CHAPTER XLIX.

THE END OF THE SEASON.

This night, however, being the last, he came down from his room and, in all the quiet dignity of dark-blue evening suit, spotless ruffles, and diamonds at breast and wrist, condescended, in an abstracted but still charming manner, to exchange politenesses and bon mots with the gay triflers.

There was always a certain reserve in the count's manner when in the presence of Reginald Dartmouth, for he could never forget that the quiet master of Dale had outgeneraled and outwitted him, and to such a man as the count such a remembrance could be naught but painful.

To-night, however, something of the reserve had vanished, and there was a sparkle in the small, sharp eyes that told of unusual excitement and pleasure.

"Well, my dear count, you have honored us," said Reginald Dartmouth, smoothing the ruffles, four deep, at his wrist and bowing as only he could bow.

"Yes—delighted," said the count, showing his teeth, with a comely smile. Then the cause of this polite interchange—a group of promenaders—having passed, he threw off the courteous, ceremonious style and said, eagerly, drawing his arm through Reginald Dartmouth's and leading him gently but hurriedly away to the colonnade: "The first dispatch has arrived."

"Yes," said Reginald Dartmouth, with quiet self-possession.

The count looked irritated by his coldness and, with an impatient gesture, went on, speaking in Italian, and almost pettishly: "Tut, tut, Dartmouth; you receive my news but indifferently!"

"You forget that you have told me no news as yet; the arrival of the dispatch is none. I saw the messenger drive up to the gate. The contents?"

"Are that our men have gained the outposts and are preparing, or, rather, were, to take the forts. If they do—" "Rome is yours, my dear count," said Reginald Dartmouth, as quietly as before; but his white hand, that hung gracefully by his side, clinched spasmodically.

"Ay, Rome is ours!" breathed the count, with upturned eyes. "I am waiting—in a fever—for another messenger. This atmosphere, this music, the whole scene stifes and maddens me. I am eaten up with expectation. Santa Maria! my dear Dartmouth, how do you bear it?" and he gazed with irritable astonishment at the serene face above him.

"I enjoy it," was the almost contemptuous reply. "I am not like you, alas! my dear count, hot-blooded, and, shall I say, excitable? The music calms and soothes me, the atmosphere of the flowers, the lights, nay, the merry dance, give me naught but pleasure."

The count looked up eagerly to glean from the face what the tones of sarcasm hinted; but he was unsuccessful.

The face revealed nothing of the emotion within. "Ah," he said, with a sharp sigh, "you have nothing—a mere bagatelle—on this cast! With me it is a matter of life—"

At that moment the graceful form of the countess swept by them and, as she replied to Reginald Dartmouth's respectful salutation with a smile, he turned white and, clutching the count's arm with a grip of steel, hissed, as though the words were forced from him: "And I have more than life!"

The count dropped his arm with a low cry of pain and looked up, but the time necessary for the gesture had been sufficient for Reginald Dartmouth to recover his composure again, and his dark, impassable eyes met the count's with calm regard.

"Enough, count. Think not the game is naught to me because the cards do not shake in my trembling hands. I play to lose of win, and my stake is heavier—ay, heavier than yours." And with a significant smile he looked in the direction the countess had gone.

Reginald Dartmouth, scanning the dimly-lighted room, saw that the beautiful Lucille was not among the rapt audience, and passing through the saloon quickly retraced his steps and proceeded to a small conservatory which adjoined an aviary, and was a favorite nook of the countess's.

As he expected he found her there; she was seated beside an Indian major, and listening to his threadbare stories of jungle life with absent air and unconscious ears. Reginald Dartmouth paused a moment behind some clustering vines and feasted his eyes upon her wondrous beauty.

"And this is love!" he muttered, pressing his hot hand to his still hotter and feverish brow. "There is love, and yet I—oh, idiot-like!—told myself it should never bewitch me again. Oh, Lucille, I am mad when I look on thee! I am no longer Reginald Dartmouth, with all the deeds he has done, all the plots he has consummated, throwing his brain, but a red-hot, passionate boy, burning with first love's heat! Lucille, shall I speak to-night? She looks less cold than usual. I am armed with this good news. Yes, I will. That poor old idiot would have me wait the chances of the next dispatch. Ah, ah; I play indeed to win! Once mine, Rome lost or won, she will not withdraw her hand, nor shall he!"

Then, composing his face into its usual look of repose, which during the rapid progress of the thoughts through his excited brain had been disturbed, he pushed the vine aside and, with upraised eyebrows and a smile of friendly banter, said: "What, major, are you here? I have been looking for you everywhere; nay, not only I, but Mrs. Firebrace has been inquiring for you for the last half hour."

The major, who was not altogether unaccustomed to such marital inquiries, muttered some excuse, and with a "Dear me; wonder what she wants! Thanks, Dartmouth," held out his arm to conduct the countess back to the saloon.

Reginald Dartmouth, however, stepped in and, glancing at his card, said: "Countess, you have pledged yourself to me for the next Major, dare I ask you to resign your charge?"

And so, with a pleasant skillfulness, he sent the major off. Lucille looked down her programme indignantly.

"Surely this is not the cotillon, Captain Dartmouth?" she asked, with a gesture of surprise. "Time must have flown, in truth, if it is."

"No, not yet," he said. "I pray your pardon; but all is fair in war, and I used some tactics to get rid of the major."

Lucille dropped into her seat again and made room for him at her side. He did not seat himself, however, but leaned against the reckery beside the seat and looked down at her with that look of devotion which lighted up his eyes whenever he was alone with her.

I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pains caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. All of this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines that I thought were good. I saw the advertisement in the papers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers as a testimonial."

—Mrs. D. CASSADY, Box 461, Paris, Ont. Why women will continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound! For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

same. He will come when I call him, and—"

As she spoke she held out her shapely hand and murmured softly to the tiny songstress, making a gesture to Reginald Dartmouth for silence.

After a little hesitation, displayed by sundry suspicious cockings of the head and side glances from his twinkling eyes, he hopped gravely from perch to perch and finally clung to the base, pecking at a rose-leaf, which the countess held out to him.

Reginald Dartmouth's face grew hot and flushed. Her beauty at that moment seemed almost divine, and, for once losing all control of himself, he breathed: "To be that bird I would die the death of all the martyrs!"

Lucille started and leaped back in her seat, calm and cold again. "Not so," she replied, with a slight smile. "The poor bird will die soon; the big one there is quarrelsome and pecks it already."

"What matters?" he answered, still in the low, deep voice—"what matters? It has had your love." Lucille flushed and gathered her shawl round her. "I must seek the count," she said, hurriedly, and looking anxiously, as if fearing what might follow. He stretched out his hand and laid one white finger upon the edge of her shawl and, as if he had forced her into the seat by a blow, she sank into it again.

Fashion Plates.

A QUAIN AND UP-TO-DATE FROCK FOR THE LITTLE MISS.

A SALE

That will not disappoint.

The reason of this Sale is the turning of a lot of this season's goods of passing fashion and some of which we have an overstock into Hard Cash.
YOU WANT GOODS AT LOW PRICES WE WANT HARD CASH. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

We are not going to give you a line of talk that as philanthropists we are out merely to reduce the height of the E. C. of L. and going to cut prices in halves; we figure you are too intelligent to believe stuff like that, or would think we had certainly been juggling you on previous prices. First we start with LADIES' & CHILDREN'S STRAW HATS.

Of these we are taking
25 Per Cent. Discount.
Our prices for Hats are notoriously low, and with this discount and the styles considered we know greatly increased buying will make a busy department busier.

We next consider
LADIES' BLOUSES.
We find a very classy lot of Ladies' Canadian made White Voile Blouses have not moved fast enough. They range in price from $5.50 to $7.50. Though the market was high and we did not like buying at these prices, we thought style and cut worth consideration. Now we think you will find them most tempting by our allowance of

We have also picked up a lot of
LADIES' GEORGETTE CREPE BLOUSES
in beautiful designs and shades, and have marked them down from $17.50 to $12.50 each. This represents less than cost price.

LADIES' SILK DRESSES.
We have some priced very reasonably at $30.00, $33.00 and $35.00 each, but we are making a reduction in these prices of 25 Per Cent.

We do this as we are informed that with some of them the skirts are a bit tight.
LADIES' WHITE COSTUME SKIRTS.
Canadian styles, English materials. Sale Prices only $3.00, $4.00, $4.50 and $5.00.

This summer is certainly a fine one, so you had better secure a couple of these beautiful Washable Skirts and get in accord with it.
LADIES' ENVELOPE CHEMISES (or TEDDIES).

We have quite a stock of these in White and Pink Lawns and Imitation Silks. They are big sellers in America but have not yet started to sell so largely here. We think taking 25 Per Cent. off may help.

In order to make things more interesting we are making
A Reduction of Ten Per Cent. on Some Staple Lines of Ladies' Ready-to-wear.
This includes all our large and cheaply priced stocks of Ladies' Cambric and Lawn Underskirts, Knickers, Camisoles and Nightdresses.
Ladies' Costumes and Costume Skirts.
Ladies' Raglans, Shower Coats and Navy Spring Coats
Ladies' Cotton, Poplin and Serge, etc., Dresses.
Ladies' Kimonos, Wrappers and Cotton House Dresses.
Ladies' Blouses of all kinds—not previously mentioned.
Ladies' Silk and Wool Sweater Coats.

LADIES' COTTON and LISLE SUMMER GLOVES.
We are in a position to offer these at prices no higher than those of 1918-1919. We quote Ladies' White and Grey Gloves, with dome fasteners, at price only 40c. pair.

LADIES' WHITE and BLACK COTTON HOSE, only 29c. pair.
You will also find we have some other extra good values in Ladies' White and Black Cotton and Lisle Hose, while they last.

We Know Our Prices on Goods Advertised Are the Lowest You Can Procure, as they are below the cost of doing business, but our desire to change goods into cash
IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY
N.B.—Sale Discounts are for Cash Purchases only.

the America's Cup. Facts About

New York, July 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—It may be interesting at this time both to yachtsmen and to a great many who are not acquainted with this form of sport to read a few facts in connection with this historic yachting trophy, the America's Cup.

To begin with the America's Cup at first was not an international trophy. In fact it had no significance other than being a prize offered by the Royal Yacht Squadron for a race around the Isle of Wight, England, which was open to all nations. In August 1851, the schooner yacht America, owned by Commander John L. Stevens and four other members of the New York Yacht Club, won this race and the cup became their property. Six years later, Commodore Stevens and his associates conveyed the prize to the New York Yacht Club in trust as a perpetual international trophy which has since been known as the America's Cup, taking its name from the schooner yacht which won it in British waters.

The first race for the America's Cup, as an international prize, was held on August 8, 1870, over the regular course of the New York Yacht Club in New York's lower bay. The challenging boat was Cambria, owned by James Ashbury, of the Royal Yacht Squadron, England, and the cup was defended by practically the whole fleet of the New York Yacht Club. That, however, was the only race in which the challenger had to sail against a fleet and the only contest in which the issue was decided by a single race. Cambria, by the way, finished tenth in that event while the old America finished fourth, the race being won by Magia, the yacht Idler finishing second.

In all there have been twelve contests for the Cup, in the second of which Mr. Ashbury challenged with the schooner Livonia and the New York Yacht Club agreed to defend the trophy with only one boat in the race. The 1871 contest was the best four out of seven races. Livonia won a single race owing to the steering gear of the defender Columbia breaking down. Only twice since that day, October 19, 1871, has a challenging yacht crossed the finish line ahead of the defending boat. On September 10, 1895, Valkyrie III, after following the defender finished one minute and sixteen seconds ahead of the American boat, and on October 4, 1901, Shamrock II, finished two seconds ahead of Columbia, but lost to the defender by virtue of conceding 42 seconds time allowance.

In the races of 1876, 1881, 1886, and 1887, the contests were decided on the basis of the best two out of three races. From 1893 to the last race in 1903 the agreement was for the best three out of five races.

On only three occasions has one of the competing yachts for the America's Cup failed to finish. In the last race of the 1895 contest, Valkyrie III, withdrew immediately after crossing the starting line. On October 17, 1899, Shamrock lost her topmast and withdrew in the second race of that year and on September 3, 1903, Shamrock III, did not finish in the final race of the series as she was already beaten and had nothing to gain by continuing.

Just once in the history of the cup races a competing yacht has been disqualified. This was in the second race of the series of 1895 when Lord Dunsraven's Valkyrie III, was disqualified for fouling Defender.

The fastest time ever made in a race for the America's Cup is credited to the old schooner Columbia. On October 18, 1871, the day before she was defeated by Livonia, she sailed 20 miles leeward and windward 40 miles in all in 3 hours, 1 minute and 33 seconds. It must not be inferred, however, that the Columbia was the fastest yacht that ever sailed for the cup. There is no method of determining the relative speed of two or more boats other than by the results of a race in which they sail together. When Columbia made the fast time referred to undoubtedly the conditions of wind, weather and sea were most favorable.

The fastest time ever made on a 15 mile course straight away and return, 30 miles in all, is credited to the defender Vigilant. In a race on October 13, 1893, she covered the course in 3 hours, 24 minutes and 29 seconds.

The fastest time in a triangular race for the cup was made by Columbia on October 3, 1881, the time for the distance, thirty miles, being 3:30:18.

In the first three contests for the cup the challenging boats were schooners and the defenders for the second and third also were schooners. In all other contests, however, the yachts have been sloops or cutters.

The smallest challenger in the history of the cup races was Atlanta, which was built at Belleville, Ontario, Canada, in 1881. She measured 64 feet on the water line and was the first sloop to appear in a contest.

The first yacht ever built especially to defend the trophy was Pocomontas. This was in 1881. Prior to that year the New York Yacht Club had selected from its fleet the yacht considered to be best suited for the purpose. Pocomontas did not come up to expectations and was rejected in favor of Mitchell, one of the finest sloops of the fleet. Since that year, however, new defenders have been built for every contest.

Jam Making in the Beginning.

To-day when the scarcity and high cost of sugar seems likely to interfere with the jam-making carnival, which usually reigns supreme in many homes, during the summer season, it is interesting to recall that jam-making only began in the eighteenth century. In Gait's "Annals of the Parish," in which the Rev. Micah Balwhidder quaintly chronicles the occurrences of his district from 1769 downwards, the following entry occurs relative to an important epoch in the parochoial history:—"I should not, in my notations, forget to mark a new luxury that got in among the commonalty at this time. By the opening of new roads and the traffic thereon with carts and carriers, and by our young men that were sailors going to the Clyde and sailing to Jamaica and the West Indies, heaps of sugar and coffee-beans were brought home, while many, among the kailstocks and cabbages in their yards, had planted gorse and berry bushes; which two things happening together, the fashion to make jam and jelly, which hitherto had been only known in the kitchens and confectionaries of the gentry, came to be introduced into the clachan.

Bathtubs Prohibited.

The first bathtub in the United States was installed in Cincinnati December 20, 1842, by Adam Thompson. It was made of mahogany and lined with sheet lead. At a Christmas party he exhibited and explained it and four guests later took a plunge. The next day the Cincinnati paper devoted many columns to the new invention and it gave rise to violent controversy. Some papers designated it as an epicurean luxury, others called it undemocratic, as it lacked simplicity in its surroundings. Medical authorities attacked it as dangerous to health. The controversy reached other cities and in many more than one place medical opinion was reflected in legislation. In 1843 the Philadelphia common council considered an ordinance prohibiting bathing between November 1 and March 15 and this ordinance failed of passage by two votes. During the same year the legislature of Virginia laid a tax of $30 a year on all bathtubs that might be set up. In Hartford, Providence, Charleston and Wilmington, special and very heavy water rates were laid on persons who had bathtubs. Boston in 1846 made bathing unlawful except on medical advice, but the ordinance was never enforced and in 1862 it was repealed. In 1860 a bathtub was installed at the White House.

SKIN FOR SKIN.
Two hundred and fifty years ago—May 2nd, 1670—"The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson Bay" received their charter from Charles II.

For two hundred and fifty years the industrious beaver has been playing no small role in the development of this country—incidentally of our own country. Many a governor and factor have come and gone most of them playing a noble and self-sacrificing part in this development, but the little beaver runs on forever. Were it not for it, it is very doubtful if "The Great Company"—"The Hudson's Bay Company"—would be trading in Canada to-day, as they soon found that the trade in peltries was a surer and shorter cut to wealth than a doubtful short-cut to the trade in the South Seas via "The North West Passage," the opening of which had been one of the terms of the charter. It was the trade in furs that spurred them on along the unmapped, unknown water-courses across a continent, north, west and south from Hudson's Bay. Later they established themselves to the eastward, until at one time they held almost absolute sovereignty over 2,250,000 square miles of territory.

The monopoly of this trade was not held undisputed all these years. The history of the company reveals the fact that many a dispute and clash at arms took place for the rights and titles to trade and territory, involving nations on the one side of the Atlantic down to individuals, on the other. The busy beaver all this time was doing his bit for his own, his native land, and did not, apparently, mind even the surrender which The Great Company had to make of its many monopolies and most of its dominions to Canada. Had not the beaver during these years made a name for himself in the commerce of the world? Were not its pelts used as a unit of value between the Company and its Redskin patrons, ermine, and the more valuable ones, were also valued as so many "layers," and the latter skins were eagerly sought by the French-Canadian trappers and voyageurs from the St. Lawrence, as these pelts were better adapted to pack and portage over the long trails back to the market in Quebec.

It was during these days of competitive trading that the H. B. Company issued a bulletin of prices, which was posted in several of their main divisions near which the interlopers were operating. This bulletin or "Standard of Trade," as it was called, enumerated the various articles which would be exchanged for one or more beaver skins. Their value varied a little at the several divisions. When the Indian turned in his skins and did not take value in merchandise at the time, he was given his change, if he had no unpaid account on the books of the Company, in tallies of split wood, wampum of broken shells, or later discs made of lead from tea chests, bearing the initials of the Company, together with the value for which they had been given.

At a later date, about 1812, brass tokens were substituted for these lead ones at its several factories. The largest of these was about the size of our half dollar. All of the four issues were alike except as to their denominations—1, 1-2, 1-4, 1-8, "Beaver." Each token had stamped on the obverse side the coat-of-arms of the Company with its Latin inscription, "Pro Pelle Cutem." (Skin for Skin), while on the reverse were the Company's initials, the value of the token and the abbreviation of the name of the trading division (e.g. E.M., East Main, etc.), in which they chiefly circulated. The "Beaver" would average from $2 to $3 in value. When beaver skins fell in value other skins usually depreciated also, so that the relative values, as far as the red man was concerned, was about the same. These tokens, together with the notes of the Company, issued at a still later date, when the Company had become the banker for the thousands of pioneers of the West, were often to be preferred to the "skin plasters" of the Canadian and the United States banks. The tokens were also highly regarded in California and Oregon, as well as in Western Canada.

In November, 1869, after ten years of litigation and investigation in the higher courts, the Company surren-

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

HOW the kiddies do love their JAP ROSE bath! The gay little bubbles of pearly, iridescent, elfish things—what joy they bring. All the distemper and grumbling, so natural to children when a bath is in order, are gone completely when the pretty cake of golden transparent JAP ROSE is used.

And what a satisfaction to the mother to know that a JAP ROSE bath brings not only happiness to her little tots, but also cleanses their tender skins hygienically as well as thoroughly.

It isn't alone the absolutely pure oils, of which JAP ROSE is made, but the scientific blending of these oils, that gives the big, golden transparent cake healing and cleansing properties that other toilet soaps do not possess. It cleans perfectly and hygienically every pore of the skin and scalp while its c. p. glycerine is most soothing.

More than that, JAP ROSE is so absolutely soluble in any kind of water, that just a dip and a rub or two, and almost at once, like magic you have the most profuse, bubbly lather—a lather in which there is no sediment or scum and which rinses quickly and easily. No undissolved soap left in the delicate skin pores to clog them and cause skin trouble—not when you use the pure, golden cake of transparent JAP ROSE soap.

Every touch a soothing, refreshing delight for the grown-ups as well as the kiddies, when it's JAPROSE, either for the bath, for the hair or for the face and hands.

Roses in the cheeks, fluffiness in the hair, fragrant cleanliness everywhere—that's JAP ROSE dered all its monopolistic rights and confirmed the transfer to Her Majesty of the Company's territorial rights in the North-West Territories. In the following year the Dominion of Canada paid £300,000 for the Hudson's Bay Company's rights in Rupert's Land, the Company retaining about 50,000 acres of land around some 150 trading posts—extending from Labrador to British Columbia and Alaska—together with 1-20 of all the arable land of the country set out for settlement, with every privilege of trade as a regular company. This put a stop to their usurping the offices of Government and banks.

In striking contrast with the prices of beaver skins in the early days, at a fur sale in Montreal in 1920 one lot of beaver skins brought no less than $105 each.—J. F. Sutherland in "The Caduceus."

Strange Tastes in Graves

The body of Sir Starr Jameson, the leader of the famous "raid," has been interred on the Matopos Hills, in Matabeleland, alongside the grave of his old friend and colleague, Cecil Rhodes. Similar hill-top interments are not altogether uncommon. Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, for instance, is buried on the summit of the highest mountain in his beloved Samoa, whether he was carried by the natives, who adored him. Probably the loftiest grave in the world is that wherein reposes the body of Wilson Everett, the famous mountaineer, who on his death expressed a wish to be buried as near as possible to the summit of Orizaba, the lofty Andean peak which he had been the first to scale. His desire was duly carried out, the grave being blasted with dynamite out of the living rock high above the snow-line. Finally, there is the case of the eccentric millionaire, William Barbour, who, tramping as a poor, homeless lad in the Adirondack Mountains, sat down on a boulder to eat some food he had begged. A farmer passing by, and noting his dejected attitude, offered him work; fifty years later, when he had "made his pile," Barbour had the enormous boulder transported to the top of the highest peak in the range, and beneath this strange tombstone his body now rests.

Lusitania Life Jacket.

Reported Picked Up in the Delaware River.
Philadelphia, July 15.—A life jacket, silent remembrance of the tragic sinking of the Lusitania five years ago and bearing a strand of faded blonde hair, was picked up yesterday in the Delaware River.
The name of the ship still remained clear and distinct, with the wave-beaten canvas, which has been adrift on the seas for five years.
The life jacket, which was found by two railroad detectives, was covered with slime and sea-weed, with one arm strap broken. On one side were the words "Lifebelt" and on the other, in large black letters the inscription "Lusitania."

Making Good.

That rarest of rare things, a new golfing story, has been started on its rounds by Field-Marshal Haig.
It appears that one day on the links he casually asked his caddie whether he had seen service during the war.
The caddie hedged. "One of my brothers was a 'Lifey,' one was a 'Tower-Hamlet,' and one was a 'First Royal,'" he explained.
"But you?" interposed Earl Haig.
"Well, I didn't do anything," replied the caddie. "But I'm going to make good. I'm going to carry your bloom-in' clubs for nuffink!"

This Week's Wisdom.

Lucky is the man who loses his reputation, if it is his.
Willing workers are always trying to work somebody.
Many a girl with mischief in her eye has goodness in her heart.
Occasionally a man discovers that he has a friend who is a friend of a married woman and you will find a man.
The man who takes himself seriously usually marries a woman who doesn't.
A woman is willing to admit a man's superiority when it comes to translating a railway time-table.
There is no earthly hope for a young man who sits around and waits for an engraved invitation to kiss a pretty girl.

His Testimony.

The temperance reformer was justly proud of having converted the biggest drunkard in P—, and induced him to get up on the platform and testify. This is how he did it:
"My friends," he said, "I never thought to stand upon this platform with the Proverb on one side of me and Topper Clark on the other side of me. I never thought to tell ye that for a whole month I've not touched a drop of anything. I've saved enough to buy me a brass oak coffin w' brass handles and brass nails, and if I'm a teetotaler for another month I shall be wantin' it."

Punched Into Fortune.

MONEY KINGS OF THE PRIZE RING.
One of the shortest cuts to fortune is through the boxing ring.
"I estimate that Jack Dempsey will accumulate £100,000 out of his fight with Carpenter," Mr. C. B. Cochran, who is promoting the match, told the T-B man.
"The Frenchman, who had a fortune of some $50,000 in the coal mines around Lens, and lost it when the Germans ransacked the place, has in twelve months retrieved something like £40,000, as a result of his fights with Dick Smith and Beckett, and he will add about £70,000 to his bank balance whether he wins, loses or draws against Dempsey."
Yet four years ago the American had scarcely a penny in his name, while Carpenter and his astute manager, Descamps, less than ten years ago were content to pick up a few francs by giving exhibitions in a boxing booth.
The purses which are now being offered for championship fights, however, have reached a limit never before known, and form an amazing contrast to the prize-money for which old-time champions were willing to batter one another to a standstill.

£311 Per Minute.
When Sullivan, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Corbett, McCoy, Sharkey, and Nelson were fighting, their end of the purse for a match was often nearer £1,000 than £2,000.

The demand on the part of champion boxers for bigger purses, and the willingness of promoters to compete with one another for matches by increasing their offers, began about twelve to fifteen years ago. The development of the cinema led to further wealth for boxers and promoters, who shared the picture rights between them, while music-hall engagements at £300 to £400 a week added still more to the lucky champions' banking accounts.

Tommy Burns, who is reported to be "coming back," was one of the pioneers of the big purse on the win, lose, or draw system. The sporting world received a shock when he demanded £6,000 for his fight with Jack Johnson. He lost, and Johnson only got £1,000 for winning. At that fight £26,000 was taken in gate money, which, however, was only half the sum paid to see the contest between Jeffries and Johnson at Reno, Nevada. £24,000 was the amount of the purse of which Johnson received £14,000—not a bad hour's work. It worked out at £311 per minute.

Tommy Burns once confessed that he had made a fortune of nearly £50,000 in the ring in about half-a-dozen years. Johnson must have made double that amount, and Jeffries, who began life as a bootmaker, about £50,000. Referring again to the old-time champions, J. L. Sullivan, who was king of the ring for ten years, made £200,000 during his amazingly successful career, while Fitzsimmons won and lost two fortunes through unfortunate speculations. Which reminds one of the sad downfall of that boxing wonder, George Dixon, who died penniless, although he made upwards of £80,000 during his career.

Although the premier attraction, heavyweights do not earn all the money. Jimmy Wilde will probably retire with £30,000 to live upon. McFarland, who began life as a boy in a Chicago packing yard, was worth £60,000 before he was twenty-five, while Battling Nelson, whose boxing earnings for three years—1906-8—only amounted to 86s., retired from the ring at thirty-one, having earned over £50,000, and Jimmy Britt £30,000.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE POOR RICH WOMAN.

There is a funny thing about material prosperity. It often has the effect of making people acquire a peculiar, all-embracing self-satisfaction.

I don't mean that they are simply satisfied with the prosperity. But I mean that some people on becoming

Her Contacts Feed Her Self-Esteem. The woman, on the other hand, does not have this discipline of hard work and rough contacts. As the man makes more money, she comes more and more into contact with people who earn their living by serving her and whose manner toward her will naturally be such as to feed her self-esteem. The servants he gives her; the clerks to whom she soon learns to say, with nonchalant condescension, "Charge it" and "send it," the manicurist, the shampooist, the dressmaker, all fill her with a sense of her own power and superiority.

Once more one is reminded of the rich man and his fabled difficulties in getting into the Kingdom. That used to puzzle me as it did the Pharisees, but the more I see of life, the more I come to understand that the rich man (or woman) who keeps sympathy, modesty, unselfishness, in spite of riches, has indeed accomplished a difficult task.

Witchcraft in Zululand.

The Zulu baby is born into the fear of witchcraft; in the fear of witchcraft he grows up and when he sickens and is about to die, his one thought is that a spell has been cast upon him for which the charm can not be discovered. All his life long he dreams to meet in lonely places the "inswalobova"—an inhuman man, lacking only hair or fur to make him altogether a beast—a sort of beast in human form who rides backward on a baboon, ready to pounce upon and make medicine of the unwary traveler. In mature manhood he suspects his neighbor, his friend, his brother, and even his wife of having dealings with makers of charms and poisons. He walks with an uneasy feeling that an enemy may have put medicine in his pathway to harm him. From every possible source, from earth and from sky, from river and from forest, from friend and from foe, he is continually apprehensive of an evil influence coming upon him, and searching for a talisman to wear against it.

A Worst Effect on Women. If she were the only person I ever saw in this state I should not, of course, bother you to hear about her. But I think she is an exaggerated example of a fairly familiar type, and I am interested to see if my reader friends think the same.

I think this effect of material prosperity is more common and more completely devastating among women than among men, probably because men have to work to win the prosperity—and work like that disciplines the worker so that he cannot be entirely smug.

Murderess Hanged.

A unique hanging was witnessed by spectators on July 21, 1834, when Catherine Snow paid the extreme penalty for complicity in the murder of her husband, the previous summer. Snow, with T. Mandeville and Arthur Spring, her accomplices, had been convicted and sentenced to death the preceding January, the two men being executed. But sentence was not carried out on the woman owing to the state of her health. However, on this day she was hanged from the window of the then Court House, at that time on the site where the Department of Works Building, once Union Bank, now stands. The Chief Justice of that time was Judge Boulton, and the names of the jury who heard the case and brought in the verdict, were: Thomas Buckingham, John Lang, Thomas Edstrom, George Lewis, Patrick Byrne, Wm. Buckley, James Tubrid, Patrick Maher, Richard Trelogan, Robert Radford, Valentine Merchant, Andrew Stewart.

LITTLE GIRLS.
Little girls are mighty nice. Take 'em any way they come. They are always worth their price. Life without 'em would be grim; Run earth's lists of treasures through. Pile 'em high until they fall, Gold an' costly jewels, too. Little girls are best of all.

Nothing equals 'em on earth! I'm an old man an' I know, Any little girl is worth More than all the gold below; Eyes o' blue or brown or gray, Raven hair or golden curls, There's no joy on earth to-day Quite so fine as little girls.

Pudgy nose or freckled face, Fairy-like or plain to see, God has surely blessed the place Where a little girl may be; They're the jewels of His crown, Dropped to earth from heaven above, Like angel souls sent down To remind us of His love.

God has made some lovely things—Roses red an' skies o' blue, Trees an' babbling silver springs, Gardens glistenin' with dew—But take every gift to man, Big an' little, great an' small, Judge it on its merits, an' Little girls are best of all!

POLITICS.

I like to talk of coking books, and motor cars and skillful cooks, and other things of worth; and so I bore the village Hicks, for they will talk of politics, and nothing else on earth. Oh, how I long for some sane wight who'll talk with me by day and night of art and dragons' teeth, of Science, and her great advance, and of that pugilist from France who yearns for Dempsey's wreath! But all my longings cut no grass; the people shun me as I pass, and sometimes hand me bricks; for I would talk of human things, of cats and cabbages and kings, and they'd talk politics. Oh, I would tell how my new boat can get the everlasting goat of any car I know, but none will listen while I prate; men talk of how some candidate will climb a luckless toe. And I would talk of Milton's harp, and of the bones in German earp, and of my spaniel's tricks; but men won't listen worth a cent; they shoo me off—they all are bent on talking politics. And politics, that dreary theme! The failure's hope, the dotard's dream, that bore beyond compare! That makes men say the same old things, and talk forever more in rings, nor leads them anywhere!

Household Notes.
Ten eggs make one pound.
Never make tea in a metal teapot.
Plan meals for the week on Monday.
Serve potatoes in an uncovered dish. An excellent bread is made with oatmeal.
Milk should never be kept in an open vessel.
Water-ice requires longer freezing than ice cream.
Any banana may be used for making marmalade.
All cake batters need a quarter teaspoonful of salt.
A four-pound fish should make six or seven portions.
Never buy things out of season, as they are always high.
Small sausages served with roast chicken add to the flavor.
In boiling potatoes, allow just enough water to boil dry.
Keep pickles in a dark, dry place, in either glass or stone jars.
Stale bread can be used as a basis for many meat dishes.

The Dollars and Cents of Cup Races.

If horse racing be the sport of kings then yacht racing for the trophy of the seas—America's Cup—must be included in the imperial category, for no one but an Emperor of Finance could afford to indulge in a sport, the magnitude of the cost of which takes one's breath away. Millions have been spent in the thirteen attempts to lift the "blue ribbon of yachting" from its present quarters in the rooms of the New York Yacht Club, and almost equal millions have been spent—with success—to retain a piece of ornamental silver that originally cost one hundred guineas, a sum equal in present day currency to approximately five hundred and twenty-five dollars. The question has often been asked as to what creates the enthusiasm (over cup races) amongst millions of people who do not know the main boom of a yacht from the spreader, and it still is, says a contemporary "one of the wonders of the sporting world, and must therefore be accepted without comment. But one solution to the mystery lies in the fact that the lay mind is astonished by the tremendous sums that have been spent on races for the America's Cup. That men are willing to spend millions of dollars to win, and others are equally willing to spend similar large sums to defend, a battered piece of silver appeals to the popular fancy."

"To make the situation more unique," continues the article from which we quote, "the money so spent is gone forever. Not one penny comes back in the way of gate receipts. And again, when the series of races end, the yachts used are usually only worth what they will bring as junk, as nothing is more useless than a racing yacht once the purpose for which she was designed and constructed is completed." But the sport itself appeals. The racing instinct is strong in all humanity, and for that reason, no matter whether those who become interested have ever seen salt water or viewed a craft under sail, there is something in the blood which keeps alive and stimulates the enthusiasm. The cost of cup racing, in the international series is greater in the case of the challenger than in that of the defender. For it must be borne in mind that the former has to be built sufficiently staunch and strong to weather ocean's storms and, in accordance with the terms laid down in the competition rules, to sail under her own canvas to the port from which the start for the course of the race has to be made. On the other hand the defender has the advantage of being less heavily built, the extra strength and weight necessary in the construction of the challenging yacht, not being a factor, and therefore very much in her favor. A generation ago the cost of defending the cup was something like twenty thousand dollars. Today it is twenty times that sum. The Resolute of the New York Yacht Club originally cost one hundred and twenty thousand dollars and another hundred thousand have been spent on the craft since she was launched, not including the thousand and one items of extra expense incidental to maintenance and upkeep. Altogether it is estimated that the cost of defending the trophy in 1920 will run into the startling sum of one million dollars.

Without going into the costs of previous challengers to Lipton and taking his quartette of attempts as the basis for proving that only financial emperors can afford to indulge in international cup racing, let it be said that in 1899 the Scottish-Irish baronet spent nine hundred thousand dollars on his entry into the field of competition. Included in that sum, however, there is the cost of the Erin, and her refitting, which totalled up to near a half million, leaving the actual cost of the first Shamrock four hundred thousand dollars. Shamrock II, made a hole in half a million, the cost of this boat being four hundred and fifty thousand. With ever-increasing figures Shamrock III was built in 1903, and the result of the races of that year left Sir Thomas out of pocket to the tune of six hundred thousand. At the end of this season all hands concerned came to the conclusion that even a quadrennial race for the cup was too expensive, and there was no challenge issued for several years, and it was not until the winter of 1913, ten years afterwards, that Lipton again managed to arrange another race with the cup holders. This race was scheduled for 1914, but as everyone is aware had to be put off because of the war. The cost to the New York Yacht Club will range in the vicinity of one million dollars; as the members built both Resolute and Vanitie, the former winning the honor of being selected as defender, while to the owner of Shamrock IV, the bills to be met will not be under a similar sum, as to the original cost of the challenger must be added the disbursements for bringing her across, storage at Brooklyn, rebuilding, maintenance, painting and caretaking. Then in addition Sir Thomas has in American waters, the 23 metre Shamrock, a houseboat, a steam yacht, a tug and a motor boat. Putting the sums spent by both the parties to the race together it is safe to say that the cost of the 1920 series will not fall far short of the astounding total of two million dollars. Truly yachting is an imperial sport.

C. of E. Educational Meeting.

Practically every member who took part in the last C. of E. Educational drive were present at a meeting held in the College Hall last evening. The gathering included Rev. Canon Bolt, Rev. Canon Leves, Rev. A. Clayton, Rev. Dr. Fahey, Messrs. R. B. Job, J. Browning, D. Mann, G. McK. Harvey, J. W. Withers and Dr. Blackall. Following the supper with which the proceedings opened, Rev. Canon Bolt introduced the subject of the meeting, namely, to arrange for collection of amounts owing on the drive of last season. The manner of procedure and totals to be collected was outlined by the Secretary, Mr. Brian Dunfield, and an address given by Mr. J. W. Withers, after which the meeting closed at 10.30. The committee will meet again at 9 o'clock to-morrow night in the College Hall, when reports will be received.

Regatta Entries.

The Amateur, Mercantile, Football and Juvenile crews are invited to enter at the meeting of the Regatta Committee, which will be held on Friday night. It has been decided that all crews to which objections may be raised should enter and produce their credentials. The Committee has also decided that when more than four boats are competing the rowers must win out in heats, to be rowed on Regatta Day, previously or after. All coxswains of entering crews for races mentioned are asked to be present on Friday night.

Fishery Reports.

The Marine Dept. had the following message yesterday from Larn: "On Saturday one trap at Little Lawn had 40 qts, and this morning the western traps took from 10 to 40, but eastern traps nothing. This is the first fish for traps worth reporting."
A report from Change Islands to the Board of Trade states that trawls on the outside grounds are taking from 1 to 3 quintals daily. The trap on the whole has been very poor, and not more than 1500 qts. have been landed to date. Caplin is plentiful.

FROM LABRADOR.

The following reports from Labrador were received yesterday by the Marine Department:
Smoky—Light S.W., clear; light on ice distant; no sign of fish.
Grady—Sign of fish; light W. wind.
Flat Islands—No improvement in fishery; weather calm and clear.
Venison Island—No fish.
Battle Hr.—Calm, clear, no fish.
Dominic—Calm, clear; no improvement in fishery.

Garden Party at Lester's Field.

This afternoon, the people of St. Mary's Church, Southside, are holding a Garden Party at Lester's Field, Cornwall Avenue. Great preparations have been made and excellent entertainment will be provided. As the field is conveniently situated, it is anticipated that a large number of people will be present. The ladies in charge of the tables promise an appetizing repast for those who attend. Entrance to the field may also be made from the Blackmarsh Road.

Drowned in Straits.

The following message was received from Capt. Jesse Winsor, Westville, by Mr. Jesse Whiteway, this morning:
"Sad news received to-day. John Mullett and Peter Mullett, sons of Peter Mullett, here, and Llewellyn Best, were drowned in the Straits, Friday last, by sea overturning their boat. Frederick Mullett, a brother of the two men of that name, drowned, is master of the schooner in which the men were fishing, and reports the fatality."

Stearns' Day Dream (Supreme) Line really is supreme in the opinion of a great many of its users. There is a soothing quality in the Day Dream Poudre Cream, a brightness and brilliancy in the Powder, a sweetness in the Perfume that is in different ways, very engaging. And as the line becomes better known it is likely to become better appreciated, as one lady tells another of its virtues. If you want something a little different, and probably considerably better than the kind you are using at present, try Day Dream for a change. We believe you will thus be led to appreciate as certainly one of the nicest of the lot.

Shamrock Again the Winner!

Yacht For Yacht,

Shamrock Trimmed Resolute---Challenger Won by Safe Margin---Nickolson Did Not Sail in Yesterday's Race---British Troops For Mesopotamia---Practical Ultimatum to Russia---More Outbreaks in Ireland.

SANDY HOOK, July 20. Shamrock wins.

THE RACE.
At 11.42 a.m. the committee set the signals for today's triangular course, first, a reach southeast, second, a beat west by north, third, a reach to finish northeast by north. Captain Burton is at the wheel of the Shamrock with Mrs. Burton in her usual seat. The Shamrock crossed the starting line ahead of the Resolute.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 1.10 p.m. the Shamrock is passing the Resolute.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 1.30 p.m. the Shamrock is three hundred yards in the lead.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 1.45 p.m. the Shamrock is nearly half a mile in the lead. The yachts are four miles from the first leg.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 2 o'clock the Resolute has cut down the Shamrock's lead to a quarter of a mile.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
The Shamrock led the Resolute around the first mark by six hundred yards at 2-28-28. The Resolute followed at 2-32-41, the Shamrock thus leading by 4 minutes and 13 seconds.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 2.15 half the course was covered in half the time limit, the Shamrock leading by nearly a mile.

SANDY HOOK, July 20.
At 3.30 observers aboard a destroyer reported the Shamrock a mile and a quarter ahead of the Resolute.

DESIGNER RESPONSIBLE FOR ERRORS.

NEW YORK, July 20.
Designer Nicholson is not sailing on the Shamrock to-day and says he was responsible for most of the glaring errors made in the sailing of the challenger.

SHAMROCK WON BY 2 MIN. 26 SEC. CORRECTED TIME.

SANDY HOOK, N.J. July 20.
Shamrock Four to-day won another race from the American defender Resolute and needs only one more victory to lift the America's cup. The Shamrock won by two minutes and twenty-six seconds corrected time over the course, according to official calculation.

Firing began at five o'clock arousing the inhabitants and driving them to shelter. Later fires were started in different parts of the town doing half a million damage, according to the Press Association. Military forces were called out but were soon withdrawn. The number of casualties was unknown up to this afternoon.

DARING HOLD-UP IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, July 20.
Three armed bandits held up the cashier of the Borden Condensed Milk Company to-day in front of the Company's office on the west side and escaped with ten thousand dollars in cash. The cashier was on his way to a buggy, which was waiting at the curb, with another Company official. As he stepped from the door of the office a man struck a pistol in his face and another grabbed the cash. The hold-up men ran to a waiting automobile and dashed away.

REID NFLD. COMPANY.

Charles F. Adams is Premier Yachtsman.

New York, July 15.—Charles Francis Adams, 2nd, the man at the wheel who will try to steer the Resolute to victory in her races in defence of the America's Cup off Sandy Hook, is characterized by experts as the premier American yachtsman.

He has owned more than a score of yachts and has sailed nearly 100,000 miles. His father used to take him sailing in Boston harbor when he was a child, and by the time he was 12 years old he was winning races with his small boats. In those days he learned a lot about the tricky side of races, for rules were lax.

In later years Mr. Adams built and sailed to victory many notable yachts, most of which bore names composed of seven letters with a double o, such as the Papoose, Baboon, Gossoon, Haspoon and Roster.

He was at the wheel of the famous Pilgrim when she sailed a race against the Vigilant and Jubilee for the honor of defending the America's Cup in 1893. He sent his brother George, mate of the Pilgrim, to the leeward rail to watch the jib sheets as the yacht drove along in a smoky southwester. She heeled so hard that George soon stood in water up to his knees.

"Hoy, there, Deacon," he yelled, "it's getting deep out here."

"I don't care if it comes up to your neck, you stay there till I tell you to come out," replied Captain Charles. But the Pilgrim was defeated.

There may be a happy omen in the fact that Charles F. Adams years ago blocked the aspirations of one little Scotch cutter, the Minerva, which came to America and defeated a number of American boats in 1890. Her victories were regarded as ominous and suggested to yachtsmen the possibility that a larger boat of her type would be sent to carry away the America's Cup. The Minerva was sailed by Charlie Barr, the famous skipper who defended the cup as skipper of the Columbia in 1901 and the Reliance in 1903. But Captain Adams with his little Gossoon stopped the victorious career by winning two out of three races.

Captain Christiansen, the professional skipper of the Resolute, has sailed with Mr. Adams before. He was quartermaster of the Pilgrim in the race of 1893 and won Mr. Adams' approval by going out on to the gale, a dangerous position, to fasten a sail that became loose while the race was on.

To-day's Messages.

REFUSED RECOGNITION.

BRUSSELS, July 20.
After an exchange of correspondence with the British Olympic Committee the executive of the Olympic Games has refused Ireland permission to participate in the events olympics as a separate nation. Irish athletics refused to compete under the British flag, and wrote the Olympic Executive stating that they would enter in a number of events if they were allowed individual standing. As Ireland has not been included in the list of nations represented on the International Olympic Committee, the Belgian Executive, facing a delicate situation, sought to gain Great Britain's consent, but failed.

MILITARY OCCUPIED FOUNDRY.

DUBLIN, July 20.
Fearing a raid by Sinn Feiners, military forces to-day occupied the large foundry here, belonging to Unionists, and in which quantities of shells and munition cases were stored. Other incidents of the day included visit of a clergyman to the offices of the Great Southern Railway for the restoration of seventeen hundred pounds, removed from a pay train in County Limerick April 2. He said the Republican police had rounded up the thieves and if informed of the exact amount stolen he probably would be able to recover the remainder.

Wholesale Robbery.

Importers are loud in complaint of the systematic robberies now being perpetrated on foreign shipping in port by a supposed organized gang of crooks. One dealer of Water Street, who had some 27 cases of goods from New York by recent steamer, found that $1,000 worth of clothing were taken from one case, and in all there was $4,000 worth abstracted from the lot. The cases showed absolutely no signs of being tampered with, proving that the thefts could not have been made on ship board.

POLICE COURT.—Two young men were fined 2 or 10 days each for loose and disorderly conduct at St. George's Field on the 12th inst. The fines were paid.

Household Notes.

An ordinary iron fire shovel makes an excellent salamander. Unseasoned cereals may be used to thicken soups, stews or gravies.

The better blackberries for jelly-making are the uncultivated ones. Before using currants or raisins in cakes, wash, dry and flour them.

Farsley added to creamed potatoes gives them an excellent flavor. In warm weather it is wise to use fresh fruits instead of made desserts.

When boiling peas or beans, add a sprig of mint when first put on to cook. Lemons will be ripe and juicy if kept in cold water changed every week.

Butter for cakes should never be melted or warmed. Beat it to a cream. To keep apples from turning brown, place in salt water for a few minutes. As canned mushrooms are already cooked, do not boil them when cooking. Before using brass kettles, clean them with salt and vinegar.

Potatoes have a much better flavor if cooked in an iron pot.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE.—The Wireless Telephone system at Cabot Tower was in operation yesterday evening, and is now ready to pick up messages from the S.S. Victorian, which was to leave Liverpool yesterday.

Richard Wagner and the Woman He Loved.

(John O'London's Weekly.)
"Women are the music of life," Richard Wagner, composer of "Lohengrin," "Tannhauser," and other world-famous operas, once said. "In the hearts of women it has always gone well with my art." Certainly no great Master of Music has ever been more inspired by love. He has put into deathless melody the eternal beauty of man's worship of womanhood, of human joy in marriage, of the soul's quest for its mate. And yet to him love brought no little suffering.

The Black-Eyed Jewess.
He was still a student, struggling and stumbling at the very foot of his Parnassus, when love first came to him in the guise of Leah David, a young Jewess, black-eyed, black-haired, and of distracting beauty. But jealousy followed swiftly on the heels of this first real passion; and, as the result of a fierce attack on a rival in the lady's own house, he found his door finally closed next day against him, with the crushing news that the Jewess had promised her hand to the man "who knew how to keep his temper."

To seek forgetfulness of this blow to his heart and his pride, he plunged recklessly into dissipation, one wild love-adventure following another, until the prodigal was at last restored to sanity and a sense of shame, when he lost his heart, for the second time, to Wilhelmina Planer, the leading lady of the Magdeburg Theatre.

In Love And in Debt.
Nor was it long before Wilhelmina, the pretty actress of the gentle voice, timid eyes, and tender heart, was swept off her feet by the passion of the masterful young musician, whose strength and manliness, even his brusque speech and manners, appealed irresistibly to her weakness. That Wagner was deeply in debt, that failure dogged his steps, and that he was out of employment mattered nothing to the brave-hearted girl who had dedicated her life to him.

Thus it was that one November day in 1836, when Wagner, by a stroke of luck, was appointed Musical Director of the Königsberg Theatre, she stood by his side at the altar "for better or for worse," little dreaming how much of the "worse" would fall to her lot.

In spite of poverty and "the most dubious outward circumstances," the young couple were no doubt happy in their mutual devotion; though, as Wagner confesses, "the year I spent at Königsberg was completely lost to my art by reason of the pressure of petty cares." And when he shook the dust of Königsberg off his feet to fare to Russia as Musical Director of the Riga Opera House, struggle and disappointment went with them, and sent them again on their pilgrimage.

When the Riga authorities refused Wagner a passport until he had paid his debts, he and his wife escaped over the frontier in disguise and voyaged to England with, as he tells us, "an opera and a half and a large and ferocious Newfoundland dog." After a terrible voyage of three and a half weeks, and narrowly escaping death from violent storms, the fugitives found such a cold welcome in England that they continued their journey to Paris, where they were soon reduced to such straits that Wilhelmina had to pawn her few remaining articles of jewellery to keep body and soul together.

An Opera And a Half And a Dog.
But even in these black days her devotion never wavered or weakened. With almost superhuman patience she toiled for him night and day, and masked her sufferings and her anxieties with a smiling face. In later years he would weep when describing the heroic self-denial of his wife during these years of scilicet.

With Wagner's return to Germany, though it brought the first gleams of the success that was to be his, such married happiness as poverty had allowed him began to take wings. His wife's health at last broke down under her long sufferings and privations, and she foolishly had recourse to opium to "soothe her nerves," with recourse to opium to "soothe her ner-

No Injury to Morality.

She became impatient, querulous, and quarrelsome, upbraided her husband for not composing music the public wanted, and ridiculed his claim to genius. Her mental condition became at last such a torment to herself, as well as to all around her, that Wagner was glad to send her away for one "rest-cure" after another, imploring Liszt to lend him money "to make his wife happy, if only for a time."

It was during one of these absences that Wagner succumbed to the temptation to seek consolation elsewhere; and he found it in Emilie Heim, the wife of his next-door neighbour, a conductor. When his wife's jealousy drove him from the neighbourhood of the too seductive Emilie, he quickly found solace in Frau Wesendonck, wife of one of his greatest friends and admirers, whom he described as "the noblest and purest of women," vowing that his love for her was "no injury to morality."

With jealousy now to widen the gulf that had grown between them, Wagner found life with his wife more and more impossible. "Everlasting squabbles" at last made it such a burden to both that they decided to separate— "Mina" to spend the brief, miserable remainder of her life with her family at Dresden.

To his last day, though he was happily wedded to a second wife—Liszt's daughter—Wagner retained his love for and gratitude to the woman who had trodden "the dark valley of failure by his side with such a touching devotedness."

Why Frankfurt?

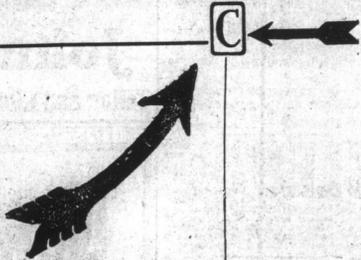

King Carl the Great (Charlemagne) was once defeated by the Saxons, and fled with his Franks to the Main. But they could find no fording-place by which to escape the pursuit of their enemies. Suddenly a cart appeared and made for a spot where it crossed the river and fordable. So they came across the Main, and the place has ever since been called "Frankfurt" (the ford of the Franks.)

LONDON GOSSIP.

PRINCES BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

LONDON, May 29th, 1920. Albert, who is deputising for the Prince of Wales during his absence, is worthily maintaining the traditions of the Royal family in their participation in public life. The Prince of Wales when he appears in public, is before him. Prince Albert and himself to be a good second brother. Both have winning personalities, they are fluent in their own language, and both have tact. Albert has recently had quite a number of public engagements. The Prince of Wales away, a burden has fallen on his shoulders. At St. James's Palace last night a reception of the International Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, allied from all parts of the world, was a sort of welcome-home to their comrades who had returned from the front. The past 36 years close to 100 children had been helped.

KEEPING HUN LUNATICS.

The Office at the present time is turning to his native land on whom they can lay claim. It is by no means an easy matter, as from every internment camp a number of Germans are being sent on parole, and numerous women obtained parole at large during the war. The difficulty is being found in the case of the certified lunatics of nationality who were transferred to some cases during the war in some cases to private persons. All these are now being traced, and sent back to Germany. One woman asserted that she was the Sheba, claimed thereby to be the nationality of an Arab, and, therefore, was not deportable.

MAN VANISHES FROM THE CITY.

It has become of London's fat question is asked by a coroner of mine who visits the intervals, and who was asked about the change that over the appearance of the man since his last visit years ago. "I spent a couple of days in the City (London's banking district)," he said, "Throgmorton Street, went through the Bank of England, and called at other busy places, and had lunch at a big city club, yet I only saw one man who could be called fat. The city club was not impressive. Nearly all the men I saw were over fifty and in comfortable circumstances that allowed them to take a leisurely coffee after lunch. They were the sort of men who could slack when they wished to do so, yet nearly every one had a trim figure and good carriage and went up and down the stairs with an easy tread. The number of well-set-up men who either took a pride in themselves or were screwed up to it by their grandchildren was very noticeable. Now my memory of the City of London was that most elderly men in good circumstances were stout or at least well-fleshed men who moved heavily and expressed responsibility in their deportment. It certainly was so in the eighties and nineties, if one can by book illustrations and the records of foreign visitors. If you see a stout man in the city now it is five to one that he is a foreigner, very often an American, for the dry, long, thin Uncle Sam American seems to have given place to a large, high-shouldered, bulky type that walks, however, with surprising lightness of foot and seems to have none of the disadvantages of his weight. But what has become of the fat Londoner? The explanation is not only the war food. The number of elderly men who fined themselves down into condition to take their part in the Volunteer corps that sprang up in 1915 or as special constables or as voluntary fire brigade workers and in other duties was enormous. They set the standard for the other men of their generation, and so fatness became a reproach and children and grandchildren told the sleek old boys what they thought of their corpulence, and the best of it is that they are not slipping back.

RUMANIA AND RUSSIA.

With the beginning of the Polish offensive the rumor got abroad that Finland, Rumania, and perhaps some of the other border States were willing to take a hand in the attack. The statements referring to Rumania were the most definite. It was said that M. Patek, the Polish Foreign Minister, had been hurriedly recalled from abroad, as M. Take Jofescu, the well-known Rumanian statesman, had arrived in Warsaw with a commission to conclude a military alliance. Certain "diplomatic correspondents" even knew that he had in his pocket an offer for the immediate intervention of 160,000 men. I am assured from a reliable source that there is no truth whatever in these assertions. Unless the Bolsheviks were to take it into their heads to attack Rumania, a contingency hardly likely, not a single Rumanian soldier will be sent across the Dniester. Responsible Rumanian statesmen are opposed, now as before, to any intervention in Russia, military or other. Hence there can be no question of an alliance based on an attack against Russia. The best proof of it is that the whole story of M. Jofescu's visit to Warsaw is sheer invention. He has not gone there.

MISS DAMER DAWSON.

Miss Damer Dawson, O.B.E., chief of the Women Police Service, whose death is announced, was one of the earliest organisers of women's war-work. She was convinced that in the new conditions a body of carefully selected, experienced, and highly trained women could be of great service in the streets and other public places, but she could not at that time foresee that there would also be a great demand for them in munition works, where they were invaluable. London has long been accustomed to the sight of the smartly uniformed women who patrol the streets or take special duty at big meetings, and it has been bewildered by the appearance of the newer policewomen who serve under Scotland Yard (London's headquarters of the detective force). The two organisations are distinct, and when speaking of gatherings of women Miss Damer Dawson used to make it clear that she was dissatisfied with the status and the limited powers which Sir Nevil Macready accorded to the women whom he enrolled. She was a woman of wide experience in other work. Her work for the protection of animals had been recognised by two European Governments. She will be greatly missed by many women's organisations. She was a capital speaker, full of zest for her own work and always ready to give a helping hand to other reforms.

PARLIAMENT AND THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Three hundred British competitors are to take part in the Olympic games which will be held at Antwerp this summer. The total cost will be $32,500, and a committee has been formed in the House of Commons here for the purpose of obtaining guarantees amounting to $25,000 to meet the initial expenses. The committee is fully representative of the athletic side of Parliament. The Speaker is at its head, and F. S. Jackson, the famous cricketer, is one of its leading members. There are eight "blues" in the present House, six from Cambridge and two from Oxford Universities, and all find seats on the committee. They include Mr. Falcon, the fastest bowler who played for the Gentlemen at Lord's last year, and the rowing "blues" are worthily represented by Dudley Ward.

SHIPOWNERS AND SHIPBUILDING.

It was suggested to me a day or two ago that, owing to the rise in costs of construction some shipowners with tonnage on order were showing a disposition to seek relief from their contracts. A friend from Glasgow who is in very close touch with the shipping and shipbuilding industries tells me that although no owners have to his knowledge yet cancelled their contracts the whole of them are completely "fed up" with what is happening. Ships are dear enough to begin with, he says; and when the deliveries are so long delayed as is the case at present the owners are necessarily involved in heavy losses. The best of the yards are six months behind with their work, and those which are outside of what may be called a steel group are, my friend declares, losing ground every day. The delays in the deliveries of material are, in his opinion, a large cause of the backwardness of the contracts which are in progress. There are of course others which are not in the least degree obscure. Something ought to be done, it is added, to improve the position, and it ought to be done quickly.

THE "SEMI-BETWEEN DRESS."

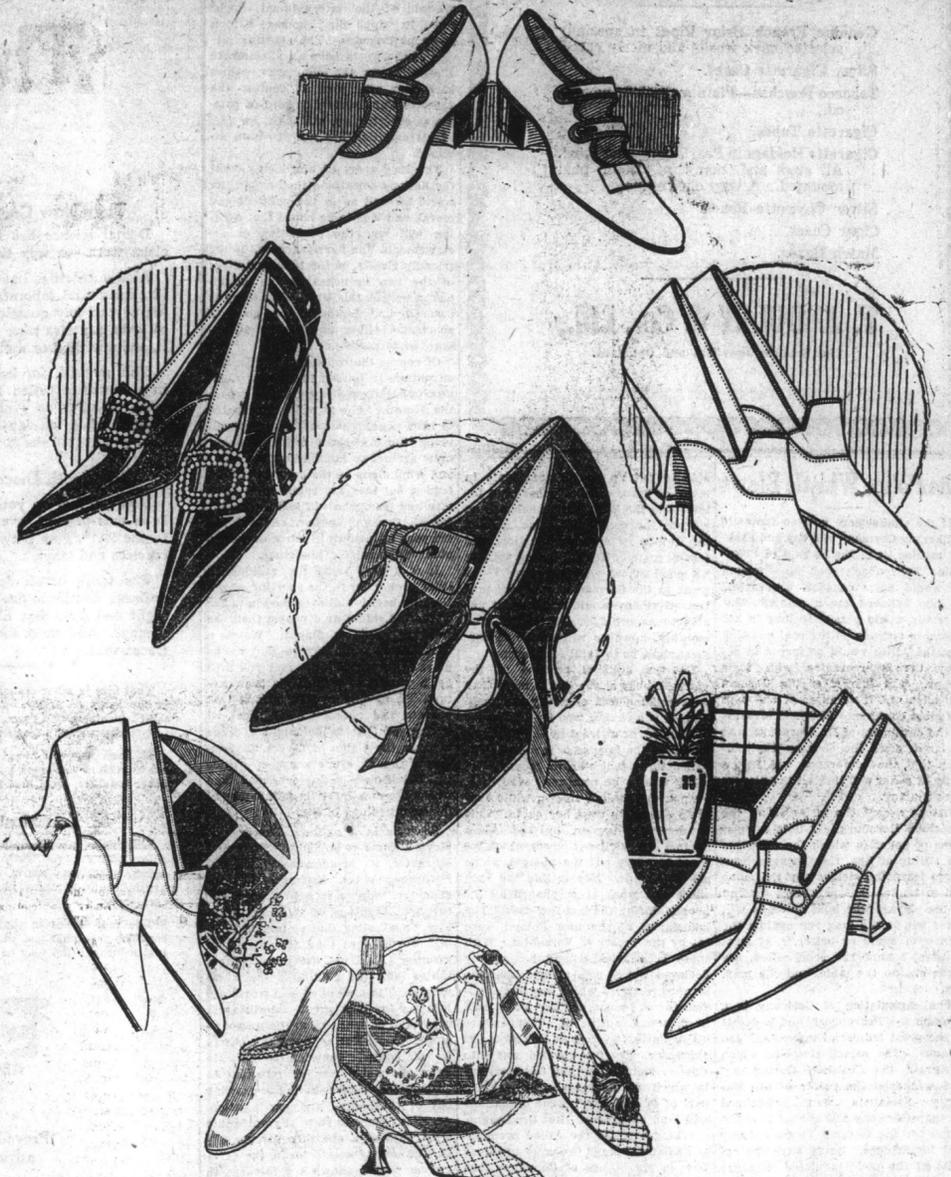

A woman correspondent writes:—For the woman starting on a foreign holiday this summer, the most important item in the wardrobe is what is quaintly known as the "semi-between dress" suitable either for afternoon or evening wear. Taffeta is the ideal material for such dresses. It always looks right, is smart and becoming, and has a knack of appearing from a small suitcase fit to wear at once. Jersey dresses are useful for afternoons and take up very little room, while charmeuse, crepe de chine and, for warmer weather, flowered volles, made simply with low, rounded, or square necks, and worn with a smart hat, look well at tea parties or at a theatre in the evening. Shoes and stockings worn with such dresses should be given special attention, as the wrong ones give an air of dowdiness even to the smartest of simple frocks.

Coal Built St. Paul's Cathedral.

The intimate connection between coal and the cathedral of St. Paul's in London, may not be widely known, but it is a fact that the present cathedral was practically built on coal, or, to speak more correctly, on the proceeds of the sale of coal. The original cathedral is said to have been formed about the year 604 and to have been entirely demolished by fire in the year 1087. The next church was built of stone obtained from Normandy and was finished in the year 1222. In the year 1666 the church was destroyed during the great London fire. Being short of money for the rebuilding, an act of parliament was passed laying a duty of 2s (normally 4s cents) a chaldron on all coal brought into London for seven years from 1670 to 1677, and a duty of 3s (normally 7s cents) a chaldron for the next ten years, from 1677 to 1687. Of this sum three-fourths were to be expended upon rebuilding the London churches, and one-fourth of the sum devoted to the churches of London was to be expended on the rebuilding of St. Paul's. Three kings—Charles II, James II and William III—and one queen, Anne, reigned during the progress of the building. Westminster Abbey may be thought to be more beautiful and more full of historic incident but the abbey is not in London proper. It is the ancient city of London which has, from the early times, been the birthplace of English trade and enterprise as it is to-day, and St. Paul's cathedral is its greatest building.

The Police Whistle Blows

If the simile were not too fantastic in likening Germany to a coy and bashful maiden, it might be said of Chancellor Fehrenbach that he, "rowing he would never consent, consented." No one believed for a moment that Germany would persist so long in her obstinate attitude on the coal question that the Allies would be forced to occupy the Ruhr region with their troops. The temper of the German delegates and their angle of vision in the great conference at Spa is revealed in the comments of Dr. Dernburg, who declared, after the German capitulation, that the conference was just a game of poker and that all the players were bluffing.

Let us accept the metaphor of the notorious Dernburg. If it is a great game of poker in which the delegates are sitting at Spa, the Germans have yet to learn the elements of the game and to realize that persistent bluffing by the players who hold no cards will never win in the long run against the man with "four or better." At least Germany's bluff has been called, her cards are on the table, and she must pay.

The capitulation of Germany is a triumph for Fehrenbach and a defeat of the great industrial magnate, Hugo Stinnes. The recent elections which weakened the Coalition Government and the power of the Majority Socialists was proclaimed through Germany and abroad as a triumph for the German People's Party and for Stinnes. Scarcely were the results of the polls tabulated than the German press was flooded with comment, mostly eulogistic, regarding the man who was said to hold industrial Germany in the hollow of his hand. His vast estates were proclaimed, his coal mines, his forests, his wealth and the one hundred newspapers which he was said to control were vaunted in skillful propaganda. When Fehrenbach went to the Spa Conference Stinnes went also, and it is an open secret that he was the power that sent Foch and Sir Harry Wilson hot-foot to Belgium to lay plans for the occupation of more German territory.

Moreover, Stinnes must have been able to put up strong arguments in favor of his course. He has vast interests in the Westphalian fields, from whence the coal must come, and he can retard or speed production, and foment a strike at will, indeed without his good offices—if his power is as great as the German newspapers pretend—Germany would find herself unable to export 2,000,000 tons of coal monthly, however willing the moderates might be to fulfil such terms.

But the decision reached at the eleventh hour at the Spa is more than a personal defeat of a German magnate. It is a victory won by the League of Nations, or at least by the principle on which the League is founded. The Allied force that was to occupy Germany was to be composed of British, French and Italian troops, while Belgium offered to send her quota. This is concerted action by the Allies against a recalcitrant power which refuses to carry out the pledges which she has made. Nor is this the only successful work accomplished by the League during the last few days. The boundaries of the new Poland were set by the Treaty of Versailles. With these boundaries Poland has openly declared she is not satisfied, and she invaded territory which has been Russian for at least a century and a half in protest against the delimitations set in Paris. So long as Poland is the aggressor, who has carried war into Russia, claiming that the territory in which she operates is by rights a part of Poland, the League of Nations will lend no support. But the League, speaking through the Allied premiers at Spa and through the voice of Bonar Law in the House of Commons, has laid down the principle definitely that the Allied nations will use "all the force at their command" to prevent Bolshevik Russia from advancing beyond the limits of the Poland fixed by the Versailles Treaty, of which the League is an integral part.

The League has wielded the big stick, but it wields it as a schoolmaster as a corrective and a warning against wrong-doers, and not as the bludgeon of the bully or the whip of the strong to enforce its tyranny over the weak.

The League of Nations has found its police force, and it is assembled in a moment at the call of the contributing nations of the League.—Montreal Daily Star.

The True Sportsman.

(From an Exchange.)
 Nothing better illustrates the true sporting spirit of the British than the renewal of the international yacht races in which Sir Thomas Lipton again participates. The sporting circles of the world have an affectionate admiration for the man who comes back year after year to contest the America Cup, without a word of complaint or criticism, although the goal of his ambition has not yet been attained.

The long years of war have taught the nations something in the sporting world as well as in the political and moral, and it is to be hoped that nothing will mar the perfection of arrangements, the hearty accord, or the friendly rivalry of the representatives of the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon people, this time. One thing is assured, that Lipton is too good a sportsman either to want an advantage, or to make one.

Of course the contestant is at a disadvantage in having to build a yacht that can sail on her own keel across the Atlantic. She must be constructed to meet conditions that do not prevail along the American coast, and her crew are not so familiar with weather and wind signs as the crew of the defender, but they are bound to be good men and true, who will sail their craft for all there is in her, and yet not trespass on doubtful tactics or fail to observe the rules of the game.

It is a good thing for nations to learn each other in the sporting world. Nothing better indicates the character of the individual or a people than the way the game is played. Watch a small child from day to day as he plays with his fellows, and you will get a very good idea of his basic nature. It is only by this means that parents and guardians can get an inkling of that fundamental attitude towards the rights of others, that inherent through a crude sense of justice which promises a fine manhood, and whose absence foretells failure in the important things of life.

So it is in #nation. The way it plays a game is an index of national character, its steadfastness and uprightness, or the contrary. A tendency to indulge in shabby practices, to take advantage of technical quibbles, or a feeling that victory is in itself worth more than fair means of winning it, each and every one of these things indicates a quirk in the moral nature. The eyes of all the world are focussed on this great international event, not so much upon the man who comes to contest as upon the nation he challenges. America, so slow to enter the world war, so reluctant to assume the responsibilities growing out of that entry and participation, America is now to show the world just what sort of a sporting partner she is. The arrangements made, the scrupulous regard shown for fairness in practice and justice in decision, all these will go far to assure America of a high place on the world's sporting roll. Hats off to Lipton and Shamrock IV! Whether winning or losing he is the typical British sportsman, and no higher praise can be given him.

Oriental Banquet.

A banquet given to "Lora" Allenby by King Hussein of the Hedjaz, is described by a correspondent, who says: After preliminary visits and military reviews, in which the Bedouin cavalry dashed by at full speed, firing their rifles, the banquet was held in true Arab style in the municipal buildings at Jeddah. On the table, which was eighteen feet broad by thirty feet in length, barefooted waiters dressed in rich Arab costumes walked about helping the guests, seventy in number, to slices of the joints of roasted half sheep stuffed with almonds, rice and spices. Each guest had three or four plates, and was surrounded by some twenty or thirty dishes of salads, fish, roasted chickens, platt of mutton and sweets of all descriptions. The King's band of musicians played throughout the banquet. At the end of the feast the King's servants handed round silver basins with ewers of scented water for the guests to wash their hands in. Coffee was served in another room while guests of a lower degree sat down at the banquet table. The remnants of the feast, which were considerable, were distributed among the inhabitants of Jeddah and the crews of the British ships at anchor in the harbor.

They Don't Clean Teeth

In Your Way Now—Not the Men Who Know

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

They Now Combat the Film

Dental science has found a new way to clean teeth—a way that combats the film.

Able authorities have proved it for years in clinical and laboratory tests. The facts are beyond any question. Leading dentists all over America now urge people to adopt it, and a million or more have done so.

This method, for home use, is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And this week we offer, to every home in this city, enough for a ten-day test. For your own sake you should make that test.

Why Teeth Discolor and Decay

You can feel on your teeth a slimy film. It is ever-present, ever-forming. It clings to the teeth, gets between the teeth, enters crevices and stays.

The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary dentifrice does not dissolve it. So, night and day, that film may do ceaseless damage. And most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of many other troubles, local and internal.

You Must End It

Millions of people find that brushed teeth discolor and decay. Tartar forms and pyorrhea starts. Statistics show that, despite the tooth brush, tooth troubles have been constantly increasing.

The reason lies in that film. To prevent the troubles you must end the film. Let this ten-day test show you the way to do it.

Now Millions of Teeth Are Kept Whiter

Pepsodent is now applied to millions of teeth every day. The result is seen everywhere in glistening teeth. Some of your friends can show them.

Those teeth glisten because they are clean. The film is kept removed. Now we ask you to see how your own teeth look after a ten-day use.

Based on Pepsin

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digester of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed forbidden. It must be activated, and the usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. What science has now found is a harmless activating method. Now pepsin can be applied twice daily—can be left between the teeth. And five years have proved that this discovery opens a new dental era.

Look at Your Teeth in Ten Days

The results are easily shown and we urge you to see them. Read how they come about. Then decide for yourself what is best for your teeth and for your children's teeth.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Use like any tooth paste. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Compare the results with your present methods. Remember that those whiter teeth mean cleaner teeth—teeth kept freer from film. Then decide for yourself about going back to former cleaning methods.

Make the test this week, while the 10-Day Tube is free. The result will be of lifetime importance to you. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

They Keep Teeth White by keeping them free from film. The old ways failed to do that.

They Teach Children how to really clean teeth, and how to combat the film which is the source of most tooth troubles.

The Baby Was Better.

The incident of the following Marconi story, from the Manchester Guardian, occurred some time ago, though hitherto unpublished.

Signor Marconi was crossing with his wife to America, and he had left at home in Rome one of his children sitting in bed. Mrs. Marconi was anxious to get news of the child's health, and accordingly she asked the governess nursing him to send a wireless message every day to be received on board the liner.

Now, it happened that the nurse had very little imagination. The first day she wired "Baby is better." The following day she sent the same message, as she could not find any formula more appropriate, and because, after all, it was true. And she kept on giving out to the ether waves for ten days an identical message with the same words and address. The message sent out by the Italian station was "checked up by the wireless stations abroad. And the Eiffel Tower, Carnarvon, Poldhu, Chiffen, seeing the message addressed to the inventor, repeated it as a matter of courtesy in case it had not reached the liner on which he was travelling. The American stations had the same kind thought, and so did the ships in the mid-Atlantic.

From the two continents and from every part of the ocean the air was quick with the message, "Baby is better." Heaps of messages coming from everywhere crowded Signor Marconi's cabin with a hopeless mass of dates affixed to the identical unsatisfactory phrase. Baby was assuredly better. But Mrs. Marconi could not find out how he really had improved until she landed in the States and sent a vigorous message to the nurse. "Baby is better" was received more than 300 times on board of the liner before her arrival at New York.

British Court Dress Simplified.

The king, in the interests of economy, has sanctioned alterations in the regulations determining the dress to be worn by civilians at court. The changes are in the direction of simplification, and by a wise provision they are compulsory. Those who already possess uniforms or court dress may continue to wear them. The beautiful but costly full dress coat of first and second class uniforms is now unnecessary. Uniforms of the three lower classes are to be of one pattern, except for the decoration on the collar which can be changed at relatively small cost.

Pearl of the Bosphorus.

Romance of Constantinople.

Constantinople is again a storm-centre of Europe.

That historic city was, by a recent decision of the Allies Supreme Court, to be left in the hands of the Turks. It has become doubtful if that decision will be maintained.

Following the appalling massacre of 20,000 Armenians in Asia Minor, it is rumoured as we go to press that British troops are being sent to the Turkish capital.

A city of glaring contrasts—of palaces and hovels, of gleaming minarets and mud, of pomp and poverty, of splendour and squalor. Such is Constantinople, for long centuries the pride and curse of Europe.

Six hundred years before Christ was trampled, Constantinople, then known as Byzantium, was a great seat of commerce, spreading its palaces, its temples, and stately streets over the whole peninsula on which its successor stands to-day. Even in those days it was the centre and cause of almost ceaseless strife between Persians, Gauls, and Greeks, who cast envious eyes on the "Pearl of the Bosphorus." Siege followed siege; again and again its streets ran red with blood before, in the year 330 A.D., Constantine the Great turned his back on Rome to make a splendid metropolis of his Empire in the city which he re-named after himself.

Around the fourteen-mile-long girdle of massive walls which Constantine raised around his capital, the breakers of war seldom ceased to hurl themselves. Twenty-six times the city was besieged—by Persians and Avars, by Russians, Latins, and Turks. Six times the Saracens flung their hosts against it; and eight times it fell into the enemy's hands, and was laid waste with fire and sword and pillage.

Europe's Plague Spot.
Three times the Turks laid siege to it; and the third time, in 1453, Mohammed II made it his own after a fierce and stubborn resistance. From that day to our own Constantinople has remained in Turkish hands—the plague-spot of Europe.

And what a wonderful city it is—this city of long romance and tragedy, whose magnificence and squalor crowd the peninsula which juts out toward Asia at the southern entrance to the Bosphorus! From the Seven Towers on the Sea of Marmora, Stamboul (as Constantinople proper is known) spreads northward to the Golden Horn, on whose deep waters all the world's fleets could float; and from Seraglio Point, inland for a distance of four miles—a city of a million inhabitants.

Within its girdling walls it rises, like Rome on its seven low hills, crowned by the splendours of mosques, whose gleaming cupolas and minarets, silhouetted against the blue sky, look down on the waters of the Bosphorus. A strange, incongruous huddle of palatial buildings and tumble-down hovels, of stately avenues, and fifth-floored houses, flanked by malodorous bazaars, through which the human tide streams and surges.

But in spite of filth and evil odours, the one dominant note of Constantinople is Romance. It meets you at the threshold of every one of its 200 mosques and its hundreds of chapels. In the Church of St. Sophia, with its stupendous dome, its dream-like beauty, and its sixteen centuries of history; in the Suleymaniya mosque, with its colossal columns and its miracles of Saracenic decoration; and the Mosque of Sultan Ahmed I., with its six sky-piercing minarets, exquisite in their grace, and its columns more than 100ft. in circumference.

In the Hippodrome, where gladiators fought and chariots raced to the plaudits of Roman spectators, you can see the famous column of the "Three Serpents," which stood 2,000 years ago in the Temple of Delphi.

The Old Seraglio recalls Mohammedan splendours of long-gone centuries. Once a royal residence, it still contains the Mint and Museum and Library; and, perhaps the most wonderful sight in Europe, the Treasury, with its fabulous treasures of jewels and golden ornaments, worth incalculable millions. Leaving Stamboul and crossing the Golden Horn we come to Galata, the quarter of the merchants, a busy hive of commercial industry, with warehouses and factories and the coming and going of great ships from all the world's seas. From Galata we pass to Pera, the aristocratic quarter, with its stately Embassies and Consulates, its well-lit-in palaces of Pashas with their harems.

Beyond Pera is the beautiful village of Eyub, with the famous mosque in which every Sultan girds on the sword of Osman before he mounts his throne, and which no Christian foot may approach.

Attila's Hunn.
If Adrianople cannot boast as long and romantic a story as Constantinople, she can point to the days when she was the metropolis of one of the greatest Empires the world has ever known.

The foundations of her greatness were laid some 1,800 years ago by Hadrian, one of the greatest of Roman Emperors, who built palaces and temples there of a splendour such as Eastern Europe had never known. And she soon promised to eclipse her great rival on the Bosphorus, though that city had already been a world-famous capital for 700 years.

During the centuries that followed her Imperial cradling, Adrianople lived through exciting and perilous times. Less than 200 miles from Constantinople, she shared much of the turbulent life of which that coveted city was the centre. In the fifth century we see her fighting fiercely against Attila's savage hordes until her streets ran

Mrs. G. Miller Can Not Express Her Gratitude

St. John's Woman Says Tanlac Was Exactly What She Needed—Is Now Well And Happy.

"I have not only gained twenty-one pounds in weight but am now in good health for the first time in years," declared Mrs. George Miller, who lives on Spruce Street, St. John's. "I never was very strong, but for the last three years I have been in such a weak, run-down condition that I could hardly drag myself around. I hardly ate enough to keep body and soul together, and dared not eat any sort of heavy foods. What I did eat would 'lie like lead' on my stomach and I would suffer terrible distress on account of bloating and gas. I fell off until I only weighed a hundred and nine pounds and became so weak that I could hardly climb my stairs. My nerves were so shattered that I was afraid to stay in the house by myself and never ventured out on the street alone. I used to lie awake for hours at night, wondering whether I would live through the night."

"My father firmly believed that Tanlac saved his life and no one thought he would ever get well. So when he came from Port Rexton to see me and found me in such a sad condition, he urged me to try the medicine that had been such a blessing to him. Well, Tanlac proved just what I needed, and has built me up to where I am a new woman. I now have a splendid appetite, can eat anything I want and never suffer in the least from indigestion, and now weigh a hundred and thirty pounds, which is a gain of twenty-one pounds. I am just as strong as can be and can do the hardest day's work and never get tired out. I sleep as soundly as a child every night and my nerves are so steady that I am not afraid anymore. I simply can't express my gratitude for all the good Tanlac has done me and I am glad of this chance to tell everybody what a wonderful medicine it is."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Rex Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Selkirk; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renewa.—adv

red with blood. Again and again she fought no less valiantly and stubbornly against the ruffing Bulgarians.

We see her in furious battle with Persians and Avars, and she sent her sons under the banner of Heraclius, to wage war against the Saracens. Thus the turbulent tide of Adrianople's history rolls on through the centuries, storm-tossed and tinged with blood.

But the Byzantine Empire, which had seen over 1,000 years of stirring life, at last came to its end. The Turkish tide, which had swept to the Eastern shore of the Bosphorus, and now sought to swamp Europe, proved much too strong for the dying Empire to resist; and in 1861 we see the soldiers of Amurath pouring into Adrianople, and the Sultan installing himself in the city.

Thus, after more than 1,200 years, the city Hadrian had founded blossomed into the capital of a new and alien Empire, which was soon to spread itself farther than the Empire it had succeeded. Within a few generations Amurath's successor, Suleiman the Magnificent, was ruling over more than twenty races of men in three continents. Of this old-time magnificence few traces remain.

The Banjo at the Poles.

One can scarcely imagine a greater contrast than playing a banjo in a crowded meeting in the heart of London, and giving a performance in the city atmosphere of the Arctic regions. At the hundredth lecture given by Sir Ernest Shackleton, when he told the thrilling story of his last polar expedition, he introduced some of his old colleagues, and insisted on the production of the old banjo which played so great a part in keeping up the spirits of the men who were marooned on Elephant Island for a dreary four and a half months. At an informal gathering after the lecture, some of the old songs were sung and specimens given of the impromptu ditties that helped to pass away the time and amuse the men the tale of whose fortitude and patience is being listened to by thousands of people from the cushioned seats of the Philharmonic Hall in London. Sir Ernest Shackleton tells his adventure in simple homely language, with a sense of humor that is a relief to the thrilling story. The penguins, in the pictures, all unconscious of their London audience, behave in their usual amusing way, familiar to stay-at-home people, who love to roam the world by the help of more adventurous spirits.

His Experience.

Sweeping his long hair back with an impressive gesture, the visitor faced the proprietor of the film studio, according to a current story. "I would like to secure a place in your moving-picture company," he said.

"You are an actor?" asked the film man.

"Yes."

"Had any experience acting without audiences?"

A flicker of sadness shone in the visitor's eyes as he replied, "Acting without audiences is what brought me here."

MAINTENANCE OF EQUITY!

While it is customary and in the interest of safety and conservatism to at all times maintain a fixed ratio of margin, still we do not call for margin unless the market value of stocks held declines to a point where it is unsafe to carry the account. However all funds sent us, whether over the necessary amount or otherwise, are placed to your credit; and clients may, if they desire, increase their payments unasked, until the full account is liquidated, and fully-paid certificates will then be obtained for you. All dividends paid on stocks you hold are credited to your account or forwarded to you, as desired. We respectfully solicit a portion of your stock exchange trading.
