LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

—OR—

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER XII.

"Ah, yes!" said her ladyship, with a smile. "But then, you see, unfortunately I am a widow. I am glad you have come, Angela," she said, looking up as her daughter entered the room. "I want to consult you about my wedding-dress."

The girl started, and a pained expression came over her face as the words fell upon her ears.

"You have such excellent taste that I wish your assistance," added her ladyship.

"Do not ask me, mamma," entreated the girl; and there came to her vividly a remembrance of the day at the Abbey when her mother sat in her dressing-room, passing folds of crape over her fingers to test the quality. So striking was the contrast, and so painfully did it appeal to her that she could hardly restrain her tears.

"I cannot, mamma," she said; "I do not know what is required."

"You do, Angela. You see, I cannot wear white—an absolute white; but I shall go as near as possible to it. Madame recommends this white brocade, which is delicately interwoven with silver, or this, which is still more delicately interwoven with threads of gold."

"They are both beautiful," observed Angela; and her sad eyes, raised to Lady Rooden's face, said plainly, "Do not wear either." But her mother took no notice of the silent appeal.

"You shall choose for me," she said. "I shall like my wedding-dress all the more because it is your choice, darling."

Angela took the white brocade in which the gold threads gleamed palely.

"This is far the more beautiful material, mamma," she said.

"I agree with mademoiselle," put in the modiste; "diamonds and roses should go with it."

"Do you think," asked Lady Rooden, meditatively, "that roses will be best? I always think they require a young face."

"Your ladyship's face resembles a rose more than anything else," said the modiste; and Doris Newsham, the maid, looked up with a smile. She thought no one else so fair as her mistress.

"Diamonds and roses it shall be, then," said Lady Rooden, with a well-pleased smile. Then, turning with her sweetest manner to Angela, she added, "And now, Angel, you must choose your own dress. I have not decided how many bridesmaids to have, but you will certainly be the first."

"I—I should like to speak to you for a few minutes before you decide, mamma. Will you come into this room?"

Her hands trembled, her eyes were full of tears. She opened the door that led into Lady Rooden's dressing room. There was something almost like a crown on her ladyship's face as she followed her daughter.

"What is it, Angela?" she cried.

"You always choose such unsuitable times for speaking to me. Be quick, my dear; madame's time is very precious. There are few people for whom she would have taken all this trouble."

"Mamma," she said, with pale face and eyes filled with tears, "I implore you not to ask me to be your bridesmaid. I could not bear it. The very thought of it makes me tremble. I should be afraid."

"Afraid of what?" asked her ladyship impatiently.

"Afraid of seeing my father standing between you and the man who is going to usurp his place."

Lady Rooden started back angrily.

"Why will you talk such nonsense to me? I told you before that I would not allow it, and I will not! I have a right to please myself in this matter."

"I know that, mamma," replied Angela; "but do not torture me—do not ask me to be a bridesmaid. Do not ask me to rejoice in a marriage which will sound the death-knell of my happiness."

"Nonsense!" cried Lady Rooden. "I will not hear such words."

"You know that it is true, mamma," said her daughter piteously. "It is a wedding to you, but it more like a funeral to me. You say that I must have a wedding-dress. Oh, mother, you know that it would be like a shroud to me!"

"I shall not listen to anything more," declared Lady Rooden. "You will be my bridesmaid, and you will wear the dress that I choose for you."

"Oh, mamma, do spare me!" cried the girl. "I shall die if you force me—I shall indeed."

"Then, my dear, you must die," said Lady Rooden calmly; "for you will certainly be present. My mind is made up on the matter. Now be sensible, Angel; you are really to use an old comparison, running your head against a stone wall. The wall will not give way. You must draw your own inference. Let me hear no more of this. Go back to madame, and let me choose your dress."

"Oh, mamma, kiss me at least as you used to do when you loved me!" sobbed Angela.

"I love you now, foolish child! Why do you not try to please me, instead of offending and irritating me? I have not the least wish to be cool or unkind; but you thwart me at every turn. Go back to madame; and her ladyship kissed the pale sad face.

But Angela could not return to Madame; so Lady Rooden had to offer many apologies for her daughter, and was so sweet and gracious that the modiste thought that no more amiable lady existed.

"I am afraid, Vance," said Lady Rooden that night to her lover, "that we shall have trouble with Angel. She cannot reconcile herself to my marriage. She seems to be more and more opposed to it every day."

In his heart the captain anathematized her, and the smile that curved his lips was not a pleasant one to see.

"I feel almost unhappy over it to-night," she continued. "Do you know, Vance, when I spoke to her to-day of her dress for the wedding, she said it would be her shroud."

A curious shadow passed over his face.

"It is unreasonable to expect her to like it, my dearest Laura," said the captain. "You see, she has had you all to herself for so long; naturally she will not like to share you with another."

"But she ought to consider my happiness, Vance, as well as her own," remarked Lady Rooden.

"So she does and so she will," said the captain, persuasively. "Do not trouble about it, Laura; I cannot bear to see your beautiful face clouded."

"You can form no idea how she grieves. She is growing thin and pale."

"She will be all right soon," said the captain, cheerfully.

you, my darling, have none. I would to Heaven you had the fortune which is here!" he added, with a sigh.

"I shall die! I cannot bear it!" she sobbed.

A sinister look crossed the man's face.

"I have an idea that all will be well for us yet," he said.

And the man who uttered the disloyal words was Captain Wynyard; the woman who listened to them was Gladys Rane!

(To be continued.)

When Fog Comes Down.

WHAT IT MEANS TO THOSE AT SEA.

Recently a Chard liner, the Andania, had a unique experience while crossing the Atlantic. She ran thru' fog almost the whole way across, and was forced to blow her siren continually for a distance of 8,000 miles!

The dangers of fog at sea must be experienced to be realized. Fog on land is bad enough, especially when it comes down on busy streets, but the sea fog is in quite a different class.

A really bad sea fog can be well likened to a thick white blanket. It is so dense that it is almost impossible to see objects an arm's length away.

Such conditions affect mariners very seriously. If a ship is working in an area where she knows there is traffic, then she must steam at greatly reduced speed, and blow her siren as she goes. This is her only safeguard.

If she is out on the open sea she may be less cautious about speed, but she has still to blow her siren at fixed intervals.

Working through a lane of traffic in a fog is a nerve-racking business. The fact is that you are quite unable to gauge the position of any one boat nearby. A ship bears a siren right beneath her bows and imagines she is bearing down on another craft. Yet the chances are that the other vessel is quite out of her course. Sound in fog is most deceptive.

Vessels do their best, of course. It may be the shrill scream of a tug's whistle or the bugle on some old coasting steamer, but it acts as a warning, whatever it is.

The great thing is to make some sort of a noise to advertise your whereabouts.

Everything possible is done to help sailors. Wireless reports are sent out to ships when it is known that fog is likely to come. Channels that lead into ports have buoys equipped with warning whistles; lightships and lighthouses all send out their calls.

Then may come that dread order, "Hard-a-port!" Extra look-outs are stationed forward, when suddenly one of them sees a boat bearing down. The warning is given. The skipper gives the helm orders to port or starboard his helm. At the same time he rings the telegraph for reduced speed. Quick and steady action may avert disaster, but it must be quick.

Once two steamers were hastening to the help of another vessel that had sent out signals of distress during a fog. So dense was the fog that one of the rescuing vessels crashed into the other and sank her. And all this time not a thing could be seen.

Cub Cigarettes are appreciated, not only by the smoker but by those in his company.

Friendly Foes.

The other day a witty tailor declared that his best friend, from a business point of view, was Mr. Clothes Brush. He spoke the truth! A good stiff clothes-brush in five minutes will do as much wear-out damage to a suit of clothes as would come to them in a month's ordinary use.

It proves that get a remnant of cloth and brush it for a few minutes. Then examine it under a strong magnifying glass, and it will be seen that a percentage of the "nap" has been removed, and the wool and warp and weft threads brushed out of their places.

It is quite a moderate estimate to say that the life of a well-and-treasured suit is shortened by at least six weeks, and that the average man has, in two years, to get a suit solely because Mr. Clothes Brush has brought the others to an untimely end. The moral is—shake your clothes.

It is fitting, of course, that the best friend of those who make boots is Mr. Blacking! A little polish is good; too much is bad. Most of us use too much! The leather is cracked over, dries, and perishes. The moral is obvious.

If it became unfashionable for shoes to be worn, and all of us wore boots, makers and purveyors of hosiery would lose an excellent friend. Shoes wear out socks and stockings at quite double the rate that boots do.

The tobaccoist's best friend is the smoker's weakness for his pet pipe. If it became the custom to use two or three pipes in succession, and not to fill up the hot bowl of one pipe continually, everyone would smoke less.

Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A SMART FROCK.

3960. Here is a delightful style for a school dress. The skirt is cut to flare gracefully. The closing is hidden under the front plait at the left side. This model is fine for the new gingham and cretonnes. It is also good for serge, pongee and linen. Red and white checked gingham with collar and cuffs of orange, or yellow chambray, with trimming of white braid would be attractive for this model.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12 year size requires 3 yards of 38 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A SMART STYLE FOR THE GROWING GIRL.

4996. The girl who likes something different will be pleased with the style lines of this model. The long waist and side closing are youthful and becoming. Plaid suiting in brown tones, with bands of red broad cloth developed this style.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12 year size requires 3 1/2 yards of 44 inch material. One could have this in blue homespun with pipings in henna or orange. Or in black pannel velvet with pass stitching in green or white.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A POPULAR STYLE.

4055. Charming in its simplicity is this one piece model. As here developed gingham and linen are combined with bands of a contrasting color. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

A CHARMING FROCK.

4085. The front closing makes this model very practical. The sleeve may be wrist or elbow length. English prints, crepe or gingham could be used for this style.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. A 6 year size requires 3 1/2 yards of 27 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A GARMENT FOR SERVICE.

3788. Just the apron you want for comfort and protection; easy to adjust and easy to make. Gingham, percale, lawn, chintz, cretonne and asteen are good for this style.

It is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-38; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 6 3/4 yards of 36 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

AN UP-TO-DATE COSTUME.

3956-4221. Knicker and bloomer suits appeal to the active girl as much to "grown ups." This model is ever so serviceable and pleasing. It may be worn with or without a skirt. Serge, flannel, jersey cloth and other knitted materials, as well as linen, khaki, and gingham are good for its development.

The Blouse Pattern 3956 is cut in 7 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. The Knicker Pattern 4221 is cut in 5 sizes: 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. To make the costume for a 14 year size will require 5 yards of 32 inch material.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

Very Fishy.

Entertained on his seventy-first birthday by the staff of MacFisheries, of which he is chief, Lord Laverfulmac wound up a witty after-dinner speech by propounding a conundrum.

"If Iah were to marry," he asked, "which would be first?"

"His answer was, John Dory and Anchovy. The bridegroom's present would be "her-ring." They would spend the honeymoon in Fishguard. When the wife called her husband in the morning she would say, "Surgeon." If he were cross, she would call him wrabby. They would keep as pets a dogfish and a catfish, and wear on their feet soles and eels.

A good dimer deserves a good cigarette, a bad dinner needs one. Let your choice be CUB.

Wallace Silverware.

Is your Table Silver as good to-day as when you bought it?

Have you noticed that at the parts most exposed to wear, the plate has become worn?

Do you think this condition of your Silver is in keeping with your idea of a well appointed table?

Then why not, when you decide on replacing your old ware, give place to it with the "Wallace" Brand, the Silver that refuses to wear and is guaranteed without time limit.

Start with the Tea Spoons and gradually complete your set with the one pattern—there are several for you to choose from and the price is very moderate.

Tea Spoons cost $3.00 for a Dozen.

Turks Blame France For Lausanne Failure.

British Labor Members Visit Ruhr -- Irish Irregulars Attack Free State Government Offices -- Germans to Propose International Negotiations.

NET MAKES HIS REPORT. International Board to distribute dividends earned as reparations.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 21. Pasha, Foreign Minister and Turkish delegate to the Lausanne Conference, addressing the Assembly at Ankara to-day, said the breakdown of the Conference as the final and economic of the proposed treaty, according to the Turkish cap. In the absence of news from the Constantinople press, they are predicting an early resumption of the Near East peace negotiations. A despatch from Ankara says the Grand National Assembly is holding secret sessions to hear Ismet Pasha's report on the Lausanne Conference. No date is expected here before Saturday but it is understood the general attitude of the Assembly is unfavorable to the proposals of the powers.

LABOR WOULD SOLVE RUHR DIFFICULTY. LONDON, Feb. 21. Scottish Labor members of Commons, John Wheatley, James Macdonald, David Kirkwood, and Rev. William Stephen, who recently made a visit to Ruhr, to-day presented a report of their impressions to their colleagues. They declare their hope of British mediation and an alternative would be for Germany, Great Britain and Italy to internationalize the Ruhr and put the administration of that territory in the hands of an essplane, under construction for the Air Ministry, is designed for actual flying. It will be equipped with an electric capstan to be fixed for handling a 125 pound anchor to hold the plane at rest on the water. Two watertight transverse bulkheads are provided, as well as sleeping quarters for five people. The superstructure will be divided into three compartments, one to be used by the commanding officer as a chart room, another by a gunner, and a third for a pilot. The total weight with full crew, fuel and two torpedoes, each weighing three thousand pounds, will be nearly nine and a half tons.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM IN ACCORD. PARIS, Feb. 21. France and Belgium are in perfect accord with regard to the Ruhr situation. This was disclosed at a conference between Premiers Poincare and Theunis, in which the Ministers Finance, War, Public Works, Liberated Regions and Marshal Foch took part.

IN THE RUHR AREA. LONDON, Feb. 21. A despatch to the Times from Dortmund says the French party evacuated Gelsenkirchen to-day and reported they will completely evacuate the town tomorrow also after setting rolling stock. Troops with tanks arrived before the opera house in Bochum yesterday as a performance of William Tell was beginning and drove out the audience who departed singing patriotic songs. To-day there was rather a longer list of expulsions and court martial sentences than usual. A large number of railway officials were sentenced to short terms by Mayence court martial for having been instrumental in the payment of wages to the railwaymen on strike. Reports from Essen say further drastic measures by the French there are expected, including seizure of the railway station, and great anxiety prevails.

GERMANY'S PROPOSALS RE RUHR. LONDON, Feb. 20. The German Government proposes to attempt to start international negotiations in London regarding the Ruhr situation, according to a despatch to the Daily Express from Berlin.

STILL BLAMING ENGLAND. DUBLIN, Feb. 20. The Republican Bulletin last night published a proclamation from De Valera ordering a rigid enforcement of the boycott on certain classes of English goods and the ground that "this unjust and grievous war of aggression is still pursued with increased bitterness by Great Britain through her agents and creatures in Ireland."

WHOSE WAS THE CALL? BOSTON, Feb. 20. Radio sending was stilled for a time last evening while a powerful station tried to read faint signals from a vessel far at sea. Although given right of way the receiving station failed to make out the name of the vessel or her position, which was a great distance away.

SERIOUSLY ILL. NEW YORK, Feb. 20. Prince Miguel de Braganza, son of the Pretender to the Throne of Portugal, and grandson of King Miguel, is seriously ill here with double pneumonia.

BARRIER TO BUY "QUEST." QUEBEC, Feb. 21. That Canada will enter once more into Arctic expeditions is demonstrated by the fact that Captain Bernier, the Canadian explorer, who has just returned from Europe appears to have made the necessary

FOOLISH HURRY.

It doesn't matter when I reach the town of B u n g v i l l e - o n - t h e - B e a c h . I've no important errand there; I merely go to hold a chair in Abner Johnson's B u e Front Store, and loaf and talk and be a bore. It's fifteen miles, the signboards teach, from here to B u n g v i l l e - o n - t h e - B e a c h , and I might take an hour, I ween, to hit those parakeets between. But I step down upon the gas, and men who see my lizze pass throw up astonished hands and say, "That boob will break his neck some day." I'm always winging hens and crows; and faster than the law allows I speed my bus, and make her roar, to chew the rag at Johnson's store. The speed sends zip through dust and mire, as though proceeding to a fire; you'd think, when you behold them whiz, that "life or death" their errand is. But when they've made their breathless race and come to the appointed place, into the druggist's joint they drop, and fill themselves with ice cold pop. Just ask the speedster to explain why he prods his rattling wheels, driving all the traffic laws and he can only say, "Because!" There is no sense in all the haste that causes such a wanton waste of men and dogs and Berkshire sows, and geese and ducks and muley cows.

GETS DEATH SENTENCE. RIGA, Feb. 20. The Supreme Court of Moscow has sentenced to death Colonel Srejevski for complicity in the recent attempt on Lenin's life.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY. PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20. A tomb ages older than that of Tutankhamen has been found in the ancient Chilean city of Ur by Dr. Gordon of the University of Pennsylvania.

OF MALIGNANT TYPE. MONTREAL, Feb. 21. Cases of grippe in Montreal this year are much more malignant than last year, according to LaPatrie. Large numbers develop pneumonia which rapidly proves fatal.

THE DISCHARGE STANDS. SYDNEY, Feb. 21. Following investigations agreed upon between the steel workers and the corporation, the dismissal of Sid MacNeil, an employee of the British Empire Steel Corporation here, which precipitated last week's strike, the action of the company is sustained and the discharge stands, according to an announcement to-day.

BIG COUNTERFEITING PLOT DISCOVERED. NEW YORK, Feb. 21. Secret Service operatives to-day had sixty-four persons under arrest in New York in connection with an international counterfeiting plot, said to involve from one million to ten million dollars of spurious money. Federal agents said they were extending their net to Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco and other large cities and that approximately one thousand persons would be taken into custody as soon as the evidence against them is complete.

Eat Mrs. STEWART'S Home Made Bread. — Oct 4, 1922.

Nice For Mary. In spite of repeated warnings from his father, little Bobby persisted in driving nails into blocks and boards. He had arrived at the play-at-carpenter stage. One morning dad heard the familiar pounding, and looking out he saw Bobby banging away—his little sister Mary sitting beside him, apparently looking on. "Haven't I told you, Bobby, that you will smash your fingers if you drive nails!" the father asked. "Yes, I know, dad, but Mary's holding the nail."

That Explained It.

The founder of the Legion of Frontiersmen, Captain Roger Pocock, is fond of telling the story of a certain young English "tenderfoot" who one day turned up unexpectedly in a Western "cow town."

He had with him a beautiful little silver-plated, pearl-handled revolver. That evening, in the bar of the one and only hotel the place boasted, he was showing it to a group of hard-bitten cowboys, each of whom carried, strapped on his left hip, a huge .45 with a barrel nearly as long as a small carbine.

They examined the tenderfoot's miniature weapon with a curiosity not unmixed with contempt. "At length one of them remarked, as he laid the tiny revolver in the palm of one enormous hand:—"Stranger, if you was to shoot me with this 'ere darried thing, and I ever found it out, I'd go fer yer bald-head, sure."

Severe Kidney Trouble

Mrs. F. Rinehart, Campbellville, Ont., writes: "I had trouble with my kidneys and very frequent urination. This was followed by pains which at times were very severe. The doctor said I had inflammation of the bladder and that an operation might be necessary. To this I refused, and began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. From the first few doses I felt the benefit. The pains left, urination was corrected, and I have had no recurrence of these ailments."

Greater Achievement Through Electric Service

Out of the great central power plant, electric energy leaps to do your bidding, in home and industry, lighting houses and streets, driving sewing machines and lathes, turning the wheels of transportation. Yet before the advent of this great power, generated for every conceivable use, women laboured at their household tasks from dawn to darkness; through the same hours men struggled to produce the world's goods.

How different now. Households are lighted, rooms cleaned, clothes washed, food prepared, by clean, silent, invisible energy, created miles away by the central power station. Men are transported to their labors, the heavy tasks are lightened, the scope of productive activity becomes boundless, gifts of a new era. The magic to electricity.

Keep ahead of the times, encourage this new industry on which so many other industries depend, not merely by using its product; electricity; but by investing in successful hydro-electric company stocks, put your spare funds to work for you and incidentally help build up new industries and increase your country's prosperity.

Prosperity will never come of its own accord. The time to act is now. Buy United Tawas Electric Company 7 per cent. Preference Shares. Particulars, Prospectus, etc., on application to the Company's Office, Telephone Building. Feb 19, 21

The Lord Mayor's Kitchen.

One of the features of the Lord Mayor's show day is the banquet, which is held at the Guildhall after the procession.

The famous turtle soup is always served at this banquet, and the tables are laden with huge barons of beef, boar's heads and other delicacies.

The kitchen, in which all these good things are prepared, is one of the most wonderful rooms in the Lord Mayor's residence.

It is a huge hall in the basement, and is fitted with ranges, each of which is large enough to roast a whole ox. The vegetables are cooked, not in saucepans, but in mighty tanks, and the stewing range is a long iron platform which stretches over a number of fires. The spits for roasting turkeys and so on are immense iron cages.

Over the fireplace in this super-kitchen there is an old and curious inscription, says "Debrett's City of London Book":—"Swear not. Lie not. Neither repeat old grievances. Whosoever eats or drinks in this hall with his hat on shall forfeit sixpence or ride the wooden horse."

"Riding the wooden horse" meant that the offender sat astride a long pole, which was carried around the room by the other servants—an extremely uncomfortable business!

Ammonia is so Handy.

Many people bar ammonia from their homes for they believe that it is injurious. But ammonia bought for household use is not the same as the strong ammonia used only by pharmacists. It is highly diluted.

The diluted ammonia is extremely useful in the home.

Ammonia will act as a fertilizer to house plants. Dilute a few drops in a cup of water and use to wet the earth surrounding the plant, but do not on any account get the solution on the leaves. If you do they will wither and die.

Ammonia is also a splendid grease remover in cases of rugs and carpets. There are many ways of applying the ammonia, but the following is one of the best methods.

Put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a pint of hot water. Dip a hard brush in this and rub the grease spots, after which they must be dried with a clean rag. Next get some Fuller's Earth and with cold water form a fairly thick paste, which must be laid over what remains of the stains.

Leave this on for an hour or so, and then remove by brushing gently. The stains will have vanished.

As ammonia is the principal ingredient of smelling salts, it is always wise to keep a supply in a small bottle. As you know, smelling salts will after some time become weak, but by adding a few drops of ammonia, it will be usable once more.

Now that the winter is here, lawn tennis is a thing of the past for many of us until next spring. The tennis balls therefore are in a dirty condition, but ammonia can be used for renovating them.

Dissolve a few drops in about a pint of water. Scrub the balls, and, when dry, leave in the open air for a short while.

Blue serge suits of costumes look shiny, especially across the back. To remove this shine, put a teaspoonful of ammonia into a quart of water and brush lightly over the material.

WHY YOU SHOULD ALWAYS KEEP SOME IN HOUSE.

When you feel draggy, listless, lazy, not really sick, but far from well, what you need is a new supply of rich red blood.

Winter listlessness is only an effort of nature to adjust the body to the changed condition of the temperature and season.

Digging up Ancient Egyptians.

The archaeologists are bound and determined that no old Egyptian King shall rest in peace. Just now there is great excitement among them over the discovery of the tomb of another Pharaoh, Tutankhamen by name. This old boy, with his belongings, was buried in the Valley of the Tombs of the Kings over three thousand years ago, to be rediscovered recently by the Earl of Carnarvon and Mr. Howard Carter, an American Egyptologist, who will, of course, if allowed, separate the old king from his household effects and so distribute them that when Gabriel blows his trumpet it will be some job to get them together again, if that is to be the order of procedure.

The find, according to Egyptologists, is a very wonderful one. There are chariot bodies of gilt wood, inlaid with semi-precious stones. There are vases of alabaster with lotus flowers drooping from them. There are beds and chairs of state, and portraits of the dead monarch. A throne, and a stand, a model of the king's head and shoulders upon which was tied the royal wig. There is a box with paintings on it of the king hunting lions and gazelles and there are the royal robes of the dead man, together with figures of the monarch, all exquisitely carved and modeled, and we are told the feet are shod in golden sandals.

Of course, this does not pretend to be a complete inventory of Tutankhamen's possessions which were buried with him. As a matter of fact somebody was there before the present investigators and removed some of the most valuable articles such as the gold and silver ornaments. Why they overlooked the sandals with their gold mountings is not mentioned.

Anyhow Tutankhamen is going to have a bad time of it, for while up to the latest despatch his body had not been found Mr. Carter and the Earl of Carnarvon were hot on the trail. However, disappointments may intervene. For instance, it is reported that the Egyptian government is drafting a new law to the effect that all relics of this sort shall hereafter remain in Egypt, the property of the Government, in place of having the swag divided between government and discoverers as has been the custom. It is quite possible that had such a law been passed some time ago old King Tutankhamen's household goods might have re-

That Explained it.

Here is a brand-new story from the seemingly inexhaustible repertoire of Mr. Harry Green, the famous Hebrew comedian.

A pretty girl teacher had among her pupils a ragged little boy brought her, nearly every morning, a bouquet of flowers. Sometimes the ragged boy brought roses, sometimes violets, sometimes lilies. The flowers were always a little dragged, but what did that matter? What mattered was the thought behind the gift rather than the gift itself. Still it was puzzling, all the same, to know where the boy's flowers all came from.

One morning he brought her a great bouquet of mauve orchids, dragged as usual, and the pretty teacher could restrain her curiosity no longer. "Tommy," she said, "where do you get all these nice flowers, anyhow? You don't steal them, I hope?" "Steal 'em?" said Tommy. "Goodness, no, teacher! My father's a dustman!"

Walking Through Fire.

Colonel Welsh witnessed the strange ceremony of walking through fire at Bangalore, and describes it in his "Military Reminiscences."

"I was invited by the Hindus of our corps to see the ceremony of walking through fire; I mounted my horse, accompanied by Colonel Pepper, and rode to the spot, in rear of the native lines, where an oblong pit was prepared, eighteen feet by twelve. "I am not sure of its depth, because on our arrival it was full of live coals perfectly red hot. A procession arrived on the opposite side, and every one of them either walked or danced deliberately through the fire length-ways.

"This fire was actually so intense that we could not approach its margin, but sat on our horses at a few yards' distance, watching every motion. I had seen a little, and heard much more, of this strange feat, but never had such an opportunity of positive proof before.

The History of The Eel.

Until recent years the early life of European and American eels was a mystery. It was known that at different periods of their existence they migrated quick and slow, without any apparent suffering; and one man carried an infant on his shoulder, which did not even cry.

"I have stated the fact from ocular demonstration; it remains for scientists to explore the nature of the stuff with which they are besmeared.

"I could get no native to explain this; and I suspect that the Mussulmans, who can have no interest in keeping up the deception, are quite as ignorant of the means used as we are.

The breeding-grounds of the American and the European eels, which are two distinct species, are contiguous, and indeed overlap, though the American eel ranges somewhat farther north in its deep-sea home than its European cousin.

Back To Its Birthplace. The American eel completes the larval stage in about one year, when it must migrate to fresh water. The European eel requires three full years to finish its larval development, and during this period makes its way slowly across the whole breadth of the Atlantic to the coastal waters of the farther continent.

Yarns of Years Ago.

A well known author took a lady, to whom he had boasted of his literary friends, to a literary dinner at a hotel.

On arriving at the hotel, he told the hall porter that he had come to "the dinner," and was shown into a room, full of people.

He looked round, but could not discover one familiar face. However, not to be outdone, he pointed out Harris, Kipling and Hall Caine to his lady friend, pointing vaguely into the crowd.

Next moment up came a steward and asked him whose guest he was.

"I'm not a guest at all," he replied. "I'm a member."

To his confusion he then discovered, and so did his companion, that they had been shown into the wrong room, where the annual dinner of the London Meat Traders' Association was being held!

The well known author was Reginald Auberon, who tells this story in his new book, "The Nineteen Hundreds."

Another capital yarn is about George Gossmith's father. A certain play, in which the elder Gossmith was playing, proved an awful failure on the first night, and the

Portugal May Seek Internal Loan.

LISBON.—In submitting to the Chamber his proposal for raising an internal loan of four million pounds sterling, the Minister of Finance emphasizes his view that Portugal must bring about her own salvation by means of internal taxes, to be borne by all classes alike; the stabilization of the secudo, and a gradual amortization to reduce the national deficit.

Furthermore there must be abstention from continued issue of notes, and a gradual withdrawal of those already in circulation. The new loan is to be a consolidated loan, bearing interest at six per cent. payable quarterly, and will be secured on the general revenues of the state. It is also to be free from all taxation, either present or future, and the proceeds are to be applied, in the first place, to meeting the general expenditure of the state for the year 1922-23.

The negotiations for a loan in France, based on an arrangement affecting the tobacco and match monopolies, do not appear to be affording much prospect of success.

gallery got restive. Gossmith, unable to stand the noise any longer, shouted out, "You're very funny up there."

"More than you are down there."

"More than you are down there," then, guv'nor," came back the reply.

Europe's Ancient Nations

FOREFATHERS OF FAMOUS 'PEOPLES OF TO-DAY.'

The great European nations of to-day are descended from many different peoples. Those of you who have learnt Roman history will have read about the barbarian tribes who lived in various parts of Central and Western Europe and in the end mastered Rome.

The people living in Rome and Italy became known as Latins, from Latium, in which the great State of Rome was founded. The Latins had dark hair and sallow complexions, but the barbarian tribes who invaded Rome were very different, being tall, fair-haired, and blue-eyed. There were several branches of these blue-eyed barbarian peoples, but the name of Teutons or Germans was pretty generally applied to them all.

From Black Sea to Baltic. The inhabitants of Britain, Scandinavia, Denmark, and Holland all come from Teutonic stock. The best known of the Teutonic tribes were the Goths, the Vandals, and the Franks. Other Teutons were the Angles and the Jutes.

In the fourth century after Christ the Goths had become the leading barbarian race of the non-Roman part of Europe, their kingdom extending from the Black Sea to the Baltic. They became masters of Italy in A.D. 476, when they brought the western Roman Empire to an end.

The Franks were a Germanic people who settled to the north of the western Goths in the north of France. Clovis, their first King, drove the Goths out of Gaul, as France was then called, in A.D. 481, and so France took its name from its Frankish conquerors, just as England took its name from the Angles.

The famous Charlemagne became King of the Franks in A.D. 771, and made many conquests in Europe. The descendants of Charlemagne, however, were not able to keep his empire together. In A.D. 887 the Frankish kingdom was divided in two parts; the eastern part was afterwards known as Germany, and the western part France.

The Huns were a Mongolian race which invaded Europe during the fourth century. They made war on the Goths and drove them south into Spain, Italy, and the Balkan Peninsula.

A Cruel Race.

The Vandals were a Teutonic race which helped to cause the fall of Rome in the fifth century. In A.D. 455 they reached Rome, and destroyed most of the beautiful works of art in that city. Nowadays we call destruction of beautiful things "vandalism."

The Celts were one of the most ancient races of Europe. There are two well-known branches of the Celtic people which remain with us to-day—the inhabitants of Wales and the Gaels of the Scottish Highlands.

The inhabitants of Italy, Spain and France are still called Latin races, because, although they were conquered by the Teutons, the Latin language came to be adopted by the conquerors as well as the conquered, for the modern French, Spanish and Italian languages are all derived from Latin. Latin habits and customs also prevail.

Wanted to Make Sure.

Little Peggy gazed long and thoughtfully at the young man who was calling on her grown-up sister, Joan.

"May I climb up on your knee, Mr. Smith?" she said at last.

"Why, of course, dear," smiled the young man, who wanted to make himself popular with the family. "Want to pull my hair, eh?"

"No, I want to see if I can find that word."

"Word! What word?" asked the puzzled visitor.

"I heard daddy say this morning that if ever a young man had the word 'idiot' written all over his face it was you!"

Curiosities in Words.

A HEATHEN MEANT ORIGINALLY A DWELLER ON A HEATH.

By the word "discuss" the ancient Romans meant a small round metal plate like a coin.

In England the word has become dish; in France it becomes deus, meaning a raised platform; in Italy it becomes desco, from which we get desk; and scientists have made out of it the word disc. Four descendants of one verbal ancestor.

This, and much more curious information of the kind is contained in "Stories that Words Tell Us," by Elizabeth O'Neill, M.A.

Probably you did not know, for instance, that Shakespeare was the first man to use the word "hurry," and that he also coined the word "dwindle." Spenser made the word "elfin," and Milton coined "pandemonium."

"Parson" and "person" are the same word, for the letter "a" was once pronounced like "e." We still find survivals of this in place names like Derby, Hartford, and Berkshire. Because he was usually the most distinguished individual in the parish the clergyman became "the person," or as we now say, the parson.

A heathen meant originally a dweller on a heath. The early Christians lived for the most part in cities and towns, and the people who dwelt outside these on the moors and heaths were the last to come into the fold. Hence the application of the word to all those who eventually remained outside it.

The old meaning of many words have changed greatly in course of time. Thus, "crafty" and "artful," now used as terms of reproach, originally signified a man skilled in his particular craft or art.

The word "prude" conveyed originally no idea of affected modesty, but meant merely prudent. An "officious" person was one who dealt in offices of kindness. "Leer" once meant only a simple look.

Up till as late as the middle of the seventeenth century to call a man an "idiot" did not necessarily imply that he was not mentally fit, but merely that he was just an ordinary private citizen.

Jeremy Taylor, the great divine, used the word in this sense when he wrote: "Humility is a duty in great ones as well as in idiots."

Hazardous Journey

OF ADVENTUROUS BRITISH GENERAL.

CALCUTTA (Associated Press)—Brigadier General George Pereira, of the British army, gave active service in both the South African and European wars, and in spite of these experiences and his 58 years, the love of adventure in this soldier was so strong that he started alone two years ago on a 7,000 mile journey of the utmost difficulty. So far as the records go, no man had ever before made the trip. The General selected for his adventure. He covered half the distance on foot, and is now in a Calcutta hospital recovering from the effects of some of his hardships. After the Armistice General Pereira was sent to Peking as military attaché to the British embassy. In January of 1921 he was ready to go back to England, but his sporting instinct had been aroused by tales of the difficulty of travel through certain sections of China and he received permission to make his way overland to Calcutta.

VARIED TRANSPORT.

The first lap of his journey was luxurious, a first-class coach from Peking to Tientsin. Thence a Chinese cart carried him to Shansi. When he had crossed the Wahang he proceeded partly by train to Looyang, where he was the guest of General Wu Peifu, who was busily engaged at the time leading a widespread political and revolutionary movement against the constituted authority. General Pereira visited Sianfu, the old capital of the country, and climbed Tee Hwasuan, one of the sacred mountains of China. This climb was extremely difficult. The mountain consists of great rocks, with steep, zigzag paths winding upward between them. The paths are cut into the rocks in the form of irregular steps, some of which are a foot or two in height. At the sides of these paths are precipitous drops of 2,000 feet or more. The climb had to be made with the assistance of iron chains.

AN ARMY OF BRIGANDS.

The General's itinerary then took him through the bandit infested provinces of Shensi and Sze-chuen. In one of these provinces there are reported to be 50,000 brigands. Just before General Pereira went through a missionary had been captured by these devils. These two provinces, according to General Pereira's report, are in a state of utter chaos. They do not recognize the authority of Peking. It is practically impossible to travel through either of them without making some arrangement with the brigands. General Pereira visited the magistrate, who discussed the matter with the brigand leaders. The traveller was then allowed to proceed unmolested. A journey was next made into the Tachientu district, a region of China inhabited by Tibetan tribes. General Pereira from there worked his way northward through more country inhabited by these tribes, and then up the river to Kwassu. Here he met Prince Chori, who has a vast tract of territory under his jurisdiction and is the most important Tibetan prince in the province. Here the General spent some time in hunting with the prince.

BACK TO CIVILIZATION.

Then came a tedious journey across northeastern Tibet, and General Pereira says it was a great relief to get into Yekundo, where he found a few shops and could replenish his wardrobe. Here he met Madame de la French Biddis, who was the only European encountered during the entire journey across Tibet to Gyantse, which is a British trade centre. From Lhasa, the journey to Calcutta lay along a fairly familiar route, and the going was easier and more pleasant. The traveler was entertained, and aided on his journey by the British residents at Yatung and Ganotok. General Pereira expects soon to leave hospital, entirely recovered, and as fit as ever.

Restoration of German Shipping.

The Norddeutscher Lloyd have made another big step forward towards the restoration of German overseas steamship services to the level which they had attained before the war. It was announced in New York a few days ago that the Company intend to inaugurate regular weekly sailings between Germany and the United States early in April, instead of fortnightly as at present. An official statement issued by the Norddeutscher Lloyd on the subject contains the following: "The weekly service will be established from New York on April 11, with the sailing of the Syltitz, to be followed by the Bremen on April 18. The addition of the Bremen and the Munchen the latter leaving New York on June 6 for the first time, will eventually give the company five steamers in the Transatlantic service. The Bremen has been entirely reconditioned to take place the central committee notifies the local associations, who are responsible for nominating their own candidate. A sub-committee of the local association first invites their representative at the first election. Should he decline, they usually invite some other well-known local man. If no local man is willing or able to accept the invitation, the local association applies to the central committee for a candidate. Then, after examining its books, the central committee recommends one or more possible candidates, who go down to the constituency to be interviewed by the sub-committee.

America Consuming Dried Grapes.

LONDON—Speaking to members of the staff of the British Empire Exhibition, Major Belcher, who has just returned from an empire tour, referred to the big trade in dried fruit in South Africa. He said a large trade was being done in dried grapes with the United States. Inside every packet were instructions for the erection of a private distillery, which probably accounted for the growing demand by the Americans for dried grapes.

How M. P.'s Are Chosen.

Few people know how the man for whom they vote at a general election is chosen to represent his party. A prospective candidate must be of age and a natural born subject of the British Crown, or naturalised by a private Act of Parliament. A certificate of naturalisation issued by the Home Secretary, which entitles a man to the franchise, does not enable him to be elected to Parliament. A bankrupt is disqualified for election until either the bankruptcy has been annulled or his discharge has been ordered by the court, together with a certificate showing that misfortune—not misconduct—is responsible for his bankruptcy.

Why Rockets Rise.

If you could see inside a rocket you would find the lower part of the case filled with powder, a chemical mixture that will burn at an enormous rate, and in doing so will produce a very large quantity of gas. The great heat generated by this burning mixture expands the gas and still further increases its volume, till it is bursting to get out of the rocket. At the bottom end of the rocket is a hole through which the gas rushes in to the air. Now the air at the mouth of the rocket strongly resents being kicked out of the way by this rushing stream of gas; it takes a moment to "get a move on," so to speak. But the gas in the case hasn't got a moment to spare; it simply must get out, so it kicks—hard.

How M. P.'s Are Chosen.

If you had on a pair of roller skates, and held an open umbrella in front of you, you could push it away from you slowly without feeling any resistance; but, if you thrust hard at the umbrella the air would resist the sudden movement so strongly that you would be rolled backwards on your skates. That is just what happens to the rocket; the stream of gas spreads out at the mouth of the case and thrusts hard at the air below it and at the rocket above. As the air won't move quickly enough, the rocket must get out of the way. And it does—quickly!

If you have not reached the point where you perceive that two propositions exactly opposed to each other may both be true, you have yet something to learn.

Evening Telegram

The Evening Telegram, Ltd., Proprietors.

Thursday, February 22, 1923.

PREPARING.

The opposing political forces, which will face each other at the polls when the Government is ready to announce the day of nomination and that of election, are getting into line for the forthcoming battle of the ballots. With the election of Mr. J. R. Bennett as leader of the Opposition party, as at present constituted, in succession to Sir Michael Cashin, it may be expected that a new strengthening of the ranks of that party will be the first move toward reorganization, and there is much to be done in this direction. The Government party already has announced some of its candidates, which is evidence of a near election. Having all the cards in their hands, the members of the Administration can call the play to suit their own convenience. In other words they can put on the election when it is agreeable to them. Nor is it to be expected that in this particular matter—or any other—that they will study the wishes or desires of the Opposition, so that the latter have no time to waste in preparing for the campaign which must inevitably ensue. The Telegram has been referred to in the Government press as predicting dates for the election. This is absolutely incorrect, but it serves to show the quality of the literary matter which will be dished out in volume by supporters of the Squires-Cooker party. So far as the Telegram is concerned it does not care a snap of the finger whether the election is called for three months or six months hence. The political doctrine consistently followed by this paper, will be adhered to, and whatever assistance can be given to a sincere effort to destroy for ever in Newfoundland the menace of Cokerism will be given gladly and cheerfully. The movement of the United Fishermen in the Northern districts is calculated to have the desired effect in the sections where it is in active operation. That it is spreading throughout the settlements and towns of the North from the coast line to the railway is signal proof of its popularity. Notwithstanding the announcement of the removal of the 25 per cent. super duty tax, which is merely an election dodge, the United Fishermen have not been hoodwinked by this reduction. Their campaign since has been, if anything, more aggressive, and they are grimly determined to accomplish the whole work for which the movement was inaugurated. With an election near at hand, their efforts will be redoubled, and the outcome thereof cannot be doubted.

Magistrate's Court.

Two city cabmen were summoned this morning for being drunk, and acting in a disorderly manner on the public street on the night of the 17th inst. Both were convicted and fined $2 each or five days imprisonment. A resident of the Higher Levels for non-support was ordered to get work through the Employment Bureau to-day. Should he not have any inclination to support his family, a term of 30 days in the penitentiary will be meted out to him.

MEETING HELD AT BADGER.

The following report of a meeting held by the United Fishermen's delegates at Badger was received yesterday:—
Badger, Feb. 21.—A very enthusiastic meeting was held here on February 21st, by delegates Winsor and Carter of the United Fishermen's Movement, with great success. A large attendance showed the approval of the great work with reference to the reduction in taxation. A committee was appointed to help the good work as we realize that something must be done to help the tax payers and trust this movement will enable us to make our dollar the value of a few cents more.

Obituary.

SIR THOMAS GEORGE RODDICK.

The death of Sir Thomas G. Roddick, the well known physician of St. John's, was announced in the public press despatch yesterday, removed from our midst one of Newfoundland's most eminent sons, while from the medical profession, one of the most skilful and best known physicians in British North America. The deceased was born in Hr. Grace on July 31st, 1846, and was the son of John Irving Roddick, who was one time Principal of the Grammar School at that town. Sir Thomas Roddick received his early education at the Grammar School under the tuition of his father. Later he entered the Trinity Normal School, and in the year 1865 he entered McGill University, Montreal, and with careful devotion to studies he soon ranked as one of the most scholarly pupils of that institution, and in less than three years he captured the Holmes Gold Medal and final prize. He graduated M.D., C.M., in 1868. In 1868 he was made an Hon. LL.D. of Edinburgh University, and Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. He returned to Montreal, and after graduation was appointed House Surgeon of the Montreal General Hospital, which he held for a period of six years. Sir Thomas was twice elected to Parliament as member for St. Andrew's Division, Montreal, in the years 1896 and 1900. The deceased was twice married, but leaves no children. Two sisters, Misses Emma and Maggie survive. Sir Thomas Roddick was looked upon as Canada's special leader in the medical profession, the members of which will mourn his loss. Newfoundland, by the death of Sir Thomas, loses one of her most illustrious sons.

Mercantile Hockey.

ROYAL STORES THE VICTORS.

The opening game of the Mercantile Hockey League took place last night in the Prince's Rink, when the Royal Stores defeated Baird's by a score of 7 goals to 1. Upwards of five hundred fans and supporters of the respective teams turned out to witness the clash and although the exhibition was only fair, there was plenty of excitement. Mr. J. M. Tobin controlled the game. The Royal Stores players proved altogether too strong for their opponents. In the first period Gillis and Kennedy scored, and increased their tally to five in the second, when Crane Marshall, and Kennedy did the needful. In the last period Geo. Quick scored for Bairds after a few minutes of play, while Crane and Marshall increased the Royal Stores score before the contest closed. The final goals sounded leaving the Royal Stores the victors by 7-1.

The second game of the Mercantile series will be played this evening at 7 o'clock, when Harvey's and Knowling's will make their first appearance.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

To-night's game between Harvey & Co. Ltd. and G. Knowling, Ltd., promises to be a thriller. Both teams have been practising hard, and no doubt it will be a battle all the way through for the honors. The following will be the line-up:—
HARVEY'S—Goal, E. Cornick; defence, R. Bailey, J. Kenny; forwards, F. Martin, A. Barrett, F. Kelly; subs, H. Carter, J. Walsh, A. Heale.
KNOWLING'S—Goal, C. Thomas; defence, J. Percay, F. Brown; forwards, G. Badcock, S. Knight, G. Snow; subs, Meadus, Bancroft, Kelly.

THURSDAY, Feb. 22.
Kruscheu Salts have become very popular for a certain group of troubles, a group including rheumatism, gout, lumbago, etc., some of the most painful disorders that affect humanity. These salts eliminate the uric acid poisons which are the cause of these troubles, and when the blood is free of these poisons the pain gradually disappears and the limbs again become supple. As we hear it, Kruscheu Salts have had results almost marvellous over these diseases, and there are many who are thankful for the relief they bring. Price 30-cents a bottle.

TEMPERATURE.—The thermometer at the Valley Nurseries last night showed 18 degrees of frost and this morning's reading showed 15 degrees.

"Daddy Long Legs."

DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCE.

A more delightful audience than the one which attended the presentation of "Daddy Long Legs" at the Casino Theatre last night could not be imagined of the production. Mrs. J. Baxter, who is so well known on the local stage, has charge of the production, and her executive ability was admirably displayed in the assignment of the different roles. "Daddy Long Legs" may be classed as a sensational love story intermixed with sufficient humor to balance the play and leave a satisfied, feeling at the final curtain. The story centres around the life of an orphan girl, Judy, an inmate of the John Grier Home. During the annual visit of the Trustees, Judy is accused by the Matron, Mrs. Lippett, of being disobedient and impatient. She defends herself, but the Trustees decide that she must leave the institution. Jervis Pendleton, who is interested in philanthropic work, had his sympathy aroused for Judy, and through her friend Miss Pritchard arranged that she be given a college education. His identity was, however, to be kept secret. Judy, anxious to know her ward, was permitted to see him by his shadow. From it she learned his name "Daddy Long Legs." Such is a brief synopsis of the first act, and one could not think of much humor in such a situation; but there are the Trustees, particularly John Godman (Mr. Karl Trappell). His wonderment at the conduct of Judy, who was bold enough to make a sketch of a Trustee, provokes rounds of laughter. Then there is a boy inmate, Freddie Perkins, who plays the prank which causes all the storm. Master Jimmie Bradshaw sustains the role of Freddie Perkins with a naturalness that is beyond criticism. In the second act Judy goes to college. She becomes a favorite; particularly with Jervis's niece, Julia, with whom she is a room mate. Ostensibly to see his niece, but really to get an idea of how Judy is progressing, Pendleton visits the college, and is entertained by the girls in his study. Judy attracts him by her grace and beauty. He arranges for her to spend the vacation at Loch Willow Farm, the home of his old nurse. The third act sees Jervis a frequent visitor at the farm. Here he declares his love to Judy without disclosing his identity as her "Daddy Long Legs." She refuses his proffer on account of his aristocratic ancestry, and her own association with the Grier House. In the final act Jervis clears up all the uncertainties thru the office of Judy's friend, Miss Pritchard, and the curtain drops with the lovers embracing. The part of Judy was faultlessly portrayed by Miss Mary Ryan. Her acting was frequently applauded, and during the third act she was presented with a handsome bouquet. The arduous role of Jervis Pendleton, taken by Mr. King, had not the slightest suggestion of over emphasis. Miss Kathleen Fraser as Sally McBride, and room mate of Judy, acted true to life, and the role could not be bettered if written for her. The acting of Miss Madeline Kavanagh as Julia Pendleton was exceptionally good. Of Mrs. Hutton as Miss Pritchard and of Mrs. J. Baxter as Mrs. Lippett, the Matron of the Grier Home, there is no need to mention. Miss Susie Crane as Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. F. Bradshaw as Mrs. Sample, and the orphan girls, Misses Ellen Kieley, Mary Halley, Mary Baxter, Sheila, and Miss King, gave excellent impersonations, although they had but minor roles. Mr. Percy Jardine as Jimmie McBride sustained the reputation he has already made. As for Mr. T. S. Cliff and F. Bradshaw, who were on the Board of Trustees, their makeup alone would provoke a laugh. A pleasing feature of the night's performance was the excellent music rendered by the Mt. Cashin Band, under Capt. Arthur Butler. The performance will be repeated tonight, and no doubt a full house will be present.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir.—As Mr. Gordon Ash wishes to be dissociated with the letter which appeared in the Telegram on Monday last, I comply with his request, and would say that said letter was written by me long after he had left for Petty Harbor, permission to sign his name (without any stipulated reservation) having been previously given to me. I now assume sole responsibility for that letter, and in the connection, wish to say to the unknown cabman, with whose name I am still unacquainted, that so far as I am concerned the incident is closed. Yours truly,

FELTDIANS ENTER PROTEST.
The Executive of the Newfoundland Hockey Association and Club Delegates are holding a meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the office of the President, when the protest entered by the Feltdians in their game against the Guards will be considered. The matter of arranging a series of games with a Canadian team against the City will also be brought up for discussion.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

HIS ELECTION DIARY.

Feb. 20.—Up betimes, and the maid coming with the morning sheet, I did see by it how the Opposition make Mr. Bennett their leader, and a thing that many did expect to happen. To Water St. and there I find all men's minds filled with the news of the election, nor have any two of them the same rumor to relate. Going to my bookseller's to buy me a quill, the clerk did ask me the political news, and I so enraged that I rush from the shop, and will not go there again. So to the Curling Club, and a mighty strange thing to see how well the men wield their brooms; as well, indeed, as any housewife. They did persuade me to play a game with them, but I find the stones very heavy, nor can I throw them well, but always too short or too far. The game a good one, however, and I must learn to play it well.

S. A. Entertainment.

GOOD SUN REALIZED FOR POOR.
An enjoyable concert and social was held last night in No. 2 Salvation Army Barracks, before a very enthusiastic audience. Col. Martin occupied the Chair, and in his opening remarks gave everyone present a real hearty welcome. The object of the affair, he said, was to raise funds for the poor and needy; and it was gratifying for him to see that an ever increasing audience attended than was anticipated. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., and every item was splendidly rendered. Special mention must be made of the male quartette from the Adventist Church, who contributed an excellent number. A feature of the entertainment was the singing of the Misses Barter, and Mrs. W. Howell's recitation. During the evening refreshments were served by the energetic ladies of the Home League and a very handsome sum was realized for the worthy object for which the affair was promoted.

Subpoenas Issued.

CASE SET FOR TO-MORROW.
The charge preferred under the Delinquent Children's Act, against Peter Nolan of Avondale will likely be heard in the Magistrate's Court to-morrow afternoon. Constable Devine, who has been in town the past couple of days, has gone back to his station with subpoenas for a number of witnesses.

Sealers Getting Ready.

SHIPS SAIL MARCH 7th.
S.S. Seal is now at Balne Johnston's wharf having stores put on board for the coming sealery. In all probability eight steamers will sail this year, although it is not yet definitely decided about S.S. Sagoda. The Viking will sail for the Gull about the 1st of March. The ships for the front will sail on the 7th March.

Goes Campaigning.

MR. COAKER WILL TOUR NORTH.
It is learned that Hon. W. F. Coaker, who has been in town for the past few days, is leaving for the Northward on Saturday to begin an intensive campaign. He has signified his intention of personally visiting all the Northern Districts in the hope of stemming the tide which the United Fishermen's Movement has set against him. It is also authoritatively stated that Mr. Coaker will not accept a cabinet seat should he be returned to the Assembly by Bonavista. A belt man.

SHIP WILL COME TO ST. JOHN'S.

CAPTAIN REPORTS MUCH ICE.
Ice conditions improved sufficiently yesterday to allow S. S. Portia to proceed on her run west, the ship having left Trepassey yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock after making three previous unsuccessful attempts to get clear of the jam. Capt. Coaker reported that there was a solid field of ice near Cape Pine which prevented the steamer from getting through.

Powerful Melodrama at The Nickel.

GETTRIDE MCCOY IN "OUT OF THE DARKNESS."

The attraction for the remaining three days of the week is a big six-act melodramatic offering, entitled "Out of the Darkness," featuring charming Gertrude McCoy in the leading role. The main reason why this is a powerful drama is that the picture is made by the famous house of Gaumont, which has its headquarters over in Paris. The Gaumont people are widely noted for producing films that stand out as heavy attractions—something out of the ordinary. The picture at the Nickel to-night is a beautiful of thrills and excitement and containing just enough comedy to relieve the seriousness of the plot. The star, Miss McCoy, needs no introduction to St. John's as she has been seen here many times before at this theatre.

The current episode of "The Hope Diamond Mystery," featuring Grace Hammond is also billed, besides another extra cartoon picture. Watch for Monday's big special—when the Nickel springs it—it's good, take it from me.

War Memorial Models.

WILL BE EXHIBITED AT BOARD OF TRADE.
Three cases of scale models of the proposed war memorial, which arrived from England by S. S. Digby, were opened at the Board of Trade Rooms to-day. They are being assembled for exhibition and will be ready in the course of a day or so. Unfortunately the statuary of the largest model became somewhat wrecked in transit, but it is understood it can be assembled in its original state. The models are on a scale of 1 inch to 5 feet, and they were constructed by G. H. Kitchen, Architect, of Winchester, England. The designs are the combined work of Major T. Nangle and Basil Gotto, a well known sculptor.

DOES HIS TWENTY MILES.
WELLAND, Ont.—Wilson Chambers, 72 years old, is as fond of skating as he was half a century ago, and he still has the pair of Dutch skates used by his father. Every winter for 55 years, when ice formed to safe thickness on the Chippewa river, Mr. Chambers has skated from his home at River Bend to Welland, a distance of about ten miles. The ice was fine and clear of snow this winter, and Mr. Chambers made the round trip of twenty miles in an hour and a half.

ANNUAL MEETING — OFFICERS ELECTED.
 The 27th annual meeting of the Evangelical Irish Society was held in the Club Rooms last night. At 9 o'clock President Higgins called the meeting to order and the meeting was formally opened. The minutes of the previous meeting being read and confirmed, the officers' report was presented and adopted. Sir M. C. O'Keefe, T. Power, J. C. O'Keefe, T. Coady as checkers and the election resulted as follows:
 President—W. J. Higgins, K.C.
 Vice-President—John C. Pippy.
 Asst. Vice-President—Wm. J. O'Keefe.
 Asst. Vice-President—M. J. O'Keefe.
 Treasurer—John M. Walsh.
 Secretary—Alan Doyle.
 Chairman of Schools—J. P. Crotty.
 Chairman of Charities—J. B. Chaney.
 Chairman of Review and Correspondence—M. J. Savage.
 Secretary of Schools—Cyril Merner.
 The following were then passed in connection with the Archbishops' Clergy, the Christian Brothers, and the retiring officers.
 The following Committees were then appointed:

 Charities—M. F. Aylward, J. Doyle.
 Review and Correspondence—Wm. Hon. F. McNamara.
 Schools—W. E. Brophy, J. M. Doyle, T. J. Ring, James E. J. Brophy.
 Thirty members were then nominated for the Literary and Amusement Committee, and of this number fifteen were elected at the next meeting, which takes place on Sunday.
 The meeting was then adjourned for Sunday after Last Mass. The year has been a very successful one for the Society in every way, socially, and in the industry of its members, and the Committee Executive are deserving of the compliments paid them at the meeting. The Society is looking forward to another big year for 1923.

Charity Concert Well Patronized.
MEMORABLE PROGRAMME RENDERED.
 A Charity Concert held last night at the Victoria Hall under the auspices of the Royal Oak Lodge, L.O.A., was largely attended and standing room was scarcely available. Past Master Thos. Noseworthy acted as emcee and opened the performance with a few brief remarks, explaining the object of the concert. His address extended to all those present a most cordial welcome. The Grand Guards full band was in attendance and rendered excellent music throughout the evening. At the conclusion of the programme a vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. A. J. Ivany on behalf of the Entertainment Committee of Royal Oak Lodge and was seconded by Mr. J. B. O'Keefe. The following is the programme:
 Chairman's Remarks—T. Noseworthy, P.W.M.

GOD SAVE THE KING.
English Women Insist on Well Fitting Monocles.
 The monocle is being worn among professional and fashionable women of London this winter to such an extent that it threatens to supersede the lorgnette and other spectacles. The feminine monocle is rimmed with thin shell, white gold or platinum. An optician said women who wear glasses prefer the monocle for its "becoming effect." In order that it may be becoming, and not a face screwed up to keep it from falling out, the feminine monocle is made to fit with precision. Thus wrinkles are avoided. The monocles when at hand are suspended on black silk or bands of ribbon in rainbow colors. Baby's Soap wears well and good service down to the neck. —(16122)E

Historical and Exciting.

(H. F. SHORTIS)

Now that our annual hunt for the "swiles" is drawing near, the lure of the frozen pane is getting into my blood, the same as it is with so many of my countrymen. It is undoubtedly a young man's job, but none of us wish to think that we are growing old, and that we cannot (to use the vernacular) "cocky" across from pan to pan as we did when we were boys. As one of my old friends said to me not long ago "It is a pity we cannot be boys all the time." In looking up some of my old manuscripts I came across some interesting old documents relating to the period when Englishmen, Frenchmen and Spaniards went hunting for seals and walrus in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, over three hundred years ago, and as so very little is known about those far-back days I will try and give the readers of the Telegram all the particulars in my power. Those times date back to the very first discoveries of our country, but it is my firm belief that the Biscayans, as they were called, frequented these waters long before John Cabot made his famous voyage. The very name of our splendid harbor, Port aux Basques, at the entrance of the Gulf on the east side, and Sydney, the best harbor on the other side, which previous to 1800 was otherwise called Spaniard's Bay, is positive proof that the Spaniards were the first to prosecute the fishery in these localities on an extensive scale as early as the days of our country. The headquarters for the walrus, or the "morse," as they are called in the old manuscripts, was at the Magdalen Islands—then called Ramea Islands, and I have no doubt, "morse" is the Basque name for these animals. Another place that they frequented was the island, now well known as Ramea, off our Southern Coast, as occasionally their teeth can still be found there. In 1524 Jacques Cartier, on his first voyage, after calling at Catalina (then called St. Catherine's) passed through the Straits, and after sailing south he sighted the Magdalen Islands, and named one Bryon Island. He saw beasts as large as oxen, which had great teeth in their mouths like elephant teeth and live in the sea.

THE ENGLISH TAKE A HAND.

In 1589 George Drake of Apam, England, is said to be the first Englishman to prosecute this fishery within the Gulf of St. Lawrence, which the old chronicle says "was a gainful trade, worked by the Bretoners of St. Malo and the Basques of St. Jean de Luz, within the Straits of St. Peter, which is the entrance between Newfoundland and Cape Breton." In 1594 we have an account of Richard Jones of the British ship "Grace" of 35 tons, but he must have been late in the season as this fishery is all over in April, May and June during the breeding season. In St. George's Bay he found two large Biskaine ships, which had been lost three years previously, with some 700 or 800 whales. Only three Spaniards had escaped from the wrecks, and were brought back to St. Jean de Luz. (Prose in his history mentions that over 300 Basques lost their lives one year, being caught by early ice in the Gulf, and perished during the winter. This was probably the same occurrence), Richard Jones then proceeded to Placentia where he found between 60 and 70 sail from St. Jean de Luz and Sillburo, which is the port adjoining at the head of the Bay of Biscay. In 1597 Charles Leigh of London fitted out two ships "Hopewell" 120 tons, Wm. Crofton, master, and "Chancewell" 70 tons, Stephen Benner, master at the sole charge of ber of fifteen hundred morse, or sea oxen, amounting small and great. From thence the coast trendeth four leagues to the west and the north west, unto Isle Hupp, which is twenty leagues in circuit, and is like the edge of a knife—upon it there is neither wood nor grass. There are morses upon it, but they be hard to be taken.

SAFETY FIRST.

Still returned, so we sent a boat with men and got the victory over them, but our men, contrary to our instructions, started to pillage the Basques. We sent another boat to forbid our men, but the crew were more anxious to pillage than the first. Whereupon Capt. Leigh went himself and took the goods away from his men and returned them to the owners—save the powder and ammunition." Capt. Leigh was certainly working on the idea of "safety first," and we must remember that England was then only getting over the effect of the "Great Spanish Armada," and the whole country was undoubtedly following the vigorous policy of "Good Queen Bess," but from subsequent events it looks to me that Capt. Leigh had arrived too late on the scene for a successful sealing or walrus voyage, and like many more in our own time, was not adverse to taking a few pans of seals rather than return with empty hands.

goods from the "Chancewell," which we demanded back, and on their refusal, we had a fight. The Spaniards were now largely reinforced by their friends in the next harbor. "Mr. Charles Leigh and his partner were taken prisoners by them, and they tried to seize our vessel, but did not manage it. During the fight Mr. Leigh and Harwick and the crew managed to secure the shallop which was alongside the Spaniard and escaped to our ship, the "Hopewell," which was outside. The following morning we were minded to go onto the harbor and teach these Spaniards a good lesson, but as the wind was blowing strong in a contrary direction, we sailed for St. Lawrence in Newfoundland, where we had good hopes of finding another Spanish vessel."

CAPTURED A SPANIARD.

"July 18th.—We entered Little St. Lawrence and surprised a Spaniard who surrendered to us. Several other Basque ships came to their assistance and captured some of our men, who were fishing in their boat, and threatened to kill them unless we gave up their ship. We gave her up and they towed her to Great St. Lawrence. The same day we took three of the Spaniards' shallops and the master of one of their ships prisoners."

SAFETY FIRST.

"July 22nd.—Capt. Lawrence sent our men abroad, and we released their men, except one Spaniard, their boat-awain, which we kept as a pilot. We had advice of more Spaniards at St. Mary's, and we at once set sail for that port. We found one ship from Rochelle (France) and one ship from Belle Isle (Bay of Biscay) of 200 tons. We forced the ship of Belle Isle to yield into our mercy."

"August 2nd.—We took water and put to sea with the purpose of going to (old) Perlican, which is northward, and where we expected another prize, but we found that the sails and ropes of our Spanish ship were old and rotten, so that we decided to return at once to England."

"August 27th.—Reached the British Channel."

"September 5th.—Mr. Leigh and Mr. Herwick landed at the Isle of Wight, but the two ships proceeded to London, where they arrived safely shortly after."

Fog at Sea.

BY MEANS OF A COMPLICATED CODE OF SIREN AND BELL SIGNALS, SHIPS TRY TO AVERT DISASTER IN "THICK WEATHER."

Fog is the seaman's greatest dread. Far rather would he encounter the terrors of hurricane than navigate a crowded channel in the grip of a close sea-fog.

It was a great disaster that revealed the defects of the old methods of signalling the presence of rocks and led to a thorough investigation of the whole system of warning during fog at sea. This disaster was the loss of the Schiller, which, in 1875, ran on the Retarrier Ledges, Sicily, with the loss of several hundreds of lives.

Experiments were then put in hand by the Government under the direction of Professor Tyndall, and he discovered that the blasting of gun-cotton was the best warning and carried farther than any other sound. Since then on the Bishop Rock, near which the Schiller sank, two charges of gun-cotton are fired every two minutes during fog.

At Flamborough, another danger spot, a rocket throwing a blast of gun-cotton six hundred feet into the air has been found to be successful.

Ships have a complicated code for letting each other know their direction and whereabouts, but in spite of this, navigators are never at ease during fog. "Wind-jammers" use the fog-horn proper, a bellows-like contrivance worked by hand, and sounded once every two minutes if on a star-board tack, twice if on a port tack, and three times if sailing before the wind.

The steamer sounds a long blast every two minutes and two short blasts every two minutes, and their captains detect being near their sailing brethren, as, owing to more frequent signals of the latter, it is difficult to ascertain the number of ships in the neighbourhood. One-sailed vessels "proceeding slowly" will sound to the cautious skipper like a whole fleet sailing in every possible direction.

IT RUNS "IN STREAKS."

A vessel towing another sounds one long and two short blasts every two minutes, and—making things more confusing—so does a vessel not under control, one of the most terrible things for other ships to encounter either in fog or clear weather.

Shippers not under the obligation of keeping a time-table may give up the task of navigation and drop anchor. Then their signal changes; it becomes the sounding of the ship's bell for five seconds every minute.

Seamen say that the most nerve-racking encounter in a fog is to run in with a fleet of "drifters." These vessels give one blast of the foghorn and a ring of the bell every minute, the resultant noise from every one of the compass being enough to any skipper's hair grey. As there is the danger of running down a steamer, there is a risk of cutting away a travel and getting one's prop fouled.

Fogs at sea seem to exorcise fish ingenuity in the harvesting of gators. They drop suddenly, and run in "streaks" of fog, and young fish grow tired of the fresh beauties of the sea, and bound him like a mouse was jolted on in a boat and went into a blast, but all that evens up, with a faraway cry, and paid no attention. CAPT LEIGH CONTINUES HIS STORY.

On further examination I found that one of the ships was French and the other was Spanish. A mutiny started on our ship, as half of our men insisted on taking possession of this ship, but this was prevented by 300 Frenchmen, with the help of 300 of the native savages, who came to their assistance and were prepared to fight our men. These Frenchmen took Ralph Hall, our boat-awain and a boat's crew prisoners, and demanded the return of their powder. We considered discretion the better part of valor, and surrendered the powder to them, as it was our intention from the first. "Capt. Charles, master of the largest St. Malo ship now came aboard and demanded our great boat or shallop, which we had purchased while at Ferriland, claiming that it belonged to him." "Capt. Charles and 12 of his men were now on the deck of our vessel and while we were talking we were almost betrayed, as the boats tried to board us, but when we saw the treachery of our supposed friends, we threatened to fire on their ship, which discouraged them from their purpose. They did not return our boat-awain and crew, but demanded our big boat and ordered us out of the harbor. While we parleyed with them our boat-awain and crew jumped into a boat and returned to us. We now determined to be gone from there, as we were the weaker, and three vessels preparing to board us. We were moored by anchor from the shore, and asked them to cut it in the hawse and made sail."

CAPT LEIGH'S JOURNAL.

June 26th.—We arrived on the west side of Isle Monego for water (Cape Breton).

June 27th.—We met 8 men of the "Chancewell" our consort in a shallop, who told us that their ship had been wrecked on the Cape Breton coast. She ran on a rock, but they had got her off, and beached her, but the crews of some other vessels at once robbed and spoiled all they could lay hands on. We at once proceeded to the wreck of the "Chancewell" and found there a ship belonging to Sillburo. We secured what things we required and let them have what was left. We met the savages, who called this harbor "Clibo." We then went to Newport, which is three leagues from English Port. We found there another ship—the "Santa Maria" of St. Vincent. We found they had taken a lot of eyes were full of sadness, her lips were pale. "An enviable bride" murmured those who looked on.

Suddenly, just as they reached the door, a coach dashed up, drawn by four steaming horses, and before the bride knew what had happened she had been caught up in a strong man's arms.

In another second she was in the carriage, which drove rapidly away, leaving the open-mouthed bridegroom on the church steps, staring after them in absolute bewilderment.

"Open your eyes, my Hannah. Look at me, beloved one," murmured a familiar voice, and Hannah Lightfoot realised that she was in the arms of her royal lover.

Through the streets of Mayfair they clattered, and behind them only one woman knew and understood what had happened.

Elizabeth Chudleigh slipped away through the crowd, her eyes shining with laughter. She had kept her bargain with the Prince, although she had not been able to prevent the marriage, which she had arranged to please the Princess, his mother.

So her bread remained buttered still on both sides.

But the grocer was not going to be beaten like this. Selling a horse, or getting his dowry. At a turnpike he heard suddenly the voice of the postilion shout out the words "Royal Family," and to his amazement the turnpike gates opened, the coach swung, through without paying toll, and he was left behind gazing with astonishment after.

He wanted to woo and win like any ordinary lover. So at last, a little shy but none the less determined, he entered the linen-drawer's shop to make a purchase.

In these days royalty may do such things without question, but times were different then, and we may be sure he was quickly recognised.

Hannah was five or six years older than he, but George was tall and good-looking, and dressed in his gorgeous Court clothes, with powdered hair, a jewelled sword at his side, he seemed to her the Prince Charming that every girl has hidden away somewhere in her cupboard of dreams.

At last George made up his mind that he must get someone to help him win Hannah. He chose as his confederate Elizabeth Chudleigh, Maid of Honour to his mother.

She listened, smiled, and promised to help him. But at the moment she needed money badly for schemes of her own, so she saw here a chance of retrieving her fortunes, and explaining to the young Prince that to do all he asked would mean that she must bribe and use money wisely, she readily obtained all she asked.

Elizabeth Chudleigh kept her word for it paid her well to do so. She arranged that the two lovers should meet regularly but secretly at the house of an uncle of Hannah Lightfoot, who lived in Knightsbridge.

But the visits of the Prince soon became noticed, and it was not long before his mother heard the gossip of the Court. She consulted his tutor, Earl of Bute, and they decided that, although it was probably only a youthful infatuation, the affair must be stopped. Then they consulted Elizabeth Chudleigh and asked her aid.

The wily Elizabeth must have smiled, but she promised faithfully to do her best to break off the love affair on condition that expenses were allowed her.

At the same time the young Prince was paying her, so Elizabeth might be said to be butting her bread on both sides with a vengeance. But although she took money from the Earl of Bute, she wisely argued that one day George would be King himself, so she decided to let her influence hang on side of the lovers.

Meanwhile she assured the anxious mother that it needed only a husband for Hannah and the affair would be at an end. She also talked to the uncle at Knightsbridge and to Mr. Wheeler.

Soon a suitable husband was found, a young man called Arford, the son of a grocer. He, too, was younger than Hannah, but the bride of a dowry was offered him if he would marry the girl, and, being of a mercenary turn of mind, and seeing that Hannah was a very pretty girl, he readily consented.

Poor Hannah Lightfoot! She was sick at heart and miserable, and her uncle preached the quiet Quaker doctrines of patience and submission whilst tears dimmed her eyes.

She hated the sight of the shabby little grocer, whose mean eyes only lighted up at mention of money, but hoped against hope that something might happen to deny her marriage. All her prayers were that George, her George, might come to save her in-time.

When the morning of her wedding came she dressed herself in sober grey, wiped away her tears, and set out like a little martyr, prepared to do what was termed her duty, but knowing that she loved George and him alone for all eternity.

The marriage was solemnised, and Hannah walked down the aisle on her husband's arm, feeling as if she had been doomed to death. Her face was drained of its colour, her big blue

Insurance Companies. Prosperous Indians in British Dominions.

REFUSE POLICIES TO BOOTLEGGERS. PITTSBURGH.—While the regularly constituted authorities are experiencing some difficulty in locating wealthy bootleggers, important life insurance companies say they are finding them with comparative ease and, because of the "moral hazard" involved, are refusing to insure their lives.

Men who a few years ago were glad to carry policies covering a few thousands, are now making application for policies ranging from $50,000 to $100,000, and in some instances in excess of the latter amount. Unless they are well known and have a carefully investigated and very high business standing they are very carefully investigated, and if there is any suspicion as to the source of their incomes, they are rejected, it matters not how good a physical risk the examining physicians decide they may be.

Within the past few weeks one applicant who wanted a policy of $50,000 was rejected on the ground that he was not a good moral hazard, and a little later an applicant who wanted insurance to the amount of $100,000 was told he could not have it.

Other applications from other bootleggers have gone the same way, they say. "We count the moral hazard as something worth while," said an insurance authority, discussing the business offered his company by bootleggers. "We feel we cannot afford to take on men of this kind, and rather than compromise morals, we refuse all such applications. How do we know they are bootleggers? When we see a man grow suddenly rich, without any visible means, we are suspicious, and a little investigation usually tells us whether we are right or wrong. It might be difficult for us to prove it in court, but we prove it to our own satisfaction, with a reasonable margin of safety."

NO COLOR PREJUDICE. Mr. Sastri was asked if the color bar was the chief obstacle in the way of Indians attaining full political status in the dominions. "In the first place," he replied, "taking British Columbia, where the prejudice against our people is the strongest, I should say the principal obstacle is the desire to maintain the very high standard of wages and of living generally that we now prevail. The second obstacle is the discrimination of the public to discriminate in favor of the Indian against the Japanese and Chinese. I started out with many others, with the feeling that I should encounter a great deal of color prejudice. But I am bound to say that what stands in our way is mostly the economic consideration, and the color bar only to a very slight extent."

NEW ZEALAND MOST SYMPATHETIC. In reply to a further question Mr. Sastri said that of the colonies he had visited, New Zealand was the most sympathetic in its response. There Indians enjoyed even the franchise. "In view of your experience in the colonies, what should be India's future policy toward the colonies?" "I do not recommend any change of policy," Mr. Sastri replied. "This is the first time that a direct exchange of views has been made between the dominions and Indians. It is too soon to drop this method and try another."

GERMANS CHEER Football Teams. DUSSELDORF.—The roads around these were still choked with French infantry, slow-moving tanks, machine gun companies and batteries of "seventy-aves," all entering the Ruhr. A group of newspaper correspondents was rejoicing that the occupation had been accomplished with no clashes, or loss of life. Then at a point near Ratingen the observers came upon a large crowd of Germans in an open field, shouting, gesticulating and evidently greatly excited. "Here is where the trouble began" was the general feeling, as a battalion of French infantry swung down the road close to the noisy Germans. But nothing happened, except that the Germans continued their uproar. A correspondent who always insists on getting facts investigated—the Germans and learned they were workmen from a steel mill applauding a friendly game of football between

TITLES GOING A-BEGGING. Another incident of to-day recalls the time when Hon. Col. Court Counselor, was a little that arrived with it in Vienna, something worth while. Many a woman was happy in the old days when she could order calling cards bearing the inscription "Frau Hofrat."

THE OLD ORDER PASSES. VIENNA (Associated Press).—The recalling of things as they used to be does not come amiss in Vienna, for in the old days there were many things so pleasant in this city that their recollection and discussion to-day serves often to lighten the gloom of a dull winter. Take, for instance, the Vienna hausmeister, the janitor of American cities, but a dignified, glorified, useful and even courteous janitor. It was his custom to open the doors of apartment houses after ten o'clock at night for the belated, and to exact a fee of twenty heller, four cents, for the service. No one minded it; foreigners found it beneficial and amusing. For two centuries or more the fee had been twenty heller, and its collection through a year was enough to send the janitor's children to school.

LANDLORDS AND TENANTS. Now the hausmeisters and the tenants are in a bitter feud. The courts have permitted an increase in this fee in a ruling, the loose wording of which has been seized upon by the hausmeisters as authorization for a charge the tenants call utterly unreasonable. They are refusing to pay it, and refusing to let them in to their own apartments if the tenant reaches the threshold of his house six minutes after ten o'clock. Some tenants are so determined to "put an end to the outrage" that, when refused admission, they are turning to the nearest police station and demanding shelter for the night. This it was recently reported in the newspapers that in one district of the city alone no fewer than 17 persons spent the night in the lock-up in preference to meeting the exactions of the grasping hausmeister.

LOSING HIS REPUTATION. A literary man of high reputation once said to the waiter in the restaurant where he usually lunched: "Waiter, this beefsteak is not at all tender; I can hardly cut it." The waiter looked at him with a sorrowful expression and sighed deeply. "Perhaps you will tell me," said the literary man, "why you sigh in that fashion?" "Ah, sir," said the waiter, "I took you for a man who always wrote and said original things, and here you come and say the same thing that all the rest of the customers do."

A CLEAN RECORD. A visitor to a small country place was admiring the quaint little local railway that connected a few outlying villages with the nearest market town. "Do you know, sir," said the engineer, to whom he had been speaking, "in all the forty years the line has been in operation we have not had one collision."

THE OLD ORDER PASSES. VIENNA (Associated Press).—The recalling of things as they used to be does not come amiss in Vienna, for in the old days there were many things so pleasant in this city that their recollection and discussion to-day serves often to lighten the gloom of a dull winter. Take, for instance, the Vienna hausmeister, the janitor of American cities, but a dignified, glorified, useful and even courteous janitor. It was his custom to open the doors of apartment houses after ten o'clock at night for the belated, and to exact a fee of twenty heller, four cents, for the service. No one minded it; foreigners found it beneficial and amusing. For two centuries or more the fee had been twenty heller, and its collection through a year was enough to send the janitor's children to school.

The Limit. Little Winnie was spending a holiday with her mother's people on a farm, and everybody made a tremendous fuss about the pretty little four-year-old. Aunts, uncles, cousins and friends all demanded kisses, and Winnie obliged in every case.

Then Uncle Tom picked her up in his strong arms. "Now, little lass," he said, "I'll take you to see the cow." Winnie waited till they were out of the house, then she said firmly: "Uncle Tom, I will not kiss the cow."

With much grinding and jolting of brakes, the only train of the day drew up at the little wayside station of Sloughborough.

An old man alighted, and as he tottered through the gate he gave the ticket collector a child's half-fare ticket.

"Here, what's the meaning of this?" demanded the collector, angrily. "You're over twelve."

"Yes," said the old man, sadly; "but I wasn't when I left the other end."

Don't Say Paper, Say the Evening Telegram.

Abusive Language.

Dear Sir—I scarcely know how to reply to the complimentary remarks respecting myself that the Advocate made in its issue of Tuesday. The mellifluous and honeyed periods of that delightful paper have overpowered me so that I am lost to know how I may match the voluptuous praises with anything resembling a quid pro quo or as some people like to put it, give them a Roland for an Oliver. Justice cannot be done the author of that verbal assault, by me—I am opposed to hanging—so I must leave the reward of such virtue to public opinion. When the Advocate would condemn abusive language it should begin its campaign for pure literature, where chastity should begin—at home. Back files of the Advocate will show that I am not the author of all the crime complained of. I am not the real Machiavelli. That title should really go to the Advocate writer. I have so many faults of my own to bear that really I cannot assume the burden of others. One fault I do not possess, however, which is common to the Advocate; I never have been guilty of attacking any man on his heartstone; I have never assailed the private life of any man or done him a personal wrong. In defense of right, in defense of native land and all that concerns her, I make it a practice to hit as hard as I know how, but never do I concern myself with scandal. Can this be said of the Advocate? Was that filthy page "The Truth About English," which Dr. Campbell's accommodating paper, "The Western Star" reproduced in full, such as the Advocate moralist would approve? Was many another Coaker assailed upon the character of others the kind of literary sewage to meet the Advocate writer's views? I presume it must be, for this most recent effort can be the spawn of nothing else but such anaerobes. My real offense against the Advocate lies in the fact that I have asked intelligently, questions which it is not able to answer, and such questions as it should be able to answer, after the statements it made respecting Gull Pond, etc. The reported discovery of an immense body of copper ore very naturally should give interest to every man, more especially to the man whose special studies are in the line of mineral deposits. The unique discovery at Gull Pond arouses my desire to know something of the nature of this deposit, so I asked questions of those who claimed to know all about it. My questions were asked entirely in the interest of science and to satisfy an inquiring mind. Abuse is all I received, and the country is told I am an enemy of progress. "Watchman," who writes a series of letters to the "News," asks similar questions and answered with virulence. Is such an attitude as the Advocate assumes the accompaniment of knowledge or cupidity? Intelligent people must answer this question for themselves. And this is the class of man who dares tell the intelligent people of this country what their political views ought to be. Men who do not know anything of the country, men who are not able to converse intelligently on any subject outside the prescribed round of commonplace assume the role of autocrat in the intellectual field and attempt to trample with hobbled boots over men of knowledge. This is the pass we have come to in this country to-day, and it is no wonder our native land is in such tribulation. We have been taking this tribe of know-nothings too quietly, and it is time we put them in their place. During the coming political struggle perhaps some of those glib but idle talkers may venture on the public platform, where perhaps they may be induced to tell the public what they know of mineral deposits, the growth of trees, etc. It will be very instructive, surely, if they can be induced to speak. Yours truly, ARTHUR ENGLISH. Feb. 21, 1923.

In Topsy Turvy Land.

Yunnan, a country which lies east of Burmah, must be the queerest of queer places. In no other country in the world are so many diverse races collected (says Mrs. Gabrielle M. Vassal, in her newly-published book, entitled "In and Round Yunnan-Fou") and some of them are exceedingly primitive types. For example, the Ha-La are jet black, and hardly look like men. The Ya-Jen live in trees and build no houses. Their hair is red and their eyes yellow, and their nature is so cruel and savage that their neighbors are fast exterminating them. The Yunnanese proper, those that dwell in villages and lead a more or less settled and orderly life, have a code of laws that is probably the most severe on earth. Cruel Punishments for Petty Thefts. The punishment for theft—even though it be but a few handfuls of straw or a bundle of fire-wood—is death by beheading. And not only is the actual thief beheaded, but all the members of his family suffer a like fate. In cases of highway robbery with violence, all the inhabitants of the village wherein the robber resides are executed. When a Yunnanese who has been robbed finds it impossible to discover the culprit, either by his own investigation or with the help of the authorities, he indulges in what is called reviling the street. He stands at his door, or perhaps on the roof of his house, and curses with the utmost vehemence the man, woman or child who has robbed him. Thought He'd Gone Mad. The first time Mrs. Vassal witnessed a scene of this description, she thought that the man had suddenly taken leave of his senses. His face was red, his eyes starting out of his head, his clothes in disorder, his vocal chords seemed about to burst, and every muscle was at its highest tension as he continued over and over again to consign the culprit, his family, his ancestors and his posterity to eternal perdition. On learning the reason for the outbreak, the authoress naturally imagined that the poor man must surely have lost all his money, perhaps his home into the bargain. What had actually happened, however, was that a few stalks of maize from one of his fields had been cut down and carried off during the night. The capital of the country, and practically the only town, is Yunnan-Fou, a human rabbit-warren of small, flat-roofed houses, intersected in every direction by narrow cobble-paved alleys. It is not drained, and the variety and strength of the different smells is beyond description. The only scavengers are hordes of silent, morose-looking dogs that infest the town. Nobody ever pays the slightest attention to them, except to kick them out of the way. Cats, on the other hand, are highly esteemed! They are supposed to be lucky, and in every household at least one is kept. They are not allowed to run free, however, as with us, but wear collars and are chained up. The poor pussies show their resentment at this treatment by mauling piteously day and night, a noise which drives Europeans frantic, but the Yunnanese, having no nerves to speak of, do not seem to mind it. Catastrophe! "There," he said, pulling his shirt-sleeves over his brawny arms and surveying the clothespost which had taken on him the best part of the Saturday afternoon to fix in the garden; "that's as firm as a rock. Even the combined forces of the elements cannot bring it down." Later in the day he found the pole on the ground. "Did you do this?" he roared, to his eight-year-old son. "No, father," was the answer; "a sparrow perched on it. I saw it myself."

ON EXPRESSING APPRECIATION.

What an un-subtle thing a n unappreciative child is! We have all had our experiences with a child who is bored with small gifts, but who takes whatever we do for him or give him as a matter of course, and while he takes toward the other to see if there is anything more there. And we have also had experience with the simplest thing, who rushes about to show it to everyone in the house, who falls on one's neck with kisses and thanks that makes one wish one had brought twice as much. What makes the difference between the two kinds of child? Is it a matter of training or of disposition? Both, I think. The Gift of Enthusiasm. No training can give an unenthusiastic child the gift of enthusiasm, but training will teach a child the habit of expressing appreciation. A woman who had as her guest in a Summer home the eleven year old child of a Winter neighbor told me that the youngest often used to say at the table when she especially enjoyed some dish: "That is delicious, Mrs. T. I wish you would give me the receipt so that I can get mother to make it." That child evidently did not lack for training in expressing appreciation either by precept or by the

When Clerks Wore Toppers.

OLD TIME BANK MANNERS. Old Thomas Coutts, the founder of Coutts' Bank, was a stickler for the proprieties, and the traditions he established were continued by his successors. For example, there are many people now living who can remember the imposing variety of quill pens that used to be handed to the visitor for making his signature, and the silver rose-water bowl into which the silver change was dipped before being handed over the counter. The clerical staff was recruited entirely from public school and university graduates, and the junior clerks had to wear when on duty tall silk hats and the dress of an Eton sixth-form boy. The bank made a practice of cutting the good will of its clients. The most important ones were wined and dined sumptuously; while at Christmas huge piles of turkeys and game of all sorts blocked the entrance, awaiting despatch to the friends and customers of Messrs. Coutts & Company. These interesting particulars regarding the famous Strand banking house are contained in "City Characters," by T. E. S. Scott. Other times, other manners! Up till a quarter of a century ago a bank was regarded as an institution to be treated with reverence. And for a bank to accept accounts opened with less than £100 was unthinkable. Coutts, following the precedent set by the Bank of England, insisted on £1,000 as a minimum. AT THE BALSAM.—The following guests are now staying at the Balsam: Mr. W. F. Penney, Carbonear; F. P. Murphy, Placentia. The bank made a practice of cut-

Fortunes Waiting For Oyster Breeders

Ceylon to-day is perhaps known for its tea. But in days gone by it had a more romantic claim to fame—it was the home of the renowned pearl fisheries in the Gulf of Mannar, the narrow strait which divides Ceylon from the island, made one of their odic mysterious disappearances. In 1919 it was discovered that they were returning to their banks on the Gulf of Mannar, the narrow strait which divides Ceylon from the island. Unfortunately, as it seemed at the time they were depositing themselves in the Gulf of Mannar. Another and more important discovery has been made (says a writer in the Daily Express). In the when pearl fishing was a thriving industry in Ceylon many oysters were made to transplant young oysters. For some inexplicable reason these efforts always proved successful, hence of the millions of oysters transplanted surviving. In 1921, however, a special was made. A number of the which had deposited themselves in the Gulf of Mannar were up. They were placed in a sea water from a pump the time they were there, and usually deposited many miles from the Gulf. A recent inspection has proved the rocks where they were deposited are now covered with millions of young and healthy pearl oysters. Though the best known of the pearl banks are situated in the Gulf of Mannar, between the island of Negombo, about twenty miles from Colombo, are 800 square miles of shallow water where pearl oysters have been known to occur. That transplantation can be taken with confidence, there is reason why every inch of this should not be literally sown to pearls. NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. Molloy, Bay Bulls, wishes to express his sincere thanks to Dr. Resende, Nurses of the Sanitarium; also Drs. Whelan and Fallon for their attention to her dear husband and his illness; also to the members of the Nova Council, Knights Columbus, and the many kind who sent telegrams and letters of sympathy or who helped in any way to assuage the burden of her sorrow.—adv.

Distribution of Districts and Representatives.

The population of Newfoundland Labrador is said to be 269,974, obtained by many that Labrador representation, and we are of the same opinion. If it is any representation, however, it is through that of the West and in that case its population must be added to that of the Coast which places this part of the country in a still more favourable position in its claim for more representation. However, we will not here enter the position of Labrador, but content that it should have representation.

Subtracting the population of the West we find that the population of Newfoundland is 259,358 divided into 23 districts and represented in the House of Assembly by 26 members. This allows a fraction over 11 persons of population to each representative. The five districts of the Bay contain a population of 11,546, and therefore their collective representation would be 11,546 divided by 11, which would give us 1,049 persons to each representative, whereas they have nine. We have been led to raise this point because the published effort of one of our representatives to exploit the representation enjoyed by the Government of the rest of the West.

One single district in Conception Bay has its per capita of population to representation. The population of this district is 7,305. Port de Spain has one member for population of 5,541. Bay de Verde has a population of 5,331. St. John's has a population of 5,331. Carbonar has a representation for territory containing a population of only 4,831. Harbor Head has a representative for each of population. Willie Harbor has a population of only 3,513, but has three representatives, because for every 3,513 of population, it is shown that in these five districts, neither of which has the population of St. George's district, there are two representatives each, and one with a population of 2,098 less, has three representatives in the Legislature.

There is one district in the county which is more favorably situated in its representation than is St. George's, and that is Ferryland with a population of only 6,013 and two seats in the Legislature for each 3,007 of population.

There is not a district in the whole of Newfoundland so unfavorably represented in the proportionate representation as the District of St. George's. The nearest to it is St. John's with a population of 12,176, and one representative. Then there is Fortune Bay, which has a population of 11,712, and one representative. One district with about the same population has three times its representation. Six districts, each with less than twice its representation. One district with a population smaller by almost a sixth, has three times as great a representation. Another district with only two-thirds its population has its representation, while one with less than half its population enjoys a like distinction in its representation.

In the light of the foregoing it is evident that the time has long since arrived when there should be a redistribution, and a readjustment of representation. We believe that a system would be a more satisfactory system than that at present in vogue. In the present three-member system it would be much easier for the three representatives to give their attention to a section coming from the three to have to give their collective attention to the whole. This district is entitled to its present representation. The West Coast should be divided into three or four districts with one representative for each. In matters relating to the general interests of the province they could lend their collective influence. So long as this is without its due share of representation so long will it suffer in its public services and public buildings and public institutions.

Eskimos Eat Their Boots.

PEOPLE WHO ARE AT WAR WITH NATURE.

Why do Eskimos, who spend most of their time battling against elements far more rigorous than we in this country, could ever imagine never suffer from colds?

The fact is that the Eskimo believes in having plenty of fresh air about his body, and makes a point of wearing the loosest garments imaginable and no tight-fitting underclothing.

Authorities declare that it is because Eskimos allow fresh air to circulate continually all over the body that they are the hardest race in the world. As babies they go unclothed, being carried about in the hoods of their mothers' furs.

The Eskimos' feet receive great care, and the women are credited with making the only absolutely waterproof boot in existence. It is made of seal skin, without the fur, "tanned" and kept pliable by chewing. The parts are sewn together with deer sinews, in a "lockstitch," which no other race seems to understand.

Where Toothache is Unknown.

Within this boot of "chewed" seal skin a deer skin sock is worn, the hair being next to the skin. Sock and boot come off together, and every night they are dried on a framework rigged above an igloo oil-lamp, and the lamp is kept burning day and night for this purpose and for the melting of snow from drinking water. In the morning the first duty of the women is to "chew the boots" of the men.

Owing to the pure cold air they breathe, and to the constant exercise which gums and jaw get in chewing blubber, seal skin, and so on, Eskimos have very strong teeth. Such a thing as a cavity or any form of toothache is unknown.

The Eskimo is healthy also because he drinks a large amount of snow-water. Indeed, his avidity for melted snow as a beverage keeps the wife busy melting snow or filling pails from holes in the ice.

Lord Mayor's Day.

The State coach which carries the Lord Mayor in the procession was built in 1767, and cost over £10,000. It weighs, when empty, 3 tons 15 cwt. The total weight of the harness for the six roans that draw it is just under 6 cwt.

A Lord Mayor's first day of office costs him £2,000, his share of the expenses of the Guildhall banquet; so that a fifth of his year's allowance—£210,000—disappears during the first few hours.

The chain of office which the Lord Mayor wears in the procession, and at the dinner which follows, is the most costly civic badge in this country—probably in the world. It contains diamonds to the value of £120,000, and before it is handed to him he has to execute a bond to this amount guaranteeing its safe custody.

London's incoming Lord Mayor is the successor to a long line of chief magistrates extending back over seven hundred years, the first one having been chosen in 1189. During his year of office he ranks as an Earl, and is entitled to the prefix of right honourable.

The first Lord Mayor's Show was held in 1547. It was formally abolished by the Puritans in 1639, and was not again held until 1655. There have also been interruptions since, notably during the years of the Plague and the Great Fire.

The least expensive Guildhall banquet of which we have any record was that held on Lord Mayor's Day, 1916, when, owing to scarcity due to the war, the menu was restricted to three courses. The most expensive was that given by Lord Mayor Domville in 1814 and which cost altogether about £25,000.

Turtle soup, without which no Guildhall banquet would now be considered complete, is a comparatively modern innovation. Its place was formerly taken by a huge bowl of custard, into which it was customary for the Lord Mayor's jester to jump to amuse the company.

That the Lord Mayor rides in a coach instead of on horseback is due to an untoward incident that marred the procession in 1711. In that year the new Lord Mayor was thrown from his horse and badly hurt, so at the next procession a carriage was provided.

One Lord Mayor's dinner, that was held following on the accession of George I, came near to being spoilt by a very regrettable incident.

In those days it was customary for Royalty to be present in person, and when the King entered the banquet hall the Lady Mayores, Lady Humphreys, held over her cheek to be kissed.

His Majesty, possibly not understanding what was expected of him, took no notice, but stalked on to his seat. Whereupon Lady Humphreys flounced out of the room, a buff, called for her carriage, and drove off home.
