A Great Intrigue, OR, THE Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER XVII.

He turned to the sideboard and got her some wine, and she drank it almost at a draught.

"Where have you come from?" he demanded. "What is the matter?"

She laughed and wiped her lips with her lace-edged handkerchief.

"I have come from the woods. Can any one hear us?" she broke off, glancing round her suspiciously.

"No one," he said, impatiently; "they are all in bed."

She sank into a chair and threw the cloak from her throat.

"I have good news for you," she said, still panting a little. "Everything has worked for us—everything! Every little incident and accident!"

"Well—well!" he demanded impatiently.

"If they had known my plot and wished to help it forward they could not have acted better than they have done."

He stood over her, his hand, keen eyes glittering. A clear was in his hand, and he went and lit it at the lamp. It marked very finely the regard and respect he had for her, his tool and accomplice.

"Go on," he said, coolly.

"Wait!" she retorted. "I have been working while you have been lounging and smoking here. I have been to the woods, assisting at a love scene between your future wife and—Harry Herne!"

He bit the cigar viciously and clinched his teeth.

"Curse him!"

"I have moved you at last, have I? Well, you can curse him safely now, for he is out of your hearing."

"What?"

"Yes, he has gone!"

Sergeant-Major Under General French.

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Waldegrave, N. S., no one is better known than Sgt.-Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sgt.-Major writes:

"I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sgt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bull beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills, always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Carthorboze Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

"Gone?"

"Gone at last, and for good," she retorted. "I have seen him pack up and start, and he is not the sort of man to come back. Before to-morrow night he will be miles away. Such men, desperate men, always go abroad. He will have sailed before she can know that he has gone."

"She does not know, then?"

"No," she replied, with an evil sneer. "She thinks that she has bound him to her, body and soul. And so she would have done if the poor fool had a little less honor. A very troublesome thing this honor, my lord! How glad we should be that we don't possess it; you and I!"

He went to the sideboard and filled a glass with brandy and drank it.

"I am ready," he said. "She went to him there, you say, at this time of night, and alone?"

"Yes, she went to him, and alone! Wonderful, isn't it, for a proud woman like Lucille? But you must punish her for it in the future. Now come, there is no time to lose."

"No," he said, moodily.

Then he went to the plate closet, and drawing out the key, arranged the word.

The panel moved slowly and looked back, and the two stood and smiled at the glittering shelves.

"Choose the largest," whispered Marie Verner. "That vase there," and she pointed to an urn of antique look.

He nodded and took it from its place.

"Now take half a dozen of the others to your room and hide them," she said. "Take the best."

"I know—I know!" he said, impatiently.

"Well, off with you, then," she said, imperiously, "there is no time to lose. Wait!" for he had accompanied her to the door. "Don't go in that gleaming shirt front. A gamekeeper could see you a mile off."

He nodded again, his face pale and working, and taking up his overcoat, put it on and turned up the collar.

"That is better," she said, with a laugh. "Now if Hope, the keeper, should see you, he won't have so good a mark to aim at. Are you ready? Thank you!"

With the cup under his cloak, the marquise passed out after her and both went in the direction of the hut.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Marie Verner slept little for the remainder of that night, and before the rest of the house was stirring, and while Lucille lay rapt in that slumber which love sends to its favorites, Marie got up, and bathing her face to remove if possible the dark marks under her eyes, she dressed and knocked at Susie's door.

"Come and help me pick some flowers for Miss Lucille's table," she said, in a low voice. "I will wait for you in the hall."

She heard Susie spring out of bed and answer, "Yes, miss," with delighted alacrity, then went downstairs. Her face was pale, there was a hard look in her eyes, and the thin lips were tightly closed over the small, even teeth. This that she was about to do was a risky deed; one false step, one incautious movement, and the delicately-laid plot would fall like a house of cards, and bury her under something heavier than cardboard. But as she heard Susie's voice on the stairs she forced her face into a smile, and hummed cheerfully:

"Here you are, then, Susie; you haven't been long."

"Oh, no, miss. I was afraid you'd get tired of waiting and go without me. It was very, very kind of you to let me come. This way, Miss Marie, all the best roses are on the south side of the garden."

"We'll go there afterwards," said Marie Verner. "I want some convolvuli from the park fence."

"Very well, miss," said Susie, and with her basket on her arm she tripped light-heartedly by her side.

They reached the park fence, and were busy cutting long sprays of the convolvuli when they heard a step behind the hedge, and saw the marquise approaching.

Susie drew back respectfully, but not out of hearing, and Marie nodded with a charming air of surprise as he raised his hat and extended his hand.

"Good-morning, Lord Merie. How early you are. Susie and I thought we should have the whole world to ourselves this morning. Why, what is the matter? Has anything happened?" she broke off, abruptly, for the marquise stood regarding her with a pale and troubled face.

He bit his lip, and tried to smile carelessly.

"Well, yes, something has happened, Miss Verner," he replied; "but I don't think I ought to spoil your morning's ramble with so vulgar a business."

"Oh, what is it?" she demanded.

"You must tell me now you have raised my curiosity. I hope it isn't anything serious, though."

"Serious—well, rather," he said, slowly, as if reluctant to tell her.

Susie was drawing farther away with respectful delicacy, but Marie called to her.

"Hold these scissors, Susie," and Susie was obliged to come back and stand close beside her. "Nobody—dead" asked Marie, gravely.

"No," he said; "no one is dead. It is just like this, Miss Verner: I have met with a heavy loss."

"Oh, I am so sorry," she exclaimed, sympathetically. "It must be horrid to lose a large sum of money. That is the calamity which poor people like myself can't experience. But I am sorry."

"Thank you," he said. "I am grateful for your sympathy. But it is not money; it is something I value far more, Miss Verner. The plate-closet has been broken into and a quantity of the oldest and rarest of the articles has been stolen."

Marie Verner stared. Susie dropped the scissors, and stood pale and open-mouthed.

"You—you are joking!" exclaimed Marie Verner.

He smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"Joking! I wish I were!" he responded. "No, it is sad and sober truth, Miss Verner. The plate-closet has been visited by some one, and I am minus some beautiful and costly heirlooms. It is not the mere material value of the things that I care about; although that is considerable, but they—the pieces that are stolen—have been in the Merle family for years, some of them for centuries, and I could not replace them if I were to expend a hundred thousand pounds."

"Oh, dear, dear!" she murmured. "How dreadful! When did you find it out?"

"Just now," he replied. "Half an hour ago, I got up to do some fishing—you know the fish rise in the early morning—and I went for my rod which I keep in the small dining room."

"Yes, yes," she said, impatiently.

"My rod in the dining room," he continued, slowly, like one repeating a lesson. "As I crossed the room I noticed that the panel door was slightly open, and thinking that I had left it so by mistake I went to close it. Something, I don't know what, made me throw it back and look inside; then I discovered my loss."

"Dear me, how shocking! And to think that the words I said so jestingly and lightly the other day should come true! Don't you remember that while you were showing the plate I said some one would find out the secret of the lock and steal it all?"

"Yes, I remember," he said, smiling gloomily; "and you have proved a true prophet; some one has stolen it."

He leaned against the fence and tilted his hat on one side with an abstracted, worried air, and there was silence for a minute, Susie still standing pale and amazed.

"And whom do you suspect?" asked Marie Verner, in a low voice.

"Have you any suspicions at all?"

"Yes, I do suspect some one," he said.

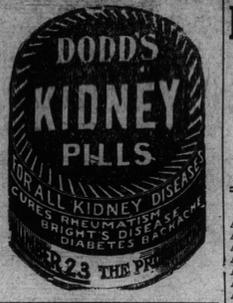

"Do tell me!" she exclaimed. "I won't say a word."

"Oh, I will tell you," he said, drawing a little closer so that Susie, pale and trembling, could hear every word.

"Miss Verner, from what little I have read of burglaries, I am convinced that they are perpetrated by some one who knows the place to be broken into, and that the affair is usually planned out beforehand. The house is watched, and all that kind of thing, you know."

"Yes, yes," she assented. "And has the Hall been watched?"

"Judge for yourself," said the marquise, slowly, and in a low, troubled voice. "Last night my butler, while strolling round the conservatory walk, found a man concealed in the angle of the wall, watching the plate-room."

"Oh!"

"Yes, Forbes stepped cautiously up to him and laid a hand upon his shoulder, and the man proved to be a person well known—to me well known—in the neighborhood. He explained his presence there by saying that he had followed a dog from the woods. Forbes, who is a simple sort of man, accepted the excuse at once, and had no suspicions of the man's real business there, notwithstanding that the fellow bore a shady character, and that Forbes, who had been out some time, had seen nothing of any dog."

"And—and he let him go?"

"He let him go," said the marquise, slowly, "suspecting nothing and taking no precautions, as he should have done. I overheard a part of the conversation, and saw the man, and I am as much to blame as Forbes, for I also took no precaution—and now my plate has gone."

There was silence for a moment.

"You saw him as well as Forbes?"

"I did."

"And, of course, if he was caught you could swear to him?"

"Of course. I saw him quite plainly; I heard his voice. I know the man quite well, and so do you."

"Do I really? You make me feel quite uncomfortable!" and she gave a little shudder. "Do tell me who it was."

"I know no reason why I should not," he answered, after a moment. "The man was Harry Herne."

Marie Verner uttered a low cry of amazement.

"Harry Herne!" she exclaimed.

"Oh!"

"WHY."

The Crescent Picture Palace commences the week with a strong Eclair feature in three reels, Roy Stanley, the son of a wealthy scientist, at the wish of his father goes forth to observe human miseries and ask himself why? His observations of the systems and causes of human misery, the wealthy corporations squeezing big dividends out of the poorly paid workman, the strong preying upon the weak are vividly portrayed in this great picture. "The Newfangleds," animated cartoon, and "Funnycuss the Mighty Hunter," are two clever comedies.

Miss Clark sings two numbers: "Lovilia," a beautiful concert waltz song, and "Callers Herrin'" the well known Scotch fishwife song.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, Sept. 14, 1914.

The Sanident Tooth Brush will never disappoint, because it will do all we claim for it—clean the teeth effectively, reach all parts of the mouth, keep its shape well, and above all, will not shed its bristles, which are made of good live hair that does not split nor wear down easily. And if you use the Sanident Tooth Paste with this brush you get the maximum of tooth hygiene. Sanident Tooth Brush, 35c, each; Sanident Tooth Paste, 25c, a tube.

For cold winds and their effect upon the surface of the face and hands, use Cream of Lilies, the perfect emollient for use in this climate. Price 25 cents a crock.

Yesterday's Parade Of Volunteers.

Almost the entire contingent of volunteers that is required, paraded to Divine Service at the respective churches yesterday forenoon. The C. L. B. Band accompanied them and discoursed patriotic airs en route. The volunteers were attired in khaki uniforms, without head dress and presented an attractive appearance. Rev. C. R. Godden preached an inspiring and touching sermon on the horrors of war. The volunteers occupied seats in the Sanctuary while special seats were had by Major Franklin, Capt. O'Leary, Bernard, Alderice, Goodridge, Raley and Camp Adj. Rendell. The congregation rendered the National Anthem at the close.

At the R. C. Cathedral His Grace Archbishop Howley occupied the pulpit during last Mass and referred particularly to the duties incumbent on the Volunteers. Seats in the vestry were occupied by Major Carby and Capt. O'Brien, Summers and Murphy.

Rev. J. S. Sutherland was the preacher at the Kirk. He spoke patriotically and his remarks touched the hearts of all present. Col. Peterson and Lieut. Ledingham were in charge of the squad.

The Methodist volunteers attended service at Gower Street Church. They were accompanied by Capt. C. Ayre and Lt. Godden. Rev. Mr. Hemen treated his congregation to an impressive and interesting sermon.

The C. L. B. gave a band concert at Pleasantville yesterday afternoon. The public were admitted to the grounds and through the courtesy of the officers shown around the camps. At five o'clock His Excellency the Governor arrived and after inspecting the Regiment dined with the officers.

Portia Back.

The s.s. Portia, Capt. J. Kean, arrived back from western ports Saturday after a quick round trip. She brought the following passengers in saloon:—Messrs. J. A. Forsay, G. Penney, Dr. W. Roberts, Holland, Hogan; Mesdames, Budden, Cole, Roberts; Misses Kippey, Skeans, Ryan, Willis, Horwood, Wheelan, Parsons, Darby and 15 second class.

Those who came by the ship report a poor shore fishery on the S. W. section of the coast due to the scarcity of squid bait.

Sagona From North.

The s.s. Sagona, Capt. Dalton, arrived back from the northward Saturday night. She reports an improvement in the fishery, though at Bonavista the fishery is practically over. Most of the fishermen there have given up the voyage principally on account of the continuous stormy weather which prevents boats from getting on the fishing grounds.

Red Cross Ships.

The S. S. Stephano left New York on Saturday for Halifax and leaves the latter port to-morrow afternoon for here.

The S. S. Florizal sailing from this port Saturday evening for Halifax and should reach there this forenoon.

A Slight Fire.

On Saturday afternoon the Central and East End Fire Companies were called out to quench a slight fire at Garland's Store. A case of straw which was in the archway had ignited but was put out without the aid of the firemen. No damage was done.

Good Showing of Men of First Nfld. Regiment

IN RIFLE SHOOTING. On Saturday last Sgt. Instructor Moore, of the Rifle Association, received a challenge from the rifle team of H. M. S. Calypso to shoot against a team from the recruits of the Regiment.

The challenge was promptly accepted, and the match took place on Saturday afternoon, the conditions being seven shots at each range, viz., 200 yards, 350 yards and 500 yards.

The result was a victory for the recruits by 31 points. The shooting was excellent, and the result most creditable to the Instructor of the Rifle Association, and shows how quickly our men become expert shots under proper supervision.

The scores were as follows:

A Definition of Happiness.

One afternoon I went automobileing with two women.

One of them was plainly bored. The scenery was beautiful, but then, she has seen a great deal of beautiful scenery and her interest in it was only languid. The other woman was not bored for an instant. Nor was this because she had had less opportunity to ride than the first woman. On the contrary, the difference was one of character, not of circumstance.

The second woman enjoyed every moment of that ride because she saw so much that was interesting to her. Every mile of the road offered to her not only beautiful scenery on which she could feast her bodily eye but interesting things on which to feed her mind's eye.

She is interested in architecture and called our attention to houses which illustrated various types such as Queen Anne, Colonial, French roof, etc., telling just when they were probably built and showing us the chimneys, the lines of the roofs and other points by which it is possible to tell the period to which the house belongs. We wondered why all country houses are not painted white, as we thought they should be, and she promptly explained that certain colored paints, notably red, are more economical.

She is interested in botany. A flash of color in a swamp, which we should have quite missed, was hailed with delight by her as an early appearance of the cardinal flower. We passed under an archway of exquisite palms and she added interest to admiration by telling us that elms whose trunks are gracefully festooned with foliage, instead of standing bare and gaunt, are the female elms, and are notable as one of the few cases in nature in which the female is more than the male.

She understood something about birds and could tell us to which songsters certain notes which we had often heard but never placed belonged, and several times she pointed out to us pretty feathered folks on the bushes by the roadside which we with our duller eyes would never have seen.

Even the bored lady appeared far less bored at the end of the ride. You see such people—that is people with a lively and educated interest about them,—bless not only themselves but others.

Life is a book written in many languages. The more you know the more you can read of the book. Some people only know one or two of these languages, and to them many pages of the book are blank and dull. Others know a great many and to them the book is always interesting.

The more one knows, be it of human nature, birds, flowers, books, houses or a thousand other things, the more interest one will have, and the more interest one possesses, the less often one will be bored. And after all, what is happiness but not being bored?

Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fuzate

An Encounter and a Premonition

Marion felt that she had done Calhoun, the young lawyer, a genuine service by laughing him out of his romantic advances. Her act had been truly philanthropic, and she knew it. Making sport of the love-lover is good medicine. More of this attitude on the part of women, rightly applied to misadventures, would offset countless tragedies of married life. Thus Marion reasoned. All the next day she saw nothing of Calhoun. She concluded that he dodged into the dining room when the coast was clear or else was taking his meals in his room. She lost little time, however, in idle speculation. She felt that she had done her duty in affixing the plaster, and trusted that it would draw to the surface the fever that was afflicting her friend.

The next morning, when she was finishing her breakfast, she felt her arm touched by a hand from behind. "I want to talk to you. Come on," commanded a voice. Looking up, she beheld Calhoun. His face was haggard, the whites of his eyes blood-shot.

"What's the matter?" she returned quickly, anxiously. "You're not well." "Feel rotten," he said shortly. "Through eating?" she asked.

"Yes," she said, getting up. They sauntered out over the lawn. When Calhoun spoke again, Marion caught the smell of liquor. "You've been drinking," she said severely. "Certainly. Why wouldn't I do boyish, asinine things?"

"You'll never make a man out of yourself by drinking," she retorted. "But drinking can help me forget, now and then, that I'm a boy, and a fool, and all that sort of thing."

"Oh, don't be so silly," she said impatiently. "What's more, I'm going back." She tried to turn, but he seized her arm in an iron grip. "Let me go," she ordered quietly. "Don't make a scene." "I'm not making a scene," he denied. "Can't you let me talk to you for a minute? You're not going to drive me back to the bottle again, are you?"

"Don't couple me up with your old bottle," she smiled. "What is it?" she added, in a kinder tone. "What did you want to say to me?"

His eyes met hers, and found them blue and kind and sympathetic. The hard lines of his face softened. He smiled partially his old smile. "Can't you get all this boy idea out of your head?" "It makes me awfully mad to be called a boy. Can't you believe me when I tell you I love you?"

"Let's not talk about that just now," she returned patiently. "Think of all the fun we could have as good friends."

"Friendship doesn't go," he protested, his face hardening into seriousness. "It's got to be love, or nothing."

"I'm going to tell you something I should have told you before," she answered. "I'm married," she added, resolving to resort to a half-lie, to see if it would have its effect.

"What do I care?" he exclaimed. "Married or not, I love you, worship you. I want you—need you! Can't you see?"

"Frankly, I can't see," she said, laughing a little.

Her laughter, more than her words, galled him.

"By heaven, I'll make you see!" he retorted grimly. Turning on his heel, he strode without further parley back to the door of the Inn, and vanished. Marion continued her walk, puzzled by his conduct, oppressed by an odd, unsettling premonition of something vague and sinister.

In the Name of Humanity.

There was peace 'mid the tolling nations. And the sword to the plough gave place; But one was moved by evens lust To an errand of dark disgrace. Nor young nor old have his soldiers spared. That his lust might be satisfied— Dear witness, Sons of our Island Race Of the hand by which they died.

By the act of that faithless Monarch, By his trait of cunning and guile, By the shame of his broken pledges, By the innocent blood he's spilt, We shall make it our country's honor, That the weak do not cry in vain, While Death is spread with ruin red Over Belgium's war-scarred plain.

In the name of the land we cherish, In the name of the Flag we love, In the name of our proud tradition, In the name of our God above, We shall answer the War Lord's challenge With the whole of our Empire's might Let the war-dogs go—'tis better so, And may God defend the Right!

Lord Roberts and the Bible.

Veteran Soldier's Impressive Message to the Troops. Lord Roberts, through the medium of the Scriptures, offers Mission and the Naval and Military Bible Society, has addressed the following words to the troops on home and foreign service:

"I ask you to put your trust in God. He will watch over you and strengthen you. You will find in this little book guidance when you are in health, comfort when you are in sickness, and strength when you are in adversity.—Roberts, F.M.

This message Mr. F. C. Brading, secretary of the mission, informed a Press representative, was being placed in each Testament and Gospel sent to the troops. The mission has sent 150,000 to the various home depots, and also to the base in France for distribution among the troops.

Times Task.

Germany's war levy on Brussels and Liege has increased the indignation against Teutonic savagery, which has been growing steadily among Americans.

Out of the wreck and the welter, Out of the fury and the fire, Out of the sweat and the sweater, Out of the wrath and the ire;

Out of the fall of a Kaiser, Out of the blood and the pain, We shall emerge sinner and wiser— Nor is our struggle in vain.

Jack-booted bullets—You nation Preaching the Law of the Sword, Menace to civilization— Dealers in rapine, abhorred;

Trampling fair city and village Under your barbarous heel, Giving them over to pillage, Flames, and malevolent steel;

Justice shall catch you red-handed, Now that with Murder you're twinned— You shall be muzzled and branded— You shall be punished in kind.

Dry bread can be used in so many ways, It can be toasted for breakfast, dipped in milk and egg and fried for lunch, made into croutons for the soup and made into a pudding for dessert.

Dear Sir,

We beg to draw your attention to the advantages offered, both in the way of security and privacy, by our Safety Deposit system which has recently been installed in our vault. The system is the most modern and complete that is known, and is deposited in a vault of exceptional strength and safety. The boxes are individual and can only be opened with the joint aid of the key in the possession of the Company and of that in the custody of the customer. They are of solid metal and are arranged in nests of fifty, so that no box can be removed from the vault separately from the rest.

The boxes are rented at $4.00, $5.00 up to $20.00 a year, according to size.

An inspection of the installation is invited.

Hammering the Germans and Austrians.

In six weeks after the declaration of war in 1870, Germany had crippled France. In sixteen days she had won a great victory at Werssenberg; in 18 days another great victory at Worth, and in the three days' fight at Vionville and Gravelotte had prevented MacMahon joining Marshal Bazaine...

As Russia was the ally of France, and Russian mobilization owing to difficulties of transport must be slow, German strategy has all been directed to crippling France before Russia could become formidable. For this purpose great strategic railways have been built in West and South Western Germany, with immense sidings for discharging troops and supplies.

The German Minister declared the asset of Germany was time, that of Russia, numbers. On that also Germany invaded Belgium as a military necessity and risked bringing Britain in the field. She overran Belgium and the northwest, north and northeast of Paris, and made near approaches to the fortifications of Paris. But her initial stroke on which her strategy was based has failed. Her blow cost her dear. She sacrificed lives without stint. But her blow is spent. She has over-spent herself. She is now concentrating and retreating and abandoning men and material as lavishly as she spent them in striking heavily. She has failed to cripple France. The French and the English bent before the pressure. Now comes the rebound with increasing and increasing strength on the spent forces of Germany, and after a week of the rebound Germany is giving way all along the line and being driven back both in Belgium and in the north of France, while her ally, Austria, has suffered severely in Galicia and the south of Russian Poland.

For a week now Germany has not only been unable to take the offensive but she is unable to hold what she won by her mighty initial blow, and she is now retreating and giving up what she won by an immense shedding of her best blood. Time should now play for the allies. Our resources are much greater than those of Germany and Austria and time will allow us to organize them and put them where they will be effective.

GERMANS REINFORCING LILLE.

LONDON, To-Day. A despatch from Ostend says since Sept. 9 German reinforcements numbering sixty thousand have been moving toward Lille by way of Renaix, Belgium. The despatch adds that German troops who have been waiting at Berleigne to receive war impost levied on the city of Ghent also have been ordered to the French frontier. The Germans have been laying mines under the Belgian roads which the allies will likely take while following retreating German forces. Another despatch from Ostend says that reports are current there that Crown Prince Frederick William and Prince Adalbert, sons of the German Emperor and Prince Carolof Wortemburg, have died in the Brussels hospital. A stream of wounded from the battlefields of the Marne and Oureq is being directed past Paris to the hospitals in the rear, says a Paris despatch. The obvious reason for this is that until it is quite certain that Paris will not have to defend herself against attack, it would be unwise to fill the ample hospital accommodation of the Capital.

BRITISH WIN A GERMAN PAARDEBURG.

PARIS, To-Day. A British staff officer who has driven in from Soisson, says the German retreat, while not a rout, is even more rapid than their advance. The Germans are coming into the British and French lines by hundreds, falling on their knees and imploring to be fed. Ten men, he declared, were sharing one loaf, while half an army was eating its horses. The Germans were so weak they refused even to walk. British horses also suffered. The British capture of Germans at Torcy has been paralleled only by the surrender of Cronje at Paardeburg. The simultaneous success of the allies along the whole battle lines grows with every War Office communique. General Von Kluck, who met his first defeat nearly a fortnight ago at Compiègne, seems to have suffered most. The enemy is retreating on an enormous stretch of territory. An important fact is that the allies have driven a wedge in between the army of Kluck and the army of Von Buelow. With luck the allies should intensify the defeat in the neighborhood of Chafons.

THE POPE AND KING GEORGE.

ROME, To-day. A despatch from Turin quotes Stampa as saying: Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, is the bearer of a letter from the Pope to King George filled with sympathy for the British nation which is described as the Guardian of Peace and a master of justice. Stampa adds that the Pope has asked the Austrian and Prussian Ambassadors to give safe conduct for the return of Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium to Belgium. This was refused, whereupon the Pontiff answered that he would remember the unpleasant refusal. Prince Louis Napoleon whose sword was refused by France is awaiting instructions to join the Russian army.

FRENCH OCCUPY SOISSONS.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch from Paris says the French occupied Soissons at 6 o'clock on Saturday evening, and an Ostend despatch says: "The Belgian troops have just gained an important success at Curtenberg between Louvain and Brussels cutting off a German corps."

SOUTH AFRICA APPROVES.

CAPE TOWN, To-day. The Senate and Assembly of Union of South Africa adopted an address to King George, in which they state: "While deeply deploring the outbreak of war, we are convinced that participation therein was forced upon the Empire, and we respectfully desire to be allowed to express our approval of the action taken in defense of the principles of liberty and justice and of the integrity and sanctity of international obligations." The address concludes with the declaration of continued loyalty and devotion.

This day week the shooting season opens. Already a number of parties are actively preparing for a shooting expedition and daily can be seen bringing their dogs over the different hunting grounds. Birds are reported scarce this year, even at the most popular resorts.

Boy Went Astray.

Yesterday a little boy named Butler went astray in the vicinity of Three Pond Barrens. He left home alone to go berry picking as he intended to meet some friends. These he failed to see and, it is supposed, lost his way in the thick woods. Search parties scoured the woods but were unsuccessful in finding the lad up to 6 p.m.

Smoking Concert At Pleasantville.

An enjoyable smoking concert was held in the mess tent at Pleasantville grounds on Saturday evening. Mr. Charles Hutton presided at the piano and Camp Commandant Francis occupied the chair. About 300 were present, including all the officers, and the following programme was gone through:— Solos by Captains H. H. Goodridge, N. H. Alderdice, A. E. Bernard and C. B. Clift and A. Summers; musical recitations by Capt. L. C. Murphy, Sergt. R. Miller and Mr. C. Hutton; instrumental numbers by Lt. R. H. Tail, Sergts. Ebsary and Miller. The rendition of the Marseillais in French by Capt. Bernard, and the singing of the National Anthem by the entire gathering brought the evening to a close.

Nickel's Big Picture To-Day

For His Brother's Crime.

The opening bill at the Nickel Theatre this week is a splendid one, and will fully sustain the reputation the Nickel has gained as the home of the best of moving pictures. There is a remarkable two-reel film entitled: "For His Brother's Crime," by the celebrated Kleine-Cines Co. It is a sensational picture of the greatest human interest. It deals with a burglar who breaks into a wealthy man's house to steal. His brother is employed there as butler. An alarm is raised and the robber escapes. His innocent brother is found standing in front of the open gate, which has a camera concealed in it. He is believed to be guilty and goes to jail but he eventually escapes and returns to the house where he finds his brother married to the girl both loved. "The Influence of the Unknown" is a strong Biograph melodrama. "Power of the Sea" is an interesting tale of the sea in which the beautiful actress Rosemary They is seen in the principal part. There are two fine comedies: "Baby's New Pin" and "Beating Mother To It."

To-Days Baseball.

The last games of baseball for the season will be played to-day. The Red Lions and Wanderers will compete in the forenoon and the result will decide the winners of the post series. This afternoon the Cubs and B. I. S. will meet. The players on each occasion will be:— Wanderers—Brown, Ford, Hartnett, Flaherty, McCleod, Dr. Pritchard, Eritt, Burkhardt, McCrindle. MARRIED.

At St. Thomas's Church, on September 13th, by the Rev. R. Golden, Mr. James Calder, of Glasgow, to Miss Alma V. B. Gush, of St. John's.

Allan Line Ships.

The R. M. S. Carthaginian is due to arrive here to-morrow from Liverpool. The R. M. S. Mongolian is expected to leave Liverpool on Saturday next for this port.

A Timely Caution.

Berry-pickers should be careful and put out fires in the woods when they are done using them, as complaints are heard of where parties left fires going last week, thereby leaving the forest and other property liable to destruction.

More Fox Cases.

Sergeant Noseworthy, who had eight fox cases tried on Saturday last, have, at the instance of the Game and Inland Fisheries Board summoned four more parties, including the owner of a fox ranch. The nature of the infractions for which the defendants are charged is catching and having in their possession foxes during the close season. The cases will be heard before Judge Knight on Wednesday.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Wedding Bells.

A quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas Church, Saturday, Sept. 12, at 5 p.m., the ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. R. Goden, the contracting parties being Mr. James Calder and Miss Alma V. B. Gush, daughter of Mr. Wm. J. Gush, of Dorset, Eng. The bride looked charming in white voile and hat to match, was attended by Miss C. Moss who wore white muslin and pale pink hat, the bride was attended by her brother, Mr. R. Gush as father-giver, and Mr. Wm. Gush supported the groom. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's father, Lower Battery Road, where supper was partaken of.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company. Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season. Yours truly, D. JAMES DAVIES, B.S.C., F.C.S. Analyst and Assayer.

To-Days Baseball.

The last games of baseball for the season will be played to-day. The Red Lions and Wanderers will compete in the forenoon and the result will decide the winners of the post series. This afternoon the Cubs and B. I. S. will meet. The players on each occasion will be:— Wanderers—Brown, Ford, Hartnett, Flaherty, McCleod, Dr. Pritchard, Eritt, Burkhardt, McCrindle. Red Lions—Anderson, Hiltz, Ross, Robson, Frost, Cooney, Jenkins, Mann, Winter. B. I. S.—Joy, Sinnott, Ring, Campbell, Grace, Dr. Power, Finn, French, Doyle. Cubs—Simms, Tobin, Avre, Clouston, Tobin, Mechan, St. John, Tester, Dickson. Umpires—Chesman and Harlin. Scorer—P. E. Outerbridge.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is moderately and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. —sep14,14

Allies Winning All Along the Line.

OCCUPIES TOWN OF HERBERT-SHOEHE.

LONDON, Sept. 12. The Official Press Bureau gave out the following statement this afternoon: "A telegram has been received from Rear Admiral Patey, commanding the Australian Navy, announcing the occupation to-day of the town of Herbertschoeche, in the island of Pommern (late New Britain). The British flag hoisted without opposition." A naval landing party under the command of J. A. Beresford, of the Australian Navy, established themselves on shore at dawn without the knowledge of the enemy, but stout resistance was offered while the force was destroying the telegraph apparatus, and the landing party had to force its way for a distance of four miles through the road, several parts of which were mined. The German officer in command of the parties in the trenches, 500 yards from the station, surrendered unconditionally. Guns have been landed and steps taken to capture the station.

GERMAN SHIP CAPTURED.

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 12. The German barque Heinz, from Cardiff, with coal and coke, has been captured by a British ship and brought to Simon's Town.

WANTED NEARER HOME.

LONDON, Sept. 13. A Rome correspondent wires that Austrian reinforcements are being rushed from Prague to aid the Germans who are hard pressed in France. If the report is true, it would indicate that the Germans in France are now in a worse state than the news obtainable would indicate.

GLORIOUS VICTORY.

PARIS, Sept. 14. General Joffre officially reports to the French Government that the Allies in the last four days' fighting, have won a glorious victory. The Germans are retreating all along the line, abandoning prisoners, wounded and immense quantities of supplies and munitions of war.

BOERS WITH BRITISH.

LONDON, Sept. 14. The 'African World' says that an active movement is on foot to offer Lord Kitchener a corps of picked British and Dutch Afrikaner scouts for use with General French's Army, under command of General Rudolph De Wit, the Boer Commander who gave the British so much trouble during the South African War.

TO SUSPEND PROCEEDINGS.

LONDON, Sept. 14. Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, will move on Monday to suspend proceedings upon the Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment Bills during the continuance of the war.

GERMAN COMMUNICATION CUT OFF.

LONDON, Sept. 14. The Belgian Legation has stated that the Belgians have destroyed the railway between Louvain and Tirlemont, thus cutting off the German communications between Brussels and Liege.

RESEEVISTS LANDED.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 13. One hundred and eighty-eight German and Austrian reservists from the States, were landed from the Novedam to-day. The American and other passengers will proceed on the Novedam to Rotterdam.

OCCUPY AUSTRIAN PROVINCE.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 13. The Russians are now invading the Austrian Province of Transylvania. A strong Russian army has passed through Borgo in the Carpathian Mountains, and is now moving into Transylvania, encountering little opposition. The occupation of the Austrian Province of Bukovina is now almost complete.

TERRIBLE LOSSES.

LONDON, Sept. 13. A despatch from Rome says, a telegram received there by messenger from Petrograd says the second battle in Galicia resulted even more satisfactorily to the Russians than the first. The losses by the Austrians are estimated at one hundred and thirty thousand, of whom ninety thousand are prisoners.

AUSTRIAN ARMY CRUSHED.

PARIS, Sept. 13. A Havas Agency despatch from Petrograd says the news of the defeat of the Austrians left wing is confirmed. The Austrians were surrounded.

In a triangle formed by the Vistula River and a tributary and were crushed before the arrival of the Germans, who came by forced marches to the aid of the Austrians. Poor bridges delayed the Germans and made the defeat of their allies inevitable. The Russians followed up the victory by pursuing the retreating army 20 miles and taking up positions in fortified locations. The Russians suffered heavy casualties in taking Tomaszow. The Germans lost heavily when they were repulsed in the vicinity of Maszyce and Chorzew in Russian Poland on the frontier of Prussia.

GERMAN SPY AT WINDSOR.

LONDON, Sept. 13. A pretentious residence within sight of Windsor Castle was raided to-day by the police, who seized a quantity of German correspondence. The occupant of the house, an unmarried German, was arrested, and is now held in the detention camp for German prisoners. The prisoner is said to have moved in the best circles and to have entertained members of the Royal Family.

SOUTHERN ALSACE CLEARED.

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 13. A despatch from Basle, Switzerland, says that the Germans are evacuating Southern Alsace.

AMIENS EVACUATED.

PARIS, Sept. 13. The evacuation of Amiens by the Germans, before reported in the news despatches, was officially announced to-day.

PITIFUL SCENE WITNESSED.

CONSTANCE, via Paris, Sept. 13. The headquarters of the 114th German infantry are in mourning as practically the entire regiment has been destroyed. Many pitiful scenes were enacted when women came to examine the posted list of the dead. The war loss is causing anxiety to German financiers, as it will force the hands of the bankers, while the attitude of the people is somewhat uncertain. This view is imminent owing to the disastrous retreat of the German army in France.

FINNISH MAIL STEAMER SUNK.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 13. A Finnish mail steamer is reported to have been sunk by a German cruiser, and 35 Englishmen captured.

RUSSIA'S TREMENDOUS VICTORY.

PARIS, Sept. 13. (Official.) On the left wing the enemy continues his retreating movement. He has evacuated Amiens, falling back to the eastward between Soissons and Rheims. The Germans have retired northward from the Vesle. They have not defended the Marne to the southeast of Rheims.

At the centre the enemy, though it has lost Revinny and Brabant le Roi, still holds the south end of the forest of Argonne.

On the right wing the hostile forces, which were along the Meurthe, are beating a retreat beyond Saint Die and Durmeville. We have re-occupied Dravon le Tappe, Bacarat, Remireville, Normy and Pont a Mousson.

In Belgium field operations, the Belgian army has vigorously taken the offensive to the south of Liege. In the Russian field, the battle that has been in progress in Galicia for the last seventeen days, has ended in a great victory for the Russian army. The Austrians have retreated along the entire front, leaving in the hands of the Russians a great number of prisoners and important war materials.

JOFFRE REPORTS VICTORY.

BORDEAUX, this a.m. Minister of War Millerand yesterday communicated to the cabinet the following telegram, which he had received from General Joffre, Commander-in-Chief of the French forces: "Our victory confirmed as more and more complete. Everywhere the enemy is in retreat. Everywhere the Germans are abandoning prisoners, wounded and munitions of war. A heroic effort on the part of our troops during the formidable struggle which lasted from the fifth to the 12th of September, all our armies are flushed by success. On our left we have crossed the Aisne below Soissons, through Sainz, 65 miles, in six days' fighting. Our armies of the centre are already north of Marne, while those of Lorraine and the Vosges are arriving on the frontier. The morale, endurance and order of our troops and those of our allies are admirable. The Government of the Republic may well be proud of her army which it has equipped."—Signed Joffre.

GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS CUT.

LONDON, this a.m. A Bordeaux despatch to Lloyd's Weekly News, says the line of communications used by the Germans has been cut. They cannot make use of the line east of the Argonne forest, owing to the rapid advance of the allies on the centre and the right. They must therefore try a line through the Meuse Valley and Luxemburg.

ENEMY'S FLEET REPORTED.

COPENHAGEN, this a.m. A despatch from Raumo, Finland, says that according to statements by pilots and fishermen, the German fleet has been cruising for the last two days in the waters south of the Aland Islands. The fleet includes seven dreadnoughts and cruisers of the Pristland class and a lot of coal and repair vessels. Aboard the cruiser Blucher the flag of the Chief Admiral, Prince Henry of Prussia, was hoisted.

GERMANS RETREATING.

PARIS, Sept. 12. (Official.) To our left the Germans are retreating between Selms, Braisee Flames and the hills of Rheims. Their cavalry appears to be exhausted. The allied troops in their pursuing advance only met with slight resistance on the 11th. In the centre and at the right the Germans have evacuated Vitry le Francois which they had fortified. Attacked at Revinny they abandoned cannon and equipment. The German forces occupying Mount Argonne are falling back and retreating north towards Bellenois forest. In Lorraine the French troops have slightly advanced and are occupying the border east of Champenoux forest, Rehalnvillers and Gibervillers. The enemy have evacuated St. Die. In Belgium the Belgian troops are starting on the offensive against the German troops facing the Antwerp fortifications.

PARIS, Sept. 13. (Official.) To the left the Germans are retreating continually before the allies. In the centre the enemy is also falling back. The French have crossed the Marne between Epernay and Vitry le Francois. To the right they have also retreated, abandoning the region surrounding the heights of Nancy. The French are re-occupying Luneville.

Although exceedingly fatigued, our troops are pursuing vigorously the enemy in his flight, which is so rapid on certain points that our troops secured in general quarters, especially at Montmiral, the personal staff documents abandoned by the enemy. In the vicinity of Fromentier the enemy abandoned heavy batteries and field artillery. German prisoners on hand show marks of heavy physical strain and are utterly discouraged. Horses are especially exhausted.

On Sept. 6th, General Joffre published the following proclamation to his troops: "On the point of engaging in a battle, on which depends the life of the country, it behoves me to impress upon you that it is not the time to look behind, but to employ all efforts to attack and repulse the enemy. An army that cannot advance must, however great the cost, hold the ground it has conquered, and die on the spot rather than fall back. Under these circumstances no weakness can be tolerated."

Our victorious troops entering Vitry le Francois discovered at the residence lately occupied by the staff of the Third German Army Corps, the following German proclamation: "The object of our long and weary march is attained. The main forces of the French army were compelled to accept battle after having continually fallen back. The great decision is near. Thus, to-morrow, the total German army should be engaged all along the line from Paris to Verdun, to save the well-being and honor of Germany. Although the heroic conflicts of the last few days have been hard, I expect that each officer will fulfill his whole duty to his last breath. All depends on the results of to-morrow's engagement."

Amongst the wounded of the battle at Meaux was found a young washer woman dressed as a Zouave, who took part in recent fighting. Four German Standards have been handed President Poincare. The German losses are enormous, and even estimated as five times heavier than the French casualties. On certain points they are still heavier, especially on the River Marne, where the Germans tried sixteen times following to cross the river, and were moved down by three-inch guns.

At Havre the Dutch vessel Fortuna was captured with a German cargo of silver and wheat. The provinces of Antwerp and Limburg are completely clear of Germans. Eastern Flanders is also evacuated. The Belgian army is operating favorably. A Petrograd despatch says that at Gorodok three regiments of Cossacks annihilated nine Hungarian cavalry regiments of which two were totally destroyed. The Galician army is completely demoralized, the officers being unable to reform their lines. The men are flying everywhere. Generals Mauburg and Puhall are decorated with the Cross of the Commander of the Legion of Honor.

PARIS, Sept. 13. (Official.)

A great and general victory is announced by General Joffre. At the left the enemy are continuing their retreat and have evacuated Amiens and fallen back eastward. Between Soissons and Rheims the Germans are retreating north of the Vesle River. They have not defended the Marne at the south east of Rheims. In the centre the enemy has lost Revinny and Brabant le Roi, but are still holding out south of Mount Argonne. At our right our adversaries, who were on the banks of the Meurthe, are retreating between St. Die and Luneville. Our armies are in possession of Ravn l' Etape, Bacarat, Rambervillers, Nomeny and Pont a Mousson. In Belgium the Belgian army is pushing forward vigorously south of Liege.

The following proclamation has been issued by the French Commander-in-Chief, General Joffre: "The battle which has been lasting five days is finishing in an unquestionable victory. The retreat of the first, second and third German armies is accentuated on our left and centre. On the other hand the fourth German army has begun to retreat north of Vitry and Sermale. Everywhere the enemy is abandoning equipments, etc. Everywhere we are taking prisoners. In advancing our troops have ascertained traces of the intense struggle and the important resistances made by the Germans to check our advance. The vigorous recovery of our offensive has determined our success. All officers and soldiers have responded to my call. You have well deserved the praises of your country."

General Gaellien, the military Governor of Paris, has also issued a proclamation, as follows: "The Military Governor is pleased to bring to the knowledge of the troops the above telegram. He adds his congratulations to the Paris Army on their participation in the operations. He also tenders his congratulations to the defenders of the entrenched quarters for the effort they rendered, an effort which has to be continued without relaxation."

OFFICIAL REPORT TO THE GOVERNOR.

LONDON, Sept. 13. To the Governor, St. John's, Newfoundland: The following was issued last night from the Press Bureau: A summary, necessarily incomplete, may be attempted of the operations of our troops and the French armies during the last four days. On Sept. 6th, the southward advance of the German right reached its extreme points at Coulommiers and Provins, cavalry patrols having penetrated even as far south as Nogent sur Seine. This movement was covered by a large flanking force, west of the line of the river Orce, watching the outer Paris defences. The southward movement left the enemy's right wing in a dangerous position, as he had evacuated the Cretz/Senlpa/Complegne region, through which his advance had been pushed. The Allies attacked this exposed wing in front and flank. On September 8th the covering force was assailed by a French army, based upon the Paris defences, and brought to action on the line Nanteuille-Haudouin to Meaux. The main portion of the enemy's right wing was attacked frontally by the British army, which had been transferred from north to east of Paris, and by a French corps, advancing alongside of it on the line of Crecy-Coulommiers. The combined operations have up to the present been completely successful. The German centre flank was forced back to the line of the Arce, where it made a strong defence, executing several vigorous counter attacks, but was unable to beat off the pressure of the French advance. The main body of the enemy's right wing, mainly endeavored to defend the line of the Grand Morin River, and then that of the Petit Morin. The German right wing, threatened on the right, owing to defeat of the covering force, retreated over the Marne on Sept. 10th. The British Army with a portion of the French forces on its left crossed the Marne below Chateau Thierry, obliging the enemy's forces west of the Orce, which were already assailed by the French corps forming the Allies' extreme left, to give way and retreat north-eastwards in the direction of Soissons.

Since September 10th the whole German right wing has fallen back in considerable disorder, closely followed by Allied troops. Six thousand prisoners and fifteen guns were captured on September 10th and 11th, and the enemy is reported to be continuing his retirement rapidly over the Aisne, evacuating the Soissons region. British cavalry is reported to-day at Fismes, near Rheims.

French armies further to the east have been strongly engaged with the German centre which had pushed forward as far as Vitry. Between September 8th and 10th the French were unable to make much impression, west of Vitry. On the 11th, however, this portion of the German Army began to give way, and eventually abandoned Vitry, where the enemy's line of battle was forming a salient, under the impulse of French troops, between the Upper Marne and the Meuse.

The French troops are following up the enemy and driving a portion of his forces northwards towards the Argonne forest country. The third French Army reports to-day that it has captured the entire artillery of a hostile army corps, which probably represents about 150 guns.

The enemy is thus in retreat along the line west of the Meuse, and has suffered gravely in morale, personnel and material.

What a Naval Battle Means.

(The Manchester Guardian.)

These extracts are from the narrative of the only officer who has been through a modern naval battle—and taken notes on its progress—from the start until his ship was on the point of sinking.

At the Battle of Tsushima, when the Japanese destroyed the Russian Fleet, Captain Semenov was on the flagship 'Suvoroff.' He had no definite post on the ship, and was therefore able to note each successive stage of the gradual destruction of the ship. Let him tell his own story—

"Now the fun will begin," thought I to myself, going up to the after-bridge, which seemed to be the most convenient place for carrying out my duty of seeing and noting down every thing, as from there I could see both the enemy and our own fleet.

The first shells flew over us. At this range some of the long ones turned a complete somersault, and could clearly be seen with the naked eye curving like so many sticks thrown in the air. They flew over us making a sort of wall, different to the ordinary roar.

After them came others short of us—dearer and nearer. Splinters whistled through the air, tingled against the side and superstructure. Then, quite close and abreast the foremost funnel, rose a gigantic pillar of smoke, water, and flame. I saw stretchers being carried along the fore-bridge, and I leaned over the rail.

And here I was able to observe, and not for the first time, the stupor which seems to come over men, who have never been in action before, when the first shells begin to fall. A stupor which turns easily and instanand rows of boxes, drenched with water, flared up in a moment. At times it was impossible to see anything with glasses, owing to everything being so distorted with the quivering, heated air.

A man reported that the after turret had been blown up and almost simultaneously there resounded above us a rumbling noise accompanied by the sharp clank of falling iron. Something large and heavy fell with a crash; the ship's boats on the spar deck were smashed to bits; burning debris fell all around us and we were enveloped in an impenetrable smoke. At the time we did not know what had happened, but afterwards we learned that it was the foremost funnel which had fallen.

I attempted to pass through the upper battery, whence to the poop the nearest way was through the Admiral's cabin, but here the staff officers' quarters were burning furiously. Turning back, I met Elag Lieutenant Kruijanofsky on the ladder hurrying downwards.

"Where are you going to?"

"Into the steering compartment; the rudder is disabled," he shouted to me in passing.

"That is all that is wanting," thought I to myself, rushing up on deck.

Meanwhile, though we were unable to see the enemy on account of the smoke, they had a good view of us, and concentrated their fire on the batteries, but in the hope of sinking us. Shells simply poured upon us—a veritable whirlwind of fire and iron. Lying almost stationary in the water, and slowly working her engines so as to get on the proper course and follow the fleet, the 'Suvoroff' offered her battered sides in turn to the enemy, firing wildly from those of her guns which were still serviceable, and, alas! they were few in number.

Creeping with difficulty on to the upper deck through the torn hatchway, I scarcely recognized the place where a short time since we had stood with Demchinsky. Movement was literally impossible. Astern, the spar-deck had fallen down and was burning in bright flame on the deck; in front of me was a heap of debris. The ladders to the bridge had gone and the star-board end of the bridge had been destroyed; even the gangway under the bridge on the other side was blocked. I was obliged to go below again and come up on our port side.

The fore-bridge was struck by numerous projectiles. Splinters of shells, which penetrated in large quantities under the mushroom-shaped roof of the conning tower, had destroyed all the instruments in it, and had broken the compass, but luckily the telegraph to one engine and the voice-tube to the other were still working. The bridge had caught fire, and the hammocks—with which we had proposed to protect ourselves from splinters—as well as the small chart house behind the conning tower, were also burning. The heat became unbearable, and what was worse—the thick smoke prevented our seeing, which, without a compass, made it impossible to keep on in any particular direction. The only thing left for us to do was to steer from the lower fighting position and abandon the conning tower for some place whence one could see.

There were no fires; everything

Autumn.

By GEORGE FITCH
Author of "At Good Old Sivash"

The pensive autumn which is now among us is the saddest season of the year.

This is because the universe at this time shows harlequin signs of wearing out. The trees are shedding, the fields are bald, the sun is losing its vitality, baseball is passing rapidly away, and a great many statesmen are making their last appeal for mercy to a very indifferent public.

The falling of the leaves from a kindly tree is a sad sight, especially to the man who has to rake them up and burn them, in defiance of the city ordinances. But it is a riot of cheerfulness beside the silent departure of the voters from a statesman who has held office for a generation and has neglected to think about anything but himself for the last twenty years.

It is almost heartrending to watch such a man, eminent and influential in Washington, and honored by lobbyists, office-seekers and magnates of all kinds, talking wearily at some county fair on tariff statistics to seven women and a boy, while the autumn voter is eagerly inspecting other varieties of hogs in an adjoining pavilion.

Autumn is justly famous for its bright, sunny days when the wooded hills blaze with colors and the crisp, sharp air is as invigorating as an alleged soft drink in Georgia. It is famous for its rank, dreary days when the universe is as soggy as a bride's biscuit and the heavens weep like a sociologist narrating the cruel, barren youth of the poor victim of society who has just murdered four women and a little girl.

Autumn gets sadder as it gets older, and by December mankind would be unanimously tired of life if it were not for a few carefully selected blessings of this gloomy season. In September the family of the perspiring business man comes home from the cool beach and confers a home upon him once more. In October it becomes safe to look at the ice man in chilly tones and to tell him to take his pounds of ice between his thumb and forefinger and remove it, with himself, to a warmer clime. And in November the house fly curls up and dies without being invited to do so by a folded newspaper. Hence the great love of man for autumn.

Three Generations Killed.

With reference to the German atrocities at Visé, the Dutch illustrated weekly newspaper Het Leven prints a narrative by the Dutch writer, Dr. Lambertus Hurrelbrink, of Maastricht, on his own knowledge of the facts.

The story begins with the Franco-German War of 1870, and concerns a farmer's family named Hautf, then living in Alsace. When the Germans invaded Alsace they plundered Hautf's farm. Hautf shot a couple of the marauders and was shot there and then. His wife found her little boy weeping on the body of his father. "Mamma," said the boy, "when I have grown up I will shoot the Germans who killed father."

Mme Hautf settled near Visé. Her son married and had two sons. When the Germans came into Visé the other day Farmer Hautf's old hatred was rekindled, and when the invaders reached his farm he shot one of them. Germans bundled the farmer and his two sons outside, placed all against a wall and shot them. The sons had not raised a hand against the invaders.

The Untiring Energy

of the Wolf is proverbial. Practically no energy is required where SUNLIGHT SOAP is employed. SUNLIGHT SOAP is energy itself. The Wolf is the enemy of mankind; is the enemy of all dirt. It is the friend of the housewife, and is made for her profit. To the housewife it means less labour, less dirt, more leisure, and time and money saved. SUNLIGHT SOAP does away with needless rubbing and scrubbing, and so preserves the clothes.

Sunlight Soap

GIVE IT A TRIAL.

The Cardinal Archbishop and the Justice of Our Cause.

The Irish Guards attended in full strength a parade service at Westminster Cathedral on Sunday, when Mass was celebrated by their chaplain, the Rev. Francis Risher.

The Cardinal Archbishop delivered a short address based on the words, "Watch ye, therefore, because you know not the day nor the hour," urging them to go forward with all courage in defence of King and country, conscious of the justice of their cause, and preparing themselves by devout reception of the Sacraments to be ready, if called, to give up their lives fearlessly into the hands of their Maker, and to hear each one from Him, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." In times gone by not a few soldiers had been harassed in their minds as to whether the war in which they were engaged was a just one or not. No question of that sort would arise in the present case. His Eminence assured them that the hearts and prayers of their fellow-countrymen, and especially of those who share their religious faith, would go with them; that they would not be forgotten in life or in death. He concluded by earnestly invoking upon them the blessing of God now and hereafter. The solemn Votive Mass "in time of War" was celebrated by Mgr. Jackman at 12 o'clock, in the presence at the throne of the Cardinal Archbishop, Cardinal Gasquet assisted in the Archbishop's Tribunal. A very large congregation assembled at this special Mass.

The National Relief Fund.
The Prince of Wales on Thursday evening in last week issued an appeal for the National Relief Fund, of which he announced he was proud to act as Treasurer, in view of the considerable distress which must be caused by the war among the people of this country least able to bear it. To this the Queen added an appeal to the women of the country to give their services in the local administration of the Fund. To these appeals the response was prompt and generous. On the first day a quarter of a million was subscribed, and by Wednesday afternoon the sum stood at £750,000.

The Cardinal Archbishop sent a contribution of £100 to the National Relief Fund on the day that the Fund was opened; and he has now, at the request of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, desired that a collection should be made on Sunday next in all the churches of the archdiocese for the same object. No doubt similar collections will be made throughout England and Wales, either on Sunday next or on some other date which may be found more convenient locally.

It is hoped that Catholics will do all that they can, both by personal assistance and by generous contributions, to swell this Fund and render its administration effective. The Prince of Wales, in addition to a large subscription, has announced that he will be personally responsible for the expenses of the administration of the Fund, so that whatever is subscribed will go to the object for which it was given.—The Tablet, Aug. 15th.

CUTTING DOWN EXPENSES.

Instances have come to my knowledge where, in the zeal to cut down expenses, cases of hardship and distress have been the immediate result. For example, to discharge a gardener and to countermand orders for seeds and trees for autumn planting is to create unemployment to thousands engaged in horticulture, and to do this with one hand in order to give a few pounds to the national distress fund, however well intentioned, is too palpably like the Pharisee who gave the tenth part of his mint. Surely the most patriotic system to adopt is a calm course of action which will keep people employed as in normal times.—Laurence J. Cook.

Two Cases Compared.

Yesterday the New York Times published the full text, filling forty columns of newspaper print, of the British White Paper on the efforts to avoid war. To-day it publishes the full text of the German White Book. Comparing the two cases, it says:—"Sir Edward Grey puts all the cards on the table face upward. Germany presents a lawyer's brief. History will judge between the two. When war was imminent Germany, instead of exerting her great influence equally upon the two Powers, said to Austria, 'Go ahead,' and to Russia, 'Hold back.' How empty and futile are all iterations of the German statement about the precipitancy of Russia and France in ordering mobilization! How far from any convincing value are the attempts made to put the responsibility for the war upon Russia; how hollow are the reproaches addressed to England when Germany herself, by her words of approval and promise of support gave the most powerful encouragement to Austria to throw a lighted torch into that great heap of combustibles! Germany came to the aid of Austria and put her great armies into the field not in behalf of the industrious people of Germany, but in obedience to the Hohenzollern will and for the preservation of the Hohenzollern power."—Daily Mail, Aug. 28.

Hard to Bear.

It was sentence day in the court of general sessions. A long, inconspicuous line of prisoners formed in the aisle, each offender awaiting his summons to the bar of justice, relates the New York Tribune. Save for the voice of the clerk, a dignified and solemn stillness reigned in the courtroom.

"John D. Rockefeller to the bar," called the clerk in a shrill voice. All heads craned in surprise at the mention of the well known name to see whose this possessor could be. A large, burly negro, one of the blackest of his race, walked slowly to the bar.

"Is your name John D. Rockefeller?" inquired the judge, as he looked sternly at the big negro, who wore something more than the suspicion of a smile.

"NEEDLEWORK MAD."

At the weekly meeting at the Mansion House of the City Committee dealing with the prevention of distress, a resolution was passed against creating workrooms out of the Prince of Wales' Fund, either directly or indirectly, and in favor of goods being bought in the ordinary way of business, "and thus helping to prevent distress all along the line."

The Day.

By HENRY CHAPPELL.
We quote these remarkable verses from "The Daily Express," and cordially endorse their editorial appreciation of them, which is as follows: The author of this magnificent poem is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath. Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Post." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet. You boasted the Day, and you toasted the Day.

And now the Day has come. Dissembler, braggart, and coward all, Little you seek of the numbing ball, The blasting shell, or the "white arm's" fall.

As they speed poor humans' home. You spied, for the Day, you lied for the Day, And woke the Day's red spleen, Monster, who asked God's aid Divine, Then strewed His seas with the ghastly mine; Not all the waters of the Rhine Can wash thy foul hands clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day; Watch how the Day will go. Slayer of age and youth and prime, (Defenceless slain for never a crime) Thou art steeped in blood as a hog in slime. False friend and cowardly foe.

You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day; Yours is the harvest red. Can you hear the groans and the awful cries? Can you see the heap of slain that lies?

And sightless turned to the flame-spilt skies The glassy eyes of the dead?

You have wronged for the Day, you have longed for the Day That lit the awful flame. 'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain Yield shovels of dead men amid the grain; That widows mourn for their loved ones slain.

And mothers curse thy name. But after the Day there's a price to pay

For the sleepers under the sod, And He you have mocked for many a day— Listen, and hear what He has to say.

"Vengeance is mine, I will repay." What can you say to God?

IN TIMES OF WAR you cannot do without clothes any more than you can in times of peace; but at such a time it is necessary that you economize as much as possible; and in order to keep all our help at work we intend to make up Suits and Overcoats, until further notice, at the smallest possible margin of profit, but must strictly cash orders. Investigate and get our prices; quality of our work needs no advertising. SPURRELL BROS., 365 Water Street, next door to Parker & Monroe, aug.17.14

Household Notes

To prevent milk from curdling when used with tomato, mix a little bicarbonate of soda before mixing the two.

A slice of potato is an excellent thing to clean white cloth, which has become disfigured by hot cooking utensils.

There is economy in stocking the pantry with groceries that can be bought when the stores offer a few cents reduction.

If the wire mattress becomes rusty, try rubbing it with paraffin; then dry thoroughly and give both sides a coat of black lacquer.

Delicious sandwiches are made of raisins and nuts chopped together, moistened with a little whipped cream and seasoned with a little salt.

All boxes on the top of the pantry shelves should have labels on the end, telling the contents of the box. This saves time when hunting articles.

The annual coat of oil not only prolongs the life of willow and cane furniture, but it keeps it from becoming so dry that tiny splinters stick out.

Lima beans can be pulled while young and tender, dried in the sun and put away and kept for use at any time. They should be soaked before using.

Newly baked bread should be lightly covered with a clean cloth while it is cooling. If it is not aired when it is taken from the oven, it is apt to be soggy.

Many steps may be saved if when preparing a meal you pin a small hand towel to the apron belt on one side and a similar tea towel to the other side.

Save every bit of meat; it can be used in a meat pie, stewed and served on toast, chopped for stuffing peppers; or it may be combined with a little celery for salad.

Little linen suits with bloomers to match make cool, neat travelling clothes for little people, and suits of this kind will keep their freshness much longer than finer, prettier dresses.

When travelling with the baby, it is a good idea to have a brown linen case which will hold two small pillows in clean, white slips. This case can be strapped to the outside of one's suitcase.

Use an old toothbrush to rub off the charred portion of the lampwick, instead of cutting with scissors. If this plan is followed, there will be no prongs or loose ends to cause an uneven blaze.
