Reasons Why The C. B. C. Is The Best

The Charlottetown Business College's claims of superiority are not based on hot air, bombast or broadside bragging.

The equipment of this college is complete in every respect. There are enough typewriters, forms, etc., for every student, and therefore none are kept back and none especially favored. The teachers are the best that can be secured and the location ideal—right in the heart of the business district—the courses plain, practical and full of "usable" knowledge.

Students who graduate from this institution are QUALIFIED to cope with any problem that is placed before them in actual practice. This institution is the only one in the Province to turn out successful verbatim reporters.

The courses cover bookkeeping, auditing, type writing, shorthand, brokerage, banking, business correspondence, navigation, engineering and Civil Service preparatory exams.

St. Joseph's Church Re-Opening.

Powerful Discourse By The Rev. Father Drummond, S. J., of Guelph.

IT IS A RICHLY ADORNED EDIFICE.

(From the Acton (Ont.) Free Press of November 21st. Father Drummond, the preacher on this occasion, conducted the laymen's retreat at St. Dunstan's College during the past summer and preached in St. Dunstan's Cathedral at the O. M. B. A. celebration. He has many friends here.)

Last Sunday the formal re-opening of St. Joseph's Church was fittingly celebrated after the completion of skillful and artistic decorations of the walls and ceilings. This important work was very satisfactorily executed by Mr. P. C. Brown, of Toronto, who has a wide reputation for church decoration. The interior of the sacred edifice now presents a most attractive appearance. The backgrounds of the walls and ceilings are of carefully contrasting shades of buff. The ceilings are paneled and bear artistically executed symbols of the evangelists, with borders of neutral tints and gold leaf embellishments. Over the altar arch the well known text, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," is beautifully illuminated, and in the rear of the altar the "Sanctus" is similarly made prominent. New electroluxes of neat design were put in, and new sanctuary carpets, and cork matting in the aisles have been laid. The monogram S. J., for St. Joseph's, is prominent on the frescoes of the walls.

The church was filled to its capacity both morning and evening. At 10.30 a. m. Rev. Father Traynor, the pastor, preached from Col. 3: 18. "Whosoever you do in word or work, all things do ye in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." He thanked his people for their generosity in contributing to the beauty of this temple of the Divine Presence and for the general interest manifested in this good work.

At 7.30 p. m. after the recitation of the Rosary, Rev. Father Drummond, S. J. of Guelph, preached from Psalm 44: 12 "The King shall greatly desire thy beauty: for he is the Lord thy God, and Him they shall adore." He said in part: "The connection between the Lord God desiring the beauty of any creature, and the command to adore that God alone, leads to the fundamental principle that all beauty reveals the adorable power of God. As the great English poet said 'a thing of beauty is a joy for ever, its loveliness increases.' That is the deep truth to which we owe the unsurpassable and inviolable beauty of the cathedrals of the middle ages. The men who built them were enthusiastic adorers of God. They deemed nothing good enough for him. This spirit created, even in the small towns of Europe at that time, craftsmen whose equals cannot be found today. In the thirteenth century, which witnessed the beginning of some of the matchless cathedrals of England, the population of some cathedral towns did not exceed two thousand, the most populous city of England did not number forty thousand and yet these comparatively small groups of population produced skilled workmen such as we cannot find nowadays unless we scour the whole world.

Four or five huge cathedrals are now building in the United States, and for these it is necessary to import the best craftsmen of Europe, because the hundred millions of North America cannot boast of one such craftsman as the smallest town in England could produce seven hundred years ago.

The explanation of this fact is to be found in the Catholic belief that Christ is really present in all churches in which a duly ordained priest has consecrated and reserved the Sacred Host. This belief is held by the majority of professing Christians. They number at present about 550 millions—250 million Catholics, 100 million orthodox Greek or Russian, 50 million Lutherans and eight or ten million High Church Anglicans. The preacher went on to develop the proofs of the Real Presence as found in the latter part of the sixth chapter of St. John's gospel. "How can this man give us his flesh to eat? Had he been minded to give them only a piece of bread and a sip of wine in memory of His passion, He would surely have quieted their fears by saying so. But he did no such thing. He solemnly reaffirmed in six different texts the objective reality of His Presence. He even faced the possibility of his own chosen twelve balking at this mystery of faith and love when he said 'Will you also go away?'

Then Simon Peter, the spokesman of the Catholic church, replied, 'To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life.' This is the answer of all true Catholics. The Lord has said in words so plain that even Luther the virulent enemy of the Pope, could not deny their cogency, that He had done this wondrous thing, and we believe that He can do what He says. For He is the Lord God Almighty, the creator of the laws of nature. How can a living, glorious body exist under the appearance of a wafer of unleavened bread? We do not know. He knows because He is the author of nature's laws. We know nothing about the constitution of matter. We see electricity, but neither we nor Mr. Edison, the wizard of electrical invention, know anything of the true nature of electricity. Yet we use it with perfect and reasonable confidence in its laws, so do we Catholics know nothing of the true inwardness of the mystery of the Real Presence; yet we use it and delight in its effects. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath everlasting life, and I will raise him up on the last day; for my flesh is, most indeed and my blood is drink indeed."

The church was crowded with a most attentive audience, one-third Protestant. The music at both services, morning and evening, was ably rendered by St. Joseph's Choir, assisted by members of the Holy Cross Choir, Georgetown.

The Revenge.

A Legend of Valombrosa.

(From The Tidings.)

It was a summer's eve in the year of 1073. The cool shades were rising from behind the rugged Apennines and were gathering over the pale cloister in the deep valley of the Arno, and the weeping willows of Valombrosa seemed yet more sad, as the gloom was falling upon them. In one of the cells of the noble monastery that towered high above them, a monk was dying; he was the Ruler and Abbot of that monastic home, and for years had guided his spiritual children with such a gentle vigilance and fatherly love that they could hardly realize he was so soon to be taken from their midst. By the side of his cot, kneeling in prayer, stood an aged monk in robes of grey, his lips to the hard of the dying Abbot, which as "dean seemed to bless him. And as the aged monk thus knelt, what was it he was thinking of? His mind was wandering back to bygone days when he and the dying Abbot were noble youths of the city of Florence. A scene of those early years floated before him more vividly than ever; and as he thought, he hid his face in his hands and wept. What was it which thus agitated him? An act you worthy to be remembered to the end of time.

"It was a beautiful morning of some fifty years previous, when a body of armed men might have been seen standing in a shady valley without the walls of Florence, around the dead body of a youth, fair and noble even in death. The gore in which he lay betokened a violent death. Near him lay a blood-stained dagger, and his unheated sword told that he had been taken by surprise. At his side stood an old man, the Lord Gauberti, his father, and close beside knelt his younger brother. "Huge, my son! at last cried out the aged Gauberti, as he again bent over the lifeless body before him. "My son, huge, my first-born, my joy and my glory! And shall all none be found to avenge thee? Would that the arrow of youth still aimed my frame! At these words the youth before mentioned rose up, and exclaimed with an air of avenged dignity: "Sire and noble father; cease to lament. There is one who shall avenge my brother's murder. I, though young, will blot out this stain on the house of the Gauberti! And as he uttered these words his eyes for the first time leaped the dagger. He took it up from the ground and wiped off the blood. He knew it well. "Count Stefano, thou shalt rue this deed! And with these words he started off in pursuit of the murderer.

Several weeks have passed, and it is the morning of Good Friday. Count Stefano had fled on discovery of the murder, knowing well that revenge was sure to follow; but Giovanni, true to his evil resolve, was still in pursuit of him. He had followed him from village to village, across the mountains and through the valleys of the Florentine territory, where he sought to hide himself. But, of yet still determined, Giovanni had returned to the city on this Good Friday morning and, with the other members of his family had gone to assist at the services in the Cathedral. He knew not how it was—and yet it was so—that his heart seemed so cold and inaccessible to the grand mysteries at which he was present. He could not pray? The least movement he heard drew his attention. He was present only in body. Poor youth! He never thought of the passion of revenge which had taken such hold on him was the cause of all this. He was blinded. To him—son of a noble house—revenge seemed a duty. But Divine Grace is stronger than human passion, and his hour of grace was nigh. When the time for the touching ceremony of the adoration of the Cross had arrived, the priest addressed the people, speaking to them of the love of the Crucified Redeemer, and of his exceeding great mercy to all, even to His very murderers. The truth of these words went straight to the heart of Giovanni. Yet when the people, upon the priest's invitation, went up to venerate the Cross, the youth held back. Revenge was still in his heart. He hastily rose up, left the Church, mounted his horse, and rode away. Yet whether? He scarce knew himself. He had no heart to meet any of his fellowmen; he knew not why. Some superior power seemed to have seized on him, and yielding to it, he turned off from the streets of the city to a by-path within the walls, when he was suddenly aroused from his pensive mood by the voice of his valet, who called out: "The murderer! Count Stefano!"—and in a moment the two nobles stood face to face. "Alas, I have thee, Count Stefano, unarmed, alone! I exclaimed Giovanni passionately, and he unsheathed his sword. "Thine hour has come, murderer he continued. "God has delivered thee into my hands, and none shall rescue thee." Count Stefano seeing no chance to escape, dismounted, throws himself on the ground before Giovanni, and besought him in a trembling voice for pardon and forgiveness. "Mercy! Count Giovanni, mercy! I pray you in the name of him who was crucified this day for you and for me, and who when you forgive His murderers, I acknowledge my foul deed and grieve for it from my heart. Even now I was on my way to your abbey to expiate my crime by a life long penance. Mercy then O noble Count; for Christ's dear sake, have mercy.

There was a struggle in Giovanni's breast, but God's grace, which had already commenced to operate in his soul, gained the victory. In a moment he too dismounted and gently raised Stefano from the ground, embraced him in token of pardon and forgiveness. "Mercy! Count Giovanni, mercy! I pray you in the name of him who was crucified this day for you and for me, and who when you forgive His murderers, I acknowledge my foul deed and grieve for it from my heart. Even now I was on my way to your abbey to expiate my crime by a life long penance. Mercy then O noble Count; for Christ's dear sake, have mercy.

"Thou has done well, Giovanni!" whispered a heavenly voice in his ear. "Nay, Lord, not I, but Thou has conquered in me!"

The next morning the two nobles—the forgiver and forgiven—knelt together at the foot of the altar to receive the habit of St. Benedict in the Abbey of St. Minas, outside Florence; and when these two new sons of the Holy Patriarch gave each other the kiss of peace at the conclusion of the ceremony, many of those who were present and whispered to each other: "Truly, this is a noble revenge—the revenge of the crucified God."

Such was the remembrance which drew tears from the eyes of the school monk; and well it might be so, for that aged monk was Stefano, and the dying Abbot was Giovanni, now known to us as St. John Gauberti.

HAD BOILS ON FACE AND BODY WAS TROUBLED FOR 8 YEARS.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is nothing so equal that old and well known blood medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. Mrs. James Mageau, Floral, Sask., writes:—"I was troubled for eight years with boils on my face and body, and I tried everything I could think of. My neighbors told me to drink water of my sour corn meal, but I found getting worse until one day a woman told me to try why I didn't try Burdock Blood Bitters. My husband got me two bottles, and before one was gone my boils had all disappeared, and I feel like a different woman. I can't tell you how thankful I am for my medicine. I will recommend it to all suffering women."

Death of Bishop McDonald

For a whole week the angel of death had hovered over the Episcopal Palace; but the tolling of the Cathedral bell a few minutes before six o'clock on Sunday evening, the 1st inst., intimated that the long agony was over, and that the soul of his Lordship the gentle and pious Bishop McDonald had left the body and winged its flight to the judgment seat of God.

The deceased Bishop, Right Reverend James Charles McDonald, fourth Ordinary of the Diocese of Charlottetown, was born at Allisary, parish of St. Andrew's, in this Province, on July 15th, 1840, the son of John and Mrs. McDonald of that place; so that he was in his seventy-third year at the time of his death.

After his ordination he was appointed to a professorship in St. Dunstan's College, where he remained until 1875. In that year he was appointed to the pastorate of St. James, Georgetown, and All Saints, Cardigan Bridge. In the following year St. Cuthbert (now St. Teresa) was added to his pastoral charge.

In 1884, to the great regret of his spiritual flock in his different missions, he was appointed Rector of St. Dunstan's College. He took up his residence at the College, and devoted himself, with his wonted zeal and earnestness, to his new duties.

In 1890, the late lamented Bishop McIntyre, feeling the infirmities of advancing years, asked for a coadjutor, and the zealous and pious Rector of St. Dunstan's College was chosen by the Holy See, with the title of Bishop of Irina, and coadjutor, with the right of succession, to the Bishop of Charlottetown. His consecration took place in the old St. Dunstan's Cathedral, on August 28th, 1890, and was a solemn and memorable function, attended by a number of Bishops and very many priests, from this and neighboring dioceses. His Lordship, Bishop McIntyre, was Consecrator, and the assistant Consecrators were their Lordships, Bishop Rogers of Chatham and Cameron of Antigonish.

The Bishop of Irina continued to reside at the College until the 30th of April, 1891, when the community was shocked by learning of the sudden death, at Antigonish, of the venerable Bishop McIntyre. His Lordship, Bishop McDonald, then became Bishop of Charlottetown and took up his residence at the Palace in this city.

During his twenty-one years and a half, as Bishop of Charlottetown, much progress has been made in the Diocese and great things have been achieved in its upbuilding and consolidation. The greatest architectural triumph has been the erecting and completing of the magnificent St. Dunstan's Cathedral, an enduring monument of the zeal and sincere desire for the beauty of God's House, on the part of his Lordship and those associated with him in the erection of this gem of ecclesiastical architecture.

He visited Rome twice during his episcopate. His first visit was 1895 and the second in 1904. On the latter occasion he extended his travels to the Holy Land and other parts of the East. From his observations on these visits to Rome and the cradle of Christianity in the East, he brought back stores of valuable information.

During all the years of his sacerdotal and episcopal life, the late Bishop McDonald was a model ecclesiastic. Ever humble, pious, zealous, he went about doing the work of his Divine Master, without ostentation, without advertisement. Generous and kind-hearted, warm in his friendship, he never wished his left hand to know what his right hand did. Always the quiet, earnest, unassuming gentleman, he impressed his personality upon all with whom he came in contact, and intensified his friendship by continued acquaintance.

The body, clad in pontifical vestments, lay in the casket in the salon of the palace all day Monday and Tuesday, and on Tuesday evening was solemnly borne to the Sanctuary of the Cathedral, which is appropriately draped for the occasion. After the casket was deposited on the catafalque in the Sanctuary the office for the dead was recited by the attending clergy; then the large congregation present filed past the coffin and viewed the remains. The funeral obsequies take place tomorrow (Thursday) morning, commencing at 10 o'clock.

His Lordship was one of a family of several brothers and sisters; but only two now remain: Mrs. James McPhee, Georgetown, and Mr. Daniel McDonald, Boston. These have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

St. Andrew's Day.

The annual St. Andrew's celebration, under the auspices of the Caledonian Club of this city, was held this year on Thursday evening, November 28th, in the club headquarters. An excellent menu was provided, and after full justice had been done thereto, the intellectual part of the programme was entered upon.

The King—"God Save the King." Address—President, D. F. Bethune. Song—J. P. Hooper. The Day an' a' Wha Hon our It—Rev. T. F. Fullerton. "Scots Wha Hae."

The President of the United States—Hon. Consul Frost. The Star Spangled Banner. The City of Charlottetown—His Worship Mayor Lyons. Song, Miss Hazel Bremner. Our Parliamentary Institutions—Hon. Murdoch McKinnon.

The Land O' the Heather—Mr. James McIsaac. "Loch Lomond." The Ladies—Mr. Edgar Shaw. "Green Grow the Rushes." "Auld Lang Syne." Pipe Selection.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and all seemed to fully enjoy the entertainment. After the programme in the dining hall had been disposed of all repaired to the upper hall, where dancing was participated in for a couple of hours.

Liberals Played By Hon. W. T. White

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Hon. W. T. White's speech was the feature of today's debate on the address. When it was finished the onus was on the Liberals, and it rests with them to explain why they are fighting the remission of duty on cement, and further, to explain why they showed such painful lack of unity on reciprocity.

Mr. White proved that the Liberal attitude on the reduction of the cement duties is hopeless. They cried in loud Heaven that they were the champions of the consumers of the west—until a very big stroke was struck for those consumers—then they assailed it. Their lip loyalty was to the consumers, their real loyalty was to the Liberal millionaires who head the cement merger.

About reciprocity Mr. White asked where the Liberal party stood on it. The American offer still stands upon the status book if Sir Wilfrid Laurier wins the next election, will he introduce the reciprocity bill? Here is what happened. Mr. White ran down the list of Liberal members and challenged man after man to show his attitude on the question. The proceedings were substantially as follows:

"Would Sir Wilfrid Laurier say that if returned to power he would introduce a reciprocity measure?" Sir Wilfrid sat silent. "What was Mr. Graham's attitude?" Not a word from Mr. Graham.

Did Mr. Oliver, like other Liberals, repudiate reciprocity? "I do not repudiate it," said Mr. Oliver, rising. "Would any one of the Ontario Liberal members avow their belief in reciprocity? Not a Liberal from Ontario followed Mr. Oliver's example."

Would the Quebec Liberals stand by reciprocity? Some of the French Liberals call out that they did.

It is not precisely a happy family that the ex premier has on his hands.

Hon. W. T. White replied with vigor to the complaint of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the duties upon the importation of cement had been reduced in June last, when he rose to continue the debate on the address.

He expressed his surprise that the leader of the opposition should have attacked the government for the action taken during the cement famine in western Canada, in view of the action of the late administration in dealing with the importation of coal. In fact Mr. White voiced the suspicion that Sir Wilfrid was largely concerned on behalf of a friend at the head of the cement merger in the Dominion.

Last session he said the present government had been assailed as allies of the trusts, now it was attacked because it was quick to notify the cement merger to be ready to provide for its market. Mr. White repudiated any political motives when he favored the reduction of the duty on cement, and declared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was censurable because he had based his case on an anonymous article or letter in a magazine without enquiry at the department of finance, as to the truth of the charges.

"The member for Edmonton," continued the minister of finance, "wanted a reduction in the duties on cement. But he agreed with his leader. When did he do otherwise? Was the lip loyalty to the west crying out for cement, or was it loyalty to the cement merger?"

Hon. Frank Oliver caused a laugh by explaining that objection had been made to the action of the government, because it was taken for the purpose of influencing an election in Saskatchewan and not for the benefit of the people. When asked whether he agreed that the government had done well in cutting the duty in half, the ex-minister of the interior again elicited a chorus of shouts of "Oh" and laughter by announcing that he objected to the restoration of the old duty on cement in October last.

The minister of finance pointed out that the administration is passing the order in council respecting the cement duties, had acted under a statute for which the Liberal government had been responsible.

In January James Pearson had asked that the provisions of the dumping clause be enforced against American manufacturers of cement. In May there was no intention to reduce the cement duties, but on May 31st, the government had received information that there was danger of a cement famine. Prices of Canadian cement were 15 to 20 cents below American prices at the time, but contractors for Canadian cement could not obtain deliveries. The minister then read telegrams and letters from the Saskatchewan Builders' Exchange, the Saskatchewan Board of Trade, the Calgary Board of Trade, all asking for a reduction of duties in view of the scarcity of cement. To the discomfiture of Mr. Oliver he produced a similar communication from the Board of Trade of Edmonton.

"Does the member from Edmonton," he asked, "think all the bodies were conspiring to influence the election in Saskatchewan? (Applause and laughter) I ask if there was any other course for us. If we had not done as we did, how the welkin would have rung. How the member of Edmonton would have charged us with being the representatives of the trust mergers and combines? (Laughter) Mr. White went on to say that because of the unprecedented amount of business government works at Halifax had been held up for want of cement."

"It is my honorable friend from Halifax who has said that," he commented. "You have not heard me yet," interrupted A. K. McLean amid laughter. Mr. White went on to say that from the east he had received letters complaining of the shortage of cement, and to ask whether the business men of the eastern provinces were suspected of any attempt to influence a Saskatchewan election. One of the greatest booms in store for the west, he concluded was the establishment of industries there, among them a cement industry.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—The Liberal party does not seem to want the naval bill. It is steadily obstructing its announcement by pretesting in a worn out and uninteresting debate. There was some hope that Mr. Borden could introduce the bill this week; that has flown. Then Wednesday next was set aside Wednesday begins to look doubtful, and the Liberals are threatening to keep the debate going till the Christmas holidays and crowd the naval announcement over until January next.

While bit appropriation of a blockading debate, today's proceedings had political importance, their special feature was a contribution by George W. Fowler of Kings and Albert and Mr. Pugsley to which Mr. Fowler very decidedly got the better of the former minister.

One passage of Mr. Fowler's speech was especially noteworthy. He succeeded in drawing from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Pugsley and Mr. Guthrie an explicit declaration of their continued belief in reciprocity. It was Mr. Guthrie who last session, declared that recipro-

To Our Subscribers

As we have stated from time to time, for the last two or three months, we are offering very beautiful Premium Pictures to all who remit their subscriptions. A number have kindly paid and received their premiums; but the great majority have not yet remitted. We earnestly desire that these will not delay any longer. We procured a great number of these beautiful pictures at a very considerable expenditure of money, in order to present them to our friends as a pleasing memento of their relations with us. We have them here in abundance, one for every subscriber, as soon as he sends in his dollar. Will you not remit now and receive one of these beautiful pictures?

This is the time of year when the greater number of the subscriptions are paid, and we should have a rush of remittances from this time forward. We have worked assiduously for our subscribers for a whole year, without making any very urgent requests for money. All this time, expenses have been going on; wages, rent, supplies and a hundred and one things have called for constant outlay, and now a winter's supply of fuel has to be laid in and other extra expenditures have to be incurred. To meet all this we only ask a dollar from each one, and are prepared to make a nice present to every one who sends his dollar. You surely cannot consider these conditions very exacting.

Send your dollar by mail; don't wait to come to Town or for anyone to come to you to collect it. The expense of sending a collector would not leave much of the collections, and it would be very unfair to expect to have the business done that way. Use the mails to remit; that is what the Postal Service is for. Rural Mail routes and all other improvements in the service are established for the greater accommodation of the people; to enable them to do business without inconvenience or loss of time. We shall be very much pleased if you will, without delay, take advantage of the mails to send in your subscriptions. Your premium pictures await you, and we are anxious to hear from you.

Final Notice.

Of Applications for Oyster Leases in Richmond Bay.

Owing to the number of applications for oyster areas, received after the expiration of the time allotted, it has been decided to give the people of the Province a second opportunity of obtaining ground for oyster culture before considering applications outside the Province, accordingly applications on the regular printed forms will be received by the undersigned for leases of barren bottoms for oyster culture to and on the 15th day of December next. Applicants are not now restricted to 5 acre plots, and former applicants or leaseholders are not debarred from obtaining larger areas. After the above date applications will be received from persons outside the Province, as well as within the Province, and will be considered in the order in which they are received.

Each application will require to be accompanied by cash, certified cheque or P. O. Order for $3.00 to pay cost of drawing duplicate lease and registering same. Copies of plans, application forms and proposed form of lease and leasing regulations are deposited, and may be inspected at the following places: Office of Provincial Secretary, Charlottetown; Prothonotary's Office, Summerside; James Kennedy's store, Kensington; Leslie McNutt, at P. McNutt & Son's, Store, Malpeque; Arsenault & Gaudet, Ltd., Wellington; G. H. The Charles Dalton Fox Ranch

Has Been Sold to a Syndicate Represented by Mr. A. B. Warburton and W. B. Prowse. It is proposed to capitalize a Joint Stock Company with a Capital of $625,000.

Mr. Chas. Dalton has sold to a syndicate his ranch complete, containing 20 pairs of breeding silver black foxes, and guarantees an increase of not less than 50 pups to be raised to the age of three months, for the year 1913. For every pup under this number he agrees to pay in cash to the above syndicate $5000.00 of the purchase price, thus GUARANTEEING to the syndicate for the first year $250,000 dividends on a basis of $10,000 a pair, which in view of the prices being paid at the present time is a very conservative estimate.

This Amount Represents Over 40 p. c. on the Capital Invested The First Year

This is the minimum estimate of dividends which will, we feel sure, be greatly increased, because instead of 50 pups there should be at least 75 come to maturity, and based on an estimate of $10,000 a pair would net the syndicate the handsome sum of $375,000 or 62 p. c. on the capital invested.

The Terms of Purchase Are:

The Syndicate takes over the entire plant, good will and ranch of Mr. Chas. Dalton, comprising five acres of land with all equipment contained thereon.

The syndicate has a sole right of the use of the name "Chas. Dalton" in the Fox Ranching business.

Mr. Chas. Dalton to remain with the company as Ranch Manager for the term of one year or longer if required.

The syndicate has applied for letters patent to incorporate the Chas. Dalton Silver Black Fox Co., Limited.

The Provisional Directors Are: President CHAS. DALTON, Solicitor A. B. WARBURTON, Sec'y-Treas. W. B. PROWSE.

The Chas. Dalton breed of foxes needs no puffing as they hold the world's record for the price of a single skin, and also hold the world's record for a group of skins.

This Is The Best Proposition Ever Offered to Investors On P. E. Island

Shares will be issued at $100 par value for a short time only, as it is expected that these shares will be worth at least $200 in a short time.

10 p. c. of the subscribed amount must accompany all applications for stock (which in case stock not being allotted will be returned) the balance to be paid Dec. 1, 1912. $225,000 of this stock has already been subscribed; of the balance of stock $200,000 only will be allotted to Island subscribers, the remaining $200,000 will be allotted to foreign investors.

STOCK NOW FOR SALE

Applications for Stock may be made to the following: Hon. Charles Dalton, Tignish; Warburton & Shaw, Charlottetown; W. B. Prowse, Charlottetown, and any Branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce of P. E. Island.

For further particulars apply to any of the above Agencies.

Their Second Chance.

A Story of A Night and A Dawn.

From her window Ellen Harding watched a child's white frock flutter away to the distant fire. In her eyes was the hurt of disappointment.

'I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and after two days I began feeling better. It has cured me and I can now sleep peacefully.'

'You temper is to blame for that,' she answered. 'That threat would have rung the meekest note to a defiance.'

'If you thought of me more as your husband,' he rejoined, 'you would credit me with higher motives than temper. To see your girl ruined by want of necessary discipline racks my conscience; your refusal to trust me with authority over her makes my heart ache. My helplessness in the matter provokes me to words that hurt you by their suggestion that I dislike her. What I dislike is not Cissie as such, but the self-willed, spoiled child who treats me so insolently.'

'She treats me well enough.' 'You won't say that when your heart is broken. She'll break it as soon as she is old enough, and—she won't care. Ask Dr. Craig how she treats you; he overheard the imperious, fierce she gave you yesterday. Ask the governess who has for the sake of peace, to obey a child of ten. You are sick with dread all the while she is on that bicycle; I heard you go out alone this afternoon. I knew what was in your mind—Dr. Craig's account of the stopping of that young girl by gipsies near Cadam. And foreseeing how unwell her disobedience would make you, I tried to prevent it. That threat was my last resort; she smiled at my command. And she'll find that I meant it. Nell, I'll not have you worried like this.'

Ellen sprang up as if to hurl herself at him. 'The day you lay a finger on her,' she flashed and I go.

John had often faced death; the clasp and medals in his room had been won on the battlefield. But before this tiny woman, whom he could have crushed with a sweep of his arm, his jaw lost its squareness, his eye its fire. His deadly pallor would have told Dr. Craig that the wound which had ended his soldiering was poisoning him.

'Very well,' he said desperately. 'Bring her up as you choose. But if you rue the day she was born, don't ask me for sympathy. I wash my hands of her—I won't leave her a sixpence. Rather than give her a fraction of my property, I'll will it away altogether.'

'You have made her what she is,' rejoined the mother, 'by treating her as a mutinous regiment. A nature like hers wants convincing and leading; brute force will but make her more perverse. If I may suggest a way of leading her, set her the example of correcting your own faults. Begin by controlling your temper. How can she respect you while you yield to it as you do?'

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night. That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

'I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and after two days I began feeling better. It has cured me and I can now sleep peacefully.'

is the blood of all impurities and cures all eruptions.

to smoke a white before joining her after dinner. But that night his cigars remained unsmoked. He overtook her in the garden.

'Where can she be?' he asked. 'She was too proud to betray her alarm. She can take care of herself,' she said icily. Her eyes at his haggard cheeks and hollow eyes, but heart softened. 'She must be at the Marsdens,' she remarked.

When was a mother's pride proof against her fears? As the sun sank behind the gathering clouds, Ellen's loveliness faded. Nine o'clock found her still gazing at the road, which the dusk had veiled from all but a mother's vision. 'Prife had kept her from sending out the servants; she knew what their view of "Miss Cissie" accorded with John's. Till dark she begged the assurance that she would yet be spared their smiles. Then she hurried indoors.'

A groan from John's study caught her ear. 'O God,' she heard him pray, 'spare my poor wife! For her sake, keep Cissie from harm.' His use of the word 'wife' gave her a pang. It reminded her of his reproach: 'If you thought of me more as your husband.' For months she had thought of him less as that than as her child's stepfather. For the first time since her encounter with him she felt anger against Cissie.

'He cares,' she gasped, 'and she doesn't.' Then a flash of lightning illumined the hall, followed by distant thunder. 'John rushed out. I must look for her,' he said.

'Do you want the whole world to know?' 'But the night is dark.' 'Light my bicycle-lamp. If I have to scour the whole forest, I'll find her.'

'Ob, John! Dr. Craig's warning! And the danger of cycling in a thunder storm!' 'What is my life to you,' he snarled, 'beside that child's? Selfish brute that I have been to stay here grumbling about her, when she may be lying helpless—or even dead! If a hair of her head is hurt, I shall never forgive myself.'

That night streaked a mother's gold tresses with gray. Till two o'clock Ellen wandered about the house, praying—she was a mother wife as mother now—for husband more than for child. Then faint and hopeless, she stumbled through a doorway. As she groped for a chair, her hand turned the switch of John's electric reading lamp.

Whooping Cough

Mrs. A. Mainwring, St. Mary's, Ont., writes: 'I feel it my duty to write and tell you the good you Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for my little boy. He had whooping cough, which left him with a nasty, dry hard cough. I took him to several doctors, but they did him no good, and I could see my little lad falling day by day. I was advised to take him to another doctor, which I did, and he told me he was going into a decline. I was telling a neighbour about it, and she told me to get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and give it to him regularly. She then got to tell me how much good it did her children, so I got a bottle, and gave it to my little boy, and was so pleased with the result that I bought another one, and by the time he had finished it he had no cough. He is now fat and strong, and I would not be without a bottle in the house on any account.'

Whooping cough generally begins as a common cold, accompanied with coughing and a slight discharge from the nose. It is a rule more of a child's trouble but also affects adults.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a true preventive and a child's trouble, but also a positive cure for any of the after effects.

'I knew you wouldn't worry was the cool reply. 'You never care what I do.'

'But your stepfather was out all night looking for you.' 'Oh—him? He's always making a fuss about nothing. Why—what's the matter, ma?'

Half an hour later, John was brought home. 'I saw he could ride no farther,' explained Dr. Craig, 'so I took him into my trap. Keep him in bed he warned Ellen. 'Those old wounds, you know! And remember * * *

'Wasn't I right about kindness? I asked John that evening. 'She has showed me how sorry she is; no one ever had a more attentive nurse. She seems softened, more simple; in every way more childlike. And what do you think?' She asked me to go cycling with her in future.'

'Don't let worms gnaw at the vitals of your children. Give them Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and they'll soon be rid of these parasites. Price 25c.
