MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XV.
COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

"None!" said Mr. Barrington, grimly, and he gave him Clarence's telegram.

"Thank Heaven that fellow held his tongue!" said Lord Coverdale.

"Yes, he has done so—for the present!" said Mr. Barrington, grimly.

"He is guilty, of course?" remarked Lord Coverdale.

"Yes, no doubt, and he will be sentenced seven or fourteen years."

Lord Coverdale heaved a sigh of relief.

"We can rely upon his silence for so long," he said, "after that when he is released, he must be watched for, and paid to remain silent."

Mr. Barrington nodded moodily.

"There is something about the man that convinces me that he is playing some deep game," he said, thoughtfully. "We shall see!"

"You have telegraphed to Naples?"

"Yes, this morning! We shall get an answer to-morrow."

"Come, cheer up!" said Lord Coverdale, laying his hand on the lawyer's shoulder. "You will find the villain's story to be a mere vulgar concoction of the ordinary type."

"We shall see, my lord," responded Mr. Barrington again. "Will you come up to the Revels, my lord?"

Lord Coverdale drew back.

"No, no!" he said hastily. "Not now! I could not! It would seem as if I believed this story, and—and were anxious to take possession."

"I understand," said Mr. Barrington. "I asked because I find myself placed in an extremely difficult position. I have been carrying on the business of the estate since Mr. Knighton's death, and it is no light amount of business, and there are notices and leases to sign, and—"

He stopped abruptly. "My lord, I do not wish to press it, but you must hold yourself in readiness to fill the position into which you have come so strangely."

"Not yet! Let us wait as long as possible!" said Lord Coverdale, and he hurried away.

But Mr. Barrington's grave words

THE MISERY OF BACKACHE

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Meaford, Ont. "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache, and I also had a female weakness. I felt dizzy and nervous, and was without energy. I had to force myself to do my work, and was always 'dressed' in a Pincham advertisement, which induced me to take the Vegetable Compound, and my back gradually stopped aching, and I felt lighter in spirit. I am recommending the Vegetable Compound with pleasure to all I meet who complain as I did."—MILDRED BRADY, Meaford, Ont.

Woman's Precious Gift

The one which she should most zealously guard is her health, but she often neglects to do so, in season, until some ailment peculiar to her sex has fastened itself upon her. When so affected women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a remedy that has been wonderfully successful in restoring health to suffering women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

the broad fields and well-to-do homesteads—all his, perhaps—he might be pardoned if a wish arose that in some way some of the wealth around him might be his!

The Phaeton drove up at the door, and the servants came down the steps to receive him.

He had not seen the place for years, and its magnificence struck him as freshly as if he beheld it for the first time.

"Mr. Barrington is expecting you, my lord; he's in the library," said the butler.

Lord Heron just glanced round the spacious hall, and with a strange sensation entered the library.

Mr. Barrington rose to meet him with a grave face.

"Good-morning, my lord!" he said; "you see, I have sent for you!"

"Yes; I am sorry!" said Lord Heron. "I was in two minds about coming; Barrington, I wish it could have been avoided; I feel as if I were intruding here!" and he sank into a seat, and regarded the lawyer with knitted brows.

Mr. Barrington shook his head. "My lord," he said, "it is no intrusion."

Lord Coverdale started.

"You have received some news?" he said, in a low voice.

"Faintest news!" responded Mr. Barrington, solemnly, and he took up a paper from the desk. "My lord, I have received an answer from Naples."

"Yes!"

"And it is as I feared; there is no registry of Mr. Knighton's marriage. It is impossible that any marriage can have been solemnized, and—"

He paused.

Lord Coverdale half rose from his chair.

"And you are master here!"

Lord Heron turned pale.

"Poor girl!" he murmured. "But—surely there are some formalities!"

Mr. Barrington inclined his head.

"You have to make good your claim—she can oppose it. I am her lawyer, and—I do not say it offensively, my lord—unfortunately yours. I must give up one of my clients; which shall it be?"

"Me!" said Lord Heron instantly. "Defend her case to the very best of your ability, Barrington; fight it inch by inch!"

Mr. Barrington sighed.

"I do not think any lawyer was ever before placed in such a difficult position," he said, gloomily. "But I must do my duty. I shall advise my client to contest your claim to the last shred. And now my course is clear. It was my duty as your legal adviser to give you the information respecting the absence of any registration of marriage; it is now my duty as hers to oppose you."

"So be it, with all my heart," said Lord Coverdale.

"But still," said Mr. Barrington, grimly, "you are master here, I—pardon me, my lord!"

"I quite understand, Barrington," said Lord Coverdale; "and I shouldn't think so well of you if you deserted the poor girl for me."

"And now you will stay to lunch, my lord?" said Mr. Barrington.

As Mr. Barrington expected, Lord Heron shook his head.

"Not another moment," he said, resolutely. "I was hoping that there might be news of Miss Knighton; that is one of the reasons that induced me to come."

Mr. Barrington shook his head.

"There is no news," he said.

The two walked toward the hall, the footmen and butler eyeing them with covert curiosity.

"You will still remain near at hand, my lord?"

Lord Coverdale nodded.

"Yes," he said.

As he spoke a groom came into the hall and stopped, rather embarrassed at the sight of the two gentlemen.

"A letter sir," he said, handing it to Mr. Barrington.

The lawyer took it and started.

"It is not for me," he said, "but for you," and he handed it to Lord Heron.

"For me!—and sent here?" he said as he read the address: "The Earl of Coverdale, Knighton Revels, Beverley."

Mr. Barrington touched him on the arm, and signed to him to return to the library.

"This is strange!" said Lord Heron. "Who can have written to me here? It is a lady's handwriting!"

Just Folks

THE FRIENDLY WAY.

Oh, I would tread the friendly way, the lanes where children romp and play.

The hearty road of fellowship where brotherhood is found;

I do not want the sterner game where life is but a fight for fame.

Nor would I quit the valleys fair to stand on higher ground.

There is enough of riches here, enough of mirth and honest cheer To balance all the hurt and pain as time goes speeding by.

And as each day comes to its end, if I am sure I have a friend For greater wealth or greater fame I shall not give a sigh.

A place to fill and work to do, if comrades here a loyal few,

The children glad that in their dad—all that's my treasure store;

A happy home in which to live, what further has this life to give?

And where's the rich man with his wealth who really gathers more?

I would not shrink nor idly stand before the tasks which come to hand,

I would not fall in duty's hour; but give up one of my clients; which shall it be?

I would be father to my own, a neighbor in my little zone,

A man among my fellowmen, and friend to every one.

Household Notes.

Before cooking pickled fish, freshen with cold water and then cook in boiling water.

Gloves will not streak if washed in cool water, squeezed dry and stuffed with crushed paper.

Candied parsnips are nice, prepared just as one would prepare candied sweet potatoes.

A wart may be removed without soreness by applications of oil of cinnamon three times daily.

If left-over pieces of dough are closely covered, they will keep in the chest for several days.

Place a small brick of ice cream between two slices of cake. Serve with chocolate fudge sauce.

An excellent winter salad is composed of cooked oysters and dried apples on crisp lettuce leaves.

Chicken should not be cooked until an hour after killing, or until all the animal heat is out of fowl.

With green-gage bread pudding serve a sauce made from juice of green gages, flavored with the juice of a lemon.

Homemade sheets iron straight and last longer than those bought ready-made. Allow three yards of material for each sheet.

Old velvet piano covers make excellent round sofa pillows. Shrink the edges and gather velvet to the centre, covering the faded places.

When trussing a fowl, cross the drumsticks and tie them with string, then tie up tail. Fasten wings close to body with a shower.

A mixed grill (individual) is made with one broiled mutton chop, sliced lamb kidney, sautéed, a baked sausage and broiled bacon, arranged on platter with a stuffed and baked potato and toast.

St. Thomas's W.H.M.S.

The monthly meeting of St. Thomas' Women's Home Missionary Society, which took place on Wednesday afternoon last, was one of the most successful in its history. The President, Mrs. J. C. Oke, took the chair at 8.15 and about 160 members and their friends attended the meeting. The Rector, Rev. E. C. Farp, and Mrs. Farp paid their first visit to the Missionary Society and the Rector addressed the meeting, speaking words of great encouragement and inspiration, and assuring the Society of his entire agreement with the policy it had adopted towards the assistance of Rev. Henry Gordon's work at Cartwright, Labrador. Rev. Canon Smart, Chairman of the Diocesan Board of Missions, who was also present, at the request of the President, also spoke, and predicted a good year's work despite "hard times." Mrs. J. Ferndale and Miss Doris Withers, very kindly contributed songs to the programme, and the accompanist was Miss Myrtle Williams. At the conclusion of the meeting the gathering repaired to the ground floor of Canon Wood Hall, where the members of the W.H.M.S. Executive, served tea and conducted the sale of several articles of native work sent by Mr. Gordon from Labrador. Much enthusiasm was exhibited and the stall was a great financial success.

Lectured on Bermuda.

An interesting lecture on Bermuda was given last night in the Lecture Room of George Street Methodist Church by the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Fairbairn. The lecturer was thoroughly familiar with his subject and in eloquent language he drew for the audience a delightful picture of the island which Shakespeare made the scene for his "Tempest." The Rev. lecturer was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his splendid address and it is hoped that during the season, he will be able to give an occasional discourse similar to that of last night.

Hungary Officially Mourns Her Humiliation.

National Assembly Orders Period of Eight Days--Ulster Premier Will go to London--Holy City Scene of Factional Rioting--Germany Not in Condition to Menace World Peace.

HUNGARY'S HUMILIATION.
BUDAPEST, Nov. 3. When Count Stefan Bethlen, Premier, introduced a bill in the National Assembly today calling for the dethroning of former King Charles and the ousting of the Hapsburg dynasty from Hungary, there were cheers for Charles by legitimists. The bill proposes against the interference of foreign powers in Hungary, provides for the removal of the Hapsburgs from power and calls postponement for an indefinite period of selecting a new king of Hungary. Eight days of mourning for Hungary because of the country's humiliation through the recent escapade of Charles have been ordered by the Minister of the Interior. All theatres and other places of amusement are closed.

CRAIG ACCEPTS INVITATION.
LONDON, Nov. 3. Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier, has accepted the Government's invitation to come to London to consult as to the attitude towards the proposals regarding the Ulster Boundary and other questions involved in the Irish settlement plans.

NOT THREATENING WORLD PEACE.
BERLIN, Nov. 3. The Ministry of Defence, in a statement to the Associated Press today, denied widespread newspaper reports that Germany was fostering a secret army, utilizing her factories for war purposes, and evading the disarmament clauses of the Versailles Treaty generally in preparation for another war. "Germany is not threatening the peace of the world. She is in no condition to be a danger," says the statement.

RECIPROcity IN PROHIBITION.
REGINA, Nov. 3. The Canadian and American Governments will be asked to implement one another's liquor laws, in order to curb rum running. Prohibition officers in convention here decided today a statement was made that Government control of liquor had not stopped bootlegging in British Columbia.

DISORDERS IN JERUSALEM.
JERUSALEM, Nov. 3. Five persons were killed and thirteen wounded in disorders here today, originating in an attempt by Arabs to storm the Jewish quarters. A bomb was thrown and shots exchanged till the police, beset by Moslem notables, frustrated the attack and retired.

A WISE DECISION.
NEW YORK, Nov. 3. Unless New York's milk distribution is restored to fifty per cent. normal by Saturday, the entire industry will be taken over by the Department of Health. It was stated by Health Commissioner Copeland today.

FIRE DESTROYS PIERS.
WEEHAWKIN, N.J., Nov. 3. Two piers of the Erie Railroad, heavily loaded with freight, were destroyed, and the surrounding property considerably damaged, in a fire which swept the Weehawkin waterfront, opposite 42nd Street, New York, late tonight.

Civic Commission.

WEEKLY MEETING.
The weekly meeting of the Civic Commission was held last evening at the City Hall. Mayor Morris presided and Councillors Vincombe, Peet, Collier and Hallett were present. The Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The following matters were then discussed.

M. H. Kitchen asked that a light be placed on the Topsail Road. As the locality in question is at the boundary of the City Limits, the Council is quite willing to have the light erected and the Department of Public Works will be asked to contribute half cost of upkeep.

A communication was read from the Newfoundland Motor Association stating they intend inaugurating a "Safety First" campaign, details of which will be outlined later. They also requested that the Council erect danger signs, such as are used in other countries at such places as schools, cross roads, etc. The Council has had this matter under consideration for some time past and has already decided upon such erections.

Hugh Bishop, Mundy Pond Road, wrote, stating that owing to the Road being closed for several days he was prevented from using his motor car, which affected his business. He asked compensation to the amount of $2.00 for loss of work. The matter is to be referred to the Solicitor.

The Electrical Department, Reid Newfoundland Company, informed the Board that the lights recently ordered would be installed as early as possible.

Tessier & Co. complained of the service in the watering of shipping, stating that, owing to there not being sufficient hose, they were obliged to move their vessel to another wharf to obtain a supply. The waterman has, in all such cases, done his best to satisfy applicants, and owners of shipping should moor their vessels at such premises where water supply can be more readily obtained.

Geo. Williams, Bond Street, stated he was caused inconvenience and annoyance by the parking of the steam roller near his dwelling, and contended that his house, which was newly painted, had been blackened by smoke from same. The Engineer reported that the work on Bond St. was now completed and the roller was moved to another locality.

Mr. J. Crawford asked that attention be given the drains and sidewalks on the north side of Topsail Road. This is receiving attention.

A lengthy communication was read from the St. John's Gas Light Company following the decision of the Council to eliminate air gas lamps in the city, asking reconsideration of this decision, particularly in view of the present efforts of the Company to give satisfaction to their customers. The Council considers the price for the upkeep of these lamps rather high, and the Company are to be asked to make some reduction in the amount at present paid.

Mr. E. Collishaw wrote, in connection with the scheme for bettering of present housing conditions in the City, stating he was willing to form a Building and Loan Company for the erection of some thirty or more houses, if the Council in return were prepared to carry out the section of the Municipal Act 1921, with regard to Building Societies.

The matter was given careful consideration, but, before a definite decision can be arrived at, the City Solicitor will be asked as to the Council's position in relation thereto.

The following plans were submitted to the Board:—West End Lumber Company, (extension to office), referred to the City Engineer; Jos. P. Moore, (stable), near dwelling, Hamilton Avenue, referred to the Health

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

LIKE THE INCESSANT DRIPPING OF WATER.

Is there anything in the world that distracts one's mind from true worth and from the joys of companionship, or prevents one from forming a new liking more surely than an unattractive, reiterated mannerism? I met a woman recently to whom at our first meeting I felt drawn. At the second meeting she began to talk and while what she said was interesting I found myself unable to keep my mind on it for this reason. She had the habit of putting in the phrase "you know" at the end of almost every sentence.

I Could Not Think of Anything Else. "I won't think of it," I assured myself. "I will take it as a matter of course. I will think of what she is saying." But in spite of myself I kept thinking "She's going to say it again, she's going to say it at the counted the phrase five times in one sentence).

The Worst of Them All.

An old friend of mine has developed, what to me is the worst of all these reiterated mannerisms, a nervous laugh. Even if it were an attractive laugh (the rarest of charms) one would grow weary of hearing it so often. But alas, it is harsh, high pitched and entirely unmusical. And it is so utterly unconnected with the context of her conversation that one is embarrassed by its lack of meaning besides being jarred by its dissonance. I think this is the commonest as well as the "you know" (Not exaggerated a bit! I most trying of reiterated mannerisms. You probably have, at least, one acquaintance who inflicts it on you?

When Slang Becomes Unbearable.

The habit of catching hold of some bit of slang and using it until everyone feels ready to scream is another irritating mannerism. "Now what do you know about that?" "I'll tell the world so." "You said a mouthful!"—doesn't it make you shrink inside to have these phrases recalled to you? I really wonder that no murderer was committed because the murderer had heard "I'll tell the world so" one too many times.

PURE SALT

Windsor Table Salt

A nervous cough is another irritating mannerism for which there is little excuse. It is equally hard on the throat of the cougher and the ears of the hearer.

Even a charming mannerism grows tiresome when reiterated. Think what a mannerism, ugly to begin with, must become to anyone who hears it 30 times a day. Think and beware!

Naval Prize Money and the G. W. V. A.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I beg space in your valuable paper to make a few remarks in reference to a letter which appeared in your issue of November 3rd, under the heading of "Naval Prize Money." There are certain statements made therein, which I would like to contradict.

About the calls made at the G.W.V.A. Office by Mr. Rodgers I know nothing, but the first meeting of the R.N.R. called by Mr. Rodgers was held in the L.S.P.U. Hall and not in the G.W.V.A. Club Rooms as stated in the letter which I refer to. At that meeting several men spoke against the foolishness of paying rent for some other hall, when we had one of our own, in which we could hold our meetings free of charge. I also made known the offer made to me by the Secretary of the G.W.V.A. that he would be only pleased to do any correspondence as to the way of arranging meetings with the Prime Minister and his Cabinet; also that, if we wished, the G.W.V.A. would pay for all our advertising. Considering these matters were not being held under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., it seemed to me very strange that Mr. Rodgers should offer, but Mr. Rodgers stated his wish to keep the matter independent of the G.W.V.A., a resolution that was backed up by a small majority of those present. This resolution was broken many times as two meetings were afterwards held in the G.W.V.A. Club Rooms and reference was often made to the G.W.V.A. files for correspondence re Prize Money. The President was asked to draw up the last petition which we presented to the House of Assembly. This petition was drawn up by Mr. J. G. Higgins with the understanding that he was being appointed as President of the G.W.V.A. and was read and approved by Mr. Whitty as Secretary and by myself as Vice-President (or the Naval Vice Pres.) of the G.W.V.A. Copies of correspondence from the G.W.V.A. were attached when presented at the House. Moreover, the final meeting between the Committee appointed by the House and the Naval deputations was attended by Mr. Higgins and Captain Whitty as Officers of the G.W.V.A. as they were requested to do so.

In spite of what your correspondent says to the contrary, quite three months before Mr. Rodgers called the first meeting of R.N.R. a deputation appointed by the G.W.V.A. interviewed the Executive of the Government and discussed the matter of Prize Money with them. The deputation consisted of Mr. Gray and myself and several soldiers spoke on other matters. We were told that the Executive would go into the matter and would write us their decision, but once our backs were turned the matter was apparently forgotten—so all matters pertaining to ex-Servicemen are forgotten or neglected. The Secretary kept sending letters to the Colonial Secretary for information on the matter, but received very vague replies. From that time until the assurance was given, naval men that Prize Money would be paid, the G.W.V.A. kept at it and although I readily admit that the hand of the Government was forced by the fine and determined stand taken by the R.N.R. men in their parade to the House and insisting on their money being paid, I also claim that they were helped in many ways and upheld in all their efforts by the G.W.V.A.

I just wish to say in concluding Mr. Editor, that I am not writing this in the spirit of taking due credit to myself, as I was a member of the Naval Committee as well as the G.W.V.A., but with the intention of contradicting a statement which, if not disputed, might damage in more ways than one the well-being of the only sailors' and soldiers' organization in the country, many other things accomplished, but recovered in various matters pertaining to naval men over ten times the value of the Prize Money.

Mr. Rodgers and Mr. Doherty sign themselves "on behalf of the R.N.R." but I doubt if any meeting of R.N.R. ever empowered them to write such a letter to their behalf.

Yours sincerely,
CHESLEY KEARLEY,
EX-R.N.R.

People Who Are "Missing."

Unsolved Mysteries of Strange Disappearances.

Much astonishment has been expressed in more than one newspaper at the recent statement by the French police authorities that 211 young women and girls are missing from their homes in Paris and its neighbourhood.

These figures appal and amaze one, but, of course, there are disappearances and "disappearances." Probably the majority of these alleged "missing people" were only too glad, for various reasons, quietly to disappear.

A reasonable explanation that may account for the disappearance of young girls in many cases is sex attraction. A taste for the shilling "shocker," the dramatic achievements of the cinema stars, contrasted with the humdrum life of office and home, will probably be found to account for a number of girls of impressionable age seeking adventure.

For His Family's Sake. A strangely pathetic disappearance gave Mr. James Payn, the famous novelist, a plot for one of his short stories. The "missing" man was one of Edinburgh's merchant princes, and his abrupt disappearance caused something of a sensation in the Scottish capital at the time.

Another Use of Knox Gelatine—It gives a proper smoothness and consistency to ice cream. Follow the recipe below and see how delicious a Cream is the result.

Men Who Vanished. No motive can, however, be ascribed for the mysterious and inexplicable disappearance from public and private life of quite a number of well-known people who, within comparatively recent years, have vanished as completely as if the earth had opened up and swallowed them.

Another unsolved London disappearance was that of one Winstantay, an intimate friend of the late Hon. George Brodrick, Warden of Merton, and Viscount Maitland's uncle. They lodged

Explains What S. U. F. Stands For.

MEMBER AND OBJECTS OF FRATERNAL ORDER.

The United Fishermen's Lodge, No. 77, the first S.U.F. Lodge in Canada, which was established by the Grand Lodge recently, is making rapid strides, and is evidently making a great success. It already has 60 members enrolled, and will probably have more than 100 members by the end of the year. As this society has never been advertised in Newfoundland and its name seems to be a little confusing, perhaps it would not be amiss to try and explain what it stands for.

In 1877 lodge No. 1 was formed at St. John's, Newfoundland, by the Rev. Geo. Gardner, a very highly educated Englishman, who a few years previous to this, had been sent to Newfoundland by the Church of England. He was both minister and school teacher, and soon took great interest in the welfare of these "poor-natives."

In those days very little was known about sickness and accidents. His idea was to get them to help the sick and the needy. To do this he formed this mutual benefit society. To get them interested he made up three degrees, namely, red, white and blue. These degrees show that each time and study were spent on them. They are educative as well as religious. A candidate pays so much for each degree and each member pays a small amount as regular lodge dues. In case of sickness or any other calamity a member receives from the lodge a certain amount each week, and he receives such protection and help as every member of the order can possibly afford to his brother in distress. If a member dies he is buried by the society with all its honors. The widow is also looked after and the children educated. The society was probably meant for the fishermen in the first place, but it was found to be a good thing, and both rich and poor have taken to it, and to-day some of the richest and most influential men in Newfoundland belong to this order.

It was the organizer's wish that it be kept within the bounds of Newfoundland, but lately the Grand Lodge decided, and I think rightly too, to allow it to go to Canada. This will do much for Newfoundlanders abroad, and will be able to get under their colors and help us if we have something good to share with our Canadian friends.

The name "Fisherman" does not mean you must be a catcher of fish, but more than the Orange order means members are to grow oranges, or to be a "fish" in some other way, and to be able to lay bricks. It is open to all British subjects who will abide by the rules.

It may be possible for us to start a branch in North Sydney in the near future, and those who already belong to the order interested would like to hear from them—C. J. HENNING, North Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Commemorate Armistice.

MINUTE SILENCE ON NOV. 11th.

The Armistice Day commemoration was inaugurated by two services, one at 10:30 a.m. and the other at 11 a.m. The first service was held at the St. John's Memorial and will place emphasis on it. It is hoped that this year's commemoration of the Armistice will be more impressive than any former occasion.

Wedding Bells.

Every picturesque wedding took place at the C. of E. Cathedral in the morning of yesterday, when Mr. Walter Valance Hann, son of Mr. Isaac Hann, carpenter of Grand Falls, led the altar Miss Cora Cornick, daughter of Mr. William Cornick, engineer, of St. John's. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Charles A. Winsor and the bride was attended by Mrs. L. Winsor and Miss Mabel Chafe, and given away by Mr. H. B. Chafe, the officiating clergy being the Rev. J. Brinton. The ceremony the party drove to the house of Mr. John Cornick, moultrie Street, where a beautiful breakfast was prepared. The bridesmaids were Miss Mabel Chafe, Miss Winsor and Miss Mabel Chafe, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mabel Chafe, Miss Winsor and Miss Mabel Chafe. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents, showing the esteem in which she was held. The happy pair leave for their future home, Grand Falls, by express, taking with them good wishes for their future happiness in which the Telegram

Pacific Conference May Not Benefit China.

Peking. (Associated Press)—The Tientsin newspaper, To Chun Shiang Pao, believes that, with civil strife upsetting the country, China can hope for little benefit from the Pacific Conference. "The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has just established an investigation bureau for the purpose of gathering materials, records and other documents to be used at the Pacific Conference in connection with China's case," says that paper. "We believe this can do little toward attaining our object, for so long as China lacks the power essential to success, foreign powers will continue to look down upon her and treat her as an inferior; so that even if we have overwhelming evidence at our disposal to support our case, they will never take the trouble to go into it so as to render a decision in our favor. Under such circumstances it would be foolish to expect success."

China's All-Important Question.

The all-important question to-day is to settle our domestic strife. When peace and order are restored, foreigners in our midst will not suffer from occasional disturbances, and their ministers and governments, seeing that China still has the ability to maintain order, will naturally treat us with respect, and the Japanese propaganda that China has not the necessary capacity to protect foreign life and property and that Japan should be appointed guardian over her, will explode of itself. If all this can be accomplished before the Pacific Conference, we are not without a ray of hope. If, however, we indulge in continual civil strife between one province and another we are simply furnishing evidence to prove the truth of the Japanese contention. For the peace of the Far East, and the interests of their nationals, foreign powers cannot but approve the internationalisation of China, and it is perhaps not unlikely that they will charge Japan with the task of overseeing us. When this happens, our sovereignty will be completely lost, and what favor can we expect from the powers when we set forth all our evidence and records before them to support our case? Let both the people and the Government work to avoid this eventuality."

Engineer Freed.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE DISMISSED.
Cyril Turner, the engineer of the train which killed the little girl Penney at Bristol Hope some time ago, was released from custody on Saturday last. Judge Penney before whom the preliminary enquiry into the charge of manslaughter preferred against Turner, was heard, did not find the evidence sufficient to cause him to commit the accused for trial. Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., who appeared for the defence and Deputy Minister of Justice Summers who prosecuted, returned to town last night, having been held at Carbonar by the washout.

Hull Broken Up.

The hull of the Hantley which was towed to Freshwater Bay a couple of weeks ago and allowed to go adrift has been smashed up in the recent storm and residents of the Battery and South Side are daily engaged in salvaging the timbers which they will use to repair their stages or make into kindling. The engines of the vessel sank in deep water. Some of the wreckage of the hulk Capella are also scattered around the shore near Freshwater, and these too are also being picked up.

Modern Marriages.

WHY SO MANY FAILURES?
 Short engagements, which became popular during the war, have continued to be very common after it, although the war-time necessity for them has disappeared.
 Their great disadvantage lies in the fact that they give the parties no opportunity for studying the real character, with the result that after marriage, little undreamed-of oddities of temperament begin to crop up, which, unless there is mutual give-and-take, tend to make life a "double harness" misery.
 Nearly everyone, unfortunately, knows personally of marriages which, although they may never "come to a rupture," are simply one continuous unhappy state of things, and never have occurred had husband and wife been allowed a moderate degree of sympathy and toleration towards each other from the start. Blame for domestic friction is difficult to apportion—both parties are often to blame.

Some Feminine Errors.

The most common mistake, both men and women seem to make is in forgetting that the person they married was an ideal. From what they observed during their courtship each drew a sketch of the other's personality, and filled in the blanks from imagination. When they start the searching intimacy of living together a few revelations are prepared for a few revelations. What is to be said for the wife who compares the angelic-temperament person whom she knew as her fiancee with her husband when, knowing he is already late for business, he loses his collar-stud. The girl who makes no allowance for all the circumstances, and tells him she is shocked at his display of temper, is not only unreasonable, but in a fair way of being told so. The husband makes the same mistake when he starts contrasting the vision whom he remembers the night of their first dance, with his wife as she looks at lunch-time after a "rush" forenoon.

One of the most frequent causes of husbands "falling out of love," it is sometimes said, is that after marriage their wives incline to become careless of their appearance, and, while most men have sense enough to know that housework and dainty dresses are things far apart, it is a wife who takes care always to appear as presentable as possible. Some wives try to monopolize their husband's society. Now, a certain amount of personal freedom is indispensable for both, so when the husband says he wants to have a game of golf or billiards with a friend, it is the husband who is likely to let him go, and not the wife. For a husband to be "neglected" is a thing which he does not like. He will work a little more of his time for his wife on engaged days, if he is not a sensible girl. No sensible girl will let her husband permanently neglect her. It is quite so much to expect a husband to be "neglected" before their marriage. It is quite so much to expect a husband to be "neglected" before their marriage.

For Husbands.
 There are several things which a husband should keep in mind. His fiancee has been a girl, and does not mean he should treat her as a child. He should give her many little attentions, and lead her to believe that his affection for her is diminishing.

Many men, too, do not realize how rarely sentiment figures in a woman's life, and how great is its value in giving her pleasure. Numerous marriages could be made happier by a little more thoughtfulness on the husband's part. A little effort on some date of import to himself and his wife—perhaps the anniversary of their first meeting, or their engagement—along with a casual remark to show he has not forgotten it, has a wonderful power of reviving, in spite of that are becoming faded, for it is wonderful what just such a little concession to feminine sentiment means to a woman.

Carrying business worries into the home is another frequent error in domestic strategy. How many husbands, arriving back after a trying day, crossly remark on the worrying things they have had, and subside into a morose silence for the evening! Too often, if not enlightened, a wife is apt to think this attitude of her husband is due to discontent with his domestic, or else to pure unreasonableness. So, even if it is a bit of an effort—even if he thinks she won't understand—it is still well worth while for a husband to talk over his difficulties with his wife. He is at least sure of sympathy, and he is removing the possibility of misunderstanding.

His husband, too, ought never to exercise his masculine authority over his wife as though she were a child; he should be sure to hurt her feelings, if not to make her rebel. When a woman will share up instantly at the suggestion of a masterful command, a request will hardly ever fail to obtain her acquiescence.
 It is important, all, never, under any circumstances, should a husband try to make his wife feel that there is any sort of condescension in his marrying her, for this is almost always an integral part of existence, and only in marriage is found the fullest stand, and one of the shortest of cuts to domestic displeasure.

Is Marriage Worth While?
 Despite all its many possibilities of trouble, marriage is almost a necessity for most. The "men" who "make good" are always actuated by some motive outside themselves, and for the great majority, this motive is found in a woman's love. It is the desire to provide for her sake—to be able to provide her with the little graces and comforts of life—that nerves him to work upwards. Nature's inevitable law is that making is an integral part of existence, and only in marriage is found the fullest expression—the consummation—of the life of the individual. Marriage, in fact, ought to be the most beautiful and inspiring event in existence, and it is surely worth some effort to make it so.

 Just a little less thought for self and more for one's partner—a little conscious effort towards sympathy—would transform most of the marriages termed "unhappy," and do much to make the average union a happy and satisfactory comradeship. The blind love which sees no fault in the object of its adoration is more infatuation, and can never last; but the love which, fully awake to the loved one's defects, can yet exult and forgive them, is the foundation of all really happy marriages.

 To acquire it is an ideal worth striving for, for, once given, the way is open to a perfectly united and contented home—the first and greatest unit of all human happiness.—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Steam Constantly Issues.
 About a thousand feet from the top of Stromboli there is an opening from which steam constantly issues, and hangs in a smoky-looking cloud above the mountain. Ordinarily it is possible to climb up to the opening and look over upon the black floor through the cracks of which smoke issues and the red-hot lava hisses, boils and splutters, the "rooking" of the earth's interior resembling more than anything else the boiling of a large pot of mush. As the huge bubbles burst, lava is thrown high in the air. Sometimes the fire of the earth quickens, as it has been doing recently, and then the hissing of the steam may be heard many miles out at sea and the lava boils over the side of the cone.

 Stromboli, unlike the volcanoes that experience intense paroxysms of activity followed by long periods of repose, offers one of the best examples of the continuously active volcano. Standing alone in the sea, it is visible for almost a hundred miles, its ever-lighted fires tinting the clouds and the sky with a rosy glow, which has led to its being known as "The Lighthouse of the Mediterranean." Its light, however, is not constant in its intensity; first then decreases to a faint glow, only to be followed again by the bright red.

In this respect it resembles the flashing lighthouses which are common to coasts the world over, and in reality it is used by sailors in the Mediterranean. In lighthouses of the man-made kind the flashes come at regular intervals, one of the beacons being differentiated from another by the length of time between the flashes. Stromboli in this respect maintains its individuality, for its glowings are very irregular, varying between one and twenty flashes per second, the intensity also varying from time to time.

The legend of St. Gran—for he has been canonized and his name is commemorated in that of the oldest building on Iona, St. Gran's Chapel—is, of course, a relic of the ancient worship of an Earth-god. Strange to say, too, that Earth-god worship survived almost to our own time if it does not even yet exist. The direct sacrifice of a human being long ago became impossible, but in certain districts, till quite recently, a means was found of overcoming the difficulty. The builder of a new house went about with a straw till he managed to merge its shadow in the shadow of a man or woman. The straw was then buried under the foundation of the house, and within a year, it was understood, the person whose shadow had been thus captured would himself die and be buried.
 Though the house-builders who performed this unholy rite were probably unaware of this fact, they were carrying out the practice of a primeval faith—sacrificing a human being to the Earth-god.—Scottish Paper.

The Guardian Angel.

"MET BY APPOINTMENT."

Considerable interest has been aroused in Norwich by the statement of a clergyman, who claims to have seen and spoken to an angel.
 The Rev. G. Maurice Elliot, Rector of Snitterby, Kirton-in-Lindsey, Lincolnshire, has written a work on "Conversations with Angels." Addressing a meeting at Norwich, he described a remarkable experience.
 "It was," he said, "at the time of a serious illness of my wife's. It was a case of making a life-or-death choice in regard to whether an operation should take place or not. Medical opinion was divided as to the cause of the illness, and also as to whether an operation was necessary. My wife and I prayed that an angel might be sent to tell us distinctly whether an operation was required.
 "The angel came to us. We both saw him. He was of the male sex, bright and shining in appearance, and dressed in white. He spoke to us, and was in bodily form.
 "He said, 'In answer to your prayer the Lord has sent me to tell you that the specialist who advises an operation is wrong in his diagnosis, and that such operation would be fatal.'
 "I said to this guardian angel, 'Will you now lead me to some medical man or surgeon who will prove to me scientifically that you are right?'
 "The angel replied, 'Yes,' and told me to take my wife to Brighton.
 "The angel said he would meet us at the station.
 "We went to Brighton, and the angel was our heavenly guide.
 "He led us to a certain hotel, and told us to take rooms there, and said that seated next to us at table would be a leading London surgeon, and that after dinner he would go up into the drawing-room alone, and that I was to follow him and engage him in conversation until I extracted the promise from him that he would examine my wife.
 "That night all this actually happened. The surgeon, who was a Harley Street man, examined my wife, and assured me that no operation was needed, and that everything would come all right.
 "I then told him that I was told to speak to him by a guardian angel, to which he replied:—
 "I am not in the least surprised, because, before I left London to come down here for a few weeks' rest, I knelt down and asked God to lead me to someone to whom my knowledge and skill could be of real help."

Pagan Traditions.

Scotland is full of pagan traditions, and no part more so than the sacred island of Iona. Even the stories told of the saintly Columba himself are tinged strongly with the colour of an earlier faith. One of these may be cited as a sufficient example. When the saint and his disciples were building the first Christian place of worship on the island they encountered a serious obstacle. However much their work progressed during the day, it invariably fell to pieces during the night. Columba was reduced almost to despair when in a dream it was revealed to him that his building would never prosper until a living human being was buried under the foundations. The difficulty seemed insurmountable till Oran, one of the disciples, offered to be the individual sacrificed. He was accordingly buried under the wall, and the work went on. But Columba's conscience was uneasy. Unable to sleep, he arose, took a spade, and went to the scene of operations. Sure enough, the walls were standing undisturbed. But Columba was unhappy. He dug into the foundations till he came upon his disciple Oran.
 To his surprise that personage was still alive—and communicative—far too communicative. The things he now knew, and was only too anxious to tell, were certainly not fit for mortal ears. After his first shock of horror, Columba quickly made up his mind. Shovelling in the soil again, he left Oran to his fate, and no more has been seen of that personage, with his fearful stock of information to the present hour.
 The legend of St. Gran—for he has been canonized and his name is commemorated in that of the oldest building on Iona, St. Gran's Chapel—is, of course, a relic of the ancient worship of an Earth-god. Strange to say, too, that Earth-god worship survived almost to our own time if it does not even yet exist. The direct sacrifice of a human being long ago became impossible, but in certain districts, till quite recently, a means was found of overcoming the difficulty. Trophies Presented
TO WINNERS IN THE RECENT OCEAN RACES AT HALIFAX.

The Sailors' Farewell was recited in song and eloquent speeches at the banquet given by W. H. Dennis at the Carleton Hotel last evening to the captains and crews of the fishing schooners which participated in the elimination races, and to those of the Bluenose and Elsie, and the members of the Race Committee. The prizes for the winners and others in both races were presented and the bonds of international friendship and good will were further expressed in terms of good sportsmanship and mutual congratulations. Mr. H. R. Silver, Chairman of the International Race Committee, presided. The dining room of the Carleton was appropriately decorated with flags of the two nations, pictures of the President of the United States and the King, and of several of the old "wind jammers" of former days which once made Nova Scotia famous. Mr. W. W. Larkin, the Collector of Customs for Boston, represented the President of the United States, and Hon. E. H. Armstrong, Minister of Public Works for Nova Scotia, the Provincial Government. Mr. William Duff, M.P., represented the Town and County of Lunenburg, and paid tribute to the captains of the vessels, all of whom belonged to the County, to the builders of the Bluenose, Smith and Rhuland, who had constructed one hundred and twenty-one vessels in twenty years. He expressed

Nothing Else is Aspirin—say "Bayer"

ed appreciation on behalf of his fellow-countrymen to Mr. Dennis for the hospitality shown, and told interestingly of the fact that the trawler sent to the banks from Lunenburg was sent by the father of the present members of the firm of Zwicker and Company, Limited, the managing owners of the Bluenose. Other speakers were Mayor Wheeler of Gloucester, Mayor Parker, W. A. Reid, Secretary of the Gloucester Race Committee, Capt. Hardy of the Committee, Capt. Geo. H. Peoples of the Gloucester Master Mariners' Association, J. J. Kinley, M.P.P. for Lunenburg, Hector MacInnes, K.C., of Halifax, Senator Tanner of Pictou, W. H. Dennis, Thomas MacManus, well known designer of Boston, and Horatio C. Crowell, representing The Morning Chronicle. At the conclusion of the meeting hearty cheers were given for W. J. Rowe, the designer of the Bluenose, who was regrettably unable to be present owing to illness.

Presented the Trophies.

One of the most interesting points of the programme was the presentation of the trophies. Capt. Walters was given in his safe keeping for one year, the chief of all the trophies, the International Cup. Mr. Silver in making the presentation said: "We do not always expect you to win, but we expect you will do your best as you did this year. (Cheers). Then followed the presentation of a check for $4,000, the cash prize which accompanies the cup. To Capt. Welch, skipper of the Elsie, went the $1,000 prize money saying it was not his fault nor that of his crew that it was not first money. Mr. Silver here suggested that he thought it might be well if the International Committee would consider dividing the money more equally between the two vessels contending hereafter, in view of what it cost for the visiting vessel to go to either port, where the race was being held, and he would suggest that they make it $3,000 for the winner and $2,000 for the second.

Here the chairman became a sort of marine Santa Claus and handed out all sorts of prizes to many others. There was the second prize of the elimination race of $700 to the Delawans, Capt. Himmelman and Capt. Knickle of the Alcide who had tied for third place in the elimination divided their money. No one was present to receive the prize for the Canada so it was held over, and then "the two game sports," who came in last in the elimination races. Capt. Cook of the Donald Cook, and Capt. Spindler of the J. J. Duffy, were not forgotten. Although there was not any provision for prizes for them but as there was no more money subscribed than actually required for the needs of the event, the Committee had decided to give both of these captains $200 each. This announcement was received with loud cheering. Capt. Marty Welch was presented on behalf of the state of the Herald and Mail with a personal souvenir of the race. The firm of O. Mustad & Sons of Christiania, Norway, through their Halifax representative, Mr. George Hatfield, presented a pair of binoculars to both Capt. Walters and Capt. Welch. Capt. Walters was also presented with a pair of glasses by John Gabriel, Halifax, dealer in nautical instruments. When accepting them Capt. Walters paid a graceful compliment to Marty Welch by saying that he required two pair of glasses to keep up with him. A pair of rubber boots was presented to each one of the crew of the Bluenose by Ames Holden and Company of Montreal, and a Boston firm presented to each of the captains "Nautica" Guin. Telegraphic messages were read from Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, Archbishop Worrell, who was in Montreal, A. C. Nash and G. H. Dugan.—Morning Chronicle, Oct. 26th.

Mrs. Asquith's Memoirs.

"MY IDEA OF HELL."
A second instalment of Mrs. Asquith's lively new series of intimate reminiscences was published in the "Ladies' Field" on Wednesday, and was quoted by "The London Evening News." Again she is telling of her "little journey" out to the Near East in 1891, and here is her pen picture of the train journey to Brindisi from Naples (with eight in the carriage). "I heard a Neapolitan Jew saying at me say to his friend that I was charming. He spoke in dialect, but one wants no interpreter for this kind of language. I had a cold in my head and chest, and my hair felt heavy. Thanks to Patna preferring to listen to Cook's man, who met us at the station instead of our courier Gorelli, we were bundled into a bus with eight people in it, and there we waited an hour till everyone had reclaimed their luggage. "As there were two ships and several buses a stormy confusion raged between the passengers. Oaths in every language and a jumble of Italian, French, English, and American voices reached our ears." On boarding the good ship Bekhara in her berth "a row of mustard-coloured wooden basins did not restore my confidence. We washed as well as we could, and turned into an endless dining-room, where we sat down on each side of the first officer—the sort of man I never meet—small, with clear eyes and yellow hair, indifferent and civil, with a scanty laugh and businesslike way of eating or sleeping. He was neither stupid nor vulgar, clever nor refined—just a simple, everyday man." And later, "as the ship was still and we were tired, we dozed off." "Suddenly we were awakened by the most awful noises, doors banging, people talking, every voice on each side distinctly heard—only thin planks between the cabins—porters, people, and baggage overhead, which went on most of the night. Huge boxes and cases were dragged along over our heads and bumped down, sometimes one bump, sometimes three or four for each box. There must have been at least a hundred feet going 'til the time, with shouts and screams. That night was my idea of hell!" There are coloured descriptions of the "graceful, idle, slovenly Arabs" lolling about, and of the Egyptians (at Alexandria) whom she found "a nation of great manners." "The bow the gardener gave me as if apologising for his gift of roses was splendid, full of grace and dignity. But the poor Arab!—the women like mummies, covered with flies, and children like dolls of rag." Later she writes of the "stopping, shuffling camels with tragic faces," and the magnificent "white donkeys with their poor heads tightly tied up."

Here is a pretty descriptive touch:—"Mr. Alfred Milner took me for a long drive up the Nile. The loveliest effects I ever saw were the sailing ships with their bent poles and sails furled round them like the petals of a flower when the sun goes down. All closed round in a kind of close virginity, white and beautiful, the masts shooting up into a red sky with purple bars across, and, as it were, preventing the palm trees from catching fire. We walked and drove in turns, and had a memorable talk. He has a very rare mind. Without being a humorous man, he has a fine sense of humour, and if he likes you enough to forgive your spontaneity you expand and feel remarkably at your ease with him. The Nile was full of twinkle, reproducing the sunset with a smile."

"Here Comes the Bride"

A BIG COMEDY, BY MAX MARCIN.
To Be Played To-night By The Gladys Klark Company.
"Here Comes the Bride" will be presented by the Gladys Klark Co., at the Casino Theatre to-night. This very excitable example of fun creating farce is heralded as the laughing sensation of the season, having been pronounced by theatre-goers and critics in every city where it has appeared as being the best play of its type ever presented. "Here Comes the Bride," is possessed of a real story, wherein is contained the spark that kindles love into a flame, and with a fascinating appeal that could not be described in mere print. It has been popularly referred to as the frisky, frolicsome farce with a "kick" in it and the last word in "speed." It is crisp, new and brilliant and has been hailed with joy in New York, Boston and the larger cities. "Here Comes the Bride" is a comedy sparkling in its wit, remarkable in its construction, and containing a howl of delight in every line and scene. Every member of the Gladys Klark Company is exactly in harmony and sympathy with the character they present, and the entire performance is carried along through a scorching bombardment of laughter from the audience. "Here Comes the Bride" will be presented by the Gladys Klark Company to-night. "Here Comes the Bride" is an entirely different play from "The Unkissed Bride." It is written by that famous playwright Max Marcin. It is a play you'll all enjoy seeing. Mother Carey's Chickens will be staged for to-morrow's matinee.

Indoor Life

Spending more time indoors makes women far more subject to constipation than men.
The liver becomes sluggish and torpid, the bowels constipated and the system poisoned by impurities.
If you would get away from the myriads of ills which result from constipation, it is only necessary to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
The benefits from their use are as lasting as they are prompt and certain.
Mrs. John Barry, 16 St. Amable Street, Quebec, Que., writes:
"This is to certify that I was troubled for years with constipation and tried all kinds of medicines without relief. At last my husband suggested that I try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so, and must say that they have given me more relief than all the medicines I have taken during the last fifteen years. I may also add that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles with excellent results."

Delegates Beginning to Arrive.

KEENLY INTERESTED.

Washington. (By Canadian Press) The conferences beginning among the United States, Canada, and Great Britain, and the limitation of armaments, and the advance guard from other countries beginning to arrive for the conference, is heard everywhere. Talk of the conference is the great subject in the minds of the U. S. States and beyond a doubt the U. S. States are more keenly interested in the results of the conference than in any other subject unless it be the reduction of taxes, combined with a program for overcoming the depression in business.

On the whole, there is much hope here as the time draws close for the conference to begin. It is a mistake, however, to regard the expressions of optimism as signs of what the real leaders of the official and Congressional circles conceive to be the truth.

There can be no doubt of the sincerity of the Harding administration. Secretary of State Hughes of the U. S. delegates in general, is the conference a success. The conference is coming more and more to be discussed frankly here, in an informal way, is what will be a world situation if the conference should yield to treatment and if the effort to reach agreements to reduce armaments comes to nothing.

Apprehension here is real that if the conference does not succeed, the nations will be worse than it is now that after the conference is over there will be danger of drifting into another great war. Almost unthinkable as another conflict may be, there is a serious precedent for what is contemplated in this instance provided the conference fails. One has only to recall that in the years just preceding 1914 in Europe, Great Britain made real and sincere efforts to get Germany to stop in the building up of armaments at sea. Germany repeatedly refused to listen seriously to proposals for halting or reducing armaments, and things grew worse instead of better. A prominent London journalist who has just arrived to attend the conference commented on the British experience with Germany and very frankly wondered whether the present instance the United States was to go through with Japan with the same experience Britain had with Germany. He pointed out that there was a hopeful sign in the fact that public sentiment in Japan evidently a great deal stronger in favor of reduced armaments than it was in Germany before 1914. He saw in this the possibility of beneficial results coming from the conference.

The very fact that not only the United States delegates but the delegates of other powers cannot fail to recognize that failure to agree at the conference would mean a new era of increased preparation and that it would spell added tax burdens for the great nations is certain to be a powerful force at the conference. It is more sufficient power to overcome the grave obstacles which can fall to perceive ahead of the limitation meeting.

Marvelous Eyes of Tiny Insects.

On the top of a fly's head, set above the compound eyes, are three pairs of tiny eyes, whose usefulness has long been a puzzle.

It is the result of recent experimental work that they are for long-distance vision, thereby supplementing the compound eyes, which appear to be for close-at-hand magnification.

The three "ocelli," set in triangular arrangement, are not peculiar to flies; great many species of insects have them. They are simple eyes, like ours, whereas the compound eyes are made up of thousands of tiny eyes massed together, each with its own cornea, lens and optic nerve.

Strange it seems that nature should equip a fly with a seeing apparatus so much more powerful and simpler than that with which a human being is equipped.

It is true, as supposed, that the compound eyes of a fly are powerful enough to see things which are invisible to us only by the aid of a microscope.

It has often been said that the human eye is a very imperfect optical instrument. So it is, undoubtedly, but it is an excellent all-round instrument for general purposes, adapting itself to a great variety of uses.

Apparently, of all the mammals man has the best long-distance vision. A man can see better in the dark owing to the expansion of the pupil to let in as much as possible of what there is. In respect to darkness, man would see no better than a man who knows does it is aware that they are near-sighted.

Derehcts.

According to the United States Hydrographic Office, eight vessels are on the average wrecked yearly in the North Atlantic by collision with derelicts, and the average number of derelicts afloat at any time in that part of the ocean is not less than thirty.

A derelict is a wreck that does not sink at once. Such a vessel, if loaded with lumber or some similarly buoyant cargo, may remain afloat for weeks, even months. She may lose all her top hamper and so be rendered almost invisible. But the worst, and most dangerous of all derelicts are those which have been burnt to the water line, and such a wreck is more dreaded by sailors than icebergs, fogs, or storms.

Such was the Taurus, a Norwegian barque, which was sighted eighteen times before she was sought out and destroyed. Two ships actually collided with her, but happily without receiving serious injury.

The Dunmore, a 3,000 ton Cardiff steamer, abandoned off the Newfoundland coast early in 1906, wandered about the Atlantic for more than two months before she was at last brought to book.

Queer stories of derelicts are to be found in the shipping records.

One day in 1914 a settler living on a small bay in New Caledonia, woke early in the morning to see a large sailing vessel in the bay. She was veering about in an odd manner and did not seem to be under control. Taking his boat, the man pulled out to find that there was not a soul aboard her.

She was the British barque Dumfriesshire, a vessel of 1,150 tons, with a cargo valued at 25,000 pounds. The explanation came later. Sailing from New Zealand to New Caledonia, the barque had struck a reef, and as she seemed to be sinking her crew abandoned her and pulled ashore. But she was not so badly holed as they had thought and she drifted into the bay, where the lucky settler picked her up.

Could a true history of vanished ships be written, the truth would surpass the wildest efforts of imagination. We have all read the story of the Marie Celeste, picked up off Gibraltar sound and seaworthy, with all sails set, yet with not a soul aboard.

Here is an incident which occurred near the south coast of England, yet stranger still. On November 30, 1888, a large barque was seen off Deal, standing towards the Goodwin Sands. She was about five miles off, the weather was clear and moderate, and the big ship stood out clean-cut against the gray of the sky. Suddenly she seemed to flicker and vanish.

A number of luggers put out, and for five hours cruised about that tract of water. Yet all they found was an empty, nameless ship's boat.

And here is the strangest part of the whole strange business. The soundings hereabouts are nowhere more than seven fathoms (42 feet) and had a ship of such size sunk in such shallow water her masts would have remained above the surface.

A Fool-Proof Railway.

SCHEME THAT MAY MAKE COLLISIONS IMPOSSIBLE.

A demonstration of an invention by Mr. A. R. Angus for preventing railway collisions was given before a party of engineers and journalists recently, at Dyke, on the London, Brighton, and South-Coast Railway. Two engines and a section of railway line were fitted with Mr. Angus's apparatus, and an attempt was made to run one engine into the other. Fortified by the assurance of the inventor that this was impossible, a number of the party crowded into one of the engines. When it arrived within the danger zone, the whistle sounded, the brakes were applied, the steam was shut off, and the engine was pulled up. This took place without any action on the part of either driver or fireman, the whole device being entirely automatic.

Safety in Fogs.

The secret consists in supplying to the track rails electrical energy, and coils on the locomotive are placed in inductive relation to the rails. The current thus induced is taken to an electric magnet, and ultimately the movements referred to above are performed by the mechanism. The inventor claims for the system that it provides for all possible traffic operations. Trains may proceed through a dense fog with perfect safety. They may enter and leave large termini controlled and directed by a signman without the latter seeing them, and there can be no danger of the engine running into the platform buffers or into another train standing at the platform.

Trains will also be protected against derailment at curves and dangerous facing points by the automatic slowing down of the speed. It is also claimed to eliminate errors by signmen. It is proposed to fit the system experimentally on a section of the Metropolitan Railway between Moorgate Station and Finsbury Park Station.

You need have no cough if you keep Stafford's Phorotone Cough and Cold Cure on hand. Price 35c. Postage 10c. extra.—oct27,11

the Sword.

The pen is one of the oldest instruments men use. Whether or not it is mightier than the sword, as Bulwer Lytton makes the great French Cardinal exclaim in the play "Richelieu," it is perhaps of as great antiquity as the sword. It is not as old as stone-headed war clubs or stone axes, but it seems to date back to the beginning of man's knowledge of the metals and their alloys. As soon as men got the idea of inscribing things on stone as representing things or words, they used an iron instrument which was the parent of the ancestor of the pen. There were pens of iron and bronze and reeds, and later the quills of feathers.

The Assyrian kings and scribes and Phoenicians, 2,000 years before Christ, proclaimed their dynasties with decrees written with pens made from reeds and feathers. The early Greeks inscribed their letters with a stylus, but the later Greeks wrote them with quills of geese, crows, hawks and eagles. Pens of brass and silver were in use in Rome at the beginning of the Christian era.

The stylus, with which many of the Greeks and Romans wrote, was something like an iron bodkin and it came to be used so often in brawls that it was prohibited—that is, men were prohibited to use a stylus. The bodkin in old English times was no doubt a big darning or knitting needle and Hamlet had that instrument in mind when he said: "When he his quietus might make with a bare bodkin."

There are various references in the Bible to pens. In the Book of Judges, the 5th chapter and the 14th verse, is this: "Out of Machir came down governors and out of Zebulun they handle the pen of the writer." In 1 Kings, the 21st chapter in the matter of Ahab, Jezebel and Naboth, it is written: "So she wrote letters in Ahab's name and sealed them with his seal and sent the letters unto the elders and the nobles that were in his city dwelling with Naboth." In the 19th chapter of Job, the 23rd and 24th verses, is this: "O that my words were not written; O that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in rock forever!" The eighth chapter of Isaiah begins: "Moreover the Lord said unto me, 'Take thee a great roll and write in it with a man's pen concerning Babershalah-hash-baz.'"

Pens of steel, gold and silver appeared in Great Britain, France and America about 1800, but they were very slow in gaining favor. They were expensive, clumsy, and not as satisfactory as the quill. But the quill had reached the limit in the nicety with which it could be pointed and the gold and steel pens continued to be improved in their smoothness and flexibility—Washington Star.

F. SMALLWOOD, THE HOME OF GOOD RUBBERS,

218 and 220 Water Street.

Physical Development.

And its Bearing on Health and Strength.

By GEE.

GYMNASTIC EXERCISES.

Principles of Gymnastics.—The great principle of gymnastic exercise is the development of the body by special movements or apparatus particularly adapted for the purpose.

Harmony of Development.—It is obvious that by a complete series of appliances all portions of the muscular system may be judiciously invigorated.

the result being an harmonious development of the entire frame.

Gaining the Object.—In order to make sure of the above object, it would be well for each one to study his weak spots and constitutional tendencies, that the right methods may be brought into play, at the right time and in the right way. The person should pass through a medical examination, and a proper instructor secured whose experience will prevent mistakes.

Tendency to Over Exercise.—It is the fault of those who need and indulge in gymnastics to indulge it too much, or, at least, to bring into play the parts of the body which are already strong. Such persons need to be guided and schooled, for they are not only developing parts which do not need it, but are neglecting the very parts that do. There can be no harmonious development in such cases.

Various Tests.—Tests of strength are made in gymnastics by certain machines. At the same time physical peculiarities are noted. After this the examiner can point out the man who is inclined to be pigeon-breasted, and prescribe the apparatus proper to be used. He can suggest to the man with weak lungs the use of other apparatus. So he can instruct one with feeble heart to moderate work; can regulate the amount and kind of work for one of slow circulation and of a tendency to grow fat; can even point out the diet for rheumatic people, and the clothing for consumptives.

Repeated Examinations.—These tests should be repeated from time to time, and their results carefully noted, so that the degrees of development may be observed, and new courses of procedure prescribed, if necessary.

Gymnastic Machines.—There are various types of machines for development of the flexors and extensors of the forearm and of the grip. One is a fairly strong box, in which weights can be placed, and this should be suspended from the centre of a bar, which can be turned and returned in various ways by the performer. The weight can be adjusted as the pupil advances.

Here are a few exercises for the development of the extensors and flexors of forearm.

(1) Raise the right arm in a horizontal line with the shoulder; open and clench the fist forcibly; twist wrist from side to side with hand firmly clenched. Repeat with left hand.

(2) With the right hand half shut, rest the fingers of the left hand on the knuckles, right arm bent. Now drop the right hand as low as possible without allowing the upper arm or forearm to move, then forcibly return it to original position against strong pressure from the left hand. Take hold of extreme end of knuckles. Repeat with left arm.

How fine cooks make cream soups to day

After eating a rich cream soup somewhere, do you sigh and say to yourself "if I could only afford to use real cream, I could serve soup like that, too!"

The chances are that the soup you would like to duplicate was not made with cream at all. For many fine cooks have learned a culinary secret that makes of cream soups a banquet dish at every day cost.

The secret is—make them with Libby's Evaporated Milk. For twenty years Libby has worked to give a finer and richer milk to consumers. Their plans were far-reaching. First they sought out the finest pasture lands in America. There they encouraged the breeding of splendid milk herds and the use of all the appliances and practices of scientific dairying. And there they established their milk condenseries so equipped as to assure absolute purity and cleanliness.

At those condenseries the whole milk from the fine herds, with the cream left in, is canned for you. Half the moisture is taken from it by evaporation. Nothing is added to it. So you have in this milk just the rich, pure product of the finest cows, but with twice the food value, twice the butter fat, of ordinary milk.

This milk makes cream soups so smooth, so rich, so mellow that they taste like the soups made by extravagant cooks.

Used in coffee, this milk gives a creamy richness at half the cost of cream.

Try it in your favorite recipe where cream or milk is called for.

Your grocer has it or can get it for you.

WINDSOR HONORS VICTOR MACAULAY.

Windsor, Oct. 25.—Victor MacAulay, Windsor, marathon runner of New England and Eastern Canada, and winner of The Halifax Herald's ten mile modified marathon, Oct. 15, was tendered a reception by the town of Windsor at the Opera House this evening. During the course of the programme, W. H. Roach, ex-mayor, addressed the gathering, in which he lauded The Halifax Herald for its successful carrying out of the marathon race and also praised the newspaper for the promotion and success of the schooner races and bicycle race.

DUNBRACK WINS OVER ALF ROGERS.

Cecil Dunbrack, youthful Dartmouth runner, furnished the thrills at the A.O.E. tournament at the Dartmouth Arena recently when he defeated veteran Alf Rogers. Young Dunbrack sprang into fame on October 15, when he ran fifth in The Herald and Mail marathon and his fast feat came in the form of a surprise.

It was in the three mile run that Dunbrack put over his win, after Rogers had led for practically the entire distance. The veteran set a terrific pace and several of the thirteen runners who started, were lapped before the first mile was reached. Rogers was in good form and he clipped off the mile in fast time. Dunbrack started a terrific sprint in the final quarter and got the jump on Rogers on the second last lap.

Angus MacAdam, Antigonish, wearing the colors of the Crescents club, carried off both sprints, and gave the Crescents a big lead in points scored in the tourney. MacAdam scoring 10 and his team-mate Grant Holmes, scoring 15. MacAdam won the 50 yards in 5, 4, 5 seconds from a field of six. He had the two-twenty well in hand after the first turn. Art Phillip who gave him a close race in the 50, held his nearest opponent.

afternoon, defeating a field of 23 runners; time 31 minutes, 24 secs. Mat Power, of Herring Cove, came second about three hundred yards behind. Jimmy Martin was third, and Carl Dunbrack, D.B.C.A. fourth.

The course was around Woodlawn and the start was made from the Royal Theatre, King Street, where a large crowd gathered. A silver cup donated by Mayor Vidito was offered for first prize and it was presented to the winner after the finish.

The winner's time is regarded as exceptionally fast considering the unfavorable weather, a heavy cold wind blew from the north which made it more suitable for a boat race than a road race. At the crack of the gun P. Cooper, Wanderers; J. Martin, D.A.A.A. and Victor MacAulay, jumped into the lead with the rest of the field right behind, but the runners had not gone far when the champion and winner forged ahead and by the time the first mile was reeled off he had a nice lead.

Alf Rogers, Imperoyal, dropped out after going less than two miles. He complained of having stepped on a sharp stone, slightly injuring his foot. Friends of Rogers expected him to give MacAulay a great race of it and were disappointed when they heard of his accident.

MacAulay finished in fine condition breathing the tape with a burst of speed. It was reported before the start that MacAulay was not feeling well, but he showed no evidence of it in the race, travelling fast over the entire distance. Under more favorable conditions he would undoubtedly have eclipsed the record he holds for the distance which he established in 1916. His time that year was 30:45.9/5 and this time has never been equalled. Up until that time the record for the course was held by Herbert Dalmer. His time was 31:42 and it was made in 1910. Rogers captured the event last year; time 32:33.

The first nineteen runners to finish follows:

- 1—Victor MacAulay, Windsor.
- 2—Mat Power, Crescents.
- 3—James Martin, D.A.A.A.
- 4—Carl Dunbrack, D.B.C.A.
- 5—D. Young, Clippers.
- 6—M. Behan, D.B.C.A.
- 7—L. Jackson, Imperoyal.
- 8—Walsh, Crescents.
- 9—F. Wilkes, D.B.C.A.
- 10—P. Cooper, Wanderers.

When Football Was Illegal.

Laws Were Introduced to Stop It. Last season it was an uncommon thing for football "fans" to read in their papers of Royalty visiting some of the leading grounds when big matches were being played. Yet how many of them know that there was a time in the history of this country when football was prohibited by law? Edward III. and Richard II. both enacted laws to prevent the playing of football, because it proved too popular a counter-attraction to archery, a sport which could, and was, turned to good account in the days of warfare, when the bow and arrow formed an essential part of a soldier's equipment.

In spite of this legislation, the game is now the most attractive national sport, and judging from our victories on the battlefields in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, our archery did not suffer much.

More amusing is the action of Edward II, who, in 1314, forbade the game in consequence of "the great noise in the city caused by hustling over large balls." Needless to say, such a provision would not be required to-day, but at that time the public streets often took the place of the modern "football" ground.

"A Devilshe Pastime." Shrove Tuesday was the great football festival, and in a History of London, written about 1175, there is a reference to this—probably the first mention of the game in literature, at any rate so far as England is concerned.

It is generally believed that the Romans introduced football to our land, the ball of these times being known as the follis, but Irish antiquaries held that a variety of the game has been played in the Emerald Isle for over two thousand years.

Ancient Greece knew the game, and many savage tribes, such as the Maoris, the Philippines Islanders, the Polynesians, and the Eskimaux also have a similar sport.

Later on in our history, Henry VIII. and Elizabeth did their utmost to stop football, which seemed to be developing into a very rough pastime, for we find it described as "a devilshe pastime . . . and hereof growth envy, rancour, and malice, and sometimes murder, brawling, homicide, and great effusion of blood, as experience daily teacheth."

It Was Once a Rowdy Street Game. Another writer terms it "nothing but beastly fury and extreme violence . . . and wherefore it is to be put in perpetual silence.

In Ireland, however, the authorities were more lenient, for the Statutes of Galway of 1527 prohibited all sport save archery, and "only the great foot balls." At Magdalene College, privileges were allowed on Michaelmas Day because of "ye football play."

King James refused permission to the heir apparent to play the game as it was "meeter for laming than making the users thereof able." In fact, up till the nineteenth century there were no clubs, no rules, no grounds, and nothing but the idea of driving a ball through the opposite goal by fair means or foul.

Then the English public schools raised football from a rowdy street game to the more dignified position it now holds. Rugby School possessed available grassy fields and was able to play a more vigorous form of the sport, from which Rugby Football developed. The institutions where hard shony courts were used, contented themselves by adhering to what is now Association Football.

The final stage in this "strange eventful history" came with the establishing of the Football Association in 1863 and of the English Rugby Union in 1871.

TO THE

Citizens of the St. John's Municipality.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having been interviewed by a large number of citizens at different times as to my intentions in the forthcoming Municipal Election, I beg to say that after due consideration I have decided to be nominated for the office of Mayor.

The duties of the office require health, leisure and experience, and these qualifications I have, and am willing to devote them to the welfare of the City.

To speak of anything like an elaborate policy would be a mistake and a deception, as the financial state of the Municipality does not warrant any great expenditure; but as far as may be feasible I promise, if elected, to do my best for the City, and at the same time to exercise due economy.

I have no campaign to make, nor literature to distribute, nor any photographs to exhibit; hence I do not require any committee. With the public I leave the result and shall be fully satisfied to abide by their decision.

Respectfully submitted,

I. C. MORRIS.

LONDON GOSSIP.

SIGNS THAT FLASH IN THE NIGHT.

In pre-war years the night life of London was emblematized by several flashing electric signs, of which the Highlander perched against a chimney on the Waterloo side of the river was the most notorious. In spite of themselves people watched him as his beard and kit flicked into life and faded, and the lettering of the advertisement madly changed colour. They gumbled at him and looked again. It is evident that London is now to endure a multiplication of these irritating signs. The old-time changing advertisements at Charing Cross and Tottenham Court Road which wrote in different colours the names of several cures and tonics have come back, and every week new ingenuities come to dazzling light, congregating chiefly about the theatre area. The newest device at Piccadilly Circus is a baby food advertisement which writes itself in flashing lamps, purple, green, and blue. Next to it is an advertisement of some wine. A yellow wingglass comes into view, and from the bottle filled with red liquor held above it a stream of red wine runs into the glass. It does not stop when the glass is filled, but the magical crystal never overflows. Then the light fades and the whole performance begins again. The motor-car advertisement beside it has two cardboard figures in a motor-car. When the light flashes on, the red ribbons in the lady's hat flutter; the road runs past, and the wheels whirl madly round for a minute; then blackness and the thing begins again. Shaftsbury Avenue has less unusual designs of lettering coming and going and changing colour, but the most maddening device of all is at the New Oxford Street corner, where underneath a lettered advertisement two zigzag flashes of lightning flick backwards and forwards. It is difficult to believe that people could watch these long and retain their hold on civilization.

A DOCTOR'S WONDERLAND.

The exhibition season, which in London seems to suffer no interval in the 13 months of the year, has brought to us the London Medical Exhibition, opened at Central Hall, Westminster, and the International Shoe and Leather Fair at the Agricultural Hall. At the former doctors will have an opportunity of inspecting most of the latest marvels in the sciences affecting their profession, and the crowds on the opening day have indicated a keen desire to do so. The stalls are replete with everything that is new and up-to-date, from the finest Hospital X-ray equipment to the newest tabloid or the latest celloid preparation. An interesting section is devoted to artificial limbs, and in one stump of an arm gives practical illustration of a new product by which, with a series of detachable "gadgets," he is able to perform on the piano.

BARGAINS FOR YOUNG DOCTORS.

Excellent results, I am informed, have been achieved from the system adopted for the sale of the Government's surplus medical stores, and their disposal through the agency of the British Red Cross Society is believed to have effected a saving to the country of a large sum of money. The enlistment of an organization which is in close touch with all branches of the profession has enabled the Disposal Board to realize a section of their stores more rapidly than by any other means, apart from a big deal in the entire stock; but it has at the same time had the advantage that doctors, nurses and medical institutions have been given fullest opportunity of obtaining such bargains as are to be found among the nation's surplus war stocks. At the huge depot where the business is transacted at Shepherd's Bush, and which I had the opportunity of visiting, I was able to see how extensively the facilities were being taken advantage of. An enormous amount of business is done daily. Doctors and representatives of institutions come from all over the country in search of their requirements, and the enormous masses of stores and their bewildering variety ensuring that few visits are futile. What seemed to be a feature of the sales was the great number of young doctors and medical students from London hospitals who dressed in summer frocks were many. London is enjoying serene, warm weather, and, although the out-fitters display cardigans in their windows, few people realize that we have passed the Autumn Equinox and that this is the last week of summer-time. Next week, when we find that the evenings grow dark immediately after tea, we shall also be surprised, and how many people know that, according to the present intentions of Parliament, we shall have said farewell to summer-time for good. It has been enjoined on us from year to year by order of D.O.R.A., but that statute is dead, and when the Government, during this year, tried to pass a Bill making summer-time a permanent yearly institution, the quiet opposition of agricultural M.P.'s and the loquacity of Commander Kenworthy gave them an excuse for dropping the proposal. So, if the populations of our towns and villages do not agitate strongly next spring, we shall not have summer-time again.

LONDON SWELTERS.

Recently the shade temperature in London was 77 degrees. To-day it has reached 74, with a hot wind. More remarkable still, in the intervening night, the thermometer never fell below 62. September gave us hotter days—four above 78—one of which reached 86 at Croyden—but generally speaking the nights were cooler. This temperature was equalled on September 14, but I doubt whether in any previous year an October night has been hotter. It came after one or two nights with fog and a slight frost, and so found Londoners sleeping under winter blankets and elderdowns when a hammock in the garden would really have been more comfortable. The daytime heat found people as inappropriately clad. One saw men in the city wearing knitted waistcoats, and in the Park almost every woman sweltered in furs. Those who donned print dresses again were few indeed. I am writing now after supper, in a room with the window open and the thermometer at 70. Tomorrow or the next day we shall probably have to light the stoves.

MUMPS AT CHEQUERS.

There is an epidemic of Scarlet Fever or measles in the village just outside the Premier's estate at Chequers, so Lloyd George has been advised not to go there next week-end. If he did not catch the trouble himself, his car might bring the infection back to Downing Street—and then the whole Cabinet might catch mumps.

PUBLIC UTILITY SOCIETIES AND HOUSING.

There has been an increasing rush during the last few weeks on the new houses erected in the London district. I hear of one house in a London suburb, containing two living rooms and three bedrooms, that is now occupied by three families. In fact, overcrowding is still so bad that it is becoming more and more apparent that the Government will be compelled to work out a new housing policy. Housing experts are urging that this new policy should be devised carefully during the coming winter. At the same time the Government are being pressed to fulfil their obligations to those public utility societies which are now carrying out housing schemes. Most of these societies are composed of working men who have put up their savings relying on the promise that financial assistance will be given in respect of all schemes carried out by the end of July next year. But, as with local authorities' schemes, the plans of public utility societies have been so drastically curtailed that in several cases their solvency is seriously threatened.

Manufacture of Ammonia.

What is described as an interesting discovery for the synthetic manufacture of ammonia has recently been made by a French scientist. His method is to extract the hydrogen from a mixture of hydrogen and carbon monoxide produced by passing steam through red-hot coke. This is done by compressing the gas given off to thirty-five atmospheres when its temperature is reduced to 207 degrees (centigrade) below zero. The carbon monoxide then liquefies, leaving hydrogen in a pure state. It is claimed that by this process 220 cubic metres of hydrogen can be produced in an hour. The ammonia is obtained by submitting a mixture of this hydrogen and nitrogen to extremely high pressure.
