Lassen's Treatment of Baldness.

The treatment recommended by Lassar, of Berlin, for alopeois pityrodes and alopeois areata has been attended with some brilliant results. According to Dr. Graetwer's article in the Therapeutiche Monatschrift, but few cases resist the treatment, and after a few applications the downy sprouts may be seen. The following procedure is to be repeated daily:

1. The scalp should be Isthered well with a strong tare along for ten minutes.

2. This lather is to be removed with lakewarm water, followed by colder water in abundance; then the scalp is to be dried.

3. A solution of bidhioride of mercury, I to bothed on.

4. The scalp is then rubbed dry with a solution containing beta mapthol, I parts and absolute alchol, 200 parts.

5. The final step in the process is an anointing of the scalp with an unguent containing 2 parts of silicylic acid, 5 parts of tincure of benzoin, and 100 parts of the International Congress of this year, has done much to awaken the profession from the lethargic state into which it had fallen in regard to the treatment of alopecia.

French scientific men and engineers are discussing the feasibility of a railroad across the desert of Sahara. It is claimed that such an enterprise is necessary to confirm the hold of France upon her possions on the west coast of Africa and to develop the North African provinces of which she is possessed. Franch engineers, in fact, seem particularly active just now. Another of their proposals is to bridge the Bosphorus, the structure to be 2,500 feet long, with a single arch.

Letter to the Pope.

Letter to the Pope.

The following letter has been sent to Pope Leo XIII from Pennsylvania: Your recent utterance in favor of poor, downstrodden and suffering humanity have affected me very deeply. As one of the poor I thank your holinese meat sincerely for your sympathy in our behalf. About a year ago there came to my hand a paper, entitled "Back to the Land." It was addressed "To the clergy and laity of the diocese of Meath," Ireland, by Thomas Nuty, Bishop of Meath.

I read it very carefully and at once saw the light, saw clearly and distinctly the reason why "The poor ye have with you always," and fully comprehended that all the misery, vice, involuntary poverty and degradation was caused by not following the Lord's command that "The land shall not be sold forever, for the land is mine; ye are only sojourners with me." Becoming interested in the land question, I considered it my duty to myself and my fellows to study the subject most carefully. The conclusions arrived at are: That this earth contains sufficient wealth to give all enough and to spare; that the invention and use of labor saving machinery, and the presses means for exchanging products, abould make it easier to earn a living, and should be a blessing to the laborer instead of a curse; that the Lord made this earth in usufruce for all the children of men; that it is, therefore, manifestly wrong to allow a few men to own and control the earth, and make others pay for the right to live; that we cannot do without land any woos they would be a present of the right to live; that we cannot do without land any woos they would be a present of the right to live; that we cannot do without land any shabit is, therefore, manifestly wrong to allow a few men to own and control the earth, and make others pay for the right to live; that we cannot do without I and any more than without air and water; that the children of men, by their presence, give value to the land which is would otherwise not possess; that they also create governmental expenses, and that, therefore, it is only just that the one should be taken for the payment of the other.

This should be taken for the payment of the other.

This plack hat upon the value of land, or group rash, would be just and fair to all. Oxysied by the people, it should not, as now, be taken by individuals, but should go where it properly belongs—to the public treasury. Involuntary poverty and the vices arising therefrom would then be a thing of the pasts. I most earnessly beseeth your holiness to give the subject the attention it deserves.

One in your exalted position, one upon whom the whole world looks as the moral teacher, has it in his power to guide us, so that we may not pray in vain: "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is is a heaven." The sympathy and support of your holiness in this movement of practical religion is earnestly sought.

The Louisians Lottery and the Fools.
The Louisians Lottery has offered the State of Louisians a cool million a year for twenty-five years for the privilege of selling lottery tickets to fools. It is generally understood that this offer is a proposition to divide the feel's for iventy-dive years for the privilege of selling lottery tickets to fools. It is generally understood that this offer is a proposition to divide the fool's money with the State for the privilege of fleecing the fools. In other words the lottery managers in the light of their past experience expect to gather in $50,000,000 of fool's money during the next twenty-five years if the State of Louisians will accept half the amount as a bribe for allowing them to do it. The Legislature of Louisians will accept half the amount as a bribe for allowing them to do it. The Legislature of Louisians has thus thrust upon itself the responsibility of accepting or rejecting this effer of a partnership in the business of fleecing fools. That it should be rejected is the unanimous opinion of homest men, but unfortunately honsely doesn's always control legislative bodies, and it is not at all impossible that the fool-fleecing partnership may be formed. Twenty-five millions in fools. bodies, and it is not at all impossible that the fool-fleecing partnership may be formed. Twenty-five millions in fools' money would have the State of Louisiana twenty-five millions in taxes, and even housest men hate to pay taxes. But what a comment is this unblushing offer upon the exceeding foolishness of the lottery purchasing fools. To be publicly paraded in the newspapers as willing and even anxious to give the lottery sharps a cool two million a year without a return, should, one would think, open the eyes of the fools. It probably will do nothing of the kind, for the fool has not changed his nature since it was written of him that, though brayed in a mortar with a pestle, yet would not his foolishness depart from him. It is a pity for all that the poor fools should have so much good money to throw away.—Philadelphia Times.

When He's Dressed in His Best Euit of. Clothes."

AWFUL MINING HORROR

Thirty-four Men Perish by Explosion and Pire Damp in a Coal Mine

SOME GALLANT EFFORTS AT RESCUE.

ing. Only ten escaped. At least forty men are still in the pit, and it is believed they have been sufficasted.

A Dunbar despatch says: This morning at 11.10 a chitwering roar shook the lowly miners' dwallings on Hill farm, in Fayetse county, mear this place, and affrighted hundreds of persone, who knew so well the sound indicated another mine disaster. In a moment the fearful news had spread that the Hill farm mines, owned by Philadelphia parties, had exploded. The low-browed hill, from which the slope entered, abook from mouth to pit, and the scores of miners' houses lining the hill poured out fressied inmates by the hundred. A rush was made to the mouth of the pit, but ingress was impossible, as smoke in dense volumes was issuing forth. Fifty-two miners had gone to work this morning and were in the left heading and thirty-four in the right heading. Those in the left heading got out all right. All the others were out off and NOT ONE EXCAPED.

At 7.15 the gang turned in at the mines, the smaller gang dritting off to the left, while the larger one, some 35 in number, dritted to the right and descended some 300 feet from the surfroe, and at least a mile from the opening. These two drifts are connected, but the connection is from the main stem, some half a mile from the entrance. The mine had been domewhat troubled with water, and an air-sheft had been drilled from the surfrace to the junction of the right and left shafts, where the water seemed to be the most abundant. As the miners branched off from this point they knew an air-hole had been drilled there, and that it had not yet been broken into the mine, but they did not know the shaft was to be broken into to-day. This shaft is a six inoh hole. A miner named Kerwinhad been left in the right drift near where that branch joined the roine's exit, and in the course of his labors broke into the prependicular shaft.

course of his laburs broke into the perpendicular shaft.

The moment this was broken into a flood of water reached out, and Kirwin and a man named Landy standing by yelled out for some one to save the men in the mine in the right drift. Young David Hayes, who had seen the affair, lapade-forward at the call and turned down the left drift in a deluge of water to warn his endangered comrades below. Just as he passed the air shaft that had been broken-into-, the-rush of waters had changed to the ugly roar of a flood, which blanched the cheeks of the men who stood behind and towards the light. The flow of water had changed to the dairing youth carried an open burning miner's lamp in his hat, and he had hardly taken a near the play and already accumulated, and he sank a corpse ten feet toward the men he had hoped:

THE ADDE ITS HORMORS.

In an instant an unquenchable free sprung up in the nine foot vein, just ben feet to the fire and held her over it until her sprung up in the nine foot vein, just between the main entrance and on the right drift, forever shutting out the thirty-two men imprisoned there. Poor old David Hayes, the father of the missken hero driven by the fate of his only son, dashed into the sulphurous smoke and strangling fire damp, nolly to fall blindly by the side of his son and to be drawn out an hour late with James Shearn, both recognized only by their wives. The free, fanned by sir from the main entrance and on the fate hand, nolly of the daily fire damp, nolly to fall blindly by the side of his son and to be drawn out an hour late with James Shearn, both recognized only by their wives. The fire, fanned by sir from the main editar of the fate a find to the very door of the shaft, and poured out after him to ascend to the top and waves haloch flag of the search of the fate a find to the very door of the shaft, and poured out after him to ascend to the top and waves haloch flag of the search of the fate a find to the very door of the shaft, and poured out after him to ascend to the top and wav the rock on which the church is founded, and will leave nothing to be seen on the fet drift escaped blackened and bruised but safe, and they tell a tearful story of the scene just beyond the blazing coal on the right, where half imagination and half fact showed them a score of terrible faces walled in by a flame no man could pass and live. Willing hands and hearts were not wanting, and Clerk Cook, of the mine, with Mine Inspector E. Keaghley, headed a party of one hundred, who entered the mine shaft, and after groping on for a quarter of a mile, at last were driven back again and again by the deally gas, only to recover breath for a moment, and sgain plunged in to find at that the right drift was imponetrable, and not man could pass in and live. They finally came upon awe bodies, which were brought to the opening of the mine, when the blackened corpes of Shearn and Hayes the elder were drawn into daylight.

SAD SCENES AT THE PIT'S MOUTH.

A moan went up from a few of the hundreds about the pit, but their anguish was nothing to the silent watch kept by the wives, children and sweethearts of the thirty more still in the mine. The volunteer corps worked steadily from noon until late to night, with no result but the two dead above named, and each trip but brought a deeper despair to those above, and showed there was no hope and no one alive below. The corps of 100 was changed again and again as each exhausted squad staggered to the outer air, but all in vain. One man, Kelly, who had entered several times, finally from sheer exhaustion, fell into an open pit and was drawn out fatally injured. To-night falling rain increased the gloom of the situation. Children who had lost their fathers and uttered desolate walls could be soothed, but dark-browed men who stood about with sullen, stony glare, and wives, sisters and mothers with drawn, white faces could not be comforted. At midnight the smoke and gas from the right shaft poured up the main exit in an unbroken volume, and after trials almost beyond human endurance the resouing party gave up all hopes of ever recovering its dead bodies from that entrance, and turned their attention to the Ferguson mine, one and one-half miles away. At this hour they are striving to penetrate from that mine, but the fiames and smoke balk their every effort.

The universal verdict of the old miners is that the entombed men were either thilled outright by the explosion, or later by suffocation. The latter seems the more probable, as the soundings were heard from the entombed as late as I o'clock this afternoon. These grew weaker and weaker, however, and half an hour later even the most hopeful of the resours gould hear nothing but his own heart throbe. The men say that had they known the shaft was to be broken into they would never hade entered the mine, as either water or gas

Mesers, Gill and Clancy, Nationalists, questioned Mr. Balfour reparding the Government's system of "thadewing "persons in Ireland. They wanted to know how shadowing could prevent boycotting. Mr. Balfour spiled that no one was shadowed unless he was known to be engaged in intimidation. The Government would promise to reduce the system only on the conditions that the Parnellites promised to induce the persons shadowed to abstain from intimidation. (Cheers from the Government members)

This question brought out loud Parnellite ories of "What crime?" smid a tremendous uproar on the Parnellite side of the House. Mr. Dillon began an excited speech. He denounced Mr. Balfour, and demanded an apolety for the use of the word "crime." A stormy some ensued, in which Mr. Gill accused Mr. Balfour of lying, and Mr. Giladstone challenged him to prove his assertion that the Liberate resorted to the practice of shadowing. Mr. Balfour substituted the words "instimidation and boycotting" for "crime." Finally the Speaker appealed to the House and the matter was dropped.

A Cathedral Unsafe. A Cathedral Unsafe.

A London cable says; Great fears are entertained for the safety of St. Paul's Cathedral in consequence of the new underground railway to be constructed within a few hundred yards of the building. Christopher Wren left a memorandum to the effect that the foundations were not so good as he could wish, consequently it is feared that the vibration caused by the trains will endanger the dome, even if the preliminary works do not imperil the entire fabric. The promoters of the line say the underground railway near Westminster Abbey is not felt. I am informed on the best authority that in reality the trains shake the building considerably, but the foundations being exceedingly good no damage is done. Different conditions exist at St. Paul's. Water-courses render the grown uncertain. As the Cathedral stands higher than the surrounding localities, some shifting of soil in digging out for the railway is inevitable. The Dean and Chapter are in a state of great alarm, and will endeavor to induce the House of Lords to throw out the Bill authorizing the line.

The, space beneath the Abbey in many parts is filled up with concrete of a very ancient date, sometimes rendering it necessary to hollow out room for the coffin. The remains of an unknown person were found when the opening was made for Browning's grave. Upwards of fourteen hundred bodies are known to have been buried in the abbey itself, and many more in the cloisters.

Shortly afterwards Defoy went to Canada. Roy looked upon the matter as a joke until recently he was arrested charged with asseaut on Mrs. Defoy. He offered to pay $25 to settle, but Defoy refused. To prove that he died from other causes the wife had her husband's body exhumed and the head cut off and brought into court, where it rested on her counsel's deak.

April passed into May, and the alternations of cold east wind and hot sunshine did not improve matters. Esperance grew more and more lanquid and depressed; ahe could not sleep, she could not est, she could not even think clearly. The one idea impressed on her mind was that Gaspard was alone and starving, and this thought never left her; by day, she dwelt on it with bitter tears—in her brief intervals of restless sleep it haunted her dreams.

Things went on in this way for about a month. Cornelia was beginning to feel alarmed, and to watch her with real though carefully disguissed harviety.

One day when the fessons had gone worse than usual, and Esperance fels that she really deserved a solding; she was surprised by the sudden question, "You do not feel well, Esperance, I am sure. What is the matter with you?"

"I'do not know," she answered, languidly.
"But you must know what you feel like:

Cornelia was not at all satisfied with the Cornelia was not at all satisfied with the spiritiess some of her answer. She had lost all her brightiness and energy, and whereas she had before been eager and responsive, he was now silent and apathetic.

"You need not prepare your lessons for to morrow; we will read together instead," said Corneils, after a minute's thought, watching to see what effect this would have. There was some slight shade of relief in Esperance's "Thank you," but, it seemed as if nothing could make very much difference to her now.

Just then the gong sounded for luncheon, and the two went down-stairs together,

Just then the gong sounded for luncheon, and the two went down-stairs together, Cornelia feeling uneasy and puzzled. In the dining-room they found the dean and their cousin, George Palgrave, who had just arrived on a visit. Esperance looked at him rather ouriously, remembering with a pang the scene of their last mesting. He was not the least changed in appearance, but he seemed less awkward, a fact which she naughtily explained as owing to her increased acquaintance with Englishmen. He won her heart, however, by inquiring after Gaspard, for though the question was hard to answer, and brought the ready tears to her eyes, it showed that he was not torgotten.

Cornelia watched Esperance carefully, noticed her reply to George Palgrave's questions, the sudden blush hich rose to her cheek quickly succeeded by deadly paleness, the almost impatient gesture with which she rejected the dishes handed to her, and her languid attempts to eat a few mouthfuls of what was before her. All brought to her mind that sharp, despairing sentence, which had so startled her, "Should I aske are of myself, when he is sentence, which had so startled her,
"Should I take care of myself, when he is which was weighing down Esperance; she should know as soon as possible that help was at hand.

Syvaral letters had passed between Mr. Seymour and the dean, and Cornells knew that sit. Seymour intended to have a personal interview with Gaspard, and that if pleased with him, it was highly probable that he would give him employment. Matters were arranged even more quickly than she had expected; that very afternoon the dean received letters both from the coffee planter and from Gaspard.

"Mr. Seymour really takes him?" asked Cornells, assionally.

arraid of breaking down again if she said too much.

"Nonsense! why you are separated now practically; it is only a question of thousands of miles instead of hundreds. Besides, how selfish se think of shat, when it is for his good."

It was very true, no doubt, but Esperance was too sore-hearted to find much comfort in this; moreover, all Cornella said, though intended to be salutary, made the wound deeper, and the idea of being left behind in England more terrible. To be left alone!—shore!—so uterly alone! She could not even cry now; her tears seemed to be scorched up, her eyes felt hot and dry, and even Cornelia could not have desired anything more controlled than the voice which asked, in an odd, unnatural tone—"When does Mr. Seymour go?"

"At the end of June, I believe; that will be just a month from now. Your brother had better see about his cutter as now?"

At the end of June, I believe; that will be just a month from now. Your brother had better see about his outfit at once."
"What kind of outfit do they require?" asked Esperance, wondering how it was to be obtained, and turning almost willingly to this practical difficulty, in the hope of stifling she pain."

"I have not the least idea, but probably Mr. Seymour will have told him all about that; does he not tell you in his etter?" and Cornelia glanced at the closely written aheat which lay before her.

Esperance took it up and read to the end, and there, sure enough was the formidable list of necessaries suggested by the coffee planter, but which Gaspard looked upon as so impossible to obtain that he mentioned them half laughingly. She was greatly perplexed.

"Yeal?" saked Cornelis.

"Yeal?" saked Cornelis.

"Yeal?" saked Cornelis.

"Yes, he speaks of it," she reglied slowly. "But I do not much understand such things; I am still only very young." The combination of adverbs offended Cornelia car, but she was touched by the patings of the confession. There was something wery in the tone, as if it were sad still to have so much of life to look forward to, and it struck her that there was something was paid and wrong in such a remark being made by a girl of soarcely seventeen, but when so made there was something gard and wrong in such a remark being made by a girl of soarcely seventeen, but when so much of life to look forward to, and it struck her that there was something gard and wrong in such a remark being made by a girl of soarcely seventeen, but when such the such as a such as

"She—must not know of our intervention," said George. "What do you say to a walk to the Priory this evening?"

"It would be too late after dinner; besides, we should have to take Esperance as a third party; you forget propriety and gossip."

"Hang propriety! you and I ought to be exempted from such a tiresome thing; to morrow morning, then, by broad daylight," and he looked up, persuasively.

Bertha colored.
"Very well, on condition that you do the begging," she said. George willingly agreed, and the result was so successful that Esperance found a five pound note added to her earnings, and given in such a kind and delicate way that even her sensitive nature could not shrink from the help.

Their drill consists of calisthenics to music, without apparatus, but with precision and grace, exercises in which rings, flags and ropes are used, and marches, including several intricate figures—wheeling turning and a maze. There is also singing, and sometimes a May-pole dance, with a little address from the superior officers, who are usually ladies of leisure with philanthropical purposes. The work was inagurated by two or three young ladies in Edinburgh, who formed the first brigare, and there are companies now in all parts of Sootland. In addition to the drill there are classes for singing, sewing and Bible teaching, and kindly talks on temperance, thrift and purity, somewhat of the same nature as our working girl's clubs in America.—New York Sun.

Dwelling houses cannot be planned in the same shape as the most desirable class of factory buildings, that is, low and covering a great deal of ground, but precautions might be taken which are generally neglected to prevent the quick destruction of dwellings. In a letter to the New York Zvening Post, Mr. A. W. Page, a country carpenter and builder produced by which the average dwelling may, be made not only "slow burning," but also secure against weather, dirt, bad odors and vermin. Mr. Page says that in the modern is more perfect system could be devised of so arranging a quantity of lumber as to provide for its quick destruction by fire. The open spaces in the outside walls between the boarding and plastering, in the pastitions, and between the floor timbers, form a perfect network of flues. If a fire starts in the lower part of a house, these flues, with the shavings and chips usually left in them, quickly carry the fire to the attion and roof; or if it start in the upper part, the burning material falls down the flues and the flames spread rapidly. The rapidity and flerceness with which a fire will follow a ventilator or an air-shaft in a public building has often been observed; and in a similar way it will naturally follow the pattitions and wall-flues in a dwelling house. Mr. Page's plan is simply to extend the lining floors in each story to the outside boardings; itay one course of brick or of retuse or small stones on the floors between the studding; fill up inside partitions in the same way, and stop all openings around sleam and other piges. By such means a fire finish be confined to the place where it started, and extinguished before it had time-to spread; while the house would be always free from cold, oal and ash dust, as well as from rats and mioe. From ten to twelve dollars is estimated to cover the cost of this work in as from rate and mice. From ten to twelve dollars is estimated to cover the cost of this work in an ordinary house.
