WALES THE WINNER.

CANNES, France, March 9.-The yacht race for the Prix de Monte Carlo was won by the Prince of Wales' Britannia.

The weather was cloudy and the wind light. The Britannia crossed the line first. Just then the Ailsa was seen to be in trouble. The jaws of her gaff had been carried away, and she turned back and anchored. The Corsair was second. When the Allsa dropped out interest became greatly lessened, as it was a foregone conclusion that the Britannia would win, which she

In the way of variety it offers a pleasing contrast to the regular bleak and desolate top-knot of my average portrait."

A Well-Intentioned Mistake.

The Well-Intentioned Man overheard two women talking together in the cable car and he immediately let down the portals of his ears, for the Well-Intentioned Man always goes about with a life-long hunger in his heart to insert himself into the affairs of other people.

It may be expected that when women get their rights they will become the head of the family and carry the pocketbook. Then where will poor man be? Under the present order the wife can help herself to the loose change in the husband's pockets, and so the two live on together in peace and tranquility. But how is the husband ever to find the wife's pocket? Men should reflect upon this before giving the ballot to the women.

VEILED HER FACE.

The Total Eclipse of the Moon Sunday a Pretty Sight.

It Was a Complete Success-Some Scientific Explanations.

The eclipse of the moon arrived on schedule time Sunday night, and thousands saw the veil drawn over Luna's face, which was particularly bright and lovely. Astronomy was of practical benefit for once. People knew it was coming, and the electric lights were not turned off, as is the custom when the moon is full. It is good that they were not, because when the queen of night withdrew the light of her countenance things were pretty black down here. However, the celestial charmer was merciful, and shortly after midnight was smiling as sweetly and serenely as ever on her old sweetheart, the earth. It was a pretty sight.

At 8:53 the encroachment of the black shadow was perceived, which extended over the lunar surface, until, at 9:51, the eclipse was total, remaining so until 11:27, when the moon began to emerge from the vale of darkness, completing her exit at 21 minutes after 12. As the movement of the moon is ever eastward, the shadow came on from the east, sweeping swiftly over the bright disc, touching alike the great plains which still bear their early misnomer of "seas" and owering mountain peaks, which, when the moon is waxing, catch the sunlight long before the valleys at their foot. The black shadow engulfed whole of the magnificent scenery of the rugged globe, the brilliant Aristarchus, the fortress-like Copernicus, the conspicuous Tycho and the other craters, large and small, numbered by thousands, among which are needle shafts, which look down upon the aiguilles of the terrestial Alps as both coarse and lilliputian.

It is natural to inquire why the moon was at all visible when the sunlight was cut off, and since she herself is not self-luminous. The answer is simple and beautifully illustrates the laws of refraction, for the rim of atmosphere surrounding the earth, which, seen from the moon, would be color brilliant with sunshine, bended around the earth the diffused sunlight and reflected it upon the moon, minus, however, the rays which were absorbed in the effort of transmission, thus tingeing the moon a dull copper. in remote antiquity it was known to patient students of the skies that there is a regular eclipse "period" of 18 years, 113 days. The Chaldeans called it the "Saros," which means "repetition." Thus, after 223 synodic months, the present eclipse will be re-

What may be called the life of an eclipse, or its greater period, is about 865 years, during which it grows from its commencement on the smallest scale, repeated every eighteen years, until it becomes total; then, after a score or more of "total" repetitions, it again becomes "partial," growing smaller in magnitude until it finally ceases. The same is true of a solar eclipse, only that its period is a half longer-say 1,200

The total number of eclipses in a single Saros is about 70, nearly two-thirds of which are solar, but, as the shadow of the moon is only about 100 miles in width, total solar eclipses at any one lace are rare.

A Young Bank Clerk Meets With a Fatal Accident

While Returning to this City from Woodstock, Ont.

Wm. B. Carmichae!, of the Bank of Toronto, the Victim.

His Skull Crushed at the Rectory Street Crossing of the G. T. R. - Got Off the Train in Motion-No Inquest.

Sad indeed was the fate that overtook Wm. B. Carmichael, one of the best known young men of London banking, social and sporting circles. On Saturday night he was playing hockey in Woodstock. Twenty-four hours later his athletic frame was cold in death on a cot at the City Hospital, his head crushed from contact with an express engine. His death was the outcome of that oft-repeated act-trying to get off a moving train-not a very safe move at any time, and much less so at 4 a.m., with the ground covered with ice and snow. Why he should have sought to leave the train at East London, where he was killed, when he lived in the very center of the city, is inexplicable. His valise was checked through to the city station. By staying aboard until he reached town he would have had company home. But when the electric lights of the eastern suburb began to flit past the windows of the car he left his seat and went forward to the platform. Although his departure was noticed, no one thought that he would try to leave the train at the speed it was going, and when the city proper was reached the members of the hockey team sleepily gathered their effects together and went off to their respective homes, little dreaming that their captain at that moment lay stunned and bleeding at the Rectory street crossing of the G. T. R. A LEAP IN THE DARK. Carmichael was a clerk in the local branch of the Bank of Toronto and had charge of the collections. He was a keen lover of sport, and the moving spirit of the bankers' hockey team, of which he was captain. At 4:20 on Sat-urday afternoon the team left for Woodstock, where they played and lost in the evening with the bankers of that place. They were to return on No. 1, which was due to leave Woodstock at 1:20 a.m. The train was late, however, and did not pull out of that place until nearly 3 o'clock. Although the game had been lost by one goal, it was by far the closest and most exciting match that had been witnessed in Woodstock for some years, and the bank Pretty patterns in Art Muslins. boys had nothing to be ashamed of. They were tired, most of them, and slept. Carmichael slept a good deal of up, and as the conductor took up his ticket he was heard to ask if the train stopped at East London. Then he asked if it slowed up there. Thus he must have meditated getting off at the East End, although he said nothing about his intentions. The lights of London came into view at 3:50, and, as above stated, Carmichael left his companions, and must have leaped from the fast moving train just east of the Rectory street crossing.

TRAINMEN FOUND HIM. Nearly an hour later—at 4:45—a wayfreight arrived on the Stratford branch from Toronto. In the meantime train No. 2, the Lehigh Express, had passed east, leaving the city about 4:15 a.m. The Wabash, No. 4, followed about 20 minutes afterwards, and the way-freight was held on the branch line until the express got clear of the yard. The freight was in charge of Engineer Fred Mingay, 154 Clarence street. Slowly it proceeded up the yard on the second track, and stopped as the engine poked its nose over the sidewalk at Rectory street. The engineer prepared to back his train to the siding, and as he looked out of his cab window for the signal from the rear brakeman, his eye caught the prostrate figure of a man lying within eighteen inches of the track on which stood his train. His first thought was that the man had been struck by his own engine, but they had been going so slowly. The young man's feet lay across the south rail of the east-bound track, on which the two express trains had passed out. But there were no injuries to the limbs! Conductor Mingay, the brakeman and the fireman picked up THE UNCONSCIOUS FORM and bore it across the street to the station house. The night operator was aroused and the young fellow conveyed into the waiting room. Here, by means of an easy chair and a pillow he was made as comfortable as possible. His head was raised to stay as much as possible the terrible flow of blood from the crushed and battered skull. Engineer Mingay then went back to the signal house at the intersection of the Stratford branch and the main line and telephoned to Dr. Moore and the G. T. R. city authorities. Night Station Agent Carroll immediately had the yard engine attached to a baggage car, and with a stretcher left for the scene of the accident. The train stopped at the round house on the way back and Dr. Moore examined Carmichael's injuries. He saw at once that the case was hopeless and telephoned for an ambulance to meet the train at the station. The young man was then conveyed to the hospital, where he lingered unconscious until four o'clock in the afternoon, and died in the presence of his brother Otto, who had been hastily summoned from Woodstock in the morning. HOW IT HAPPENED. Detective Rider was early on the case, and from him it was ascertained that as soon as the acceident was discovered telegrams were sent after trains No. 2 and 4 to see if anyone was missing. At Woodstock Mr. Walker, of this city, the driver of No. 2 (the first train that passed out after the arrival of No. 1), found in making the isual examination of his engine, No. 698, a quantity of blood on the cowcatcher. Thus it would appear that young Carmichael had been stunned by his fall from No. 1 and lay alongside the track until No. 2 came whistling down the yard. Instinctively he thought of his of his danger, and in his condition he must have plunged right in the way of certain death. Even after he was struck by No. 2, and after No. 4 had also passed out, he made his way across the rails and fell between the first and second tracks with his feet over the main line south rail. Had be gone two feet fur-ther his head would have been crushed again under the wheels of the freight. He never regained consciousness at the hospital, and kept up a continuous inarticulate moaning, in which condition he was when first found.

The darkest parts of the Dark Continent are now open to missionaries, but wherever the children of God go, there also do the children of the devil. There are many different interpretations of this wonderful parable. When Christ came on this earth he found humanity in a very degraded state. As this was to him the pearl of great price, he sacrificed all and redeemed it. This shows the divine estimate of the value of human life. A man, no difference how deep in sin he has sunken, is of some value. If you deface a coin beyond recognition its value for circulation purposes is lost, and it is only valuable as so much bullion; but if you remint it, then it is of greater value. In the same way, if a sinner is redeemed by the grace of God he is of value and useful for circulation among mankind. You can fill a man with wickodness and even make him devilish, but you cannot entirely destroy his manhood. A man has no right to serve the devil. He was intended for a place

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Mr. Foster, Finance Minister, withdraws from Kings county, N. B., which he has represented for over ten years. because he knows that his opponent, Col. Domville, will be elected to support Hon. Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Sharpe, nominated by the Conservatives in Bothwell, withdraws because he knows he cannot defeat Hon. David Mills, though the constituency has been twice gerrymandered with the object of driving the veteran statesman from public life.

Mr. Charles S. Spooner, Conservative candidate in Frontenac, has retired. Even in this historic Conservative county no straight supporter of the discredited Ottawa Administration can be elected.

In Hamilton neither one of the present Conservative representatives will offer for re-election. One is the western Conservative whip.

In North Essex the Conservative convention ended in a row, one of the candidates charging that the grossest deception characterized the action of the leaders

And in London Sir John Carling has been squeezed out of the position of Conservative leader by the ambitious man who was chief sponsor for the candidature of the Conservative nominee in the late Provincial contest who was and the desire he expressed before leavdefeated by 803 majority, PREMIUM HORSES.

The London Free Press heads an editorial article this morning, "Canadian Horses at a Premium." In another part of the same paper we read that at a horse sale in Toronto yesterday "a neat little bay, apparently sound and in fair condition, sold for $6; a black ditto for same price; a gray gelding, somewhat larger, for $15; a bay, a trifle thin, but full of life, was withdrawn without an offer." Verily, Canadian horses are at a premium! Such animals would have netted $100 each in revenue tariff days.

Lord Rosebery was on the point of resigning, few British politicians gave credence to the rumor. The peer-Premier was recovering from his attack of influenza, the Government had passed safely through one of two crises, and the Liberal leaders felt more confident than ever of their ability to continue the present Parliament until the fall. Such a contingency as the resignation of Rosebery, whose avowed policy was to "fill up the cup" until the country was heartily sick of the House of Lords, never enterd the minds of either friends or foes. The great complaint has been that his lordship was too fond of office to relinquish it, even when the chance means short of direct trickery to keep his hand on the helm a few months longer. For the past few days, however, the report that Rosebery seriously contemplates resignation has gained strength, and there is some reason to believe that it has good foundation. The newspapers, which regarded the first rumor as an idle canard, have at last taken cognizance of the matter, and are discussing the probable effects of his retirement at this time. Naturally the Tory organs claim that Parliament should be dissolved and the country appealed to at once. Liberal journals, on the other hand, say that such a result does not necessarily follow. The Government, it is pointed out, has been gaining ground steadily since the session began, and is in a fair shape to carry out its legislative programme. There is, therefore, no valid reason why, in the event of Rosebery's resignation being tendered, the Queen should not send for Sir William Harcourt and intrust him with the task of forming a Cabinet. Sir William has been hankering after the Premiership for many years. He has a large personal following in the party, and in many respects is an abler and stronger man than Rosebery. He has an abiding faith in his political destiny, and rather than disturb it by submitting to the chances of a general election he would readily accept an offer to run the ship of state to the normal end of the session. GLADSTONE IN RETIREMENT. Late reports from the Riviera are to the effect that Mr. Gladstone has given up the idea of returning to Parliament. It is said that the only foundation for the statement that he would again take he exhibited in the Armenian outrages ing England to see the divergent Irish sections reunited. Mrs. Gladstone was strongly opposed to the grand old man again entering the political arena, and to a friend of the family, Mrs. Gladstone states that her husband exhibits no desire now to return to Parliament, or even to be temporarily associated with political agitations. This was written before the rumor of Rosebery's intended resignation, however, and there is no telling what the old warhorse may do if the nation should be plunged into a crisis. His advice and counsel would be eagerly sought by those Liberals who regretted his retirement and still persist in believing that he has many years of political usefulness before him. NILSSON MAY SING AGAIN. French newspapers are repeating with persistency the report that Christine Nilsson will return to the operatic stage. Countess Casa Miranda—the Swedish singer's married name—will only be heard upon the continent and in England, as she will not again brave the Atlantic. When heard it will be in some parts that are now new to her, as well as in some of those in which she won the applause of two hemispheres.

MANY REFORMS POSSIBLE. Among the many plans suggested for the relief of agricultural troubles in England the following extensive programme is attracting wide attention: 1. Equalize local taxation of all descriptions of property. 2. Arrange for the redemption of the land tax on easy terms, facilitating where necessary or desirable, sales of portions of estates for its redemption. 3. Pass an act for the redemption of tithes on easy terms, arranging for sales of portions of estates where the landlords do not prefer to pay in cash. 4. Reduce railway rates even if it be necessary to nationalize the railways in order to do it, and rigidy suppress preference rates in favor of the foreigner. 5. Rigidly suppress the sale of adulterated products as genuine market monopolies. 7. Tax beer in such a manner as to remove the fiscal advantages now obtained through the use of substitutes for malt and hops. 8. appoint a land court to value rents and decide disputes between landlord and tenant, and give the latter the right of free sale of his improvements, with sufficient continuity of tenure to secure the system of free sale, and let him be have assured to him freedom of cultivation and sale of produce. Advocates of this programme assert that it would enable British farmers to compete on equal terms with the whole world, and, "as they are the best farmers in the world," they would hold their own and prosper. As for the laborers, with agriculture prospering, their welfare would be secure. The demand for their services would be greater than the supply, especially as small holdings would pay as they have not paid for years, and if men could not earn good wages on farms they could farm on a small scale on their own account. If found necessary, special legislation could follow for their security. There is no fear, say the advocates of this plan, of the agricultural laborer being left out in the cold for the future if other

IS THE MARQUIS CRAZY? The case of Oscar Wilde vs. Marquis of Queensbury was put in a new aspect after the adjournment of the case on Saturday, first, by Lord Alfred Douglas, the second son of the Marquis of Queensbury, who called at the news agencies to say there was not the slightest truth in his father's allegations against Mr. Wilde and himself. "My father," he said, "is a madman. All the family are against him in this mat-My eldest brother and I drove with Mr. Wilde to the court today, and

When it was whispered last week that | years old, but appears ten years older.

A little later in the afternoon Lord Douglas, of Hawick, the eldest surviving son of the Marquis of Queensbury, made even a more damaging statement against his father. He said he was just home from Australia, and he had assured himself that there was no truth in his father's charges, which were aimed as much against his own son as against Mr. Wilde. "My father has been a brute to his family," he said. "He is responsible for the death of my mother and my elder brother. Now he seems bent upon ruining my younger brother and me. We shall do all we can to help clear Mr. Wilde of this infamous charge. My father's socalled evidence consists of anonymous letters, which he himself wrote to my brother, one of which was produced in court. The magistrate very properly suppressed these letters. They contain the wildest and most dreadful charges against many prominent peo-ple. I believe father is of unsound mind, but there is a good deal of vice in his madness.'

Lord Douglas, in contrast with his brother, is a keen energetic man of business, only 27 years old, but very prominent now in connection with the development of gold discoveries in West Australia. The case is naturally making an immense sensation in Lon-As matters stand, only two results seem possible. ANOTHER SOCIETY SELOCK. Polite society in London has had another severe shock in the announcement that one of the most eligible young men in the matrimonial market has engaged himself to a pert young person playing a second-rate part at the Gaiety Theater. The gentleman is Majoribanks, the eldest son of Lord Tweedmouth, one of the wealthiest of peers, and the lady is Miss Birdie Sutherland, better known, perhaps, as the sister of Lily Harold, the comedienne and singer of plantation songs, at present gracing the Drury Lane pantomime. Nobody has ventured to suggest that these two young women are not as good and virtuous as they are undeniably pretty, and it is a fact that they reside in a genteel suburb with their widowed mother, and frequently take part in local church charity conbut all that, with additional proof of severe respectability afforded in the Bank of England, is scarcely sufficient to justify their ambition to contract an alliance with a family the head of which is a member of the Brit-

Southern Europe suffered most severely this week from the unseasonable visitations. Snow fell in many places two feet on a level. Vienna and other cities were completely paralyzed for a day or two. A thaw set in yesterday, and now great floods are imminent. A COUNTESS FIXED and now great floods are imminent. A countess fixed.

Cold rain began in London today,

The Queen has granted letters patent tary authorities are expressing ominthe world, is now extremely un-satisfactory. The mortality record, under the influence of influenza and other week's figures are just double the normal. The direct viotims of influenza, chest diseases killed four times the usual number. There is good reason to believe that fresh cases of influenza in the last three or four days have been in a rapidly diminishing proportion. Those return ing to the usual duties of life greatly outnumber the fresh victims in all parts of the city. We now hear more about the consequences of influenza than the remedy itself. These take the form of bronchitis and heart troubles more often than pneumonia. The local government board, with the usual studidity of English officialdom, did not issue until today a public proclamation about measures dealing with the epidemic, which has now been widespread for nearly three weeks, and is today rapidly declining.

LORDS ARE HEAVY LOSERS. The craze for company promoting, which of late years has so strongly seized upon the British aristocracy, has counted this week two notable victims. Baron Sudley, a representative of pro-bably the oldest families in the peerage, has been obliged to put on the mar-ket two estates which have been in the possession of his ancestors since the Saxon period. Lord Sudely, now nearly 60 years old, began life wealthy and married a rich woman, but both fortunes have been swallowed up in about ten years by company speculations. He was until recently the director of fifteen different companies, nearly all of which proved disastrous undertakings. He has lost nearly half a million pounds in these undertakings.

The other case is that of Lord Thurlow, a descendant of one of England's most famous lord chancellors. The Thurlow family is one of great antiquity in Norfolk. The peer who has now come to grief was the private secretary of Sir Francis Bruce when the latter was Minister to Washington, in 1866, and since that time he held minor offices in the Liberal Governments. His debts amount to $2,225,000, and he has offered to compromise with creditors on onethird of that sum. He lost his money in the same way as Lord Sudely, but his case has assumed this week a very ugly complexion. He admitted in the bankruptcy proceedings that he valuable jewelry and pawned wards. Six Big Pennsylvania Coal Operators Concede an Advance in Prices.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 10.-Saturday's developments in the coal miners' strike situation were favorable to the men. There is likely to be serious trouble here when navigation opens with the longshoremen. The Lake Carriers' Association has decided to fight the longshoremen's union during the coming summer. Vessel men assert in spite of the fact that vessel rates were so low last year, few lumber carriers made their expenses. The longshoremen all along the lakes nevertheless insisted on their high prices. The longshoremen are getting 40 cents and upwards and have always insisted that this was not extortionate. The fight will undoubtedly be a hard one.

LONDON, March 10.—A lockout of the employes in the Leicester boot trade, involving 28,000 operatives, is imminent. The trouble is due to a reduction of wages, said to be made necessary by the influx of American goods, which are flooding England. The British manufacturers declare that their trade will be gone entirely unless the payment of lower wages enables them to meet the American competition.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The bicycle craze on land which seems to have seized the community is not a circumstance to what the blowle fever may stance to what the bicycle fever may develop into if water cycling becomes popular. Yesterday afternoon Robert S. Rusell made a successful trial with a bicycle catamaran-or "unicle catamaran," as he calls it—which seems to prove water cycling to be a feasible, prove water cycling to be a reasible, harmless and pleasant pastime.

Russell has been experimenting for some time on a water bicycle to be propelld by pedals. The machine he uses is 16 feet long, with a seat and pedals similar to those of a bicycle which connect with a wheel supplied with six pedals immediately in the rear. Russell has experimented with his strange craft has experimented with his strange craft in the smooth water of the river, but had never before tried it in rough water. He left the foot of Ninety-second street at 4 o'clock accompanied by friends in a rowboat to take a trip through Hell Gate. A great crowd had gathered on the dock to see him. The tide was running in strong when Russell shot out from the dock. He rode swifty across the East River until he struck swift current, and all the sea qualities of his craft were brought into play. He shot through the narrow channel and over the Hog's Back shoals, in the running of which he lost two of his paddles. He then rode his water vehicle up to Wolsey Point, where he made the Long Island shore. The trip was successful in every particular. In suitable water Russell can make eight or ten miles an hour.

CANADA'S BEST MARKET.

Result of the Recent United States Tariff Reductions.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 10 .- An exceedingly important publication is the annual report of the Merchants' Exchange. It gives the duty collected at this port for the one year ended Dec. 31, 1894, as $473,830 as compared with between $750, 000 and $875,000 during the preceding four years, and of this sum of $743,830 nearly one-half was collected during the three months in which the new tariff bill was is operation.

The principal articles of import during the past year: and which paid one-third d all the duty collected were sheep and barley. The sheep were valued at $529,-378 and the barley at $135,734. The Man

Who went out into the garden and planted a dollar bill in the ground, and then went back into the house and waited for it to grow, was half-brother to the man who rented a store, stocked it with goods, and did not advertise, but expected people to fall over each other in their eagerness to buy his goods because he had a large show window, and had bought a cheap stock.

The way to make dollars grow is to plant space in "The Advertiser." Weed out all untruths, apply a fertilizer occasionally in the shape of reduction on some one line, and you reap a rich harvest.

Bearer of an Important Letter.

The Bavarian master of the horse, Count Maxe von Holnstein, whose death has just been announced, took part in the Franco-German war, and will be remembered as the bearer of the historic letter from Prince Bismarck to the late King Louis of Bavaria in December, 1870. This led King Louis to entreat the King of Prussia to take the title of German Emperor, and he sent a letter to that effect by the same messenger, who journeyed from Munich to Versailles without stopping. The double journey was accomplished on horseback in six days and won for the Count a high encomium from Prince Bismarck.

Noblisse Oblige.

One of Frederick Douglass' best traits was his affection for his old master and his family, the Lloyds of Talbot county, Maryland, on whose estate he passed his boyhood in slavery. Some years ago while he was holding public office in Washington he visited the scenes of his childhood and roamed over the familiar ground with his master's sons, exibbiting all the while an enthusiasm and affection that were touching. Then at the old sideboard in the dining room he drank the health of the family.

GRAND TRUNK TRAIN WRECKERS

Near Windsor-A Rail on the Track-Calamity Averted.

(Special to the "Advertiser.") WINDSOR, March 11 .- An attempt was made to wreck a train on the Grand Trünk Railway about five miles from here early Saturday morning. Detectives Logan, of London, and Bradley, of Hamilton, are here, and expect to make an arrest. There was a rail placed across the track used by the east bound trains, and the police found the footprints of one man around there. A freight train passed shortly before the express and knocked it off. It is looked upon as a deliberate attempt to throw the latter off the track.

MURDER AT THE INSTITUTE. But Only a Theoretical One-Opening of the Trial. One of the most interesting meetings in the history of the Collegiate Institute Literary Society was held last Friday afternoon in the upper assembly hall of the school. It was decided to hold a conversazione this year, instead of an "At Home" for the pupils in the near future. After the business the most interesting part of the meeting began. A mock trial had been prepared for the programme. The charge was murder, and the scene of the crime the Proof Line road, near the residence of Mr. Marshall, M.P. The judge was H. B. Beal, the prisoner James Little, and the murdered man Erle White. Counsel for the prosecution was A. T. Essery, Q.C., and for the defense, F. H. Screaton, Q.C. The clerk of the court was P. A. Carson, and the crier, Robt. Laidlaw. Mr. Essery, in his opening address, stated that he would prove that the prisoner was the only person seen along the road at the time of the murder; that he was seen to pass through the tollgate just a short distance behind the deceased; that he was known to be an enemy of his, having been heard to threaten him, and that a revolver be-longing to him was found in the road near the body. He called the following witnesses in support of this: Messrs. Gahan and McVean, and Messrs. Laid-law (coroner), Johnson (county constable), McMillan, Judd and Garvey. Mr. Screaton, at the next meeting, will open the case for the defense.

THE HENDERSHOTT TRAGEDY. ST. THOMAS, March 11.-At the opening of the court this morning Chief Justice Meredith gave his decision debarring the evidence given by the prisoners Hendershott and Welter at the coroner's inquest previous to their arrest

The other disputed questions in regard to admitting the insurance evidence to show a motive for committing the crime will be given tomorrow. It is expected the head of the dead man will be exhibited today in court. W. J. Astrander testified to the prisoner Hendershott showing him on the day of the killing two policies amount- for whom he worked. He fell through an ing to $11,000 upon the life of the de- elevator shaft and sustained injuries. The

M. Worth, whose death is reported in another column, was born in Bourne, in Lincolnshire, in 1825, and the king of fashion was, therefore, not, as generally supposed, a Frenchman, but an Englishman. He was employed for some time at a well-known firm in Oxford street, London, and then proceeded to Paris. M. Worth has made dresses for all the queens of Europe, with the single exception of Queen Victoria, and women of fashion all the world over. His father was a solicitor, who had a good private fortune, but who lost it in speculation. At the age of 13 years young Worth went to Swan & Edgar's, in London, and remained there for seven years, during which time he did all the work of an ordinary apprentice.

A Girls' Rebellion.

CHICAGO, March 11.-The police were ast night called to the home for juvenile offenders at Thirty-first street and Spadina avenue to quelt an insurrection among the inmates. Several of the young women were taken to jail. They had smashed furniture and windows and torn the bedding to pieces. The young women claimed they had been starved and ill-used for slight infractions of the rules.

J.D. Thorburn, of Toronto, to Miss I. M. Meredith, daughter of Chief Justice W. R. Meredith. -In the absence of the chairman of the Stathroy district Rev. Mr. Holmes, of the city, preached in the Methodist boarding mistress with obtaining board on fals pretenses. The young man'is well conjected in England. -The appeal in the case of Headford vs. McClary was dismissed by the Supreme Court today. The appeal was taken by H. Headford, of Maitland street, against the judgment of the Court of Appeal, which quashed a verdict in his favor given by a Middlesex jury. His action was one for damages against the McClary Company, reme Court's verdict is victory for the company. -Liberals are reminded that Mr. Hyman's supporters in No. 1 ward will organize for the campaign at the Odd-of the Grand Trunk at Toronto, died suddenly of heart disease at that place this morning. Mr. Slatter was extremely well known in local railroad and Masonic circles, and is also known to every traveling man throughout Western Ontario. He was about 45 years old, and married for a second time only a couple of months ago. Mr. Slatter entered the employ of the company about 25 years ago, when Mr. Arnold was city ticket agent at Toronto, and had steadily worked his way up to his late position. Deceased was a 32nd degree Mason.

The Centennial's New Organ.

The Williams pipe organ, which arrived on Friday and is now being placed in position in the Centennial Methodist Church choir gallery, will be ready for use at the organ recital and sacred concert which will be held in the church on Thursday night. The organ is an imposing instrument, costing $1,075. It is being placed in position by two expert organ builders from the Williams Company-Reinburg and Mias, jun., both Frenchmen. The former is a world-celebrated pipe organ voicer and tuner. Three other workmen are engaged in assisting the Frenchmen. Miss Lilly-white, W. H. Skinner, Fred L. Hardey, J. W. Fetherston, Miss Cullen and the choir will take part in the opening con-Fined the Drivers.

Magistrate Parke gave judgment this morning in the charge of cruelty to animals preferred against the three street car drivers—Arthur Rockett, Wm. Tuke and Philip Stevenson. He found them guilty of the charge, and inflicted a fine of $5 or five days. Wm. Morrow was also found guilty of cruelty to a horse. As the horse was dead it was hard to find an owner for it. Morrow said it did not belong to him. Pat Tierney also disclaimed ownership. As the defendant could ill afford to pay a fine he was let go on suspended sentence. Frank Marshall, South London, was charged with false pretenses. It was alleged that he bought a quarter of beef from Richard Fenwick under misleading representations as to his financial condition. The amount at stake is only $7. Marshall was committed for trial. He claims to have a good defense. Charles Williams, charged with drunkenness and vagrancy, was fined $5 or twenty days. Alfred Harrison was charged by G. T. R. Conductor Patrick Murray with using threatening and in-sulting language. The offense occurred on a crowded train in the presence of a number of ladies. He was bound over to keep the peace on the charge of threatening, and on the charge of using insulting language was fined $3 or five days. Station Agent McHarg laid a similar charge on behalf of the com-pany. It was withdrawn.

Death of Mr. John W. Kern. The city of London has lost another of its oldest and best known residents, through the death of Mr. John W. Kern, of 405 Horton street. Savings and Loan Company. The Street Car Case. Chief Justice Armour's decision in the case of Drivers Tuke. Stevenson and Rockett, of the street railway company, against Police Magistrate Parke and Sergeant Crawford, has arrived here. Early in February informations for cruelty were laid against the three drivers named-two changes being preferred against Rockett and only one against Tuke and Stevenson. One of the charges against Rockett was tried on Feb. 13, and a fine of $10 was imposed for cruelty to an/imals. The other three cases were then withdrawn. Chief Williams ascertaining that the same horses were being worked again had further informations laid against the drivers. Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, for the company, wanted the police magistrate to issue a certificate of dismissal of the cases which had been withdrawn. P. M. Parke refused, and Mr. Hellmuth moved before Chief Justice Armour on Tuesday last to have the request complied with. The judge, however, dismissed the motion with costs. Mr. J. B. McKillep represented the police magistrate and Sergeant Crawford.

R. C. We beg to request your acceptance of the accompanying articles as a slight recognition and reminder of our appreciation of your very able and kind service, and the obliging and courteous manner in which it was invariably rendered. Signed on behalf of the committee Stewards-D. McKENZIE, H. E. BUT-TREY. J. M. DILLON, chairman." Mr. Struthers made a very suitable acknowledgment, and after passing cordial and unanimous votes of thanks to the chairman, J. M. "Oh dear, no: that is quite a mistake," Mrs. Verity exclaimed, in a righteous tone. She may have given you to understand so" at which Mrs. George shook her head as if she would shake it off—"but your never neard me say so. I know her, of course, as one knows dozens of people whose houses one goes to, but nothing more than that—one goes to, but nothing more than that—hothing I assure you."

"Oh, really. You don't say so! I quite thought you and she were bosom friends. I quite thought so. Then, of course, if you have only been acquaintances, it will beeasy enough for you. Otherwise it really is horrid when one's friends, come to grief—they're when one's friends come to grief—they're always so terribly touchy. And one offends them by next to nothing."

"Quite so, quite so," rejoined Mrs. Verity.

"Well, I must be going. I only hope Mrs.
George will have the decency to fade away without making it too hard for her friends.

And I must say I'm sorry for her dressmaker. They tell me she owes her at least

'Shocking!" cried the other, "I really don't know how a woman can go on spending money at that rate. Of course every one knows that the Grevilles have been in difficulty and debt for years. I cannot tell how such people get trusted to such an extent. I know I cannot. Why, as a matter of fact, I owe Mme. I xe £150, and to judge by the fuss she makes you might think that I owed her a thousand.

"Oh, I find dressmakers simply rapacious and they care no more for the benefits they have got out of you than a bird would care for the crumbs you throw out of the window on a snowy morning. If you happen to be a little behind they don't care how they worry you or inconvenience you. In fact, I believe they always make up a big bill which must be met within three days.

"Of course, they do make a good many bad debts," put in the other in a modified oad debts, put in the other in a mount tone.

"Ah, yes, like Mrs. George," responded Mrs. Verity, catching at the idea. "And I must say it does seem hard that you and I should have to pay for Mrs. George's finery.

"Oh, yes, cruelly hard. I declare I never looked at it in that light before."

Then the two ladies got up and walked

Then the two ladies got up and walked away and Mrs. George, after waiting a minute or two, slowly followed them, just in time to meet Mrs. Verity leaving the drawing-room, after saying "good-by" to

"Just going?" she asked, in quite her usual friendly tones. "Nice party this afternoon, wasn't it?" "Perfectly delightful," replied Mrs.

George, promptly. "I don't know when I've enjoyed myself so much." "Ah, you always do enjoy everything so ntterly," said Mrs. Verity, as if she was not capable of enjoying anything. Mrs. George at once became in a measure ribald. "Why not?" saidshe. Thenlooked straight at the other and quoted; "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die," and laughed wickedly at her friend's shocked face as she passed on.

They say that a woman cannot keep a secret; but some women can, and Mrs. George was one of them. Not one single word did she say to her husband about the conversation which she had overheard, but she did say to him the next day, in a casual sort of way, "I say, Georgie, dear, if I do something very mad during the next few days will you absolve me?"

"Why, of course. But tell me what are you going to do?" "No, no; that's my secret," she cried with a laugh. "I'll tell you this much, though; I am not very sure about the sincerity of some of our dearest friends, and I've got a little scheme in my head by which I think I can find out exactly the worth of most of them." "Well, my dearest, you must do as you like about that." George Greville answered, fondly. "But, at the same time, I must say that if ever a woman deserved to have true and stanch friends that one is yourself, for heaven knows, you always think of them first and yourself last." "But the one does not always mean the other, George," she replied, with something like tears twinkling in her eyes.

For a few days nothing happened, excepting that a rumor crept out to the effect that George Greville's business had actually changed hands and that now he might legally write gentleman after his name.
Still, there was no definite news of the Grevilles having personally come to grief, and the smart little house wore quite its usual aspect. But at the end of the week Mrs. George's many friends were thunderstruck by receiving a neat card apiece on which was written as follows;

"Mrs. George Greville begs to inform her friends that July 15th, she will commence business as an Al-Fresco Forist at Hyde Park Corner, where she hopes, by strict attention to business, to merit their support and patronage.

How Mrs. George's thousand friends and acquaintances felt when they received this communication will be better imagined than described. As soon as she had swallowed her breakfast Mrs. Verity put on her hat one which figured in Mme. ixe's bill for a couple of guineas; but that, of course, was neither here nor there-and rushed round to her friend, Mrs. Warner the lady with whom she had exchanged confidences a few days previously, to the great edification and en-lightment of the subject of them. "Have you heard?" she burst cut.

"Yes, I've had one; and I hardly knew her at all," replied Mrs. Warner in a dread-fully ill-used tone.

"She mast be mad," Mrs. Verity cried.
"Mad, perfectly mad. Does she expect that her friends are going to Hyde Park Corner every day to buy flowers at extertionate prices and hobnob with the flower women in the street? She must be perfectly mad. I'm sure it's bad enough to have half one's friend in business of some kind or other making you pay three times the value for everything you buy, and all with that horrid uncomfortable feeling that you can't find fault, however much you want to, without having one's mere acquaintances setting themselves up as flower-sellers at the street corners. What is it she calls herself? O, 'as an Al-Fresco Florist'; downright impudence, I "Shall you go?" Mrs. Warner asked. "Oh, yes, if it's only to get a lesson in brazen impudence," Mrs. Verity replied. "Of course everybody will go, if only for a time or two, just to see how she carries it

"I do wonder that George Greville isn't ashamed to let her do it," Mrs. Verity went on, presently. "But, there, the men will let their wives do anything nowadays, positively anything. And, of course, it is her waste-fulness and extravagance that have put them into this fix. How soon shall you go

"Whenever you like," the other replied.
"Though I must say that I don't like going at all; and I am sure it would be much wiser to wash our hands of her altogether and forget that we ever knew her at all. After all we didn't either of us think of her as a street florist—and if we had met her as such, we would have refused to know her at all. I really can't see, if people go and get themselves—by their own extravagance and themselves—by their own extravagance and folly, too—into a totally different position to what they were in when you first met them, why it should be obligatory that you need go on knowing them. I don't really."

"Oh. no; but I shall go, poor thing," said Mrs. Verity unctuously. "I shouldn't like to have it said that I'd turned my back on a friend when she was in trouble. Of course, I should not think of asking her to the house. I should not think of asking her to the house how she carries it off." So, about 12 o' the clock, the two ladies might have been seen walking slowly along Knightsbridge in the direction of Apsley

"There she is," Mrs. Verity cried excited: "And I declare she's got a crowd round straw trimmed with black lace on her fair. fluffy hair. And she looked as brisk as a bee and as happy asever she had done when she stood in a similar place for the sake of

In attendance upon her was a respectable looking woman of middle age, attired in decent black and wearing a large white apron. "I declare it's quite like the nobleman who goes out with a barrel organ," remarked

Mrs. Verity with a sneer. Then, as they drew nearer, the al-fresco florist perceived them, and, smiling upon them beamingly, welcomed them with outstretched hand.

"Now, I do call this friendly of you," she saip, in just the same voice as of old. "Now what can I do for you?"

"Oh, thanks. We will buy a little bunch of flowers, just for the sake of encouraging you," replied Mrs. Warner, who was determined to make the delinquent feel that she had forfeited all right to equality with her. "That's downright good of you," said Mrs. George, heartily, and thoroughly enjoying the situation. "There's a nice little bunch the situation.

"Thank you. Yes; they will do very nicely," said Mrs. Warner, frigidly. (To be Continued.)

Many Millions of Over-Taxation in Can ada Today.

The deficits of 1893-94 and 1894-95 are not caused by tariff reduction. Sir Richard Cartwright made that very plain in his brilliant speech at Sarnia. "As to the absurd pretense that the present loss of revenue is due, to any appreciable extent, to the reduction of taxation, allow me to call your attention to one or two simple facts. I have here a short table showing our import of dutiable goods for the months of November and December in 1893 and 1894, and also the exact duties paid thereon, and I find it reads as follows:

Dutiable goods imported in November and December, 1893: Total amount $8,883,260

Dutiable goods imported for November and December, 1894; Total amount$8,239,535

Duty thereon 2,665,581 Percentage of duty, 32.4 per cent. "Verily, gentlemen, the reduction of the tariff has got in its fine work. Only think of it! Your burdens have really and actually been lessened to the extent of three-tenths of 1 per cent! Now, is not this a real triumph of skill and patience, and ought not everybody to be satisfied? And it took Mr. Foster and his colleagues only twelve months to think it out, and three months to put again. But I shall make a point of getting my flowers of her; besides, I want to see this stupendous scheme into execution! Again I say, only just think of it-threetenths of 1 per cent on a customs tariff of $20,000,000 is about $60,000 a year. Why, sir, it would pay fully one-fifth of the whole amount we lost on the Curran bridge. It would defray nearly one-eighth part of the cost of the Tay Canal. A SUCCESSFUL CANADIAN.

Death of Sheriff Rice, of Grand Rapids Mich.—Has a Sister in London.

The history of Nathaniel Rice, sheriff of Kent county, Michigan, who died the other day, is identical with that of the majority of bright Canadians of sterling character who have moved over the border. Mr. Rice was a brother of Mrs. Wm. Feeley, 367 Simcoe street, this city. He was born in East Flamboro, Wentworth county, in 1841, and went to Michigan with his parents about 30 years ago. He worked a large farm in Plainfield township for a number of years. For nine successive terms he served that township as supervisor. In 1884 he was elected registrar of deeds on the Republican ticket and served two terms. At the close of his official career he was chosen secretary of the Kent, Ottawa and Allegan Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which office he held up to the time of his election as sheriff ber of the A.O.U.W., the I.O.F., K. of P., I. O. O. F. and the Good Templars. His other sisters are Mrs. James Foster and Mrs. John Cooper, of Michigan, and his brothers, William, James and John, all live in the same State. Such was the esteem in which the community held Mr. Rice that flags in Grand Rapids, his home, were hung at half-mast, and there were many evidences of mourning. The funeral services were largely attended, though private, and floral offerings were heaped on the casket in profusion. The Grand Rapids Herald says that Sheriff Rice was a man of rugged honesty, and brought to his public duties entire fidelity to the trusts committed to him. Democrats and Republicans united in paying him tribute.

LAID DOWN ON THE TRACK.

Deliberate Suicide of a Farmer Whose Mind Was Unhinged by Illness.

WINDSOR, March 10 .- Wm. Abbott, a farmer, aged 50 years, was run over and fatally injured by a train on the Lake Erie road, east of Windsor, early yesterday morning. One leg was cut away and in charge of some person or persons to his skull was fractured, and without recovering consciousness, the unfortunate such highway at such intersection.

man died at 9 o'clock. It seems that —Mr. Walter Boug, traveler for the Abbott, who lives on a farm near Jericho, had been ill with a fever for several days. During the night he must have become delirious, for without arousing the house . hold, he left his bed, removed his shirt, and after donning a pair of drawers and socks he fled across the fields. The engineer of the 6:40 train was startled to see the half-naked man standing on the track some distance ahead. When the whistle was sounded to warn him, instead of getting out of the way, Abbott deliberately lay down on the track and the train passed over him. A halt was made and a physician was summoned, but there was no help for the terribly mangled man. Deceased was a widower with three grown up daughters.

Mrs. Celeste Coon, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "For years I could not eat many kinds of food without producing a burning, excruciating pain in my stomach. I took Parmelee's Pills ac-cording to directions under the head of Dyspepsia or Indigestion.' One box entirely cured me. I can now eat any-thing I choose without distressing me in the least." These pills do not cause pain or griping, and should be used

-The Band of Hope social and literary lunch given at the home of Mr. W. J. Saunby, London West, on Thursday evening was a marked success. A large gathering of guests listened with evident pleasure to a choice musical programme, which was well rendered. The lunch itself was a very unique and enjoyable affair. Mr. and Mrs. Saunby spared no pains to make the social hour a pleasant one, and their visitors departed feeling that they had enjoyed a very pleasant and profitable evening. -The opinion held by most farmers is that if their cattle are killed by a railway train they can make the company pay for them. But, according to section 2, R. S. O., and the judgment of Chief Justice Armour on this point, in case any damage is done to a railway, train, to a trolley car, or to an individual, the owner of the animal is respon sible, and his estate becomes answerable for the damage. Aside from the general herd law about cattle running at large, chap. 170, section 103, R. S. He carries two watches, exactly alike in appearance, one a very loud ticker and the other a very weak ticking one. Before applying the remedy he holds the weak ticker to the ear of his patient, who, of course, can hear no sound. Putting it back in his pocket he rubs the ear with his liniment for a while then holds the loud ticker to his victim's head, and asks if he can hear it tick. O course he can, and thinking he has been miraculously benefited the deaf man buys several bottles of the lightning cure at a good price. People would do well to turn a deaf ear to the entreaties of the fakir. -The funeral of Robert C. Bredin, the Grand Trunk engineer, who died rather suddenly at his residence, 307 Simcoe street, took place on Saturday afternoon. The cortege was one of the longest that has been seen in the city for some time. Interment was at Mount Pleasant.

A Cottage Fire.

South London firemen felt sure that they had another church fire to attend at 2:15 Sunday morning as they turned the corner on Askin street and saw smoke issuing apparently from the Sunday school of St. James' Church. But the fire was at 109 Askin street, next door to the Sunday school, in a frame house, the property of Mr. James Robinson, South London, and occupied by a man named Penny. The fire was confined to the kitchen, where it originated from the chimney. The hook and ladder truck and five men went over from the central station and assisted in subduing the flames. The loss on building will be $250, covered by insurance. Mr. Penny loses all his kitchen furniture.

Rev. J. W. Annis' Funeral. At a meeting of the Ministerial Association held this morning, it was decided that the members meet in a body at the parsonage, Park avenue, at 9:45 tomorrow morning. A short service will be held at the house, and then the cortege will proceed to St. Andrew's Church, where service will be held at 10:30. After the service the funeral will proceed to the G. T. R. station, where the remains will be placed on the 12:30 train for interment at Hamilton. Friends are requested to be at the church not later than 10:30.

McDonald were this morning the scene of a fire which but for the unceasing pluck of the firemen and an abundant supply of water might have ended with very serious results. St. Johns, Nfld., March 10 .- The banks will not accept any compromise from firms indebted to them, and are winding up business houses all over the city. Five of the largest mercantile houses here were closed yesterday. One house offered to pay 70 cents on the dollar, but the offer was refused. There is great indignation over these proceedings, which entail the shutting out of at least 7,000 more men to join the already great crowd of unfortunates here in the search for bread.
