these mills today is 85 to 100 tons of paper daily, which is gradually being increased. Comparing the factories today with those of 1851, Mr. Eddy then had a little match factory and part of an old cement mill. employing about 100 hands. Today the payroll contains over 2,500 men and the mills are among the largest in the world. The match factory turns out over 3,000 gross of matches a day, while the fiber output alone is over 40,000 pieces a day. It must not be imagined that Mr. Eddy has enjoyed uninterrupted progress. Fire has pursued him with relentless activity and no less than 28 times have his works been scorched more or less seriously. Two of these conflagrations were almost deadly in their destruction. The catastrophe of 1900 is too fresh in the minds of Canadians to require lengthy review. Few men at Mr. Eddy's age would have survived the sheck, but

man Dies at Hamilton.

Rev. Bishop McEvay.

A message was received in this city today announcing the death at Hamilton of Rev. Father Hinchey, parish had been ill for some time at St. Joseph's Hospital, Hamilton, where he died this morning.

Father Hinchey was once in this dioten years he was curate also for Rt.
Rev. Bishop McEvay, of this city, when he was rector of St. Mary's Cathedral thrown overboard. The regimental li-

Father Hinchey's death will be widely regretted. In all the parishes in which he had labored he was much beloved by his people, and was highly esteemed by all people. His loss will be especially deplored by the Roman Catholic clergy, who knew best his admirable qualities both as a priest and as a man.

LABOR IS WELL EMPLOYED plant later on, which will nearly double the number of employees (they now employ an average of 700 the year round) quite an increase will take place in the quite an increase will take place in the city.

Journeymen tailors and garment workers are having their slack season. Boot and shoe workers report business as fair. Although the price of meat has risen so materially, the butchers report no diminution in the quantity called for.

The cigarmaking business contines one of the largest industries here, with more lands becoming employed at it. The manufacturers of cigars for the past year show an increase of nearly four millions over the previous year, the respective figures being 28,476,910 cigars made in 1900-1 and 32,069,835 made in 1901-2. The former year's consumption of raw, leaf was only 464,124 pounds, while last year there was used 592,791 ponds, an increase of over 128,500 pounds. These figures represent the raw material and output of 22 factories, nineteen of which are situated in London, two in St. Thomas, and one in Sarnia.

Broommakers report trade as good.

Ordinary Laborers and Artisans Could

Mr. Alex. Woonton, correspondent in this city for the Labor Gazette, has the following in the August edition concerning the state of trade and the outlook for this district:

ity in this locality, as has been the case since the spring. There has been a demand for ordinary laborers almost all the time up to the present, and artisans to make first-class months. Bricklayers in either the building, iron or steel trades could have secured situations here during the summer for the asking. The unprecedented rains of May, June and July have affected the sale of light summer goods, and the retailers will have to carry over a heavy stock to next summer. The most favorable feature in connection with the labor market this summer has been the total absence of strikes

The outlook for a bountiful harvest has not been as good in this district for years. Some of the hay was lost to the Recently there died at Spasskaya, in Russia, a beggar who lived to the extraordinary age of 140 years. The son of a beggar, he adopted his father's profession in childhood, and a beggar he remained all his life. Family name he had none, and his explanation was that when he was born only aristocrats had family names. He wandered wherever he pleased, forging the necessary passports. He married five times and he deserted his wives one after the other, his temperament being such that he found it impossible either to lead a domestic life or to remain long faithful to his marriage vows. During late years he was asked how he managed to live so many years, and his invariably reply was: "I never needed food nor drink and I never allowed anything to worry me."

Of course she was meant for Gilbert from the first, and he ought to have known it long ago. He hoped she would be happy with her cousin; he would always hope that. For him the dream was over. It had lasted through the best years of his life. He was no love-sick swain, yet something told him that it would be a darker world henceforth; that was not her fault, but his own weakness. He was not ashamed of it. "After all," thought John, "I have been better and a kindlier man for her

Some work of Gertrude's lay on the table at his elbow. She was no persever-ing seamstress at the best of times, and it was her habit to do a few desultory it was her habit to do a few desultory stitches at a sitting, and leave her embroidery about in an untidy and disporderly manner. By an impulse very unusual in one of his disposition, he took it up and pressed it fervently to his lips. Gertrude, passing softly along the corridor, on her way to the drawing-room, saw the gesture through the open door, and drew her own conclusions, to her own entire satisfaction.

turbed and restless frame of mind, from a variety of conflicting causes. The origin of her distress, she persuaded herself, was anxiety on Gilbert's behalf; and her cousin's seclusion in his own room doubtless caused her no inconsiderable uneasiness. She had been to visit him after dinner with a cup of tea, and finding the door locked, had left it there to cool in the passage, and so betook herself to her own room, there to weep a little, and bathe her eyes, and smooth her hair, and shake out her muslin skirt, are she returned to the drawing-room more rediant than she quitted it.

Now there was no occasion for passing the door of the apartment in which we left Mr. Gordon reading the Western Luminary, to proceed from Lady Gertrude's chamber to the principal drawing-room, whither she was bound. Such a course, on the contrary, from the plan of the house, involved the transit of sev-ing-room, whither she was bound. Such a course, on the contrary from the plan of the house, involved the transit of several passages, and no less than three green-baize doors. We can only conclude, therefore, that Lady Gertrude must have had some unexplained motive for traversing, so much unnecessary space. On this subject, as our business the contraction of the contraction of the contraction of the contraction which had first driven him from England, and then ruined him in the colony; yet which, to such a mind as his, was not without its charms. CHAPTER XLIV If you will take the trouble to consult If you will take the trouble to consult the terrestrial globe in "our library, and are not too much puzzled by the brass meridian, called by courtesy "of Greenwich," which girds the same, you will, if I mistake not, find certain colonial districts of Australia as nearly as possible the direct antipodes to our own country. If you are also a believer in those theories regarding the solar system, which are considered the most plausible in the present century, you will hardly dispute the position that 9 o'clock in the evening at West Acres was 9 in the morning at Sydney.

I have endeavored, partly from my own observation, partly from matters that have since come to my knowledge, to describe what was occurring in one of "the quiet homes of England" at this particular hour. I wish I could bring before you a scene that wts being enacted almost at the same moment on the opposite side of the world.

I should be sorry to ask my readers to wade with me through the coarse details that make up the life of such a man as William Latimer. One who has, to use the common expression, "seen better days," and who with his lost position has also lost the self-respect which depended alone on extraneous circumstances, is didor, on her way to the drawing-room, and drew her own conclusions, to her way to the drawing-room, and drew her own conclusions, to her way not constitution.

Now this young lady, albeit neither liven to "nerves" nor migraine but resioners, on the contrary, in a character and so to speak, natural blackguard. The man has glimpses of what he was, and constitution of more than ordinary vigor, was nevertheless tonight in a disturbed and restless frame of mind, from a variety of conflicting causes. The brigin of her distress she persuaded herself, was anxiety on Gilbert's behalf; and her cousin's seclusion in his own from doubtless caused her ho inconsiderable uneasiness. for traversing so much unnecessary space. On this subject, as our business lies chiefly with results, we need not trouble ourselves to speculate.

It was one thing, however, to have a sly peep at John Gordon—a sort of farewell look on which to dwell tomorrow when he was gone, and so depart unseen—and another to witness the very ridiculous pantomime which I have ventured to describe. Lady Gertrude was not a person to deliberate when the moment of action had arrived; she was thoroughly versed, moreover, in the character with which she had to deal. Had she not studied it for months, thinking of little else? She knew intuitively that if he went away tomorrow he vould never come back again.

"Now or never!" thought her ladyship, and she walked into the room with a bold front indeed, but with quaking limbs and a beating heart.

"Are you studying cross-stitch. Mr. Gordon?" she said, with an artificial laugh that would not have deceived a baby. and more to have forgotten the donor. Yet he kept the trinklet too. His embarrassment gave her courage; she could afford to banter him if he was really at her mercy.

"I should have thought you required no lessons in that," she proceeded, crossing her taper forefingers in close proximity to his face. "You are going away at a moment's notice; you have scarcely spoken a word since you have been her. Aunt Olivia thought you very much altered. Do you wish to quarrel with all your old friends?"

Her antagonist's, we need hardly say, was an honest, manly nature. It was no

"Why?" she asked, glancing uneasily at him. She could not trust her voice to add another syllable.

"I will not see you again to hold of that same round sum of money, which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as slippery as ice, but which is not only as it is not at him. She could not trust her voice to add another syllable.

"I will not grudge you your triumph," he answered, still in those grave, kind tones. "It is soon said. Once, Lady Gertrude, I was fool enough to hope I might some day win you. Now it is only right I should pay the penalty of my presumption. Listen. For a good many years I tried to build up a fortune, that I might ask you to share it. Even then I think I should have been prepared for a refusal; but at least I could have come boldly forward and made my offer. All that is impossible now. You are generous, Lady Gertrude; this avowal will not deprive me of your friendship! It is for deprive me of vour friendship! Let us see what he is doing at the door of that low store outside the town of Sydney, with the bright morning sun shining on his face, and children all about him, trooping off, clean and healthy, to school.

He is altered, shockingly altered. The fresh complexion is mottled and sodden, as it were, with drink. The eyes are dim, watery, and bloodshot. His figure has as it were, with drink. The eyes are dim, watery, and bloodshot. His figure has lost its squareness, but the body has become bloated, while the limbs have shrunk. His cherished whiskers, no longer oiled and curied with such tender care, run to waste beneath his chin in unkempt circles streaked with gray. His dress is frayed and shabby in the extreme, but looks the less so from being made of such coarse material as suits a workingman. He wears a red nightcap over one ear with an assumption of workingman. He wears a red nightcap over one ear with an assumption of bravado still, and preserves through all his reverses a certain manliness, or call it rather audacity, of gesture and demeaner, the result of his adventurous life. There is a bad look though in those leering eyes of his, and as he lights a short pipe, and lifts that wicked face to the sun, the children pass the other side of the way to avoid touching him.

of the way to avoid touching him.

He smokes for a while in silence, and seems weighing some dubious matter in his mind. Once when a burst of childish laughter strikes upon his ear, he gives vent to a low curse, feels in his empty pockets, and turns on his heel with a louder and deeper oath. "Cleaned out!" he mutters, "you incurable idiot. Well, it must go with the rest!"

A tawdry woman, with sunken eyes and dishevelled hair, cowering under a close wrapped shawl of flaunting faded colors, walks up to him and lays her hand upon his shoulder. The hand, though dirty, is well-shaped, and the wasted features tell of former beauty,

Her voice is kind and tender. She seems ther voice is kind and tender. She seems to trust and cling to him. Reprobate as the man is, he has found some one to make him a home, even here.

He shakes her off, but not unkindly. "Cleaned out!" he repeats. "The old story over and over again. Everything I put my hand to seems to rot and turn to rubbish. Whether it's land or houses, or sheep or stones, or dice or cards, all's one to me. There's a turn in the luck one to me. There's a turn in the luck for other fellows; I never get a chance. It can't go on! I tell ye it can't go on. Best leave me, Jane, and try to shift for yourself. It's only a fool that sticks by a sinking ship!"

"Not likely," she answered, smiling rather sadly; "is it all gone, Bill? What did you play at?"

A look of interest lights up her countenance while she asks the question. She is a gambler, too, this faded, fallen woman, for his sake, and likes to hear of his successes and reverses because they are his.

He swears horribly in reply, "Monte!" he screams out, with a dreadful impreca-tion; and on that most gambling of games he continues to enlarge through a stream of blasphemous abuse that at length cannot but exhaust his passion and his lungs together. It is maddening, doubtless, to recall the

It is maddening, doubtless, to recall the last night's orgy and its consequences. He had been paid the previous day a large sum of money for a wool-bargain, in which he had certainly not shown the simplicity of the poor shorn animal. He could not, of course, resist the temptation of turning into a spirit-store for the purpose of "wetting" his luck. There he sat and drawle this more than the last of the sat and drawle this more than the sat of the sat and drank, this man who had once been a member of second-rate clubs and dined at military messes, with the refuse of the worst population of Sydney, tak-ing a strange, morbid pleasure, as it ing a strange, morbid pleasure, as it seemed, in the very ribaldry and indecency of his associates; even poor abandoned Jane did not dare to look for him there, or fetch him thence till daylight. He caroused, and sang, and shouted with the rest—he treated them to liquor—he boasted of his money. With his eyes open, with his intellect no more affected by his potations than those of a man usually are who seldom goes to bed soher he set down deliberately. sober, he sat down deliberately to play soper, he sat down deliberately to play cards with a party of ruffins, any one of whom had merited and probably earned transportation for life. He knew they would cheat him if they could. On occasion, he was not scrupulous in that way himself. He knew that fear of detection alone would make the section. tection alone would make them hesitate r an instant to cut his throat if by doing they could get his money; and yet, knowing all this, such was the habit-ual craving for excitement, the restless thirst for gain engendered by his mode of life, that he seemed impelled by some irresistible power to risk his whole means, where he felt that chance, and fraud, and violence, would all be combined against him.

At first he resolved of course that he

At first he resolved of course that he would only play for a quarter of the sum he had about him—then the half, then he won, and he thought it would be a fine thing to double it, and so write the long-proposed letter, with a handsome inclosure to Ada. Fortune was going to smile upon him at last, he felt sure of it. The most experienced gambler is just as infeturated as the row he bler is just as infatuated as the raw be-ginner. He was persuaded he should win his reat stake tonight, and never try again. Then he lost—once, twice, sweep-ing ventures in succession. He must go ing ventures in succession. He must go on now, and get it back again at any risk; he should never forgive himself else. The cards seemed to be in league against him. He called for more drink, and now the worst passions of his nature blazed out. He accused his antagonist, a brawny, bearded ruffian, on his way to the gold diggings, via the hulks, of cheating, and the accusation, accompanied by the whole pack of cards, was flung back in his face; blows were exchanged, knives were drawn; the landlord and a gigantic negro, who performed changed, knives were drawn; the land-lord and a gigantic negro, who performed the office of waiter, parted them before blood was spilt. Such outrages were neither rare nor much regarded, and the party, including Latimer, were soon set down to their game again as if nothing had happened. When the sun rose, he had but a hundred dollars left, in the world. It is a strange feeling, that em-barkation of the last venture, not with-out a hideous fascination of its own. The gambler's horizon becomes narrowed to out a hideous fascination of its own. The gambler's horizon becomes narrowed to the closest limits. His world is a circle of some two or three feet in diameter. Time is represented by the next deal of the cards. Every sense is sharpened on the keen whetstone of anxiety; yet, strange to say, the very agony of suspense is dashed with something not entirely pain. There is a dull sensation of relief, too, when all is lost, consequent on the relaxation of the nerves, strung to so unendurable a pitch. When the cord is broken the bow cannot but spring back. Ere the sun had been up two hours, Latimer walked out of that reeking den into the pure air of heaven, for the hundredth time a ruined man. The the hundredth time a ruined man. The best of wives could hardly have refrained best of wives could hardly have refrained from expressing disapprobation, but she was not his wife, and she never reproached him so much as by a sign.

"We can begin again, Bill," she said, taking him by the arm to lead him home. Such a heme! "It's been as bad as this more than once before, and I'm stronger now. I can work." now, I can work."

His only answer was another impreca-tion; but he suffered her to take him on a few steps ere he stopped, and looking fixedly at her, shook himself loose from fixedly at her, shook himself loose from her hold once more.

"You're a good girl," he said, "you've a brave heart of your own. Look ye here, Jane, it's all up with me this bout. I'll have to go to the diggings again, or maybe take to the bush, or worse. You and I'll part, not in unkindness, lass, not in unkindness; but what's the use of dragging you down any lower along with me? Don't take on so, girl! It must have come some day. What's the odds?"

She sobbed violently. She clasped her hands over his arm. He was in fustian, she in rags; both were deprayed, immoral, desperate, yet the same feeling was tearing that poor, sinful bosom, that stirred Cornelia's heart for the father of the Cornella's heart for the father of the Gracchi.

"Let me go with you!" she entreated; "I'll follow you" (follow of you, she expressed it) "to the end of the world."

Something almost like tears came into W...i'am Latimer's eyes as he bent down and kissed her poor, wan face.

"It can't be, my lass," he replied: "but I won't forget you, for all that. D—n it! Jane, you shan't starve. See here—I'll do for you what I've never done for man or woman yet. Look at this" (he pulled the bracelet from his bosom as he spoke). "I've kept this safe for many a long day. I've held on to it when I hadn't a 'mag' in my pocket, nor a crust in my wallet, nor a serew of 'baccy' in my pipe. I thought never to have parted with it, never; but I'll give it you, Jane, because you've been a good girl to me, and you'll keep it, lass, won't you, now, and think of me sometimes when I'm gone?"

CRESCEUS DOES FAST MILE. Indianapolis, Aug. 22. - Cresceus (2:021/4) went a wonderful mile here Fair Grounds track, clipping 14 of a second off the track record for trotters, made by Nancy Hanks in 1892. His time by quarters was: 311/2, 1:021/2, 1:34, 2:041/4. Cresceus was forced to go against a bracing wind down the back stretch, which had its effect. The mile, however, was well rated, and the time a decided surprise, considering it was a start. He seems to have the (R. Steele), 8 to 5, 3. Time, 1:141/2. power to reach the two-minute mark if his improvement shall be as great as it has been since his preparation for racing began this summer.

THE GRAND CIRCUIT.

Readville, Mass., Aug. 22.-The Massachusetts stake race for 2:12 class trotters, the biggest prize of Grand Circuit week at the Readville track, proved to be a commonplace affair yesterday afternoon through Major Delmar's win in three straight heats. Before the race the wiseacres were picking The Roman to win, purely on his splendid races of late. The gelding made a miserable showing, seldom having speed enough to get ahead of the second platoon. Major Delmar's victory, after the money had been won, looked a simple one, considering he took the 2:13 trot at Detroit and the 2:16 trot at Cleveland, and against fleids that cid not make him feach top speed. The stake record of 2:08 was safe yesterday, but with close finishes it might have been equaled if not broken. The absence of keen racing made the event fall flat on everyone who had not taken The Roman at 8 to 1. Major Delmar is owned by George Vandyke, of Boston The Wheeling, W. Va., mare, Lady Thisbe, took second money and the southern mare, Dulce Cor, third. The racing card of five events was interrupted by showers. The first event. the 2.21 trot, was won by the favorite local horse, Kwanon, in straight heats. The Massachusetts stake came next with seventeen starters. Before the field scored for the first heat Starter Walker cautioned the drivers to get away quickly, with the exceptional result that when the word was given the second time the horses came to the wire. Ruth M. had the pole, but Major Delmar took it at the quarter, with Lady Thisbe at his flank. The Roman broke and the heat was seen settled with no indication that Major Delmar would be beaten out. heats were about of the same style. except that in the third Dulce Cor beat out Lady Thisbe in the stretch for second place. Thus the stake was won with little of the excitement which has marked its winning in years past. In the 2:06 pace the Albany, N. Y., horse, Dariel, won, the favorite, Fred S. Wedgewood, driven by Geers, being distanced in the first heat. The races for foals of 1899, for a purse of $2,000, was full of breaks, making the young- | 2 sters see-saw to the front in interesting fashion until the bay colt, Chesco, from Donerail, after finishing fifth and fourth in the first two, won the next two heats handily. The last race was another trot for the 2:21 class, seven horses starting. Wilton Boy winning in one, two, three order. Summary: 2:21 class, trotting, 3 in 5, purse $1,000:

AT HAWTHORNE. Chicago, Aug. 15 .- The Midsummer stakes, the feature at Hawthorne yesterday, were won by Philo, with length to spare, after a furious drive down the home stretch. Rheta secured second place a length in front of Flo Carline. Gold Bell and Poor Boy, the former being favorite in the betting, were never contenders. The stake was worth $1,300 to the winner. of the ten starters met with mishaps in the jumping race, and Jockey Kelly, who rode Icena, was carried off the field on a stretcher apparently seriously injured. Bartley, who rode Stamp, suffered from a broken collarbone, and Wilson, who had the mount of Ada S. G., was severely cut about the head. Lucien Appleby was the only winning favorite, the other events going to second choices and outsiders in the betting. Weather cloudy and threatening; track slow. BASEBALL.

LONDON WON IN TENTH. St. Thomas, Aug. 21.-Bert Sheere's London aggregation of ball tossers were compelled to play ten innings to secure a victory over the locals at Pinafore Park yesterday afternoon. In the ninth inning it looked as if the visitors would win with comparative ease, the score standing 7 to 3 in their favor, with two of the locals retired. However, the home team got a batting streak on and knocked out four runs, tying the score. The Londons added one more in the tenth, pulling out the game midst much excitement.

THE NIAGARA TOURNEY.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Aug. 21. The international tennis tournament, which begins here next Wednesday. promises to bring together a very large number of players. Many of the cracks engaged at the United States championships at Newport this week will come to Niagara, and while it is confidently hoped that the English champions, the Doherty brothers and Dr. Pim, may be able to take part, in any event the leading lights of American tennis, W. A. Larned, Beals, Wright, Whitman, Clothier and Fisher are expected.

DOHERTYS CHAMPIONS.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21 .- The great championship event in doubles between the leading pairs of England and America, which was scheduled for today, eclipsed every other match in the national championship tennis at the Casino. With delightful weather, the lawn outside the spot was thronged ong before the games began. Play started with R. F. Doherty serving. The Englishmen won the first game twentieth game lost the set for the

The dizziness and faintness from which women suffer may be due to one of several causes. But the most common cause is disease of the delicate womanly organism. The story of Mrs. Brown, told in her letter below, gives a fair example of the conditions under which so many women work: "I had a sick headache nearly all the time, was so weak around my waist could hardly bear anything to touch me.

I would work a little while and then lie down a while." Failing to obtain more than temporary relief from her doctor's treatment. Mrs. Brown began the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, with the usual result-a complete cure. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for the cure of diseases peculiar to women. It establishes regularity, dries offensive drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"A few years ago I suffered severely with female weakness and had at times dreadful pains," writes Mrs. Mary V. Brown, of Creswell, Harford Co., Maryland. "I went to my doctor, and he gave me medicine which did me good for a while, but I would get worse again. I had a sick headache nearly all the time; was so weak around my waist could hardly bear anything to touch me. My feet would keep cold and I could hardly do my work. I would work a while and then lie down a while; was completely run down. Suffered from disagreeable discharge and also severe pains at times. After using five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, three of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and following the advice you gave regarding the 'Lotion Tablets,' I can truly say that I am cured. The doctor said it was uterine disease I had."

Errors by Davis in the present arrangements contracts for building the Shamrock III. will signed next week. Sir Thomas Lipton expects to arrive in the Clyde then on board the Erin to make final arrangements with the Dennys. The contracts will provide for the very early launching of the next challenger for the America's Cup, thus giving more time for turning up than occupied by previous competitors for the trophy.

THE TRIGGER.

HYDE PARK SHOOT. The regular shoot of the Hyde Park gun club on Aug. 20 resulted as follows

Having a Good Time.

Most people are disposed to make the best of poor circumstances, especially if they are stout and good-naturedthe people, not the circumstances. The humor . of the situation appealed to the two travelers and they began to laugh. "Say," said one of them addressing the driver, "my friend here is the chief of police of one of Alabama's big cities, and he has come up here have a good time. He can't do anything at home, for everyone will know it. Now tell us what you do up here to have some fun." This question interested the driver very much. He still had some sporting blood left after 30 years behind the plow. He dropped his reins, turned round to face passengers, and kent his back to the mules, which continued to plod their weary way just the same. "Wael, gentlemens," he said, "I'll tell you what I do to have a good time. I just gets on the train and goes either to Birmingham or Attalia and buys me a jug of whisky. Then I comes back an drinks just as much as I please, and then I goes out in the woods and hollows just as loud as I can and I has the best time you ever heard on.

-Strathroy Dispatch: "Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Tanner and family have left for London, where they will in future reside. They will be much missed in church, musical and society circles here. Mr. Tanner has been choir master of St. John's Church for about six years, and during that time the choir has been a credit to the town. He is also W. M. of Beaver Lodge, A., F. and A. M., president of the Strathroy Gun and Tennis Clubs, and a member of the Bowling Club, in all of which he took an active part.

CHARGED WITH SMUGGLING. A Port Huron dispatch says: Wm.

Neylon and Wm. Pugsley, two Canadians, who acted suspiciously after crossing the river by the night ferry, were arrested early Wednesday morning by Patrolmen Causley and Davis. When searched eleven gold watches were found on them. The men will be held by the federal authorities on a charge of smuggling.

PRACTICALLY STAMPED OUT. The outbreak of hog cholera in Wentworth County, near Hamilton, is not of so serious a nature as that which appeared in this district, says Dr. Tennent, Government veterinary inspector, who visited the places on Wednesday. The disease appeared in the same district as it did some time ago. Dr. Tennent now thinks that the disease is practically stamped out. The inspector deserves much credit for having got the malady under control in so short a time. CLEVELAND TOMORROW.

The "Big Five" excursion to Cleveland tomorrow bids fair to be one of the most successful of the season: Hundreds of tickets have already been sold, and judging by the inquiries being made many more will be disposed of. Ample seating capacity for 1,700 people will be provided on the Shenango, while free staterooms are provided for ladies and children. No one should miss this cheap and convenient opportunity to visit the Forest City. CAUGHT A THIEF.

Some nights ago a thief was caught in the residence of Dr. J. M. Piper, South London, going through the pockets of Dr. Turner's clothing. Dr. Turner has been attending to Dr. Piper's practice during the latter's absence, in the old country, and for some time has been missing money, but was unable to account for it. On this night he was awakened and sprang from bed in time to catch the thief. The fellow was anxious to get down stairs quickly, and Dr. Turner gave him every assistance. He is known and will probably be arrested. MAKES ADVERTISING PAY.

Tupelo, Miss., Aug. 1.-It is reported that there is a race riot raging one mile west of Shannon, Miss., a station about twelve miles south of here. Three negroes are reported to have been killed there last night. Eight are now in jail at Nettleton, Miss. They will be brought here for safe keeping. Particulars are hard to get at this time, for the posse has not returned from the scene yet. It is reported that one white man was shot, but not dangerously injured. All the trouble grew from a negro stealing corn.

LIGHTNING AND HAIL

Cause Heavy Loss in Different Sections-Farmer Killed.

Comber, Ont., Aug. 22.-Lightning struck the barn of Mr. James Stoneman, near Staples, during the thunder storm Wednesday evening. Soon the barn was a mass of flames. The season's crops of hay, wheat and oats were consumed. The horses and cattle also fell a prey to the flames. Loss about $2,000; partly covered by insurance.

The publisher's private secretary was, above all else, a young woman of refinement, both of conduct and of language. Brought up in New Eng-land and educated at a college famous for its attention to the niceties and elegancies of existence, she was as far removed as possible from the slangusing, bang-wearing, gum-chewing stenographer of the comic papers. Next door to the publisher's establishnent a young Englishman, striving with moderate success to establish himself here as a landscape architect, had opened an office, says the New York Post. In due course of time he became acquainted with the publisher, who, in turn, introduced him to the private secretary. One day when the private secretary was sitting serene and dignified at her desk, there entered precipitately the Englishman.

"How do you do?" she said sweetly.

"I beg your pardon," said the Englishman, "but could you spare me just a little of your gum?" fum!" she exclaimed in horror. "Surely you don't think I-" "Really I beg your pardon," efacu-lated the Englishman a second time, in still more confusion. "How stupid of me. I remember now you say mucilage in America."

They Silenced the Barber. Aleng with the other doomed traditions, the conversational ability of the barber now seems to be slipping away. A Chicago barber recently told the court that his wife and lady friend had talked him out of his own house and home. No doubt his wife was equal to the task alone, and just for the sake of appearances he brought in the other lady. Anyway, he was out-talked and admitted it. Possibly his overthrow may be due to the fact that he was diverted from his customary lines of jaw work. If he had been able to hold the women to the elevating repartee of the barber chair, he might have won out with a lot of unused gabble to spare. But, of course, he couldn't say: "Nice day—looks a little like rain—wonderful weather we're having—hair's getting rather thin on top—ever try Zizzer's tonic?—gentleman at the next chair says he used it great stuff-hair was as thin as yours -spilled a little on an old fur over-coat-coming out beautifully-like to needs it-no?-that's all thanks." No, the women undoubtedly diverged from this narrow line of gabble and attacked him all along conversational outposts, and drove him in and routed him at every point. Poor
