An Escaped Murderer captured by Montreal Police.

HIS STORY TO THE DETECTIVES

He Represented Himself as Being Entitled to a Reward for Unearthing a Supposed Plot in Massachusetts—The Man Is a Lunatic.

MONTREAL, May 26.—Yesterday a tall fair man, dressed in a rough gray suit, walked into the Central Station and asked Capt. Smith where the detective's office was. The officer showed him the way, and he met Chief Detectives Oulmet and Detective Robinson, to whom he told a strange story. He explained that a few years ago he was hired to help unravel a conspiracy which was about to burn up some of the principal public buildings of Chicopee, Mass. He was successful in this and the ringleaders were sent to the state prison, but the reward which was expected never came. He asked the detectives to help him to obtain his share of the reward, which he declared to have been $5,000, but he modestly intimated that he would be content with two or three hundred dollars as his share.

While he stated his case, however, the detectives had been comparing his face with a photograph which the chief detective has been carrying in his pocket. When the man finished his story, he asked his name. "Samuel Alexander" was the reply. "Oh, yes, we know you before," for the name of one of the photos was Charles Alexander, a name was written on the back of the photo of murder made.

The facts of the case were known to the authorities are that a man named James Alexander, who was a partner in the firm of Alexander and Alexander, was arrested together in the Boston prison six years in the past. He was married and had a family. Alexander had been in the prison for six years in the past.

THROWN INTO A WELL

Little Children Deliberately Drowned by Their Mother.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 25.—A most distressing affair took place at Upper Economy, Colchester county, by the drowning of two children in a well by their own mother.

Mrs. Charles Jackson, the mother of eleven children, who was insane about ten or twelve years ago, had a return of the malady lately, but apparently in a mild form and was thought to be better. On Wednesday she had at home with her a baby, a little boy about six years old, and a girl a year or two younger. She took up the cover of a well, which had been nailed down, and threw the little boy and girl both in and left them to drown.

When the mother was discovered, she went to Mrs. Feltton's, her neighbor, and told her what she had done. Feltton scarcely believed her, but she went to the house and called to some neighbors for help, but they were in time to take the children from the well.

The facts of the case were known to the authorities are that a man named James Alexander, who was a partner in the firm of Alexander and Alexander, was arrested together in the Boston prison six years in the past. He was married and had a family. Alexander had been in the prison for six years in the past.

Degradations Committed—A Fatal Set-Back to the Cause of the Out to Aids

London, May 25.—The miners' strike in the coal fields of the north has reached a stage of increasing bitterness. The miners have destroyed the property of the coal companies, and the coal companies have refused to pay the miners' wages. The strike has caused a serious shortage of coal in the north, and the government has intervened to help the coal companies.

The facts of the case were known to the authorities are that a man named James Alexander, who was a partner in the firm of Alexander and Alexander, was arrested together in the Boston prison six years in the past. He was married and had a family. Alexander had been in the prison for six years in the past.

Have the Wonders of Feminine Power Fallen into a Rut?

A new novel by a new woman who modestly hides her identity under the name of "The Yellow Aster" and follows the beaten path of the latter day realist. It is on the same general theme as the work of John Oliver and Sarah Grand— which is an excellent way of medicine.

The literary work of these women and those of their school is, of course, superior to that of the old-time woman writers whose heroines wept over sentimental woes for three volumes and argued the curves of the end. The new writers are brilliant and keen. They have the power to tell strong stories, the ability to tell them well, and the old cry that humor is conspicuous by its absence in their work cannot be raised. But, at the same time, they possess a sort of morbid bias, for the spiritual dissecting room, and that is a place where the average man and woman does not care to go. Introspection, soul-dissection, revelations of feminine faults, follies and foibles will grow as wearisome in time as the description of heroine's hair and the troubled course of her love affairs used to be. By and by, when all the morbid souls and unbridled, untrained minds have been dissected, the woman's question will have become uninteresting, and the woman writer will be again at a discount. There is a happy medium between the young woman whose only charms were her eyes and her woe and the young woman whose whole existence is a protest against something. And it will be rather pleasant for the reading public when some of the women who know how to write find it worth while to celebrate one of these happy mediums.

A Typical American.

Two young fellows walked up Main street last Saturday night. They had been talking about skill at games of cards. One of them alleged that he could play any game of which the late Mr. Hoyle was cognizant. The other was equally sure of his mastery of the pastebards. "I will play you any game you choose for money, marbles or chalk," said the tall one. "I'll just call that bluff," said the short one. "What'll we play?" asked the tall one. "Well, we'll go up here and play a game of pedro." "No, I ain't very good at pedro." "Let's have a game of casino, then." "I never did like that game." "I'll play you poker." "That's a game I never play." "Pinochle?" "The counting is too much bother." "Cribbage?" "Don't know that game." "Hearts?" "Hearts is no good." By this time the short one was disgusted. He stopped and said: "Well, you dog-gasted chump, what will you play after all your bluffing?" The tall one hesitated for a minute. Then he said: "I will match pennies with you."—Buffalo Express.

Street Venders in Japan.

The horse is practically unknown in Japan, and the peddlers must carry their wares on their shoulders. Those who sell food carry it about in square boxes slung over each shoulder on a large pole. In one box is usually a charcoal furnace, with a pot of soup over it. The other contains a sort of curd, made of beans, which is sold in square slices that look like clear salt pork. On selling a slice the dealer transfixes it with a stick and besmears it with the soup, which is red, and so thick as to form a paste. The vender of sweet-meats often carries his goods on his head in a box surmounted with paper flowers. He beats a drum as he goes along, and the children, who seem always happy and smiling in Japan, gather about him. A toy peddler has a little cart (everywhere in Japan a little) covered with paper decorations.

Seven hundred miles from the coast I found its width to be more than a mile, and it holds that width nearly all the way from Shanghai to Ichang, a distance of about 1,000 miles. I could fill this paper with the mention of the different kinds of craft and their loads. There are Chinese lifeboats, for instance, everywhere. These are low junks with oars and sails, and they watch the river during the storms and pick up such sam-pans and fishing boats as are overturned. They are under the control of the districts through which they go and form a sort of a river police.

Now and then they capture a smuggler or a pirate, and here and there outside of some of the villages I saw boats which had been cut in half and set up on end. I asked what they were, and I was told that they had belonged to pirates and thieves. The boats had been caught and beheaded, and their brothers to beware of the law.

Other street vendors in Japan. The horse is practically unknown in Japan, and the peddlers must carry their wares on their shoulders. Those who sell food carry it about in square boxes slung over each shoulder on a large pole. In one box is usually a charcoal furnace, with a pot of soup over it. The other contains a sort of curd, made of beans, which is sold in square slices that look like clear salt pork. On selling a slice the dealer transfixes it with a stick and besmears it with the soup, which is red, and so thick as to form a paste. Y KINKIANG ON THE YANGTZE

Last night I left Kinkiang, a big town at the mouth of the Poyang river, and after a long and tiring trip of the past two weeks I have reached the same number of great cities of the size of Montreal, and have traveled through a country of an aggregate population of 100,000,000 people. All I could find this paper with the mention of the different kinds of craft and their loads. These are Chinese lifeboats, for instance, everywhere. There are low junks with oars and sails, and they watch the river during the storms and pick up such sampan and fishing boats as are overturned. They are under the control of the districts through which they go and form a sort of a river police.

Now and then they capture a smuggler or a pirate, and here and there outside of some of the villages I saw boats which had been cut in half and set up on end. I asked what they were, and I was told that they had belonged to pirates and thieves. The boats were thus put up as warnings to the people to beware of the law. The Yangtze King is a vast river, and its course the grass is everywhere grown. Because you see no people live in villages, with walls of any plaster inside. Sometimes the boats are at other times. The boats are twenty feet long and have a crew of twenty men. The boats are thus put up as warnings to the people to beware of the law. The Yangtze King is a vast river, and its course the grass is everywhere grown. Because you see no people live in villages, with walls of any plaster inside. Sometimes the boats are at other times. FERRY OPPOSITE ICHANG

Our first hills were passed about fifty miles inland. Seven hundred miles from the coast I found its width to be more than a mile, and it holds that width nearly all the way from Shanghai to Ichang, a distance of about 1,000 miles. I could fill this paper with the mention of the different kinds of craft and their loads. These are Chinese lifeboats, for instance, everywhere. There are low junks with oars and sails, and they watch the river during the storms and pick up such sampan and fishing boats as are overturned. PIONEER MISSIONARY WORK

In the Interior of Korea, by Rev. W. J. Hall, M. D.

On the 10th of January I again left Seoul for my work in the north, Pyeng Yang. Mr. McKenzie, from Nova Scotia, accompanied me. God has given him a wonderful experience. He felt that God called him to Korea, and although his mission board did not feel able to start a mission here, he trusted the Lord to supply the necessary funds for his outcoming and support after reaching here. God always honors the faith of his children. We had blessed seasons of communion with God on the journey.

I was only one day out when I was called to see a patient who had been badly cut and stabbed by robbers. I dressed the wounds and told the story of the Great Physician. His comrade had been so badly stabbed that he only lived a few minutes afterwards.

After seven days journey I reached Pyeng Yang and went at once to one of the houses which had been purchased for our use, but which, on account of the opposition of the governor, we were unable to occupy for several months. It had been used as a home for dancing girls and was still being used for the same purpose. After some difficulty, they consented to give up the house. The following two nights the house was vigorously stoned by a band of men, who had been accustomed to spend their evenings there, but had now been defeated in their evil purposes.

Every day we saw our patients and had a great many visitors who all heard the story of salvation. Every night we held our service and a deep interest appeared to be manifested by a good number. Everything was moving on smoothly and all opposition had ceased, but on the morning of the 17th of Feb., several of the leading men of the district came in and said they had been accustomed to receive 1,500 cash ($2.50) from this house every year to sacrifice to the evil spirits, and they wanted me to give the same amount. I told them of the sin they were committing in worshipping evil spirits, instead of the true and living God. Shortly afterwards my helper, a young man of twenty years, but an earnest christian, was sent for by a man who lived near our house. He went and returned shortly afterwards with torn clothes and told me they had seized and beaten him because we would not give the money for sacrifice. They gathered the people of the neighborhood together and decided to drive us out. I went to the magistrate and told him the whole story and asked him not to punish the men but to quiet the disturbance, which he promised to do, while I was gone the same man who had beaten my helper came to the house and seized a boy of 18 years, who had been attending our services, tore his clothes and beat him severely. I shall never forget his testimony, which he gave on my return. He was cheerful and happy and showed no spirit of resentment. I asked him if he felt like giving up serving Christ when he was so sorely persecuted. A smile lighted up his countenance as he said, "I cannot give up serving my king, even if they kill me."

Oh, friends in the home land, who can serve God under your own vine and fig tree, with none daring to molest or make you afraid, pray for those who are not so favorably situated. Some, like Peter, have denied their Lord; others, like Paul, are braving every storm and allowing nothing to separate them from their friends. The following week our friends threatened those who were attending meetings. We held our service before the

MR. HORNER'S POSITION

He is Not Trying to Get Up a New Sect.

In view of the fact that Mr. Horner's relations to the Methodist church will probably be considered at the next meeting of the Montreal Conference, the following report of an interview from the Ottawa Journal, will be read with interest:

For some time past the idea has been growing that Evangelist Horner is about to cast off connection with the Methodist body and start a new religious organization to be known as the Horu-rites.

The rumors were largely due to the fact that Mr. Horner or his friends had purchased the old Second Baptist church on Concession street where meetings are being held nearly every night.

Last evening a Journal reporter dropped into Mr. Horner's office on Bank street, near Sparks street, where he edits the Holiness Era, a fortnightly paper published in Toronto and devoted to the interests of consecration work.

Mr. Horner was writing at a table covered by "consecration" literature, and his little girl, about three years of age, was playing beside him.

The Journal man intimated that a good deal had been said in the papers one way or another lately about Mr. Horner, but "the other side" had not yet been given.

DOESN'T CARE TO READ IT.

"I believe there has been a good deal said about me," remarked Mr. Horner laughing, "but I have not read any of it. I don't like it. The less one reads unpleasant things the better. This is the way I look at it. I hear enough to suit me."

Asked as to the statement that he intended to form a new religious body, Mr. Horner replied, "I have not even thought of such a thing. My work is evangelizing."

"Why then did you buy the Concession street Baptist church?" was asked.

"I did not buy it, nor is it in my name. The property was bought by a committee of gentlemen, and the purchase was not even at my suggestion. BOUGHT BY A COMMITTEE."

"Whose name is the building in?"

"It is not in anybody's yet. Part of the purchase money which is about $1,000 has been paid, but the deed has not been made out, because the difficulty has arisen of not knowing just who can hold the property or how it can be held. That point is still under discussion."

"The work now going on on Concession street," continued Mr. Horner, "is the outcome of mission and consecration work begun on Rochester street about a year ago and of which I was not the author. The Rochester street building finally got too small and it was found necessary to move. As the work had become permanent it was decided to buy a building and the present mission hall was purchased."

NOT HIS WORK.

"The work on Concession street is not mine," he added. "It is done by the people of the city."

BLEW A FIERCE

Awful Havoc Created on Lake Erie by the Storm

MANY SAILORS ARE DROWNED

Several Schooners on Lake Erie were blown off their courses by the storm. The schooner Myra was seen drifting ashore near 39th street. Six half-frozen men were clinging to the rigging. The life-saving crew was busy all day and could give no assistance. Nine officers with plenty of ropes were on the shore, but having no rockets with which to cast their lines they could not help the doomed sailors. The captain whose name is Warner, was the first to go a-hull-down. A huge wave swept him overboard and he was not seen again. The schooner had drifted to 84th street when her mainmast was carried away, taking with it as it fell one side of the cabin. Deprived of the shelter, the remaining sailors were washed overboard one by one until but one was left. He took off his clothes during a lull in the storm and jumped overboard, striking out for the shore. He had gone but a few yards, however, when he was carried under by the waves and did not resurface. The schooner foundered 200 feet off 85th street.

One member of the crew, Reinardson, had broken his arm and was unable to reach the lifeboat. The crew climbed into the boat and floated to within 200 feet of shore when it was overturned for the third time. The men, with the aid of their life preservers, floated ashore. The life-saving crew went out again and finally managed to reach the boat. Only one member of the crew, numbering about 20 in all, could be seen still clinging to the rigging and Frank Gamble, one of the life-saving crew, had the good luck to land on shore about 10 o'clock. The only one partly saved was Robert Patterson, of Buffalo, whose parents live in Kingston, Ont., and Frank Gamble, member of the life-saving crew. The other are: Capt. McCullough, 35 years old, of Oswego; Matt Tom, 25 years old, of Oswego; and Tom, 25 years old, of Oswego.

In view of the fact that Mr. Horner's relations to the Methodist church will probably be considered at the next meeting of the Montreal Conference, the following report of an interview, from the Ottawa Journal, will be read with interest:

For some time past the idea has been growing that Evangelist Horner is about to cast off connection with the Methodist body and start a new religious organization to be known as the Hornerites.

The rumors were largely due to the fact that Mr. Horner or his friends had purchased the old Second Baptist church on Concession street where meetings are being held nearly every night.

Last evening a Journal reporter dropped into Mr. Horner's office on Bank street, near Sparks street, where he edits the Holiness Era, a fortnightly paper published in Toronto and devoted to the interests of consecration work.

Mr. Horner was writing at a table covered by "consecration" literature, and his little girl, about three years of age, was playing beside him.

The Journal man intimated that a good deal had been said in the papers one way or another lately about Mr. Horner, but "the other side" had not yet been given.

DOESN'T CARE TO READ IT.

"I believe there has been a good deal said about me," remarked Mr. Horner laughing, "but I have not read any of it. I don't like it. The less one reads unpleasant things the better. This is the way I look at it. I hear enough to suit me."

Asked as to the statement that he intended to form a new religious body, Mr. Horner replied, "I have not even thought of such a thing. My work is evangelizing."

"Why then did you buy the Concession street Baptist church?" was asked. "I did not buy it, nor is it in my name. The property was bought by a committee of gentlemen, and the purchase was not even at my suggestion."

BOUGHT BY A COMMITTEE.

"Whose name is the building in?" "It is not in anybody's yet. Part of the purchase money which is about $1,000 has been paid, but the deed has not been made out, because the difficulty has arisen of not knowing just who can hold the property or how it can be held. That point is still under discussion."

"The work now going on on Concession street," continued Mr. Horner, "is the outcome of mission and consecration work begun on Rochester street about a year ago and of which I was not the author. The Rochester street building finally got too small and it was found necessary to move. As the work had become permanent it was decided to buy a building and the present mission hall was purchased."

NOT HIS WORK.

"The work on Concession street is not mine," he added. "It is the work of the people of that city."

Theodore Lehigh, a well known lawyer to our citizens, has a love of tennis that is pleasure and spirit, and they will not be surprised to learn that his untimely affection for the flowing bowl has led him into conflict with the law. On Sunday night he was arrested, and P. P. A. immediately demanded $100 for a man whom he claimed had stolen his horse. He was obliged to delay legal proceedings till Monday morning, and about an hour after he reached his home, accompanied by a constable. They had in their possession several chickens, the heads of which had been carefully preserved, and which had been found in the house of the man whom a constable had arrested.
