GOVERNMENT ORDERS

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Tuesday, October 18, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 39 (Mr. Gustafson) and 40 (Mr. Benjamin).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): When the matter was last in debate, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) had the floor. In his absence the Chair will recognize any other Hon. Member on Motions Nos. 39 and 40.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, today as the Chair has indicated, we are resuming debate on Motions Nos. 39 and 40. The motions are very similar. One is in the name of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), my friend in the Conservative Party, and the other one is in the name of my seatmate, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Both of them are amendments that I would consider pro-producer, pro-farmer, which would strengthen things for the farmers of this country. Both motions would amend Clause 19.

The motion of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) reads:

> The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of, producers.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) says a similar thing in his amendment, but according to our legal advice, Motion No. 40 would make it a bit more certain and stronger in terms of the wording on behalf of farmers. It is also the wording suggested by the Canadian Wheat Board. I know Mr. Speaker is a distinguished lawyer and understands the law very well. Motion No. 40 of the Hon. Member for Regina West is the better motion. It is the one preferred by the Wheat Board. Of the two motions, it is the one that should be accepted.

If the House sees fit not to accept it, of course the fallback position could be Motion No. 39 moved by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. Since we are trying to protect the Canadian Wheat Board, I suggest that we accept the motion which the Wheat Board is recommending and that the Wheat Board would like to see implemented.

Clause 19 of Bill C-155 refers to the functions and duties of the Administrator. The Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee has considerable power over the future of grain handling and grain movement in our country. He has considerable power in terms of the movement of grain, the quality of grain, the purchasing of grain, the selling of grain and the like. We want to ensure that the powers of the Wheat Board are not restricted.

The argument is very basic. It is so basic that it is very well understood by prairie farmers. For a prairie farmer to struggle through the Wheat Board many years ago, it was a very important and long struggle. It was a struggle in which both my grandfathers were involved. Of course, they are no longer with us; that was many years ago. They were struggling for some bargaining and collective powers in the marketplace.

I will not deviate from the narrow strictures of the motions before us today to give a history of the Wheat Board, because Mr. Speaker would call me to order. In any event I believe that has already been done by the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) and by other Members of the House.

Mr. Malone: I would call you to order, too.

Mr. Nystrom: Perhaps it was even done by the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone). The Wheat Board is vitally important, and perhaps a couple of analogies are relevant here in trying to persuade some of the urban Members of all Parties from central Canada, or indeed those from some of the western cities, that the Wheat Board for farmers is like a trade union for workers. It is something that will protect farmers. In fact, the Wheat Board for farmers is probably more important than a trade union for workers because unfortunately trade unions probably do not have as much power and influence over the income of workers as the Wheat Board has over the income of farmers. The Wheat Board has the power to sell grain and to obtain a really good price for it. The Wheat Board is financed by farmers and therefore is a very important institution.

Mr. Benjamin: It is just like the unions.

Mr. Nystrom: It is very similar to a union. That is why I drew that analogy.

We could also draw an analogy with many other associations; for example, many professional associations such as the bar association, the medical association and, for the business community, the Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, associations for resource industries and the like. All those associations are considered to be very important by their member participants. In the same way the Wheat Board is very important for the farmers of Canada.

When we establish the Senior Grain Transportation Committee and give awesome powers to the Administrator of that Committee, we must ensure that those powers do not in any way restrict the powers and authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. It must remain the supreme agency in terms of the purchasing and selling of wheat, the organization of grain sales by farmers and so on.

There is something else that you, Mr. Speaker, as a fair-minded person would be very much aware of and in agreement with. As I said before, the Canadian Wheat Board is supported by the farmers' money. There is a Wheat Board Advisory Committee which is elected by the farmers. They have considerable influence over what the Wheat Board does. Before becoming a Member of Parliament, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) was a member of the Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee. Roy Atkinson, who has been well known for many years as a farm leader in this country, is now the Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Canadian Wheat Board. He is from Saskatchewan. He is the former head of the National Farmers' Union and has been very active in farming causes throughout his farming life.

A young man in my constituency, Michael Halyk, has been elected for a second term as a member of the Wheat Board Advisory Committee. This young man who is barely 30, if yet 30, is making a contribution to protecting the farming interests of our community. You can see, Mr. Speaker, that it is a democratic organization in terms of having an advisory committee elected by the farmers.

Stack that up against the kind of Committee that is being created in this House today under Bill C-155. Under Bill C-155 we will have a Senior Grain Transportation Committee. A lot of power will be given to the Administrator. It will not be very democratic. There will be some producers and Wheat Pool members on it, but it will not have the same democratic structure as the Canadian Wheat Board.

For reasons that I have stated, I recommend Motion No. 40 to the House. We welcome the support of the Conservative Party on this Motion of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I appeal to the Liberal Members to listen to the voice of the western farmer, to listen to the voice of the people, and to stand up in this House and accept Motion No. 40. It is a motion that the Wheat Board wants. I can assure Members that it is not just the Wheat Board but the farmers, the farm pools, farm organizations, the UGG and other organizations which represent farmers which want Motion No. 40 to pass so as to ensure that the powers of the Wheat Board are protected.

The powers of the Wheat Board are very important to western farmers. Because of the powers of the corporations, multinationals and big grain companies like Continental Grain, Cargill Grain and the other big sisters of the grain trade, the Wheat Board could be gradually eroded over the next few years. Any kind of loophole left in the law could be the first step down the slippery slope of eroding the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board. We cannot afford to let that happen because it would be very dangerous to farm incomes.

I grew up on a small farm in central Saskatchewan. I recall the old timers in my community talking time and again about the days before the Canadian Wheat Board. They would tell stories of how they would plant their grain in the spring, harvest it in the fall and have no idea what price they would get for the grain. It depended on the grain traders in Chicago and the Richardsons in Winnipeg and the private grain exchange. The farmer always gambled on what he would get for a bushel of grain, oats, barley or whatever he produced. It was as though you would gamble with dice in a casino in Nevada. That is not the proper way to work. It is not a proper situation in which to put any human being. People need to know what their income will be so that they can plan their lives for themselves and their families. They have to have that kind of security. We, the citizens of Canada who are engaged in many occupations, want that kind of security so we can plan our own lives and futures. I suggest that that is not too much to ask for on behalf of the farmers of prairie Canada.

The motions now before the House would offer that kind of protection to the farmers. As we have argued for a long, long time, we of course would like to see the Crow rate remain intact and would like to see the powers of the Wheat Board expanded. However, we are not dealing with the expansion of the Wheat Board's powers in this particular motion but with preserving the kinds of powers it presently has.

I would like to make a direct appeal to my friend, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. If his Motion No. 39 happens to fail, I would ask that he organize among his caucus unanimous support for Motion No. 40. I think I see him nodding his head in agreement. I hope that when the vote comes on Motion No. 40, all Conservative Members in the House will be present and will vote in support of Motion No. 40. Perhaps together we can persuade some of the more open-minded Liberal Members across the way such as the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Lumley) to support this motion.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this motion is very important, and I would like to say to my colleagues from Quebec: We need your support for Motion No. 40. It is extremely important! As a member of the House for 15 years, I have often supported proposals by Quebec producers, by the Union des producteurs agricoles, and I want to ask you now: Are you willing to do the same thing for us?

[English]

I hope that they will, Mr. Speaker, because if they do, then perhaps we can at least add a bit more protection for the prairie farmer from this horrible Bill that the Government across the way wants to force on prairie farmers through the use of closure.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to register in the strongest possible terms my objection to the fact that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) failed to take his place in the speaking order today after having been recognized and causing a procedural wrangle on Tuesday.

An Hon. Member: That is not a point of order.

An Hon. Member: It is a point of view.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Debate.

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments regarding the motions that are before us today and regarding some of the implications those motions have for the Canadian Wheat Board in particular. When any Member from the other side of the House who represents a riding from the prairie Provinces gets up to speak, we have heard him speak as if we have no comments to make that may be of any positive nature. However, I think there are some implications in this Bill in general, and specifically in these motions, that do apply to Hon. Members from ridings right across the country.

When thinking about this Bill, I think particularly of my own constituency of Nanaimo-Alberni. Constituents there are not happy with the way their particular railway system is functioning and they are not happy with the kind of say that they have in the process of scheduling passenger services and services for the export of commodities. The implications of Motions Nos. 39 and 40 correspond to some of the problems that Vancouver Island residents have with the E & N Railway, a railway that is under attack by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company which wants to curtail the use of that railway system on Vancouver Island for passengers. People who live on Vancouver Island have the same need of that rail system as the prairie farmers do of theirs in terms not only of passenger service but more particularly as it applies to this Bill, the transportation of grain and the improvement of that system.

On Vancouver Island we have a company that is not very interested in scheduling rail transportation to meet the needs of the community but rather in scheduling rail transportation to meet their own specific needs. The railway company ignores to a large extent the promotion of the rail system on Vancouver Island. There is no attempt made to be innovative or to attract tourism despite the potential that exists.

We feel that Bill C-155 is an attempt by the Government to take the same position toward the grain farmers in the prairie Provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba in particular. We do not like what we see. We do not like the implications of Bill C-155 and I am sure that is why Motion No. 39 was moved by the Progressive Conservative Party and Motion No. 40 by this Party. I think the people on Vancouver Island relate to the demand of the Canadian Wheat Board that it have control over the direction and allocation of rail cars to move grain to port. We have the same kind of demand in that we want to have some say in how the rail system on Vancouver Island can be used to move commodities and passengers in the most efficient and cost-effective way.

• (1125)

In the testimony given before the committee a representative of the Canadian Wheat Board made some relevant points which have been enunciated very well in the debate in the House and in committee. I want to repeat the main goals of the Canadian Wheat Board within the context of Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40. In committee the representative said:

> Any further reduction in the Board's ability to co-ordinate transportation will be a very important step backward for the export sales program for western Canadian grains.

Basically, what the Canadian Wheat Board is afraid of is that the transfer of authority over grain cars to the grain transportation administration will weaken its ability to transport grain to and sell grain on the export market. I think it should be recognized that the Board has the greatest opportunity to know what the needs of the producers are for transporting grain to port and where the greatest need lies for the cars if grain exports and sales overseas are to be improved. It is important that through the Canadian Wheat Board we have the authority not only to determine the quotas of grain produced but the mechanism by which it can reach port and the overseas markets.

Our amendment would not weaken the Bill but, rather, would strengthen our ability to increase the production of grain, its movement and our export sales. It is not significantly different from Motion No. 39 moved by the Progressive Conservative Party but it would change the Bill to reflect the needs of the Canadian Wheat Board and, therefore, of grain producers. It would allow the Wheat Board to retain the power to direct grain car allocation and to meet the needs of producers interested in rail upgrading as well as increasing sales on the domestic and export markets.

This Party has indicated that it supports Motion No. 39 if it is not successful in having the Government accept Motion No. 40, which is what we hope the Government will do, knowing the opposition to the particular mechanism within the Bill itself and the opposition not only of the two Opposition Parties but of the Canadian Wheat Board, which is responsible for moving grain and has had a great deal of success in the past in moving grain and marketing that grain overseas.

This Party asks that the Government look at these amendments sincerely and also look at the lobbying of the Canadian Wheat Board for amendments to the Bill. We ask it to consider particularly the Canadian producer of grain, his attempts to improve his product and to improve sales and marketing of that product through continued authority over elevators, production and grain transportation.

Motion No. 40, which our Party has moved, is certainly an amendment which should be acceptable to the Government. The Canadian Wheat Board has strongly lobbied to have this motion accepted. I urge the Government to consider very seriously accepting this amendment which will strengthen the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board so that it can better serve Canadian producers of grain.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to enter into the debate on both Motion No. 39, which was introduced by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), and Motion No. 40, which was introduced by my colleague and friend, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). As Hon. Members have mentioned previously, the intent of the amendments is to strengthen the position of the Canadian Wheat Board, or at least to protect its historic role, a role which has evolved over years of experience and practice and has benefited and worked for the farmers and producers in western Canada.

The Bill as it stands without these amendments, Mr. Speaker, weakens the position of the Canadian Wheat Board in terms of allocating cars and organizing the transportation of grain to the ports. It opens the door to the Administrator so that he will be able to take on more and more of the responsibilities which have been handled by the Canadian Wheat Board. We stand opposed to this. Indications would show that Members of the Conservative Party, especially those who come from Saskatchewan, Alberta or Manitoba, understand that the Canadian Wheat Board is an essential organization for western Canadian farmers. They understand that one should not muck around with it.

Bill C-155, and particularly this clause, is just another example of a Government with no representation from the agricultural west. We have a Department, Mr. Speaker, which has a tremendous record of major mistakes wading in and totally disrupting and destroying a system which has been developed in western Canada over the years. This Bill, and this clause as well, is presented to us by the Department which brought us Mirabel Airport and the proposed Pickering airport, billion dollar mistakes, billion dollar "Oops, sorry, folks, we just miscalculated!"

These are the people who have been in charge of transportation policies in Canada over the years, who have allowed the rail service in this country to deteriorate, who have overseen the gradual demise of passenger rail service in Canada. This has been done to a country like ours which is so dependent on the railways. That Department has allowed the gradual erosion of these essential services and now this same Department is wading in and mucking around with the Wheat Board. I do not trust it, Mr. Speaker. None of my constituents in Regina East, whether they be Conservative, New Democrat or Liberal, trust it. There is an intense feeling in western Canada, Mr. Speaker, that that Department, and the Government, do not know what they are doing.

Our constituents depend upon us, their representatives in the House of Commons, to speak forcefully and often of their positions and their fears. These are dark days, Mr. Speaker, for this institution and for this Government, because the Government is determined to go ahead without any experience or representation, nor any sensitivity to the needs of western Canada. In its own blind, bureaucratic way it is determined to push ahead. It has cloaked itself with a sense of self-righteousness, claiming what it is doing is progressive and forward-looking. This is just bureaucratic talk. It has been convinced it is right by its own bureaucrats. It has stopped listening to the people and is blindly going ahead and destroying a system which has taken years to organize and which is working well right now. On top of that, it is now attempting to still the voices from the west. It is going to introduce closure. It is going to prevent us from talking on all these amendments.

All of the amendments which have been introduced by the Hon. Member for Regina West and many amendments introduced by the Conservative Party are valid amendments which must be taken into consideration, because the original Bill is so flawed—even technically flawed—that it needs this careful consideration of each clause. We have a right to speak. We have a right to present the points of view of our constituents in western Canada. But the Government now does not want to hear this. It just wants to close its eyes and ears and shove this Bill through. It is tragic that one of the important fabrics of our society, particularly in western Canada, is being torn apart and the representatives of western Canada are not even allowed to give their points of view, their objections, thoughts and comments on this Bill.

The events which have occurred in the last few weeks here in the House, and those which will occur in the immediate future, are sad events, not only for this institution but for Canada as a whole. What is occurring, Mr. Speaker, is that something which has tied us together as a nation is now being destroyed by a mindless bureaucracy with the consent of a heartless and insensitive Government.

Many Hon. Members have already talked about the important role of the Canadian Wheat Board, how it has evolved and how essential it is. The Canadian Wheat Board has a major say, if not the ultimate say, in the allocation of grain cars in order to facilitate the movement of our products in the most efficient way possible. What this Bill does in effect, as pointed out by other Hon. Members, is to allow that role to be whittled away, to deteriorate over time.

I urge Government Members to look at the merits of the motions which have been proposed both by the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party. I urge them to stand up and at least tell us where they stand on this issue. At least they should have the common decency to tell us why these amendments should not be included. But they sit there in silence, using their majority to ram this Bill through without even giving an intelligent reason for doing so. That is a further insult on insult on insult. I would urge Government Members to stand up in this House and explain to us their reasoning for this particular clause. When they do not do so it just increases the fear which the people of western Canada have about this Bill.

Is it the Government's intention and secret agenda that the Wheat Board should in time be whittled down, that its role should be eroded? Is this the secret agenda? If it is not, then surely it is up to Government Members to stand up and say "No, it is not; this is the reason for it and we do not think you are right on this". Or they might stand up and say: "We think you have a valid point; it is certainly not our intention to erode the ability of the Wheat Board to allocate cars and we think you have some good arguments. Yes, we will accept your amendment." But at least they can stand up and say something if they have any guts at all, Mr. Speaker.

These two amendments, Mr. Speaker, Motions Nos. 39 and 40, are pretty similar. I prefer Motion No. 40 because it is a little bit more specific concerning other Acts and regulations which empower the Canadian Wheat Board to allocate cars. But essentially both motions try to accomplish the same thing, that is, to guarantee the Canadian Wheat Board has and retains the power to allocate grain cars.

I maintain that this Bill is an attack upon western Canadian agriculture as we have known it. It attacks the rate which farmers will have to pay for the movement of grain. It attacks the Wheat Board and the Wheat Pools. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), says, it attacks a way of life. The authors of this Bill have a different motion about what agriculture in western Canada should be. It is a motion which runs parallel to those who advocate the grain exchange and the break-up of the co-operative system, the collective method which has been developed both in pooling of resources and of marketing.

I see by your motions, Mr. Speaker, that my ten minutes on this particular motion have lapsed. I just wish to say that I hope at least one Government Member will stand up and address himself to this amendment. Give us the reasoning why they are either in favour of or opposed to this amendment. At least show some courtesy toward my constituents and others in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta and let them know why the Government is doing what it is doing in this particular clause.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member would read the transcripts of committee hearings and previous debate on this motion, he will find his answer there. That is why we cannot prolong this kind of filibustering. It has all been said, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I fail to see what the point of order was. I am asking him to stand up here in the House right now and address the Canadian public. Is it necessary for members of the public to go to committee hearings and read committee reports? Let us not be so devious. Stand up right now.

Mr. Flis: You should have attended the committee hearings. Where were you?

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise on Motion No. 39. While we support this motion, we prefer Motion No. 40 which deals with the same topic only in a more detailed way. I wish to express my disappointment that the Minister is not in the House because this is an important piece of legislation.

Mr. Blais: Then why don't you deal with it as being important?

Mr. Parker: But he is not here.

I have worked for the railways for many years and have seen what they do regarding their commitments to the transportation of various types of grain. This is why I think these two motions are very pertinent to this legislation. The Government is going to change a major piece of legislation which deeply affects western Canada. I can remember in the 1940s, 1950s and 1960s when railway workers waited day in and day out for wheat contracts to be signed with other countries so that their very jobs would be guaranteed. The fact is that this legislation could break down the authority of the Wheat Board. I refer to commitments made.

When the Conservatives were in Government, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) made agreements with the railways for upgrading of railway stock. I have seen some of that upgrading take place. Some of it was done with a stencil brush. They stencilled on the side of a car that this car has been upgraded, and I can say now that I did not see the actual work take place. Is that the kind of thing we want to see taking place, which the prairie farmers are going to have to pay for? Right now in my riding there are cars designated for upgrading of branch lines and it is stencilled right on the side. If this clause was in place they could see where these cars have been used. They are being used not only on the upgrading of branch lines but we see them out on western Canada on the main lines and in other areas. If that is what the Wheat Board wants and the administration works for it, it should be done through proper inspections and with proper authority.

Regarding the various types of wheat being shipped, I think it is imperative that the Wheat Board have some say in what grain is going to be shipped. I have seen grain sit for as long as two or three weeks on a siding because it was the wrong grain, the boats were not there to take the grain and the ports in Vancouver could not hold it. It is imperative that there be some kind of communication between the Wheat Board, the railways and the ports, and that must be through the Wheat Board. If this is not done, we are going to have the Cargills, the Richardsons and the Continental groups walking in and making a profit on the backs of the farmers. I know the Conservatives would support that kind of a process because they do not believe in orderly marketing. Well, we will not stand for that and this is why we feel it is so imperative that the administration have the authority to ensure that the equipment is being utilized properly.

As we on the Standing Committee on Transport travelled across Canada, we found there were many railways, such as the railway to Churchill, which can handle only certain types of cars. Again, it is imperative that the correct equipment is made available for areas such as this so grain can be moved when it should be. That must be done. It is imperative that the Administrator have a voice in how it is being done. It is a travesty to western grain producers that the Liberals and Conservatives sit in the House, remain quiet about this issue and do not participate by giving assurance that this kind of protection is there. We hear that they support the Wheat Board but they sit silent in the House.

During my travels with the Transport Committee the Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) attended meetings where he bragged to the prairie farmers about how much he had done and how many cars he had supplied during his term in office. I want to tell the House that I worked in the mechanical department of the railway company for many years and a boxcar cannot be built—

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder what days the Hon. Member is referring to when speaking about his travels with the Transport Committee. I travelled on many days—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. The Hon. Member for Kootenay East-Revelstoke has the floor.

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, to begin with, that was not a legitimate point of order. If you look at the record, I said that I travelled across this country with the Transport Committee and the Member for Vegreville was there. If you check the record you will find that I was on that committee.

Mr. McKnight: On what dates?

Mr. Parker: I have no obligation to the Member to tell him what dates I was on that Committee. It appears that some Conservative Members—

Mr. Malone: The Member for Crowfoot.

Mr. Parker: If the Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) wants to check the records he will find that I travelled on the Transport Committee and met with grain growers in Winnipeg, Regina and Edmonton. We also visited Prince Rupert.

Mr. Taylor: You must have been under the table in Edmonton because I did not see you there.

Mr. Parker: These Conservative Members seem to be so uptight about it, but there was more than one Transport Committee. There was one working with regard to the Crow Bill and there also was a Transport Committee that travelled throughout this country about two years ago. If they cannot remember that, they were not very interested in what was taking place in transportation in Canada.

Mr. Taylor: There was one in 1917 as well. Were you on that one?

Mr. Parker: We hear rumblings from the Conservatives and the Liberals but let us hear some constructive advice on how we should deal with this very important problem.

The only efficient way that we can handle our grain is to give the Canadian Wheat Board, which represents the farmers, manages the grain economy and how our grain is sold to other countries, the authority and opportunity to demand that the companies operate efficiently and that the shipping of grain is achieved quickly. We should not continue a system in which the railway companies have told the prairie farmers that the railway workers are causing all the problems, when it is the railway companies that have put the cars on sidings and delayed the transportation of grain as a result of their poor management. If there was an administrator dealing with these problems, the farmers would know first hand who to blame and would ensure that it would not happen.

The Conservative Party is hoping and praying that Continental or Cargill can get involved and destroy one of the best marketing systems that Canada ever had. If these changes are going to be made we cannot allow Bill C-155 to pass without some protection of orderly marketing in Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The question is on Motion No. 39 and on Motion No. 40.

All those in favour, please say yea?

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motions stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 41, 42, 43, 44, 45 and 46 have been grouped for debate and are to be voted on separately.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out lines 12 and 13 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"during the period by railway companies; and".

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out lines 14 to 24 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) implement a scheme that provides for sanctions to be applied to railway companies that do not meet the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (a)."

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21

(a) by striking out line 18 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"than the railway companies and the Canadian Wheat Board, that meet".

(b) by striking out line 22 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out lines 21 to 24 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"(ii) sanctions to be applied to system participants or any classes thereof, other than the railways, that do not meet the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (a), shall be non-pecuniary."

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette) moved:

Motion No. 45

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out line 32 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"the commission, is equal to 20% of the"

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out lines 32 to 34 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"the Commission, is equal to 20% of the volume-related variable costs of the railway company plus 100% of the cost of capital portion of the line-related variable costs for grain dependent branch lines."

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 41 in my name seeks to remove any power the Bill gives the Grain Transportation Administrator over the Canadian Wheat Board or the elevators. I repeat what occurred during debate on the previous motions. This is a transportation Bill, not an agricultural Bill or farmers' Bill. It is an anti-farmer Bill. It should not give a transportation agency power over a non-transportation agency. In other words, the Grain Transportation Administrator, under the authority of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), should not have powers over the Canadian Wheat Board, which is under the authority of the Minister in charge of the Wheat Board who sits in the Senate. One Crown agency should not be in a position to exercise authority over another Crown agency, particularly when they are entirely different departments.

I want to quote Mr. Esmond Jarvis, Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board, from Issue No. 119 of the minutes of the Transport Committee at page 103. He said:

In addition to its detailed knowledge on supply and transportation, the board of course knows the exact requirements of the customer. Importer confidence in the Canadian system is very dependent upon the board maintaining a closely co-ordinated relationship between supplies, transportation and sales.

We were also told by the Wheat Board Advisory Committee, by Mr. Charlie Gibbings who is a former Wheat Board Commissioner and by farmers that the transportation of grain is inextricably linked to the purchase, marketing and sale of grain. You cannot separate transportation from those other operations. We want to remove any power that the Bill gives the Administrator over the Canadian Wheat Board and the elevator companies.

I have already said why he should not have powers over another agency of Her Majesty, but we include elevator companies because the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission already have all the powers they need over the elevator companies. In fact, the Canadian Wheat Board has in place a system of sanctions. If a grain company or elevator company ships the wrong grade, the wrong kind or in any other way breaks the requirement for the shipping of grain, the Canadian Wheat Board places penalties upon that grain company. Similarly, the Canada Grain Commission has powers over the grain elevator companies in the matter of dockage, elevation, storage, handling charges and grades. Where an elevator company violates any of these conditions the Canada Grain Commission has powers over them. We do not need the Senior Grain Transportation Administrator as a third party with powers over the Canadian Wheat Board, the Canadian Grain Commission and the elevator companies. It is just sheer administrative, bureaucratic nonsense. The clause as it now reads can only be construed as a blatant, direct attempt by the Government to reduce the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission. That is unacceptable to western Canada.

Motion No. 42 limits the application of sanctions which the Senior Grain Transportation Administrator can apply to the railroads. As I said earlier, the Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission already have the power of sanction over the grain companies, but the Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission cannot place any sanctions on the railroads. They have no authority to do so. We do not object to the Administrator having those powers over the railroads. As mentioned in earlier debate, Mr. Speaker, just imagine the spectacle of an agency of the Minister of Transport's Department applying sanctions and penalties upon the Canadian Wheat Board which comes under the jurisdiction of the Minister in charge of the Wheat Board. What about the Minister of Transport through the Administrator applying sanctions on the Canada Grain Commission, which comes under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan)? You have three Crown agencies, each one under a different Department, which tells you something of the stupidity of the Government's organization.

I do not have sufficient time to go through each one of the motions that have been grouped for debate. I am sure my colleagues in the Conservative Party and my own colleagues will want to cover each one of these motions at length and in detail. They are extremely important to the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission and are designed to prevent any bureaucratic duplication in the application of this Bill should it ever become law—if and when it ever becomes law.

I admit that there are other elements of transportation involved in the handling and transportation of grain. One can think of the St. Lawrence Seaway, the ports of Thunder Bay, Churchill, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, and here again, will the Grain Transportation Administrator have some authority to put on sanctions against the St. Lawrence Seaway? At least that comes under the same Department, as do the ports. Will the Minister have authority to provide for sanctions or awards on trucking companies under the jurisdiction of a provincial Government? Will sanctions and awards be applied equitably as between the railroads and the trucking companies, or as between any of the what are called system participants? Again, the clause indicates what kind of mess the Bill is. This Bill is poorly thought out, poorly drafted, and obviously little, if any, consideration has been given to the ramifications of the legislation. What it means down the road if it ever became the law of the land, the Lord forbid.

There is an excellent reason for the number of amendments placed on the Order Paper by the Official Opposition and ourselves. If nothing else, they point out what a poorly drafted, poorly thought out piece of legislation it is. The Government is, in its single-minded, knee-jerk attempt, destroying the statutory grain rate and is giving money to the railroads with minimal accountability and no chance for a return on capital investment to taxpayers.

In the Government's blind attempts to meet those two relatively narrow objectives, the Government has failed completely and miserably to take into account the ramifications of the legislation which affect other agencies of the Crown, that affect transportation from Halifax to Prince Rupert, that affect grain companies and grain producers, and will result in the abandonment of at least another 1,500 miles of branch lines in western Canada. Most of those miles will be rail lines that are in the basic network that were supposed to be guaranteed until the year 2000.

There is excellent reason, and we have the grounds, Mr. Speaker, for opposing this legislation with every means that we have at our disposal under the rules. That has been our intent since day one and it remains our intent. If this Bill is passed as is, I want the Government and any successive government to be aware of my warning. Even the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool in a telex yesterday made it very plain that unless at least five significant changes are made in this legislation it should be withdrawn. The three Wheat Pools and the UGG have tried to negotiate and bargain with the Government. I think they got euchred and sucked in. Now they realize the stubbornness on the Government side. What they thought they could bargain and obtain in legislation, the Government is still refusing to give.

A couple of items the Government is prepared to move on, and one in particular is the safety net. There is nothing wrong with the principle of a safety net, but the way the Government wants to do it would be so unfair to grain producers in western Canada that it does not deserve the attention or support of this House unless the Government makes a substantial change to that safety net.

For those reasons we urge upon the House that it accept these amendments that keep the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission intact. We would allow the Grain Transportation Administrator to exercise his sanctions and awards over the railroads, which have been and still are the villains. These motions provide some good improvements to the legislation. I hate to be around helping the Government draft legislation, but it has done such an abysmal job that we are trying to be positive with amendments, even though our main objective is to persuade the Government to withdraw it or to persuade Members of the Official Opposition to join with us in stopping it. If they do, we can stop it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It has been brought to my attention that I neglected to mention the seconders to these motions, and I think I should do so now. In the case of Motion No. 41, it is moved by Mr. Benjamin and seconded by Mr. de Jong; Motion No. 42 is moved by Mr. Benjamin and seconded by Mr. de Jong; Motion No. 43 is moved by Mr. Benjamin and seconded by Mr. de Jong; Motion No. 44 is moved by Mr. McKnight and seconded by Mr. Mazankowksi; Motion No. 45 is moved by Mr. Mayer and seconded by Mr. Gustafson; and Motion No. 46 is moved by Mr. Benjamin and seconded by Mr. de Jong.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, at the outset I want to state that I agree with the sentiments expressed by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) when he said that this Bill is a mess. It is very complicated. It creates a great deal of uncertainty and anxiety. It is a Bill that should not be proceeded with unless there are substantial changes.

The Hon. Member referred to four or five changes that were advanced by members of the Wheat Pool organization. That has been our position all along. Unless these changes are incorporated, I submit that the Bill should not be proceeded with. It will not meet the objectives originally outlined by the previous Minister of Transport, nor will it meet the objectives of western Canadian agriculture. As it now stands, it enjoys literally no support in the western agricultural community. It does not enjoy the support of grain producers. It does not enjoy the support of cattle producers or livestock producers. It does not enjoy the support of the respective commodity groups. Certainly it does not enjoy the support of processors. The only group which supports the piece of legislation is indeed the railroads, because they have for themselves a sweetheart deal. By virtue of the fact that the whole Crow benefit will be paid directly to the railroads, it is even more of a sweetheart deal. All they are doing is perpetuating a cost-plus transportation system and a guaranteed annual income for the railroads, nothing more.

At the outset let me indicate that it is not always easy to speak to a group of amendments which involve different principles, but I will try to cover them in the order in which they appear. Motion No. 41 is an amendment to Clause 21 in which the Hon. Member for Regina West wishes to substitute "railway companies" for "system participants". Quite frankly, Clause 21 outlines the method in which the Administrator can engage in establishing performance objectives and regulations for the various system participants. The Hon. Member for Regina West simply wants the Administrator, by virtue of his amendment, to establish objectives only for the railroads. We have contended all along that the grain handling and transportation system constitutes a much larger body than simply the railroads. It involves the elevators, the Canadian Wheat Board, the Canadian Grain Commission, the terminals, the lakers, the St. Lawrence Seaway, the port operations and some 25 to 30 unions. Each and every one of these groups plays a very significant and unique role. Each and every one of these groups has a certain responsibility to fulfil.

I appreciate what the Hon. Member is attempting to do. He is attempting to attack the railroads. They are responsible to a large extent for whether or not grain moves, but to single them out in this case is totally wrong.

Turning to the original terms of reference or objectives of the Grain Transportation Co-ordinator, they read:

(1) to increase the grain handling and transportation system's capacity to achieve a 20 per cent increase in exports in 1980 and a 50 per cent increase by 1985 (to 30 million tonnes);

Those objectives have in fact been achieved. They would not have been achieved by simply applying performance objectives to the railroads. They brought all parties together and said; "These are the objectives and these are achievable targets; let us put our shoulders to the wheel and do just that". They continue:

(2) to ensure that prairie grain moves to domestic consumption and export positions in a prompt, efficient and orderly manner;

That was not an objective of the railroads; it was an objective of the total community. Further they read:

(3) to secure the co-operation and participation of the industries concerned in providing the required transportation and handling services and facilities;

(4) to carry out the required planning and implement the changes necessary to make the forwarding system operate more efficiently and effectively, and to increase its capacity to meet the 1985 target of a 50 per cent increase in exports;

Certainly the railroads played a very significant role. They had to have sufficient rolling stock and their house in order to move that quantity of grain. To single them out as the only component which had to meet that objective is very wrong. The last objective reads:

(5) to keep all parties and the public fully informed about the system's operations and shortcomings.

This would mean that everyone knew what was going on. The producers and the community at large knew and understood the role of each significant component and their objectives. We as a Party cannot support the NDP proposal, which excludes the other players in this very important area.

Motion No. 42 really sets out to do the same thing. In part it reads:

—implement a scheme that provides for sanctions to be applied to railway companies—

Here again the Hon. Member has sought to substitute "system participants" for "railway companies". Again it suggests to the House that it is only the railways which make a difference in terms of whether or not grain moves. We will not be supporting Motion No. 42.

The intention of the Hon. Member in Motion No. 43 is honourable, except he may want to reconsider Clause 21(b). Clause 21(b)(i) reads in part:

—awards to be applied to system participants or any classes thereof, other than the railway companies—

The Hon. Member is proposing to substitute that with the following:

"participants, other than the Canadian Wheat Board, or any classes thereof that".

He is putting in a provision that would exclude the Canadian Wheat Board from receiving awards. If the Canadian Wheat Board performs satisfactorily and achieves its objectives, it should be entitled to rewards. Those advantages would in fact accrue to producers. The Hon. Member wanted to ensure that sanctions would not be imposed against the Canadian Wheat Board. We can support that, because we find it very wrong and offensive that sanctions would be applied to the Canadian Wheat Board which would then be transferred to producers. In effect, they would penalize producers for something over which they really have no control. If the Canadian Wheat Board, acting on behalf of producers, does its job, performs well and meets its objectives so that some benefit accrues to the Canadian Wheat Board and thereby to producers, we think it should be supported.

Other Members of the New Democratic Party may want to comment on this, but as it now stands we would have difficulty supporting it. We covered that same provision in Motion No. 44 which was introduced by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight). In part it reads:

—sanctions to be applied to system participants or any classes thereof, other than the railways, that do not meet the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (a), shall be non-pecuniary.

That means that any sanctions applied to the Canadian Wheat Board would be of a non-pecuniary nature and the producer would not be penalized. The Member may want to reconsider that.

Amendment No. 44 ensures that sanctions relating to performance objectives would be applied to system participants other than the railways in a non-pecuniary fashion. We think that is realistic and logical. I urge that Members of the NDP support that provision rather than Motion No. 43, which really achieves the same thing. It does not restrict the Canadian Wheat Board from receiving awards for performance and the meeting of targets that may in fact be realized, all for the benefit of the producers.

I turn now to Motions Nos. 45 and 46 which have to do with the imposition of sanctions against the railroads. They relate to the maximum level of sanctions that could be applied against the railway companies under the performance awards and sanction scheme implemented under Section 21. In the original Bill this level was set at 40 per cent of the contribution to constant cost.

Since we do not support the concept of a contribution to constant costs and we are calling for a three-year freeze or three-year deferral of any contribution to constant costs until such time as the CTC and the Government completes its study, we find it inappropriate to impose a sanction assessed upon a contribution which we do not believe to be satisfactory. We chose the 20 per cent of volume-related variable costs. That would be the total out-of-pocket costs or volume-related costs which would include the total cost of the movement of grain, including labour, fuel, depreciation on return and capital investment, all of those with the exception of a contribution to profit or constant costs.

We say that the sanction should be equal to 20 per cent of the volume-related variable costs. This would have the effect of providing some teeth. We believe that inasmuch as this Bill constitutes a sweetheart deal for the railways, the guarantees with respect to service, investment and performance objectives leaves much to be desired. In its amendment the Government reduced our 20 per cent. We moved this amendment in committee and chose the 20 per cent figure. The Government moved a subamendment reducing it to 10 per cent. This amendment seeks to restore the sanction to a level of 20 per cent of variable costs. We believe 10 per cent is far too low. It would mean a possible sanction of $65 million in 1983-84, $71 million for 1984-85 and $75 million for 1985-86. Given the level of payments that the farmers and the taxpayers of Canada are going to be paying, we think that is a very conservative sanction. We commend it to the House and ask that it be supported.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Motions Nos. 41 to 46 now before the House. I will describe and comment on some of them as I go along. The motions make amendments to Clause 21 of the Bill which outlines the performance objectives, regulations and the sanctions that could be placed on participants in the grain handling and grain transportation system. The last part sets out a method of settling any disputes concerning those awards of sanctions.

What seems to be at issue in the debate on these motions, and most of them are beamed at pretty much the same thing, is the Administrator. We will not know it until after the vote whether that will be a separate agency or part of the Canadian Wheat Board, but because the Government supports the separate agency concept we assume that will probably result when the vote is completed. The next general area which these motions deal with is what participants should have additional sanctions imposed upon them and, lastly, what the limits of those sanctions should be in financial terms.

The Conservative Transport critic, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), talked about the sanctions in this Bill being something that should be so generalized that they apply to all participants in the system. That sounds fine from a general theory point of view. Unfortunately, it ignores the sanctions and the system that have been in place for many years.

There is a built-in system of awards and sanctions which applies to most of the system participants at the moment. They exist under the powers of the Canada Grain Act and the Canadian Wheat Board Act. The one shortfall and a very important aspect of the whole grain handling and transportation system is that there is not a place where sanctions can be imposed or an order forced on the railways.

I would like to recall some of my time with the Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee. I recall going to the fall meeting in 1977-78, one of the worst shipping years for farmers in recent times. We had a pretty good marketing program. The Board had plenty of sales contracts set up and ready to fulfil. The procedure followed in such a case is that once the sales commitments have been made, they approach the railways to see how many cars they will commit to the grain fleet, how many will be used in the next few months to haul grain. The railways give that commitment. The board uses that grain fleet, placing it at country elevator points to move the required grades and kinds of grain to water shipping.

That crop year started August 1. By the time we got to December 1, one railway company was almost 3,000 cars behind its commitment. It is rather silly to keep that many cars on the books as a negative balance, so it started over with new commitments. Within three or four months, that same railway company was between 3,000 and 4,000 cars behind its commitment. There was no way that that railway company could be forced to comply with its promise to supply cars for the shipment of grain. Therefore, the grain was not shipped.

Some Members of the House will recall that some farmers attempted to sue the Canadian Pacific Railway, the railway involved, for not supplying service. They were ruled out of order by the court because the court deemed that, though they had grown the grain, had delivered it to the elevators and had lost the markets as a result of the railway's actions, they were not deemed to have been shippers and could therefore not prosecute. I think that is probably what precipitated the actions that followed. Provincial Governments and the Wheat Board on behalf of farmers bought hopper cars and distributed them to the railways in order that there would be no excuse for not supplying rolling stock to producers.

Even with the user supplying the rolling stock, who in this case is the farmer assisted by the provincial Government, there is still no real clout anywhere in any Act to force the railway to put the three-man crew that is needed to move 110 cars on a railway locomotive in front of those cars. This Bill is the only Bill that has come before the House since that time that attempts to address the problem of how to apply sanctions to that very important system participant through legislation.

Elevator companies, farmers and terminal operators are now all subject to sanctions and penalties from the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canada Grain Commission. Those sanctions are already in place and I cannot understand why the former Minister, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), would say that we need to have those sanctions spread broadly through this Bill, which, I suppose, would operate in competition with the Canada Grain Act and the Canadian Wheat Board Act, in order to, as he says, allow the Canadian Wheat Board to receive rewards. From whom would they receive the rewards, Mr. Speaker?

The only source of funds for the Canadian Wheat Board are the funds that are extracted from the farmers in the process of moving grain from the farm to the final market. That is done at the highest possible price in order to extract the highest price from the market and return all of the surplus funds back to the producer. How can the Canadian Wheat Board receive a reward? From whom would it receive it? Surely only from the seller or the farmer himself, who ultimately receives it anyway. There is no real, practical need for rewards to be allocated to the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Malone: Give them a trophy.

Mr. Althouse: The Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) says that we could perhaps supply the Wheat Board with a trophy. I believe that that has already been done on occasion. I have seen the trophy room of the Canadian Wheat Board. Those trophies include such things as large, regular trophies right down to a bronzed pitchfork, all of which were presented to the Wheat Board at one point or another in recognition of the good job it has done.

I see that you have motioned that my time is nearly up, Mr. Speaker. In conclusion, I would like to deal with the maximum level of penalties that can be levied against the railways. We argue that the railways should be named in this Bill because the other participants are already covered under previous Acts. We would like to keep it clear as to which Act applies in which case.

There are two motions in this regard, Motions Nos. 44 and 45. Motion No. 44 has the effect of saying that the railways should not be allowed to collect 20 per cent over and above operational costs until such time as the railways have complied with the shipping requirements of the Wheat Board and the producers to get the product to market. We have added something else to that through Motion No. 46, which has the effect of saying that 100 per cent of the capital cost of rehabilitating the branch lines should be withheld each year until it has been made very clear that the work has been done on the branch lines and that the railways are continuing to deliver grain according to the shipping orders and at the rate that the railways have committed to.

Motion No. 46 is very important because we all know of many branch lines which have ultimately been abandoned. There is one such line in my riding which runs from Foam Lake to Wishart. Moneys were allocated each year to keep that line in repair. Five years after the railways had already received more than half a million dollars for keeping that line in good repair, it was reported to the CTC that the line was not fit to run a locomotive over. It was in the very same state of disrepair the line had been in five years previous when the railway had appeared before the CTC.

The pertinent question asked by farmer interveners at the CTC hearings was what the railways did with the $500,000. The records of the railway showed that it had not spent anything like that on repairs to the line, even if the wages of the repair crew were included. The answer to that question never came out in the hearings. The CTC ultimately closed the line in spite of there being great gaps in the process.

There was nothing that could be done to force the railways to provide service in 1977 and 1978, and I submit that unless it is clearly specified that there must be higher penalties built into this Bill, there will be nothing to force compliance with the needs of the western grain transportation system if these motions are not adopted and included in the Bill. We must do this now when the Bill is before us and we do have the opportunity to adopt these motions.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I would like to apologize to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone). I am sure we will be hearing from him later. I did not realize that he would rise at this time.

I rise to speak to Motions Nos. 41 through 46, Mr. Speaker. All motions grouped here are designed to protect the interests of the producers and the interests of the taxpayers who are contributing so much through this Bill to the movement of grain in western Canada. In turn, Mr. Speaker, we believe those taxpayers should have some protection from a repetition of the past history of the railways, which have not really fulfilled many obligations on behalf of the producers in Canada and have not fulfilled commitments that have been made to the Government at certain times.

I would like to deal with Motions Nos. 41 and 42. These motions basically remove from the authority of the Grain Transportation Administrator the power to establish schemes that could be applied as a sanction against all system participants, not only the railways. The motions that follow, including Motion No. 44 which stands in my name, go on to state that, in the case of other system participants, the sanctions applied should not be pecuniary sanctions.

It is very difficult quickly to deny that sanctions are provided for at this time. We know that there are sanctions provided for by other Acts but most of those sanctions reflect upon the income of the producers, whether they be sanctions applied to the elevator companies, to individual producers in the shipment of producer cars or indeed sanctions applied to companies that are shipping grain other than the normal line elevator companies.

As the grain transportation system stands today, a line elevator company may be penalized a car if it ships the wrong product or if it underships by weight. A penalty can be applied in the allocation of cars through the block system to those elevator companies. In most areas, that in turn reflects upon the producers and the producers are denied the ability to ship grain because of the denial of that car as a penalty. I would put to you, Mr. Speaker, that that is indeed a pecuniary sanction on producers of grain.

Let us take a look at Motion No. 43, Mr. Speaker. I suggest to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) that he consider whether he would like to see the Canadian Wheat Board awarded. The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) asked what awards we could have. As the Canadian Wheat Board is a Crown agency, I should think that the Government has the ability to award it for performance that has been met and I do not see anything wrong with putting that in the Bill. Even with the possibility that those awards would not be given in the future, it should be included to facilitate matters. Those awards could be made in several ways, such as by the Government purchasing cars and allowing the Canadian Wheat Board to control them. In turn, there would be a benefit to the farmers who use the Board.

Motion No. 45 was proposed by this Party in committee. We chose the figure of 20 per cent of the volume-related variable costs. That is really the full contribution to constant costs. We thought that because of the investment made by the taxpayers of Canada and because of the requirement in the Bill that producers pay additional funds for the movement of grain, the railroad companies should fulfil what is basically a verbal commitment. Everything we have as a commitment from the railroads is basically a verbal commitment that they "shall" expend funds given to them by the taxpayers of Canada and the producers to improve the rail system. There is nothing in the Bill that requires the railroads to invest in any special area.

We have statements from the presidents of the Canadian railroads to the effect that funds provided by the taxpayers of Canada for the upgrading of the rail system will be included in general revenue. If that general revenue will allow the railroad companies to diversify into oil companies and oil exploration or to establish larger hotel chains or enter the trucking business, as some Members of the NDP have suggested, then the Bill should provide for a sanction on the railroads that would require them to put that investment into structures designed to help them meet the commitment assigned to them by the Administrator.

At 20 per cent of variable costs, which is the full contribution to constant costs, in 1983-84 there could have been a sanction of $130 million out of $790 million; in 1984-85 a sanction of $142 million out of $893 million; and in 1985-86 a sanction of $150 million out of $987 million. Those figures relate to the removal of the contribution of constant costs that the railroads would receive. They are, in fact, guaranteed profits to the railroads. If they are to be given authority to allocate those funds at their discretion, we think the penalty for not doing so in a proper manner should be their profit. In effect, they would still be able to invest, but if they invested improperly, they would not have a profit.

Motion No. 46 in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is basically the same as Motion No. 45, although it is a little more complicated. I suggest that if we want to simplify a Bill as complicated as Bill C-155, the best way to express sanction would be by a straight percentage point of the fixed number. The motion proposed by the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) would simplify the Bill and impose sanctions on the railroads as required by taxpayers and producers.

I should like to return to Motion No. 44. The reason for non-pecuniary sanctions on all system participants other than the railroads is quite apparent. In committee the Hon. Member for Regina West presented an amendment and then, as has happened to all of us, when the ramifications of it became apparent, he did not vote for it. He had suggested that sanctions be applied to elevator companies through a certain percentage of handling charges, elevation charges or storage charges to be fixed by the Administrator. It is quite apparent that, in turn, that would be a pecuniary charge on producers as the elevator companies would have to go to the Canadian Grain Commission and ask for an increase in elevator an handling charges because of the fine. The extra charge would be handed on to the producer.

Mr. Benjamin: They would not get it.

Mr. McKnight: I hear the Hon. Member for Regina West saying that they would not get it. Then I ask him why he did not vote for his amendment in committee. It is apparent that pecuniary sanctions cannot be placed on producers but awards can be given to the Crown agency, the Canadian Wheat Board, which in turn would benefit producers.

We will support Motion No. 44 and Motion No. 45, Mr. Speaker, and we will consider supporting some of the other amendments. I hope that Members of the Government and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister will explain what would be wrong with non-pecuniary sanctions being applied to all system participants other than the railroad companies.

In that vein, Mr. Speaker, I must say that the last time I was on my feet in the House the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) was rising to speak on another matter. I had hoped he was rising to enlighten the House on why the Government would not support Motions No. 39 and No. 40 which would protect the Canadian Wheat Board. I hope the Minister or his Parliamentary Secretary will tell us why the Bill should not include a clause specifying non-pecuniary sanctions to system participants other than the railroads.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on Motions Nos. 41 through 45. I come from the Province of Alberta which sends 21 Members to Parliament. In the last election it sent 21 Members of the Progressive Conservative Party to Ottawa. In this Chamber today we have a Government Party with 21 Members from eight Provinces and two Territories. As well as the debate on the Constitution, which was originally an attack on the regions of Canada and not just on the West, there was the energy program which was an attack on the West, VIA Rail which damaged much of Canada but did a lot of damage to tourism in western Canada, and now there is the Crow rate. With these measures there was an attack against the three most important economic sectors in my Province, energy, agriculture and tourism.

I submit that the Government does not have the mandate for such an attack on that region of the country. It does not want to listen to people who are sent here as representatives because its instinct is for closure on one of the three most important economic aspects of that region of the country.

Against that background, I rise to speak on this set of motions. The very fact that the Government has 21 Members from eight Provinces and two Territories means that all its other Members come from Quebec and Ontario. They are not regionally representative, not regionally sensitive, and ought to be duty bound to listen to the arguments we put in this House.

The question today is whether or not we should have performance guarantees for shipping grain. The first motion states that that performance guarantee should be limited to the railways. That, Sir, asks the fundamental question, for whom are we performing? I submit that performance is for no one other than the producer. It is not a performance guarantee for governments, so that more paperwork can be checked. It is not a performance guarantee for the international marketplace except as it relates to our economy. It is a performance guarantee for farmers.

If it is a performance guarantee for the farmer, then he must obviously have every link which relates to performance guaranteed to him. There can be no system of performance if you call for performance on only one part of the system. As well, performance ought not to be a question of whether or not we like one of the links of the system. It is the view of some—in this case, perhaps the NDP—that they do not like the railways, but you cannot simply limit performance guarantees to the railways because it will not guarantee performance. Performance must relate to the whole system and its judge and jury must be the producers. Performance guarantees are not a question of morals. Fundamentally, it is purely and simply a question of performance. The farmer ought to be the final judge, and it is for that reason that performance objectives must be established.

There are many aspects to the whole question. I draw to your attention the country elevators, the grain terminals, the shunting yards at the port, the port authorities, the tugboat operators and operating system, international shipping, the St. Lawrence Seaway and, while I mention it last it is certainly not least, organized labour. I can understand the instinct of the New Democratic Party not to have any system which might have some persuasive influence on organized labour. I believe it is the obligation upon us all to recognize that fair and equitable treatment of labour organizations is an imperative part of today's society. However, the fact of the matter is that it is an integral link in performance and you cannot have performance without looking at every aspect.

The New Democratic Party has made much ado about CN and CP buying up trucking fleets on the Prairies. At this point it would not be relevant to this part of the debate to comment at length on that matter, except to say that we should not have performance guarantees which affect only the railways. If the trucking companies are as bad as the NDP allege, why would we not at least have a generalized performance guarantee system which could expand to the "evil" that Party claims is there? It seems to me it is obvious that we must have performance guarantees which do not apply to simply one unit, but rather to the whole system.

On that basis I would like to submit to you, Sir, the kind of country we would have if we took the present philosophy of the New Democratic Party and applied it to a number of systems governing Canada. In an NDP Bill 101 there would be a performance guarantee for only one link in a chain. In their Bill 102 there would be a performance guarantee for only one of the couplings on a train. In NDP Bill 103 there would be a performance guarantee that elevator doors would open and close at only one floor. NDP Bill 104 would have a performance guarantee that our medical services would keep only one of the organs viable in the human body. NDP Bill 105, a performance guarantee that only one of the sections of a scaffolding would meet safety standards. NDP Bill 106, a performance guarantee that the left side—that is the port side—of all boats must not leak. NDP Bill 107, a performance guarantee that one section of a rope for mountain climbing must be secured. NDP Bill 108, a performance guarantee that one child in each school gets immunization vaccinations. NDP Bill 109, a performance guarantee—and you will notice the NDP bias shows up here, Mr. Speaker—on all engines on the left side of all aircraft. NDP Bill 110, all automobiles and buses shall have performance guarantees on the brakes on the left-hand side.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Malone: The New Democratic Party are now asking about relevance. The relevance is that if we are going to talk about the concept of performance guarantees—and the NDP are taking the view that is important, as well as my own Party—then surely on a question of getting grain to market one cannot say that performance guarantees should apply only to the railway system. We have trucks, country elevators, terminals, shunting yards, the St. Lawrence Seaway. If we are going to have a system of authority and we are going to have performance guarantees, those performance guarantees have to apply to all parts of the system. Certainly, if you ask prairie farmers who they suspect is holding back on their performance, they will be quick to finger the railways. They are not far behind in fingering organized labour. And whether or not that accusation by farmers is correct, if the authority is there for the purpose of giving performance guarantees, it should affect every section of the transportation of grain to port. If it does not, then the final objective of acquiring a system in which we can achieve performance objectives will not be met.

I would like to accept the challenge of the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) who asked who will pay. Perhaps at this point it is not appropriate to say definitively who will pay for the rewards for improved transportation when those objectives are met. However, let me submit to you, Sir, that there could be a system under which the farmers could both afford to pay and get richer at the same time. Today, under a system of inadequate transportation, farmers who combine in the fall of the year put their grain in their granaries and it may sit eight months to a year accumulating not one cent of interest. It is value stored. For their operating costs the farmers go to the bank and borrow at interest. If those farmers could move that volume of grain to market faster because there were performance guarantees, they would receive cash to meet their operating costs and be able to avoid interest charges. In that case they could afford to pay more if certain objectives were met, and both the railways and the producers would be better off. I submit that the New Democratic Party should do some rethinking of their motions.

Mr. Speaker, I will call it one o'clock, because it is now one o'clock.

Mr. Althouse: I think he has had about eight minutes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I believe we should proceed in that way, then, because I notice there are two Hon. Members seeking to be recognized. Accordingly, while the Hon. Member for Crowfoot has completed his remarks, when we reach Orders of the Day the Chair will look to whomever may want the floor at that time.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

CENTENNIAL OF "LA PRESSE"

Mr. Robert Gourd (Argenteuil-Papineau): Madam Speaker, it took a lot of courage, back in 1884, to launch the daily newspaper La Presse. Highly politicized at first, the paper became a reflection of society as it evolved over the years. La Presse is 100 years old today. For 100 years it has reported the news, but above all, it became an institution, so much so that even our legislators tried to protect it. Madam Speaker, today we wish to salute the men and women who have defended our right to be informed over the years, the journalists, who are important, although we must not forget the printing staff, delivery boys and girls, and so many others.

About La Presse it can be said that although time goes by and nothing remains the same, we can always rely on La Presse. We are indeed fortunate in this democratic society of ours that not only allows freedom of the press and freedom of information but actually promotes those freedoms.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT LTD.—CALL FOR CONTINUANCE OF COMPANY

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, officials of the Government met yesterday with the receiver for White Farm Equipment Limited, which indicates a decision on the fate of the company is imminent. Nobody is more concerned about this decision than the approximately 120 White Farm Equipment dealers, their 1,000 employees, and the thousands of farmers who own White implements. The message many of these people have received from the Government is causing them great concern. For example, a White dealer in Warren, Manitoba, stated in a telegram to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Lumley) "The only solution is to keep White Farm ongoing and this must be done immediately".

This particular dealer, and others who have signed petitions calling for the continuance of the company, expressed their perception that the Government is not necessarily concerned about keeping the company alive as a separate, viable entity. Yet the Receiver has been given offers which would keep the company going.

Farmers who own White implements want assurances that they will be able to get replacement parts. White dealers do not want to lose their businesses. Nor do they want to go into other equipment lines, which in many cases are already being carried by their competitors down the street. What these dealers do want is assurance that they will stay in business. Surely that is not too much to ask.

DISARMAMENT

SIXTY-ONE-DAY FAST TO PROTEST WORLD MILITARY EXPENDITURES

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Madam Speaker, on October 5 Karen Harrison, a young Toronto dancer, completed a 61-day-fast to focus attention on the links between military spending and world-wide hunger. In ending her fast she asked Canadians to support the various rallies for disarmament to take place on October 22, this Saturday, and to make a one-day fast on October 24, United Nations Day, in order to divert the money saved to international development.

While one-third of the world's people lack the basic needs of life, world military spending is now over $600 billion a year.

The United Nations Centre for Disarmament has calculated that $18.5 billion yearly would provide adequate food, water, education, health and housing for the world poor. I plead with the Government and all Members of Parliament to take this message seriously. We now have enough nuclear armaments on both sides to destroy all life on this planet. We also have abject poverty, hunger, and suffering.

This Saturday Canadians are asked to show their support for disarmament by demonstrations, rallies, and other activities. On Monday several MPs in this House will fast for one day and send the money saved to OXFAM and other aid agencies. This action can be considered only one step in a continuing movement to make the world secure and reduce poverty.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time is up.

NATIONAL GALLERY

THEFT OF REMBRANDT ETCHINGS—REVIEW OF SECURITY PROCEDURES DEMANDED

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, Ottawa police and the National Gallery of Canada have confirmed that last Friday a man claiming to do research on our national treasures walked away with two Rembrandt etchings, replacing them with phonies. The man, using an alias, apparently had impressive enough credentials to be allowed to spend six hours in the Gallery's vault. In any event, the two etchings, whose estimated value is $100,000 each, are missing, along with the individual. This theft followed by a few months an incident at the Public Archives where another man, again with legitimate credentials, asked to study the calligraphy on the original Constitution proclamation. He defaced the document with red paint.

I urge the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) to meet with the directors of the National Museums of Canada, the National Library and the Public Archives to ask for a review of their security procedures. The need for security, of course, must be balanced with that of the legitimate requirements of scholarly research. However, Canada's cultural heritage, whether original copies of our Constitution proclamations or valuable art works, is held by these agencies in trust for the people of Canada. The Minister must ensure that trust is upheld. I hope to question the Minister of Communications on the matter later this day, Madam Speaker.

INCOME TAX

DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF MEMBERS OF TORONTO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, over the past eight months Revenue Canada has systematically focused its attentions on the tax status of participants in our cultural and artistic communities. Last week we had a situation where a prominent visual artist was forced by tax regulations to consider destroying his art. This week we have the case of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and its musicians, traditionally self-employed, who have been told they must consider themselves employees of the Symphony, despite the fact that they work for the Symphony less than 20 hours a week, are frequently engaged in other activities, and pay for and supply their own instruments. The effect on the musicians is a substantial reduction in their already modest income, forcing some musicians to leave the Symphony. This ruling comes after two similar rulings on Symphony orchestras in other cities have been overturned on appeal.

On the one hand Revenue Canada acts to restrict the production by visual artists, forces musicians out of orchestras, and actors out of theatre companies. On the other hand the Government spends millions of dollars on inquiring into the problems of culture in Canada. Is there not a contradiction there? Musicians, artists, actors, and writers, those who invest their lives in creating art and culture in this country, and who have very modest incomes, are harassed and denigrated. Yet in 1980 close to 5,000 Canadians making over $50,000 a year paid no tax at all as a result of tax loopholes and generous investment breaks. We say, let the cultural community create and perform, and let the taxman focus attention where it is needed.

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's time is up.

MEDICAL CARE

INCREASE IN DOCTORS' MALPRACTICE INSURANCE PREMIUMS

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, when evaluating the costs of Canada's health care system I am concerned with the inadequate consideration given to two recent developments in the practice of medicine in this country. First, the Canadian Medical Protective Association is proposing to raise drastically its annual fees for malpractice insurance, now set at $500 for every member, to between $300 and $2,900 annually, depending on the degree of risk of being sued according to each specialty.

In the past the difference in malpractice insurance costs incurred by the various medical specialties was distributed amongst all members. With the increased complexity and sophistication of medical and surgical procedures, the risk of litigation is becoming greater, and therefore serious consideration is being given to the feasibility of identifying categories of medical practice in terms of hazards and costliness of the medical legal problems which arise. Secondly, longer consultation times between doctors and their patients are required so that patients will have a better awareness of the possible complications which may be expected from surgical and other procedures before treatment is undertaken.

We live in times of increasing numbers of lawsuits. It is necessary for the federal and provincial Governments to make financial allowances for compensation for increased medical legal litigation when deciding on adjustments to fee schedules under our medicare system and on the over-all health care budgets.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

POST OFFICE BOX RENTAL FEES

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Madam Speaker, today I would like to address a problem brought to my attention by my constituents, which is the increase in cost of services offered by Canada Post. The cost to use a post office box has increased over 150 per cent in some cases. One constituent of mine in the town of Kensington has reported that a post office box, which he paid $15 for in 1982, now costs $33.92. This is an increase of over 100 per cent. Another constituent has informed me that in 1981 his post office box cost $5, in 1982 the same box cost $6, and in 1983 the cost is estimated at $16.96, again an increase of over 150 per cent.

In view of these examples of the rising cost of services provided by Canada Post, could the Minister responsible explain how these figures square with the Government's six and five program? I urge that the Minister check into these rising costs to see if the situation can be corrected or reversed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

QUOTATION FROM 1956 "HANSARD"

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, Hansard records that it was Monday, June 4, 1956, when the Leader of the Official Opposition said, as reported at page 4644:

> The freedom that we have here to shape and guide legislation, no matter on which side of the house we may sit, is part of the very freedom which we cherish here in this country of ours.

The prior Thursday a Member had moved a motion found proper to the Chair. Mr. Drew, in his remarks, reminded the Members that the House:

> —had become seized of the issue raised in that motion . . . It was in the hands of the hon. members of this house—
> Under those circumstances I submit it was not the Speaker's right to withdraw this matter from the house . . . It could only have been withdrawn properly by a decision of the house itself—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am afraid that statement is reflecting on a decision by the Speaker, and I cannot allow it.

Mr. Deans: I am quoting from Hansard.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for South West Nova.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order—

FOREIGN INVESTMENT REVIEW AGENCY

STATEMENT BY PREMIER OF NOVA SCOTIA

Miss Coline Campbell (South West Nova): Madam Speaker, on Saturday of last week the Premier of Nova Scotia, John Buchanan, told a party gathering that the Foreign Investment Review Agency was blocking investment in his Province by Japanese businessmen. Mr. Buchanan is not telling the truth and is using FIRA as a scapegoat for the failure of his own Government to attract new investment to Nova Scotia.

The facts are that no Japanese applications to invest in Nova Scotia have been disallowed by FIRA over the past two years. In all of Canada, 40 proposals by Japanese interests to invest in Canada have been allowed, and only one has been disallowed. The Japanese Ambassador to Canada, Kiyohisa Mikanagi, has stated that FIRA's review procedures are no longer a barrier, if they ever were, to Japanese investment in Canada. Similar statements have been made by the U.S. Ambassador to Canada, Paul Robinson.

It is understandable that the Premier of Nova Scotia should be distressed about the lack of investment in his Province. Perhaps if he looked to the deficiencies in his own policies instead of trying to blame others like the federal Government and the Japanese, in this case, wrongfully, the problem will correct itself.

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—CONSEQUENCES OF BANKRUPTCY

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, my statement is in reference to the Maislin Company bail out and, now, bankruptcy. I would like to say that this is the most blatant, disgusting give-away of taxpayers' dollars ever, but given the record of the Government and the fact that only $34 million is involved, I suppose it ranks pretty low on any list of revolting excesses by those clowns.

The then Minister of Industry, Trade and Consumer waffled, sidestepped, and in other ways refused to deal with the matter in a forthright way. Knowing the problem, the Government then authorized, at an incredible salary, the hiring of a new manager who had just bankrupted another trucking company in the United States.

Even over the objection of the Canadian Trucking Association, the Government, with great glee, tossed over $30 million of taxpayers' money to its personal friends. That cost people in my riding over $100,000. Now the Government will ensure that ordinary creditors, many of them small businesses, will get absolutely nothing; workers will get 50 cents on the dollar for back wages if they are lucky, and certainly no guarantee of future employment, but the poor banks will get nearly all their money.

In addition, the licences are now to be sold to another U.S. firm for a pittance, while no Canadian companies were given an opportunity to bid. The whole deal smells to high Heaven, and I, for one, will object to any FIRA application to allow these licences to leave Canada.

THE SENATE

REFORM URGED ON REGIONAL BASIS

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Madam Speaker, it was encouraging to read that the new Leader of the Conservative Party (Mr. Mulroney) recognizes that Canada has become a country of regions and has long since ceased to be a simplistic community of communities.

Permit me to quote my own words of March 10, 1981, on this matter:

> This nation, Canada, will increasingly evolve, and its interdependence will increasingly grow as a co-operative quasi economic and social federation of five national regions. Within these regions, Provinces shall co-operate and compete, shall integrate transportation and energy and other systems and shall evolve somewhat different and unique social and cultural systems. And over all, all these regions shall form the umbrella of a reorganized national Parliament.
> The relationship of the national umbrella and the regional well-being, aspirations and growth will be dynamic, changing and challenging. This then is, and will continue to be, the essence of Canada.

The patriation of the Constitution and the entrenchment of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms was a giant leap, and a mandatory one, toward this vision of Canada. Structural reform of the Senate on the basis of the five regions of Canada is also mandatory. Our nation shall endure and prosper.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—MURDER OF PRIME MINISTER IN MARXIST TAKEOVER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. What is the position of the Government of Canada in regard to the reported Marxist takeover in Grenada which was accomplished by murdering the Prime Minister, a number of his colleagues, and leading trade unionists on the island?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the events in Grenada have been very unfortunate. That type of violence cannot be condoned.

The Government has made a statement, which I actually made earlier this morning, to express our distress as a Government at the events, as well as my own personal sorrow because, although Maurice Bishop had an ideology which is not ours, he was in the Commonwealth and engaged in dialogue with us. I dare say he was a friend. Therefore I am very sorry at the turn of events.

We have expressed our dismay. I believe the Minister of State may have further up to date details, but this was my response as of earlier this morning.

CANADIAN AID PROGRAMS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, we share the thrust of the Prime Minister's statement of regret, of course, but in view of the brutality and murder involved, does this impact in any way on the thinking of the Government in regard to aid programs directed to that particular country in which, in this situation, the beneficiaries would become people, as the Prime Minister has indicated, with whom he would not like to do business?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I doubt whether that has been envisaged in the Department yet. I would only indulge in a bit of hindsight here.

This Government had given some modest assistance to Grenada. We did it in spite of cries—some of which I am afraid came from the other side—to the effect that that Government was left leaning. It is now apparent that there are more left leaners than Maurice Bishop was, and that it is wise not to cut off relations with Governments with which we may disagree if they are following policies which seem correct to them in their particular part of the world.

In other words, I have never been an advocate of cutting off countries because I disagreed with their ideology. I believe, and I have previously stated this precisely about the Grenada case, that when a country tries to export its revolution, then we indeed should show very great displeasure and take action. But I do not think we should try to influence the choice of independent peoples by using our aid programs.

Mr. Mulroney: Nor do I hold the view that one must necessarily reflect the political philosophy of the donor nation so as to benefit from foreign aid—not by a long shot.

REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, the instigator of the murder and revolution on the island was a member of the Government to which the Prime Minister refers. The takeover has been absolute and murderous. Since there are limits to the exercise of the philosophy to which the Prime Minister refers, and in light of the brutality and murderous nature of the takeover in Grenada, would the Prime Minister agree that it would be prudent to review diplomatic relations and aid programs of any kind that might be construed as giving the blessing of the people of Canada, however inadvertently, to this kind of regime which, though in its infancy, is well on its way to exporting violent ideals inimical to the interests and philosophy of Canadians?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, when a Government is overthrown by force, we would do that as a matter of course. There is a practice in this Government to review diplomatic relations, to use the words of the Leader of the Opposition. I am glad that in the first part of his question the Leader of the Opposition agreed with me that we should not make aid conditional upon compatability of government views in countries we purport to aid. I hope this, too, is a new departure that his colleagues and his Party will both accept.

SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, might I direct a further supplementary to the Prime Minister and ask whether he could indicate to the House and to Canadians, who are watching with interest the events in Grenada, what the condition is with respect to the safety and capacity to move and to communicate of Canadian families who are resident on the island, and of Canadians who may be travelling on the island on vacation?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I might indicate that a four-day 24-hour curfew has been established on the island. As my colleague, the Minister of State for International Trade, said yesterday, there are about 80 to 85 Canadians registered there, but some of them go there only in the winter. Therefore there is no way of finding out who, among the registered people, is there. I understand they are in touch with each other, and I understand from External Affairs that they are generally in good spirits. They are being advised to stay put, not to move, not to try to get out because attempts to leave might be dangerous.

By way of further information, there are 12 CIDA co-operants, 5 CUSO, one CBC reporter, and one officer of the Department of External Affairs who is from the Canadian High Commission in Barbados and was the gentleman who carried the message of the Canadian Government which the Prime Minister sent expressing the hope that violence would not be used.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REAPPOINTMENT OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister with regard to Canadair, whose survival is so important to all of us. The Prime Minister yesterday indicated, and I quote, "We do not want it", he meant Canadair, "to be dealt with by a parliamentary committee as is suggested by the Leader of the Opposition. We want it to be dealt with by this government-owned, this management company called CDIC."

How can the House and Canadians have faith in the Prime Minister's solution to the problem, management by CDIC, given the following two decisions taken by CDIC? First was the decision to reappoint the board of directors in its entirety last summer, in secret, notwithstanding the internal report prepared for Treasury Board which suggested or questioned the competence of the board. Second was the decision this week to reward effectively Mr. James Taylor, the President of the subsidiary in the United States, for his involvement in aircraft leasing to Canadair, by making him chairman of the board of the subsidiary corporation?

Can the Prime Minister tell us how we can possibly at the moment have any faith in his solution, and will he now reconsider and recognize the need, for the sake of Canadair, for a full inquiry by a committee of Parliament?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is repeating the very same questions I answered yesterday. I will answer them in the same way. The CDIC, which is the management company of Canadair, is a Crown corporation. It answers to Parliament through a Minister. That Minister will be appearing before a parliamentary committee. I would think it better, more conducive to the kind of co-operation which the Hon. Member's Leader was indicating would be forthcoming yesterday, if we heard from Senator Austin, if we heard what his objectives are, and if we heard the reasons for the actions about which the Hon. Member is now complaining.

STATEMENT BY MINISTER IN SENATE

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question relates directly to the Prime Minister's answer. In this case is the Prime Minister aware that the other day in the Senate when Senator Austin was asked about the CDIC, his answer about the press release this week was:

—I had authorized the making of a statement—

Senator Austin also said:

I do not propose to make it my own statement, in any parliamentary sense.

Can the Prime Minister now tell us how we can continue to have faith in a structure that appears to be making decisions contrary to Canadair's interest, and to the public's interest, when the Minister refuses to take any responsibility for the actions of the corporation? Can he now tell us whether he will not finally recognize that the future of Canadair is best dealt with by clearing the air through a parliamentary committee?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is misconstruing not only the thoughts, but the words of Senator Austin. Senator Austin has indicated he would appear before a committee, he would be answering questions and he would be stating the Government's medium and long-term policy. This will be done soon. I repeat, if the Hon. Member is suggesting some kind of co-operative approach to a difficult problem, then let this take place. If he is trying once again to put the spikes in Canadair—

Mr. Stevens: You have done that.

Mr. Trudeau: —as has been the effective use of the debates by some of his colleagues—

Mr. Andre: Jack Austin, Maurice Strong, are playing with billions of our dollars.

Mr. Trudeau: —then I suggest that he is doing it in the right way, but then he is contradicting the spirit of co-operation that his very Leader indicated to this House yesterday.

Some Hon. Members: Nonsense.

FISHERIES

ROYAL BANK FORECLOSURE OF CASSIAR, B.C. PLANT—PLIGHT OF FISHERMEN

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. In view of the bankruptcy of Maislin and the treatment which the employees of that company received yesterday, in view of the same kind of treatment of employees in the fishing industry in British Columbia through Cassiar fishery where fishermen are only going to receive about 20 per cent of their income this year as a result of the Royal Bank foreclosing, and in view of the fact the Minister has had six weeks to review this situation, what attempts has he made up until now to see that fishermen are adequately compensated for their year's work?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I understand that the company and the receivers are considering a number of options to maintain operations. The fleet and the plants will continue to operate for the remainder of the salmon fishing season. I do not think it would be advisable for me, in an industry that is over-capitalized, as my friend knows, and as Dr. Pearse noted in his report on the Pacific fishery which shows that it is a very over-capitalized fishery, to intervene at this moment in this specific case.

GILLNET LICENCES

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, I have another question for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The Minister may be aware that one of the suggestions for a bail-out is that Cassiar's gillnet fleet may be sold to the Government. In view of the fact that the Minister has already rejected a buy-back program for individual fishermen, and in view of the fact that he has bailed out Pacific Packers and its gillnet fleet, would the Minister guarantee to this House that there will be no sale of licences for the gillnet fleet until there has been a thorough review of the implications of the closure of that plant, and until he decides on a buy-back program for individual fishermen in British Columbia?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I will certainly give the commitment to my hon. friend that I will study his request.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REQUEST THAT STUDIES BE TABLED

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Yesterday the Leader of the Opposition made our generous offer, and it has been repeated again today, to take this whole matter of Canadair out of politics and put it in a special committee.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blenkarn: The Prime Minister will know that there have been a number of studies made by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and by CDIC itself with respect to the viability of Canadair. Will the Prime Minister, in view of his co-operation and co-operative attitude, table those studies so they could be referred to a committee?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is suggesting that by putting this matter in the hands of a committee it will be taken out of politics. I cannot believe he is serious. I think we practise politics in this place. The last days have shown that they are particularly divisive when they have to do with the kinds of economic questions we are trying to solve with the Crow and with Canadair. They denote two different approaches by two Parties with different approaches to politics. That is precisely the case, Madam Speaker. Everybody knows it is the case and that it would be a mistake to throw the management, the surveillance, the report on operations of a Crown corporation, into a parliamentary committee. Crown corporations were created to remove them from politics.

Mr. Stevens: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: The suggestions we have been hearing, and the guffaw that we still hear today from Members of the Tory Party, are intended precisely to reintroduce politics into the management of Crown corporations. That is contrary to 100 years of tradition, not only in Canada but in most parliamentary systems.

● (1430)

CONTENTS OF STUDIES

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. He has had before him a report on Canadair dated January, 1982. There was a further report dated November, 1982. Both of those reports have been kept secret. The Prime Minister now has before him another report which was completed by CDIC, with respect to how the company should go and how the technology should be preserved. Will the Prime Minister, to show some faith in the House of Commons, table those reports before the House today?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is asking me to comment on reports that I have not seen, of which I have no knowledge, and he is asking me to do it by the end of the day today. I suggest, if the Hon. Member were not playing politics with this, he at least would have given me notice of his question so that I would know what the heck he is talking about. Obviously he prefers to politicize this issue, once again showing that he is divided from his own Leader on this very subject.

REAPPOINTMENT OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. I would like to point out to him that we are not trying to politicize the issue. We are trying to get to the heart of the problem of accountability for this $1.4 billion loss.

My question relates to the accountability of the Prime Minister in this case. In view of the fact that we have had this loss and it is the largest in Canadian corporate history, and in view of the fact that the entire board was reappointed in secret, in spite of a government report which condemned the board and the management of the company, did the Prime Minister ask Senator Austin to explain to him why the entire board was reappointed?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Opposition keeps making much of the fact that Canadair has been losing money. It obviously has. The Government had to go before the House in order to get money to keep the company operating. The point is that it was losing money when it was in the private sector.

Mr. Stevens: Not so.

Mr. Trudeau: The point is that this company was going belly up, that its owners no longer wanted to operate it, that they were trying to get rid of it. The result would have been that it would have closed down in Canada. Because the Government does not share the reactionary philosophy of the Hon. Member, we stepped in and thought that it was important to save the company, to keep the jobs here, and to ensure that the technology still existed in Canada. That is the difference between the Hon. Member's Party and this Party. We made that difference clear last spring when we were debating this subject. When the Members over there basically want to see Canadair shut down, I know the Leader of the Opposition does not, because he knows a little more about it than his Members.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson: I wish the Prime Minister knew a little more about it. Then he would take some interest in the fact that $1.4 billion of taxpayers' moneys have been blown because there has been inaction and a lack of interest in what is going on in Canadair. We are in no way trying to see this company shut down. If anything will cause it to be shut down, it is the inaction and the lack of interest of the Prime Minister.

POSITION OF PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, since the Prime Minister evaded my question and gave no clear answer, I presume he did not speak to Senator Austin in that way. Because the Prime Minister is the most senior member of the Government of Canada, would he explain to the House why, in view of his lack of interest in this case, we as Members of Parliament should have any confidence in the actions taken by the Government to avoid similar losses in the future?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, if the CDIC management and Senator Austin had not been forthcoming last spring, if they had not put the financial statements in front of the House, if we had not put the matter before two parliamentary committees, if these committees were not going to report within a few days, if Senator Austin did not agree to appear before it, then I could understand the concern of the Hon. Member. He does not want this corporation to be operated on a management-run basis. He wants to stick his political nose into it, and that is what they are trying to do.

Once again, I made it quite clear yesterday, and I repeat it today, that there will be a statement by Senator Austin in front of the committee when the report is made and that he will answer the questions. If the question is asked by the Hon. Member or one of his colleagues and Senator Austin does not answer it, indeed I will find out what the answer is. I think it is normal to give the Minister a chance to answer the question when it is asked of him in the proper way—and stop pointing your finger; that is not polite.

INQUIRY WHETHER STEPS HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO AVOID WASTAGE OF PUBLIC FUNDS

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, I have the impression that our questions are somewhat irritating to the Prime Minister, but considering the fact that Canadians know perfectly well that the Government has already poured $1.4 billion into this corporation, that the Minister responsible is recommending that the Government provide new funding of as much $400 million, while 1,300 jobs were lost in the past year, can the Prime Minister today, before the eyes of the Canadian people, inform the House about any guarantees he has to offer that there will be no further wastage of public funds in the future, as he said yesterday, while ignoring the past?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member is referring to the answers I gave yesterday and today, he will have to admit that the company suffered losses when it was still a private enterprise. It had closed down, so it was losing money. It wanted to stop operations. That is why it wanted to close down, why it wanted to get rid of Canadair. Madam Speaker, financial losses are not due to the fact that it is a Crown corporation. The same occurred when it was owned by the private sector. What the Hon. Member should decide is whether we should try and save the jobs in Montreal and the advanced technology, or whether we should say: Well, a private enterprise could not run Canadair so let us not try to run it either? If the Hon. Member is in favour of closing down the Corporation, let him say so outright. However, if he prefers to keep the technology and the jobs in Quebec, he should support us and check whether there is any improvement, but he should not evade the issue as his colleagues seem to be doing, in order to close down Canadair, because the people in his party are against Crown corporations. They prefer to privatize.

Mr. La Salle: Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister did not really answer my question. He is aware of this company's poor management. The Prime Minister is aware that public funds are involved. My question is: In the circumstances, since the Prime Minister is refusing to offer Canadians a minimum of guarantees, is the Prime Minister at least preppared to acknowledge that our party, the Progressive Conservative Party, was right in asking for more control over the expenditures of Crown corporations? And in this connection, I would ask the Prime Minister to at least give this House the authority to verify the expenditures of Crown corporations that are manifestly unco-operative.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, as far as increased control by the Government and this House is concerned, the Hon. Member is aware that a bill on Crown corporations is before Parliament, specifically for the purpose of increasing control. We do not disagree on this point.

However, I am sure the Hon. Member will recall that all or almost all aerospace companies in the world have been in tremendous financial difficulty in the past few years, and that in all major countries, this industry is now highly subsidized, either through direct Government funding or through Government purchasing of military or other aircraft. These companies are not making a profit, that is understood. This is true in Canada and among all our competitors as well. Bearing this in mind, the Hon. Member will realize that the trouble is not that there were financial losses, whatever the figure. The trouble is that the Hon. Member, because we are losing money, fails to realize that it is in the nature of this industry at the present time to lose money. Therefore, his party will have to decide. Either governments do not help the aerospace industry, and it will collapse, or we do help this industry, and then we have to make sure that we help in the most effective way possible. Those are options open to the Hon. Member.

MULTICULTURALISM

FUNDING OF FRIENDSHIP CENTRES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. On May 30 the Minister announced Cabinet approval of a new financial package which he had negotiated with the National Association of Friendship Centres. However, as of yesterday Treasury Board had not approved any money. Considering that Friendship Centres across Canada are in difficulty and that some have closed, will the Minister tell the House whether the Government will keep its commitment? Will he ensure the flow of funds to Friendship Centres so that they can meet the needs of native people in urban areas?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, as announced last May, the Government has renewed its assistance program for Native Friendship Centres across Canada. The problems remaining to be settled with Treasury Board are now being examined, and we hope they will be cleared up by the end of this month, so that the program can continue to develop on the basis of the proposals we made last May.

[English]

INTEREST COSTS INCURRED BY CENTRES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, on September 22 the Minister assured Friendship Centres that there would be no difficulty in having those funds released. Will the Minister now assure the House that the entire package will be delivered to Friendship Centres, and will he fight to get additional funds available to cover the heavy interest costs resulting from the delay in funding?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, as I said before, during the past few weeks we have made representations to Treasury Board to ensure that problems that have arisen, especially in connection with the Government's guidelines on budget increases, can be resolved. Furthermore, I can assure the Hon. Member that we are in touch daily with the various departments concerned, to ensure that the program will be able to proceed as announced last May.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—MANAGEMENT EXPERTISE

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who, the House will recall, stated yesterday that departmental officials, referring to Canadair, do not have the expertise to deal with all of the businesses in which the Government is involved. Will the Prime Minister indicate where the management expertise is to run Canadair, a diversified aerospace company? Is it in Gil Bennett, the lawyer from Toronto who has been brought in on a part-time basis to be the chief executive officer? Is it Senator Austin, in the company described as the management company of Canadair? Is it Maurice Strong? Is it Joel Bell? Where is the expertise management which the Prime Minister referred to yesterday, to run Canadair at the present time?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, obviously if I say that it is in that collective management, the Hon. Member will say that they are not good enough experts for him. I will ask him a question in turn, although it may be a bit irregular. We have had suggestions in this House that they would like to run it by a joint parliamentary committee. Maybe the Hon. Member can tell me the greater experts on his side than the ones he just named. Judging by what they did with Canadair in the nine months they were in Government, I do not think they have great experts on that side.

Mr. Stevens: As all can recognize, Madam Speaker, that is a terrible distortion of the suggestion made yesterday. We simply ask that a select all-Party committee review the Government's plans, and take a look at whom is the expertise management in whom we can all have confidence to run Canadair.

APPOINTMENT OF JEAN-PIERRE GOYER

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): The Prime Minister has indicated that we must leave Crown corporations out of politics which, according to him, is a one hundred year tradition, and that the running of Crown corporations must not have any political influence. In view of that statement, will the Prime Minister indicate why he and the present Minister of Finance pressed so hard to have Jean-Pierre Goyer made Chairman of Canadair, something that was resented and resisted to the end by the old management of Canadair?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am not sure about the Hon. Member's facts, but he and his Party have been complaining about the old management as being incompetent. Now he seems to think that they were competent enough to judge that they were good and that they should not be replaced by, as he alleges, Jean-Pierre Goyer. The Hon. Member has to make up his mind. Maybe Mr. Goyer is better in our mind than the old management and in that—

Mr. Stevens: Is that right?

Mr. Trudeau: It is right if I follow the Hon. Member's thinking, because the Hon. Member wanted to get rid of the old management. What is his position? Does he want the old management or does he want new management?

INDUSTRY

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—STRUCTURE OF GOVERNMENT'S LOAN GUARANTEES

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Now that it is evident that yet another questionable deal by the Government has helped out its friends at Maislin, and particularly the banks, can the Minister tell me why the loan guarantees to Maislin were structured so as to give suppliers, mainly small businesses, no money, give employees only half of their back salaries, vacation pay and severance pay, and yet allow the banks to recoup nearly all of their money?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, I am very disappointed that the Conservative Party does not think that 2,000 jobs in Canada are very important or that it was important to try to save those 2,000 jobs. Second, the allegation by the Hon. Member of what is contained in that loan agreement with respect to salaries is not accurate. When the Hon. Member has some accurate information, I will be happy to respond to him.

REPORTED SALE OF COMPANY'S LICENCES TO UNITED STATES FIRM

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, there are only half that many employees, and they would have been working today had this been handled properly. The licences owned by Maislin were, I understand, sold to Consolidated Freightways of California for a pittance, on the agreement of the bank. Can the Minister tell me why no Canadian companies were allowed to bid on these licences, when a single Montreal-Toronto licence is worth $1 million on the free market today? Also, will he take steps to stop that sale and open it up to Canadian bidders?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Again, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's information is not accurate. Perhaps he would like to ask the responsible trustee. The Government of Canada did not negotiate that sale. In fact we were just advised of the sale a couple of days ago, and now we have to look and see if it is reviewable under the FIR Act. Perhaps the Hon. Member would like to write a letter to the chairman of the board of the bank. Maybe he can advise him on what happened during that transaction.

ENERGY

ATMOSPHERIC TEMPERATURE INCREASE—HYDROGEN ADVOCATED AS ALTERNATIVE FUEL

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The United States Environmental Protection Agency in a recent official report warns about the greenhouse effect, saying the buildup of carbon in the atmosphere will lead to a disastrous warming of the earth, the effects to be felt as early as the 1990s. We have the technology to start correcting the problem. Hydrogen is the only fuel that burns clean. The parliamentary Committee on Alternate Energy reported and recommended that Canada move toward a hydrogen-based economy. Will the Minister make the same grants and subsidies available for the development of hydrogen that he now makes available for frontier gas and oil exploration?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I think there are two problems that are entirely different in scope. I read with great interest the Committee's report on alternative energy sources, and the use of hydrogen is an interesting proposal, but I do not think we have reached the point where we should consider changing our policy on developing oil resources in Canada.

[English]

Mr. de Jong: Madam Speaker, very often those involved with fossil fuels acquire fossil minds. My next question is directed to the Minister of Finance.

FUNDS FOR DEVELOPMENT OF HYDROGEN

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): My next question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister of Finance knows that hydrogen is an available fuel. In fact, on November 4, 1981, we rode together in a hydrogen fueled car, and he stated at that time that it was a very interesting technology that needs to be developed.

As well, the Minister knows that the National Research Council, through Mr. Brian Taylor, has stated that the technology for hydrogen exists and it is only political timing that is preventing its development. In fact, Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: In fact, does the Hon. Member have a question? It is incredible.

Mr. de Jong: My question, Madam Speaker, is directed to the Minister. Will the Minister recommend that in his next budget, grants and subsidies that are now provided to frontier oil and gas development should also be made available to individuals and companies attempting to develop hydrogen into an economical fuel for Canada in order that we can create some jobs and export some—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I shall consider the Hon. Member's question as a proposal to be examined in preparing the Budget.

EXTERNAL AID

SUCO FUNDING

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, my qeustion is directed to the Minister of State for External Relations. The Minister is aware that the funding for the Service universitaire canadien outre-mer, known as SUCO and a partner of CUSO, has had its funds cut back and seems to have been totally eliminated. Could the Minister explain to the House why this was done, and does he have any program to see that funds will be reinstated?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, this was done with great regret. It became pretty obvious to most people that SUCO, notwithstanding increased budget support from CIDA and consulting services paid by CIDA to the group, was incapable of putting together a reasonably good accounting service. In this instance the Government tried to minimize the damage and we have ensured the co-opérants that they would be properly subsidized by CIDA until March 31. In the meantime we hope that the co-opérants will find association with other groups so that they can continue to serve the countries to which they have been assigned in the best possible way. Again, this is a regrettable action. It is an action that is not often taken by CIDA, but which had to be taken in this particular instance.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

PRIME MINISTER'S 1980 STATEMENT

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister stated in a speech to the Liberal campaign college in Toronto on January 12, 1980: "First we must get the nation's finances in order. Our commitment is this. We will hold the line on government expenditure growth to under the rate of growth of the GNP". As the Prime Minister has said this and as, during the following three years between then and now, government expenditures expressed as a percentage of GNP have increased from 19 per cent to 22 per cent and are still going up, would the Prime Minister advise the House how this performance squares with the rousing rhetoric with which he wound up his speech on that day by saying: "There's a prior commitment I want to make clear. Liberals will do what we say we will do. And if we can't do it, we won't say it"?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the only thing wrong with the question asked by the Hon. Member is that his facts are wrong. That is quite fundamental. The trend line has been down for a government share of public expenditures. He simply has to look at the facts.

Mr. Hees: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question to set the record straight.

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre.

ENERGY

EXPORT PRICE OF NATURAL GAS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question would be directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources if I could have his attention. On October 7 I asked the Minister if he was planning to reduce the export price for natural gas since the border price set by the Minister is too expensive for our American customers. In his answer the Minister said that there is no need to move at this time.

Since top U.S. energy officials in Washington are insisting that Canada will announce more cuts in natural gas export prices by the end of the month, and since these comments follow discussions with government officials here in Ottawa, is the Minister misleading the House, or is he too busy campaigning for the Liberal leadership to be able to be on top of the affairs of his Department?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member will see by the end of the month if the price is going down or not. Next week will be the end of the month, so she will know by that time.

Miss Carney: We shall certainly watch for the date at the end of the month.

EXPORTATION OF ELECTRICITY

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also addressed to the same Minister. It has been reported that the Minister is willing to take steps to increase electricity exports to the United States. How can the Government justify promoting hydro exports when it is refusing to take similar steps to help the natural gas industry which is operating at about 40 per cent of its export capacity? How can the Minister justify helping one energy industry when it refuses to respond to the very real concerns of another, the oil and gas industry?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): First, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is wrong. We have taken two steps since the Spring to help the situation regarding the export of natural gas. We have reduced the price to $4.40 from $4.94, and we have given an incentive price to added quantities of gas that were to be taken by the market.

Regarding the export of electricity to the Americans, I, of course, am very much interested in exporting it because there is a surplus. The hydro companies in Ontario, Quebec, and New Brunswick are trying to sell electricity. I told the people in New York that they should perhaps think a little bit about ceasing to burn the coal that creates acid rain, and should buy clean electricity from Canada.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—ACTION AGAINST SULPHUR EMISSIONS

Hon. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. I would like to compliment him and his predecessor, and his predecessor's predecessor, on their long and arduous struggle with the acid rain question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Fraser: The Minister will know that on this issue he has the strongest support from this Party for his representations to his American colleagues. Since the recent meeting with Secretary Schultz and EPA Administrator Ruckelshaus, is the Minister prepared to make a commitment on behalf of this country that, whether the U.S. administration goes ahead now or later, this country will begin immediately aiming for a 50 per cent reduction of sulphur emissions?

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, dealing with the Hon. Member's preamble, I would like to congratulate him for his touch of modesty. As to the commitment he is asking for, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that Canada has already taken steps, as was explained yesterday to another Hon. Member, toward achieving reduction of emissions by 25 per cent. That is now being achieved in two of the major Provinces of the country. As to the balance, in order to achieve emissions of 20 kilograms per hectare per year, we know that we cannot achieve that alone. That is corroborated by a statement made yesterday in Washington by the Deputy Assistant Secretary of State, James Medas, who said that Canada cannot begin solving its own acid rain problems without a joint policy with the U.S.A.

REQUEST FOR CANADIAN COMMITMENT

Hon. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Madam Speaker, as Hon. Members on this side have said before, the problem cannot be solved by Canada alone. In view of the fact that the problem will only be solved in the United States if the Americans, who are allied with us in this campaign, are given sufficient support by this country, is the Minister prepared to make a commitment to the American government, and to Congress and the various public interest and citizens' groups that are supporting the battle against acid rain in the United States, that we will proceed now to a 50 per cent reduction?

I ask this question, Madam Speaker, because on September 8 of this year Representative Dingell of the House of Representatives wrote a letter to the EPA Administrator, Mr. Ruckelshaus. In that letter he asks questions about what Canada is prepared to do, what our base line data is, and what the costs will be. In other words, here is a member who is involved—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is raising a very important question. My answer to him is that we have in Canada, as a result of an effort in joint federal-provincial co-operation, achieved a plan in Fredericton last month among environmental Ministers, provincial and federal. We have a plan, we are ready to move, and we want to move with the Americans in order to achieve our targets.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. DEANS—S.O. 21 STATEMENT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, during Statements by Members I was ruled out of order. I wonder if you would be kind enough to tell me which Speaker's ruling I was reflecting upon?

Madam Speaker: It seemed to me by what the Hon. Member was saying that he was indirectly reflecting on a ruling that I had made some days ago. However, if the Hon. Member feels that I have not been fair with him I will look at the blues. He has now sent me his complete statement. I shall look at it and if I have not been fair or if I have jumped to conclusions a little bit too soon, I will be only too glad to give the Hon. Member another chance to make that statement.

Business of the House

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I rise to ask the customary Thursday question of the Government House Leader, what he expects in the way of business for the remainder of this week and what he has in mind for next week.

While he is answering that question, would he also take the House into his confidence, if he can do so at this time, with respect to the contemplated date for prorogation and the contemplated date for a new session and Throne Speech?

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, on the latter part of the question, I will be in a better position to answer once Bill C-155 and Bill C-152 have received Royal Assent. Meanwhile, we are talking about a reasonable package and we hope that we will be able to get those two Bills through within the next few days so we can contemplate prorogation before the November break. We hope we will have the Speech from the Throne by mid-November. We must get Royal Assent on Bill C-155 and Bill C-152 first, and therefore the door is open for a Speech from the Throne, if need be, a bit later.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, as far as the business of the House for the next few days is concerned, today we intend to propose a motion to limit debate under Standing Order 82. Assuming that the motion is voted on today, Monday will be the first day of debate allocated for the report stage of Bill C-155. Tuesday will be the second day of debate on the same matter, while next Wednesday will be for private members' business and next Thursday we shall have third reading of Bill C-155.

If for some reason we are unable to dispose of the motion under Standing Order 82 today, and in any case if debate had started today, the order of the day for Monday morning shall be to resume debate on the motion under Standing Order 82, at 11 a.m. As far as the business of the House for tomorrow is concerned, I think the Hon. Member has changed his mind—he would not want it to be an Opposition day, I suppose, but I would like him to be clear about that.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I have a point of order on House business. I wonder if I might be allowed to ask the Government House Leader, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, if the Government might be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 43 by adding immediately after line 34 at page 24 the following:

"(3) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, the rate a railway company may charge a shipper for the movement of grain for the period January 1, 1984 to July 31, 1986 shall not exceed the existing rates in effect on August 1, 1983".

This motion would preserve the existing statutory freight rate until such time as the Government has concluded its studies and the full impact assessment upon producers is fully analysed.

In any event, I should like to ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of the report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that any reasonable proposals for amendments at the report stage of Bill C-155 will be considered. But I also wish to make it quite clear I am not implying that we agree with the specific amendment for which he is requesting the unanimous consent of the House. However, although we do not directly agree with what he is proposing today, it does not preclude our entertaining other amendments and in some cases even agreeing with the unanimous consent of the House to having them put on the Order Paper before we consider amendments at the report stage next Tuesday evening. In the circumstances, we can not agree with the Hon. Member's request today. However, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and myself are prepared to negotiate in good faith on any reasonable amendment, until we are asked to vote on the report stage of Bill C-155.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, this is a very genuine and sincere amendment that has been advanced. I understand that the Minister of Transport will be standing in his place at some point in time requesting that same unanimous consent to have one or two of his own motions, which were ruled out of order by Your Honour, put before the House.

I am pleased to hear that the Government House Leader has said that he is prepared seriously to entertain some of the amendments and proposals that we have to offer. This is one of those proposals that we have to offer which we believe could facilitate the debate and, indeed, improve the Bill.

I ask that you seek unanimous consent, Madam Speaker. If the Government House Leader and the Minister of Transport are serious in their contention that these very realistic, sincere and genuine proposals are going to be considered, it is going to be very difficult, Your Honour, if the Government is now going to proceed with its motion to move closure. Perhaps it might want to reconsider that in light of the comments of the Honourable House Leader.

Madam Speaker: The Chair is really embarrassed by what is taking place. This is a most unusual time to propose that amendments be introduced in the process of studying a Bill. Of course, if the House wants to do it and gives unanimous consent, all of this can happen, but I must say that it is a most exceptional use of the time that is allotted to discuss Government business.

There seem to be other interventions on this point. I would ask Hon. Members to be very brief because any kind of negotiation of this nature that might go on between Parties should, of course, not take place in the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I shall be very brief. I do not want to repeat what I just said. The request for unanimous consent has been denied. However, we are prepared to negotiate as soon as we have proposed our motion for time allocation this afternoon.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I want to speak to the emerging point of order which the Chair has raised here, namely, the use of this period for asking the question the nature of which the Hon. Member for Vegreville raised.

I believe I heard you correctly when you said it was an unusual time to entertain questions on Government business. I heard the words "Government business" and, of course, it is House business which we are—

• (1510)

Madam Speaker: Order, please. No, I said it was a most unusual time to discuss possible modifications to a Bill which the House was presently studying. This kind of negotiation, I reminded Hon. Members, should take place somewhere else, but certainly not on the floor of the House. I did not rule out the Hon. Member. I was tolerant with the House and allowed the House to hear what the Hon. Member for Vegreville had to say. I allowed the President of the Privy Council to reply.

My impression is that the Hon. Member for Vegreville does not have the unanimous consent of the House. As I indicated, if the House wanted to do this, despite the fact that I find it a bit unusual to be doing it at this particular time, I could ask the House if it gives its unanimous consent and I would be in the hands of the House. Obviously, the Hon. Member did not receive unanimous consent so I suppose he will seek other means of accomplishing what he wishes to do.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, again you have said that you found it unusual to be discussing a matter such as the nature of the matter raised by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. It is to that point that I wish to address my submissions before the Chair comes to any firm conclusions.

In my submission, this is a most appropriate and proper time for this kind of discussion. I see you nodding your head in the negative. Perhaps after I have presented my submissions I might be successful in having you nod your head the other way.

Madam Speaker: No, really, the Hon. Member is raising a point of order when there is no point of order. I did not make a ruling on this. I just expressed surprise that such negotiations were taking place on the floor of the House, as I have done many times.

It is good politics, I suppose, good policy, for the Chair to be tolerant sometimes when the Chair senses that some kind of agreement might be reached, despite the fact that the procedure is somewhat unusual. The Chair simply looks the other way and allows Hon. Members to discuss this. That is all I said, not more than that and not less. I do not feel there is a point of order. I do not feel I should be hearing argument on that. There is no point of order there.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, there are two points I would like to make, again arising out of what you have said. The first is that they are not negotiations, as I perceive what the Hon. Member for Vegreville has done. It is a submission to the Chair asking her to seek unanimous consent of the House. I will say no more about that.

I want again to disagree with the Chair, with respect, that this is an unusual procedure or time for this kind of thing to be taking place. I am prepared to speak to that point of order should we reach that stage. I would hope that the Chair would call for submissions before making any firm ruling as to the propriety of what the Hon. Member for Vegreville is going now, or any other Hon. Member, should he choose to do so.

Madam Speaker: I can assure the Hon. Member that I am not going to rule on this. I just expressed surprise. I said that I was willing to hear what Hon. Members had to say. Does the House give its unanimous consent? If there is not consent, I do not feel there is any point in adding any argument. Does the House give its unanimous consent to the proposal made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Hargrave: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order dealing with House business. It relates to the fact that the livestock sector, and the value added industries in this piece of legislation, Bill C-155, have been very poorly served throughout this entire debate. My point of order is addressed to the Government House Leader. I would ask him if he would consider giving consent to a motion which I would like to read now being placed on the Order Paper:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 58 by immediately adding after line 13 at page 34 the following therefor:

"58.(3) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, based upon the recommendations of the committee established under section 59(2) to examine the method of payment, the Governor in Council may, subject to approval by Parliament, make regulations prescribing the manner in which, and the parties to whom, payment of the government contribution, including the Crow benefit, shall be made."

I would appreciate, Madam Speaker, if you would ask for the unanimous consent of the House for the motion I have just read to be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of the report stage of Bill C-155.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the proposal made by the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Gustafson: Madam Speaker, on House business I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate on Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by striking out the heading "Part IV" preceding Clause 59 at Page 34 and substituting the following therefor:

"PART IV
SHIPPER SHARE LIMITATION

59. In this Part,

"freight to price ratio", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the quotient, expressed as a percentage obtained by dividing the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in that calendar year by the weighted average price for that calendar year;

"shipper share limitation adjustment", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying

(a) the number of percentage points by which the freight to price ratio in that calendar year exceeds 7 per cent,

by

(b) the product obtained by multiplying the weighted average price for that calendar year by the total number of tonnes of grain moved in that calendar year;

"six grains" means wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed;

"weighted average price", in respect of any calendar year, means the weighted average determined under paragraph 60(1)(b) in respect of that calendar year.

60. (1) The Commission shall, on or before March 1st of each year, using the information that it deems appropriate, determine, in respect of the preceding calendar year,

(a) the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains, in storage, was available for sale on each trading day at the port that handled the largest volume of that grain in the calendar year;

(c) the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in the calendar year; and

(d) the freight to price ratio.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(a), the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains was available for sale shall be determined on the basis of the price per tonne of the grade of each of those grains the largest volume of which was moved in the calendar year.

PART V"

and by renumbering the subsequent Parts and Clauses and amending all references accordingly.

The importance of this motion to the producer, Madam Speaker, is the 7 per cent safety net, the same as the Minister proposed, and which has not been debated in the House. The protection of the producer is the important factor which is presented in this amendment against unreasonable, should I say, freight rates which would give a safety protection to the primary producer.

● (1520)

In any event, Madam Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration at report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I would hope we might be able to respond to this intervention by the Official Opposition and try to facilitate the time of the House. Obviously we are very serious about our willingness to receive relevant and pertinent amendments after the decision has been made by the House according to the rules on allocation of time. What we obviously have to do, particularly on the question of the safety net, is find the proper means by which we can negotiate that time. I am quite prepared to meet with Members of the Opposition to work out how that might be done during the two days of report stage so that the amendments they are proposing as well as those we have in mind might get their fair share of attention, which they were not allowed to have because of the filibustering during the previous 11 days of report stage.

If Members of the Opposition are as serious as they are asking us to be, we are prepared to consider their amendments, but in light of a decision, once it is taken, on the application at report stage. Therefore I suggest we proceed with the Orders of the Day and discussion of that motion.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I appreciate what the Minister has said with respect to the consideration the Government will give to these very legitimate suggestions for amendments to be placed on the Order Paper. We are asking for unanimous consent to have these matters brought forward as proposed amendments to the legislation. The Government will then have the opportunity of responding to the proposals put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia and the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat. That is precisely the reason we now put these matters forward, not that the Government will accept them without debate, but rather that they simply be put on the Order Paper for consideration. They are new and novel propositions.

The Minister knows that he is going to bring forward suggestions with respect to safety net and other matters he thinks should be included in the legislation. Clearly this is an opportunity for him to allow these legitimate suggestions—he will understand how important they are in western Canada and across this crountry—to be put forward for consideration by the House at report stage. There is nothing offensive with respect to this proposition. In fact, it is precisely what the Minister has asked for. We are now giving formal notice in these instances of some amendments we think should be given serious consideration by the Minister.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I call this a clear abuse of parliamentary procedure and a waste of the time of the House. The Hon. Member who just spoke said that the amendments in question were new amendments, and the House is aware that according to our procedure, amendments that cannot be considered at the report stage are not those for which notice has been given 24 hours before starting consideration of the report stage. The Hon. Member said that he thought the Minister intended to try and obtain the unanimous consent of the House, at some point, regarding an amendment about the security net, but I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that notice was given of these amendments, they had appeared on the Order Paper and were judged to be inadmissible. There is a difference. In any event, Madam Speaker, I can inform the Chair that we intend to refuse unanimous consent for any amendment to Bill C-155 proposed at this time, and as I explained earlier—

[English]

If you do not want to listen to the translation I will say it in English.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): It is offensive in either language.

Mr. Pinard: I said earlier we are willing to negotiate in good faith outside this House, but certainly not to co-operate with the Opposition in filibustering our own Bill.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That is your story. You think any debate on this is a filibuster.

Mr. Pinard: We are saying we should move the motion to limit debate today. We will have until Tuesday evening to negotiate. We will make proposals to the Opposition and we will be willing to listen to their proposals. But today it is out of order. We are wasting time and we are not willing to give unanimous consent to any amendment to Bill C-155 at this time. We are willing to negotiate in good faith before we come to a final vote on report stage of the Bill. That is very clear.

I submit as an additional point that they are not allowed to refer to the substance of a Bill under discussion in the House. That is what they are doing by seeking unanimous consent to deal with the substance of the Bill.

For all those reasons, Madam Speaker, we ask you to stop this obvious filibuster and waste of time. We want to proceed with our motion and I give notice to the Opposition that we are willing to negotiate in good faith all the time about Bill C-155 until it is voted on.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I sense a bit of a conflict between the two Ministers. One suggests they are prepared to negotiate in good faith—

Mr. Axworthy: After the vote.

Mr. Mazankowski: —and the Minister of Transport says he is serious. I ask you, Madam Speaker, how can either one of those hon. gentlemen be serious in advancing any realistic negotiations under the threat of closure? If the Minister of Transport is genuine and serious about his attempt to reach some satisfactory solutions, and he says "I am", then he should recommend to the Government House Leader withdrawal of the threat of closure.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: Then and only then can there be genuine and realistic negotiations.

Mr. Axworthy: Good try, Don.

Mr. Mazankowski: The Minister of Transport, in committee and in the House, has talked about his willingness to co-operate and to accommodate new ideas. The Government House Leader has now suggested they will rule every proposal out of order before they have even heard it. We have some very unique propositions and we have responded to the invitation of the Minister of Transport. We are presenting them now because the Government, being so paranoid about its legislation being examined and debated in a vigorous way, wants to move closure and put the slammer on. It is not really interested in the real proposals we have.

I say in all sincerity, Madam Speaker, unlike the other Opposition Party, that we have tried to seek realistic and workable solutions. That has been our approach from day one. We have done it in committee.

Mr. Deans: That is the sound of one hand clapping.

Mr. Mazankowski: We have done it on second reading. I remind you, Madam Speaker, that this Government, attempted to move closure on second reading after two days. It imposed an artificial time frame during the course of the committee hearings. A 70-clause Bill resulted in 85 amendments, plus about 20 or so subamendments. The Bill is still not complete but the Government is taking the position that we are not even going to have an opportunity to debate the amendments it is proposing. I have never seen anything so ridiculous in my life.

We want to present our alternatives and debate them. If the Government is serious about negotiating, lift the veil of closure and we can get down to some serious discussions.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, this Bill has been debated for months. At committee stage we accepted over 80 or so amendments. We have been debating report stage for the last 11 sitting days and over 170 speakers have participated in that unusually long debate. Last Friday we were willing to negotiate the amendments suggested by the Hon. Member but his Party saw fit to waste a day by forcing the House to debate a subject matter other than Bill C-155 which the Government intended to call. That is publicly known. They tried again to waste the time of the House on Monday, but failed. They succeeded yesterday in letting the bells ring for over an hour and a half, time during which we would have negotiated in good faith.

I can understand the Hon. Member being a bit obfuscated by the fact that we are attempting to limit debate at this time, but it is our duty to do so after having agreed to such a long time for debate on Bill C-155. I can understand that he does not like the idea. He says that he saw nothing more ridiculous in the past, but he will agree it is very ridiculous for him to show so much indignation in light of the fact that his own Party, he being part of the whole scheme, prevented debate from going on last Friday and for an hour and a half or so yesterday. So if he is in good faith as he says, he will allow the Government to proceed under the Standing Orders, and he will negotiate.

Certainly he is dead wrong when he says that the Government has not been reasonable in that debate. That debate has lasted for months. He had ample opportunity to propose his amendments. We have accepted some 80 of them.

While we are still prepared to negotiate, we are certainly not stupid. We will move on that Bill and get it through. In the meantime, until we vote we will negotiate if the Hon. Member wants that. But he should not complain about our attempting to limit debate at this point, because he and his Party are the ones who have prevented debate from occurring during the last days on Bill C-155.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I would like to address my proposal to the Government House Leader because I want to facilitate the debate and do what I can to improve the Bill, as suggested by the Minister of Transport. Once they hear the proposal which I put forward, I ask Government Members to allow the following motion to be put to the House.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I see that the Hon. Member is again asking for unanimous consent on another amendment. I believe that he must have heard the Hon. President of the Privy Council tell the House that his Party would not give unanimous consent to any amendment at this particular time. What they would do at other times is their business, but it was quite clear to the Chair, as it should be to Hon. Members, that they will not get unanimous consent for the inclusion of these amendments at this time.

I am afraid that what I saw as an unusual procedure is becoming apparent. It seemed to me a bit awkward that the time allocated for questions on House business was being used to introduce modifications to a Bill, which modifications, if introduced, would not be easy to make at this particular stage. Now it is quite clear to the Chair that this is what is being sought.

Of course, amendments can be proposed, but Members must follow the usual procedure, unless the House gives its unanimous consent. As I see it, it is not prepared to give its unanimous consent. As well, they require notice following a procedure which is well known to all Members in the House. It is obvious to everyone, even to anyone watching us on television, that we are debating and not at all dealing with questions on House business. Members have entered into the debate and are suggesting alternatives which, legitimate though they may be, should be suggested at another time. The time of the House might be used for this if the House consents, but not at this particular time.

Another reason that it is difficult for me to allow these kinds of proposals to take place at this time is that Members are obviously anticipating the Orders of the Day and are not really asking questions about the business of the House.

Therefore, for all these reasons and since it is obvious to the Chair and everyone else that no unanimous consent will be given, and because this is not the proper time—

Mr. Nielsen: I would like to be heard, Madam Speaker. I would like to be heard before the Chair makes any firm ruling.

Madam Speaker: I will hear the Hon. Member because I have no interest whatsoever in not allowing the House to come to some kind of agreement if it can. If I can stretch the rules at some point when everyone agrees that perhaps we should have more discussion, I will do so. But I am warning Hon. Member that they are using a procedure that is not to be used at this time. That is not a ruling but a comment on what is usual under this particular item of business.

An Hon. Member: They are the rules of the House.

Madam Speaker: They are the rules of the House as well. However, perhaps Hon. Members could seek another time to propose these matters, which are very promising if I understand what Hon. Members are saying. Some of the amendments which I have declared out of order are being resuscitated, but if they can be worded in such a way as to make them admissible, and if Hon. Members on both sides of the House want those amendments, I see no reason why they should not have them.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, in a preliminary way I suppose, you have made observations from the Chair with respect to the rule against anticipation which I submit has no application in the process that is going on here, notwithstanding the usually brilliant arguments of the President of the Privy Council. I submit to you that he was wrong on that.

We are not proposing amendments. The Members who have risen so far and the Member who was on his feet—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: I see the Speaker smiling again. She obviously believes that I am not serious in making that statement. Well, Madam Speaker, we are not proposing amendments. The process that is before us is the seeking of unanimous consent to amendments so that they might be placed on the Order Paper for discussion. Failing that unanimous consent they will not be placed on the Order Paper for discussion, contrary to what they are saying on the Government side. The place in our proceedings for discussing House business is the proper and appropriate place for this process.

I have several citations, including some of your own, which I would like to cite in support of that proposition. It is a well established fact that the House is master of its own rules. The Standing Orders outline the ordinary methods or rules of procedure, but they in no way restrain the House from deciding by way of unanimous consent to alter the manner in which it will proceed with respect to a given matter that is to be considered by the House.

You might give great weight to the statement of the Government House Leader that they intend to refuse consent to anything proposed by this side of the House. We are used to that kind of arrogance coming from the Government side. However, let us stretch the imagination, and not the rules, by asking if the Government House Leader would take that position if one of our Members stood up and moved that we adopt passage of all remaining stages in the next hour? I suggest to you that he would not. I suggest to you that the Government would consent to that rapidly enough.

Therefore, I believe that a global approach to consent is wrong. During my time in this place we have always approached items seriatim. These Members who are rising to seek consent of the Chair must be dealt with seriatim, and consent must be asked and either granted or denied on each occasion. For who is to predetermine whether some Member will rise to make a proposal that will find acceptance on the Government side?

My understanding of the authority of the House to proceed as it choosed is contained in Citation 13 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition where the following words may be found at page 6 under the heading "Unanimous Consent". Citation 13 reads:

> 13. (1) Within the ambit of its own rules, The House itself may proceed as it chooses; it is a common practice for the House to ignore its own rules by unanimous consent. Thus, bills may be passed through all their stages in one day, or the House may decide to alter its normal order of business or its adjournment hour as it sees fit.
> (2) The House is perfectly able to give consent to set aside its Standing Orders and to give its unanimous consent to waive procedural requirements and precedents concerning notice and things of that sort.

As authority, the Debates for June 28, 1977, at page 7154, are cited.

If, as practice and Beauchesne indicate, it is within the authority of the House to waive its rules through unanimous consent, it follows that Members have the right to seek unanimous consent to waive procedural requirements and precedents. The only means by which a Member can seek unanimous consent is to ask, through the Chair, for the consent of the House to waive the ordinary rules.

I submit that the Chair is bound to seek unanimous consent when that consent is sought by any Hon. Member. Citation 411 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition describes the process of debate. Citation 411(1) reads as follows:

> Every matter is determined in the House of Commons upon a question put by the Speaker, on a proposition submitted by a Member, and resolved either in the affirmative or negative as the case may be. This proposition, called a motion, is a proposal moved by one Member, in accordance with certain well-established rules, that the House do something or order something to be done or express an opinion with regard to some matter.

As Citation 411(1) clearly states, every matter is determined in the House of Commons upon a question put by the Speaker on a proposition submitted by a Member. Citation 412 considers the definition of a question. It states at page 150:

> The question is the subject matter of the motion, and on the merits of that subject matter the House has to give a decision either unanimously or by the majority of the members present. Every question when agreed to assumes the form either of an order or a resolution of the House. By its orders the House directs its committees, its members, its officers, the order of its own proceedings and the acts of all persons they concern; by its resolutions the House declares its own opinions and purposes.

(2) When a motion is adopted, it becomes the resolution or order of the House. Therefore, its form must consequently be so framed, and its language so expressed that, if it meets the approbation of the House, it may at once become the resolution or order of the House which it purports to be.

On the basis of the citations to which I have referred, Madam Speaker, it would seem that the House may, by unanimous consent, set aside its usual rules and practices and that within that authority the House may consider motions that could not otherwise be moved. Because unanimous consent may be granted to set aside rules that would otherwise block a motion from being moved, the seeking of unanimous consent from being moved, the seeking of unanimous consent cannot be said to be out of order, in my submission.

As well, the seeking of unanimous consent to move a motion is a separate proposition submitted by a Member to the Speaker who must, according to the ordinary practices of the House, put the question, that is: Is there or is there not unanimous consent? The question, in this case, requires the unanimous decision of the House and should meet the other requirements set forth in Citation 412, such that if it is agreed to it may at once become the resolution of the House that it purports to be.

In this case, the question, the seeking of unanimous consent, if agreed to becomes a resolution of the House to permit the Member to move his or her motion. Thus, the motion is completely regular within the terms of Citation 412.

The next issue that has to be considered, Madam Speaker, is whether or not the House business question is the appropriate occasion for Members to rise on points of order to seek unanimous consent to move motions dealing with business that is now, or will soon be, before the House. I can think of no more appropriate time to seek the consent of the House to move a motion that would facilitate the business of the House than during the House business question. Indeed, this is a practice often followed by the House Leaders for all Parties in the House. Citation 158 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition refers to the House business question in the following manner in paragraph 4, found at page 50:

(4) As a matter of practice, since 1968, each Thursday following the Question Period, the Government House Leader states, in reply to a question put by the House Leader of the Official Opposition, the projected business of the House for the forthcoming week.

The practice with respect to the House business question has evolved somewhat further since the Fifth Edition of Beauchesne's was published. It is now quite common for Members to seek unanimous consent for motions during the business question, while still retaining the understanding that matters should not be debated in the course of the question. In fact, this practice is evident in a ruling that you made in the course of a House business question, as reported at page 21845 of Hansard for December 22, 1982, found under the heading Business of the House. There was quite a discussion that day. At page 21845 you are recorded as having said:

Order, please. I am just asking Hon. Members to please not debate the Bill now. It has not been put to the House. I can allow a few questions back and forth on what the order of business might be in the House, but I cannot allow Hon. Members to debate this matter.

It is becoming obvious to me that there is no unanimous consent as to the manner in which this Bill could be passed through the House today. Unless some other Members have something specific to say on the manner in which we could proceed to put the Bill through the House today and try to seek unanimous consent on a particular proposal, I will not allow any debating of the question.

Further on, at page 21846, you are reported as having said:

Order, please. Members at this point are obviously debating. It is clear to the Chair that there is no unanimous consent over the manner in which this Bill can be put through the House.

Clearly, Madam Speaker, while you felt that it would not be permissible to debate the matter of the passage of a Bill that was before the House that day, you indicated that it would be permissible to bring forward various proposals to expedite the passage of the Bill and that it was in order to seek unanimous consent to deal with those matters.

The situation that faces the House today is identical to that which faced the House on December 22 of last year. Members on this side of the House are attempting to find a means of facilitating debate on a Bill that will be before the House this afternoon and are rising to seek an indication of the Government's intent and to seek the unanimous consent of the House to be allowed to put their motions, which certainly cannot be the subject of any valued judgment of any Member until they are heard. If this was in order on December 22, 1982, then, I submit, Madam Speaker, that it should be in order today.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I would like to return to my contention that you are obliged to put the question to the House when Hon. Members rise to seek unanimous consent.

I have a further reference from Hansard that I think will firmly establish the existence of this obligation. I take delight in citing as authority for my arguments the well-reasoned and sound judgments of the Chair which have been rendered from time to time, and this is the finest I have seen in your tenure in the chair. It is to be found at page 27997 of Hansard. It arose again under Business of the House, Weekly Statement. There was a fairly long discussion involving myself, the Government House Leader, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, the Hon. Member for St. John's East and a few others. You had this to say at the page quoted:

At any rate, perhaps that is a good suggestion. I leave it to Hon. Members, but I do have an obligation to ask the House if it will give its unanimous consent to move acceptance of the seven reports on parliamentary reform.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, on the basis of those most excellent authorities I submit that any Hon. Member can rise in his or her place and ask you to seek unanimous consent of the House on the specific proposal on which the Member rising seeks to obtain unanimous consent. There is no other decision you can come to, Madam Speaker, and I would respectfully submit that you allow the process to conclude in its normal, healthy fashion.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, a fascinating process indeed; so much for the tyranny of the minority. However, let me say two things about this. First of all, I think the arguments of the Opposition House Leader are sound. More important, on behalf of my colleagues, we would be prepared to consider the matters the Members have put on the floor, at least to this point, and for which they are seeking unanimous consent. However, in order that we do not take up all day on it, which of course is my normal, reasonable approach to everything, I would like to suggest that if the Government would agree not to proceed at this point in time with its motion for closure or time allocation, as it chooses to call it—

Mr. Nielsen: We want our ideas to be heard.

Mr. Deans: The Hon. Member for Yukon says that he wants his ideas to be heard.

Mr. Nielsen: I said, "Our ideas".

Mr. Deans: I am sorry, he wants "our ideas" to be heard.

An Hon. Member: Their ideas.

Mr. Deans: What he is saying is that in fact he wants to get the views of his Members on the record. If the Government would like to adjourn for the rest of the day, I would be prepared, on behalf of my learned colleagues, to agree to have our Members sit down with whoever is appropriate on the Government side—perhaps the Minister of Transport, if he knows anything about the Bill—and the appropriate Members from the Conservative Party, to look at the various amendments, attempt to achieve a consensus and come back on another day to discuss how the matter could then be proceeded with.

It would seem to me, looking at the question before us, that the Hon. Member for Yukon is correct that a Member ought to be able to seek unanimous consent for a motion. It would also seem to me that there are other important matters of which we could be determining the outcome this afternoon, tomorrow or next week, such questions as unemployment and how the Government proposes to deal with it. If the Government House Leader or his surrogate would be prepared to agree either to call another order in order that meetings could be held or to adjourn until six o'clock, coming back tomorrow to go on with tomorrow's normal business, we could sit and discuss this matter and in fact come to some satisfactory, rational and sensible conclusion.

Mr. Evans: Tomorrow is an Opposition day.

Madam Speaker: In reply to those interventions, I want to remind the House of a few things. I do not think I ever said that unanimous consent was not allowed at this time. I just said that Hon. Members had heard the President of the Privy Council say that he would not give unanimous consent to any of the requests to waive notice for certain of their amendments. I never said that to seek unanimous consent was out of order. Of course it is not out of order. The Chair is always in the hands of the House if, by unanimous consent, it wants to set aside certain rules. Of course the Chair will do that.

I am afraid the Hon. Member for Yukon in his usual way of arguing was quoting me at times like these, when the House is a bit nervous and is trying to reach some kind of agreement and when the Chair is lenient with the rules. These periods should not be invoked as precedents. When the Chair decides to go along with the mood of the House and to allow the House to discuss a certain number of things, even if some of the rules are being stretched a bit, that is normal procedure and practice in our House. What the Chair has to do once an occurrence like that has taken place is quickly to return the House to the very strict observance of the rules. I think the House has generally accepted that. It is the duty of the Chair once that period is over to remind the House that the rules are there and that they will be adhered to as strictly as possible.

In the course of his argumentation, I think the Hon. Member for Yukon has persuaded me of one thing. I had told the House that obviously the Hon. President of the Privy Council would not give his consent to any of the requests that were being made by the Opposition. The Hon. Member for Yukon suggested that the Chair should ask for consent seriatim on all the suggestions that were made by the House. I think I am convinced that unanimous consent or refusal of unanimous consent cannot be a sweeping thing because obviously there might be one or two that could be agreed to—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: —and, therefore, it is the duty of the Chair to put every possible proposal before the House so that the House can agree to it or refuse it according to its own will.

This being said, I will allow Hon. Members to seek consent for the different proposals they have to make to the House.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, taking into account the ruling you have just made based upon the rules and precedents of the House, I think it is important, if we are to take at face value the protestations of the House Leader and of other Members of the Official Opposition that their entire purpose is simply to facilitate the operation of the House, to suggest that they are going about it the wrong way. What I have said quite clearly is that if they are serious in trying to present amendments over and above the some 70 or 80 amendments that are already on the Order Paper, I would be quite prepared, once we have decided on the time allocation, in the next two days to sit with them and work out those amendments which would be appropriate.

Mr. Mazankowski: You are not serious.

Mr. Axworthy: The Hon. Member for Vegreville is becoming a little agitated again.

Mr. Mazankowski: Because you are not serious.

Mr. Axworthy: I am perfectly serious, and we have proven it because we have already accepted amendments from the Opposition. It is the Hon. Members opposite whose sincerity must be questioned. All we see happening is their intent to delay further the Bill, which means that for every further hour's delay, we lose a hopper car in Trenton or a new construction job in British Columbia. If that is their intention and purpose, then it should be clearly stated.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: If Opposition Members want to facilitate debate, when report stage is reached after time allocation, we can consider the amendments. However, all we have here is a clear, unequivocal, blatant case of delay of important economic development and job creation initiatives, and the people of Canada should know it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I do not propose, as did the Minister of Transport, to challenge your ruling. I propose to follow it and to propose an amendment with respect to this particular legislation, Bill C-155. Before doing so, Madam Speaker, may I remind you that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia, made a proposal with respect to the so-called safety-net provision of the legislation now before us. It was responded to by the Minister of Transport who said he was very receptive to that particular proposal. In fact, it is identical to the proposal that the Minister will make, except for the percentage. I do not think you ever did ask if there was unanimous consent on whether that particular matter was going to be allowed by the House. If I am correct, Madam Speaker, you may want to put that matter before the House with respect to my colleague for Assiniboia, and I will then proceed with my brief intervention.

● (1600)

Madam Speaker: My recollection is that I did ask for unanimous consent in the case of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. I did not in the case of the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West because I interrupted him before he was finished. Does the House have any recollection? My feeling is that I did. At any rate, does the House give its unanimous consent to the proposal made by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I make this proposal to facilitate the debate on this legislation and in order to improve the Bill. In view of the fact that the Government is intending to invoke closure on the legislation, I want to have this brought forward as a reasonable Bill which, I am sure, will receive the unanimous consent of the House. I therefore propose:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after Line 43 at Page 16 the following:

"ACCOMMODATION FOR GRAIN TRAFFIC

34.(1) The railway companies shall,

(a) furnish, at the place of starting, and at the junction of the railway with other railways, and at all stopping places established for such purpose, adequate and suitable accommodation for the receiving and loading of grain offered for carriage upon the railway;

(b) furnish adequate and suitable accommodation for the carrying, unloading and delivering of grain;

(c) without delay, and with due care and diligence, receive, carry and deliver all such grain;

(d) furnish and use all proper appliances, accommodation and means necessary for receiving, loading, carrying, unloading and delivering such grain; and

(e) furnish such other service incidental to transportation as is customary or usual in connection with the business of a railway company, as may be ordered by the Commission.

(2) Such adequate and suitable accommodation shall include reasonable facilities for the junction of private sidings or private branch railways with any railway belonging to or worked by the company, and reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding and delivering grain upon and from those sidings or private branch railways, together with the placing of cars and moving them upon and from such private sidings and private branch railways.

(3) If in any case such accommodation is not, in the opinion of the Commission, furnished by the company, the Commission may order the company to furnish the same within such time or during such period as the Commission deems expedient, having regard to all proper interests; or may prohibit or limit the use, either generally or upon any specified railway or part thereof, of any engines, locomotives, cars, rolling stock, apparatus, machinery, or devices, or any class or kind thereof, not equipped as required by this Act, or by any orders or regulations of the Commission made within its jurisdiction under the provisions of this Act.

(4) Such grain shall be taken, carried to and from, and delivered at the places aforesaid on the due payment of the toll lawfully imposed by this Act.

(5) For the purposes of this section the Commission may order that specific works be constructed or carried out, or that property be acquired, or that cars, motive power or other equipment be allotted, distributed, used or moved as specified by the Commission, or that any specified steps, systems or methods be taken or followed by any particular company or companies, or by railway companies generally, and the Commission may in any such order specify the maximum charges that may be made by the company or companies in respect of any matter so ordered by the Commission.

(6) Every person aggrieved by any neglect or refusal of the company to comply with the requirements of this section has, subject to this Act, an action therefor against the company, from which action the company is not relieved by any notice, condition or declaration, if the damage arises from any negligence or omission of the company or of its servant.

(7) The Commission may make regulations, applying generally or to any particular railway or any portion thereof, or may make an order in any case where it sees fit, imposing charges for default or delay by any company in furnishing accommodation, appliances, or means as aforesaid, or in receiving, loading, carrying, unloading or delivering grain, and may enforce payment of such charges by companies to any person injuriously affected by the default or delay; and any amount so received by any person shall be deducted from the damages recoverable or recovered by such person for the default or delay; and the Commission may, by order or regulation, determine what circumstances shall exempt any company from payment of any such charges.

(8) The railway companies shall afford to the carriage of grain a level of accomodation equal to that afforded to the carriage of other traffic and failure to provide such a level shall be remedied by such orders as the Commission deems appropriate in the circumstances.

(9)(a) Where the Administrator is of the opinion that reciprocal and other arrangements between railway companies are required to facilitate the efficient, adequate and reliable movement of grain on behalf of, and in the interests of grain producers, the Administrator shall apply to the Commission for such order or orders as may be required to achieve the necessary reciprocal and other arrangements between railway companies, and the Commission may make an order granting in whole or in part the Application of the Administrator.

(b) If the special circumstances of any case so require, the Commission may exercise any of the powers given to it by Sections 59 and 71 of the National Transportation Act and may thereby make an interim ex parte order or orders.

Mr. Tobin: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order, for clarification. The Hon. Member is reading a motion which he has not yet received unanimous consent to present to the House. Technically, it may take one or two hours to present the motion before my consent as a Member or the consent of any Member of this House is received to even read the motion. It is clearly out of order for the Member to be reading a motion to the House which this House has not yet given its consent for him to present in the House.

Madam Speaker: I fail to see how Members could give their consent or refuse their consent if they have not heard what the motion is all about. I believe what the Hon. Member is referring to is that if consent is given, then of course the Speaker will have to put the motion to the House. However, we are now just hearing the Hon. Member tell us what the motion is all about so that the House can pronounce itself on whatever he is proposing.

Mr. Flis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if the Hon. Member could clarify something for the House. I know that he is an excellent reader. I have been following very closely and it seems to me that he is reading Motion No. 58, which is already on the Order Paper. Can he clarify for the House why he is re-reading an amendment which is on the Order Paper as Motion No. 58?

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, first of all, I agree wholeheartedly with the point made by the Hon. Member who spoke before the previous speaker. As I said earlier, it is clear that we are not consenting to any request at this time for amendments to Bill C-155. Obviously this is a waste of time and a clear case of filibustering, and I may refer the Chair to Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, Fifth Edition, Citation 238, which allows the Chair to interrupt these silly games, since, and I quote:

Points of order are justified when there is some flagrant misuse of the rules, but they are unfortunate necessities which should not be regarded as usual phases of procedure and ought not to develop into long arguments with the Speaker who, being in a quasi-judicial position, should not be drawn into controversial discussions.

Furthermore, Citation 234(2) prescribes, and I quote:

(2) A Member cannot rise on a point of order to move a motion.

So when they ask for unanimous consent, they are proposing a motion. That is clear. It is common knowledge. It seems we have wasted one hour and ten minutes. The Progressive Conservatives did not want a vote today. There will be none on the time allocation motion. We are going to propose the motion to limit debate just the same, but it seems to me that for the sake of order in this House, the Chair should not allow members to abuse the authority of the House and the Standing Orders in this fashion.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is simply asking whether the House could waive the usual notice for proposing an amendment. I am very sorry, but I fail to see how I could agree with the arguments of the Hon. Minister. I think I have no choice but to ask the House whether . . . I cannot allow the House to refuse unanimous consent outright without knowing what for. I think that goes beyond the duties of the Speaker. I think the House may dispose of the matter, but it cannot do so unless it knows what that matter is.

That is why I am allowing Hon. Members, notwithstanding all the time this is taking . . . I agree with the Hon. Minister, it is taking a lot of time, but I am not in the Chair to decide whether the business of the House should be accelerated or slowed down. I am in the Chair to apply the Standing Orders of the House. According to my best judgment, it seems to me quite legitimate at this time to allow Hon. Members to ask the House that notice of motion for their amendments be waived.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I may refer you to Hansard for Monday afternoon. The Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) himself maintained, and he is on record as saying so, that asking for unanimous consent is in itself a motion, which should be submitted in writing if requested, and in fact, Monday afternoon a Government Member was asked to make a written request for unanimous consent, seconded by another Member. I am referring to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport, who decided to withdraw his request. Thus, to get back to the point made by the Member for Yukon, a request for unanimous consent is a motion in itself. We are asking that it be submitted in writing today, and since it is a motion, the citation from Beauchesne to which I referred earlier forbids a Member to use a point of order to propose a motion. That was Citation 234(2).

The Clerk was in the House Monday afternoon. He can tell the Chair what happened. It is the same point that was made by my Hon. Colleague for Yukon who said: Asking for unanimous consent is a motion. If a Member demands that a request for unanimous consent be made in writing, it then becomes a motion and that is what we are doing now. We are demanding that the request for unanimous consent be made in writing, duly seconded, thereby becoming a motion and consequently inadmissible on a point of order, in accordance with Citation 234(2) of Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, Fifth Edition.

Madam Speaker: I am afraid the Hon. Minister is confusing a request for proposing a motion, a request for unanimous consent for proposing a motion and a request for waiving the notice required to propose a motion. I must therefore allow the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) to proceed.

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, in order to save time, I will not begin again. I have lost the drift of the motions. The Hon. Member for Parkdale-High Park had a question on a point of order.

Madam Speaker: I think I will have to seek clarification from the Hon. Member. Is he asking for unanimous consent to waive the notice on a motion which is already on the Order Paper? It is not.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I will deal with that now.

Madam Speaker: Of course, if Hon. Members are reading texts that are too long, the Speaker at some point may say that it might be sufficient to seek unanimous consent for waiving the notice and that the Hon. Member shall just give the House the gist of the proposal. I trust that the Hon. Member will read as fast as he has been reading since he began his intervention.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I can assure you that if there was ever an important issue that came before the House in my political career, this is the most important one. I do not take it frivolously and I am—

Madam Speaker: There is no debate. The Hon. Member will just read the motion.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I meant what I said. The fact of the matter is that the Hon. Member for Parkdale-High Park asked whether this motion varied from the motion that is on the Order Paper. Of course, if he had been following closely, he would know that it is not the same. It changed "the company" to "railway companies". Clause 4 that I have added is a new proposition with respect to the matter of the appropriate toll that will be the Crow rate as opposed to the new rate proposed by the Government. He will understand that Clause 10, which I am about to read, is quite different. The provisions of this proposal which are designed to protect the producers of the country are much stronger than the Government's proposals, and that is what I want to include in the Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I shall just carry on and read the balance of this motion, if I may, Madam Speaker. It goes on to read:

(c) Any railway company or person directly affected by an interim ex parte order made pursuant to paragraph 9(b) may at any time within ten days after becoming aware of such order, apply to the Commission to vary, amend or rescind such order and the Commission shall thereupon, on such notice to other parties interested as it may in its discretion think desirable, hear such application, and either amend, alter or rescind such order, or dismiss the application, as may seem to it just and right.

(d) Any interim order made pursuant to paragraph 9(b) shall apply for a period not to exceed one hundred and eighty days but any such order may, within the said period, be converted by the Commission to a permanent order.

(e) If railway companies affected by any order requiring them to provide reciprocal and other arrangements are unable to agree as to compensation each should receive or pay, the Commission may, by order, fix the amount of such compensation but in no instance shall such compensation exceed the variable costs associated with the provision of such reciprocal and other arrangements.

Mr. Flis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have been following the Hon. Member and he read subclause (c), (d) and (e) which are identical to the words of Motion No. 58 on pages LXXVIII and LXXIX of the Order Paper. I have just followed the wording of three subclauses and the Hon. Member used identical words, Madam Speaker.

I would like a ruling on this, Madam Speaker. The Hon. Member said that he had new amendments. If those amendments are new, we are prepared to hear them out and either give them unanimous consent or not. However, if they are a repeat of motions on the Order Paper, simply to change one or two words does not change the intent of the motions.

Mr. Taylor: You're wasting time.

Madam Speaker: To begin with, it is very difficult for the Chair to determine whether or not it is exactly the same text. The Hon. Member said that it was not exactly the same text. He did say that there were a few words changed, but I do believe that the change of even a few words within the clauses of a Bill can be quite important. According to the Hon. Member's own admission, it is not exactly the same text. Therefore I would ask the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West to continue.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, thank you very much. The fact is, of course—

Madam Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please read the motion.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Would you like me to begin again, Madam Speaker? No, I will not.

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. All of that fuss made me lose track of the gist of what the Hon. Member was saying. May he go back and start from the beginning so that I will know what he is talking about?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: I am afraid I cannot allow that.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Just to satisfy your mind, Madam Speaker, and the mind of the Hon. Member for Parkdale-High Park, the motion that he is referring to on the Order Paper stands in my name. I can assure the Hon. Member that the motion that the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West is seeking consent to move is different from the motion that stands in my name. It has a different meaning, Madam Speaker, from that of the motion that stands in my name on the Order Paper.

Madam Speaker: That clears up the matter. It is not the same text. The Hon. Member will please continue to read.

● (1620)

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The motion continues as follows:

(10)(a) For the purposes of this section, the Administrator may, on behalf of any grain shipper or group of grain shippers, commence any proceedings before the Commission or the Courts to secure any of the remedies herein provided.

(b) Where any remedy, against a railway company, other than the remedies provided herein, is available to shippers pursuant to this Act, the Railway Act, or the National Transportation Act, the Administrator is deemed to be a shipper and he may pursue such a remedy or remedies and any remedy or remedies he obtains, shall to the fullest possible degree, apply to all grain shippers."

and by renumbering the subsequent clauses accordingly.

You will understand that there is no provision which is similar, Madam Speaker. There is a motion on the Order Paper in similar but not identical terms. This is a stronger provision, a provision out of the Railway Act, which will allow the railways to provide adequate equipment to move grain across the country. While there is a similar provision in the motion on the Bill, this is much stronger in that it allows the Senior Grain Transportation Administrator to be given power to act as the shipper on behalf of producers and to go to court and pursue legal proceedings.

Accordingly, because I think this is a matter of very serious interest, I would ask you to seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for waiving of notice for the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Oberle: Madam Speaker, it will be immediately apparent that the Government might have made a grave error had it not permitted, or indeed, had you not permitted, the reading of some of these motions, because the motion that I am seeking consent for—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I ask Hon. Members not to debate. They should use the simple formula, "Could the House give me unanimous consent for so and so". That is all I will allow.

Mr. Oberle: Madam Speaker, of course I respect your ruling. I will ask the House Leader of the Government, through you, whether it would not be in the interests of the Government to give unanimous consent to the following motion:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 43 at page 16 the following:

"Agreement with railway companies other than railway companies subject to the jurisdiction of Parliament

34.(1) The Minister may, on behalf of Her Majesty, enter into agreements with railway companies in Section 2, where he finds that such railway companies carry grain from any point on their lines of railway west of Thunder Bay or Armstrong to Thunder Bay, Armstrong, Churchill or a port in British Columbia for export.

(2) Any agreement entered into by the parties pursuant to subsection (1) shall impose obligations and grant rights which are in no substantive way any different from the obligations and rights contained in this Act, and without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such agreement shall

(a) not result in any enlargement of the Crow Benefit as defined in Section 34(1);

(b) impose on the railway company a requirement that it be subject to the same obligations which are imposed by this Act on railway companies as defined in Section 2;

(c) be subject to revision whenever any review of costing or other issues is performed pursuant to any provision of this Act; and,

and by renumbering the subsequent clauses accordingly.

Naturally, Madam Speaker, I would also ask consent that any subsequent clauses be accordingly renumbered. I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House for this motion since Bill C-155 explicitly deletes one of our major railways in the country. Naturally—

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member is beyond reading his amendment. Has he finished reading his amendment to the House?

Mr. Oberle: The amendment is read, Madam Speaker, and I ask that you put the motion.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, I rise on House business to ask the consent of the Acting Government House Leader, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, if the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 3 at page 1 the following:

"1. It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and reliable grain transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interests of the grain producers and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of western Canada, and that these objectives are most likely to be achieved under conditions ensuring that

(a) grain producers retain the benefit of a statutory freight rate and are protected from freight rate increases disproportionate to international grain prices;

(b) the railway companies and the Government of Canada accept a continuing obligation to provide—

Mr. Flis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am following Motion No. 1 and so far the words are identical. Would the Hon. Member please indicate to the House how his new amendment differs from Motion No. 1 on the Order Paper?

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, I do not want to embarrass the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport but if he had been following the debate on this Bill he would have realized that the motion I am reading was ruled out of order by the Chair. I am now asking the unanimous consent of the House to put this motion forward, as is the right of any Member on any side, and the Government will be rising to do the same thing. With that, Madam Speaker, I should like to continue.

Mr. Flis: Madam Speaker, I seek your ruling. If you, together with all your Table officers, made a ruling that Motion No. 1 was out of order, and the Hon. Member now, via the back door, wants to introduce it again, he is really challenging your ruling.

Madam Speaker: I am afraid that I cannot allow the Hon. Member to continue reading his motion since that is one I had declared out of order. If the Hon. Member wants to resuscitate that motion, he can do it at another time when the item is called before the House. He cannot do it at this point because we are asking now to waive notice, so the Hon. Member would have to correct the beginning of his intervention. We are not asking the House to give unanimous consent to a motion. Since that motion was declared out of order I am afraid I cannot continue to hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, as a point of clarification, can you tell me, would that mean that in asking for consent to waive the notice, the motion would have to be put forward at another time? If, in reading this motion, it is found to be different, as it is, to try and assure us that the Government and the Speaker would find it in order, then in my opinion it would be in order to continue to read it, only not in the way that I would be asking the waiving of consent. We would do that at another time if unanimous consent is not allowed for the presentation of this motion.

The point is, Madam Speaker, that until I come to the part in the statement of purpose of this motion that is different from the main part that was ruled out of order, I do not know whether you can say if it was out of order or if Members of the Government would be able to say it was acceptable to them.

Madam Speaker: That motion was ruled out of order, therefore the Hon. Member cannot resuscitate it at this time. If the Hon. Member wants to resuscitate his motion with some changes, first of all the Chair would have to find it admissible, then the Hon. Member could ask anything he wants by unanimous consent. However, in this particular case, I am afraid I cannot continue to hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, the point I am making is that the basis of this was ruled out or order. The last paragraph has been changed from that which was ruled on by the Table. If the Parliamentary Secretary would like me to read the last paragraph, as he is looking at the original, then I could do so and both he and you would know, and so would all Hon. Members of the House, that there has been a change in the intention of this motion.

Madam Speaker: If we are going to go through all the amendments which I declared out of order, it is going to take some time. If the Hon. Member is telling me now that he is asking to waive notice for a new amendment—

Mr. McKnight: This is new.

Madam Speaker: It is new? The first paragraphs which were read indicate to the Chair that it is the one which I had declared out of order. If I must hear it until the end in order to realize it is a new motion, I suppose I must hear it. However, you understand that I was reluctant to allow Hon. Members to bring back amendments which I had declared out of order. If it is a new one, of course, I have to hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, I will read you the last part of the amendment so you are assured, as well as Hon. Members of the House. Paragraph (h) reads:

All these being a statement of purpose proposed by the Progressive Conservative Party and has been consistent with the five principles put forth in the initial debating of Bill C-155.

That is the difference, Madam Speaker. Therefore, I contend it is a new motion.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to waiving the notice on this particular motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Cooper: Madam Speaker, I have one motion to which I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader will be quite happy to give unanimous consent. I am sure he will understand the importance of it. It is:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by immediately adding after line 25 at page 8 the following:

"17.(5) The Administrator shall examine the feasibility of the utilization of off line elevators on grain-dependent branch lines designated as abandoned by the Commission, or where no grain-designated branch line exists, where, in his opinion, such utilization of off line elevators would be in the best interests of producers."

I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary can see the importance of this motion to one of the unique regions of this country, namely, the Peace country.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Schellenberger: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to put a new amendment before this House, as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by adding immediately after line 25 the following:

"(5) The Administrator shall, in consultation with the Senior Grain Transportation Committee representatives, allow representatives of the livestock producers, feed grain users, the Minister and anyone else the Administrator deems appropriate, develop for implementation a program to utilize an agricultural adjustment fund to reduce the economic distortions existing within the western agricultural sector, with particular reference to the livestock industry."

I ask for unanimous consent to put this very important amendment to the House as the Minister said that that money is in the envelope and should be used.

Madam Speaker: I am afraid I have to correct the Hon. Member. He is asking, of course, for unanimous consent to waive notice.

Mr. Schellenberger: Yes.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, I also wish to rise on House business. I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Clause 62 of Bill C-155—

Madam Speaker: Could I correct the Hon. Member? Hon. Members are not asking for unanimous consent to put a motion to the House but, rather, to waive notice. That has to be very clear because we are not putting motions to the House nor asking unanimous consent for that.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): I would like unanimous consent to waive the notice, Madam Speaker. The amendment I have is:

That Clause 62 of Bill C-155 be amended by deleting lines 19 to 23—

And I would suggest, Madam Speaker, that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport will not find this particular wording in the Order Paper.

—at page 35, and substituting the following therefor: "thereto, the Government of Canada shall, so as to be in conformity with the terms of Section 92A(1) of the Constitution Act, 1982, return to the Government of British Columbia all lands and any mineral, coal or other rights on those lands it acquired pursuant to paragraph 1(i) of the Crow's Nest Pass Act, and the Government of British Columbia may hold, dispose of, or otherwise deal with such lands in any manner and on any conditions it thinks fit."

An explanation of that particular—

Some Hon. Members: No!

Madam Speaker: There is no explanation allowed. If the Hon. Member has finished reading the amendment, I will ask the House, is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Towers: Madam Speaker, by your ruling today you certainly have made a lot of friends in western Canada, allowing a prairie boy to be heard. I would like to—

Madam Speaker: I must, I would think, ask the Hon. Member not to refer to any decision of the Speaker in those terms. The Speaker does not seek to have friends. As a matter of fact, I think the Speaker does not have very many friends.

Mr. Towers: Madam Speaker, I would ask the Government House Leader, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, if the Government would be prepared to waive notice and grant unanimous consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 42 by immediately adding after line 20 at page 24 the following:

"(a) The Commission may, on its own motion or on receiving information by complaint or otherwise conduct an investigation with respect to any condition of carriage contained in the tariff.

(b) Should the Commission find, as a result of such investigation that the condition of carriage is not in conformity with the provisions of this Act or the purposes and objectives thereof, it may disallow such condition of carriage or order that it be amended so as to comply with the provisions of this Act or the purposes and objectives thereof."

I ask, Madam Speaker, that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of the report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Huntington: Madam Speaker, on House business I would like to ask the Government House Leader if, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 58 by striking out Lines 40 to 42 at page 33 and substituting the following therefor:

"(1) Notwithstanding Section 55, the Governor in Council may, subject to subsection (2), make regulations prescribing"

"(a) the manner in which and the parties to whom payment of the government contribution under this Part shall be made;"

I ask, Madam Speaker, that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

● (1640)

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House. This motion may well save the cattle industry, the hog industry and the processing industry of western Canada. The motion is as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 6 at page 35 the following:

"60(1) Following the completion of any review or study carried out under section 59, the Minister, within 120 days, shall prepare a detailed and comprehensive response to such review or study, including the Minister's acceptance or rejection of each conclusion and recommendation contained in any review or study and the reasons therefore.

60(2) The Minister shall cause a copy of his response referred to in subsection (1) to be laid before Parliament on any of the first fifteen days that either House of Parliament sits after the preparation of that response and such response shall stand permanently referred to any Committee of Parliament established for the purpose of reviewing matters relating to transportation."

Madam Speaker: Order. Has the Hon. Member finished reading the amendment?

Mr. Taylor: In any event, Madam Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to waive notice of this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Nystrom: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice of a motion to amend Bill C-155. The motion is very important and it reads as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out lines 14 to 18 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

Grain means Alfalfa meal, pellets or cubes; dehydrated, Barley. Buckwheat. Canary seeds. Corn. Faba beans. Field beans. Field peas. Flaxseed. Forage seeds. Lentils. Mustard seed. Oats. Pulse. Rapeseed or Canola——Rye. Seed grain in sacks. Sunflower seeds. Wheat. Barley, crushed. Barley, pearl. Barley, pot. Barley sprouts. Bran.

[English]

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Mayer: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Government House Leader, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, if the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out deleting Lines 27 to 37 at Page 37 and Lines 1 to 14 at Page 38 and substituting the following therefor:

"70(1) For the purpose of applying this Act in respect of the period beginning on January 1, 1984 and ending on July 31, 1986, notwithstanding anything in this Act,

(a) the rate a railway company may charge to a shipper for the movement of grain shall not exceed the rate scale provided in Schedule II;

(b) the contribution to constant costs referred to in the definition "estimated eligible costs" in section 34(1) shall be zero percent of the volume related variable costs; and

(c) the Commission within thirty days after the coming into force of this Act, shall designate and in the manner it determines publish a list of the railway branch lines or segments thereof in the Western Division that shall be deemed to be grain-dependent branch lines for the 1983-84 crop year."

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. King: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 55 by adding immediately after Line 29 at Page 32 the following:

"(5) The Commission shall undertake to develop a costing system, for possible application after the 1985-1986 crop year, which will allow the railway companies a contribution to constant costs for the movement of grain based on and reflective of new railway investment required to accommodate the movement of grain."

This amendment would leave with the CTC the responsibility to approve the principle of contribution to constant costs based on an assessment of the performance of the railways in fulfilling their obligation to producers in the movement of grain over the period 1984 to 1986. It would further permit the railways sufficient—

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is giving explanations, I believe.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: He is still reading the amendment?

Mr. King: It is an explanation.

Madam Speaker: It is an explanation, I was right. I am listening. The Hon. Member has finished reading his amendment?

● (1650)

Mr. King: I am finished with the amendment. I thought the House would benefit from the explanation.

Madam Speaker: I am sure they were great words of wisdom, but I am afraid that I cannot allow the Hon. Member to continue. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, I also rise on a point of order concerning House business. I would ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to waive the usual notice and allow the following motion to be put to the House.

(a) by striking out line 14 at page 34 and substituting the following therefor:

"59. (1) The Minister shall, during the 1985—

(b) by adding immediately after line 6 at page 35 the following:

(2) The Minister shall cause a copy of the results of any review or study carried out under this section to be laid before Parliament on any of the first twenty days that either House of Parliament sits after the completion of such review or study and such copy shall stand permanently referred to any committee of Parliament established for the purpose of reviewing matters relating to transportation."

I do so, Mr. Speaker, in the interests of parliamentary democracy.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The proposal has been read. No explanation is needed. Does the House grant its unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 3 at page 1 the following:

1. It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and reliable grain transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest, reasonable total cost is essential to protect the interests of the grain producers and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of western Canada, and that these objectives are most likely to be achieved under conditions ensuring that:

(a) grain producers retain the benefit of a statutory freight rate and are protected from freight rate cost increases disproportionate to international grain prices;

(b) the railway companies and the Government of Canada accept a continuing obligation to provide producers with a special transportation rate for the movement of grain;

(c) the Government of Canada makes an annual financial contribution to the grain transportation system to ensure fair compensation for the movement of grain;

(d) the railway companies provide adequate equipment and plant capacity to move grain efficiently and reliably;

(e) the natural advantages of western agriculture are recognized and strengthened;

(f) the economic distortions within the western Canadian agricultural sector—

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Just previously it was ruled that a motion that had been ruled out of order by the Speaker cannot be raised here again today. Just changing a few words but not the intent of the motion does not change the amendment. I suggest that you rule this amendment out of order. The Hon. Member is strictly out of order. He is repeating Motion No. 1 which the Speaker ruled out of order at report stage.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The submission has been made that a change of a word or two may not make a significant difference. I bring to your attention that the expression "execute, not wait till I come" as changed by the expression "execute not, wait till I come" is different only by a comma. I submit that the Hon. Member opposite would not like to make his choice of those two.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that you are asking me to proceed. The motion goes on to read:

(f) the economic distortions within the western Canadian agricultural sector stemming from a statutory rate are reduced livestock products and processed agricultural products;

(g) grain producers receive adequate guarantees of system performance and service, and this Act is enacted in accordance with and for the attainment of so many of these objectives as fall within the purview of subject matters under the jurisdiction of Parliament relating to grain transportation.

I am pleased that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport is also helping us in this endeavour. Therefore, I ask, in view of the support from the Parliamentary Secretary and others, that you seek unanimous consent that the matter be put before the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Miss Carney: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order on House business. I ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House. This is the notice of motion:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 47 by adding immediately after line 44 at page 26 the following:

(5)(a) Ancillary charges are charges for services performed by a railway company in addition to the line-haul movement of grain.

(b) The Commission may, by order, prescribe the level of ancillary charges but in no case shall that amount exceed the level that in the opinion of the Commission is necessary to meet the variable cost of an ancillary service.

In any event, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House for the motion as read to be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Would the Hon. Member explain how the amendment she read differs from Motion No. 49 on the Order Paper?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Does the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre wish to respond?

Miss Carney: I will read the motion referred to.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am not sure which motion the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary is looking at. Motion No. 94 stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West. It reads as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 25 by striking out lines 10 to 17 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

debated and on the conclusion of the debate the Speaker shall forthwith put every question necessary for the disposition of the motion

Mr. Flis: I asked for the difference between the amendment read and Motion No. 94.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The House heard the proposal put by the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre. Does it grant its unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Yurko: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order because, as a Member of the House, I am quite confused at this particular moment. I will ask you to clarify the rules of the House for me.

It seems to me that we have reintroduced a form of Standing Order 43 in our rules today. We have reintroduced a selective and extended form of Standing Order 43 in a substantive way.

I want a ruling from the Chair before tomorrow as to whether or not I, as an independent Member of the House, can use exactly the same procedure being used here today to request unanimous consent to certain motions that I would like to put to the House as I used to move under Standing Order 43. I suggest to you very strongly that that is exactly what we have done here today. I want a ruling from the Chair at the earliest opportunity as to whether or not we can use this type of procedure tomorrow, the day after and the day after that, even though it may be related to other Bills on the Order Paper or to matters before the House. I would like some direction from the Chair with regard to this ruling at the earliest opportunity. I want to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that I hoped to have asked Madam Speaker this very question but I could not get recognized. I hope the Chair will provide some guidance in this regard at the earliest opportunity because, in my view, we have reintroduced Standing Order 43 in this House.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I think the Hon. Member for Edmonton East appears to misunderstand the process that is under way at the present time. Under House business, Members are merely asking that the normal notice period be waived and that the Government give consideration to certain proposed amendments to the legislation. This is quite different from the old practice of presenting motions under Standing Order 43 for the immediate consideration of the House which required unanimous consent in order that they be introduced and debated immediately.

I submit that the present process is quite different and consistent with the rulings of the Speaker earlier and is well justified by the case made by the House Leader for the Official Opposition and the critic for transport on this side.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I want to support the Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta. Many of the points he made were similar to the ones I was going to make. But let me just point out that what we are dealing with here is House business and is different from Standing Order 43 which, in fact, has the full range of questions. The other significant difference which should be brought to the Chair's attention is that Standing Order 43 traditionally was used any day the House sat. House business is a process that takes place only on Thursdays. The point which the Hon. Member for Edmonton East is attempting to make that this is a situation that can carry on in the same way as Standing Order 43 simply is not an understanding of what Members are doing here today.

I would submit that the Chair has no way in which it would be able to say, as the Hon. Member for Edmonton East is implying, that there is a connection between what we are doing today and Standing Order 43.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I am sure that when the Hon. Member for Edmonton East reads the full record of today's proceedings he will find ample explanation of what is presently going on. I advise him to check that record in print tomorrow.

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, as we are dealing with House business at this time, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive the normal notice requirement and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House at some future date. The proposed motion reads as follows:

"(a) the appointment of cost increases between the Government of Canada and the shippers of grain in respect of the period beyond the 1985-1986 crop year, having due regard to the producers' ability to pay, having regard to trends in the incomes of producers, the relationship between transportation costs borne by the producers and the price of grain and the economic position of the producers relative to other major sectors of the national economy and to any other factors that the Minister considers relevant;"

I emphasize the words "having due regard to the producers' ability to pay". In any event, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

May I ask that the question be put?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive the normal notice requirement and to allow the following motion to be put to the House. I wish the Government House Leader were here to hear the amendment. It reads:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 44 by striking out lines 43 to 44 at page 24 and by striking out lines 1 to 6 at page 25 substituting the following therefor:

"44. (2) In establishing rates, the distance from any point on any line of railway of the Canadian National Railway Company west of Edmonton to any port in British Columbia shall be deemed to be equal to the distance from that point to Vancouver on the line of railway of the Canadian National Railway Company."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion, as read, be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Greenaway: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I, too, would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, and Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow notices of motion to be waived and the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 29 by striking out lines 10 to 15 at page 15 which reads as follows:

"(5) The members of the Committee shall treat in a confidential manner any information submitted under this section that is identified and treated as confidential by the railway company that submitted the information."

In any event, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the Hon. Member's request. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 25 by striking out lines 8 to 17, at page 13, and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) A motion taken up and considered in accordance with subsection (1) shall be debated for not more than five sitting days and at the expiration of the five sitting days the Speaker shall forthwith without further debate or amendment put every question necessary for the disposition of the motion."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal of the Hon. Member for Bow River. Does the House give its unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34 by adding after line 5 at page 18 the following therefor:

" "line-related costs" means the costs associated with branch line operations consisting principally of maintenance and the cost of capital and depreciation of assets used in the branch line;"

● (1710)

That is a new definition of a phrase which the Government uses over and over in the Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal. Does it grant its unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, a Bill which is important not only to western Canada but vital to the long-term interests of Ontario and other parts of central Canada, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow a notice of motion to be waived for the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 44 by striking out lines 35 to 42 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"44.(1) In establishing rates, the distance from Edmonton or Calgary to any port in British Columbia on any line of railway shall be deemed to be equal to the distance from Edmonton to Vancouver on the line of railway of the Canadian National Railway Company."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the Hon. Member's proposal. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Andre: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to give unanimous consent to waive notice so that a motion could be put which would allow the continuance of the canola crushing industry in western Canada, without which that industry would die. Surely that is not something the Government would like to do.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please read his motion.

Mr. Andre: I was just going to do that, Mr. Speaker. The motion is:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding "(1)" after "41" on line 15 at page 24 and by adding a new subsection 41(2) immediately after line 17:

"41(2) Rates for that part of domestic and grain movements east of Thunder Bay or Armstrong, Ontario on canola oil and canola meal crushed in the Western Division shall be established by order annually by the Commission at minimum compensatory levels."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, if the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 21 by striking out lines 25 to 34 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) The sanctions referred to in subparagraph (1)(b)(ii) shall, in respect of any railway company, consist of a reduction in the government payment to the railway company under Part III, as prescribed by regulations made by the Governor in Council, not exceeding an amount that, in the opinion of the Commission, is equal to 25 per cent of the volume-related variable costs of the railway company."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to request an explanation. I understand that when you call for unanimous consent the one Member of the House who is saying "no" and therefore is not granting unanimous consent is the Hon. Member for St. Boniface. I have noticed that he has been saying "no"—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is not making a point of order. The Chair asked if there was unanimous consent, and the Chair distinctly heard a voice saying "no".

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I too would like to ask the Government for unanimous consent to waive notice for a motion that will improve Bill C-155——and the motion is as follows, Mr. Speaker:

That Bill C-155 be amended by striking out the heading "Part IV" preceding Clause 59 at page 34 and substituting the following therefor:

"PART IV
SHIPPER SHARE LIMITATION

59. In this Part,

"freight to price ratio", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the quotient, expressed as a percentage obtained by dividing the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in that calendar year by the weighted average price for that calendar year;

"shipper share limitation adjustment", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying

Mr. Speaker—

(a) the number of percentage points by which the freight to price ratio in that calendar year exceeds 3 per cent,

by

(b) the product obtained by multiplying the weighted average price for that calendar year by the total number of tonnes of grain moved in that calendar year;

"six grains" means wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed;

"weighted average price", in respect of any calendar year, means the weighted average determined under paragraph 60(1)(b) in respect of that calendar year.

60. (1) The Commission shall, on or before March 1st of each year, using the information that it deems appropriate, determine, in respect of the preceding calendar year,

(a) the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains, in storage, was available for sale on each trading day at the port that handled the largest volume of that grain in the calendar year;

(c) the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in the calendar year; and

(d) the freight to price ratio.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(a), the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains was available for sale shall be determined on the basis of the price per tonne of the grade of each of those grains the largest volume of which was moved in the calendar year.

And finally—

and by renumbering the subsequent Parts and Clauses and amending all references accordingly.—The Minister of Transport.

Mr. Speaker, do I have unanimous consent to move this motion which is very important for the producers of Western Canada?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

● (1720)

[English]

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to the following motion which, if agreeable by unanimous consent, I would like to put to the House. If I may first mention that this is one motion—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I invite the Hon. Member to read the proposed motion only. Is the Hon. Member asking for unanimous consent for the motion he has read?

Mr. Stevens: I have not read it yet, Mr. Speaker. My motion is:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 55 by adding immediately after line 29 at page 32 the following:

"55.(4) No payment shall be made to any company which is one of the railway companies until such time as that company has

(a) obtained a certificate of continuance under the Canada Business Corporations Act; and

I note, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is writing it as I read it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please read his motion.

Mr. Stevens:

(b) legally committed itself to pay interest at a rate of not less than 11 per cent on any of its bonds, notes, mortgages, debentures or debenture stock which had been issued prior to 1897 and each of its subsidiaries has made a legal commitment to pay interest at a rate of not less than 11 per cent on any of its bonds, notes, mortgages, debentures or debenture stock which have been issued prior to 1897 and in each case payable in the same currency and at the same times as previously payable."

In short, this is to help the widows and orphans—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has finished reading his motion. Is he asking for the unanimous consent of the House?

Mr. Stevens: I am, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House. This is the motion:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34 by adding after line 7 at page 18 the following thereto:

" "minimum compensatory rate" means a rate which only marginally exceeds the variable costs;"

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there consent for the Hon. Member to present the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader, or in his absence the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader, if he would be prepared, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, to waive notice and to allow for unanimous consent for the following motion to be put to the House. This is the motion:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34 by deleting lines 20 to 40 at page 17 and lines 1 to 3 at page 18 which read as follows:

"estimated eligible costs", in respect of any crop year, means an amount equal to the aggregate of

(a) the volume-related variable costs of the railway companies for the movement of grain and their line-related variable costs for grain dependent branch lines, as estimated by the Commission pursuant to section 39, and

(b) the following phased-in contribution to the constant costs of the railway companies, namely,

(i) in respect of the 1983-84 crop year, 5% of the volume-related variable costs,

(ii) in respect of the 1984-85 crop year, 10% of the volume-related variable costs,

(iii) in respect of the 1985-86 crop year, 15% of the volume-related variable costs, and

(iv) in respect of the 1986-87 and subsequent crop years, 20% of the volume-related variable costs; and substituting the following therefor:

" "estimated eligible costs" in respect of any crop year means an amount equal to the aggregate of the volume-related variable costs of the railway companies for the movement of grain and their line-related variable costs for grain-dependent branch lines."

In any event, I ask, Mr. Speaker, that you seek the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice so that the motion that I just read can be placed on the Order Paper for debate and consideration at report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 38 by striking out lines 31 to 36 at page 20 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) compute the cost of capital in accordance with such principles as the Commission deems appropriate and adjust that cost by any amount it deems justified in light of any risk associated with the movement of grain as determined by the Commission;"

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

[Translation]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the next motion in English.

[English]

I would like to ask the Government House Leader, who has just come into the Chamber, whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, he would be prepared to waive notice and allow the following motion to be put to the House:

● (1730)

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 29 by adding immediately after line 45 at page 14 the following:

"(3) The Government of Canada shall provide sufficient funds to rehabilitate those railway branch lines, protected by order in council against abandonment to the year 2000, to a level of utility allowing reliable train service year-round in reasonable circumstances and such rehabilitation shall be disbursed by August 1, 1990."

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, of course to seek the unanimous consent of the House for this motion as read to be placed on the Order Paper, as requested by the Minister of Transport, for debate during consideration of the report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 6 at page 35 the following:

"60.(1) Following the completion of any review or study carried out under section 59, the Minister within 90 days, shall prepare a detailed and comprehensive response to such review or study, including the Minister's acceptance or rejection of each conclusion and recommendation contained in any review or study and the reasons therefor.

(2) The Minister shall cause a copy of his response referred to in subsection (1) to be laid before Parliament on any of the first 20 days that either House of Parliament sits after the preparation of that response and such response shall stand permanently referred to any Committee of Parliament established for the purpose of reviewing matters relating to transportation."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House on that motion as read and that it be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of the report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. King: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

"46(1) Notwithstanding Section 45, but subject to subsection (2), a railway company may, in respect of any crop year, include in its tariff a rate that is lower than that provided by Schedule II in respect of any point of origin that was treated as a competitive or contiguous point in the tariff of rates applicable to the 1981-1982 crop year or which are subsequently declared to be competitive or continguous points by the Commission; thus ensuring that producers receive the benefit of any economics affected by railways or as a result of changing national circumstances."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I have a somewhat different matter I wish to raise on House business, if I may. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council will recall that last week and the week before, I raised on one occasion with him and on another occasion with the Government House Leader the question of the disposition of Bill C-653. He will also recall that it has been a matter of considerable concern to this Party for quite some time.

I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader is in a position today to respond to my inquiries in regard to that particular piece of legislation, whether it is the intention of the Government to facilitate its being brought forward and whether we might expect it to be considered along with the business that the Government House Leader indicated earlier today would be considered prior to the projected date of prorogation.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will know that there have been ongoing discussions between the various Parties with regard to the disposition of Bill C-653 and Bill C-12. I cannot tell the Hon. Member at this time precisely what the disposition of those discussions will be, but I would certainly speak to the Minister about the Hon. Member's question and representation.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, to pursue this issue for a moment, I get the impression that there may be other opportunities for the Parliamentary Secretary to respond to this question. I wonder if he might be able, given that I understand we do not have a great deal of time before prorogation, to check it out and report to me, even though it is out of turn, so to speak. I wonder if he might find it possible to respond to me tomorrow or on Monday at the latest, even though it will not be Thursday.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, yes, I will do my best to do that.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a proposal forward on House business to the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council in the capacity of House Leader. In the interests of facilitating the debate and improving Bill C-155, I wonder if the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put before the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 13 at page 34 the following new Clause:

"59.(1) Where pursuant to Sections 55 and 58, the Governor in Council authorizes payments other than payments to the railway companies, or has authorized part of the payments to the railway companies and part to a party or parties other than the railway companies, the Governor in Council, nothwithstanding any other provision in this Act, shall prescribe by regulation such measures as will be required to ensure that the aggregate rate per tonne to be paid to the railway companies shall be equal to the aggregate rate per tonne as if all payments were made to the railway companies.

(2) Where regulations have been prescribed pursuant to sections 58(1)(a) and section 59, sections 22 to 28 inclusive apply mutatis mutandis."

and by renumbering the subsequent cLauses accordingly.

I would like to ask, Mr. Speaker, particularly in view of the Parliamentary Secretary's keen interest in this matter, whether you could inquire of the House and the Government if they would agree to giving unanimous consent to placing this motion on the Order Paper for the report stage of Bill C-155 for purposes of debate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business and I would like to ask the Acting House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and the improvement of Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Schedule I at page 39 by adding the following:

Beet pulp. Brewers' dried grain. Canary seed. Chopped feed. Dehydrated alfalfa meal or pellets or cubes, round or square. Distillers' dried grain. Faba beans. Field beans. Field peas. Flour in bulk. Flour, pea. Forage seeds. Lentils. Meal, pea. Meal, feed. Mustard seed. Pulse.

Pulse refers to all those crops described as pulse crops which, Mr. Speaker, are an innovation and very important in western Canada.

Shorts. Sunflowerseed. Sunflowerseed oil. Triticale. Barley. Barley, crushed. Meal. Oil Cake Linseed. Oil Cake, Rapeseed, Canola. Oil Cake, Sunflower Seed. Meal, Rye. Meal, Wheat. Middlings. Oats. Oats, Crushed. Oats, Rolled. Oatcake, Linseed. Oatcake, Rapeseed or Canola. Oilcake, Sunflower Seed. Peas, including splits and screenings. Pea. Pea derivatives (flower, protein, isolates, fibre). Rapeseed or Canola. Rye. Screening or Screenings pellets (applicable only on Screenings from grains specified herein). Seed Grain in Sacks. Wheat. Wheat Germ. Wheat, Rolled. Sunflowers in Bags, paper or jute. Barley, Pearl. Barley, Pot. Barley, Sprouts. Beans, Split. Screenings. Bean derivatives (flour, protein, isolates, fibre). Bran. Breakfast Foods of Cereals (uncooked) in bags, barrels or cases. Manufactured from commodities only as listed in this Schedule or such commodities that may be added by Governor in Council. Corn, Cracked. Corn (not popped). Feed, Animal or Poultry (not medicated or condimental), containing not more than 35 per cent (35%) of ingredients other than commodities as specified in this Schedule, in bags, or barrels or in bulk. Flax Seed. Flour, made from grain or malt in bags or barrel or in bulk. Grain, Feed, in sacks. Groats. Hulls, Oat. Malt, (made from grain only). Meal, Barley. Meal, Corn. Meal, Linseed. Meal, Oat. Meal, Rapeseed or Canola. Beet pulp. Brewers' Dried Grain. Dehydrated Alfalfa, Pellets or Cubes. Distillers' Dried Grain. Faba Beans. Field Peas. Flour in bulk. Flour, pea. Forage seeds. Barley, Crushed. Barley. Triticale. Sunflower Oil. Sunflower Seed. Pulse. Mustard Seed Pulse. Millfeed. Meal, Pea. Lentils. Forage Seeds. Sprouts. Barley. Pearl Barley. Pot Barley. Split Beans. Screenings and derivatives of Beans, derivatives of—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the Hon. Member sure he is not repeating one of the pages of his notes?

Mr. McKnight: I may be, Mr. Speaker. I started reading from the bottom the last time.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I have been following this with great fascination and I can attest to the fact that the Hon. Member has not repeated one item on that list.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has listened with great attention and there certainly is repetition. Would the Hon. Member please read his motion.

Mr. McKnight: I should like to do that, Mr. Speaker. It goes on:

Durum. Durum derivatives. Durum Flour. Durum, processed. Durum milled. Durum, consumed. Durum packaged commercially. Thatcher. Thatcher Wheat. Marquis. Marquis Wheat. Wheat, No. 1 CWRS, No. 2 CWRS, No. 3 CWRS, No. 1 utility, No. 2 utility. Durum. Durum, Red Amber. Amber Durum No. 2, No. 3 and No. 4 Durum.

Unless someone has anything else to add, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member finish reading his motion, please.

Mr. McKnight: I would ask that "commodities may be added by Governor in Council but not removed by Governor in Council unless so authorized by Parliament".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

The Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, while we are on House business I wonder if I might direct a question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader. I would not want to add fiddleheads to the distinguished Member's list.

The Government having given a lot of attention in the early part of this session to Bill C-163, I should like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary whether he might not now be in a position to give me the right to seek waiver of consent so that we might bring on, at some point before Christmas, Bill C-163, an Act to establish the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, an Act to amend certains Acts and certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is asking for unanimous consent from the House—

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: —or is the Hon. Member seeking information?

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, had you been paying attention, you would know I was seeking information.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, the Chair was paying as close attention as possible. He put a question to the Parliamentary Secretary, but at one point it appeared to imply that unanimous consent to bring in a certain measure was in his mind. Would the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East make clear what it is he wants.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, had you been listening to me, you would know that I asked if the Parliamentary Secretary would be kind enough to consent to give us some indication this afternoon when the Government, having indicated to us the urgency of the Canadian aviation safety Bill, intends to deal with this very important matter and the amendments that would be laid down with respect to certain clauses in that Bill that need extensive amendment.

The other purpose was to add fiddleheads to my hon. friend's list. I was not being disrespectful, Mr. Speaker, I was just asking that you pay some attention.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair pays careful attention to everything the Hon. Member says but sometimes has difficulty.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I am confident that the President of the Privy Council would give very careful consideration to the Hon. Member's representation as soon as we finish with Bill C-155 and Bill C-162.

Mr. Deans: On the same matter, Mr. Speaker, I want to offer speedy passage should the Government decide to bring the Bill forward.

Mr. Bosley: On Government business, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, it would be prepared to consent to the following motion being put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended by adding immediately after line 6 at page 35 the following:

"60. (1) Following the completion of any review or study carried out under section 59, the Minister, within 100 days, shall prepare a detailed and comprehensive response to such review or study, including the Minister's acceptance or rejection of each conclusion and recommendation contained in any review or study and the reasons therefor.

(2) The Minister shall cause a copy of his response referred to in subsection (1) to be laid before Parliament on any of the first fifteen days that either House of Parliament sits after the preparation of that response and such response shall stand permanently referred to any Committee of Parliament established for the purpose of reviewing matters relating to transportation."

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion, as read, be placed on the Order Paper for debate during the consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

● (1750)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 8(4) I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre:

That the House continue to sit this day until 11 a.m., October 21, 1983, in order to consider Bill C-155.

I move this, Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that the Opposition Members have many more suggested amendments to make to Bill C-155.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Flis: We would like to hear those amendments. If they are really serious, Mr. Speaker, we are ready to hear those amendments.

Mr. Nielsen: Order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must call to the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary that for such a motion to be in order there must be business before the House. There is no specified business before the House at this point.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I would like to ask the Government House Leader, and in his absence his Parliamentary Secretary, whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

(b) by striking out lines 1 to 3 at page 35 and substituting the following therefor:

"(d) the appropriateness of the provisions of sections 41 to 53 respecting rates and tariff of rates;

(e) the operation and effect of Part IV; and

"(2) The Governor in Council shall, on or before March 31, 1984, appoint a committee consisting of not less than three and not more than five persons who have expertise in matters affected by this Act and represent various regional interests.

(3) The committee shall examine all matters that, in its opinion, pertain to the method of payment in respect of grain transportation that would be the most conducive to agricultural development in Canada.

(4) The committee has, for the purposes of carrying out its duties, the powers of a commissioner under Part I of the Inquiries Act and may, for those purposes, engage the services of such experts, professionals and other staff as it deems necessary or advisable at such rates of remuneration as the Treasury Board approves.

(5) The committee shall, on or before March 30, 1985, make a report to the Minister containing its recommendations pertaining to the method referred to in subsection (3) and the Minister shall cause a copy of the report to be laid before Parliament on any of the first fifteen days that either House of Parliament sits after the report has been made to the Minister."

In any event, I ask, Mr. Speaker, that you seek the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice so that the motion I have just read can be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, there is not.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, again on House business, I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to waive notice and consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34, by striking out lines 15 to 21 at page 18 and substituting the following therefor:

[Translation]

(2) To avoid any uncertainty and remove any doubts, all sections of the Railways Act, with the exception of paragraphs 276 and 278, and of the National Transportation Act, shall apply to the transportation, shipping and handling of grain under the provisions of the present Act, unless such is not feasible.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, there is not.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business to ask the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader if the Government would consider the following motion to be included for discussion on Bill C-155 in order to facilitate debate and to improve Bill C-155. I seek the unanimous consent of the House that the following motion be presented for debate:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 37 by striking out lines 32 to 46 at page 19 and lines 1 to 7 at page 20 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), the percentage of a rate to be borne by the shippers of grain is equal to the quotient, expressed as a percentage, obtained by dividing

(a) the rate that was in effect on June 16, 1983,

by

(b) the rate prescribed by the Commission, pursuant to section 35.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), the percentage of a rate to be borne by the Government of Canada is equal to the difference between 100 per cent and the percentage to be borne by the shippers of grain, as calculated in subsection (2)."

I request that the House give unanimous consent to waive notice so that the motion can be placed on the Order Paper for debate during report stage of Bill C-155.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on House business. I would like to ask the Parliament Secretary to the Government House Leader, in the interests of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, if the Government would be prepared to consent and allow notice to be waived so that the following motion might be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34 by striking out lines 20 to 40 at page 17 and lines 1 to 3 at page 18 and substituting the following therefor:
"estimated eligible costs" in respect of any crop year means an amount equal to the aggregate of the volume-related variable costs of the railway companies for grain movement and their line-related variable costs for grain-dependent branch lines as determined by the Commission.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not.

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, on House business, I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader whether, in the interest of facilitating debate and improving Bill C-155, the Government would be prepared to consent to allow the following motion to be put to the House:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 34 by adding after line 14 at page 18 the following thereto:
"variable costs" means the sum of the line-related and volume-related costs, including the allowances in each case for the cost of capital"

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you seek the unanimous consent of the House that the motion as read be placed on the Order Paper for debate during consideration of report state of Bill C-155, an act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

AIR CANADA—GIMLI ACCIDENT—REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY INTO SAFETY PROCEDURES. (B) DISCIPLINING OF EMPLOYEES—REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Mr. Speaker, I notice that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) is in the House. I am sure he will want to stay long enough to respond to my concerns about the Gimli accident. We are going to discuss a glider plane known as a 767. Captain Robert Pearson and First Officer Morris Quintal probably saved the Canadian taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars by safely landing that aircraft at Gimli, Manitoba, not to mention the 69 lives aboard that plane.

It appears very likely to me as a Member of Parliament that the President of Air Canada, Claude Taylor, has, with the assistance of the Minister of Transport, committed a blatant cover-up of the Gimli accident by having a behind closed doors hearing—not one but two—on this accident and then trying to cover up, intentionally or otherwise, the information given at those two hearings. We have conflicting information. First we have a statement on October 6 in The Toronto Sun reporting the Minister of Transport as saying:

Meanwhile, Transport Minister Lloyd Axworthy rejected demands for a public inquiry into the controversial landing.

Then we go to the Air Canada report. I remind you, Mr. Speaker, that that report was brought in by seven members of a commission, five of whom were employees of the Boeing Company, manufacturer of the aircraft in question. If that does not indicate a direct conflict of interest, then I do not know what would. However, after a couple of behind closed doors investigations, we then had the statement, as reported in The Globe and Mail on September 30, by Mr. Taylor, the President of Air Canada, who said on September 29:

—the report shows that Air Canada's operations are "still of the highest order.

It is reassuring to know from recognized independent experts that the series of incidents during 1983 do not reflect a deterioration in Air Canada's technical and operating proficiency."

Mr. Taylor also said:

At the outset it should be clarified that the independent audit was initiated by Air Canada—

He goes on to say:

—as to whether there were any fundamental or substantive flaws in our technical and operating procedures.

I am pleased to state that the audit team confirmed that these were still of the highest standard.

Having reviewed his comments, I would like to move now to the comments of the Chairman of that Commission. These comments will give an entirely different picture. First, as reported in the Montreal Gazette on October 18:

The checks of the Edmonton-bound jet with 69 people aboard at Montreal and Ottawa failed to discover a malfunctioning fuel-indicating system and the problem was further compounded by a failure to convert from metric volume to metric weight, the report says.

The accident investigation report concludes the maintenance and flight crews acted "in contravention of the Minimum Equipment List", and transport officials in Canada and the United States agree that would mean the aircraft was not airworthy.

If we go one step further in this report which was never released to the public, we find that he told The Gazette that the 767 pilot had never received any training in the refueling procedures for the 767. According to this accident report which has never been made public:

—the flight crew maintain the calculations made by them were to cross check figures provided by maintenance" while the maintenance technician "insists that he did not . . . supply the flight crew with fuel figures in kilograms."

Remember that these are the only flights in Canada, North America and the world, except Russia, that use the metric system. The report says that this was the first time they were asked to perform a drip check manual measurement of fuel on the Boeing 767 and had not received any formal training on the procedure.

My concern is that if they have not received any training as ground crew or technicians, why are the pilot and co-pilot reprimanded, demoted or dismissed for an error that was caused by the lack of procedural guidelines laid out by Air Canada?

Let us proceed to Mr. Robert Buck, who is the Chairman of the Commission that investigated this accident. He said, "You cannot have a bastard group of metric planes flying in an Imperial fleet." He also said that this special behind closed door hearing never reviewed the Gimli accident. We have the President of Air Canada saying "We are 100 per cent safe", and the Chairman of the Commission appointed by the President of Air Canada saying, "We never even discussed the Gimli accident", and "You cannot have bastard planes flying around."

The Minister has left the House since I started to speak and does not wish to respond as Minister responsible. He has now determined that we need a public inquiry. There is one county court judge from Gimli, Manitoba, who will be able to call witnesses. I wonder if he will call Mr. Buck? I wonder if he will call the Air Line Pilots Association of Canada? I wonder if he will call in the air traffic controllers?

I am only concerned that we are getting another ramrod job by the Minister of Transport trying to whitewash, using a pilot and co-pilot as scapegoats to take the fall for the errors of Air Canada.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am going to check Hansard tomorrow morning to see exactly what the Hon. Member said. If I heard him correctly, he accused Mr. Taylor, President of Air Canada, of blatant cover-up. How low can a Member get, to use the protection of the House to discredit a person such as Mr. Taylor who put Air Canada on its feet. It takes Canadians and others to appreciate and recognize that Air Canada is the best airline in the world, but the Hon. Member would not appreciate that.

The Hon. Member might also speak to his leader because such an occurrence would be investigated by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board under Bill C-163. However, we saw in the House the despictable behaviour of the Official Opposition filibustering Bill C-155. Therefore we cannot bring in Bill C-163. We have an all-Party agreement to put it through the House quickly.

The Minister told the Hon. Member in the House last week of his intentions to hold a public inquiry into the events surrounding the July 23 occurrence when an Air Canada aircraft ran out of fuel and made an emergency landing at Gimli, Manitoba. George H. Lockwood, a county court judge in Manitoba, has been appointed to lead the inquiry and report to the Minister within two months. The inquiry will examine the circumstances of the accident, including Air Canada practices, procedures and maintenance standards; whether or not there had been a breach of regulations by personnel and any steps that can be taken to prevent a similar occurrence in the future.

I think the Hon. Member will agree that this inquiry provides a suitable forum for public discussion of all events relating to this incident and, as such, will dispel any public apprehension as to the circumstances surrounding this incident.

TRUST COMPANIES—REFUSAL TO REWRITE MORTGAGES AT LOWER RATES. (B) PROTECTION REQUESTED FOR HOME OWNERS

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, on September 28, as reported at page 27534 of Hansard, I raised a question in the House with the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) regarding the plight of approximately 750,000 Canadians who have mortgages with high interest rates. This matter has been raised a number of times in the House. In fact, it goes back as far as April, 1980, when the Government, in its Throne Speech starting this Session of Parliament, mentioned the difficulty being faced by home owners in securing mortgages for their homes. Many times since then, Ministers have expressed concern and indicated they would do something about the difficulty in which 750,000 Canadians find themselves.

Briefly, the situation is as follows. Mortgages have been acquired by a large number of people from a handful of trust companies on the clear understanding that they could prepay the mortgages upon the payment of a three-month interest penalty. We have established in writing that three months interest penalty was a standard policy in the industry. When the home owners tried to prepay their mortgages they were told that the policy had been changed, and it was now required that an interest differential charge be paid in addition to the three-month interest penalty.

This move by the trust companies was clearly to dissuade mortgagors from prepaying their mortgages. The reality is that a few trust companies stand to make enormous profits if they can discourage mortgagors from prepayment and thus carry their mortgages to full term. Look at it this way, some of the mortgages the trust companies hold have interest rates at more than double today's rates. I am not against anyone making a profit. But if they make that profit at the expense of the mortgagor, by changing the rules in the middle of the game, then I must stand against them, and I will try to assist the mortgagor.

It is like playing with a double-headed coin. If you are a home owner with a 19.5 per cent mortgage, and a trust company can force you through the interest differential charge to keep your mortgage to full term, then the trust company is the winner.

If, however, you decide to prepay the mortgage and you agree to the interest differential charge demanded, the trust company is again the winner. Not only do they get the 19.5 per cent interest to full term of the mortgage but they demand an additional three month's interest penalty. Do you know of any parallel situation when you pay the full interest charged in a contract plus an additional three months' interest, plus other costs associated with the discharge of a debt?

The Minister, in her reply, said she was seeking a solution under the Canada Interest Act. Any action she may take under that statute may assist some home owner in the future but would not help those who are presently trapped.

The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs should use the leverage she has with trust companies and require them to fulfil their verbal contractual agreements and adhere to the standard industry policy. They baited mortgagors to sign a multiple year mortgage on the understanding that they could prepay the mortgage upon the payment of three months' interest penalty, then they switched their policy.

Let me say that not all trust companies have used these devious plans to strip the home owner of his right to exercise an option that was standard in industry at the time the mortgage was written. Not all trust companies have engaged in this devious practice. But a handful of trust companies are holding at ransom 750,000 Canadians, and this should not happen.

Mr. David Berger (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member referred earlier to the clear understanding that has existed, or the tradition in the industry that home owners can prepay mortgages on the payment of three months' penalty. He asks the Minister to use the leverage she has. Unfortunately, while Members on all sides of the House sympathize with the predicament in which home owners may find themselves, a contract, as we all know, is a contract, and it is not for the Minister or any other Party to open a contract which has been signed between two parties. If there has been misrepresentation, however, this is a matter which a home owner can take up in a court of law. There are civil law remedies to settle disputes over contractual agreements. These cases of alleged oral misrepresentation have been referred to the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Investigations Act.

In this regard, the Director has examined and is still in the process of examining the complaints received within the Department on this subject. The Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has always strongly supported and promoted full disclosure of all terms, conditions and obligations to borrowers.

The chief concern regarding those citizens unfortunate enough to be locked into high interest mortgages is that they may not have been fully aware of their current agreements. Unfortunately many did not realize that they had no legal right to prepay their mortgages prior to maturity with a maximum prepayment charge set at three months' interest. While a prepayment penalty of three months' interest has been a longstanding tradition, it is not rooted in law and lenders are under no statutory obligation to adhere to that practice.

However, officials in the Department have been asked to review the Canada Interest Act in order to determine means to ensure that borrowers in the future are fully informed of all rights and conditions at the time of signing.

In conclusion I would add that the allegations concerning oral misrepresentations are not solely against the Canada Trust Company. Other trust companies, life insurance companies, banks and investment firms have to date been implicated by complainants. These are the matters which are being looked into by the Director of Investigation and Research.

MEDICAL CARE—DEVELOPMENT OF PREVENTIVE HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS. (B) HEALTH CARE FUNDING

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to pursue a question I asked of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) on October 12. Before doing that, I remind the House of how we have repeatedly urged the Minister to stop playing politics with the health care needs of Canadians and to proceed without delay to the introduction of a new Canada Health Act which would reaffirm, clarify, strengthen and make enforceable the five basic principles of medicare from coast to coast, namely, universality, accessibility, portability, comprehensiveness and non-profit administration.

Such things as rising premiums, the spread of user fees to five out of ten Provinces, increasing levels of extra billing in certain areas of Canada and Government cutbacks are slowly but surely destroying medicare. We do not really know just when we will arrive at the point of no return. We do know that Conservative provincial Governments are definitely permitting new erosions of the principles of medicare.

Despite plenty of rhetoric from the Minister of National Health and Welfare about her concern for medicare, the Minister has still not put any concrete legislation before the House which would address these serious problems. She continues to dangle the idea of a new Canada Health Act before those Canadians who are concerned about medicare. And I have to admit she has been successful, at the political level at least, of appearing to be a great defender of medicare. However the moment of truth is near. For every day that goes by that we do not see a concrete proposal, cynicism grows among Canadians concerned about medicare as to whether or not the Minister is actually concerned about preserving medicare or whether the Liberal Party is concerned about preserving medicare not in itself but as an issue for the next election.

Unfortunately the Minister is also unwilling to address the very real need in our country for alternatives to the present health care model with which medicare must co-exist. The Minister has recognized that the greatest strides to be made in health care today are in the area of preventive medicine and health promotion. By improving the over-all health of the Canadian population we can reduce the need for Canada's current curative, doctor-dominated, high-tech and expensive health care system. Not only would Canadians be healthier but their health care system would be more cost-efficient, although in the final analysis that is not a good enough reason to do something. We want to do these things because they improve over-all health; that must be the real reason.

On October 12, I asked the Minister whether she intended to provide federal leadership in the development of such a health-oriented, broad-based and popular health care system for Canada. She resorted to the tired old cop-out that health was a provincial matter. Who is the Minister trying to kid? The federal Government has always played an important role in the evolution of medicare in this country. National medicare would not even be here today, sick as it is, if it were not for federal initiative. It would not be here at all if it were not for the initiative of the CCF-NDP in Saskatchewan, both in terms of hospital insurance and medicare. My constituents know that. They know the history of it, as do many Canadians. That is appropriate.

The Minister is at the very least being inconsistent. On the one hand she claims to be providing federal leadership by threatening sanctions against those Provinces which allow extra billing and impose user-fees. On the other hand, she claims she is constitutionally helpless when it comes to initiating the development of novel health care alternatives that would make Canada a healthier place in which to live, and which would take some of the pressure off the increasing costs that people are wrongly blaming on medicare when they should be blaming it on the health care model with which medicare has to co-exist.

The people of this country are sick and tired of political games such as the Minister is playing. They want the Minister to stop beating around the bush and to enact legislation that would address all the financial and structural problems plaguing medicare.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, Canadians must realize that in the final analysis health is not just related to a particular health care system, but to the social, economic and environmental dimension of our lives. The best principles of medicare imaginable, enforced to the limit, will not overcome the consequences of malnutrition caused by inner city poverty. They will not overcome exposure to hazards in the workplace. They will not overcome the fact of carcinogens in our food, water and environment. For in the final analysis, we are not just fighting for our health care system, but for that total health that will only come as we achieve greater social, economic and environmental justice.

Adjournment Debate

Mr. David Berger (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is very amusing to hear the Hon. Member talk about how the Government has been playing politics with medicare. It is a common cry that we hear from the other side, as if it is beyond them to play politics or that they never do it. I suggest to them that the Minister is not playing politics. It would be much better if he and his Party would stop playing politics with the Crow and a number of other matters and allow Parliament to proceed with the business of the country.

Mr. Blaikie: Get to the prepared answer.

Mr. Berger: The Hon. Member asks me to proceed to the prepared answer. If he wants us to deal with the matter at hand, he could try the same game when putting the question. He was three-quarters of the way into his statement before getting into the issue of preventive medicine.

The Hon. Member is anxious that we develop alternatives to the way in which health care services are currently delivered. However, he says we should forget the constitutional realities of this country.

Under our Constitution, each Province is responsible in its own right for determining the practice privileges of different types of health professionals, organizational arrangements with respect to their health services and payment arrangements. In this connection, it may be of interest to note that the federal Government from 1968 until 1977 recognized the costs of alternative payment arrangements for the insured services of medical practitioners for cost-sharing purposes under the Medical Care Act and these costs have been included in the base-year costs that are used for determining the amount of block funding under the current EPF arrangements.

It also may be of interest to you, Mr. Speaker, that under EPF, the federal Government does make a per capita grant yearly to each Province in respect of the extended health care services program.

Mr. Blaikie: Extended care is not preventive care.

Mr. Berger: Again, it is up to each Province to determine the extent to which it will implement services which the extended health care services program grant is intended to support, namely, nursing home intermediate care, adult residential care, home care services and the ambulatory health care services that I have described. This federal contribution will be continued.

With regard to preventive care, this is covered to some extent under the existing legislation and will be continued in the proposed Canada Health Act. Health promotion programs involving Government are funded by and large outside the health insurance programs per se.

The Hon. Member has been talking about cutbacks and arguing that the Government has cut back its share.

Mr. Blaikie: You have.

Mr. Berger: The truth is, Mr. Speaker, that the federal share of hospital and medical care insurance was about 50 per cent in the cost-sharing period prior to 1977 and is now about 50 per cent. If we take a wider view of provincial health spending including programs which were never cost shared, then federal contributions were about 40 per cent in 1977 and are now about 40 per cent.

Moreover, transfers for health were exempted from the federal Government's six and five restraint program. The record, Mr. Speaker, contrary to the words of the Hon. Member, reveals a strong commitment to medicare on the part of the Government. I would again suggest to him that if he would stop playing politics, we could reach the stage when the Minister would be able to find time in the House to introduce the Canada Health Act.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted.

Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock.

At 6.28 p.m., the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

SHIPBUILDING

ASSISTANCE SOUGHT FOR DAVIE SHIPBUILDING LTD. IN QUEBEC

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, the situation at Davie Shipbuilding in Lauzon is a very difficult one at the present time. This major employer in the Quebec City region, ranking second behind the Quebec Civil Service, may be facing a very serious situation by the end of 1984, when construction on the CN Marine ferry will be terminated, because the shipyard does not seem to have any new projects on its order books.

When the contract for the frigates was awarded on June 29 of this year, the plan was that as a compensatory measure, Davie would be asked to proceed with refitting of the Tribal destroyers, for a project that was then estimated at $650 million.

I therefore urge the Government to proceed as soon as possible with the studies and preparations required to carry out this major contract. I also urge the Government of Quebec to show some favouritism towards Davie Shipyards and to stop playing games. It is a fact that P.Q. politicians in the Quebec City area have criticized the federal Government's measures with respect to Davie Shipyards, while they are not as eager to admit that the Government of Quebec, which, through the Société générale de financement, owns Marine Industries Ltd. in Sorel, is supporting this shipyard on the outskirts of Montreal.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I urge the owners, the unions, the federal Government and the Government of Quebec to take action to save Davie Shipyards.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

STATEMENT BY SENATOR PITFIELD

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, now hear this! Senator Michael Pitfield has opened "Pandora's Liberal Box" and told the nation the secret he held so closely with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) for 25 years—the Liberals have been "throwing money" at their problems.

Thousands of Canadians have wondered why our deficit was increasing year by year. The Liberals have been throwing money at every problem that confronted them. With their own money? Of course not; with the people's money. Listen to what Senator Pitfield said in Toronto the other day, and I quote:

We have been solving governmental problems by throwing money at them.

The Liberals have been buying their way into office. When a Liberal MP became a problem, the Prime Minister and Michael Pitfield "threw money" at him and sent him on a trip with all expenses paid.

Was there a problem with the Prime Minister's secretary in his office? The Prime Minister and Michael Pitfield "threw money" at her and she studied French for a year at public expense in the Riveria.

Did Senator Pitfield himself become a problem to the Prime Minister? I guess so, because the Prime Minister "threw money" at him and sent him to the Senate with a pension for life.

Millions of people exist on UIC and welfare. Businesses have been forced into bankruptcy through National Energy Program taxes. No matter, the Liberals had to get the money somewhere to "throw money" at their problems. What a pity!

THE UKRAINE

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF SOVIET INDUCED FAMINE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, this weekend marks the fiftieth anniversary of the great famine in the Soviet Ukraine. The forced famine, as it was known, resulted in between six million and ten million Ukranian peasants dying of starvation, starvation brought about by the inhuman policies of Joseph Stalin's regime. In spite of many offerings of assistance, the aid was rejected. Malcolm Muggeridge, who was there at the time, wrote the following:

—the fields are covered with weeds and the people, swollen from hunger, are awaiting inevitable death. In talking to these miserable people you will find out how many have died from hunger and how many were executed by the Soviet government or deported because they have hidden a little wheat in order to satisfy their hunger.

In the name of humanity we remember the victims, and vow that an ongoing vigilance will never allow this to recur in a world which is undoubtedly a world of some considerable danger.

FISHERIES

RESTRUCTURING OF PÊCHEURS-UNIS DU QUÉBEC— ADVANTAGES TO PROVINCE OF PARTNERSHIP IN NEW CORPORATION

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, the fishing industry plays a major part in the economy of the Gaspé peninsula, since 55 per cent of fish landings are made up of catches by fishermen in the riding of Gaspé and most fish processing plants are also in that riding. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. De Bané) has submitted a restructuration plan for Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec, with the three following objectives: to ensure that Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec or its successor will continue to be economically viable; to develop a fair restructuration process, bearing in mind both the economic and social impact; to promote the development of Quebec's marine fisheries in co-operation with the Atlantic fisheries. The directors of Pêcheurs-Unis have agreed with the plan to set up a new company to administer the fishing industry in Quebec. Members of fishermen's co-operatives in Rivière-au-Renard, Newport and Saint-Maurice de l'Echouerie have expressed their agreement with the decision to accept the offer made by the Government of Canada, and the co-operative in Cloridorme will be doing so within a few hours.

On behalf of Quebec fishermen and processing plant workers, I urge the Government of Quebec to co-operate with the Government of Canada, in order to save Quebec's fishing industry from disaster, by setting up a new company administered by the people concerned and the financial institutions.

VIA RAIL

CALL FOR REINSTATEMENT OF ATLANTIC LIMITED TRAIN SERVICE

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, passenger rail service in Atlantic Canada has been less than satisfactory since two well-utilized lines were abruptly abandoned 23 months ago. Since then neither New Brunswickers nor other Maritimers have experienced the improved, cost-efficient service, or seen the new equipment the former Minister of Transport, the current Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), advised us the sacrifices were being made for at that time.

Instead, many communities are left without public transportation, schedules are chaotic, trains are overbooked, obliging passengers to stand cheek-to-cheek and cheek-to-cheek, and the LRCs, promised to be in operation by the summer of 1983, proved to be another promise shattered.

I urge the Minister to use every resource available to him to reinstate the popular, time and economically efficient and respected Atlantic Limited in an effort to reverse the tawdry and disgraceful service New Brunswickers have endured for the past two years. Forcing passengers to travel backwards before travelling forward, at greater expense and less convenience, does not forge a dynamic rail service.

The decision to terminate one of Canada's most popular lines is indicative of the irresponsibility of the Government in making this decision, and shows a general lack of compassion for and appreciation of the basic needs of Atlantic Canadians. Sadly, it is compatible with many other of its decisions adversely affecting the region.

PUBLIC WORKS

EXPENDITURES ON OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I rise today to speak on the same topic as the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). Canadians are tired of the ever-growing examples of how Government officials have been both negligent and extravagant when it comes to spending somebody else's money.

In the case of Stornoway, the rent-free accommodation of the Leader of the Official Opposition, in the last seven years the residents of that house spent $25,000 in 1976, $25,000 in 1979, $35,000 in 1980, and the latest tenant, the new Leader of the Conservative Party (Mr. Mulroney), has found it necessary to spend $50,000 of taxpayers' dollars on a splash or two of paint.

This latest example of living high at the public trough raises a number of questions. First, to justify the expenditure of $50,000, did the Leader of the Conservative Party sign a long-term lease for Stornoway? Second, what political party does a leader belong to when he acts like a Liberal, lives like a Liberal, and spends other people's money like a Liberal?

Finally, with the Prime Minister's power as the custodian of the national treasury, can Canadians afford to move this free spender from Stornoway to 24 Sussex?

Some Hon. Members: No way.

Mr. Nielsen: It would save money.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

MANITOBA—JOB-CREATION RECORD OF NDP GOVERNMENT

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, the Winnipeg Free Press and Statistics Canada have confirmed that Manitoba has the lowest rate of job creation in Canada. Because of the NDP job fund, in actuality the number of jobs created is 8,000 less than reported, meaning a percentage increase of a near worthless .88 per cent. John Bulloch, the President of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, has reported that the Manitoba NDP Government is the most anti-business regime in Canada, and it clings to the lame philosophy that only it can solve all the problems and that only it can breathe new life into its sick economy. Bulloch states the NDP seems blind to the fact that its policies are doing just the opposite.

Unemployment is up 50 per cent, with 46,000 people out of work. Inflation has soared. Taxes have increased over $225 million. The annual projected deficit is $435 million. The NDP deficit this year is greater than the combined four-year deficits of the previous Conservative Government. To top it off, the Winnipeg Free Press reports that, under the NDP Government, Manitoba has the worst record of job creation in Canada. Manitoba under the NDP Government has become the "Dogpatch" of Canada.

BROADCASTING

COVERAGE OF DEBATE ON WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, the House of Commons is gripped in the vise of an historical debate over changes to the Crow rate. That debate is of enormous economic and historical importance. This is an issue of deep-rooted differences, but one that impacts on industrial central Canada just as much as on western farmers. It is a major national issue, yet our national media have failed miserably at understanding and explaining the issue.

Last night CTV news won the award for gross incompetence. After a difficult day in the House of Commons in which the Crow rate legislation was the central issue, the news coverage was inadequate in time and content, and bland in delivery.

While our nation is struggling with an issue that contributes $6 billion annually to our balance of payments, more than any other single commodity, the issue tends to be viewed as a western one rather than as a national one, largely because the national media and central Canada are synonymous. We should not be surprised by this. The head office for CBC radio is in Ottawa; the head office for CBC TV is in Ottawa; the head office for Global TV is in Toronto; the head office for CTV is in Toronto; the head office for Maclean's magazine is in Toronto, and the head office for CP wire service is in Toronto. The media are in central Canada.

It is unfortunate and dangerous that our national media are centralized to the extent that they are incapable of understanding and explaining national issues whose origins are in the regions apart from central Canada. Unfortunately, the disadvantages must be shared by all Canadians.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—RECOGNITION OF NEW GOVERNMENT

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Would the Acting Prime Minister indicate if he was quoted correctly and, if so, if he was speaking for the Government when he was reported to have stated yesterday that the Canadian Government, after a reasonable, decent period of time, would likely recognize the new Government in Grenada? I ask this, Madam Speaker, in view of the fact that the Government of Jamaica, the Government of Barbados and the Governments of other Commonwealth Caribbean nations have already indicated that they do not intend to follow that course.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I remember teaching this subject to my students 20 years ago. There are two approaches to the phenomenon of recognizing de facto governments. One is referred to as the objective approach and the other is referred to as the subjective approach. Generally speaking, Canada has taken the objective approach to recognition of government, that is, we of course wait over a period of time and try to find out answers to a number of questions.

We need to find out what the relations will be between the government in question and neighbouring governments, and what the reality of the administration exercised by that government will be. We have to look at the attitude of the government to its own citizens. After a decent period of time, which is to be qualified in each case, the phenomenon of objective recognition takes place. It is a rather complex issue. Such recognition took place just a few days ago in the case of one of the African governments.

POSSIBLE ASSISTANCE TO CARIBBEAN REVOLUTIONS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is again directed to the Acting Prime Minister who, frankly, rather startles me with that type of a reply. Would the Acting Prime Minister indicate if he is aware of the fact that the National Mobilization Minister in Grenada, Selwyn Strachan, has stated that he believes there is room for comradely assistance to revolutions in the Caribbean? Mr. Strachan is presumably to be one of the new cabinet Ministers in Grenada. In that context, would the Minister at least indicate to the House whether he has consulted with the United Kingdom or with other Caribbean Commonwealth countries to determine what steps should now be taken, in view of the brutal and violent seizure of power in Grenada?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I try to be a bit constructive when answering these questions. I was asked by the press yesterday about what would happen, and I did my very best to try to describe the phenomenon as it would take place. Indeed, we will consult with the Governments of different West Indies islands. There is a meeting of West Indian Commonwealth Governments during the coming weekend, I undestand. We will be listening to their views on the subject. However, I cannot but describe it the way it is, and I cannot but repeat what I have already said.

When a government, a group of people, a junta or whatever, takes over power in a country by force, we must look at all of the factors that I have indicated. Those factors include the reality of the exercise of power, and the reaction of the neighbouring countries to that exercise of power. A sort of consensus builds up in the world and, after a period of time, the facts of life are accepted and recognition is given. By using the standards that the Hon. Member seems to imply, he would probably have refused to recognize the previous Government of Grenada in any event.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, again my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister, and perhaps it could be answered better if I were more specific.

There has been some $10 million worth of Canadian aid going into Grenada. Various programs are now under way, including improvements for port facilities, the improvement of a central garage facility, and other aid projects. In view of the fact that in other countries when there is a serious question about the safety of our aid personnel, the aid programs are suspended, would the Minister indicate if that is now under consideration with respect to the continuing programs for Grenada?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I think you have to start with the proposition that foreign aid, development aid, is not for the sake of recipient governments; it is for the sake of the people in the less developed countries. Consequently, we keep that in mind all the time—what is the interests of the people? In this particular instance $8.7 million has already been spent in the past in Grenada, and there is $1.6 million in current programs. With respect to the existing program, the purpose is to try to do as much as possible, which may not be much, because of the circumstances. The objective is to try to continue with the existing program.

With respect to future programs, obviously they are not in the making now. Again, it is reality that we try to cope with in this particular instance, and the interests of the people of Grenada.

POSSIBLE CONSULTATIONS ON SITUATION

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, my question is likewise addressed to the Minister who is Acting Prime Minister today but who, on Wednesday, was junior Minister of External Affairs. I wonder if he could tell the House whether the Prime Minister, who never fails to remind us of the great role he plays in the North-South dialogue, has had any discussion with the heads of the Caribbean Governments or with the President of the United States, on this brutal take-over in Grenada, with a view to concerting action, whether it be recognition, or other action in the hemisphere against the vicious Government now in place in Grenada?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I have already referred to the forthcoming Commonwealth Caribbean countries' meeting. Obviously we will be in consultation with them on the result of their meeting during the weekend.

COMMONWEALTH CARIBBEAN MEETING—REQUEST THAT CANADIAN OBSERVER ATTEND

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, as was mentioned the other day, there are some 85 Canadians in Grenada at the present time, some as travellers and some as "coopérants" in the CIDA projects. I wonder if the Acting Prime Minister could tell the House whether any approach has been made to the Commonwealth Caribbean Ministers who are meeting today about whether Canada, as a member of the Commonwealth, could send an observer to that meeting so that we can know what actions are being concerted, and could fall in line with them?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend does not seem to realize how confused the situation is. There are three or four versions of what took place, so every government in the world, including the Canadian Government is simply trying to find out what is happening.

With respect to the Canadians there, the number has already been referred to, and the information we have is that they are in contact with each other. As you know, there is one diplomat from our High Commission in Barbados now in Grenada. They are in contact with each other, and the information of the Department of External Affairs is that, generally, they are in a reasonably good mood. They have been told not to move because there is a curfew, and it is considered by the Department that if they start getting out of their hotels and homes at this time they would be more in danger than if they stayed put. That is the advice that has been given to them.

FUTURE RECOGNITION OF NEW REGIME

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, the Acting Prime Minister will know that the Commonwealth Ministers are meeting today. They have all said they will not recognize that regime. Is the Acting Prime Minister suggesting that Canada is going to be out of step with the other Commonwealth members in this hemisphere, in recognizing that regime after a decent delay? After this atrocious occurrence in Grenada will Canada recognize that regime, after a decent delay?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): No, Madam Speaker, I specifically said the opposite. I mentioned that among the factors which are borne in mind in the process of deciding whether or not recognition of a government should be given, is the conduct of that de facto in its relationships with neighbouring countries. Of course, one way in which we come to our decision is by looking to and consulting with neighbouring countries on what they will do. If, for a number of reasons, all the neighbouring countries of Grenada should decide not to grant recognition for a period of time—for a long period of time—I am sure this would be a major consideration in the decision Canada would have to make.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILES

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I would like to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. The Prime Minister himself is reported to have set up a task force concerned with ways to ease East-West tensions. And the Government is reported to be going to spend some $500,000 this coming year on a verification program having to do with the arms race. Can the Acting Prime Minister tell this House, and the many Canadians who will be expressing their support of nuclear disarmament this weekend, how the Government reconciles this concern for verification procedures, on the one hand, with the decision of the very same Government to test the Cruise missile, a missile whose most distinctive and most frightening feature is its very unverifiability?

Mr. Stevens: Just like the SS-20s.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, in Canada we will find that easy to reconcile because we have decided, in conjunction with our NATO allies, to take a two-track approach—to defend ourselves properly and adequately and, at the same time, to do everything we can to bring about peace, disarmament, and so on. Those two things are easy to reconcile. I am sure that 99 per cent of the people of Canada have already reconciled them.

With respect to the task force, indeed there is such a task force, and one would be expected to have such a task force. At the Williamsburg Summit the leaders pledged themselves, and promised they would do everything—and more colourful words were used at that time—to bring about peace and, particularly, to bring about forms of disarmament. Therefore, the task force is really in line with that pledge. The Prime Minister is collecting views from our own diplomats around the world as to what, when, where and how could East-West tensions be reduced. That is the purpose of the task force, and the Prime Minister, when he is at Guelph in a few days, will have a chance to give us his thinking on that particular subject.

Mr. Blaikie: Madam Speaker, how often do we have to listen to the line that this is in keeping with our NATO commitments? Expert after expert has said that this has nothing to do with NATO. If the Government is concerned about NATO, there are other ways in which it could beef up its commitment to NATO.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT RECONSIDER MISSILE TESTING DECISION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, we hear the Acting Prime Minister, like the Prime Minister, putting a lot of faith in arms control talks, talks which many experts, including Elva Myrdal, the Nobel Peace Prize winner of last year, has said are worth nil as far as real nuclear disarmament is concerned. Is the Government now prepared to admit, on the eve of this weekend when we hope the Prime Minister will make a half decent speech in Guelph, that these talks are not enough, that they are no substitute for courageous action to break the hold of the nuclear whirlpool on this planet?

Will the Acting Prime Minister now, in the name of the Government, indicate a willingness on the part of the Government to reconsider the testing of the Cruise missile? And would he also indicate at the same time the Government's position on other proposals, such as the call for a freeze on the testing, deployment, and development of new nuclear weapons? This is called "suffociation" in case the Acting Prime Minister and the Prime Minister do not know what that word means.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member was obviously more interested in preparing his second question than in listening to the answer I gave to his first question. I referred to the two-track approach. Most people who think about these problems, and many, many many do, are sort of reconciled with the fact that it makes sense that you try to protect yourself in the best possible way. That is a prudent decision to make. Yet at the same time you do your utmost to develop a spirit of co-operation in the field to bring about peace through disarmament. That is what the Secretary of State for External Affairs declared the other day.

Canada has always been very conscious of the importance of verification as an ingredient of disarmament. What the Secretary of State declared the other day was not new, it was a continuation, with more money being assigned to it. But Canada is active, and the rest of the world thinks so, in all fora, employing all means or devices which can be used to bring about disarmament. We are active in the field of control of chemical weapons, outer space, and what not. So, to quote what was said at the time of the Williamsburg Conference, we really do our utmost to bring about better conditions for peace.

Mr. Blaikie: Madam Speaker, when will the blind see, and when will this Government see, that there is no protection to be had in the kind of arms race towards which it is contributing as the Canadian Government?

REQUEST FOR FREE VOTE ON ISSUE OF CRUISE TESTING

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Bird's Hill): Madam Speaker, the Acting Prime Minister will know that many Canadians would like Parliament to be able to express an independent judgment on Cruise testing. So far a free vote has not been possible as a result of, in part, procedural language in our Standing Orders which results in many motions being motions of confidence although they need not be. Can the Acting Prime Minister tell us whether the Government intends to follow the recommendations of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, or parliamentary reform as it is more popularly known, and allow for changes which would make such votes more possible? Perhaps if Parliament could express itself freely and independently on an issue such as this, the Government would not be in court today over Cruise testing and the role of Parliament—

Madam Speaker: Order. I think we have had the question.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, this is a matter of parliamentary reform, and enough was said about the subject last Friday for the House to know where the parties stand on the matter. In the circumstances, I would refer the Hon. Member to last Friday's debate, which took place instead of the debate on Bill C-155, which, as the House is aware, is being delayed because of filibustering by the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party.

THE ADMINISTRATION

MINISTER'S USE OF CHALLENGER JET ON MIDDLE EAST TOUR

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister who is well known for his candor. Will he tell the House whether a published report today is correct in stating that the Secretary of State for External Affairs has ordered that a Challenger Jet, owned by the federal Government, be sent to Europe to ferry him about the Middle East, and that the Jet was sent with empty seats while the Minister flew commercially? If that is so, what is the Minister's reason for doing that? Is it that he is uncertain about the airworthiness of the Challenger Jet, or is it, as the press reports, that the Challenger Jet would be forced to put down at Iceland to refuel and the Minister does not like the weather in Iceland this time of year?

Mr. Pinard: It is too slow by boat.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, the answer is, as usual, quite simple. It is to save time. The Secretary of State is rather a busy man. He is in Halifax for meetings with the U.S. Secretary of State on a certain day, and then he has to go to the Middle East. So the plane was sent to Europe because it takes longer to get there than a commercial jet. The Minister hitched on a commercial flight to wherever it is the plane was waiting for him, and in doing that he managed to save quite an amount of time.

COST OF TRAVEL ARRANGEMENTS

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, in that case would the Minister undertake to tell the House exactly how much time was saved between Canada and Amsterdam by the Minister going commercially, and how much money it cost, so we can figure out how much the Minister's time is worth per hour? Secondly, can he confirm that in fact the Minister's office has been putting out the story that the reason for doing this separately was that the Challenger was leaving from Ottawa and the Minister was leaving from Halifax? Will he inquire as to whether there are maps and compasses in the Department of External Affairs, and whether they recognize the fact that Halifax is en route from Ottawa to Amsterdam?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I will gladly ask the Secretary of State to give his agenda to the Hon. Member if he feels that way. But the easy answer is that the Minister, like other Ministers, and some other people presumably—

Mr. Chrétien: We will send Beatty to Iceland, too.

Mr. Pepin: —has a pass on CP Air, so it did not cost the Government anything. Presumably there was quite a number of empty seats on the CP Air plane. I am quite sure that CP Air was delighted to have the Secretary of State on board.

TRUST COMPANIES

PENALTIES IMPOSED FOR RENEGOTIATION OF MORTGAGES—IMPACT ON HOME OWNERS

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, who is aware that some trust companies have placed clauses in their mortgage renewal contracts which remove a right given to a home owner under Section 10 of the Interest Act. Will the Minister deal with this matter in the report she will be releasing as a result of an investigation or inquiry undertaken by her officials?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I would like to inform the Hon. Member that a contract is a contract. I find it very difficult to accept that someone would sign such a waiver without examining very carefully what he or she had done. As to whether this particular type of incident has been detected or reported, I am not aware because I have not seen the full report. I expect it to be out shortly.

BRITISH COLUMBIA SUPREME COURT DECISION

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, the Minister has stated she may seek a remedy to aid home owners through the Interest Act, and I am sure she will have been briefed on the decision rendered by the Supreme Court of British Columbia last summer dealing with Section 10 of that Act. Will the Minister, in her report on this matter, deal with the wording now being placed in mortgage renewal agreements which deems that the date of the mortgage will be the date of the renewal agreement and thus set aside the decision by the Supreme Court of British Columbia?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, we are looking at a number of options and we will disclose those to the Hon. Member at the appropriate time. But certainly full disclosure is one of those options which I feel must be examined very, very closely.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT LTD.—BIDS FOR COMPANY

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce on behalf of grain producers who have millions of dollars invested in White Farm equipment, and on behalf of the 150 plus dealers of White Canada. In view of the fact that the receiver is meeting today to review bids for White Canada, could the Minister inform the House how many realistic, firm bids have been made for the White assets, and if any of those bidders are Canadian?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, this week for the first time since the process started the receiver has received three bona fide bids. I understand the creditors have recommended that the receiver proceed to the bankruptcy court with a recommendation for the Borg-Warner proposal. The Borg-Warner board is meeting today with respect to adopting the conditions the receiver has put forward on behalf of the creditors in determining the commercial terms. If the Borg-Warner proposal is accepted, I understand that they are going to try to find a Canadian company to enter into a joint venture with them and that proposal will obviously have to come before the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

With respect to the federal Government, Madam Speaker, the conditions for our support have been the same as I have told the Hon. Member on several occasions in this House. Our first priority was to ensure that parts and supplies be made available, in keeping with provincial law, to the farmers right across the country; secondly, that the axial-flow technology will be kept here, exploited here, and manufactured here in Canada; thirdly, to try to preserve the dealer network across the country. The fourth, of course, was the same as the commercial lenders in trying to get a proposal. We are hopeful that the conditions we have set down will be accepted and that we will have a satisfactory conclusion to this lengthy negotiation.

TERMS OF BORG-WARNER PROPOSAL

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I take from the Minister's answer that the proposal was made by Borg-Warner Corporation, not Borg-Warner Acceptance. I presume that is who made the proposal. Would that proposal allow White Farm Canada to continue to operate as a viable company with the manufacturing of the conventional combines, the axial-flow new technology being manufacturing in Canada, and parts supply being continued by the Canadian White firm regardless of whether it is a joint venture or completely controlled by a Canadian?

• (1140)

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, if I recall, the proposal that the receiver has been recommended to accept is that of the Borg-Warner Acceptance Corporation which will in turn financially back another Canadian company that would, in essence, take over White Farm as a going concern. Of course the conditions that we have set down for the proposal, which I do not see any reason to change with respect to the FIRA application, are that parts supply will be made available to the Canadian farmers, that the dealer network will be maintained, and the technology will be developed right here in Canada. I do not see those conditions changing, but I believe it will be Borg-Warner Acceptance Corporation rather than the Borg-Warner Corporation.

FISHERIES

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans.

The Minister has submitted a plan for restructuring Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec by setting up a new company in which both fishermen and creditors would be represented, and I believe this is the way to save the Quebec fishing industry from disaster. Has the Minister explained to the Government of Quebec the advantages of being a partner in the new company, and what reply did he receive from his provincial counterpart, Mr. Jean Garon?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has described very well the importance of the project submitted by the Canadian Government in the same spirit as the project submitted to and accepted by, all intervenors in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. The House is aware that the Government of Canada has allowed Pêcheurs-Unis to continue its operations in the past two years, since Pêcheurs-Unis covers nearly half of the fish processing plant workers in Quebec, and especially in the riding of Gaspé, as well as 30 to 40 per cent of fish landings. Two years ago the Government of Quebec asked for a long term restructuration plan for Pêcheurs-Unis through which it could provide assistance. That plan now exists and is supported by all concerned, and I hope the Government of Quebec will support it as well, since Pêcheurs-Unis were to disappear tomorrow, the biggest losers would not be the financial institutions, such as the Mouvement Desjardins or the Banque Nationale, but the Quebec Government, which, either directly or through the Société de développement coopératif, where 90 per cent of the funding is the Government's, has the biggest share in this concern. I therefore urge the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to join in a partnership with all parties concerned so that we can restructure this industry in a way that has already found acceptance with the Government of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

APPLICATION OF CRIMINAL LAW IN NORTHERN REGIONS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice, who is undoubtedly aware that people in the two northern Territories are three to four times as likely to go to jail as people anywhere else in Canada, although we have no reason to believe that they are any more criminal or immoral. Will the Minister agree that this is a deplorable and unacceptable state of affairs, and would he tell the House what responsibility he believes he has to see that there is some reduction in what seems to be the excessively vigorous application of the criminal law in the North?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member is indicating that there are several factors which could lead to this situation which exists. I am attempting to find out which of those factors are the causes, if we could determine that, in this particular case.

I would also draw to her attention that I hope that I will shortly be introducing new legislation, if the Opposition allows us to proceed to the new Session of Parliament when we could introduce new legislation, concerning sentencing, which I am sure will at least in some part relieve the situation which exists there, as well as some other situations in Canada.

Ms. McDonald: Certainly this new legislation would be welcomed, but I would like the Minister to try to answer the question more fully. He is responsible for prosecutions in the North and for the court system in the North. Of course, his colleague, the Solicitor General, is responsible for policing in the North. Altogether, it is a federal responsibility.

POSSIBILITY OF ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, it seems to me that it will take more than just new legislation. Would the Minister comment on what kind of administrative changes might be needed? What are the alternatives, and how will they be developed? What kind of inquiries will he undertake? What input could we have from people such as the native people, who particularly suffer from the extensive use of the criminal justice system? Could he be more precise about what steps might be taken and what the responsibility is at the federal level?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member asks some good questions. I have this area under study at the present time. I will take her question as notice of issues that she will want to raise with me when I next appear before the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

I also understand that the Committee has before it for its consideration the possibility of some further study itself into these questions. Therefore, I hope that in at least the next several months we will get better answers to those questions than are now available.

AIRPORTS

PICKERING AIRPORT DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In July of this year there was a report in The Globe and Mail of an initial phase development of the Pickering Airport that would be announced on September 23. Could the Minister advise us what happened after that initial announcement?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, it is still being examined.

Mr. Fennell: I hope better consideration is given to the Pickering Airport development than was given to the Mirabel Airport development.

USE OF AGRICULTURAL LAND

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, will the Minister agree to allow young farmers to develop the surplus land at Pickering and give them a chance to develop and begin using that land for a productive purpose?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I have already explained that all of the issues relating to that matter are now being examined.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PACIFIC PETREL SAILING VESSEL PROJECT

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Has he been briefed on the Pacific Petrel project which has been proceeding for some time without Treasury Board approval? If he has been briefed, could he tell us if he has decided to give post facto approval for those expenditures?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. gentleman for his question. I also thank him for having brought that matter to my attention initially. After he spoke to me privately about the issue, I asked for a complete briefing from my officials. I have received a preliminary briefing and I have asked for additional details which would permit me to make a decision. Whether that decision will be in the line that is suggested by the Hon. gentleman I am not in a position to say today.

Mr. McKinnon: It is always rather startling to find a million dollar project going on in the Minister's Department about which he or Treasury Board has known nothing.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, is the Minister in favour in principle of the construction of that sailing vessel on the West Coast, as a means of giving sail training to sea cadets, or is he not?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, that is the question I am addressing. I am not in a position today to advise the House as to what that decision will be. I, like the hon. gentleman before me, wish to make decisions with the full knowledge of the facts.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

USE OF GAMMA RADIATION AS FOOD PRESERVATIVE

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. It concerns the use of gamma radiation as a preservative of food. In keeping with the Government's desire to keep the public totally informed, would the Minister tell the House what decision, if any, she has made with respect to the type of logo that will be used to identify the foods that are treated with gamma rays?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her question, although it would be more properly directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare since it is directly under her ambit. However, I would like to inform the Hon. Member that discussions are taking place between the two Departments and as soon as a decision is made it will be made public, of course.

IDENTIFICATION BY LOGO DESIGN

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is still directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who, I understand, has the jurisdiction over labelling. This is the purpose of my question. I think it is very important that consumers have all the information available to them with which to make an informed decision on their purchases of such treated foods. Will the Minister assure the House that the logo designed and approved by her Department will not hide or cloud the fact that foods are treated with gamma rays?

• (1150)

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I would like to reassure the Hon. Member and the general public that that is exactly what will take place. In the meantime, there is, as far as we can measure, no danger to the public.

EMPLOYMENT

WORK PERMITS ISSUED TO AMERICAN AUCTIONEERS

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. American auctioneers are coming into Canada to work, using work permits that go for an extended period of time, and yet Canadian auctioneers are not allowed the same benefit. Will the Minister look into this matter and determine whether we should stop the American auctioneers coming in or, in the alternative, reach some reciprocal arrangement or agreement?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

CANADIAN CONTENT—STATEMENT BY JAPANESE AUTHORITIES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Japan is apparently threatening Canada with retaliation if we adopt the recommendations of the automotive task force and establish a Canadian content requirement for imported vehicles. First, does the Minister recognize this threat for what it is? It is blackmail. Second, does he recognize that Japan virtually built its industry using a system in fact, that did not allow free entry into their market without there being Japanese content? Will he tell Japan that we will do what is in our best interests and take the steps necessary to implement the recommendations of the task force?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, I have never known the Government of Canada to be intimidated by any country in the world.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lumley: Threats of retaliation is not the way to conduct negotiations which are now being undertaken with the Japanese automobile manufacturers. We find it rather strange that Japan will build an automotive manufacturing facility in Italy when Italy will allow only 2,000 Japanese cars into its market, whereas Canada allows about 150,000 cars into our market. We think we have a pretty good investment climate and we are hopeful the Japanese automobile manufacturers will see their way clear to invest in this country.

TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, can I take it from that answer that the automotive task force report, which represents the best work of both the industry and the unions involved, is not going to be implemented by the Government?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, we have already implemented some of the recommendations of the automotive task force, and we have three or four other recommendations to which we are giving serious consideration. As for the major proposal, the content proposal, I have said many times in this House that I think it would be irresponsible for the Government to act unilaterally in this regard.

Japan is a very valued trading partner of Canada. Also, 30 per cent of our Gross National Product is generated by exports. In addition, the Canadian way is the negotiation route, Madam Speaker. We will continue in this direction, but if we are not successful then we might have to take other action.

PENSIONS

PLIGHT OF BRITISH PENSIONERS

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. On January 1, 1984, the agreement between Canada and Jamaica on social security arrangements will come into effect. That is the fifth agreement signed by Canada with other countries. There have been a number of requests to the Minister by former resident citizens of the United Kingdom, now citizens of Canada, for the same kind of reciprocal arrangement in order that they might not suffer the penalties they now have because they do not receive full funding of pension plans earned. What is the Minister's time line in order that an agreement between the United Kingdom and Canada can be reached on the same kind of reciprocal agreement?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I am aware of and I must say I am quite sympathetic to the 40,000 or so British Canadian pensioners living in our country. I started on that dossier exactly six years ago. It is almost as old as medicare, by the way. Unfortunately, this matter does not depend on Canada, and I appreciate the chance the official critic gives me in being able to give an update on it. The problem is really with the other partner, namely, Great Britain, and I guess it is fair to say it is a money problem.

The parameters could be full indexation of British pensions for which people paid through general taxes all their lives with a certain amount which will have to cover retroactivity. It is fair to say that we would like something. This matter was on the agenda of the two Prime Ministers and I understand Mrs. Thatcher did not close the door.

Beyond that, I met with some of our pensioners in Canada recently and we are exploring what else can be done to try to press upon the British people that these British pensions have already been paid for, if I may way, as deferred wages through taxes.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ATTENTION

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I want to thank the Minister for that answer. Will she continue pursuing this dossier in light of the present discussion on pensions, and can she assure us that this matter will not in any way be put aside because we are also having a discussion on pensions on a larger question in Canada?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I can assure all my colleagues in the House that I have a mind of a critical path diagram and I follow activities in parallel form. Each activity gets its chance. Matters are not put aside because one major dossier is being discussed. The dossier of the reciprocal agreement for pensions and other social programs between Great Britain and Canada is an active one, totally separate from any other pension reform. I take this opportunity to do something unusual and ask the help of all Members on all sides of the House, and I am sure I will have it.

FINANCE

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT TAX CREDITS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. On April 19 when the Minister's budget was tabled, he also presented a paper called "Research and Development Tax Policies." A key phrase in that paper indicates research and development has become a critical growth factor as a result of accelerating technological change. When will the Minister introduce in this House the draft legislation which will lead to a considerable increase in the generosity of tax credits and benefits available to small businesses embarking on research and development projects?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): I thank the Hon. Member for raising this particular question. As he knows, we issued a paper with the budget which is the subject of extensive consultations with people in Canada interested in research and development. Through those consultations we have been able to make a number of adjustments and improvements. I can report to the Hon. Member that the general thrust of the recommendations has been supported by all those consulted. I would expect to be able to introduce draft legislation very, very shortly. As a matter of fact I have approved, as recently as a few days ago, the latest changes in that regard. I hope we can do this very shortly.

REQUEST FOR EARLY INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, I think the Minister would realize that the date of the introduction of that draft legislation has a great bearing on the retroactivity of certain of those measures. If he checks with his departmental officials, he will find that they are saying there is no point in introducing this legislation at this time because the House will soon prorogue. I do not see what that has to do with draft legislation, Madam Speaker, nor do I understand the concern being expressed by his officials that an additional $100 million in tax credits is far too rich for the business Sector, the small business sector in particular. How does that square with the billions of dollars the Government is handing out to the Canadairs, the Maislins, and the Dome Petroleums of this country?

Why can we not get on with introducing this legislation and give a break to the small and medium-sized business sector which needs generous increases in tax credits?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member also forgot to mention the billions of dollars we are already giving in terms of tax advantages to small businesses in this country—

Mr. Siddon: Two hundred million dollars.

Mr. Lalonde: —and the money we have given to support Massey-Ferguson, de Havilland in Toronto, White Farm Implements, and hundreds and hundreds, indeed, thousands of business organizations in this country which have been supported by the tax and the grant system which the Government has in place to create jobs for Canadians.

As far as the Hon. Member's question is concerned, he seems to have an argument with my officials. I will check whether he is right or they are right, and who I should endorse. When I have reached a conclusion, I will let him know.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

MOTION TO PROCEED TO ORDERS OF THE DAY

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I presume the Question Period has terminated, and therefore I rise to facilitate the orderly transaction of the business of the House today. I would like to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer):

That the House do now proceed to Orders of the Day.

If there is any doubt about the acceptability or the propriety of the motion, before the Chair makes any ruling I have submissions to make with respect thereto.

Madam Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Madam Speaker: I cannot entertain a point of order when I am putting the question.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—AGRICULTURAL POLICIES

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette) moved:

That this House condemns the Government for its failure to recognize the economic hardship affecting all farmers in Canada, and its failure to help alleviate that hardship by implementing sound agricultural policies.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I hope everyone will give me the same kind of reception after I finish speaking! This is certainly a great opportunity to talk about a very basic part of any country. If we are to be a sovereign country, we first have to assure an adequate food supply. When we speak to that, we speak to what goes on in Canadian agriculture.

In the past Canadian agriculture has served the country extremely well. It is the reason Canada was settled in the first place. There were vast amounts of land available. People came from literally all over the world to take advantage of the land and the opportunity to develop it and to plan for the future. Unfortunately, in the last 15 years or so this Government in particular has been extremely derelict in ensuring the same kind of opportunity for farmers now as was the case when the country was originally settled some 50 or 75 years ago, in the case of western Canada, or in many cases as many as 200 years ago and more in other parts of the country.

Agriculture is extremely important to any society. We can almost define any developed country in terms of the amount of disposable income its people have to spend to feed themselves. Recently figures were made available which showed that the average consumer in Canada spent something like 16 per cent of his or her disposable income or take-home pay on food. This means that there is 84 per cent left to do other things. Also it means that we can have shorter work weeks, holidays with pay and many of the amenities which have come to be taken for granted but are basically luxuries in other parts of the world. These are the types of things an efficient agricultural system provides and are necessary for a developed society.

Other parts of the world are unfortunately not as well off as we are. People spend as much as 50 per cent or 60 per cent of their income or time on feeding themselves. This means they do not have time for shorter work weeks and that basically they have to work long hours in the fields.

We are very fortunate. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has said many times—and I agree with him—that we have a very efficient system of agriculture. I would argue that it has become efficient in many cases despite government policy. This speaks to the ingenuity of individual farmers. That same ingenuity is what attracted people to settle the country in the first place; that same ingenuity made agriculture more productive.

When I say "16 per cent", that only tells part of the story. The 16 per cent of disposable income spent on food also includes many meals eaten away from the home. They are increasing. In the neighbourhood of 30 per cent to 40 per cent of all meals consumed in Canada are prepared outside the home. In addition, they include various fruits and vegetables which are out of season. This means they have to be transported into the country, which speaks to our balance of payments. In many cases this involves prepackaged and prepared food. It has been said that a potato does not go into a modern kitchen unless it is peeled. In many cases that is true. That is the kind of thing we take for granted today, in many ways at the peril of agriculture.

In the last two or three decades farming has changed. In many ways farmers were previously looked at as second-class citizens. For example, if a person was a poor driver, he was a farmer; he did not know how to drive because he had never been in a city. Now farmers are very sophisticated. We cannot tell the city kids any longer from the country kids. We all wear the same kind of clothes. We work with computers. We are a very modern, productive, forward-looking and energetic group of people. Unfortunately, the present Government has not kept pace with what Canadian agriculture is doing.

This motion is a very broad one and it is easy to condemn people out of hand, but I would like to be more specific by talking about it in terms of money, the basic problem of most of the country today. Certainly agriculture is no different, but in many ways its situation is a unique one. One of the ways agriculture has become more productive is that it has mainly become more capital-intensive. It now takes as many dollars to create a job in Canadian agriculture as it does in Canadian manufacturing. Farmers now need money to farm. They also need seed, fertilizer and modern machinery. They need access to capital. Certainly that speaks to government policy. As we all know, Government has become a very large factor in anybody's life today. That is what is going on in Canadian agriculture.

Many things could be done in the area of agricultural finance which do not require the spending of a lot of money. I would like to refer to some of the questions I am asked for which I do not have answers because the Government does not have any policies directed at answering such questions. When farmers see that there are term deposits in banks in the neighbourhood of 6 per cent, 7 per cent or 8 per cent, when they see the Farm Credit Corporation offering money at over 13 per cent, and when they see chartered banks offering money at the same rate, they wonder why they cannot have access to funds at lower rates. This makes sense because it means Canadians would be given a chance to invest in the most basic industry in any modern society. This would not involve a lot of subsidy.

We saw the attitude of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) in Question Period today. The Government is giving things to people. It has given money to various sectors of industry. Farmers are not asking to be given anything; they want to pay their own way. They want to be able to hold up their heads. This is what has made them very productive in the past. They are asking for an opportunity to pay their own way.

There are many things in the area of financing which could be done that would not require large Government expenditures. They are not big ticket items as far as Government moneys are concerned; in many ways they are just common sense. It makes no sense that we should raise fuel taxes. It is extremely expensive to fill a tractor before going to the field in the morning. If one fills up a 100-gallon fuel tank on a tractor—and there are many farm tractors with fuel tanks that size—as much as $100 in taxes goes into it. That is the kind of commitment a farmer has to meet when putting in spring crops. That money is not circulated back into the private sector, it goes to the Government. If we are having financial trouble, it does not make any sense to tax farmers to the brink of financial disaster on one hand, and on the other hand bring in programs that cost them money to assist them. That is a much simpler way of seeing that farmers stay in business and stay productive.

There are other things that could be done and some of my colleagues will outline them later in this debate. We are talking not only about western grain but the advance payments program. In many cases that has served us well. It puts money into the hands of the producers when they harvest their crops. If the crop is marketed over a period of time, it serves the Government and it serves the farm community very well.

In the case of the advance payments Act for western grain, it does not make sense that the Government does not increase the amount. Looking at the history of that program, it has served very well. The losses have been minimal. The Government pays the interest on it. The Canadian Wheat Board borrows the money at prime minus one-quarter per cent, which is better than any farmer can get. The more money that can be borrowed by the Canadian Wheat Board at prime minus one-quarter per cent to be put into circulation in the farm economy is better for the whole system, yet this Government refuses to increase cash advances to western farmers.

I have had an opportunity to question the Minister on the agri-bond concept. It is still a concept, something that can be worked out. It is designed to allow the money generated in agriculture to stay in agriculture. It makes no sense, when a farmer sells out and wants to use that money as his retirement plan, to put it into the economy through trust funds, term deposits and so on in order to minimize the tax that he will have to pay on that money. What is wrong about developing incentives to have that money which was generated in agriculture remain in agriculture? It would alleviate some of the requirements for funds of the FCC and alleviate some of the requirements of the Minister of Agriculture on the banking institutions. However, we see no innovative proposals in terms of finance coming from this Government or this Minister.

A year ago last June 1 heard the Minister of Agriculture state over the radio that very shortly the Farm Credit Corporation would have a billion dollars available to loan to farmers at preferred rates of interest. However, we find that the FCC cannot even go to the domestic market to raise funds. That makes absolutely no sense. It further propagates the Minister's reputation as being somebody who likes to talk a lot and do very little. That is very unfortunate for the farmers of this country.

In many ways there is excessive regulation of the farming industry in this country. There is concern in western Canada about what is going on with producer cars. There are not enough available. That is one way the farmers can market their grain and save handling costs. There are problems in the British Columbia orchard industry. I am told that if the producers gave their product to the canneries, the canneries could not be competitive in their marketing with the products coming from offshore. There are problems on the east coast with the potato industry.

This Government has failed to negotiate on a square basis with the Americans. The Americans are our best neighbour and best trading partner. That does not mean that we have to roll over and play dead when it comes to negotiating with them. This Government has not maintained the proper connections with the Americans with whom we want to trade. They have to trade with us. They send us a lot of fruit and vegetables when they are not in season in Canada, as well as those we cannot produce. We certainly hold an ace as far as our trade with the United States is concerned. The Minister has not used that to the best advantage of our producers.

Let me touch briefly on what I believe is the real tragedy, and that is the attitude that seems to pervade the present Government. Agriculture is not asking for handouts, only an opportunity to be productive. Agriculture does not need a lot of subsidies and concessions, only a chance to be productive. If we can be competitive in world markets, we do not need a lot of the assistance and support that comes from time to time. What is needed is a proper economic climate.

The tragedy of this Government's agriculture policy is that it staggers from pillar to post. It reacts to situations once they are in place rather than looking at research and development. Some very exciting things are happening in research and development. There is the possibility of developing legume cereals which would very much reduce the cost of production and assist our producers in being competitive. What does this Government do? It cuts back on the amount of basic research. Our research is down the line once the product has been produced. Our producers should be armed with the best varieties and the best research in terms of pesticides, insecticides, fertilizer and so on. They would then be more than competitive.

This Government has failed to maintain a good climate for negotiations with the Provinces. We see a good example of that now in the stabilization program for red meats. I understand the federal Government took no meaningful part in the discussions and that is a tragedy. We had a debate in this House a couple of years ago when we talked about the Constitution and all kinds of other things which the federal Government needed in order to have some clout. There is much that could be done with a simple change of attitude.

It would have been a lot more helpful to the livestock industry if the federal Government had participated fully in that program. It should have been at the table encouraging the negotiations and the development of a program. It could have said how much money it was willing to put on the table. It knows from the past that all the Provinces got into the act simply because the federal Government refused to get into the stabilizaton field as far as red meats are concerned.

The Minister has been derelict and negligent in this area. Because of that the four Provinces which represent 80 per cent of cattle production in this country have had to sit down together. The four Provinces recently reached an agreement in principle on how to proceed on the basis of a three-party program involving the Provinces, producers and the federal Government. We still do not know whether the federal Government will get involved and, if so, how much money it will put up. It is my information that all the federal Government contingency plans have been made on the basis that the Provinces would not arrive at an agreement. That is ridiculous as far as the federal Government and Minister are concerned. They are not in a position at the meetings to negotiate or show any leadership. They will not say how much money they will put on the table to see that this comes about.

I also recommend that the Agricultural Stabilization Act be used. In British Columbia there is a stabilization payment that has been due since 1982. It is not yet made. The Agricultural Stabilization Act needs to be overhauled in terms of the time period. It was moved from ten years to five years, and you can make the argument that it should be moved to a three-year average. The point is that whatever program is used, surely it should be incumbent upon the Government and the present Minister to see that it is administered in such a way that the payments are made at a time when they mean something. Producers in British Columbia have managed to survive for a whole year without payments being made. That calls into question the seriousness with which the Minister takes his responsibility.

I have almost run out of time and I would like to conclude, if I may, by making two or three suggestions that will not solve all of the problems but will at least show the producers that the Government is at least aware of the serious situation that exists with agriculture and recognizes how important agriculture is to a country like Canada. I have not mentioned how important agriculture is in terms of the balance of payments and that agricultural exports amount to some $9 billion. I have not mentioned the problems that the Minister seems to be ignoring in many of the other segments of agriculture, like the sheep industry or the Western Grain Stabilization Act. I have not mentioned any of those things. If I could take another 20 minutes, Mr. Speaker, I could outline the areas of responsibility that the Government and the Minister have not addressed.

Let me first suggest that the Minister take seriously the Agricultural Stabilization Act and that he see that there are enough people in his Department to administer it properly so that the payments are made on time and as quickly as possible after a crop has been harvested and the information is available as to whether or not there should be a payout. That is the very least the Minister can do. That would affect agricultural producers right across the country.

Let me also suggest to the Minister that he should move as quickly as he can to increase the level of cash advances. That is something that has been called for by all segments of the industry. It is something that would cost the Government a very, very minimal amount of money because, as I have already said, the history of that program in the past has shown that the losses have been minimal. When the Government does pick up the interest costs, as everyone appreciates, the interest costs are based on borrowing money at prime rate minus one-quarter of a per cent.

These are actions that are not earth shattering, but to take these actions would at least show the agriculture industry that the Government and the Minister have some interest in agriculture and are interested in seeing that efficiency continues to be improved and that the Canadian public continues to be served. The main thing is that agriculture continue to provide opportunities for young farmers to have the jobs that are so desperately needed.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I note that the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) spent a good part of his time outlining three topics. Two of those topics were more cash advances and easier credit which, while I refer to them as two different topics, are probably addressing the same problem of lack of cash. The third topic was the stabilization programs and I would focus my question on that topic for the moment.

The Hon. Member seems to think that the current base for the stabilization programs that now exist is fine and that the only real shortcoming is that too many years are thrown into the average. He has suggested that we move from the current five years to a three-year period. Does the Hon. Member not think that there is something inherently wrong with the base of the historical market price which those five or ten or three years give to the formula? Would he not think that we would be better off with a system that is based on costs rather than on market price, that would follow the actual costs from year to year and provide a much better form of stability to producers? Why did he ignore the possibility of moving to a cost base rather than simply trying to extend and make the old historically based data work?

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I certainly did not say that at all. If the Hon. Member wants to deal with the whole question of stabilization, it would take a long time because it is a very, very involved topic. All I suggested was that the Government at least be serious about the programs it has in place and administer them the way they were legislated.

There are many, many areas in the whole concept of stabilization that can be looked at and changed to improve the situation. In the meantime, the only thing we should ask the Government to do is to have the courtesy, the decency and the guts to administer properly what it already has in place so that at least we would know there is someone here doing something to take an interest in the farming community in the country.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Hon. Member because I did not hear part of his speech very well. I know the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) touched upon the subject of financing but I did not hear him express whether or not he in fact knew that the Farm Credit Corporation was so low on funds that in some areas only 20 per cent of the people are being served by the Farm Credit Corporation and that 1,000 farmers are now stuck with an interest rate of 16¾ per cent. Of those 1,000 farmers, one-third are under the subsidization program and have had their interest rates lowered by 4 per cent. They will face an interest rate of 16¾ per cent again in the coming year. Even now they are not able to afford a rate of 12¾ per cent. I did not hear the Hon. Member mention that and I wondered if he could comment on that.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, that is a very, very sad situation which is occurring among a lot of farmers in the country. In many ways, those farmers were forced into the 16¾ per cent interest rate in the first place because it was either accept that kind of an interest rate or simply not be able to survive for another year. Certainly the attitude of the present Minister is that what he says and what he does are two entirely different things. He has gone on record as saying that he does not want to see the Farm Credit Corporation become a lender of last resort. I will agree with him. Yet the actions of the Government force the Farm Credit Corporation into becoming a lender of last resort so it is not able to address the problems that the Hon. member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) mentioned.

Certainly there should be room in the new Farm Credit Corporation Act, Bill C-88, that we in the House passed some 18 months ago to provide specifically for the Farm Credit Corporation to have authorization, with the concurrence of the Minister of Finance, to raise funds by any means it sees fit. These means would include some of the agri-bond concepts or access to domestic markets if the Minister of Agriculture could convince the Minister of Finance to let the Farm Credit Corporation go ahead with that. If some of those things could be done, then the Farm Credit Corporation would be in a position to borrow funds at a cheaper interest rate and look after some of the problems that it will have once these farmers are again forced to pay an interest rate of 16¾ per cent.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette. When discussing the situation of the Farm Credit Corporation and the financing that is available through it, does the Hon. Member know of any specific proposal brought forward by the Government or discussed privately that would in fact indicate that the Minister of Agriculture has done anything at all in the past four years since he has again become Minister of Agriculture to help the long-term financing situation in agriculture?

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I guess it is with a great deal of sadness and a lot of lament that I must simply answer no.

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member who is the agriculture critic for the Official Opposition has spoken and I am sure the record will show how good the first part of his speech was. He talked about efficiency in the agriculture industry and how it had developed over a period of years. He then tried to say that things had changed in the last 10 or 15 years. Things have changed. We are very proud of the vast majority of those changes because they have been for the better. There never have been such advances in agriculture as have taken place since November, 1972 when I was appointed Minister of Agriculture. These advances are the envy of the world. The huge superpowers that send people into space, send others to this country to see how we farm. For instance, 55 per cent of our farming takes place further north than in any other nation. People cannot understand how we do what we do, thanks to the Department of Agriculture and our research.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: I can tell the Hon. Member from away down on the East Coast that even in his Province where agriculture is successful, it is because of the Department of Agriculture and its research. Research was established in Canada practically when agriculture started. We had experimental farms in western Canada before we had provinces. When settlers first moved into that area they realized the importance of having information available. Other nations that have been settled for 300 years are doing what we did at the beginning. Some say that research should be isolated and not mobile. The main research station is located in this city at the present time, although it was not in the city when it was first established over 100 years ago; but now it is in the centre of the capital of Canada, and is our largest research station.

Marquis wheat was developed in eastern Canada at our Ottawa station, and it has made Canada a power in the production of wheat. Some people said that that area of western Canada would never be farmed. Marquis wheat has made us a super food power through the research developed at the station in this city.

We have recently developed a new variety of wheat. The researchers told me to wait for another couple of years and they would put out a new variety called Columbus for the far northern regions. It has a husk that will allow the grain to withstand excessive moisture and other conditions. In two years it can mean up to a 4 per cent increase in wheat production in western Canada. That one variety of wheat took 14 years for researchers to develop. And there is a new program for a new variety of Columbus that will even be superior to the original.

It is for these reasons that other countries send people to visit our research stations and exchange scientists with us. We have readily signed such agreements with other countries, because no matter what we do by ourselves, if it is in isolation we can never feed the world. In 1980, the population of the world was 4.2 billion people. By the year 2000 it will be nearly six billion and in 20 years we will see the largest increase in population ever in history. The greatest challenge of all, therefore, is to produce food and to assist people in producing it.

Some Members have mentioned travelling. Perhaps they should see the travel vouchers I sign for our officials to go all over the world in order to assist other people in the control of disease and better plant production. My budget from the federal Government is not great, only 1.4 per cent of total federal expenditures, but a good portion of it goes for assistance to other countries. We have one of the healthiest agricultural industries in the world.

The Hon. Member's motion mentions "all farmers" but, Mr. Speaker, 50 per cent of farmers in Canada have no debts whatsoever; 35 per cent have still about an 85 per cent equity in their holdings, so only between 5 per cent and 15 per cent of our farmers are in some kind of financial difficulty.

It has been suggested that financing or stabilization would assist farmers in need. Mr. Speaker, we financed special loans at 12 per cent interest when the interest rate was 16 per cent or 18 per cent. We subsidized that interest rate by four points. We have seen what the Provinces did for producers who depend on the great free market to give them a proper return.

Our agricultural bill is ASA—it is a kind of aspirin for a very sick market. And that is what it is, Mr. Speaker, a sick market. It does not give the efficient producer a sufficient return for him to pay his bills. The producers say they do not want any handouts. The Hon. Member who presented the motion complained that I am not going ahead with stabilization as quickly as I should. He said that the Provinces have offered a plan. Mr. Speaker, it is a plan similar to the one I offered to them in 1977, so that is tremendous progress! I do not know if you want to call that progressive conservatism, but it certainly is not liberalism.

I offered that plan to them in Yorkton, Saskatchewan, at a federal-provincial ministers' meeting. It was a 100 per cent guaranteed income assurance. The Provinces said no and the producers said no. They said this wild man Whelan was offering concessions to producers that would cause overproduction and all kinds of things that they did not want. What do you think they are suggesting now, Mr. Speaker? They go so far as to say that I should pay a producer on as high as 12,000 head of swine or 16,000 head of cattle. They say that is how the Agricultural Stabilization Act should be. That means that the lawyers on the fifteenth, sixteenth and twentieth floors could be producers—vertical integration in a massive form, is what they are suggesting. I can tell you right now, Mr. Speaker, that I am not going for that massive figure they have suggested.

We have taken part in every meeting since June. Last fall they told me that if I did not have anything for them, they would have something for me by July 1. I told them to go ahead and present me with something. The Provinces were going to work in harmony, in a peaceful, constructive attitude and I thought that was fine. I had offered them something and only one Province thought it could support me. The Minister from Ontario said he would support me but he never got the official support of his Government. Then a new Minister of Agriculture in Ontario said that if we were not going to do it he would do it. I told him to go ahead. The Provinces worked together for pretty nearly a year but only four of them said they were in favour of some kind of plan. I thought that was pretty good because I did not expect ten of them to agree on anything at any time.

The Canadian Pork Council, which represents every Province, said it wanted the same thing for pork, but the provincial Ministers do not say that they will come in. How can we have a national plan if only four Provinces support one commodity? It has been suggested that this is a voluntary program, a dollar from the producers, a dollar from the Provinces and a dollar from the federal Government in order to build up a fund. But some producers do not have a dollar. We would have to sign a contract with them to the effect that when they sell their product, whether it be a lamb, a pig, a calf, a finished animal or whatever, we would deduct the first premium from the cost. That is the only way they would be able to participate in the plan at the present time. We used that principle in the crop insurance program. Some of the farmers could never get a dollar from the banks.

The Hon. Member who proposed the motion condemned the Farm Credit Corporation but, Mr. Speaker, his Party condemns Crown corporations right and left. Does he not realize that there are other lending institutions in the country that have a responsibility to lend in rural Canada also? In 1976 we asked the lending institutions if they would lend money to farmers. They said they would and that they would participate in long-term mortgages. I can show you records, Mr. Speaker, of farmers who thought they had long-term records but really had nothing but a piece of paper which, at the will and fancy of the manager of the bank, could be turned into a floating note. That is what happened in many cases. When farmers thought they had a loan at 11 per cent it jumped to 24 per cent.

The Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) knows very well that when we were lending money at 16 per cent, those farmers were being taken off the hook because banks were charging them 22 per cent or 23 per cent. We were lending at 16 per cent. Hon. Members opposite forget that we subsidized those farmers for two years, down to 12 per cent which no lending institution, other than the Farm Credit Corporation, would give for any kind of long-term money. I challenge any Hon. Members to come forward and show me a lending institution today which would give a farmer a 20-year mortgage. That is what the Farm Credit Corporation is doing. We are giving a 20-year mortgage with a fixed interest rate for the first ten years. If any Hon. Members can get a fixed interest rate for longer than three years from any bank or lending institution, I ask him to bring it forward and present it in this House.

Are Hon. Members opposite suggesting to me that the Farm Credit Corporation should be the total lender for the whole agriculture industry? It seems to be that way, because this year we have put up the largest amount of money we have ever loaned in Canada under the Farm Credit Corporation, a corporation which Members opposite have spent days in this House condemning—a terrible thing, they say, which is going to swallow up the whole nation.

We are told we are not aiding agriculture in Saskatchewan—which has that good Conservative Government—yet they sold 500 Hereford heifers to a terrible system, Bulgaria, a Communist system, and we assembled the cattle for them free. We did all the testing for them free. We made sure the cattle got to Sherbrooke, Quebec. Our Canadian veterinarians went to Bulgaria on the boat. And how did they sell them out of Saskatchewan? Through ADCO, a Crown corporation which is used for export in Saskatchewan. According to the newspapers, the Premier of Saskatchewan is going to enter into a contract with Communist China. It will be a partner with good old Conservative Saskatchewan for $500 million in a joint potash operation. I find it funny. I find it hypocritical also. At election time these countries are condemned. The feds are condemned for even talking trade with these countries.

Not too many days ago an Hon. Member in this House condemned us for being friendly with Cuba, saying that Cuba was the Prime Minister's friend. We sell to Cuba a lot of agriculture products, and they have paid for every one of them on the barrelhead. Last year we did $340 million worth of trade with Cuba. It pays. We are not supposed to assist Cuba in agriculture and trade with it. Not only the Premier of Saskatchewan but the Premier of Alberta was in China. The Premier of Ontario was in Indonesia and all over South East Asia. The Minister of Agriculture of British Columbia is over in Europe. He is going to be visiting many of the same countries we trade with. He is going to improve trade. How are these governments doing it? They are doing it with Crown corporations because that is the only way they can trade with some of those countries.

Canagrex, which could have been in business two years ago had it been allowed to go through this House, could have improved trade because there is no other nation of agricultural producers which depends so much on trade as we do. Some 50 per cent of our income comes from trade. Last year our biggest sale ever of grain, over 29 million metric tonnes, moved out of this country into trade. Our exports of agricultural products last year went up 12 per cent. In the United States of America, which gives all kinds of concessions, exports of agricultural products went down 12 per cent. The U.S. had great interest-free concessions, charitable repayment plans, which we did not even involve ourselves in because Canada has the respect of the world, and these people understand that when they go trading. I am talking about the Farm Credit Corporation, the NEED Program and so on.

Let us not forget that under the Constitution agriculture is a joint responsibility. That should be made very plain and clear. The Official Opposition agriculture critic comes from the Province of Manitoba where we spend twice as much money assisting farmers with programs than the Province of Manitoba ever did under an NDP or Conservative government. That government never spent the proportion of money we do.

We spend more than twice as much on agriculture in the Province of Saskatchewan than the provincial government does. Yet the Premier has funds to appoint a trade minister to run all over the world. We do not do it in Alberta because Alberta has the Heritage Fund, and it is saying it is cutting back on irrigation plans and so on. What the PFRA spends in the Province of Saskatchewan, for instance, does keep rural municipalities alive. In the last ten years we spent $33 million in small towns and villages for sewage systems and water reservoirs. We funded 50 per cent and we gave an outright grant for the other 50 per cent. The Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Association is one of the best organizations ever created in this country, and it should be there for all of Canada.

We have been told we are slow in British Columbia in the matter of stabilization and how much money we are spending. I met with the farmers in British Columbia. I went with an Hon. Member of the Opposition from that area and talked to farmers. The Minister of Agriculture in British Columbia did not suggest any tariffs, as some Hon. Member said. He said to me at a meeting: "We are not suggesting tariffs because they might reciprocate on lumber and we ship a lot of lumber into the great United States of America". So we are subject to this type of importation and all the different kinds of trade problems.

I am sure the Hon. Member knows what is going on in the United States now. There is a hearing being conducted. We hope the decision will be handed down in November. Potatoes going into the United States from the Maritimes have an extra 17-cent tariff tacked on because little New Brunswick and little Prince Edward Island are going to destroy the great potato industry in New England. The U.S. says this is because the federal Minister of Agriculture has such superior programs that it cannot compete with us.

I received a letter from a person representing the Canadian Horticultural Society. He comes from the Province of Manitoba. It did this Minister's heart good to hear him tell in glowing terms about the great job that was being done, and how the Secretary for Agriculture in the United States is not paying any attention. Right now in the United States of America a law has been passed through its Senate which will limit the importation of beef. It has not gone through its Congress. Because there is no control on dairy production, those farmers are scared to death that what the Secretary for Agriculture is going to do in dairy production will cause over a million dairy cows to be slaughtered. These cows are producing nutritious food which could be distributed all over the world. It is suggested they be slaughtered because the U.S. has a straight subsidy program, a very high subsidy program, which does not have any control over production.

The efficient American dairy farmers just produced and produced and now there are nearly 700,000 metric tonnes of surplus skim milk powder. There are over 320,000 metric tonnes of surplus butter. They do not know what to do with it. They are taking some of our markets because the U.S. is a much bigger economic power than we are. It says it is not. Let us use Jamaica as an example. This is a country to which we supplied skim milk powder for years. It trades dairy products, mainly powder, for bauxite. We do not need that in Canada so it trades with the U.S. In Mexico, the U.S. sold 60,000 tonnes of skim milk powder and gave them 20,000 tonnes of food aid. They said that did not lower the price, but that is questionable as far as I am concerned.

I would like to speak about research for a moment. Poultry production owes its reputation for being so efficient in the world to Agriculture Canada research, which developed a serum so that instead of losing one-third of your poultry flock through a normal laying span, you lose less than half of one per cent. Never did our chickens lay so much and do so much for society. It used to take almost an hour's wages to buy one dozen eggs. In Canada today, because of efficiency and the longevity of the chicken, and because of productivity, one hour's average industrial wage will buy the average Canadian a year's supply of eggs. The average Canadian eats 12 dozen eggs per year. The average industrial wage is $12 per hour, and the average price for a dozen eggs in Canada today is one dollar. We are the envy of the whole world.

This will be our largest year for exporting pure-bred Holstein cattle. These exports have expanded and expanded. It will be our largest year for exporting semen, exporting grain.

I could go on and on telling you the things we have done in agriculture. The Hon. Member says I have not done anything. We put 14 new programs into effect since I have been in agriculture and we only added 26 man-years to Agriculture Canada. The Auditor General has commended the Agriculture Department for the tremendous job it has done.

I could go on and talk about interest-free advance payments. The Hon. Member says he does not want handouts, but there are these interest-free advance payments, and not only with the Wheat Board. Last year there was nearly $500 million in interest-free advance payments, yet they say we are not doing anything. I will just close by saying that nothing is so firmly believed but that which is least known.

Mr. Gustafson: Mr. Speaker, it almost sounds as thought the Minister was rereading one of the speeches of Mr. Gardiner in Saskatchewan 20 years ago. His figures do not add up today. If you look at the $6 billion of profit the farmers have added to this country and compare that with 1.25 per cent of the budget attributed to agriculture, it is a pretty sick figure. That is all I have to say about that speech.

Mr. Whelan: I could comment a little bit about that. I am really glad that the Hon. Member mentioned the late Jimmy Gardiner, who was the Minister of Agriculture in Canada for 22 years. He was from Saskatchewan and he did more for agriculture than probably anyone else. He understood agriculture, which is something the Hon. Member does not understand.

The Hon. Member is contracting his colleague because his colleague said it is not money that makes for a healthy agriculture. He is saying we should spend more money. Some of the countries spending more money than us do not have as healthy an agricultural industry as we do.

We have programs in this country which will allow farmers to receive a decent price in the marketplace if they want to organize themselves. I think he is suggesting, Mr. Speaker, that we pour millions and millions more dollars into agriculture and that is going to be its salvation. I am sure he does not mean that at all because I am told his own operation does not depend on Government handouts. I am sure that if he wanted to give you his account books, he would be in that 50 per cent bracket I talked about—the people who do not owe a penny.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, in his comments the Minister said that all that the farmers want is a decent profit. That being the case, they must be able to meet their expenses and I agree with that. I would like to ask the Minister why he was not able to get through Cabinet a formula agreed to by his Government and the egg producers, namely that their input costs would be met? Why was he not able to get through Cabinet that the input costs farmers face be subject to six and five?

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member does not know what went through Cabinet. I do not think he does. We are just dealing with it this week and I am sure he would be very surprised at what went through Cabinet. But I am not at liberty to tell him at this time.

I am really happy that the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp) is so supportive of marketing boards. I hope you have that from your Party caucus and your Leader. I continually get people saying "Wait until we change the Government and we will get rid of all of them".

Mr. McCain: No, you never heard that from this side of the House.

Mr. Whelan: I get letters on this. You do not know what impression you have planted in people's minds. Yet the Hon. Member is supporting the marketing boards, which I have supported. I say as humbly as I can that probably the Hon. Member would not even be asking questions if I had not supported the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency when it was so controversial. Most Prime Ministers would have said that is too controversial and would get it out of here. But the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said to me: "Mr. Minister, as long as they are doing things honestly and so on and you say that you are doing it properly, I will back you". I am now glad I have the backing of the Hon. Member for Provencher.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I would want to recognize the Hon. Member to give him an opportunity to enter into questions, answers and comments but I have to recognize him on a point of order.

Mr. McCain: Mr. Speaker, the Conservative policy has been misstated. This is not debate, it is merely a statement of fact. The Conservative policy has been that marketing boards, when it is the wish of the farmer, shall be organized, respected and assisted. But there shall be no compulsion from an arrogant Minister to force any group of farmers at any point in time to form themselves into a marketing board.

Mr. Whelan: The Hon. Member could not find any time that I forced anyone into a marketing board. I have suggested this to them. If the Hon. Member wanted to do some good, he could go down to his own Province. They are asking me now to spend millions of dollars because the marketplace has not returned a decent profit to potato producers in his own Province. We have spent millions and millions on stabilization and he knows it. I would like to see that Party's policy, and I hope the Hon. Member will send it to me, the official Party policy which supports marketing boards.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the Minister when he says things humbly. I agree that he has a lot to be humble about and I am glad he recognizes that.

Just to support and elaborate a little on what the Hon. Member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain) said, he is precisely right in stating our position on marketing boards. Let me go further and say there are ways other than compulsion to form marketing boards. I sat in a room with this Minister some seven or eight years ago when he used coercion and other things to—

Mr. Cullen: Friendly persuasion.

Mr. Mayer: It is one thing to use friendly persuasion; it is another thing to take an industry when it is down and say: "You are not going to have anything from me unless you agree with me on supply management". That is where we on this side disagree. The Minister may want to use coercion and compulsion, although it may not be compulsion in his mind, but when you find a producer in a very bad financial situation, it in fact becomes compulsion. We do not agree with kicking people when they are down. We like to help people so they do not find themselves in a bad financial position.

Very specifically, is the Minister in favour of reducing the tax on farm fuels in order ot keep producers' cost of production down? There is another way of getting returns from the marketplace which satisfy your expenses and that is by reducing the expenses. Is this Minister in favour of reducing—I did not say eliminating—the federal Government tax on farm fuel?

Mr. Whelan: The Hon. Member has talked about coercion. I challenge him on what he said. I may use moral suasion on people, tell them the benefits of marketing boards and their participation, but I have never suggested to anyone that there would be any action taken which would be coercion. Not this Minister of Agriculture. I have been elected to office since I was 21 years of age and I know about democracy.

The Hon. Member talks about fuel taxes. Earlier he said that he did not want handouts. The marketplace is the place to get the return for farmers. For instance, canola seed has gone up, what, 40 per cent since July? That is the seed. Meal has gone up 42 per cent and the oil has gone up 92 per cent. He never mentioned in his speech about how rapidly the market can change. That has more effect on farmers. But what he is saying is: "Whelan, you must have programs that guarantee that when the free market system gets sick, you must be the doctor who comes in with the proper medicine to make sure it gets healthy again".

We know there are marketing people in this country to whom I have not given a penny of aid since 1972, and when there was another government here for a short term, it did not give them a penny of aid either. That is the poultry industry all the way through. We have not changed our aid to the dairy industry for over seven years. If you find me one of those efficient producers in that bracket who are going broke, I would be very surprised.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I have a very short intervention. It seems to me that there is perhaps some logic to the Minister saying that he has not implemented changes to the stabilization program because it requires the consent of the Provinces and he does not have a program along the East Coast for potato producers to form a marketing board because he must rely on the assistance of the Provinces.

However, there is one area which is strictly within his own jurisdiction but in which he has not been acting very quickly. I refer to putting the personnel in place for Canagrex. He had plenty of time when the Canagrex legislation was in its various stages of debate to hold the interviews and make the preparations. How long must we wait for the people who will be appointed to Canagrex?

Mr. Whelan: First, Mr. Speaker, I was not that optimistic that Canagrex would ever be passed. I think it would have been very wrong for me to interview people and say: "You are going to be hired for Canagrex". I did not do anything until after Parliament finally passed it into law. We hired Peat Marwick to do headhunting for us and put ads in the papers, and I made my recommendations to the Government about three weeks ago.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Hon. Members will recognize that I have allowed the debate to continue slightly past one o'clock in order to provide for the entire ten-minute period of questions and answers to expire before coming back at two o'clock.

However, there remain a number of Hon. Members who have not had an opportunity to exchange comments or questions with the Minister. I do not know whether it is their intention to seek an extension of that period.

Mr. Epp: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is not. In that case, it being one o'clock I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1.03 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and speak on this motion put forward today because of the serious situation in which farmers find themselves with regard to present cash flow problems.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) who finished his remarks just before lunch made the point that agriculture and farmers had been very progressive throughout the years and I agree with that. They have been very productive in terms of their input into Canada's economy, being $8 billion to $9 billion; but I do not agree when the Minister said it was because of what the Government did. Basically, that is what I heard him say, that producers were so productive. In fact, the opposite is true. It is in spite of the lack of policy and direction with regard to agriculture that farmers have produced and have been productive.

I want to talk about some matters today, hopefully in a positive sense so that we can have an adjustment of some very serious problems that exist for the producers. First is one which has been mentioned by other Members, the Western Grain Stabilization Program. That Program came into existence in 1976. There was a small payout. When the Hon. Otto Lang introduced that program, it was on the basis that it was not to be crop insurance but a program that would deal with the cash flow problems of farmers.

Let us face the situation as it exists. This Program has not dealt with this problem of the farmers. However, the Government has $860 million of farmers' money in the treasury somewhere. By the middle of January it is projected that the Government will have over $1 billion of farmers' money. I see the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) in the House this afternoon. I contend that the Government is playing politics with farmers' money.

We remember that farmers first paid in $500, which was deducted at the elevator at the time they delivered their grain. Then it was increased to $900, and last year there was a further increase to $1,200. If a farmer got into the plan in 1979 and made no payment since, he would have paid in $4,800, that is, if he paid the maximum. Had he invested that amount of money in a bank at prime interest rates, he would have accumulated $7,124. Just by depositing that money in the bank, the farmer would have had some $7,124 to be used in his cash flow. Yet the Minister rises in the House and tells Canadians what a great job the Government has done. I want to set the record straight. It has done great job of hanging on to the farmers' money, every cent of which the primary producer deposited at his own cost into a program to enhance and benefit the farmer when he had major cash flow problems.

I am glad the Minister is present. He must deal with this situation and take some positive steps toward helping farmers. Let us deal with the problem. I contend that the Government and the Minister of Agriculture are playing politics here.

Mr. Whelan: Can you imagine?

Mr. Gustafson: I hear the Minister. About two months before the election there is nothing more they would like to do than to write out a nice little cheque. What I am trying to do—

Mr. Whelan: What are you doing?

Mr. Gustafson: I am trying to bring about some responsible action. The way this can be done is simple. The program has to be adjusted. It is not working on a five-year, retroactive basis. The formula does not add up.

Mr. Whelan: Why isn't it working?

Mr. Gustafson: The Minister of Agriculture is heckling me because I have hit a very sensitive spot.

It is most important that the Government deal with this issue. I meet with my farmers weekly. They are saying that the program should either be cleaned up or they should be let out of it. They cannot afford to pay $1,200. They have to pay their fuel and grocery bills. They have to pay machine costs, and they are faced with a major cash flow problem at this time.

I ask the Minister to carry this representation concerning the very serious problem in grain stabilization to Cabinet and to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). The Prime Minister suggested to the House that because there was no representation in western Canada, basically speaking in agricultural areas, he would make a special effort to deal with the problems, the presentations and the representations that were made. The Minister of Agriculture owes it to western producers to look into the Western Grain Stabilization Program.

Another area of cash flow problems about which the Government could do something very positive is the initial price of grain. What is its history? On almost a daily basis I have contacted the Canadian Wheat Board to discover that the asking price of wheat, going back to January of this year, has been 99 cents to $1 per bushel higher than what farmers are receiving as an initial price delivered at the grain elevator. In the case of Durum, I obtained figures from the Wheat Board yesterday indicating that the asking price was $2.10 per bushel higher. Farmers were pleased to see an increase in the initial price of barley. Today it is selling at $140 per tonne in Thunder Bay.

Mr. Schellenberger: And higher in Vancouver.

Mr. Gustafson: Yes, it is even higher in Vancouver. The Government should take some positive steps to increase the cash flow position of farmers. All it has to do is give them their money and increase the initial price of wheat, as well as the initial price of Durum. Most responsible people in the grain trade will say that 50 cents per bushel is adequate leeway or an adequate holdback within the Canadian Wheat Board to deal with problems that may arise. Certainly the Minister could recommend to Cabinet that the initial price of wheat and of Durum be increased by 50 cents per bushel.

As I indicated earlier, this is the farmers' money. They are not asking for handouts. The Minister said today that he was handing out money for this and that to farmers. In comparison with the contribution that agriculture makes to the country, farmers are being short-changed in terms of the budget which goes through this place. I pointed this out to the Minister earlier, and he walked all the way around it. In fact, farmers are being considered only in about 1.25 per cent of the entire budget of the country. He knows that those figures are accurate. The Government could take some positive direction in the area of western grain stabilization. There could be improvement in the initial price of grain which would in turn improve the cash flow of farmers.

Instead of giving, the Government is taking. It has placed an excessive farm fuel tax on diesel fuel and other fuels used for the production of food. The Government has a direct federal tax of 77 cents per gallon on farm fuels. That is very excessive. On December 13, 1979 when we were defeated, it was a bad day—

An Hon. Member: A bad day for Canada.

Mr. Gustafson: Yes, it was a bad day for Canada. At that time the price of fuel in the little village of Macoun—is Mr. Speaker, indicating that my time is up?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Gustafson: Perhaps you could seek unanimous consent.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to continue his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There appears to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Gustafson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will make my comments short. As I was saying, on December 13, 1979 in the little village of Macoun the price of fuel was 98 cents per gallon. I recall that day. It was a rather dark day for a new Member who had been defeated. Today the price of fuel is close to $2 per gallon.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I would like to inform the Hon. Member that the Chair was in error. He had 20 minutes in total, of which he has ten remaining.

Mr. Gustafson: It is important to have this heavy-handed farm fuel tax removed. The Minister has said that the Government has made contributions to farmers, but farmers have been paying heavy-handed taxes to the Government on farm fuel. This is counterproductive for farmers. Many of them are not working. Many of them are not involved in summer fallow because they simply cannot afford it. It costs $150 to fill the fuel tank of a tractor. This will reflect in the cost of production. Have the Minister and the Government considered removing some of this tax on the farmers in order that they can be as productive as they have been in the past and even improve upon that?

I wish to deal with another area where this Government has long promised to move but has failed to do so. I refer to the capital gains tax on farmers. Members may ask what that has to do with cash flow. It has a lot to do with it. Let me give an example.

A father may ask his son for a reasonable sum of money for his land in order that he may retire with some dignity in a small town after years of hard work. The young farmer will do it so that his father may live with respectability. At that point the father is expected to pay capital gains tax to the Government of Canada. It becomes restrictive. Again and again in this House, as recently as two weeks ago, we have called upon the Government to remove the capital gains tax on farms, but nothing has been done to this point.

In the last three elections the Government promised to make moves in this direction, but it has failed to do so. It is my hope that the Minister of Agriculture will ask Cabinet to look into the capital gains tax on farms, which is very restrictive and counterproductive to agriculture.

The Minister had something to say about farm credit, as he does from time to time. There are some solutions to the farm credit problem. There is not enough money in the fund. More important, the rate is far too high. Young farmers cannot afford to borrow at those high rates. Our Party has proposed a way to get around this. There are farmers who would invest their money in an agri-bond. Young farmers would receive the benefit of that investment. They would be able to borrow from that fund to finance their farm. We made this suggestion some time ago and the Minister is well aware of it. The Government has failed to act in a positive way in regard to financing for farmers. This would facilitate the situation as at present the needs of young farmers are not being met.

The Minister talked about how much money the federal Government was paying to the Provinces. However, he failed to mention the great contribution by agriculture through taxation to central Canada, particularly the bureaucracy. The farmers are not happy with the way the Government spends their hard-earned money. They make that clear to us.

I now want to deal with another important point. I have contended for some time that there seem to be different standards for different areas of production. That is not right. The farmer has many expenses, such as machinery and fuel bills. After meeting his expenses, he should be able to have a good standard of living for himself and his family. However, according to the Tax Department and other sources, the average net income of a farmer is approximately $4,000. Compare this to the fact that a consumer spends about 15 per cent of his earnings on food. That is a rather dynamic result from the production of our primary producers. It is most important that this continue.

Our farmers are proud that they can produce cheap food for Canadians. In return, it is only fair that this Government not penalize our producers. Farmers should not be discouraged from contributing in such a positive way.

The latest move by this Government with regard to the statutory Crow rate will result in very high freight rates. This will cause major problems. I was aghast when the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) rose to impose closure on Bill C-155, the statutory Crow rate. He is inflicting upon the farmers freight rate increases at a time when they cannot afford it. No consideration is being given to the cash flow problems of the farmer.

I see you rising, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to put forward briefly some of our concerns regarding agriculture. I hope that the Government, and the Minister of Agriculture in particular, will lend an ear to some of the recommendations we have made which will result in a positive effect on agriculture in the future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are Hon. Members rising to ask questions? If not, the Chair will recognize the Hon. Member for Lambton-Middlesex (Mr. Ferguson).

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Lambton-Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to take part in this debate. I commend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) for the firm direction he has given to this vital renewable resource as he enters into his eleventh year, except for a brief sabbatical, as Minister of Agriculture for Canada. He has given us the direction and legislation we have needed to make the Canadian farmer one of the most efficient and productive in any country of the world.

I have to take issue with some of the comments made by previous speakers who have suggested that the tri-party stabilization programs are the answer to all our problems. For a few years I belonged to a program. In the Province of Ontario there was a joint program between the producers and the provincial Government. The producers paid in an equal amount to the Ontario Government for a cow-calf stabilization program that seemed at the beginning to be an excellent program. In fact, in the first three years of the program we received a payout because the price received was not comparable to that of the cost of production. However, in the fourth year of the program we all realized that there would be no payout, but many of us sent in our premiums regardless. However, that program was cancelled in the fourth year because less than half of the farmers involved had sent in their premiums. Consequently, the program collapsed.

I would hope that if we are to proceed with a stabilization program for the red meat sector, there will be guarantees built in to make it compulsory for the producer to sign up and to remain a part of that program for the required number of years. The producer should not simply sign up when prices are low and ride out the peak times when prices are good. I believe, however, that farm stabilization programs are not the answer.

When looking at methods used to establish a price discovery mechanism for many of the products produced in Canada which do not fall under the jurisdiction of the marketing agencies, we have to realize that there must be a counterbalance or a countervailing force in the marketplace. Last week, for example, the price of soybeans on the Chicago futures market had dropped by approximately 75 cents per bushel. Soybean futures dropped that much in spite of the fact that a week ago yesterday a United States Department of Agriculture report pointed out that supplies of soybeans needed to carry us through to the next crop year would perhaps be inadequate to meet the demand. If that was the case, why did the price drop last week? I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the system has broken down and that it is only through a system of establishing a price at the farm gate that reflects the cost of production to the efficient producer that we can overcome this problem.

Since we have such large requirements for capital in the farming sector at the present time, I submit to you, Sir, that the solution could be found if the national marketing agencies which are in existence at the present time, whether through dairy, poultry or another commodity, were to have price setting mechanisms that reflected the cost of production of the efficient producer and if they were to be under the jurisdiction of a supervisory body so that the interests of the consumer are also protected. No company can operate without a return on investment, management and risk. Consequently, farming is no longer a way of life; rather, it is big business and we must have these guarantees built in if it is to be successful.

No amount of funding, whether from the Farm Credit Corporation or any other body, will relieve the situation if we do not first cure the problem of the price at the farm gate to the farmer. I suggest that to increase the amount of funding available through the Farm Credit Corporation would perhaps be a short-term solution, but the producer cannot borrow himself out of trouble. There must be a return from the marketplace that reflects that cost to the producer and then there must be a reasonable markup to the packer or processor and to the retailer. Finally, most important of all, there must be a fair price to the consumer.

My colleagues have been speaking about the need for agri-bonds and I do not quarrel with that need. I believe there is a place for agri-bonds but I do not think they go far enough. For example, what if a father wanted to turn the family farm over to his son? Many of us began farming with the assistance of our fathers who loaned us machinery for those first crucial years of farming so that we did not have to make huge cash outlays. Many of us received an interest rate on mortgages well below the current rate from our fathers. Under the agri-bond system, this is not possible.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that we must come up with a different provision to maintain the family farm, which is recognized as the most efficient production unit in the world today. I submit we must come up with a different proposal to guarantee a mortgage, if the farmer in fact took one back on his fixed capital assets, on the sale of his enterprise to a member of his family. I maintain that this is essential if the family farm is to continue to be the backbone of the Canadian agriculture sector. We need provisions to allow the farmer the flexibility to give a member of his family a reduced rate of interest in order to give him a start, so that he can build up an operation, achieve a level of equity that puts him on a secure footing and which allows him to proceed to contribute to the industry that is so important to the economy of the country.

The lending of the Farm Credit Corporation in itself tells a story about what is required in the agricultural sector. We should look at the number of farmers who are in arrears to the Farm Credit Corporation and look back to see in which sector of the agricultural industry they are involved. We would recognize immediately that those farmers involved in the red meat sector form the largest percentage of those in arrears. Grain farmers come next. The reason for this is that these are the producers who do not have the power to set their prices at the farm gate. They have to rely on the vagaries of the marketplace as well as the vagaries of mother nature. This creates the type of speculation that is taking place today on the commodity futures market. There certainly is no security there for any of the farmers who need this money so badly.

Another situation that has occurred over the last several years is that the number of retail food outlets has dropped dramatically. The fact is that five retail food chains control 75 per cent of the retail food outlets in Canada. Those five chains have in turn banded together to form buying groups to exert even more pressure on the marketplace. Consequently, there is the need for an even greater countervailing force in the marketplace than the national marketing agencies can provide. It is in this context that I hope the producers of Canada will take advantage of the legislation available to them not only at the provincial level but also at the federal level to give them the type of income that is commensurate with that of the rest of society and to protect their investments. This is essential if we are to have a healthy agricultural industry in Canada.

As I look further at the type of federal assistance that exists for the farmers in Canada, I see that there is assistance not only through the Farm Credit Corporation but assistance is also provided to the vegetable producers and the fruit growers to ensure that there are adequate supplies of fresh Canadian fruits and vegetables available to Canadians. The vegetable cold storage program has been utilized across Canada to a great extent. We have a large number of programs that are not recognized by many Members of Parliament. There is the grain storage program under which money can be borrowed from the Government interest-free on grain held in storage to allow it to go to the marketplace in an orderly fashion. They are all very positive programs. The fact remains, however, that there is a provincial responsibility that must be used in co-ordination with the federal programs.

The Minister of Agriculture has had a great deal of involvement in research and ours is among the best in the world. We have the highest quality food of any country and we have the highest standards of any country. Consequently, even though the budget of the Department of Agriculture is lower than some of us would like it to be, it reflects the lean, hard image portrayed by the Minister himself.

Mr. Murta: Even the Minister is smiling at that!

Mr. Ferguson: There is no fat in the Department.

Mr. Bosley: Lean, mean Gene.

Mr. Ferguson: It has a lean, hard image which reflects the position we have taken over the years that we have to trim off the fat. We must make sure that we recognize the latest methods of production so that we can keep abreast or ahead of the rest of the world in the marketplace.

When we compare yields of the various crops, we see that in Canada, and particularly in Ontario, our average production per acre is higher than that of the United States, whether it be in soybeans or corn. I think it is interesting that we have this potential productivity.

I want to reflect now on the increased productivity that has taken place through research and development and marketing agencies. Many people say that our system of planned production through marketing boards leads to inefficiencies. The figures show otherwise, Mr. Speaker. A few years ago a laying hen would produce approximately 20 dozen eggs in any one-year laying cycle; now the production is 24 dozen per bird. The number of pounds of feed necessary to produce a dozen eggs has decreased as well. As the Minister said this morning, the mortality rate has decreased. This is an example of the efficiencies that have come about. Although the price is set according to the cost of production, if the farmer can be more efficient than average, he can increase his margin of profit. This has happened and he has become more efficient in the process.

A number of buyers from other countries come to my constituency. Recently a buyer came from Russia to buy dairy cattle. Some of the best productivity records in the world are held by Canadian producers. Some of these cattle are used to increase the number of offspring of one select animal by way of embryo transplant. One mother can mother six or eight offspring in one year and the embryo can be transplanted into a host cow.

When you have a man as busy and who does such a good job as the Minister of Agriculture, it would be nice if we could clone him and have two of him.

Whether Canadians are farmers or are engaged in the agri-food industry as a veterinarian, say, they have been leaders in research in spite of the fact that the budget is not as great as that of many other countries. This just shows the ingenuity and imagination of the people involved in this sector. We can look at its accomplishments with pride. Well within the span of my lifetime one farmer fed eight people; now one farmer feeds 70 people. Of course, I am talking about south-western Ontario. That part of Ontario that lies west of a line drawn between Georgian Bay and Toronto produces about 20 per cent of all agricultural production in Canada on a dollar basis. Through the greenhouse industry and intensified farming practices it has a higher rate of productivity than other areas of the country. Climatic conditions contribute to production as well, because in that area it is unusual to have a crop failure or to suffer the drought that sometimes happens in other parts of Canada.

The federal Government has met its responsibilities not only in the area of food production but also in research, plant health programs and inspection programs. I recently received a call from a show in Cologne, Germany, asking us to supply 600 tonnes of turkey. The largest turkey hatchery in the world is in my riding and it has branches in the United States. It supplies 22 per cent of the North American market and 11 per cent of the world market. It is a very sophisticated Canadian operation and is a family business. Through research and assistance from the Department of Agriculture they have been able to raise their production to the standards required to break into the world market. This is a credit to the Canadian Department of Agriculture and to Canadian farmers.

Through the PIK program in the United States this year they tried to take land out of production and a drought followed. This has not happened in Canada with our programs. There has been drought and adverse weather conditions in some areas of the country but we do not have a PIK program. One has to question the morality of such a program for Canada when there are so many hungry nations in the world. Our programs are tailored to meet the demand of the domestic and export markets. The crop year in grain production is tailored so that none of the product is actually sold prior to leaving the farm. When it leaves the farm we know that it is on the way to market.

During the hearings on the Crow rate I could not help but think that ours has to be one of the most efficient systems in the world. The cost to the producer is well within his means and he can afford to get his crop to market, especially with assistance from the Government.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Lambton-Middlesex (Mr. Ferguson). I made a note of the enormous efficiencies he has claimed that have taken place in the farming community in recent years. I should like to ask him how it is that a farmer today can feed 70 people and yet he himself starves.

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry the Hon. Member has missed the point I was making. Those farmers who have orderly marketing systems are making a reasonable return on their investment and a reasonable return for management and risk. If the other parts of our agricultural sector would take advantage of the programs which are available to them—the meat sector and some of the grain sectors—to establish the price at the farm gate, then they could also enjoy the same level of prosperity as those who have their marketing agencies operative and in place.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, just so I have that question on the record, could we take it, then, that the position of the Liberal Members is that there should be marketing boards for the beef industry? Is that the position of the Government?

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, regarding the beef industry I should point out, being a beef producer myself—and I have been for a lot more years than I care to remember, well over 35 years—that is one part of our operation which is certainly not showing a profit. I started out as a beef producer when I was 14 years old. I was a 4H Club member. I bought a heifer calf and built up a herd. I am very proud of that herd, but in an economic sense I should have sold it quite a few years ago. However, I do have scrub land across part of my home farm and if I am going to scavenge the pasture off that land, I have to keep some cattle. It is not a profitable venture.

I am suggesting there is a way that we can bring a reasonable return to the beef producers of Canada. I would like to suggest to the Hon. Member that we allow our feedlot operators to fill up to capacity, and base this on cost of production. However, rather than feeding those steers out to 1,250 pounds to 1,300 pounds, what is wrong with selling them 50 pounds lighter than that if the demand is not there? By so doing we would tailor our production to the marketplace to reflect the demand, whether domestic or export.

These are my own ideas and thoughts on the matter. I am not sure what the Minister of Agriculture thinks about it. I believe he would agree with me that it is a great idea. I feel it would solve a lot of problems in the red meat sector if we had a system like this, where a person could set their price at the farm gate rather than have the existing conditions continue. The spread between the wholesaler and consumer in Montreal a year ago last August was 41 cents a pound greater than a similar spread in the United States. Someone is ripping off the marketplace, and I suggest to you it is not the farmer but someone further up the ladder. If the farmer was even getting half of that spread, he would be making a profit.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, it quite amazes me that the Hon. Member can claim to be associated with 4H Clubs and, after that number of years of pledging his head to clearer thinking, would still join the Liberal Party.

I still ask him whether it is or is not the policy of the Government of Canada today to have beef marketing boards for the sale of beef. I believe that was the answer he applied to my first question. If that was the answer, I want him to say definitively whether or not he and his Party are trying to have a system of marketing boards for the beef industry. I want a yes or no answer for the record.

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, there is no way I can speak on behalf of the Minister of Agriculture. However, as a person who has spent so many years in the beef industry, I know what the needs of that industry are, and my personal opinion is, after losing money for several years, that there has to be a better way. Being a Liberal and a pragmatist as well, I am willing to try something new. If that is the only way left, then I am willing to give it a try. However, I am not going to be hamstrung by some old fashioned thinking that there is a free enterprise system left in the marketplace today where we have various types of monopolies in existence.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Lambton-Middlesex (Mr. Ferguson) used the word "tailored" several times during his address. I would suggest that he meant to say "Whelaned". Had the agricultural policy of this country been "Taylored", agriculture would not be in the mess it is in today!

I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question in connection with egg production. The egg producers of Alberta are now having a very difficult time. They have co-operated 100 per cent with the Government in the six and five program. They are now up to the six and five ceiling, but the production costs have kept on increasing. Production costs are now between 4 per cent and 5 per cent above what the producers are able to charge, because they have reached their limit under the six and five program. These egg producers are unable to carry that burden, which simply means that if something is not done to provide the egg producers with the opportunity of increasing their price, they are going to go into bankruptcy. Has the Hon. Member for Lambton-Middlesex any comment as to what the Government might be able to do to keep these producers viable?

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to that question because I have been following the problem very closely. I am glad to see the Hon. Member has tailored his thinking along the lines of the marketing boards. I am also very much aware that the marketing board people were the first to endorse the six and five program. During my address I spoke about the vagaries of the marketplace and what is happening on the Chicago futures exchange. In fact, the price of feed has increased by 23 per cent since last June. That is well beyond the capability of the egg producer to cope with, I quite agree with the Hon. Member.

I have been in discussion with many of the egg producers on this particular problem. I have suggested to the Minister of Agriculture that perhaps the feed component should be isolated as one of the variables which cannot be adhered to under the six and five program. However, the rest of the components of the cost of production formula, such as pullet cost, labour and so on, could be adhered to very easily. With that one exception, I believe the egg producer could continue under the six and five program and show the same responsible pricing methods as they have in past years.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, when he has reached the end of his income and the bills are still not paid, the producer is in a pretty tough spot. There is no easy way out for him. There is no use saying he wants to co-operate. He does want to co-operate. It simply means he is going to go into bankruptcy. When he loses 4 cents or 5 cents on every dozen eggs he sells, it just means he is going to go that much deeper into debt until he just cannot continue to operate.

I have forwarded letters to both the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) in connection with this problem. If the policy of this Government is to keep agriculture viable, it has to take a realistic look at these things. If these egg producers go down the drain, what it will mean is that the larger corporations will take over and prices will go up for the consumers. There are no two ways about it: the consumer will have to pay more. I am trying to keep the price viable for the consumer by being reasonable with the egg producers today. I believe this is a responsibility which the Government should undertake, look at and resolve, not become part of the problem, but become, for a change, part of the solution.

This is a simple problem, it cannot be that hard to solve. If we do not, it means that the people of this country are going to pay more for their eggs or else go without them. The egg producer cannot continue to lose money on every dozen eggs he sells and stay in business. It is just that simple.

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to that. I am well aware of the margin of profit the egg producer has. The average for Canada is, I believe, 2.7 cents a dozen. I am confident that if the Minister of Agriculture follows the advice I gave him, and he indicated this morning that Cabinet was considering it and maybe even has made a decision, I think the problems of the egg producer will be resolved. I only hope the cattle producers would follow through with a similar plan so they could have the same level of stability.

Given all the problems I had as a Member of Parliament concerning farmers in financial difficulty in the last three and one half years, I have not had one egg producer, one dairy producer, one chicken broiler or turkey producer among them. So I think we have to recognize the importance of the cost of production formulas, that they have stood up to the challenge, and consequently I am confident that the Minister of Agriculture will use his persuasive powers to clear up any misunderstanding and that in the very near future we will have something to announce that will be acceptable to everyone.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, today's debate has centered on condemning the Government for its failure to recognize the economic hardship affecting all farmers in Canada, and its failure to alleviate that hardship by implementing good agricultural policies. The Minister said it was not really that much of a problem. According to his Department's figures, 50 per cent of farmers have no debt. He said 35 per cent of the farmers in Canada own more than 85 per cent of their assets, so less than 15 per cent of their assets are in the form of debt. But he did admit that 5 per cent to 15 per cent are in financial difficulty, to use his term.

I think, Mr. Speaker, the hardship is more deeply ingrained than that and goes much beyond what the Minister has told to us today. I would like to spend a few moments outlining the situation as I see it. It seems to me the place to start is first to consider the realized net farm income, the costs farmers are subject to, and then to determine whether they are as a group able to move forward under that regime. I would then look at the debt statistics and the rate of debt increase, which I think will substantiate the allegations made by the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) when he said there is extreme hardship out there on the farms and in agriculture.

Realized net income has been relatively stable. In 1974 it was $3.5 billion or $3.6 billion. In 1983 it was $3.7 billion. For over a decade farmers have had virtually the same net income, the one exception being in 1981 when they broke the $4 billion mark at $4.1 billion. But in 1980 it was down to $3.3 billion. However, it has been running along at $3.6 billion, or $3.5 billion. This in spite of the fact that costs in that period of time for all Canadians, and we are talking only about net farm incomes so we are talking about the take-home pay of the farm community, rose by well over 200 per cent, to be exact, 240 per cent. Just to bring us up to date, in the last four or five years we find the farm input price index has increased 29 per cent. That is between 1979 and 1983. At the same time farm commodity prices have increased only 11 per cent, with a resulting net income increase over those four years of 5 per cent. If you were to translate that into real dollars, it means a net decline in income of 25 per cent. So there has been in effect 25 per cent less spending power in the hands of Canadian farmers between 1979 and 1983. That leads us to conclude there is a very real possibility that hardship will occur.

Let us look at another set of data, that of the Farm Credit Corporation. Let us look at how many accounts are in arrears with the FCC as of September 30, 1983. Of beef producers with outstanding loans, 24 per cent are in arrears. Of crop producers with outstanding loans, 21 per cent are in arrears. That compares with a couple of years ago when only 14 per cent of the beef producers were in arrears, and only 14 per cent of crop producers were in arrears in 1981. If these people are not having financial difficulty, why are they so far in arrears? Why is the number of people in arrears going up? We have heard an argument, which seems to make some sense, that if farmers had marketing programs, they would not have those financial difficulties. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the figures show that is no longer the case. Of farmers who were in fluid dairy production in 1981, only 6 per cent were in arrears with the FCC. However, as of September of this year 9.1 per cent were in arrears. That is the cream of the crop. That is the sector of the agriculture industry which is the best organized in terms of controlling production and also the most subsidized of any segment of agriculture. The amount of money in arrears has increased 50 per cent in just two years. Producers are beginning to feel the pinch as well.

What about people in the poultry business? They are operating under supply management boards, and you would not think there would be many people in arrears with the FCC in that sector of agriculture. Yet we find that while in 1981 some 9.4 per cent were in arrears, today 14 per cent of them are in arrears on their FCC loans. In 1981, almost 21 per cent of hog producers were in arrears with their Farm Credit Corporation loans, and the same situation exists today.

Therefore, I believe that the allegation that there is hardship on the farms is correct. I am not sure that the immediate answer is simply to increase the amount of credit available. These people to whom I have been referring have had credit offered to them and they have had difficulty making their payments even on a 20-year or 30-year repayment schedule. The problem is not just one of needing more credit. The outstanding credit in Canadian agriculture was approximately $19 billion at the end of 1981. That figure is presently estimated to be $6 billion to $10 billion higher. The interest charges are now at the point where they are almost equivalent to the net farm income that farmers receive.

When I was attempting to begin farming about 25 years ago, there was a rule of thumb that one's sales from farming should be at least equivalent to one-fifth of the money invested in the farm. Much of the invested money would be borrowed, but that is beside the point. The theory was that one should be able to turn over the value of the farm once every five years so that the five-year sales should be at least equivalent to what was invested in the farm.

That is virtually impossible to achieve today in a cropping program, whether in western Canada or central Canada. In fact, a farmer who can turn over his assets in sales by ten years is doing extremely well. This means that the proportion of money that remains to the farmer to spend on his family, on reinvestment and improvements to his farm is shrinking all the time.

When I was deciding to become a farmer in the 1950s, farm economists and Government people were saying that there were obviously too many people involved in farming. They arrived at that conclusion then by taking the amount of income that is left, deciding what a good average wage would be and dividing that into the amount of income. In this way they concluded that there should be half as many farmers. With today's agricultural technology, I submit that it is quite difficult to argue that there are too many farmers. Today's farmers are very well equipped. They are using the latest technology and the latest information. They are working very long and hard hours. Even the academics are not making a case that there are too many farmers. They are not making the same arguments about under employment as were made in the 1950s and 1960s.

In fact, today's farmers face great financial hardship. I believe it is time to begin looking at some of the sources of that hardship. We know that the most logical solution, one which many industrialized countries are in fact following, is to attempt to become as self-sufficient as possible in the production of food so that we do not have to rely on offshore producers for our livelihood. We discovered that in our country as a result of our experiments in dairy policy some 12 to 15 years ago. We decided to import some butter, cut back production and rely on those imports because it was much cheaper than it could be produced in our northern climate. When we finally arrived at an import position, our extra demand forced the world price of butter up so high that we could not afford to import it. We then moved to the program of subsidies and controlled production that is in place now. I suggest that is a reasonable policy for a country like ours, as it is for virtually any country.

However, we have not used that type of analysis in determining our needs for other products such as fruits and vegetables. If we were to extract our exports of grains from the import-export figures, there would actually be a net import requirement of approximately $2 billion in food products. These products are primarily fruits and vegetables. Even during the last 15 years our country has been processing fewer fruits and vegetables and has not been taking advantage of the very seasonal nature of our northern climate to keep them for the other eight to ten months that we are incapable of production because of the weather. We have given up those techniques to a large extent, with the result that farmers have had to ease out of producing some fruits and vegetables.

Let me point out some areas of the country where this is occurring. British Columbia is a traditional area of apple production in our country. The cost of production is estimated to be 14 cents per pound. Farmers receive approximately 4.5 cents at the farm, and there is a stabilization program in B.C. which adds another 2.5 cents. This means a seven-cent return to the farmer for a 14-cent outlay.

This situation does not only apply to British Columbia. With respect to the beef industry on the Prairies, the market yields approximately two-thirds of the actual cost of producing a pound of beef or pork.

In regard to potato production in the Maritimes, 50 per cent to 60 per cent of the costs are realized from the market while the rest adds to the debt of those particular farmers and increases the overburdening debt load that many of them face. This is causing a tremendous hardship.

The only solution is to do two and possibly three things. In the short term we have to devise better ways of providing short-term credit. More important, we must take action to solve the problem on a longer term basis. We must recognize that there should be some stabilization programs that are addressed at maintaining incomes by using costs rather than traditional market prices as the base. It makes no sense at all to have the historic market price as the base for stabilization programs.

In the British Columbia apple situation, the market is yielding only about a third of the costs. This has been the situation over the last three years. Even when the data base is shortened to three years, it still means that the farmer will be stabilized at approximately 35 per cent to 50 per cent of his real production costs. Therefore that kind of stabilization program does not provide any stability to the farming sector or solve the problem of ever increasing debt.

Some Provinces have begun to develop programs based on costs, but this is done to a very limited extent since their financing capability is limited. They are also limited by the fact that much of the production goes beyond the Province, which means that any subsidy is essentially a subsidy to people who live outside the Province. We need a national stabilization program based on costs. Furthermore, we have to work hard at developing better marketing methods for those products, because there is no sense to having a stabilization program for a product that is not properly marketed. The buyers could take the attitude that they will pay a lower price because the farmer will take a very poor price for his product. The stabilization plan will simply go up to cover that price since it is cost based anyway. There should be a system of marketing the product linked to that stabilization program so that maximum returns can be gained from the market. We are seeing some experiments in that field in some Provinces. I note the beef programs in Manitoba and Saskatchewan and the hog programs in Ontario, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Prince Edward Island. They have been experimenting with that concept and it is one that is working relatively well.

I think it is generally agreed that a tripartite program involving the producer, his provincial Government and the federal level could provide an even better kind of program. Hopefully, the Government would be able to move very quickly on that kind of program, provided that some proposed legislation is introduced in the session, which, we are told, is imminent.

Finally, on the very short term, improved ways of permitting the turnover of land from one generation to the next is vital. We should be looking at reductions in the requirements for capital gains. We had that argument advanced several weeks ago in this House. Some new methods of transferring land from one generation to the other have been experimented with in some parts of the country with relatively good results.

The land bank in Saskatchewan allowed families who did not have a great deal of money to trade the land from one generation to the next and permitted them to roll it over to the following generation. This allows for relatively low cost production because the land does not have to be refinanced with each new generation and ultimately allows our country to compete effectively with those countries where land stays within the same family and is simply transferred from one generation to the next, free of charge. That is the system they have in certain parts of Europe. It is traditional. It allows us to compete effectively with producers whose land costs them practically nothing.

I close by urging the Government to reassess its agricultural program, to admit that hardship is being effected on producers and that we move as quickly as possible to better marketing programs, stabilization programs and refinancing programs to overcome these problems.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of questions for the Hon. Member. He talks about the terrible plight farmers are in. He gives the impression that it is the case for all farmers. Is the Hon. Member aware that even in his Province land values have hardly decreased at all? Is he aware that the repayment ability of farmers in that province is the best in all of Canada? Is he aware that the Royal Bank is opening 12 or 14 new branches this year in Saskatchewan?

Mr. Althouse: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am aware that lending institutions are still very interested in Saskatchewan. I think that if you analyse the situation you will find that Saskatchewan was one of the last provinces to respond to the current difficulties by reducing the value of land. There are two reasons that land prices have not gone down in Saskatchewan as quickly as in other areas.

Mr. Nickerson: Because a Conservative Government was elected.

Mr. Althouse: First, there was a fairly good crop for the last two years and the volumes moved have been fairly good. The Hon. Member beside me says it was a good Conservative Government that was elected. To some extent that has contributed. The Government has added not only to the 4 per cent reduction in the interest that is available for four years under the FCC, but it has extended that to any person looking for land who is under a certain age. That subsidy, though it is only short-term and will only apply for four years, has served to maintain the price of land. Therefore, rather than falling as dramatically as has been the case in some parts of Canada, the reduction in land prices is probably still to come in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I just want to clarify that land prices have hardly gone down. With the increase in price of commodities, will the Hon. Member not agree they will probably go back up again? Canola seed oil is up $90 a tonne; canola oil meal is up $42; canola seed is up $40 a tonne, all in the space of about six weeks. That is more than enough to pay amply the increasing Crow rates for ten years. This has an effect, Mr. Speaker. Maybe the price of land going down in Saskatchewan has some effect. Would he not consider the question that Saskatchewan is overgoverned by 31 Cabinet Ministers for a population of less than one million people? Does the Hon. Member not think it is costly to run the crop insurance to which federally we contribute $56 million and to which producers contribute the other $56 million, while the Province spends $3 million or $4 million administering the program and has a special Cabinet Minister for it? Is that not a costly thing for farmers?

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of questions asked by the Minister. I will take the last one first. Yes, there has been a tremendous increase in the size of the Cabinet and the cost of governing the Province. That has been reflected in the very large deficit in the order of $500 million to $600 million, a deficit which had not existed before. To some extent, I suppose, putting residents of the Province in debt into the future is perhaps being used to hold up some of the jobs in that Province.

With regard to the sudden increase in the price of canola, I would simply remind the House that the sudden surge in prices is very similar to the surge in prices we had in 1973 or 1974. It was very short-lived then and it will probably be short-lived now. We have not seen quite the same price levels for canola as we saw in 1974. Costs are something like 2.4 times as high now as then. Even with the sudden surge in prices, I do not think you will see a huge rush by Saskatchewan farmers to go out and start purchasing things.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse). Comparing the land bank program to the family farm purchase program, which is presently in place in Saskatchewan, up to the present time over 1600 individual family farm purchases have been assisted by the family farm purchase program. I would draw to the attention of the Chair that this is more than the whole land bank system had helped in the previous seven years. If the Hon. Member is serious, I would like to ask his opinion on the federal Government's refusal to accept some $200 million through the Province of Saskatchewan to the Farm Credit Corporation to be lent out to people in Saskatchewan to allow them to continue the family farm purchase program.

Mr. Whelan: It was discriminatory and the human rights people would have been after us.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, one of the problems that exists with these kinds of programs is that the federal Government will have to decide when it cuts people off and when it does not. We have not had any reasons, and I do not know the reasons, for the federal Government having refused to accept a loan of $200 million, if indeed that loan was offered. The increase in purchases is in very large part due to this sudden availability of the 4 per cent reduction in interest. With the size of loans these days, that is pretty well enough to keep a family operating for a year. That 4 per cent reduction supplies them with food, clothing and automobiles. It would, of course, bring about a great many potential customers.

The problem with the program is that it is dependent upon the borrower being eligible under the rules of the FCC, which means that they have to have a fair amount of assets to begin with. People who would have qualified for the land bank program to get land do not often have those kinds of assets and therefore are not part of this program. There is some inequity as a result.

Mr. Whelan: Does the Hon. Member know that the $200 million offered by the Province of Saskatchewan was more costly than what we could borrow any other place? Does he know that it had to be re-lent in Saskatchewan? It was discriminatory. We could not lend it in any other Province.

Mr. Althouse: I will take that as an answer to the previous question rather than another question.

Mr. Jim Peterson (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to participate in this debate. There has been much misconception by Hon. Members opposite, which is evident in the motion itself. The entire state of the agricultural industry in Canada is not as the hon. proposer of the motion indicated.

I would like to cite a few statistics. Net farm income in Canada in 1983 will be up about 5 per cent above 1982 levels. The total cost of production to farmers at the same time will decline by about 3 per cent. Wheat is another example. Exports totalled 21.4 million tonnes, or three million tonnes more than in 1981-82. Grains and oilseed exports are up to 29.7 million tonnes. Barley is up approximately seven million tonnes, despite the fact that there have been tremendous surpluses of coarse grains in the United States. The price of canola to producers and western farmers is up about 20 per cent. If we look at pork, one of the difficult industries and one of the areas on which we should focus attention, in 1982-83 exports were 25 per cent to 30 per cent above 1981 levels. In the area of milk, through a system of supply management in Canada we have been able to keep our surpluses at a reasonable and manageable level. The contrary has occurred in the United States. It has incredible surpluses, about 12 per cent above requirements. The problems the Americans are facing in dealing with these surpluses are mindboggling.

The problem is not right across the board in agriculture. We must be responsible in pinpointing areas of concern and targeting on farmers who need help. As we all know, this is in the red meat area. Contrary to what is implicit in the motion before the House, our farmers are the most efficient of agricultural producers in all countries of the world, not only in terms of productivity but in terms of the quality of the products produced for consumption here and outside Canada. This enviable record is achieved despite the fact that 55 per cent of our agricultural lands are the most northerly of those of all other countries. Despite these hostile environmental factors, Canadian farmers are the most efficient producers of any in the world.

This has brought tremendous benefits, particularly for consumers. The cost of food to Canadian consumers is less than 16 per cent of their income. If this is not the best, it is the next to best record of any country. In addition, the efficiency and productivity of the farming community have led to reduced inflation in Canada. Our agricultural producers have to take a tremendous amount of the credit for the fact that our inflation rates are at a low level. In the statistics presented last week, the inflation rate was down to 5 per cent. Let us not forget the tremendous contribution to the Consumer Price Index and the lowering of the rate of inflation by our agricultural community.

In focusing on what we might do to help farmers, let us recall that it is an area of divided jurisdiction. Under the Constitution, agricultural production is part federal and part provincial. Let us concentrate on some of the things the federal Government has undertaken. One problem mentioned has been the high cost of carrying credit or raising money to certain farmers. The federal Government has in place six programs designed to aid this situation—the Farm Credit Act, the Farm Credit Corporation Special Farm Assistance Program, the Farm Syndicates Credit Act, the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Fruit and Vegetable Storage Construction Financial Assistance Program and the Small Business Bond Program.

By contrast I turn to the programs of the Province of Ontario, its four small, paltry programs. If the Ontario Minister of Agriculture thinks he can pass the buck to us for the farmers of my Province, he has another guess coming. He has not fulfilled his responsibilities to farmers in the area of credit assistance.

Turning to the red meat area, admittedly that is where there are the most problems. Almost all farm insolvencies relate to areas where there has not been some type of supply management program or marketing board program. The Ontario Minister of Agriculture proposed a stabilization program for red meat—producers, the Province and the federal Government each contributing a third. One would have to ask that Ontario Minister what happened to the program which was in effect in Ontario in the 1970s. It was a stabilization program that was similar in nature. It lasted a total of three years and fell flat on its face in the fourth year when only 10 per cent of farmers would contribute their third of the stabilization because prices went up and they would not need it that year. Is that any way to run the stabilization program? Is that the type of program that will provide security to producers who need it most in the circumstances?

This issue is fraught with politics. I realize the agricultural community is divided on the issue, but this does not mean that we should not attempt to follow the directions our experiences have indicated will work and have worked in the past. I welcome the leadership shown in this very vital area by our outstanding, knowledgeable and competent Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan).

Having looked at the present problem and having commented upon it, I feel we should also be looking forward and looking at what we as a federal Government might do on behalf of all Canadians to try to bring about greater equity and greater possibility for stable production and to try to help our farmers and ourselves.

I have five points upon which I would like to touch briefly. The first is the transportation system. In fact, the efficiency of production of western farmers or grain producers and their incredible productivity has been a mixed blessing. We can no longer envisage our present rail system being able to carry their grain to market under the present rate structure, if they continue producing at increased levels. The farmer's productivity has in fact brought upon us the need to rebuild our rail system to ensure that we have the capacity to export those products to market.

What are we doing today in this area? We have a House which is not prepared to deal with that issue and debate it firmly. The best thing we can do for our western farmers is to ensure for them a rail capacity which will guarantee them exports. As a country and a nation we will be able to enter into export contracts with foreign purchasers, never having to fear the possibility that that grain cannot be taken to market.

With a new transportation system in the West, new port facilities, double-tracking, upgraded facilities and more cars, we will be able to assure our foreign buyers that our product can be delivered to them on time. This is critical to the prairie farmer as well. He would not have to worry about the export logjam. He can go ahead producing his product, his wheat, with the assurance that we can do the job of exporting it. It will cost him less to store the crops on his land. He will have better cash flow.

The single one thing that will do more for the western farmer than anything else, apart from higher world prices, is the ability of Canadians to compete more effectively in the export markets through an increased rail capacity. That is why essential to what we are doing in our transportation program today is to increase the capacity of our rail system to carry the western farmers' product to market.

The second area I would like to touch upon briefly is the whole field of research and development. Why are we among the most efficient producers of agricultural products in the world? It is because we have undertaken tremendous research and development in order to produce new crops, plants and types of cattle and beef that stand up to Canadian climate and conditions and which can be exported. Marquis wheat is one example, canola is another. We have 72 different nations sending their agricultural representatives to Canada to find out how we are doing some of these things.

Look at the entrepreneurial flare of many Canadians and what they have been able to do. E. P. Taylor has put Canada on the international map in terms of the types of bloodstock he has been able to produce. There are many Canadians who have followed in his footsteps. One of them I know very well. Anderson Farms, which started out ten years ago near St. Thomas, is now a leading exporter of stock to the United States and elsewhere. We have seen what the Holstein cow, developed in Canada, has done for milk production in many other countries. We are now advancing our technology of open transplants and exporting semen. We are able to bring these technologies, these new ways of doing things, to many other nations of the world. This is critical to what we are doing.

Agriculture Canada spends more than $200 million a year on this type of research and development. It goes into soils, plants, water, energy, equipment, animals, food processing, all these types of areas. We have produced 30 to 40 new plant varieties for the benefit of Canadian farmers in the grains, fruits and vegetables areas. After Agriculture Canada was able to find these products, rather than keeping them to itself, it has put them out through the SeCan Association for immediate distribution to the farmers so that the benefits of these new technologies become immediately available. SeCan is presently handling 77 new varieties of plants.

I am very proud of the research and development record in Canada. However, this record does not mean we can sit pat. Our competitors abroad are getting more deeply into these areas as well. It is our obligation to devote more and more effort to high-level research and development in Canada.

A short while ago I had the pleasure of visiting Red Williams in Saskatoon and seeing his tremendous research facilities, of which he is very proud. That Canadian has achieved an international reputation. We need more of this type of individual in our agricultural research in Canada.

The third area we should be looking at in terms of agricultural policy is the whole concept of foreign aid. Except in emergency-like situations such as floods or extreme drought, I do not believe that exporting surplus Canadian food to developing countries is the answer to either their problem or our need for foreign markets. It is critical that they have this food when people are starving. I am not denigrating that role for food aid at all. Even more important than food aid over the longer term is bringing these new agricultural technologies to the developing countries. Our role as a leader in research and development, biotechnologies and the new techniques, as a nation that has developed many new types of animals, plants and trees which can stand up to the harsh vigours of the Canadian environment, gives us a tremendous role to play in exporting those agricultural technologies to the Third World countries. The greatest thing we can do for those nations is to make them self-sufficient in food. They would not have to spend their very scarce foreign exchange reserves on importing produce from other nations. They would be able to feed their people through cycles of drought, heat or pestilence with new products that we with our expertise can help them develop. I believe this would be the greatest contribution we could make in the name of humanity.

A fourth area to look at where we should explore further possibilities to assist the agriculture community and all Canadians is in the area of taxation. I welcome the provisions of the April 19 budget in which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) extended loss carryovers so that those farmers who have experienced difficulty over the past couple of years will be able to spread those losses backwards and forwards to a far greater extent so that income taxes payable before or in the future can be offset by those losses. The farmers will have the cash.

Very important, and some Members have mentioned it today, is the issue of capital gains. In many instances, the farm is the retirement security for the farmer. If the children do not want to take it over and benefit from the capital gains rollover, if they do not have children who can take it over, if they are forced or want to leave the farm because of age or illness, we have to look very seriously at whether we should be taking the slice of taxes that we are out of that retirement security, namely the farm, which they worked so hard to build up and into which they have put so much. I am very partial to recommendations to take a second look at changing the valuation day to 1974 and offering farmers the option of either choosing 1972 or 1974 as a valuation year for valuing their farms and disposition. I think we should also look very carefully at the impact that inflation might have had upon the value of their farms, and I think we should ask ourselves if it is right, if it is proper and if it is the most efficient use of resources to tax farmers on inflationary gains from that valuation year of 1972 or 1974.

The fifth area I would like to touch upon very briefly in the one minute left to me is the whole concept of self-sufficiency. We have within our means the ability to produce more foodstuffs in Canada. The consumers of Canada will benefit and they can help us by buying Canadian goods, even if they are buying Canadian fruits that are canned. Why do we always need to have fresh fruit throughout the winter? Why do we have to import fruit? Why could we not be growing more of our own foodstuffs in greenhouses, which would take advantage of the tremendous energy surpluses, particularly of western gas? There are tremendously imaginative new methods from which, if implemented, we can all benefit.

The agriculture industry is not the disaster that the Hon. Members opposite have indicated. It is one of the most dynamic, forward looking, entrepreneurial industries in the country. It is one of the best. We should all be proud of what the agriculture industry and the farmers have been able to achieve.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions, comments, answers? Debate.

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, since I come from eastern Ontario and represent what is primarily a rural constituency, I welcome the opportunity to discuss agriculture and its importance to Canada. I have always admired the forthrightness, foresight and determination of Canadian farmers. They have had the ability to lead by example, to thrive on challenge and to increase the efficiency which has built the country. Agriculture helped to build the country with roots which are deep and strong. Determination, sharing and hard work have helped to overcome adversaries in all shapes and forms. Our tradition is strong and we are slow to change from the known to the unknown simply for the sake of change alone.

The federal Government should follow the lead of the farmers with the many attributes which have been ascribed to them, which include those of leadership, self-sufficiency, unity and hard work. These qualities will help in bringing about solutions to the very real problems facing Canadian farmers today.

One problem facing Canadians is that of energy. We all use various forms of energy, and farmers are no exception. Rising fuel costs and security of supply are important matters that must be faced in the near future.

We are fortunate here in Canada to have the potential for energy self-sufficiency. The Government's energy policy proclaims self-sufficiency by the year 1990. However, what we see as a result of its policies are uncertainty, increased costs and indecisiveness all across the country.

Farmers have not only been plagued by high energy costs, but because of the federal Government's interests rate policy, they have also been hit with high financing costs. As a result of high financing costs, many independent farmers have been forced into bankruptcy. Economic hardship in the agricultural sector can have a far-reaching impact affecting the welfare of many people other than farmers and their families.

We have observed the extension of such problems into the farm machinery industry and other farm supply industries as farmers have been forced to curtail expenditures and new capital investment. The need for new capital investment in the farming community continues even though many farmers cannot afford to borrow. Machinery continues to wear out and must be replaced, but it is expensive. If money is put into machinery, it is not used to put food on the table of the farmer. Every day the need for adequate funding for the Farm Credit Corporation grows. Daily financial pressures are forcing farmers to go to the Farm Credit Corporation and farmers are increasingly being told: "Sorry, there is no money".

The Farm Credit Corporation recently requested permission to borrow $600 million from foreign money markets in order to finance the corporation until March, 1984. Finance Department officials turned a deaf ear to this request. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde), when questioned in the House of Commons, stated that $250 million was adequate. The Minister's response only goes to show his lack of understanding of the problems facing Canada's farming community.

Another problem facing the farming community is that of retirement. The nature of the agricultural industry and the present tax system create many problems that other industries do not face. Incomes tend to be very erratic, fluctuating with the extremes of weather, the changes in domestic and foreign commodity markets and general economic conditions as a whole. A large percentage of any profit made by a farmer goes directly back into the farm in order to finance the purchase of additional land, cattle, fertilizer, machinery and the like.

At present, farmers have no over-all pension fund other than the Canada Pension Plan. Because the farmer's income is so erratic, his ability to contribute to an RRSP is greatly reduced. There is an old saying that goes: "Farmers are cash poor but asset rich". However, that saying does not answer the question of where a farmer will get a pension when he or she becomes unable to farm in later life. Historically, the farmer's pension has been his farm.

The proceeds of the sale of a farm are eligible for capital gains tax. In the November 12, 1981, federal budget, the IAAC was replaced by forward averaging. This has caused a great deal of concern because of the potential long-run divergence between interest and inflation rates.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Finance should re-examine his policy of levying capital gains taxes upon farmers and their farms and that he should also review his forward averaging policies in order to allay the fears expressed by the farming community.

Having heard that the Province of Ontario proposes to introduce agriculture as a compulsory part of the core science courses in grades seven through ten, I strongly urge the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) to support this provincial initiative and to urge other Provinces to follow suit. Such courses would make the job of Minister of Agriculture much easier.

To many people, and in particular the Minister of Finance, are unaware of the importance of agriculture to the Canadian economy. Agriculture accounts for one-sixth of all economic activity in Canada. The agricultural sector employs 18 per cent of the Canadian work force and generates nearly 12 per cent of Canada's exports. However, the recession has hit hard. Farm bankruptcies have soared to record numbers, and one agricultural economist has estimated that the recession has taken $5.5 billion worth of assets off the national farm balance sheet.

The Progressive Conservative Party has announced a ten-point program to help the producers survive this recession. We called for greater funding to the Farm Credit Corporation. The Minister of Agriculture agreed with us but his colleague, the Minister of Finance, ignored his advice and slashed the Farm Credit Corporation's request for more funds by over 55 per cent. We called for the establishment of an agri-bond program. The Minister of Agriculture agreed, but again the Minister of Finance has refused to implement such a program.

We called for an improved stabilization plan. Once again, the Minister of Agriculture agreed. However, the Minister of Finance did not agree and, as a result, Canadian producers will continue to suffer from a plan that does not fully take into account rising production costs and a plan that makes its payments after much of the economic damage has been done. We called for revisions to the capital gains tax and other taxation matters. Again, the Minister of Agriculture agreed with the need for such revisions, but again the Minister of Finance has refused to make any changes, although his predecessor did consider a study of the matter.

It is clear from this list that the Minister of Finance is not aware of the importance of and opportunities in Canadian agriculture, nor is he aware of the problems besetting this vital Canadian resource. With the establishment of compulsory agricultural courses at the secondary school level, hopefully future Ministers of Finance will not suffer from the same ignorance.

Recent figures on Farm Credit Corporation loan approvals point to a poor credit picture for financially troubled or beginning farmers seeking mortgages from the federal lending agency. In July, the FCC got approval to borrow $250 million more. It needed at least $600 million. This $250 million just will not cover the tremendous need and demand from farmers.

This is a real danger if we continue on our present course. In 1981, there were 318,361 census farms in Canada, a 12 per cent decline from 366,128 of 1971, and a 57 per cent decline from the 732,858 of 1941. We all know that farms are larger and more efficient but we also know there is a limit to efficiency, and now we see the numbers of farms going out of production at an alarming rate. In the 40 years between 1941 and 1981 the farm population in Canada decreased by nearly 66 per cent, a rate of decline averaging some 4,300 persons per month. Atlantic Canada has suffered the worst with farm population declines of approximately 93 per cent in both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Farmers are our unsung heroes. In 1940 the average Canadian farm produced enough food to feed 11 people; today an average farm feeds over 60 people. This trend has reached a peak because of the lack of reward for the hard work which is associated with farming.

The net farm income as a proportion of gross farm income has slumped from 37 per cent in 1965 to 19.6 per cent in 1982. In 1965, gross farm income was $4 billion and net farm income was $1.5 billion. In 1970, gross farm income was $4.4 billion and net farm income was $1.3 billion, or 28.8 per cent. In 1982, gross farm income was $19.3 billion and farm income was $3.8 billion.

Agriculture Canada has estimated that production costs will increase by 11 per cent in 1981 and 1986. Farm operating expenses increased 115 per cent between 1976 and 1982. The Minister of Agriculture brags about cheap food and being able today to buy more eggs with a dollar than before. If this trend continues consumers will not be able to buy farm products at any price. What about costs of production and the prices of farm products which have not kept pace? Mr. Speaker, one factor alone which the Government has placed on the backs of our farmers is the costs which stem from the deficit and indirect costs of energy and the federal farm fuel tax which accounts for one quarter of farm operating expenses. In 1972, interest charges comprised 8.6 per cent of farm operating expenses. In 1982, this has grown to 13.9 per cent of farm operating expenses.

It is a crime that FCC does not have the funds available. Farmers in Ontario given conditional loan approvals last summer will have to wait until at least 1984 for any hope of getting these funds.

Settlement in Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington on June 16, 1784 by United Empire Loyalists was a situation of which we have little understanding today. These settlers, who faced starvation, planted turnips that summer and survived on rations of food until the first crop could be grown the next year. From this hearty stock of first farmers in Ontario came future generations of farmers who, to this very day, owe so much to their ancestors. 1984 will mark this bicentennial of agriculture in Ontario, and I hope the Minister of Agriculture will make every effort to recognize this significant contribution to the history of agriculture in Canada during 1984.

There is a vital role for Governments to play in agriculture such as the promotion of soil conservation, the safeguarding and managing of water resources, agricultural research and the conserving of genetic resources. However, Government intervention frequently goes far beyond such concerns since it is often motivated by political consideration and a very narrow view of economic gain.

In a recent report by the science and technology division of the Library of Parliament on world food security it was stated that not so many years ago, the promise of the green revolution seemed to have calmed down fears about society's ability to feed a burgeoning world population. Agricultural technology held the prospect of pushing the problem of food supply far into the future. Between 1950 and 1971, world grain production almost doubled, and despite a rate of population increase unmatched in human history, per capita grain production rose by more than 30 per cent. Today, agricultural systems in developed and developing countries alike are experiencing difficulties, although the causes vary.

The question that arises from this statement is whether or not central planning, uneconomic price ceilings, import restrictions, export taxes, and subsidies established by the Government of Canada have created the problem of supply and distribution, not only affecting the market in Canada but also the world. Increasingly, Canadian agricultural policies are being felt throughout the world because of our large exports of agricultural produce. Canada is one of the largest exporters of grain in the world. What would happen to the world if Canada's grain farmers found that they would no longer afford to supply cheap grain to the hungry masses of people? The result would be that many hundreds of people would die. In light of this fact, the Canadian Government and people have an added responsibility to ensure that our farmers can meet such demands, at home as well as abroad.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nickerson): Are there any questions or comments? There being no questions or comments, we will proceed to debate. The Hon. Member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain).

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, this is one of the occasions when I wish there were all kinds of time for a Member to speak. In this debate a lot of things should be answered. A great deal of dreaming is done by Members on your right. There is a facade of confidence over there. It has been pointed out unequivocally by Members on this side that the statistics offered by the Minister of Agriculture have not been authenticated. When you compare his daydreams with the statistics presented by Members on this side, his knowledge of the condition of agriculture today is found to be wanting.

I want to draw the attention of the House and the country as a whole to a situation that has arisen in trade between Canada and the United States. It was apparent from the very beginning that it was going to impact upon Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick particularly, and therefore it was judged not to have any significance, not only to the Government but also to the agricultural organizations in Canada.

Early last year, the State of Maine launched an appeal to the U.S. Department of Commerce to declare that potatoes, round whites in particular, had been dumped into the United States and that they had damaged the return of the industry in the State of Maine and the eastern seaboard. This is very alarming to eastern Canada because we do rely upon shipping a portion of our crop on a near annual basis to the eastern seaboard of the United States. If that market is eliminated or if the return from that market is reduced, it will very seriously affect the income of the Atlantic farmer in the potato industry. However, that is not where it stops, Mr. Speaker. This is where I criticize other areas of Canada. If the export market to the United States reduces the net return to the farmer of Atlantic Canada, at the same time it reduces the net return to every potato producer east of Thunder Bay. Every potato producer in Quebec and Ontario will suffer because of an oversupply of potatoes which would ordinarily have been exported but must now be marketed in eastern Canada, east of Thunder Bay at its extremity. That is the consequence. Unfortunately, the hearings ended in a successful result of the application of the State of Maine, and on July 26 it was found by the Department of Commerce that:

> We have preliminarily determined that there is a reasonable basis to believe or suspect that fall-harvested, round white potatoes from Canada are being, or are likely to be, sold in the United States at less than "fair value", as provided in Section 733 of the Tariff Act 1930, as amended (19 U.S.C. 1673) (the Act).

In response to that there was a communique issued by the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) in respect of the decision of July 26. After weeks and months of the presence of this problem to Canadian trade, the Minister said this:

> Minister Regan noted that officials have not yet had time to study the U.S. Commerce Department's preliminary determination in detail but would be doing so to ensure that the United States is acting in conformity with its international obligations.

I quote from the determination of the Department of Commerce in the United States as follows:

> The U.S. Government imposed am import penalty tax on potatoes from the Maritime Provinces today in an interim decision subject to review.
> It assessed an interim penalty of an average 17.9 per cent of the import value. That means importers must post a bonded promise to pay that levy on any imports pending a final ruling—and possible adjustment of the dumping duty—this fall.

Please note, Mr. Speaker, that not only is there a tax imposed, but that tax may be readjusted at a later date upward or downward. This imposes a virtual embargo on all except for those most gambling of individuals on this product imported into Canada. However, I think we should note the final line of the release from the Department of Commerce of the United States which reads:

> The ITC found in a split decision last March that there were preliminary indications of injury to U.S. producers.

The first question I want to raise is why is the Minister unprepared, after months of opportunity to study this situation, because a report of that commission says this:

On February 9, 1983, we received a petition filed by counsel on behalf of the Main Potato Council.

That means, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister had from February 9 until June 28 to study and become knowledgeable about the problem which was to hand. He stated, "We have not had time as yet to consider the consequences". As to who is damaging whom, I want to read into the record of this House the statistics which relate to the importation of potatoes by Canada and the export of potatoes by Canada to the United States in their relative quantities in relation to the quantity of potatoes we consume. In 1971, the U.S. exported to Canada 7.1 per cent of our total consumption. We exported .3 per cent of its consumption. Relatively speaking, then, we probably received 24 times as many potatoes as they received from us. In 1972, it was 7.8 per cent we imported. We exported to the United States .2 per cent. I will not read all the figures because they go up to 1982. However, let us take a look at 1977. We imported 17.2 per cent of our requirements and exported .3 per cent of American requirements. In 1981, we imported 11.8 per cent of our requirements and exported 1 per cent of the American requirements. This is roughly as low a ratio as there is available. It is roughly 12 to 1 on a consumption basis, which we imported versus what we exported for U.S. requirements.

I stated from day one that this was but the tip of the iceberg. I was ridiculed by federal authorities when I tried to contact them for some discussion on this matter. I was really ridiculed by many others in the trade when they said, "Oh, no, we can win this case. It does not really mean anything." There was to be a hearing on September 20, I believe, in Washington. When I called Government officials for advice as to what the potato industry of Canada should do in this case, I was told that this was merely a technical situation, that we really should not put much effort into defending or presenting the Canadian position. That is the answer I received from officials of the Government of Canada.

I went further, Mr. Speaker, and inquired of some highly placed U.S. people. While they did not want us to win, their response was—and I submit to you that every government official which had to do with the potato industry in Canada's trade should have known this—"If you lose the hearings of September 20, you have lost the biscuit." The Canadian Government advisers were saying to the industry, and to me, "This is just a technical thing. Forget it. Don't bother." That is the kind of service which agriculture has had from the Department of Agriculture.

To show you, Mr. Speaker, that this was but the tip of the iceberg, I have in my hand a Bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Gilman. That Bill was to provide equitable treatment for certain fresh vegetables produced in the United States. It deals with the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to impose at his discretion and on the advice and petition from producers, surcharges on importations from Canada on vegetables. Those vegetables are cabbages, carrots, celery, lettuce, red onions, potatoes and radishes. However, please take note of this:

The Secretary, for the purpose of this Act, may add for the duration of a marketing season any classification of fresh vegetable provided for in such Schedules as a vegetable category if a United States producer of vegetables—

I repeat, "a United States producer of vegetables".

—of that kind petitions the Secretary for such addition and the Secretary concludes that economic injury is being caused or threatened to United States producers—

I have a flyleaf also of a Bill introduced in the Senate of the United States. It is an identical Bill. So now we have a Bill in the House and a Bill in the Senate of the United States. That is what I meant, Mr. Speaker, when I said it is the tip of the iceberg. What offends me is that the Minister of State for International Trade has not yet, after months, concluded what should be done. The industry in New Brunswick pleaded with the Minister of Agriculture to find ways and means of assisting the industry of Atlantic Canada in defending its case.

I say to you unequivocally that the industry is going to spend not less than $250,000 in co-operation with the Canadian Horticultural Council, which, thank Providence, has chosen to champion this cause. The Minister has received letters pleading for financial support for the council and the New Brunswick Potato Agency. Of the $147,000 plus incurred to date in legal fees, the New Brunswick industry alone has already remitted $37,000 to the Canadian Horticultural Council in part payment of its share of the cost of the defence to date. Another $27,000 is going to be needed, which makes for a total of over $75,000 in New Brunswick alone. This, of course, is an organization in an industry which has been downtrodden, ignored and condemned by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). This money has come from the New Brunswick Potato Association whose total promotional budget for 1983-84 is only $35,000, yet their Bill will be $75,000.

I tried to obtain from Government Departments, including the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker, copies of the legislation introduced in the U.S. Congress and Senate. "Oh, we do not have them", they said. I went around to three Departments trying to get those Bills and was told that the Government did not have them, or I was denied copies. However, I obtained copies and, since the Minister does not have them, I am going to ask a messenger to deliver them to him when I conclude my remarks.

There is now a third Bill which has been introduced to give the U.S. Government blanket authority to subsidize or pay the cost of applications on behalf of a producer or association of producers who appeal to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture for surcharges on agricultural exports to the U.S. This Government apparently does not have that one either, but I shall have it early next week and I will present it to the Hon. Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of State for International Trade. I am also going to send to the Minister the brief prepared for the hearing in September, along with a copy of all those documents issued by the U.S. Department of Commerce. If we are to allow this incursion, this breach of the moral principles of trade between Canada and the U.S. without a voice of complaint, if we allow this proposal to become law without a formal protest, we may well look forward to its extention to the feed, grain and oil seed industries, and goodness only knows what other industries.

I appeal to this Government to heed what I am saying. The consequences of neglect and lack of financing, the consequences of a lack of professional input into opposing this matter, will range from coast to coast in not only the fruit and vegetable industry, but other industries in this nation as well.

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Mr. Speaker, at this time last week I was in my riding and I had the pleasure of attending the sale ring of the local livestock co-op. They ran through about 1,500 hundred head that day, mostly of calves. Good steer calves were going for about 75 cents a pound. The last time I sold calves in that same sale ring was in 1973 and I got 73 cents a pound. I can remember at that time paying about 38 cents to 40 cents a gallon for gasoline, and you know what a gallon of gasoline is worth now.

Mr. Huntington: What is it worth?

Mr. Greenaway: It is about $2.40, something like that. In any event, cattle receipts today are low, costs have probably tripled and people are in real trouble. Many farmers and ranchers have had to take jobs off the farm to try to meet their mortgage and operating expenses. This seems like a very normal thing to do because you are trying to save your business and stay afloat. All was well in my riding until about January this year when the Department of National Revenue sent in teams of auditors who decided that these ranchers, because they were making an off farm income, had to be recategorized from full-time farmers to part-time or even hobby farmers. What is worse, they went back as far as four years and are now sending out reassessments as high as $75,000 and literally bankrupting many of these people.

If you do not think this is a problem, Mr. Speaker, I can lay out the evidence to show you it really is. It is a problem right across the country. In 1981, Statistics Canada claimed that over 39 per cent of all farmers and over 50 per cent of beef farmers are working off the farms to the extent of 171 days a year. I know that in 1982, approximately 125,000 had off farm income. Yesterday I received a zerox copy of an advertisement for a herd dispersal sale involving 100 head of cattle. This is Kelso Angus in Georgetown, Ontario, and what is interesting about this is that at the bottom it says, "A victim of Section 31 of the Income Tax Act". Kelso Angus had been designated as a hobby farm under an interpretation of this Act and as a result of subsequent assessment they were left with no alternative but totally to disperse this major herd which was just attaining the peak of its young productive life. I say that is a disgrace and it should not be happening in this country, Mr. Speaker. I have literally a couple of hundred cases as bad as that. I am going to read from a few letters I have received because they set out the problem so succinctly that I think it will drive home to you how very serious the problem is.

The first letter is from a lady at 150 Mile House, British Columbia, who was audited in January and received a reassessment in April. In May she received a call from the auditor, a Mr. Wilson, stating that they would only be reassessed for 1981, not 1979 and 1980 as previously indicated. He did not give any reason. These people merely went about their business and purchased an old bailer and a pick-up truck thinking that they would have only one year's income tax bill to pay at the worst. Then, all of a sudden, the same auditor phoned back to say he made a mistake and these people would be reassessed for all three years. That just goes to show the incompetence of these auditors, Mr. Speaker. None of them have any agriculture expertise, and we have proved that already in this House.

I have another letter from Quesnel, British Columbia. These people were audited on March 16 and were told they were now classified as a hobby farm because they had no reasonable expectation of a profit. They had three weeks in which to appeal, they went straight to their accountant, found they showed a profit this year and would be glad to show the auditor the books. So they met, and the auditor changed his mind a bit but said that he was still going to classify it as a hobby farm. They then sent their appeal letter, a copy of which came to me, on March 30, and on May 3 the auditor phoned and said he reviewed their case and they were now classified as part-time farmers. In other words, they could deduct up to $5,000, and was that okay with them? She said yes but that her husband was not home and she wanted to ask him before agreeing finally. She asked the auditor on the phone twice if this means they do not owe the Government anything and he said twice, "No, you don't. You don't owe us anything." The next day he phoned back and asked if she had talked to her husband and if he agreed with the decision. She said that he did. The auditor said that as long as he agrees, he did not have to send them a letter. She said no, that she would like the letter. He said that it would take a couple of weeks, and that was okay with her.

Two weeks went by without any letter. She phoned the auditor on May 30 and asked why she had not received her letter. He said that they had reviewed their appeal again and decided that they were back to being assessed as hobby farmers. She asked why she was not notified, and he replied that it had been in the works for "the last two weeks". That was the only reason he gave. She then asked again if they owed the Government anything, and he said yes, as far as his office was concerned.

How can people conduct their business when the tax department harasses them in that manner? Another fact which has come to light is that many young farmers are being hit under Section 31 of the Income Tax Act. I would like to read one case from the presentation that was put together by the Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. He composed a 22-page document called "Income Tax Treatment of Small and Part-Time Farmers" which he presented this summer to the Interprovincial and Federal Provincial Conference of Ministers and the Deputy Ministers of Agriculture in Prince Edward Island.

It is an indictment of the whole problem that I am bringing to the attention of the House in regard to Section 31 of the Income Tax Act.

In this report he points out particularly how absolutely wretched this situation is as far as farmers starting out are concerned. I will just read the one case which he uses as an example:

> In 1974, Mr. A bought a half-section of land for grain farming, the price of which was partially financed by a mortgage and partially by savings. He gradually added to the size of his farm, so that by 1979 he had 800 acres, and had also acquired a full line of farming machinery. Again, these additions were financed by savings and by outside borrowings. During this period, Mr. A had kept his job at a uranium mine, where he was employed on a seven-day-on-seven-days off shift basis.
> Mr. A found that with the help of his wife and his two teenage sons, the seven consecutive days off every second week were enough to enable him to carry on his grain farming operation. He also took one week's vacation in the spring and one week in the fall which, together with his regular time off, allowed he and his family to do the planting and harvesting of the crops.
> By 1980, Mr. A felt confident enough about the future of his farm that he gave up his job to devote his full time to the farming operation. Unfortunately, his timing was unlucky, and the combination of high interest rates, low grain prices, dry conditions, grasshopper infestation and higher general operating costs forced him to take another job in early 1981.
> While this would seem to be an example of an individual genuinely trying to get a start in the farming business, and committing practically all of his capital and most of his energies to the business, Revenue Canada invoked Section 31 and limited Mr. A's farm loss deduction to $5,000 annually. Mr. A's objection to the Appeals Division of Revenue Canada has been rejected, and if he wishes to carry his case further, he must now go to either the Tax Review Board or the Federal Court, either one of which will be a costly and time-consuming procedure.

There are three other examples given here which are all as bad, if not worse.

An interesting thing which is mentioned here and in the other cases is the fact that the wives and children in all of these cases generally work many long hours on these farms, and this labour is not recognized at all by the Department of Revenue. If a farmer employs someone the Department will recognize that. While that is in the farmer's favour, the Department will not credit any labour by the wife or children.

As well, the Department states that if someone has a full-time job, that person does not have the time to spend on the farm. Luckily, the wife of a rancher in my riding kept a diary in 1980. The rancher had a job in a mill where he worked 37.5 hours a week. He put in a total of 1,950 hours that year. In the same year he put in 2,260 hours on his farm. This does not count the hours put in by his wife and children. Of course, the auditors coming from the city figure that if one puts in a 7.5-hour day, that is all one is good for. It only proves that they do not understand farming or what makes a farm or ranch work.

Since I first brought up this issue in the House approximately a year ago, I have managed to get the attention of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). He writes different replies on the subject to almost anyone who writes him a letter, but at least he is beginning to realize that there might be a problem.

I have copies of letters that he has written to people all across the country. They are interesting and I will read a few key sentences. I have a letter dated May 31 which is a written to a Mr. Lyle Klein of Quesnel, British Columbia, in which he states: "I am in favour of a thoroughgoing review of Section 31 because this provision means that farming is treated differently than other businesses and that the full losses from other businesses can be deducted from the taxpayers' income from other sources."

The Minister says, in a letter to David Kirk, Executive Secretary of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture dated June 17, "Now is the time to address the basic issue of why there should be any limitation on loss deductibility for farming businesses when there is no such limitation in respect of other businesses the taxpayer may pursue." In the final paragraph, he says, "I personally regard Section 31 as a priority issue in agriculture at the present time."

I submit that one surely would not know that it is a priority with him if one tried to do some of the things I have done to get his attention.

In an August 8 letter to Mr. Brian Griffith, President of the Ontario Aberdeen-Angus Association, the Minister of Agriculture said, "My own view is similar to yours in that I am not comfortable with the $5,000 limitation under Section 31 on the deduction which can be made from other sources of income with respect to farming losses. If the person passes the test of having a genuine farming business, I would favour the unlimited loss deductibility which applies to non-agricultural businesses." The Minister is finally realizing that there is a problem.

It did not take the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) as long. I received a reply from him to letters I had written to him on June 6. He said, "I am disturbed by the number of letters and press clippings that I have received illustrating that a rigid application of the restrictive farm loss rules can result in an unfair taxation of bona fide farmers." While he does not go on to say that he will do anything about it, he realizes that there is a problem.

The assessments in my riding are now pouring in. There are approximately 150 people who are getting their reassessment notices, and most of them are anywhere from $5,000 to $75,000. It is interesting to see what happens. The minute one receives that notice, the collection division of Revenue Canada immediately begins its attack. Generally, it phones to say that it demands the amount of money immediately, whether or not that person intends to appeal his case.

People should be aware of the fact that they do not have to pay cash. Some have been foolish enough to borrow money from the bank to pay, but it is possible to go to the bank and arrange for a letter of credit. It costs .5 per cent per year. That will keep the taxman away until the hearing is completed.

If that does not work, they can put a lien on the ranch or farm, and that is not advisable. What is interesting about the letter of credit is that if the case is lost, the bank has to forward that money immediately to the Department of Revenue. The bank then debits the account and makes it a demand loan. With a $100,000 operating loan, for example, the bank would deduct that letter of credit from the total operating loan so that the person would be cut back during that interval.

When a person receives an assessment, there is an opportunity to file a notice of objection. Generally there is 90 days to file that objection. It will take approximately two to three months to hear from the Department of Revenue. It appears that the Department of Revenue is simply rubberstamping these objections and throwing them out without given them any consideration. I presume that the Department does not want to admit that anyone has made a mistake. When an objection is overruled, the next step is to go to the tax court of Canada. In order to do that, you have to write to Ottawa to the Court of Administration at 381 Kent Street, Ottawa and ask for an appointment. It might take up to two or three months or even longer to get an appointment with the tax court. You go before a judge. You do not need to have a lawyer. It does not cost you anything. It is probably a good idea though to have a lawyer. You go before the judge and, hopefully, if you win the case, you are all right. But if you do not, the only thing left is to go to the Supreme Court of Canada. You have to go through the court system, which is terribly expensive. I know of only one person with whom I have been in contact out of about 500 who is going that route.

There was an interesting case of a chap at 100 Mile House who has a horse farm. That throws taxation auditors into a tizzy. They do not understand horses at all. They do not understand cattle, goats or anything else as far as I am concerned, but horses really throw them for a loop. Tax people claim that horse breeding is not classed as a legitimate business in Canada. That is their stand on horse breeding. This particular chap was reassessed about $70,000. He went to the bank to try to get a letter of credit. Because he did not have a great line of operating credit, he did not get the amount needed. Revenue Canada is now forcing him to sell his horses. This will put him into receivership. At the same time he has launched an appeal. He wants to go to the tax court, but he will be broke long before he gets there.

This problem is damaging to agriculture. It removes the incentive for anyone wanting to get into farming. I had a person in my office last week. When he went through some of the stuff with me I found he had 500 acres of land, but he decided to let it sit there. As long as we have this kind of legislation and these kinds of over-zealous auditors and a Minister of Revenue who is as heartless as he appears to me to be, agriculture in Canada will go nowhere.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions? Comments? Debate?

Mr. Ian Watson (Châteauguay): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to have this opportunity this afternoon to take part in a debate introduced by the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer). The Government has been accused in this resolution of not responding to the financial needs of farmers. It provides us on this side with a very useful occasion to put a few facts on the record.

I come from an area that is no longer truly agricultural but I do have, in two or three of my municipalities, a substantial dairying industry. In another part of my constituency, the black earth area, I have a very fast growing industry in the production of vegetables, many of which are being exported to the United States in numbers and quantities that last year exceeded revenues of $16 million and this year will probably be in the order of at least $20 million. This is a small geographic area but it is an extremely rich agricultural area. Exports of vegetables are penetrating markets that have never been penetrated before by Canadian products. Markets are being penetrated largely because the federal Government has been helpful in many areas, either providing for refrigerated storage allowing, for example, carrots to be kept in perfect condition until late spring or early summer, even carried over from the previous year, or, in the case of some salad crops, providing assistance in fast chilling facilities.

The federal Government has been helpful and it is paying off for the Canadian economy. To accuse the present Minister of not doing his best for agriculture is really a travesty. I think every Canadian farmer knows that the present Minister has been a staunch defender of farmers' interests whenever he has had the opportunity in Cabinet to do that. I am sure in many, many a Cabinet meeting the present Minister has been an "enfant terrible" in favour of the interests of Canadian farmers, and his actions have paid off in a number of the new programs that we have seen.

I would especially like to mention a few items concerning the dairy industry, which is an important sector in an area like the federal riding of Châteauguay. Canada's dairy industry has had to face two major setbacks in recent years. A drop in domestic demand for dairy products was followed by a spectacular drop in prices as result of reduced demand and an unprecedented surplus of over two million tons in other countries producing dairy products. We are now overcoming these problems thanks to our supply management program and other federal policy measures. The dairy program has been in effect since 1975, with changes being made regularly following recommendations and meetings with members of the dairy industry.

As far as subsidies are concerned, in order to maintain the importance of our dairy industry, subsidies are granted directly to producers of industrial milk. At the present time, the subsidy is $6.03 per hectoliter on shipments meeting domestic requirements. It is expected that $280 million in subsidies will be paid during the present dairy campaign which started August 1.

Last year, Quebec producers received $132 million in subsidies. Within the framework of our national dairy policy, the Federal Government determines a target price for processed milk and cream to ensure that increases in production costs of dairy producers are covered by market prices. The target price is calculated according to a formula established in 1975, which allows for variations in production costs and other factors. The price serves as a guide for provincial milk marketing boards and in setting prices for processed milk and cream in the provinces. The present target price is $42.80 per hectoliter.

In 1975, when the present national dairy policy was established, the target price was set at $25. This means there has been an increase of 72 per cent. According to Mr. Garon, the Quebec Minister responsible for Agriculture, the Federal Government is doing nothing for farmers. However, we have increased income from industrial milk by 72 per cent since 1975.

Since 1975, Federal Government expenditures with respect to dairy products have averaged $300 million per year. These funds are helping to ensure the continued development of the Canadian dairy industry.

[English]

I would like to mention one other area we tend to neglect when we talk about agriculture. A tremendous contribution has been made by our agricultural research. These policies have contributed not only to agriculture but to the Canadian economy by strengthening the quality of our agricultural products and thus our ability to compete in world markets.

We spend more than $200 million a year on agri-food research. This amounts to almost half of what is being spent by all organizations in the country, both private and public, on that kind of research. We have developed, as a result, one of the most successful and productive agricultural systems in the world. Plant breeding has gained for Canada a reputation second to none. A whole variety of new plants which are able to defeat diseases and increase yield have been developed. The Department produces 30 to 40 new plant varieties each year for the benefit of Canadian farmers. They cover a wide variety of crops, including grains, fruit and vegetables. Oilseeds have been a particular success story. Canola, rapeseed which was a Canadian research success story—

Mr. Fraser: It was a bad word, and you know it.

Mr. Watson: Canola is now giving Canada about $500 million a year in foreign exchange. This is what it is worth from an export point of view. It is an extremely important product, not only for Canadian farmers but for the rest of the economy because of the secondary effects of that money. There has been a succession of new varieties of wheat over the years.

Something which is of particular interest to my part of the world, about which I might as well be talking, is this new Leger barley variety. It is now available for the first time to Canadian farmers. It outyields all other barleys grown in eastern Canada by wide margins. Leger barley is so promising that it could supplant all other barleys grown in Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces over the next few years. It could reduce the dependency of eastern farmers, particularly those in Quebec and the Maritimes, on grain for animal feed imported from outside their provincial borders. One day Leger barley could help make eastern Canada self-sufficient in grain grown for animal feed, along with new corn varieties which require an ever shorter growing season and which, combined, put a lie to the kind of propagandistic opposition of some farmers' organizations against changes to the Crow. In effect, this kind of argument was being made to stir up eastern farmers against the Crow arrangement. It was to the effect that they would be paying so much more for western grain that they would never be able to compete, etc. What nonsense! Within a few years eastern Canada will be self-sufficient in feed grain production. In my view that argument was totally false, as are many of the arguments used against the Crow in the West.

[Translation]

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to mention, but only briefly, because I would like to let others . . . I would like to mention the compensation plan for apple growers in Eastern Canada. In the winter of 1980-1981 and the following spring, severe frost caused very serious damage to orchards in Eastern Canada. In many cases, producers suffered losses of over 50 per cent. After a thorough analysis of the situation, the Federal Government, in consultation with apple growers in the areas concerned, developed a compensation and reestablishment plan. We want to help apple growers in Eastern Canada recover their full production capacity. The compensation provisions are as follows: between now and December 31, 1984, apple growers will receive compensation for trees damaged in 1980-1981. Forty dollars per standard tree will be paid to cover the cost of removal of dead trees and preparing the soil for new plantings. New plantings in the orchards concerned will be covered by the plan as follows: As soon as the orchards destroyed by frost have been replanted, $16 per standard tree will be paid to cover the cost of maintaining the new trees until they start producing.

Mr. Speaker, I feel this is a major contribution towards helping our apple growers, and an indication of the assistance the Government is giving to farmers across the country. I shall not comment any further, since I would like to give the Official Opposition a chance to finish the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Any questions? Comments? Debate. The Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) has the floor.

[English]

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, in the dying minutes of Friday afternoon it gives me pleasure to rise and conclude the debate. I was very pleased to hear the comments of the Hon. Member for Châteauguay (Mr. Watson). He expressed some very progressive thoughts on the Crow rate. I see the former Minister of Transport is present today. He probably listened with a very open mind to those comments. He should have acted when he was Minister, and we would have had a lot fewer problems and difficulties in the whole Crow debate. They were very progressive thoughts, and I was pleased to hear them being expressed by the Hon. Member for Châteauguay.

The motion of the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) is true in what it says. It condemns the Government "for its failure to recognize the economic hardship affecting all farmers in Canada". It has never been a more true statement than it is today. The Hon. Member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway) gave one very clear example of it in his speech. Another example of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) not recognizing the difficulty in the vegetable and potato industry was put before the House by the Hon. Member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain). Also, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) put in very clear language the difficulties with the agricultural grain stabilization plan at a time when grain farmers in western Canada have been severely hurt by difficult economic times. Almost $1 billion of their own money is sitting in the federal Treasury, and the Government is not prepared to change the formula so that the money can get to those farmers in need at this time, not a year or two years from now.

These examples were put before the House. The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette dealt with a group of plans which have been put in place for agriculture over the last 40 years. If we look at the record of the Minister and the number of Bills he has put before the House in the last ten years, we find that most of them were only improvements on legislation passed before he ever became Minister. The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette suggested that the Minister should use the tools which are in place at this time if he has no new ideas to put before the House to assist farmers in difficult times.

If we look at the net incomes of farmers, as the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) pointed out, we see that in net constant dollars farmers in 1982 were making less than they were making in 1956. That is very eye-opening because there are fewer farmers today than there were at that time. If we look at farm expenses, we find that they have increased tremendously. It makes me wonder how they are capable of hanging on, given that statistical picture. Farm production costs are estimated to increase from 1981 to 1986 by 110 per cent. If we look at the prices of commodities, we find that there is no chance for that kind of increase in commodity prices to keep up with expenses.

Basically, the motion is saying that we need some policies to bring agriculture into the eighties and to carry it into the nineties. The Minister should not sit back and brag about the policies on which he has sat during the ten years he has been Minister of Agriculture. They are not sufficient to carry us into the next decade. That is why the motion condemns the Government for its failure to implement sound agricultural policies to carry us into these coming years. This is very evident to farmers throughout the country.

I know time is drawing to an end, but in conclusion I ask the Government to look at the agricultural adjustment fund to deal with western livestock affected in the Crow debate. It is most important if it intends to continue on the path in the Crow debate which it has followed to this point.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It seems I am in the habit of wishing Hon. Members a good weekend——and I would choose to do so, as I usually do. I see the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) present and I am reminded of certain procedural difficulties this afternoon relating to the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), whom I would not refuse in the circumstances. That Hon. Member reminded me of the difference, if I may say this as a good wish to Hon. Members for the weekend, between a lawyer and a rooster, that is, that a rooster clucks defiance. I wish Hon. Members a good weekend.

[English]

At 5.02 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Orders.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Thursday, October 20, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 41, 42, 43 and 46 (Mr. Benjamin), Motion No. 44 (Mr. McKnight) and Motion No. 45 (Mr. Mayer).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) had the floor at the adjournment of the House. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo).

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this series of motions which to some extent give a pretty fair indication of the effect of 12 to 40 years of Liberal bureaucracy in that this Bill before the House is so badly drafted that a number of things must be changed to even make it palatable and understandable.

This series of motions deals with sanctions and awards which may be levied by the Administrator. As you mentioned, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) was the last speaker and he gave a very interesting series of Bills which he thought should be presented to the House. I could go on, Mr. Speaker, because I would like to add to those Bills Conservative Bill C-112, which is a Bill that says that if a patient loses his hand the Conservatives would treat the heart because the darn thing is pumping out all the blood. That is the kind of inadequacy which we see in this whole series of amendments.

The intent of Motion No. 41 is to give to the Administrator the authority to make sanctions against the railways but not against the Wheat Board and other agencies of the Government. It, along with Motion No. 42, should be in the Bill to give authority to the Administrator to do his work properly and not be bothered with fighting with other agencies within the Government. For instance, Clause 21(1)(a) requires the Administrator to establish performance objectives. Motion No. 42, which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), attempts to reduce the confusion which has been built into the Bill by bureaucrats who have become sloppy and did not bother to take a good look at the effect of the amendments. This particular amendment is an attempt to get rid of some of the confusion which is manifest in the Bill by allowing one agency of the Government—the Administrator, who is defined as an agent in the Bill—to levy sanctions against another agency, that being the Canadian Wheat Board or the Canadian Grain Commission. It also attempts to strengthen a portion of the Railway Act.

Sanctions against the railways have been in the Railway Act for a great number of years. Unfortunately, the Canadian Transport Commission or the Government of Canada, the Cabinet, which has the power within the Railway Act to apply sanctions to the railways and force them to carry grain or whatever railways are built to do, has never used that power.

Motion No. 42 strengthens the Railway Act by giving the Administrator, this one-man agency, more power. He probably has more than he should but if he uses it well in forcing the railways to do their duty, it could be of some value. This amendment would allow the Administrator to have the sole responsibility for imposing sanctions on the railways. We recommend the amendment to both the Official Opposition and the Government as one way of assuring that we have the kind of control over the railways which, along with Motion No. 41, would guarantee performance. Since the Railway Act has not guaranteed performance although it has had the authority for many years, if we are to have an Administrator let us use him to develop the transportation of grain in such a way that it will not be affected by the dilatory railway.

Motion No. 43 deals with awards to system participants. It would eliminate the Wheat Board from the structure of a group that could receive awards because that particular idea of paying awards to a Government agency—again, one agency paying awards to another agency—does not have a great deal of logic to it. I suppose it could be considered to be incompetence on the part of the people who drafted the Bill. We suggest a change by taking out the railways as receivers of awards. They do not need awards. We have been giving the railways awards for the last 100 years and it has not improved their ability to do a good job.

Railways do not really need awards and the awards we have given them in the past have not produced good performance. We have given them rehabilitation funding, money for the rehabilitation of cars and rail lines. That can only be considered an award. Monetary awards have been given in the case of branch lines particularly, but the Government has never checked to see if the money was used for rehabilitation of rail lines. What they did was take what little of the money was spent on the rehabilitation of that line and just added that money to their income.

That is the kind of award which the railways have been receiving and it has not made any difference in the quality of their service. A lot of awards in the form of hopper cars have also been given to the railways. The responsibility for the movement of grains belongs to the railways, according to the Railway Act and according to our understanding of why the railways are there. If one was driving a truck, for instance, one would expect to own the truck. One would not expect the Government to supply the truck even if one were moving Government goods. However, for the last number of years we have been supplying hopper cars and the railways have not been charged for that: they have been able to use those hopper cars rent free, so to speak. That must also be considered an award to the railways because they do not have to provide railway cars to move grain, as they did before 1950.

Motion No. 43, Mr. Speaker, also establishes the principle which Hon. Members have been speaking about for a number of weeks. The Wheat Board should not be tampered with. The second part of this amendment deals with the possibility of sanctions. Again, we feel that if sanctions were put in place they should not be levied against the Wheat Board, because any levy against the Wheat Board is a levy against the producer, and if we levy against the producer we are going to affect the cash flow of the producers. That is not the intent of this Bill. Consequently, we feel that this particular amendment should be allowed.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members of this House are hearing more and more about the plan of the Government to hustle this Bill through all stages of debate by the end of this month. I would like to say at the outset that this will come back to haunt the Liberals for many years to come. The dismantling of the Crow rate will long be remembered on the Prairies. The Government, of course, will make much about the unwillingness of Hon. Members on this side of the House to join with it in its plans to scrap the Crow. It will continue to accuse us of being reactionary on the issue of grain transportation. It will continue to hold up before Canadians the hope of job creation from railway operation—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, this is report stage of a Bill. There are specific amendments before us and debate should be strictly relevant to the amendment being considered.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, I am just making introductory comments; I intend to debate the amendment before us. I would like it recorded again that we in this Party offered to deal with those parts of the Bill which were beneficial. All the Government had to do was divide it into the three parts. We agreed to public investment in railway upgrading.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I invite him to speak to the amendments which are currently before the House.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, we have been debating amendments to this Bill which we believe would make it more like a Bill which would come from this Party. It would be more reflective of what is needed for western Canada. Of course, we would begin by retaining the current statutory freight rates.

• (1125)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the Hon. Member is not prepared to debate the amendments specifically before the House, the Chair will have no alternative but to recognize someone else.

Mr. Epp: Next.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I invite him to speak to Motions Nos. 41 to 46 inclusive, grouped for debate at this point.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, if you would give me a chance I am coming to the amendments we are discussing.

This group of amendments, Mr. Speaker, deals with the authority of the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee to set performance objectives and a system of sanctions and awards to enforce those objectives. We agree that performance objectives should be set by the committee, but what is missing in this legislation is a restriction of its authority to set those objectives only for the railways. As I pointed out the other day when I was commenting on Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38, the problem with our grain delivery system is not that the producers cannot get the grain to the elevator in time or that the grain is held up unnecessarily in port; the problem is and has been for quite a while that the railways cannot seem to meet their obligations to move grain quickly and efficiently from the country elevators to port. They have been responsible for millions of dollars worth of prairie grain sitting in cars on sidings by country elevators when it should have been at the port terminals being loaded on to ships for export.

I have been told horror stories, Mr. Speaker, about railways leaving full cars sitting at country elevators for up to 90 days. No doubt about it, we need to set performance objectives for the railways and make sure they meet them. But why, Mr. Speaker, do we need to have the Senior Grain Transportation Committee set performance objectives for the Grain Commission or the Wheat Board? Why do we need another regulatory body overseeing the other regulatory bodies which are responsible to their own Ministers? I think the simple answer is that we do not. In fact, as I pointed out the other day, allowing the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee to interfere in the operation of the Wheat Board will weaken the Board's ability to market western grain. The intent of Motion No. 41 is to limit that interference.

Motion No. 42, Mr. Speaker, recognizes the simple fact that the railways have been at the public trough for long enough now. By all means, set performance objectives for them, and if they do not meet those objectives, impose sanctions. But why in heaven's name do we offer them rewards for meeting their performance objectives? They have been taking the Canadian public for a ride for too long now. Let's make this the end of the line for the railways' public gratuities. Already this Bill proposes to hand over to the railways some $650 million annually as a Crow subsidy. The Government will be investing billions in upgrading our grain delivery system, much to the delight, no doubt, of CN and CP. If that is not enough, add to that the billions of dollars provided over the years in subsidies, the provision of grain hopper cars and deferred income tax. No, Mr. Speaker, the railways are already being rewarded handsomely for a pretty poor record of meeting their commitment to move grain quickly and efficiently to port.

If this Bill is allowed to pass through the House as it is now written, the railways will be rewarded again by the elimination of the Crow rate. However, this time the reward will be coming out of the pockets of prairie farmers. As far as I am concerned, the railways have gotten enough. It is ludicrous even to consider establishing a system of awards to be applied to CN and CP simply for meeting their performance objectives and doing their job. As David Lewis said many, many years ago, it is time to stop. It is time we cracked down on these corporate welfare bums and on corporate welfare handouts.

I would like to close, Mr. Speaker, by dealing briefly with Motions Nos. 45 and 46. These motions are very similar. Both increase the maximum sanction for the railways to 20 per cent of the volume-related variable costs. However, our Motion No. 46 goes one step further. For that reason, I believe it is the motion that we should support.

In addition to the 20 per cent of volume-related variable costs, this motion would make the railways liable to sanctions equal to 100 per cent of the capital portion of line-related variable costs on grain dependent branch lines. This would simply take from the railways all of the reward money the Bill gives to them if they do not meet their performance objectives or, in other words, if they do not do their job and indeed obey the laws that they are currently required to obey under the Railway Act.

Taken together, I think these sanctions would present a sufficient incentive for the railways to live up to their obligation to transport grain which they have been so delinquent at living up to in the past. It is high time that the railways started doing their job.

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a few words on the record dealing with the motions that are lumped together here, Motions Nos. 41 through 46 inclusive. I would first like to say that I disagree with the fact that the motions are lumped together. Although they are similar in some respects, I would like to debate each of these motions separately because they do have separate intent and they are separate motions. It is very hard to say what we would like to say about all of these motions in the ten minutes allowed. There are six motions lumped together and we do not have adequate time to cover each and every one of them as we would like to.

I would say initially, Mr. Speaker, that under Bill C-155 the railways have been given a guaranteed annual income. They are guaranteed a return of 20 per cent on their investment and they will either drain that out of the pockets of the farmers of Canada or, if that amount is more than the farmers can bear, they will drain that guaranteed annual income from the pockets of the taxpayers of Canada through the Government of the country. I do not know of any farmer in my riding who would not be very happy to have a guaranteed annual return on his or her investment of 20 per cent. Things like that must be rectified.

The guaranteed annual income to the railways is not really tied to any performance indicators. If there are to be performance indicators, they should be set out in Bill C-155. In terms of the motions that are before us now, it would be very appropriate to have performance indicators spelled out within some sections of the Bill.

The entire system may be well managed, but if the railway companies do not perform and if performance indicators are not included and we cannot tell whether or not they have been performing, they should not have a guaranteed return on their investment of some 20 per cent. I will grant that it is not always the railway companies that are at fault. There are some situations in which the railway companies have performed very well. That usually happens on the main lines. The rail companies hardly ever seem to perform well on the branch lines.

The performance indicators, Mr. Speaker, should not only be tied in to the hauling of grain at a certain rate or with a certain turnaround time but should also take into account the fact that the rail companies have been responsible, or should have been responsible, for keeping the rail lines in an adequate condition so that they can be utilized to the fullest possible extent. This certainly is not the case. Performance indicators should be tied into the upgrading of the rail system.

I can think of situations where there is a need for hopper cars at delivery points with large grain storage capacities and yet there are only 85-pound steel tracks going into those places. The provincial Governments, the federal Government and the Canadian Wheat Board actually bought the grain hopper cars that the railway companies did not buy. Those cars should be able to go into delivery points where they are needed and be fully loaded and hauled back out. Of course, if there are only 85-pound steel tracks there, we all know that a box car can only be loaded one-third full and must be hauled out of that delivery point. That is a very inefficient kind of system.

I think that efficiency should be tied in to the performance indicators that the railway companies should be compelled to honour. Under the Act by which the railway companies operate, they are responsible for providing that service. They have received more than adequate compensation over the years for providing that service, either through land, cash grants, rolling stock or money to upgrade the rail systems. The railway companies have not upgraded the system. They have let it waste away. Some of the tracks are in very poor condition. The railway companies have taken the money that should have been used for upgrading the rail system and spent it on numerous other things that have nothing to do with grain transportation.

That brings me to another point I wish to discuss, Mr. Speaker. Many things that are included in Bill C-155 should be debated separately. Bill C-155 has become known through the media to many farmers in western Canada as the Crow Bill. However, we know that the Bill deals with more than the statutory rate that is tied to the movement of grain. The Bill also deals with the upgrading of the rail transportation system and the leasing of the Dominion coal blocks. If the Bill were to be split into these three very separate issues as has been requested by Members of the New Democratic Party, Motions Nos. 41 through 46 would in fact fall under the section that would deal with the upgrading and improvements to the rail transportation system because the network that we presently have sometimes operates efficiently along main lines but very seldom operates with any degree of efficiency on branch lines.

As I have already said, while the cars may belong to the railway company and it can move them in, it is sometimes unable to move fully loaded cars out because of the condition of the tracks. Of course, track condition is a responsibility of the railway companies which should be taken into account in their performance. There is no way they should be allowed a guaranteed annual income of 20 per cent on their investment if they do not perform the movement of grain in the best interests of the producers. We have already heard about the Administrator's acting in the best interests of the producers for such things as trucking grain from certain delivery points. A conflict of interest may well arise if rail line maintenance is not tied into the performance indicators for the railways, because if they do not upgrade the rail lines and truck the grain instead, they would effectively kill that line and would have reason to go to the Canadian Transport Commission and ask for the abandonment of that rail line. Therefore I believe the branch lines are an integral part of the performance indicators of the railroads to justify their guaranteed annual income which is to be provided through this legislation.

Motions Nos. 41 through 46 deal with the power which is given to the Administrator, power which no individual should have. As I understand it, the Government wants to make the Administrator the sole person to solve all the problems of grain transportation. That person would be responsible to the Cabinet. These motions attempt to have the Government consider the fact that the Administrator should not have the power of sanctions and other means over the Canadian Wheat Board, which is a producer organization. The Wheat Board is a farmers' organization which performs in the best interests of producers in western Canada. Instead, the Administrator should be concerned with operating a more efficient grain transportation system in the best interests of the producers. We maintain that this should not be done by abandoning branch lines, trucking grain and having power over the Wheat Board.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair hesitates to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. He needs the unanimous consent of the House to continue. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, there are presently six motions before the House. All of them seek to amend Clause 21 of Bill C-155. I consider those motions very important because Clause 21 of the Bill gives great discretionary power to the Governor in Council. In other words, that discretion is given to the Minister in charge of administering Bill C-155.

I would ask all Members of the Government to study Clause 21 of the Bill very closely. I say this because, having sat in this Parliament with my seatmate from Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) for some 15 years, we have seen Bills passed through the House of Commons, some of which we have supported and others which we have opposed. We have often seen the intent of legislation change quite drastically as a result of the regulations that are drafted by the Government itself or by the particular philosophy of the Minister in charge of a Bill. The reason for that is that a lot of discretionary power is given to the Minister in charge of a particular piece of legislation. He or she may interpret a Bill in any number of ways.

The six amendments in question today amend Clause 21 which gives the Minister tremendous discretionary powers regarding sanctions and awards to the participants in the grain handling system. Clause 21 states that the Governor in Council may, by regulation, at any time after the completion of the review that the Minister is required to carry out under Section 59, take a number of steps which are listed in that clause. This includes awards and sanctions as are detailed in Clause 21(b)(i) and Clause 21(b)(ii) to be applied to the system participants. It goes on to talk about more regulations. Clause 21(3) states that the Governor in Council may make regulations establishing a system of arbitration to resolve disputes concerning awards or sanctions that are to be applied according to this legislation.

This clause gives tremendous discretionary power to any Minister. I say to my Liberal friends across the aisle that the time will eventually come, perhaps very soon, when they are not in Government and another Minister will be sitting across the way. I say to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) that the time may come when there will be a Minister other than one from his Government in charge of administering Bill C-155. That Member may then experience the same kind of frustration over the bureaucracy and lack of freedom of information one finds in the executive council in our country today. At that time he may wish that some amendments were passed to curtail the power of the Minister with respect to awards and sanctions on the grain handling system.

That is the thrust of the amendments that are before the House this morning. Our amendments and those moved by the Conservative Party attempt to limit the power that the Minister will be given through Orders in Council to draft regulations regarding sanctions in the grain handling system.

I repeat that I seriously recommend to Government Members that they take a very serious look at Clause 21. If they did so I am sure they would be very interested in supporting some of these amendments in the name of democracy and fairness.

Let me refer specifically to Motion No. 41 which was moved by the Hon. Member for Regina West. That motion points out once again that we are dealing with a transportation bill and it should be treated as such. Motion No. 41 refers to the power to impose sanctions and we say that this power over the Canadian Wheat Board and the grain companies should not exist in this Bill. The Canadian Wheat Board is responsible to the farmers of this country and we believe that the Administrator and the Minister in charge of the Bill should not have the power to impose sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board.

In reality, the sales that are made by the Canadian Wheat Board will determine grain transportation objectives. Therefore the Canadian Wheat Board, as the farmers' agency, should be able to allocate the cars to where it knows how much and what kind of grain is needed. I maintain that the Wheat Board and not the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee should have that power.

The Hon. Member for Regina West, who has done a very commendable job on this Bill before the House, also moved Motion No. 42. That motion seeks to limit the application of sanctions to the railways for failure to meet performance objectives. There are a number of reasons why I would like to recommend this motion to the House. This part of the legislation would give the Administrator power to impose sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board. We find it very absurd for one agency of the federal Government to be able to impose sanctions on another agency of the federal Government. In other words, the Minister in charge of this legislation can be given the power to impose sanctions on the Wheat Board, which is under the authority of Senator Argue in the other place. I do not believe it should operate in this way and the farmers of western Canada believe it should not operate in this way.

In the past it is only the railways which have consistently failed to meet performance requirements. I believe the sanctions need only apply to the railroads. The farmers for whom the Canadian Wheat Board is working should not have sanctions imposed upon them.

Motion No. 43 is also in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West. Once again it talks about the possibility of sanctions and awards being removed when it comes to the Canadian Wheat Board. The appropriate place for that amendment, as indicated in Motion No. 43, is once again in Clause 21. I do not want to repeat the arguments. We have said many times that sanctions must not apply to the Canadian Wheat Board, to grain companies, to the Wheat Pool and the like; they should apply to the railways. There are many good reasons why that should occur.

In this collection of amendments there is co-operation between our Party and our friends in the Conservative Party. Indeed, Motion No. 44 is moved by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight). I believe the Hon. Member is on his way back from his riding. I am sure he would be interested in knowing that his amendment moves in a similar direction to the one about which we are speaking today.

Mr. McDermid: He is here.

Mr. Nystrom: I hear someone say he is here. I knew that if he was not he would certainly be back very soon. He made the best argument as to why his amendment should be carried.

On September 12, the Member from Saskatchewan said in Committee, and I quote:

I think the intent is similar to that of Mr. Benjamin. There is no way I can see any agency of the Crown, or any minister, applying a sanction through the Canadian Wheat Board or the Canadian Grain Commission that would basically affect producers, who are the main participants, or the sole participants, within the Canadian Wheat Board, or sanction the companies to which they belong and, through that, sanction producers, so the sanctions to be applied would be non-pecuniary. I do not know the definition of that, but I strongly suspect, Mr. Chairman, that most sanctions applied would have ramifications that would affect producers, either through depriving them of the ability to deliver their products or depriving them of the ability to have their products sold.

[English]

And this is the end of the quotation:

[Translation]

Therefore, my understanding of non-pecuniary would be that the sanctions would meet the intent that Mr. Benjamin meant by the inclusion of the words. We have seen fit to move it by not being specific but by using the word "non-pecuniary" and seeing how that would pass down.

[English]

I think he sums up the arguments for his motion in his own words. The other motion before the House—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Nystrom: May I have one or two minutes within which to wind up my speech?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to continue?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to continue.

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Mr. Speaker, I agree with the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) that in many ways this is an important group of amendments. One of them happens to be in my name, and I would like to speak to it specifically.

An Hon. Member: That is why it is important.

Mr. Mayer: Perhaps it is important because it is in my name, but I do not want to pursue that very far. Our sole purpose throughout this whole discussion—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member but he moved Motion No. 45. According to the rules he is presumed to have spoken. I would like to confer with the Table.

The Hon. Member has the floor.

Mr. Mayer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Very simply put, our sole purpose throughout the discussion of the amendments to the changes the Government is proposing to the Crow rate has been to protect the interests of producers. When we talk about protecting their interests, one of their interests is costs. In that regard we have advanced the notion or the proposal of a three-year freeze on the rate charged to producers. The other area is that of guaranteeing service by the railways when it comes time for producers to move grain. In that regard Section 262 of the Railway Act protects producers, in fact all shippers, so that the railways are obligated to provide certain kinds of service.

This particular piece of legislation allows for another way that producers can be guaranteed protection. According to the Bill as drafted, a large amount of money will go to the railways each year. One way to put pressure on the railways to provide service is to take some of that money and hold it back, not for foolish or capricious reasons, but for reasons related to the performance of railways in the movement of grain. Motion No. 45 would amend Clause 21(2), which reads:

> The sanctions referred to in subparagraph (1)(b)(ii) shall, in respect of any railway company, consist of a reduction in the government payment to the railway company under Part III, as prescribed by regulations made by the Governor in Council, not exceeding an amount that, in the opinion of the Commission, is equal to 10 per cent of the volume-related variable costs of the railway company.

To put that in perspective, about 80 per cent of the total amount of money the railways say they need to move grain is comprised of volume-related variable costs. If we take 10 per cent of 80 per cent, it means we are holding back 8 per cent of the Government money which will go to the railways. Let me emphasize that 8 per cent is not the amount which will be held back. It is a maximum, it is a variable. It is up to 8 per cent.

Motion No. 45 simply indicates that the Governor in Council should be in a position to hold back more. We are suggesting 20 per cent. Twenty per cent of 80 per cent is 16 per cent. That is not a large amount of money compared to the total. It is not an absolute, it is a maximum.

Just to give some figures, in 1983-84, if we use the 10 per cent figure, it would be $65 million out of total railway revenue of $790 million. In 1984-85, according to the figures provided by the Department, it would be $71 million out of $893 million. In 1985-86 it would be $75 million out of $987 million. Motion No. 45 simply suggests that that amount be doubled so that the railways know the Government is serious about seeing that they live up to their performance objectives.

In many ways it makes sense because producers do not have the option of receiving any of that Government money themselves. It all goes to the railways. If there was a provision in the Bill that some of the money would go to producers, they would then be in a position themselves to judge whether the railways were providing service. If the railways were not providing service and they had the option of using trucks to move some of their grain to a feed mill or crushing plant, they could do that. But when all the money the Government is to put up—and it is substantial, we give the Government credit for that—goes to the railways, surely there should be as many teeth in the Bill as possible to ensure that the railways perform. The amendment suggests that 8 per cent of the total amount of money is not enough and that 16 per cent would be more appropriate.

Let me put it further into perspective. As the Bill is written, volume-related variable costs will go down. There is a provision in the Bill that the railways be allowed a contribution to what is called their constant costs. As constant costs become a larger and larger proportion of the total amount of money that the railways will get from the Government, the actual percentage that is volume-related variable costs will decline. Over a period of time, the 8 per cent that the Government is suggesting in the Bill as it is written at report stage will decline. Over time the contribution to constant costs that the railways will be allowed to charge will amount to about 20 per cent. This becomes rather involved statistically and I am not sure it is worth elaborating. The point is that over time this 10 per cent figure will fall. It is now only 8 per cent and over time it will fall to less than 8 per cent.

If the Government is really serious about providing the producers of this country with some guarantees that the railways will in fact perform, there should be nothing wrong with doubling this holdback, which is all it can be termed, from 10 per cent to 20 per cent. Initially, the Bill at second reading was written to hold back 40 per cent of the volume-related costs. Forty per cent of 20 per cent would only amount to 8 per cent of the total costs. As it is written now, it is raised to 10 per cent. A more reasonable proposition would be that it be doubled.

I am making these arguments to try and convince Government Members, but I do not know whether many of them are listening. Let me emphasize that the 20 per cent holdback is not a maximum. We are not saying that if the railway does not perform anything that does not come up to standard as judged by the CTC or the Governor in Council, the total amount should be held back. We are saying that the maximum should be raised. This was referred to by the previous speaker, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom). Subclause (3) reads:

Where a scheme that provides for awards or sanctions or both has been implemented under subsection (1), the Governor in Council may make regulations—

It does not say "shall penalize" for the full 10 per cent or, as I am suggesting in this amendment, 20 per cent. It states:

—may make regulations establishing a system of arbitration to resolve disputes concerning awards or sanctions or both applied under the scheme in accordance with any procedures prescribed by the regulations.

If there is any faltering as far as performance is concerned, it does not say that the railways shall be penalized a full 20 per cent. All we are doing is raising the maximum. It does not mean that if there is a holdback or penalty it should be taken away permanently. As I interpret it, it means that the Governor in Council should be in a position to hold back certain amounts of money for a period of time until the railways perform. If the Government is really serious about seeing that the railways perform, given the fact that they are going to get many many hundreds of millions of dollars from the Government, the Government should be willing to see that there are some teeth in this Act in order that the railways do perform.

Let me point out another area of concern. In press releases last spring, both railways pointed out that because of the decline in the economy and the falling volumes that they were shipping, they may or may not invest the kind of moneys that they had initially talked about in the spring. Here we have an indication from the railways, and it makes sense because volumes are down, that they may not invest.

I will say this again so that Government Members in fact understand what Motion 45 states. We are saying that the Government should have as many teeth as possible to look after producers. When the producers do not receive the money themselves, they have to rely on the railways and whatever pressure the Government can put on the railways to perform. We think that increasing the amount of the penalty or holdback would serve as an inducement.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on Motions Nos. 42, 43, 44, 45 and 46. It appears that these sections of the Bill are designed to protect the producers. That is certainly a worthy objective. These amendments deal with sanctions or penalties which may be imposed or enacted.

I have difficulty following the argument that one segment of all those concerned is fully responsible for many of our problems. Certainly the railways play an important part, but there are other segments which also play an important part in transportation, such as the Wheat Board, the pools, the labour unions, the Canadian Transport Commission and the Grain Commission. All of them have their place.

Under this Act, the Administrator will be given certain authority. Some people, such as the Members of the NDP, think that the Administrator is being given too much authority. Frankly, I do not think he is being given enough authority. I would like to see it increased rather than decreased.

My experience with the abandonment of rail lines, for example, has not been a happy one. I was very unhappy with the decisions of the Canadian Transport Commission. I tried to get information pertaining to the books of CPR and CNR. Not only was I thwarted by the railways, which did not want to reveal what was in their books, but by the CTC. In other words, the producers are being opposed by the very bodies that should be protecting them.

I want to give an illustration of that. It deals with penalties and sanctions. In the East Coulee coal mines, there are still more than a million tonnes of coal to be mined. A few years ago, the Canadian National Railway was persuaded to build a line from Rosedale to East Coulee, a distance of about eight miles. There were five coal mines there at the time. They paid for that rail line. When it reached the point where the coal mines could not compete with oil, the mines were closed. They stopped operating. The rail line and the elevator in East Coulee sat there. The CNR and CPR asked for the right to close the line. First, the Alberta Wheat Pool sold the elevator. The railways then said they did not need the line any longer. The railway companies produced a lot of figures at the hearings to indicate that the line was costing them money. Among other things, it showed depreciation on the line.

I knew that in fact the railways had put no money into that line for several years. However, they showed a large sum of money for depreciation. At the hearing, I asked the railways to show me the amounts of depreciation for each year since the railway was built. Counsel for the CPR said that I was not entitled to that information. I wanted to know why. After all, that was one of the factors upon which they were closing the line. CP said that it would not give me the information. One of the Commissioners of the CTC said that he believed I had the right to have the information. I almost fell over when he said that, but he did state that he believed I had the right to it. A very able lawyer in the City of Drumheller, Mr. Robert Ross, Q.C., supported me in the stand and stated: "Yes, he is entitled to that information. We are all entitled to it". The Commissioner then said to the railway representatives: "You supply the Member with that information".

I waited for weeks and for months and then I went back to the CTC and wanted to know why I was not getting the information that the CPR had been ordered to give to me. By that time the CTC had changed its mind and said: "We do not think you are entitled to that information".

I ask Hon. Members of this House, are the books of one of the segments going to be kept in such a way that the rest of us are not going to be permitted to see what is in the books? Why am I not entitled to see what the railway has been charging for depreciation on that line since its inception? I will warrant you, Mr. Speaker, that they have paid for that line time and time again through depreciation alone, but they will not reveal any figures.

I think we need an Administrator who is able to say: "We will look after the producer. We will look after the people. We want that information". If the railway is not giving the facts and refuses to give the facts, then there should be heavy sanctions imposed against them. I would like to see a severe penalty imposed on both the CNR and the CPR when they "cook" their figures in their books. That is what they are doing; they are "cooking" the figures.

In navigation school where we were learning how to find the location of a plane, we would take a shot on the sun, we would take a shot on a station, and we would build a little triangle to find exactly where we were going to be in ten minutes. At night we would take a shot on a couple of stars and the moon, and we would get our little triangle to find out where we are so that we can tell the pilot, "This is where we are now. "Turn 180 degrees or 70 degrees" whatever way we wanted him to go. Some people at navigation school and those who trained as navigators will know that we had to shoot so many shots on the stars and the moon and the sun. But some "cooked" their books; they simply "cooked" their shots, and of course many of those were washed out. What good would they be to a crew up in the air when they did not know where they were or if they did not know how to take a shot on whatever is available.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The information being relayed by the Hon. Member is of particular interest to the occupant of the chair, but I am having a little difficulty relating it to the amendments before us.

Mr. Taylor: From now on you will not, Mr. Speaker. I am just suggesting that that is exactly what the railway is doing; they are "cooking" their books and they do not want to reveal it. They will not put it out to the light of day so we can see how much they have charged for depreciation. That is only one segment. There should be penalty imposed and it should be a heavy penalty.

I also agree that when we start enacting penalties we should make sure that the person who is responsible pays them. Too often it is passed on to the producer who pays it in the end. I do not agree with that at all. As the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) said the other day, when we impose penalties let the railways pay it out of their own profits and not charge it back to the producer. Let them not put a pecuniary penalty on the Wheat Board because that takes money out of the pockets of the producers. The motions made by this Party and the stand we are taking on these amendments is to protect and be fair to the producer. That will be a big change in this country.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question? The Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish) has already spoken.

Mr. Anguish: I know I have already spoken, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask a question of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is not permitted under the rules. At this point the Hon. Member's time has expired and we would need the unanimous consent of the House to ask questions. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

According to the Chair, Motions Nos. 41 to 46 inclusive have been grouped for debate but at this stage they are to be voted upon separately.

The Question is on Motion No. 41. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

● (1220)

The question is on Motion No. 46. All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

As indicated previously by Madam Speaker, Motions No. 47, No. 48 and 49 will be grouped for debate. Motion No. 47 will be voted upon separately. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 48 would dispose of Motion No. 49; a negative vote on Motion No. 48 would require the question to be put on Motion No. 49.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 22 by striking out line 2 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"fifteen Senators or fifteen Members of the".

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville) moved:

Motion No. 48

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 25 by deleting lines 10 to 17 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"debated for not more than three sitting days and at the expiration of the three sitting days the Speaker shall forthwith without further debate or amendment put every question necessary for the disposition of the motion."

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 25 by striking out lines 10 to 17 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"debated and on the conclusion of the debate the Speaker shall forthwith put every question necessary for the disposition of the motion."

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, in committee the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) and some of my colleagues in the Conservative Party endeavored to have changes made in those parts of Clause 22 and Clause 25 which specified the number of Senators or Members of the House of Commons who would need to sign a statement in writing requesting referral of the regulations put forward by the Grain Transportation Administrator to the appropriate committee of the House and, further, that when the committee had reported back, the report could be debated for three sitting days as proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) or, as I propose, until debate is concluded.

In Motion No. 47 we endeavored to provide equality with Senators in terms of the number of Members required to sign a request to the Speaker that a regulation be referred to the appropriate standing committee. I can understand why they did not want 30 Senators and 30 MPs as it would be tough enough to find even 15 Senators to sign a piece of paper. We do not object to 15 Senators but we think only the same number of Members of the House of Commons should be required to sign a submission in writing to the Chair that a regulation be referred to the appropriate standing committee of the House.

As was the case with the previous group of amendments and as was mentioned by the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), this legislation is another VIA Rail set-up. The Governor in Council, the Minister, or the Grain Transportation Administrator can do anything they want. When it comes to regulations regarding awards and sanctions, regulations regarding the allocation of railway cars, regulations that could affect the quota system or the block system or regulations that could discriminate against a system participant unfairly or discrminate in favour of a system participant unfairly, it surely requires some detailed attention by the House of Commons. The regulations will be contentious and they are to be submitted to the House by the Minister within five days. There will probably never be a request that those that are minor or somewhat innocuous be referred to the appropriate standing committee for debate.

It can be safely assumed, however, that there will be many regulations of a very serious and complex nature that cannot be grasped quickly and so will require the attention of Members both in the standing committee and in the House. We submit that it is only fair that an equivalent number of Members of Parliament as members of the other place can make a request in writing.

I will not go into any criticism of members of the other place except to say that it seems to me and to this Party that Members of the House of Commons have the greatest responsibility to go into these matters because every day they have to face the people who sent them here and give an accounting of what they are doing. Certainly Members from western Canada will be called upon to explain the regulations put forward by the Minister if this legislation should ever pass.

With regard to Motion No. 48, the Bill asks for a one-hour debate consisting of ten-minute speeches in the House. We can all see of course that some complicated, serious and important regulations will need more than one hour of debate. The limit of one hour of debate with ten-minute speeches is a sort of legislated closure—it legislates time allocation in advance. I thought that the proper place for that was in the Standing Orders of the House of Commons and not in a piece of legislation. The three sitting days proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville is reasonable; it is not extreme and often three sitting days may not be required.

Motion No. 49 standing in my name leaves the matter open. It may require debate for a few hours, for a whole day, for two days, three days or even five days, although I cannot see it going beyond that. If there is a collection of regulations, some of which Members want an opportunity to debate, one hour on each is totally inadequate. As I submitted earlier, on a minor regulation there would probably be no request in writing that it be referred to committee. I believe that should be done automatically. Where there are contentious regulations, and when those committees report back to the House, the opportunity should be there for the House to debate those regulations fully. It will be debating a report of the committee, but that report will contain all the regulations which the committee dealt with. Some of the more complex regulations will require individual attention, certainly for more than an hour.

We believe this time allocation in advance with respect to an area such as this is totally inappropriate and we would urge that the Government reconsider and accept our Motion No. 47. It is not a motion which is going to do any violence to the legislation which the Government wants passed. It certainly would be more fair to Hon. Members of the House of Commons that we be treated equally in the matter of numbers with the other place.

Secondly, the Government must surely agree that limiting debate on such regulations to one hour is unfair. There might be the odd minor regulation for which an hour would be sufficient; indeed, an hour might not even be used up. However, there will be other regulations, Mr. Speaker, which will require lengthy debate, because when those regulations are being dealt with by a standing committee of the House, there will be representations from one or even all of the system participants affected under the legislation. There would be representations from governmental bodies which are not, strictly speaking, a system participant but are affected by the regulations. If a regulation allowing some kind of variable rate system in a specific area jeopardizes the existence of some branch lines, you can be certain, Mr. Speaker, that the municipalities in that area will want to be heard and the provincial Government will want to be heard. They can be heard before the committee if the committee will agree to call witnesses, if the committee is authorized to call witnesses, and the committee should be authorized to do so. However, once that stage has been completed, then the House requires more than an hour on those kinds of contentious regulations in order to debate their efficacy and whether or not they should be changed or amended. The House should be able to decide this and certainly it should have more than an hour to deal with a piece of legislation which is of major importance to western Canada.

I hope, Sir, that the Government will agree to accept these motions. It is agrees to accept Motions Nos. 47 and 48, for example, I am sure the debate can be relatively short. This would help. I hope that the Minister will carry through on his first meeting before the committee with his expressed desire to co-operate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. The Hon. Member may continue with unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak to the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and to commend him on his foresight in proposing the adoption of this amendment to the House. I hope Government Members opposite will pay attention to this particular amendment because I believe it is crucial to the future of grain transportation and other product transportation in western Canada.

It is wise, I believe, to track through this entire piece of legislation to see what brings us to this particular amendment. What we have before us is a piece of legislation which is trying to help Canadians look into the future to see how best to regulate and encourage the railway system to become more effective and efficient, and to enable Canada as a nation to better our capacity to deliver our export products on time and at a reasonable price.

Mixed in with that, Mr. Speaker, is the notion that a Cabinet of this House of Commons shall decide regulatory matters. Built into the proposed law, Mr. Speaker, is a principle whereby 10 per cent of the Members of this House of Commons can petition the House to have a one-hour debate on a particular regulation. Is a one-hour debate reasonable, Mr. Speaker? I suggest that it is the firmly held view of Members of the Conservative Party of Canada and Hon. Members of this House that a one-hour debate is simply not reasonable. We are not dealing here with something which is simple to discuss, nor are we dealing with regulations which will have very little impact on the lives of Canadians. We are dealing with regulations which will have an enormous impact on the lives of Canadians, particularly those in western Canada.

If one looks at the current constitution of the federal Cabinet, Mr. Speaker, it is wise to note, I believe, that there is not a single elected Member west of the Manitoba border. There is only one elected Member from the Province of Manitoba. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, there is simply the one voice of one Member in the Cabinet of Canada who is accountable to the electors of western Canada. That Hon. Member is city born and, perhaps, more attuned to eastern Canada. With respect to his past performance over four years, it is hard for me to distinguish him from someone who was born and raised in the City of Toronto in terms of his attitude.

Is it reasonable, Mr. Speaker, for that very, very busy group of people who constitute the Cabinet of Canada, those 37 individuals of whom only one is accountable to the voters of western Canada, to make decisions which so profoundly affect the lives of western Canadians? Is it reasonable to provide in this piece of legislation the possibility for only one hour of debate in this Chamber on a regulation which might have the impact of bankrupting 100 per cent of the agricultural producers in western Canada, or 2 per cent, or 10 per cent, or 50 per cent? The only protection which those producers in western Canada would have through their elected representatives is the possibility of a one-hour debate in this Chamber. We know, Mr. Speaker, what happens to one-hour debates in this Chamber. The Government uses its majority to use up 30 minutes of the 60 minutes and we are left with the possibility of only 30 minutes worth of time for the elected representatives from western Canada to be heard about a regulation which has the potential to make life very difficult for producers.

I am not suggesting, Mr. Speaker, that the Cabinet of Canada would promulgate a regulation of that kind if it had knowledge of the potential impacts of that regulation. However, I do suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that given the busy nature of Cabinet Ministers and the fact that we will occasionally have Parliaments which are heavily weighted to other regions of the country, where there is only one elected voice from western Canada sitting in the Cabinet, the odds of that Cabinet inadvertently making a decision which would have a profound, long-term, negative impact on the economy of western Canada are very, very high.

It is a wise Government, Mr. Speaker, and it would be a wise group of Government backbenchers, which would look closely at Motion No. 48. It protects the Government against itself. It protects a busy group of Cabinet Ministers from making a tragic mistake in regulations which would cause them considerable grief over time because it would cause large numbers of Canadians considerable grief over time.

What we are saying to the Government, Mr. Speaker, is that when 10 per cent of the Members of this Chamber petition this House to debate a proposed regulation, then give the elected representatives an adequate amount of time to represent their constituents and inform the Government and Cabinet about the potential negative impact of any proposed regulation on the economy and the farmers of western Canada.

The only reason I can see for the Government insisting on the one-hour limit is stubbornness, a declaration to the Canadian people that the Government and Cabinet of Canada is not willing to learn about the potential impact of a proposed regulation. Why else would the Government insist on restricting Opposition voices to 30 minutes on an issue which might involve hundreds of millions of dollars and affect hundreds of thousands of Canadians? These regulations could affect Canadians' lifestyle today and their future retirement. Surely those kinds of very important considerations deserve up to three days of the time of this Chamber solely for the purpose of allowing elected representatives to bring to the attention of the Government that by supporting a particular regulation at a particular point in time the Government is in danger of making a tragic mistake.

Thirty minutes or even 60 minutes is not sufficient time to deal with the kinds of complex issues existing in Bill C-155 and the regulatory powers therein. Three days is not a great deal of time but in our view it would be sufficient. The Government would be free to make its mistake but it would do so with knowledge rather than with ignorance. I urge Members opposite to support the Hon. Member for Vegreville and vote yes for the adoption of the amendment under Motion No. 48.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak briefly to Motion No. 48 and in so doing, since the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) talked about the prospects of several regulations being debated as a group, I thought it should be pointed out that Clause 24(1) of the Bill provides:

> A regulation made under subsection 21(1) shall be laid before each House of Parliament within fifteen sitting days after it is made.
> (2) Within five sitting days after a regulation referred to in Subsection (1) is laid before either House of Parliament, a motion to the effect that the regulation be confirmed, signed by a Minister of the Crown, shall be filed with the Speaker.

The word "shall" was incorporated in the committee hearings. Then we get into Clause 25(1) which provides:

> A motion filed under section 24 shall be taken up and considered by the Senate or House of Commons, as the case may be, within five sitting days after the filing of the motion.

Then this is where Motion No. 48 standing under my name comes into effect. Clause 25(2) provides:

> A motion taken up and considered in accordance with Subsection (1) shall be debated without interruption for not more than one hour, during which time no Senator or Member may speak for more than ten minutes—

I think when the Hon. Member for Regina West was speaking to this group of motions he indicated that this motion was reasonable. I would have to agree with him. I think it is a fair compromise. His argument for the open-endedness of this particular provision is that his motion would not provide any time limit. In general I agree with that, but we are really not dealing with legislation here, we are dealing with a regulation. The provision in this Bill for the possible debate of a regulation is something not often found in legislation. So it is a step in the right direction.

While I have no argument with the hon. Member's Motion No. 49, I thought that because we were dealing here with a specific regulation, not a group of regulations, three days was certainly a lot better than one hour. I think the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) elaborated on that very well.

In this Bill putting a great deal of latitude and discretionary power in the hands of a number of people, particularly the Administrator and others charged with the responsibility of administering the grain handling and transportation system. In the course of our deliberations we tried to incorporate as many of the players as possible, particularly the producer; but the bottom line is that sooner or later regulations will have to be made and this provision is, in principle, a commendable check and balance which I certainly support and agree with. However, having said that, the Government certainly should provide sufficient latitude to do the job well.

In my humble opinion, to debate a controversial regulation in one hour certainly does not fit the Bill. My view is that non-controversial regulations would naturally not be brought before the House for debate; but clearly if one is important enough to be brought before either House for debate, there should be sufficient latitude and provision for debate to take place in full. Perhaps three days is not enough, but it is a happy compromise and, I think, reasonable. So I hope Government Members seriously look at Motion No. 48. It goes some way in alleviating some of the concerns which could crop up, and I concur wholeheartedly with the comments made by my colleague from Calgary West. As one who is not happy with any kind of allocation or predetermined time limit, I think we have gone some way in meeting an objective of fairness and reasonableness and I commend Motion No. 48 to the House for support.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 47 and 49 (Mr. Benjamin) and Motion No. 48 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, thank you for allowing me the opportunity to shed some light on the issue that is before us today, Bill C-155 and its various proposed amendments. In order to shed some light on this issue, I propose to read some brief quotations from that Canadian lady poet of great renown, Pauline Johnson.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I hope these quotations are relevant to the amendments before the House.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, they are not only very relevant but they are also very brief and read as follows:

What saw you in your flight to day,
Crows, awinging your homeward way?
Went you far in carrion quest,
Crows, that worry the sunless west?

Now, Sir, I shall read the final stanza that deals specifically with the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and his Liberal cabinet colleagues:

Thieves and villains, you shameless things!
Black your record as black your wings.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that these three motions have been grouped for debate because they all pertain to regulations regarding performance objectives and awards and sanctions. I believe that what we have just heard demonstrates why specific time limits have been put in this Bill. It demonstrates why the one-day debate—

An Hon. Member: One hour.

Mr. Flis: It demonstrates why there is a one-hour debate on the Bill rather than a three-day debate.

Let me turn to some of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) dealing with his Motion No. 47. He seems to be very concerned about the requirement for 30 Members giving notice. He wants to reduce this to 15 Members. I do not know what his concern is unless it is that after the next election his Party will not have 30 Members in the House, but will only have 15. We do not have that concern, Mr. Speaker.

When we are asking for 15 Senators out of 100 to give notice, it mean only 15 per cent of the Senators must give notice. I think we should keep the number of Members of the House involved at about the same percentage. We are dealing with about 10 per cent of the Members or more when 30 Members give notice, versus 5 per cent when 15 would give notice. I do not think that 5 per cent of the Members of the House should get up and filibuster as they are now, Mr. Speaker. That is what this motion is trying to prevent. It is trying to prevent a minority group from getting up in the House and filibustering and wasting 12 sitting days of the House.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary would like to correct an earlier comment that he made. He may have inadvertently said that this provision allows for a one-day debate when in fact it allows for a one-hour debate.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I purposely said one day to see if Hon. Members opposite are listening. I am very pleased to see that they are listening.

Next, Mr. Speaker, I would like to rebut some of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes). The Hon. Member for Calgary West offended all of the parliamentary standing committees of the House of Commons when he spoke, because what he failed to realize was that these suggested regulations would be debated for 30 days in committee. He went on and on about how there is only one representative in Cabinet. Well, what he is saying is that he is incompetent and that the representatives from the West cannot represent the wishes of their constituents in the committee. If he was doing his job, Mr. Speaker, surely he could represent the wishes of his constituents in 30 days.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary is implying that Cabinet members sit in on committee.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that Cabinet members like the Minister can be called before the committee, as was done in the debate on Bill C-155. I wish the Hon. Member would learn his parliamentary procedures, Mr. Speaker.

We feel that after debating something for 30 days in committee, we really do not need more than one hour in the House to pass what the committee approves. If there is great dispute within committee, surely it will not be resolved in three days in the House as suggested by the motion moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). Again, Mr. Speaker, we on this side do not see the need for Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49, and we will be voting against them.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate being afforded the opportunity to speak on Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49 because these motions give us a good insight into the value the Government places on the House of Commons when arriving at adequate decisions regarding this particular Bill or any other Bill.

First, Motion No. 47 deals with the ratio of 15 Senators to 30 Members of the House of Commons. Our motion suggests that the ratio should be 15 Senators to 15 Members, the implication being that 15 Members are of as equal value as 15 Senators. I am not sure of the need for the involvement of the other place at all because the matter must still come to Parliament.

Motions Nos. 48 and 49 deal with the accountability of the Administrator to the Parliament of Canada and in that way are very important. Just to give you some idea of the kind of concern we are expressing by moving this particular motion, Mr. Speaker, I must mention that during the committee hearings a question was asked of an official of the Department of Transport as to why this particular kind of clause should be included in the Bill. The answer to that question given by the official of the Department of Transport can give us some idea of the importance of having the situation debated by the House of Commons. Mr. Lefebvre answered the question put by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) by saying:

> This idea emerged while discussing this scheme and when the industry people did not have some specific ideas as to how it would work. It crossed our minds that it was a very substantial power to give to the Governor in Council or to the Minister or to the Administrator, because it can impose some awards and sanctions on private parties, if you wish. Since it was to affect the rights and obligations of citizens under the law, it was felt better if Parliament had a good look at this.

As far as Liberal Members are concerned, Parliament can take a good look at something in one hour. I think that—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LEBANON—BOMBING FATALITIES SUFFERED BY UNITED STATES AND FRENCH FORCES

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, I hope that I speak for all Members in this House when I say that words are inadequate to express the feeling of horror and dismay that surged through all of us over the weekend on learning of the savage and unprovoked slaughter that occurred in Lebanon during which upwards of 200 American and French servicemen died in their sleep under the rubble of buildings that were heartlessly demolished in a sneak attack on their barracks.

The American, British, French, and Italian forces are in Lebanon for one purpose only, namely, to provide negotiating time so that the contending forces in that war-weary and faction ridden country can work out their differences and produce a durable solution.

That shameless, senseless, and subhuman attack can only set that process back. Those responsible will have to bear the total burden for their iniquitous behaviour in destroying defenceless men, because they will inevitably call down on themselves the retribution they so richly deserve. I think that this House will want to send its condolences to the families of those victims.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

LABOUR CONDITIONS

LAY-OFFS AT DOMINION BRIDGE PLANT IN WINNIPEG

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak on a serious matter of loss of jobs at the Dominion Bridge plant in Winnipeg. This plant laid off another 65 workers in mid October. This western plant has manpower facilities, capacity, ability and experience to fulfil transmission tower line construction contracts abroad.

Several weeks ago Dominion Bridge of Winnipeg submitted the lowest of four Canadian tenders on a $7.5 million transmission line project in Pakistan under our CIDA program. As soon as the contract is awarded, many of the laid-off workers would be eligible for recall as this project is expected to provide 65 man-years of work. I urge the Minister responsible to expedite the approval and signing of this contract without further delay.

MULTICULTURALISM

CLOSING OF NATIVE FRIENDSHIP CENTRES

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, today the doors of Native Friendship Centres from coast to coast are closed to protest delay in delivery of funding for the new Native Friendship Centre Program which was approved by Cabinet on May 13, 1983. In front of 60 Friendship Centre representatives in Vancouver on May 29 of this year, the Secretary of State announced that the new program would come into effect April 1, 1983, and would run for five years.

The present Native Friendship Centre Program encompasses a network of 84 Friendship Centres, six developing centres, their provincial and territorial associations, as well as a national office. This well thought out and excellent Program is designed to improve the quality of life for native people in an urban environment, and it provides such services as employment counselling, legal information, emergency shelter, youth programs, alcohol counselling, family counselling, and others.

The delay in delivery of this negotiated program has caused centres to incur thousands of dollars in bank interest charges and has brought many to the brink of financial collapse. The success of Friendship Centres in assisting native people to adjust to mainstream society is recognized by all levels, including Cabinet. Therefore it is unacceptable that the Government should now go back on its word and jeopardize this most worth-while program. Funding, as promised, should be provided immediately.

NEED FOR AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC ON PROMOTION OF SKI REGIONS

Mr. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Madam Speaker, I am rising under the provisions of Standing Order 21 to launch an appeal for action by the House of Commons.

Last Friday, the Quebec Minister of Hunting and Tourism announced his negotiating position with respect to reviving this industry in Quebec. He said that $20 million was available to eight major centres for the purpose of improving downhill skiing facilities. I also found out that last Friday, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) and the Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Johnston) attended a federal-provincial meeting, and that this item was on the agenda. In the Eastern Townships, which have four major centres, namely, Orford, Sutton, Owl's Head and Bromont, an agreement of this kind would provide the desired industrial diversification to help former workers in the textile, clothing and footwear industries. Since more than 2,000 jobs will be created in this way, it is extremely important to have this agreement finalized as soon as possible.

UNITED NATIONS

ORGANIZATION'S AIMS AND PRINCIPLES

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, today is United Nations Day. We would do well to remember the purpose of the United Nations which was set up to create a system for the maintenance of international peace and security. To that end a set of principles was drafted for the conduct of states. Chief among those principles is the commitment not to use force in international affairs, and not to interfere in other states' domestic affairs. Those principles are as valid today as they were when the UN Charter was drafted in 1945.

But we need only look around us to recognize that every citizen of every nation must redouble their efforts in support of those principles. Today, there are some 45 states, one out of every four nations, at war. More than four million soldiers are directly involved in those wars, and between one million and five million people have been killed in them. Today we should be mindful of that.

We should also be mindful of the threat to international security posed by the rising tide of terrorism. Yesterday's senseless bombing in Beirut, which has now claimed more than 170 American lives and more than 40 French troops, all assigned to Lebanon on so-called peacekeeping missions, is only the most recent and most graphic example. Our condemnation of terrorism must extend to the attacks on Corinto and Puerto Sandino in Nicaragua, it must extend to South Africa's raid on Maputo, Mozambique, and to the senseless attack in Chandighar, India, last week which claimed 16 civilian lives.

As parliamentarians we must do more than deplore senseless acts of terrorism. We must recommit ourselves to the vital goals set down in the United Nations Charter—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—SELLING PRICE OF LICENCES

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, my statement today will be quite different, in that I wish to correct an error made in my statement of Thursday, October 20. At that time I indicated that the selling price of the licences of Maislin Transport was, in my words, "a pittance". I was incorrect.

The price being paid for the licences is in fact well above their value. The point is that, because of generous tax allowances, the U.S. trucking company is able to move into Canada and pick up these valuable concessions in a manner not open to Canadians. In addition, because of the heavy handed manner of the major bank involved, employees have been told that they will receive less if the deal is not approved. It is interesting that the bank will recoup nearly all its funds, while small companies are unprotected.

I support the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce on his decision to send this matter to FIRA. It is the least that can be done under the circumstances, circumstances that once again point out the flagrant way the Government regularly wastes taxpayers' money on deals for its friends, with no thought for Canadian workers or small business.

SOVIET INDUCED FAMINE—SUGGESTED INVESTIGATION

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, it is now 50 years since the first recorded holocaust in the history of mankind, and the largest holocaust of this century. It preceded the Jewish holocaust by some ten years, and was possibly its precursor.

To those who survived it, it is known as "the great famine", or "the great artificial, man-made famine". Between 1932 and 1933 some six million to ten million Ukrainians in the rurai areas of the Ukrainian-Soviet Socialist Republic were systematically starved to death. Those responsible for this crime were never brought to justice, and the Soviet Government has done everything in its power to remove any evidence relating to this horrifying deed.

On behalf of those Canadians of Ukrainian origin and, indeed, on behalf of all Canadians, I urge the Government of Canada to propose a General Assembly resolution at the United Nations calling for an independent inquiry to determine who was responsible for the holocaust.

To date, based on the studies mostly of Ukrainian scholars, survivors, their relatives, and on a few reports of correspondents of the time, the Soviet Government of that era is the obvious prime suspect. Crimes of such magnitude against humanity must be investigated by judicial bodies of international stature to establish legal identification of the perpetrators. Only then could public opinion in free nations be harnessed to strengthen further human rights legislation and its enforcement to prevent further such horrendous crimes.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

SUPPORT FOR REINSTATEMENT

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, invididuals charged and convicted of brutal murder have been released on parole and have subsequently been charged with committing other crimes. I do not want to dwell on the specifics of any case, but I want all of us to think about our families, our children, and the citizens of the country, and wonder how much protection innocent Canadians really have.

I am an advocate of capital punishment to protect the innocent. I know capital punishment is not the sole answer to resolving the weaknesses in our justice system, but it is a major step toward protecting the innocent. I know it is difficult for some Hon. Members to accept that capital punishment is a deterrent to those warped humans who kill in cold blood. It is hard to understand what goes on in the minds of cold-blooded killers. However, I know, after being a police officer for six years, that with the reintroduction of capital punishment convicted murderers will not murder again.

The people of my riding have seen more than their fair share of brutal crime, and they speak with one mind on the issue of capital punishment. The majority of the people of Mission-Port Moody want to see the reintroduction of capital punishment for convicted first degree murderers. We, as lawmakers of the country, should heed this call.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

LEVEL OF WORLD MILITARY SPENDING

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, my statement follows on an earlier one made by the Hon. Member for Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Sargeant). I am concerned that the Canadian Government, by testing the Cruise missile, is directly contributing to an already too expensive nuclear arms race, which in turn is contributing to the general economic decline affecting all nations of the world. At a time when peace is desired by so many, too much money is being spent on armed conflict and in the preparation of defence against future armed conflict. This weekend 1.5 million concerned Europeans and North Americans protested the deployment of the Cruise and Pershing II missiles, and the further escalation of the arms race throughout the world.

The global obsession with weapons and military might has resulted in total military budgets throughout the world of more than $550 billion per year, about $100 billion of which is spent on the growing stockpile of nuclear weapons. The world's military budget equals the annual income of $1.8 billion people in the 36 poorest countries. If the world's nuclear arsenal were reduced by only one-half, it would free up $50 billion a year to tackle some of the social and economic problems facing the world.

The social, economic, and security costs of the arms race are too high. The Canadian Government must be doing more to stop the arms race, not fuel it. We begin that path to peace by first refusing to test the Cruise—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

TOURISM

EFFECT OF ALCOHOL TAXES

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Madam Speaker, on Thursday of last week in my riding we held a tourism day in which 100 individuals from a 450-mile radius participated. We felt it was a very worth-while day. Recently the Government budgeted another $7.4 million to tourism advertising in addition to the $31.9 million already budgeted, but on the other hand the Government has increased by 13 per cent the tax on alcohol. As the President of the Metro Toronto Hotel Association said, "The Government has taxed the product so much that we can't sell it". As a Member who comes from an area where tourism is important, I say to Hon. Members opposite, "Please don't tax the tourism industry any more".

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—MARXIST POWER SEIZURE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Of course he will be aware of events in the Caribbean over the weekend, including a meeting of Caribbean leaders to deal with the murderous take-over in Grenada. The leaders of the Caribbean nations suspended trade and commercial arrangements, among other activities, with the extreme Marxist group which has seized power in Grenada. Given the role of Canada as the leading Commonwealth member in this hemisphere, is it the intention of the Government of Canada to follow suit in pursuit of this objective?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, at this time I cannot add much to what was said by the Minister of State for External Relations on Friday. We are looking at the reactions of the countries of the area, and we are assessing our future policy. To my knowledge none has been communicated to me this morning, but I would sit, in deference to the Hon. Minister of State, if there is some further point he can make.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON RECOGNITION OF NEW REGIME

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, one of the most startling things that has been said in regard to external relations for a long time was stated by the Minister last week when he indicated that Canada would recognize the new Government after a reasonable, decent period of time. In other words, no matter what transpired down there, no matter how heinous the activities, we were just going to close our eyes for a while, irrespective of the manner in which the new government seized power, and things would be fine by and by. They are not fine. They are getting worse day by day.

In light of this, and because of the strategic importance to Canada and the United States of developments down there, I ask the Prime Minister whether that bizarre statement by the Minister indeed reflects government policy on the one hand. On the other hand, what assurance can he give that officials, people in Canada on student visas, and those who are seeking landed immigrant status, will be given every right and permission to remain in Canada until such time as the situation is clearly normalized down there?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I was not in the House on Friday, but I had occasion to read the answers of the Minister of State for External Relations. It seems that the Leader of the Opposition is doing him some injustice in saying that, no matter what, we would recognize that government in a matter of time. For instance, as reported at page 28199 of Hansard, the Minister said:

> We need to find out what the relations will be between the government in question and neighbouring governments, and what the reality of the administration exercised by that government will be.

On the following pages of Hansard, in answer to other Hon. Members, he repeated the same statement and seemed to be qualifying rather considerably the unfortunate misquotation of the Leader of the Opposition. I think the Minister gave a perfectly reasonable answer. We want to assess the situation. We will be influenced by other Commonwealth and Caribbean countries in the area, which presumably know more about the situation because they are closer. I have just heard from the Minister that the Department is in the process of undertaking those assessments and consultations.

In so far as the latter part of the question is concerned, I cannot give a theoretical answer. I do not know how many Grenadians are in Canada, nor what are their backgrounds and conditions. Perhaps some should be given permission to stay; perhaps some should not. I think we would have to examine each case individually.

Mr. Mulroney: That is absolutely remarkable. I hoped that he would immediately say that all Grenadians would be allowed to remain in Canada until the situation is clarified, and that they will not be forced to go back there.

REQUEST THAT GRENADIANS BE PERMITTED TO REMAIN IN CANADA

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, there was no misquotation by me whatsoever. It was a very clear statement by the Minister to the effect that it was the intention of the Government of Canada to recognize the new Government "after a reasonable, decent period of time". That was the statement of the duly authorized representative of the Government of Canada.

In light of this, will the Prime Minister give the House a formal guarantee that all Grenadians presently in Canada, for the reasons that I mentioned, will be allowed to stay here, and that no pressure of any kind, directly or otherwise, by Immigration Canada or anyone else will be brought to bear on them, so that they can remain here until the matter is fully resolved to the satisfaction not only of the Government but of all Members of the House of Commons?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am somewhat astonished that the Leader of the Opposition would insist on being so absolute about this. He repeats "all Grenadians". That was his first question, "all Grenadians". How do I know if there are not some Grenadians in the group who should be sent back? Maybe there are some who are in cahoots with the Marxists there, who helped in some way. I do not know. Surely it would be irresponsible for me to give to the Leader of the Opposition the guarantee he asks of me, and for which he gets applause.

SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS IN GRENADA

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. As there is grave concern for many Canadians who are on the island, will the Prime Minister indicate specifically what steps have been taken to ensure the safety of these Canadians and, specifically, have all Canadians who wish to leave now been removed from this island?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I will try to answer this question. We now have a plane ready to go. The regional group which met during the weekend stopped all air and sea links. I do not know the value of that decision. It is supposed to be unanimous, but it was only a majority decision. Be that as it may, we now have a plane ready to go, as I already said. We have obtained clearance from the CARICOM group. We now have clearance to take off from Barbados. We have clearance from Grenada to land, in principle anyway. We hope that later today, or tomorrow, the plane will pick up those Canadians who have expressed the wish to return. To be specific, there are apparently 24 of them.

REQUEST THAT AID TO GRENADA BE SUSPENDED

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the Prime Minister who, as we know, quoted from his Secretary of State for External Relations today. He referred to the fact that the Secretary of State for External Relations made reference to neighbouring condemnation as far as the situation in Grenada is concerned. In view of the fact that the majority of those neighbouring nations have, in no uncertain terms, condemned what has taken place in Grenada, will the Prime Minister state that there will in fact be a suspension of Canada's aid to that island until there is at least a reputable Government in power, bearing in mind that that area, on a per capita basis, receives one of the highest amounts in aid that Canada gives to any country in the area?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I would have to verify to see whether that figure is correct. When the Hon. Member says one of the highest amounts of aid, I suppose that could put it tenth or twentieth in ranking, knowing the Hon. Member's way of thinking. From memory, I know that there are several countries which receive a higher amount of aid per capita than Grenada.

The Hon. Member refers to the Minister's statement on Friday. I have it here at page 28200 of Hansard, "Indeed, we will consult with the Governments of different West Indies islands". We are in the process of doing so. I know for a fact that even Mr. Bishop's Government, which is now regretted by some of these leaders and which, I understand, is even regretted by members of the Official Opposition, was one with which we did not decide to cut all ties. We said "Well, at least he is there; he is a member of the Commonwealth." I remember telling the Leader of the New Democratic Party that we were hoping that he would have elections soon. I had raised the matter with Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, indicating that we hoped he would have elections soon. It was not the Government with which we had cut ties. It was a Government which was practically put in quarantine by several other countries which are now beginning to say that maybe we were better off with Bishop than we are with this new crew. That is why this Government does not act as hastily, and does not shoot from the hip as the Hon. Member is accustomed to doing.

We look at the situation and we study it before making condemnations, realizing that some people are worse than others, and we are better, once again, with those who are half way than with those who have gone the whole way towards revolution and murder.

DISARMAMENT

DEPLOYMENT OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS IN EUROPE—ISSUE OF FRENCH AND BRITISH MISSILES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. On the weekend millions of people around the world were demonstrating for the cause of peace, particularly the cause of disarmament, concerned about the apparent deadlock that exists in the talks between the superpowers.

Last April I asked the Prime Minister if he thought any reasonable calculation of the balance of forces between the two great nuclear powers should include the French and British missiles. At that time the Prime Minister dismissed the question. Since then a number of European leaders, a number of former NATO generals, and Canadian Admiral Falls have said that the French and British nuclear missiles should be included in such calculations as a means of making a constructive proposal that could lead to some kind of settlement. Has the Prime Minister rethought this matter, and will he now agree that the French and British missiles should be included?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member asks if I have rethought the matter. I do not want to sound immodest, but I have been thinking of it for quite a few months. When he suggests that I dismissed his suggestion, I think the expression is perhaps incorrect. I do not remember the exact exchange, but even those who listened to rumours at Williamsburg will know that the question of counting the French and English missiles, at some point, in some way in some talks, is not unreasonable. I have said that on various occasions. Therefore, I am not dismissing it out of hand. I have not dismissed it. It is a very complex negotiation.

When we are talking of the INF negotiations in Geneva, I do not think it is right to contemplate including the British and the French systems, because they are strategic systems. They are not theatre, or they are not intermediate nuclear forces. They are considered by those sovereign nations as strategic forces and, therefore, the solution might be to count them at some point in the START talks but not in the INF talks.

I cannot speak for France or Britain. I do not want, as a NATO ally, to state any position which would not be agreed to by them. I know that for the point of view of the Germans, for instance, they cannot count on the French or the British nuclear arms because they are strategic arms used by those countries to protect their sovereignty. The Germans, who have no nuclear arms under their total control, have to count on the Americans.

It is not unreasonable for the Americans to say, "Well, we should have as much as the Soviets." If the Soviets say, "We must put the American, British and French in the same basket and we Soviets have equal to that total", then obviously that is a way for the Soviet Union to state that it must have absolute superiority over the United States. I do not think that even my hon. friend would want that to happen. Therefore, it is somewhat complex to make a bland statement about the French and British missiles.

DISCUSSIONS AT WILLIAMSBURG SUMMIT MEETING

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister seemed to come down again on both sides of the street in this admittedly complex issue. As he knows, the largest mass based democratic party in western Europe, namely, the SPD in Germany, which to some extent can be regarded as the author of the two-track policy which the Prime Minister has given a lot of support to, is now, with its leader, clearly saying publicly, as are Canadians and Americans of some distinction, with considerable expertise in this field, that there ought to be such a calculation that takes into account the French and British missiles.

I would like to ask the Prime Minister to be a little more declaratory here today. He said there were rumours coming out of Williamsburg. He is usually the first to dismiss rumours. Would he now tell us if in the discussions that took place with President Reagan in particular he put forward, on the part of Canada, a package that included the counting of the French and British missiles? If he did not, why did he not?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Member has accused me of being vague and being on both sides of the street. I noted his words, "such a calculation", which would include the French and the British. If he reads my previous answer he will see that there are some circumstances where "such a calculation" would be possible, but there are other ways in which it would not be possible if we intend to include them in the INF talks. I do not think that is coming down on both sides of the street; that is making a difference between INF and START. The Hon. Member, by using these words "such a calculation", put himself squarely on both sides of the street. I would like to know what he means by "such a calculation"?

Mr. Broadbent: If the Prime Minister from time to time would participate in the debates on disarmament in this House we would all learn very well where the Government stands. He should just do that, once in this House.

REQUEST THAT AMBASSADOR FOR DISARMAMENT BE APPOINTED

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, as a final question to the Prime Minister I would like to ask him, considering the importance of disarmament, and considering that we have not had an ambassador for disarmament, not for one, two or three months, but for many months, when will he be announcing the replacement for that position so that the commitment that he has made publicly to take disarmament very seriously will in fact be fought out in public forums, including the United Nations, by a Canadian ambassador appointed for that job.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is rather churlish in suggesting that I do not participate in debate. We are having one now in this Question Period. He asked me a question and I answered it. I asked him a question and he fluffed it, Madam Speaker. He does not know what he means by "such a calculation". In so far as the ambassador is concerned, Madam Speaker, we are considering the matter.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—IMPACT OF AEROSPACE POLICY

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. The Minister responsible for Canadair has indicated that any future decisions regarding further financial assistance to Canadair will be taken within the context of an aerospace policy of the Government. Would the Minister indicate to the House whether that aerospace policy is under way, and when will it be issued to the public for debate?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, the aerospace strategy is an ongoing process. This is one of the reasons we have decided to invest some money with the private sector in the Bell helicopter project. With respect to the specific strategy for Canadair and de Havilland, the Minister responsible for both of those Crown corporations has indicated he will be bringing that forward in the very near future and he will be going to the parliamentary committee, as the Prime Minister has indicated on several occasions, with respect to the role of Canadair and de Havilland in the over-all aerospace sector in Canada.

FUNDING OF CORPORATION

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Since the request for future funding of Canadair is probably going to amount to some hundreds of millions of dollars—there was a report the other day that suggested it might be as high as $400 million—will the Prime Minister commit to this House that no further request for funds will be made until we have had a chance to see this aerospace policy from the Government? Also, will the Prime Minister instruct Canadair not to take any action which will cause these moneys to be spent in anticipation of funding approvals to be received from the Government and to make the position of this Parliament totally irrelevant?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I may remind the Hon. Member that the Minister responsible for Canadair and de Havilland made an exhaustive report to the Standing Committees of the House on the specific situations in these corporations.

The Hon. Member will also recall that a decision to provide additional funding for Canadair will depend on an assessment of the Corporation's viability and especially of the Challenger aircraft which is now showing very good signs of being viable.

[English]

APPOINTMENT OF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of National Revenue. Four and one-half months ago the Minister in the other place, responsible for Canadair, stated that a new executive officer was going to be recruited to run Canadair. In view of the importance of the aerospace industry to Canada and the magnitude of the problems of Canadair, can the Minister tell the House when that appointment will be made?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I shall ask the Minister responsible about this, and I shall then be happy to answer the Hon. Member's question.

[English]

APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL DIRECTORS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, at the same time I wonder if the Minister might address himself to this problem. Four and one-half months ago the same Minister made a commitment to make additional appointments to the board of directors of Canadair to strengthen its input into the activities of the company. Once again, in view of the importance of the aerospace industry to Canada and the magnitude of the problems of Canadair, when will the Minister commit to this House to appoint to the board of directors the people the Minister refers to as having experience in the aerospace industry?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I am surprised at the Hon. Member's question and his wanting to appoint more people to Canadair's board of directors, since on the opposite side of the House, Hon. Members often worry about there being too many people at the top in our Crown corporations. By establishing the Canada Development Investment Corporation, the Government has tried to provide for better management of corporations like Canadair and de Havilland, and that is already a considerable improvement. However, I do not think the Hon. Member's suggestion to increase the number of directors will provide a solution to Canadair's problems.

INCOME TAX

REASSESSMENT OF FARMERS' INCOME—ISSUANCE OF SUBPOENAS FOR AUDITORS

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, my question too is for the Minister of National Revenue, and it concerns Section 31 of the Income Tax Act. A number of farmers who have been audited and reassessed under Section 31 are planning to go before the tax court of Canada. In this forum they have the right to subpoena information and witnesses. Can these farmers subpoena the individual auditors from Revenue Canada whose very lack of agricultural knowledge has in many cases forced these farmers to the brink of financial ruin?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, people who go to court may call any witness they wish. As far as the Hon. Member's comment on local auditors is concerned, these are experienced people who do their work using their knowledge of the Income Tax Act and its applications.

[English]

APPEARANCE OF AUDITORS BEFORE COURTS

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, I make just one comment. Some of those auditors do not know the difference between a horse and a cow, as far as I am concerned.

Would the Minister please inform or instruct the various divisions of the audit department that these auditors indeed do have to appear before the tax court, because they are telling people in my riding that under law they do not have to appear?

An Hon. Member: The horse is the taller one.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I feel that when people are called to testify in court, it is up to the court to subpoena witnesses, who will respond as they are asked to testify.

EMPLOYMENT

ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL PROGRAM TO FACILITATE ADMISSION OF CERTAIN IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Rémi Bujold (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In view of the concern of the Minister and the Government for job creation, has the Minister considered new ways of improving immigration procedures for business people, with a view to promoting economic growth? In this connection, has the Minister developed a special program that would facilitate the admission of immigrants whose business projects might help create jobs in Canada?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker.

[English]

It is true that we attach great importance to improving the entry of entrepreneurs into Canada. We intend to attach more importance to this than we have in the past. We have developed a whole variety of flexible procedures to encourage that to happen, including changed criteria and the positioning abroad of officers who will encourage this to happen. The details of this program will be announced later on today, or certainly later this week, and we hope to have this program in full operation by the beginning of next year.

DISARMAMENT

PROPOSED MORATORIUM ON DEPLOYMENT OF CRUISE AND PERSHING II MISSILES

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. He would know that there is a good deal of feeling everywhere in the world that the second part of the two-track position has not been given a good enough chance yet, and that there needs to be more negotiation at the INF talks in Geneva before deployment takes place. There is the proposal of the Prime Minister of Greece, for example, that there be a moratorium on deployment of the Cruise and Pershing II while further negotiations at the INF take place.

I wonder if the Prime Minister has had any correspondence or discussions with NATO ministers in recent months, apart from the big three, so to speak—the Prime Minister of the Netherlands, the new Prime Minister of Italy, the Prime Minister of Denmark and other NATO partners. Has he had any correspondence or discussions with them on the matter of postponing the deployment while talks continue at Geneva?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, in answering the second part of the question I will answer the first in part.

When I met Prime Minister Papandreou in Greece about a month and a half ago, the Hon. Member will recall that the Prime Minister had proposed such a six-month moratorium, and he asked me for my opinion on that. I indicated to him that I thought it would be wrong to propose a moratorium at this stage. After all, the Soviets had known since December, 1979, that the deadline was December 1983. I think it would not be conducive to conclusive negotiations in the weeks that remain if, suddenly, that pressure were lifted and if the moratorium brought us to some deadline in June because, as I asked Prime Minister Papandreou, what will happen in June if there is still no agreement? Will we then have another moratorium and, if not, why not? If we can go from moratorium to moratorium, then the deadline we set four years ago would be meaningless.

I think we must stick to this dealine and hope that the two superpowers will reach some conclusion in the short time remaining that will make deployment unnecessary.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, of course the Prime Minister will recall that one of the difficulties in getting the talks going was the new administration in the United States which waited for ten months before it even started thinking about it. Given that, it would seem to me advisable that one give a bit more time now that the negotiations have actually started.

NUCLEAR FREEZE RESOLUTION

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister if he is prepared to take the initiative and pursue this with other NATO Prime Ministers and, indeed, with Leaders of the Opposition as well, and look again at the Sweden-Mexico nuclear freeze resolution at the UN last Fall. Canada voted against the motion. It was one of 17 nations opposing that nuclear freeze resolution. Would the Prime Minister look at that again and tell the House whether Canada will be prepared to support that resolution? It will be coming forward again in a few weeks time at the UN.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, you realize that the question is hypothetical. If the matter comes forth again, I do not see why Canada should change its vote from last year. Our position last year was that the Soviets had modernized their equipment by replacing the SS-4 and the SS-5 with the SS-20. In 1979 we told the Soviets that we would be doing the same thing and replacing our armaments with more modern armaments. I do not see why we should freeze when, in that particular theatre, the Soviets have given themselves an advantage since 1970.

Miss Jewett: Read the resolution.

Oral Questions

INCOME TAX

DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF TORONTO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MUSICIANS

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Revenue. The Minister may know that for 61 years the musicians in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra have been considered to be self-employed artists for the purpose of taxes. Recently members of the Minister's Department have ruled that, from now on and, indeed, retroactive to January, 1983, such musicians are to be considered as employees of the Symphony. This is going to cost the musicians money, and is going to raise the expenses of the Symphony Orchestra. Since this situation does not obtain with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, for example, I should like to ask the Minister if he would give the undertaking that he will place a moratorium on that ruling, and meet with the principals involved?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, this is the second time in two weeks that Hon. Members are asking the Minister of National Revenue to declare a moratorium for a group of taxpayers. Last week, it was artists, today it is musicians. This could be an extremely dangerous practice. After two or three months we might get to the point where no one in Canada would be paying taxes. I can assure the Hon. Member that the recent ruling made by the Toronto District Office will be given careful study, but I must point out that the ruling was made in accordance with the provisions of the Act, that it makes a distinction between a person who is self-employed and a person who is employed by someone else, and that such rulings must be made in the light of our legislation and of rulings in similar cases across the country.

[English]

Mr. Crombie: Madam Speaker, I can assure the Minister of one thing. If he keeps on with these tax policies there are not going to be any artists in this country. I will be on my feet every day asking questions about these policies.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET MUSICIANS

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): Madam Speaker, I want to ask the Minister two things in this context. First of all, this is not a rule that applies across the country to all symphony orchestras. That is why they feel that they are personally being prejudiced by the Minister's officials. Second, this policy is retroactive to January, 1983. The musicians have not even had a chance to respond.

Within that context I should like to ask the Minister, in fairness, if not to the artists of this country at least to the musicians, if he will not give them an opportunity to have a meeting with him before he taxes all artists right off the land?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Hon. Member will not take the time to try and understand the situation. If the Hon. Member would care to read again the question he put last week regardng a specific group of artists, he will see that he was entirely mistaken. In his question he assumed that inventories of artists, including paintings and graphic art, were taxed, which is entirely false. I suppose he has had a chance to check his facts and find out that he was wrong.

Instead of worrying whether the application of the legislation to a specific group is fair or unfair, he should realize that when we apply an administrative policy on taxation or, as in the present case, on the insurability of a group of workers for unemployment insurance purposes, this must be done in accordance with existing legislation, and we must also ensure that other groups that find themselves in the same situation are not, as a result, treated unfairly. That is what we are doing.

PRIME MINISTER'S 1980 STATEMENT

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. On Thursday last I asked the Prime Member a question on these lines. In view of the fact that federal Government expenditures have been increasing at a considerably faster rate than the rate of increase in the GNP, would the Prime Minister advise the House what steps the Government intends to take to bring the rate of increase of total federal government expenditures in line with the rate of increase in the GNP as he assured the country he intended to do during the election campaign in 1980?

In view of the fact that Statistics Canada has reconfirmed to me that total federal government expenditures increased steadily from 19.6 per cent of GNP in 1979 to 25.9 per cent of GNP in the first six months of this year—

Madam Speaker: Order. Is the Hon. Member going to come to the question?

Mr. Chrétien: Next week.

Mr. Hees: Yes, right now, Madam Speaker. When does the Prime Minister intend to make good on his election promise that he would keep expenditures in line with the rate of growth in the GNP?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it is unusual, but I must say that the Hon. Member disappoints me when he compares 1979 with the first six months of this year. I do not believe that one can compare one year to six months and establish a valid trend line, Madam Speaker. It is well known that in the first half of the fiscal year the major part of government spending happens, and then it tapers off. However, there can be variations from year to year.

I would suggest that the Hon. Member ask the Bureau of Statistics this question. Let him take the trend line from 1979 or 1976, or whatever, and follow it through with the projections of the Minister of Finance. He will see that, though we did go above that trend line, I believe last year especially, when we were attempting to deal with unusually high unemployment, the trend line, according to the projections of the Minister of Finance, is downward, not upward.

Mr. Hees: Madam Speaker, I am very pleased to assure the Prime Minister that I have already done just exactly that, and the result is as follows. In 1979 federal expenditures increased—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member must ask a supplementary question, if he has one, and not read in more statistics. A question.

1980 ELECTION COMMITMENT

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, the figures which I have here show the Prime Minister has been misleading the House because there has been a steady—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hees: Not deliberately, not deliberately.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hees: Not deliberately.

Madam Speaker: I recognize that the Hon. Member might have some statistics which prove something else, but that is debate, and the time allotted now is for questions. If the Hon. Member does not have a question, I am afraid I will not be able to recognize him. A question.

Mr. Hees: Madam Speaker, in view of the fact that Statistics Canada have given me figures which prove exactly what I have said in my first question, and disprove exactly what the Prime Minister has tried to put over in the House, I would simply ask him when he is going to make good on the commitment which he gave to this country when, on January 20, 1980, he said, "Our commitment is this: we will hold the line on government expenditure growth to, at, or under the rate of growth of the GNP".

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member for Northumberland reads the projections of the Minister of Finance in his last budget he will see that we are attempting to live up to that. If he has obtained the figures from the Bureau of Statistics, as he says, I wonder why he has given us just a six months' figure.

Mr. Hees: Because they are the latest figures which are available.

Mr. Trudeau: But is that six months' figure, Madam Speaker, seasonally adjusted on an annual basis, or is it just the average? Hon. Members opposite who know anything about it know you cannot take a period of the year when you usually spend more, then double it and say that will be the average for the whole year. I wish the Hon. Member would send over the statistics and then I will have them checked with the Bureau of Statistics.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Prince Albert.

Mr. Hees: For 1982 it was 23.7 per cent. That is for the whole year, and you know it.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hees: You had better get your own figures straight. The Trudeau Bureau of Statistics is not good enough.

RAILWAYS

BRITISH COLUMBIA TAX ON GRAIN CARS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Minister is no doubt aware of the imposition of the British Columbia sales tax on the use of Canadian Wheat Board grain cars in that Province. Since such a tax will be taken directly from the incomes of western grain producers, will the Minister tell the House what steps he has taken to prevent the implementation of this tax?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, it would appear quite obvious that an action taken by the British Columbia Government is an action which should rightfully be debated in the British Columbia Legislature. It would be my presumption that the Hon. Member would be in touch with members of his own Party in that particular Assembly to bring the matter to their attention. It might take their minds off some of the other areas of interest which they are presently debating. I will certainly look into the matter. However, I would suggest to the Hon. Member that the first area of recourse would be for that Legislature to come to the recognition that it is probably not a very smart thing to do.

Mr. Hovdebo: I can agree with the Minister that any sane government would run as far as possible away from the policies and actions of the British Columbia Government, which the Minister seems to be doing.

FARMERS' ABILITY TO PAY

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, as a supplementary question I would ask the Minister about the central issue here, and that is the ability of the farmers to pay. With the prospect of a tax jungle of provincial sales taxes and the federal Government's increase in freight rates of 500 per cent, will the Minister undertake a complete study of the farmers' ability to pay and to absorb these increased costs in both freight rates and taxes and still be able to produce the grain which is so necessary for Canadian exports?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would first like to say to the Hon. Member that in making the case in British Columbia about the imposition of the sales tax, I believe it would be important to point out that the benefits which will accrue to that particular Province, and to many others, will be billions of dollars of benefit. Therefore, if the Hon. Member is interested in helping us develop a case as to why there should not be a sales tax, he may also be prepared to help us encourage the passing of the Crow Bill so we can get those major benefits flowing into the Province of British Columbia, as well as into other areas.

As far as the second question of the Hon. Member is concerned, I would just like to make one small suggestion to him, that is, that he look at the present Bill because there is already full provision for review in which we would be looking at the whole question of the method of payment and the ability to pay.

INDUSTRY

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS SKI AREA—STATUS OF NEGOTIATIONS WITH QUEBEC

Mr. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance.

I am aware that the Minister and his colleague, the Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology, met with their provincial counterparts last Friday to discuss a future Canada-Quebec general agreement on regional economic development. Since their agenda includes the ski industry, I wish to ask the Minister of Finance whether he could inform the House on the progress of negotiations, and especially about the possibility of an agreement on the development of this industry which is of vital importance to the Eastern Townships.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, in recent months there have been a number of meetings between federal and provincial officials to discuss the tourism industry in Quebec, with special emphasis on skiing. At these meetings, a general outline for a development plan for the ski industry in Quebec was prepared, and the Government of Quebec decided to announce its views on the subject last Friday.

We have indicated that we were prepared to discuss with the Quebec Government the role of the Canadian Government in this regard. Programs are available under the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Regional Economic Development, and we shall see exactly what form our contribution will take. We are indeed very interested in making this industry, which has a considerable impact on employment, a flourishing one in Quebec, and we are looking at effective ways of contributing to the growth of this industry.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE

ESTABLISHMENT OF DUTY-FREE STORES IN ONTARIO

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. On March 1 of this year I raised the question of the establishment of duty-free stores in Ontario. On October 6 the Hon. Member for Algoma raised the same issue. In both instances the Minister urged us to contact the Province in order that it would give us a favourable answer. I am pleased to announce the Ontario Cabinet has given us an answer. It is willing to go along with the federal Government in principle. When will the Minister open up a duty-free store in the riding of Erie?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, as soon as we have managed to reconcile principles and practice.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I understand that the oral question period is now over.

Madam Speaker: Oral question period always ends at three o'clock.

Mr. Pinard: In the circumstances—

● (1500)

[English]

—I would like to deal with House business. There have been some consultations, and contrary to what I indicated earlier today, tomorrow will not be an Opposition day. Also contrary to what was said last week, we will not wait until after we get final approval of Bill C-155 before seeking the approval of four other Bills which are needed before we consider proroguing. Therefore, what I am about to say is to confirm, after consultation with the House Leaders in the Opposition, that we have agreed to give passage to all stages of four Bills before tomorrow at 6 p.m.

The first item of business this afternoon will be Bill C-163, dealing with air safety. The understanding is that we will have one speaker per Party and we will then dispose of all stages of that Bill.

That will be followed by starting debate on report stage of Bill C-152, Government reorganization.

Tomorrow morning between eleven o'clock and one o'clock we have a firm agreement that we will deal with two Bills through all stages. First is Bill C-169, dealing with the Canada Elections Act, the agreement being that we will have one speaker per Party and we will then dispose of all stages of that Bill.

Second is Bill C-168, dealing with the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, the agreement being one speaker per Party and that we will then dispose of all stages of that Bill. All of that will be done before one o'clock. What I have said is based on a firm agreement and understanding and we do not require a House order for that purpose.

Bill C-152, as I said earlier, is the other top priority for the Government to get through before we consider proroguing. We will start debate on report stage this afternoon and resume debate immediately after Question Period tomorrow afternoon. Here I have a House order to make it clear that at the end of the afternoon all questions will be put to dispose of that Bill through remaining stages.

Therefore I seek the unanimous consent of the House for this motion:

That on Tuesday, October 25, 1983, the business taken up under Government Orders after Question Period shall be Bill C-152, an Act respecting the organization of the Government of Canada and matters related or incidental thereto; and Notwithstanding any Standing Order, no later than 5.45 p.m. that day, every question necessary for the disposal of the report stage and the third reading stage of the said bill shall be put forthwith and successively without further debate or amendment.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the program outlined by the Government House Leader is that which he discussed with me, and on behalf of this Party we consent to that House Order. We also have a clear understanding that if we do require additional time for additional speakers to be heard after 5.45 p.m. tomorrow night, there would be no difficulty in obtaining consent from the Government side to extend the hours for that purpose.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, similarly, we understand the business of the House today and tomorrow will be as the Government House Leader has put forward, including the question raised by the Opposition House Leader regarding the extension of time if necessary tomorrow to complete Bill C-152.

Madam Speaker: If there is unanimous consent, then it is so ordered.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I think you will find the House disposed to consent to allow the following motions to be put for consideration in the interests of improving Bill C-155 when we resume debate on this Bill. The first motion is as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 58 by immediately adding after line 13 at page 34 the following therefor:

"58.(3) Notwithstanding anything in this Act based upon the recommendations of the committee established under Section 59(2) to examine the method of payment, the Governor in Council may subject to approval by Parliament, make regulations prescribing the manner in which, and the Parties to whom, payment of the Government contribution, including the Crow benefit, shall be made".

Briefly, that would allow an enabling provision to incorporate a modified method of payment depending upon the recommendations of the inquiry that will flow therefrom.

The second motion is as follows:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 43 by adding immediately after line 34 at page 24 the following:

"(3) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, the rate a railway company may charge a shipper for the movement of grain for the period January 1, 1984 to July 31, 1986 shall not exceed the existing rates in effect on August 1, 1983".

That, Madam Speaker, would preserve the statutory freight rate until the end of the crop year 1986 and until such time as the review was completed. I ask that you seek unanimous consent that these motions as read be placed before the House when it resumes debate on Bill C-155, namely an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member wants unanimous consent to waive the notice. Is that very clear?

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is seeking unanimous consent to waive the notice for those amendments to be placed on the Order Paper?

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes.

Madam Speaker: Very well.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, we are in agreement that such amendments be brought forward and considered for debate. I want to assure the House that that does not imply we are in agreement necessarily with the substance of the amendments. But we are certainly in agreement with the proposal.

I would like at the same time to solicit approval of the House for amendments relating to safety net provisions which I would like to propose in the same spirit we are offering to the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Mr. Nielsen: Put them up now.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, at the outset I want to say that I hope no one is labouring under the misapprehension that somehow or other what the Hon. Member for Vegreville has just done was in any way related to the decision we took regarding the House Order put forward by the Government House Leader.

Mr. Pinard: Not at all.

Mr. Deans: I must confess that the request comes to me without notice and I am not in a position at the moment to grant the unanimous consent necessary for it to proceed since the matter was never discussed with me. If the Hon. Member and the Minister of Transport want to work out their cozy deals, they best come talk to us in advance before they ask for unanimous consent.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, in that same spirit of openness and generosity that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain expressed, I might also raise with the House a motion concerning the consideration for debate of a motion relating to the safety net, or would you like—

Madam Speaker: I would just like to finish the matter we are now dealing with. The Hon. Member for Vegreville has just asked for permission to waive notice to allow two amendments to be placed on the Order Paper for debate.

Mr. Nielsen: For debate.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I want to ask both the Minister and the Hon. Member for Vegreville, who obviously would want to have the matter before the House, to postpone asking for that unanimous consent until we have had an opportunity to look at the amendments they are asking for.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I am surprised at the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain because he in effect gave that concurrence last Thursday when he stated, and I quote from page 28174 of Hansard:

More important, on behalf of my colleagues, we would be prepared to consider the matters the Members have put on the floor, at least to this point, and for which they are seeking unanimous consent.

● (1510)

I think that was a clear concurrence of the fact that the Hon. Member wanted these motions for amendment to be put before the House for debate. We have since advanced two motions which we consider of paramount importance with that in mind. I hope the Hon. Member has not changed his mind.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, as in the past, I refuse to negotiate on the floor of the House. Show me amendments, put the motion later and I will be glad to consider it, hopefully in a favourable way.

Madam Speaker: Since it is only a matter of the Hon. Member reading the amendment and perhaps being in a position later on to give his unanimous consent or to refuse it, according to his decision, perhaps we could proceed to other items of routine business. Perhaps that would be helpful to the House.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, you have been asked by the Hon. Member for Vegreville to seek the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice for the two motions that he has put. I anticipate, judging from the fact that the Minister has risen in the House, that he will be rising to seek consent with respect to some other aspect of the Bill. May I suggest, Madam Speaker, with respect, that you ask for that unanimous consent now.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: I was only trying to help the House plan its work. However, if that is the desire of the House, I will ask now if there is unanimous consent to the proposal made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Axworthy: I rise on a point of order to propose to the House that the House give unanimous concurrence to the consideration of amendments for debate that would take into account the provision of a safety net, which is a concern that I know is shared by all Members of the House. As all Hon. Members will know, it is a very lengthy motion but it would be in exact accordance with Motion No. 157 which was on the previous Order Paper and with Motion No. 74. Perhaps I could dispense with the reading of those motions. They would require a 10 per cent safety net for farmers in order to protect them against increased prices. I would ask the House for unanimous consent.

Mr. Deans: Similarly, Madam Speaker, if the Minister wants unanimous consent, he should come and talk to us.

That Bill C-155 be amended by striking out the heading "Part IV" preceding Clause 59 at page 34 and substituting the following therefor:

"PART IV
SHIPPER SHARE LIMITATION

59. In this Part,

"freight to price ratio", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the quotient, expressed as a percentage obtained by dividing the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in that calendar year by the weighted average price for that calendar year;

"shipper share limitation adjustment", in respect of any calendar year, means an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying

by

(b) the product obtained by multiplying the weighted average price for that calendar year by the total number of tonnes of grain moved in that calendar year;

"six grains" means wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed;

"weighted average price", in respect of any calendar year, means the weighted average determined under paragraph 60(1)(b) in respect of that calendar year.

60.(1) The Commission shall, on or before March 1st of each year, using the information that it deems appropriate, determine, in respect of the preceding calendar year,

(a) the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains, in storage, was available for sale on each trading day at the port that handled the largest volume of that grain in the calendar year;

(c) the average cost to the shipper of moving one tonne of grain in the calendar year; and

(d) the freight to price ratio.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(a), the average price per tonne at which each of the six grains was available for sale shall be determined on the basis of the price per tonne of the grade of each of those grains the largest volume of which was moved in the calendar year.

PART V"

and by renumbering the subsequent Parts and Clauses and amending all references accordingly.

Motion No. 74

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 37 by striking out lines 37 to 43 at page 19 and substituting the following therefor:

"(a) the estimated government commitment less an amount equal to the CN adjustment in respect of that crop year, plus or minus the total of the interim adjustment for the current crop year and the final adjustment for the preceding crop year, plus the shipper share limitation adjustment for the preceding calendar year, as determined under Part IV, by".

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to the proposal made by the Hon. Minister of Transport?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

PETITION

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I would like to present to the House of Commons today a petition signed by residents of my riding, particularly those from the centres of The Battlefords, Ruddell, Vawn, Cochin and Cole Bay. The petition, Madam Speaker, was signed during "An Evening in the Park" which was sponsored by the Battlefords Association for Nuclear Disarmament and calls upon Parliament to debate and pass Bill-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone, and thereby place the nation of Canada in a position to act as a mediator in the worldwide nuclear disarmament process.

Madam Speaker: Motions. Since Hon. Members are capable of appreciating the great number of motions that we have on the Order Paper, if any Member wishes to move, perhaps he could indicate to the Chair and I will call that motion.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, on this occasion only, because I would not want to see a poor precedent established, I would suggest that the procedure followed by the Chair in asking Hon. Members if they wish to move motions they have on the Order Paper is acceptable for today. However, It may well be that on some other occasion a Member such as myself or any other Member may wish to rise and, on behalf of another Member, move a motion that is on the Order Paper in that Member's name.

Madam Speaker: Yes, that would necessitate that the Chair read all of the motions. However, it is not a precedent. I will ask every day for permission to waive the reading of these motions, but Hon. Members realize that this would take a lot of the time of the House, aside from exhausting my energies.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, dealing with these notices, I would be willing to give consent that they be scratched from the Order Paper.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, we believe far too deeply that parliamentary reform is something that should never be scratched from the Order Paper.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, it looks like Liberal and Tory Members are back in bed again, does it not? However, on this occasion only we will allow that we forgo the reading of all of the motions. It is nice to see them working together again.

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): The Farm Credit Corporation advises that for Questions Nos. 5,039 to 5,135 inclusive the answer is as follows:

Funds payable by Farm Credit Corporation to local solicitors or their firms, with respect to legal fees and disbursements for services rendered for or on behalf of the Corporation, were so made payable in all cases upon the express direction of borrowers out of the proceeds of mortgage loans made to such borrowers by the Corporation in (a) 1980, (b) 1981, (c) 1982 and (d) from January 1 to June 17, 1983, in which case the Corporation does not maintain any records of funds so paid and does not segregate any such funds upon payment thereof with respect to the proportion of such funds borrowers may agree to have payable by way of legal fees, disbursements or otherwise.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is somewhat of a tradition that has evolved in this Chamber, one that has been adhered to generally by Governments for a long time, and that is the tradition of fairly rapid responses to starred questions. The Chair will be aware, Madam Speaker, that I have now risen in my place on three different occasions to make inquiry as to when in fact the Government will honour that tradition and respond to what is in fact a starred question. The starred question I am referring to is No. 5,038.

On at least three different occasions I have had an indication from the Parliamentary Secretary that he in fact would endeavour to respond to the starred question that I have mentioned. He indicated that he would respond to it with some facility, that type of facility that would tend to preserve the right of a starred question to remain on the Order Paper or to be used as a vehicle by Members to receive what in the Member's judgment is urgent information.

Might I ask through you, Madam Speaker, whether the Parliamentary Secretary would wish me in fact to withdraw my starred question or whether he might take some action today which will recognize the tradition and the utility to Members of Parliament of the practice of starring questions?

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, this was brought to my attention some time ago, as the Hon. Member has indicated. As a result of his inquiry, I looked into the question but I have also looked into the precedent surrounding starred questions.

There is no precedent with regard to the speed with which starred questions are answered. The fact that a question is starred simply means that an oral answer will be given in the House to that question. There is no precedent for that question to be given any attention different from any other question that is put on the Order Paper. But I will look into the matter and try to give the Hon. Member an answer as soon as possible.

I wish to point out that there is no precedent given to starred questions with regard to the timing of answers.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, that is absolute rubbish! I have never heard so much rot in all my life. If the Parliamentary Secretary was right, there would be no purpose to starring questions at all. It is for the purpose of seeking oral information at the earliest possible moment. Before he ever came to this place, years ago, before all these traditional changes that have come about, we used to have starred questions answered in 48 hours. Now we are not getting answers for weeks and indeed for months.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, of course the written word of our rules and procedures and the advice that we have in written form confirms that. I was addressing my concern to the principles and practices that have been developed in the House over the last 116 years with respect to starred questions.

If the distinguished Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council is in fact indicating that starred questions have no preference whatsoever, perhaps it is something that the appropriate standing committee now concerned with parliamentary reform might consider. It will be a sad and regrettable day should that happen.

If in fact the practice has fallen into disuse, it is, as the Hon. Member for Yukon has indicated, a result of new rules and parliamentary reform that have come into play within the last two or three years and in the last year particularly. That in no way diminishes the validity of the principle behind starred questions, which is the opportunity for Members in this Chamber to receive verbal urgency in a very rapid, short period of time.

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, looking at the precedents in the Standing Orders, in Beauchesne, Bourinot and other references, there is no indication that starred questions are to receive different treatment from other questions except for the fact that a starred question requires an oral response in the House of Commons at the time questions on the Order Paper are answered. That is the only precedent I can find.

If the Chair has a different ruling or interpretation of starred questions, I would certainly appreciate the Chair giving me such a ruling. In my inquiries, as I have indicated, I have found that starred questions simply mean that at the time questions on the Order Paper are raised in Routine Proceedings, the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council or the relevant Parliamentary Secretary reads the answer orally. That is all that a starred question means.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I would request the Chair not to rule on this question so that the Parliamentary Secretary might have ample time, instead of sticking his nose and keeping it buried in the clinic of the green book or Beauchesne, to go back into the debates of this place for 25 years and see the remarks that were made with respect to governments of both Conservative and Liberal times when the parliamentary starred question process meant something.

The fact is that this Government, this outfit, has so distorted the traditions of this place that starred questions no longer mean anything. We should go back to the practice that has existed for so many years in the House.

Madam Speaker: I know that it is a very old debate. I have heard it so often that I cannot remember exactly how it was resolved. However, I will look at all the arguments that were put forward and certainly try to clarify the matter for the House.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, might I now ask the Parliamentary Secretary when he intends to answer my question on the Order Paper?

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, both the one with the star and those without the star will be answered at the earliest possible moment. I will look into all of them.

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, now that we have partially solved the matter about the starred questions, I am wondering about questions that are not starred and have been on the Order Paper for more than two and a half years. That is over 30 months.

I asked a question, Question No. 2,329. It was put on the Order Paper on April 2, 1981. It is a simple question which asks who was invited to the banquet at which President Reagan spoke. Surely the Parliamentary Secretary cannot tell me that those lists were not prepared. They had to be prepared before the banquet. Can the Government not find them? I would like to get an answer to this question. If he is trying to hide the fact that he invited some defeated Liberal candidates and did not invite any defeated candidates from other Parties, he is not hiding anything: we know that. But we want to have the names. Surely we can get an answer after 30 months.

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, I will certainly try to get an answer for the Hon. Member. However, it seems rather ridiculous because if he already knows the answer, why ask the question?

Mr. Young: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary what the possible delay could be in answering my question No. 5,315 on the Order Paper, which concerns some 40,000 Canadian pensioners. I raised this question with both the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare some weeks ago. The Minister partially responded to that very question on Friday. If she could at least verbally answer that question partially, why can I not have the written response?

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, if the Minister has responded partially, I will certainly see if I can urge her to provide both parts in writing.

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I mentioned one part of my question. There are other parts to it as well. I would like a full answer to the question.

Furthermore, I learned in my earlier legislative days that you never ask a question if you do not know the answer.

Mr. Dingwall: I would ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BILLS

WITHDRAWAL OF BILL C-399

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, I have a Private Member's Bill, Bill C-399, which has been on the Order Paper for some time. I would ask unanimous consent of the House to withdraw that Bill.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give its unanimous consent to withdraw the Bill of the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen)?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: Agreed and so ordered.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

CANADIAN AVIATION SAFETY BOARD ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-163, an Act to establish the Canadian Aviation Safety Board and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would bring to the attention of the House Leader of the Official Opposition that all I would like to do at this time is have unanimous consent of the House to move consequential amendments.

After looking at the Bill as proposed by the committee, it had removed the word "general" from Clause 7. We noticed that the same word "general" must therefore be removed from Clause 23 and Clause 12 of the Bill.

I know that the committee itself has not moved the amendments, but I am sure, through unanimous consent, we can move these consequential amendments. This has no bearing whatsoever on the matter of the Bill. We could then proceed with debate and third reading, if we had agreement. I would be prepared to read this motion if you so agree.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, that is perfectly satisfactory with us.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Minister has unanimous consent.

Mr. Axworthy moved:

Motion No. 1

That clause 12 of Bill C-163 be amended

(a) by striking out line 23 on page 6 and substituting the following:

"and causes and recommendations"

(b) by striking out line 32 on page 6 and substituting the following:

"tributing factors and causes and"

Motion No. 2

That subclause 23(1) of Bill C-163 be amended by striking out line 2 on page 14 and substituting the following:

"include in its report recommenda-"

Madam Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motions agreed to.

• (1530)

Mr. Axworthy moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Madam Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Axworthy moved that the Bill be read the third time and do pass.

He said: Madam Speaker, I am very pleased, as events have turned out, that we have an opportunity today to give final passage to Bill C-163, to establish the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. I recognize that this proposal receives the full endorsement of all Hon. Members of the House, and well it should because it is very important step forward in putting in place good protection for the Canadian travelling public and advancing our ability to pursue safety standards in the country. In so doing, I pay tribute to members of the Standing Committee on Transport from all Parties who worked very diligently to deal with the matter. In fact, they moved it along with a great deal of dispatch and a strong sense of support.

The Bill itself contains several major changes which will ensure that aviation safety is both seen to be and will be a matter of high priority and in which the most adequate and effective form of investigation will take place. The first major principle of the Bill is in fact the establishment of a board to conduct all investigations and inquiries into any aviation occurrence. The importance of that is highlighted in the findings of the Dubin inquiry which pointed out the inconsistency of having the Minister of Transport being responsible for the rules and regulations on safety and for investigating any infraction of those rules. It is like being judge and jury at the same time.

The Bill will set up an independent board that will be able to work in an arm's length fashion from the Department of Transport and therefore be in a position to deal with any aviation accidents in a very open and clear manner without any sense or perception that somehow it is a matter about which the Department of Transport, the Government or someone else is trying not to provide all the facts. The independence itself is a very important matter.

The second major result of the Bill will be to ensure that inquiries and investigations will make public recommendations so that there will be no apprehension on the part of the travelling public or of any other member of society that something is being held back. In fact, the Bill gives the Safety Board the right to hold public inquiries and to request the Governor in Council to set up such inquiries under the Inquiries Act.

I am sure Hon. Members will know that just two weeks ago I established a public inquiry to look into the Gimli air accident where, because of the unusual circumstances surrounding that particular problem, there was a high degree of concern on the part of many people about follow-up disciplinary actions and the questions of culpability and responsibility. Therefore, a public inquiry was called which took an exceptional initiative. We had to clear it through Cabinet and take unusual action. The establishment of this Board will no longer require that to take place. The Board will have the authority to hold public inquiries or to initiate them. In itself that is a major improvement.

While the Board itself will be a three-person board, it will have a full range of experts to call upon to work on its behalf. Therefore, it will be able to offer a very extensive and comprehensive examination, assessment and judgment on any aviation occurrence. I want to make this clear because some questions were asked in committee and also in the Senate prehearings concerning its range, whether in fact it would involve matters dealing with search and rescue questions. Of course it would be in a position to examine aviation-related matters and would cover a widespread concern relating to air incidents.

Under the provisions of the Bill it would be my hope that we will be able to identify clearly the causes of many of the occurrences or incidents and have them reported so that we can prevent accidents. Unfortunately, we are too often in the position of responding after a tragedy occurs.

Also, under the provisions of the Bill the Air Safety Board will be in a position to have a clear monitoring responsibility or reporting responsibility so that if it begins to detect a pattern of problems occurring, it will be able to act before the tragedy occurs and to recommend to Government, to other agencies or airlines the necessity to change a technique, a pattern or a behaviour in order to prevent the occurrence. On that basis we hope the Safety Board will be able to act before the fact rather than after the fact.

Further, this Bill by its very definition deals with matters of aviation safety. That is a clear response to the Dubin inquiry. However, the Government does not intend to stop there. We recognize the necessity of setting up similar kinds of improvements in other modes of transportation. Hon. Members of the House will know that we presently have the Deschênes inquiry in the maritime area. I asked the Commissioner of that inquiry to see whether it might accelerate certain of its findings so that we will perhaps be in a position to take further action in the maritime area on the safety issue, whether it be a matter of melding it into this Board or whether it be a separate board. After discussions with Mr. Deschênes, he agreed to attempt to move his study forward at a faster pace so that perhaps we will be in a position in a few months to bring recommendations forward to the House and therefore to committee for further examination in the maritime area and to provide a full and comprehensive approach to the problems in transportation safety.

I do not think I have to argue this Bill at third reading. Since it is accepted, I will simply reiterate my appreciation for the support given to it by members of the Standing Committee on Transport. I endorse it to the House and to the Senate, so that we can get on with the business of ensuring that Canadians will be safe when they travel.

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, sometimes it is difficult to step into a debate quickly, as we have to do this afternoon, and try to express in a very few moments the feelings of all my colleagues on a Bill as important as Bill C-163.

I want to commence my remarks by making a few references to the Hansard of this House over the past few weeks. Something has happened which I frankly find quite distasteful in reference to the Bill. For example, on September 19, the Hon. Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) said, as reported on page 27247 of Hansard:

—there is a bill to establish a new air safety board presently before the Transport committee. If the Opposition were to co-operate we could get that legislation through very quickly and into the House so that we could have a proper mechanism under which public inquiries could be undertaken.

The next statement to which I want to refer is reported on page 27765 of Hansard for October 5 where, in answer to a question during Oral Questions put by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm), the Minister of Transport said:

As soon as the Opposition is prepared to pass it, we will be in a position to bring forward the aviation safety Bill.

Then, on October 20, as reported at page 28193 of Hansard, in reply to the Hon. Member for Peterborough in the adjournment debate, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) said:

The Hon. Member might also speak to his leader because such an occurrence would be investigated by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board under Bill C-163. However, we saw in the House the despicable behaviour of the Official Opposition filibustering Bill C-155. Therefore we cannot bring in Bill C-163. We have an all-Party agreement to put it through the House quickly.

All three of those quotations are frankly, and colloquially, a crock.

This Bill was instigated initially by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) when, as Minister of Transport in the Thirtieth Parliament, he asked that the government inquiry deal with matters of safety in the air transportation field. After that report came in, the then Minister of Transport, now Secretary of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), started the process to bring the Bill before the House.

He, as was his wont, confided with the members of the Standing Committee on Transport in the fall of 1982. While he may have been speaking in confidence at the time, there is no point in not repeating the fact that he told us that the Bill having to do with the Canadian Aviation Safety Board was ready and he was looking forward to an opportunity with his House Leader to get it before the House of Commons. Some months later, earlier this year, after a great deal of negotiation and pleading on our part to have that Bill brought before the House, finally the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) allowed it to be brought before the House on the second or third last day of June. We, as we had promised to do, passed it through the House rapidly. As I recall, we sent it to committee that very afternoon.

Unfortunately, there was a bell vote. The Committee could not finish its deliberations. We were unable to complete the deliberations on that Bill in committee prior to the House shutting down for the summer recess. On very short notice, we had appearing before us the President of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association as well as the General Manager of that Association, the President and one other member of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association and the senior executive officer, I do not know whether it was the President, of the Air Transport Association of Canada and others of that type who where willing to give the Committee the benefit of their advice and counsel. They came on very short notice.

I should go on record to point out that the President, if that is his title, of the Air Transport Association of Canada returned, as did the General Manager of COPA to the Committee meetings in the fall. They indeed acted as expert witnesses before the Committee.

The Committee, and certainly this Party, dealt with this Bill in the most expeditious and responsible way that could be expected of any Party. Never at any point have we held this Bill up in any way, shape or form. While I am at it, I might point out that the Transport Committee, as it has in the past, dealt with the Bill in a very non-partisan way. We debated amendments and dealt with the Bill in a manner that would put it through as it should have been a long time ago.

The Bill is a pretty good Bill. It was made better by the amendments made in committee. I want to pay full tribute to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), who prepared a number of amendments over the summer. He submitted them to the Chairman of the Committee and the Minister and his staff. Some were adopted by the Committee. The Bill was made considerably better by the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East who has sponsored Private Members' Bills over the years and in other ways attempted to get before the House the principle of a safety board, not only for aviation but for other modes as well.

I am delighted to hear the Minister point out that we are now going to be dealing, to quote him, in an expeditious way with a similar safety board for the other modes of travel. His use of the word "expeditious", given the fact that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East has been asking for this legislation for a decade or better, is a bit of a contradiction in terms. Nonetheless, it is on its way.

As I said, the Bill is not bad. It was made better and could have been made better yet. I will refer only to two further amendments that were put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East, both of which, in the opinion of those Members who sit regularly on the Committee, would have made it better. I stress that because, as happens frequently in committee hearings, a number of Government Members were brought in and asked to vote just as they were told about a subject they knew absolutely nothing about. That is a shame because the two amendments were quite straightforward.

In the Bill there is a requirement that the Board report to the House through a Minister other than the Minister of Transport. Again, my colleague for Dartmouth-Halifax East put in his amendment that the report should come through the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan).

The purpose was very clear and simple. It would seem quite illogical that this most important Board would report through, for example, the Minister responsible for the Status of Women, the Minister responsible for Mines or some other Minister, important though they may be, but who know little if anything about the intricacies of this matter. Therefore, to have this Board report through the chief law officer of the Crown, the Minister of Justice, because it deals with legal matters, seems to be entirely sensible and reasonable. I do not understand why it would be rejected.

Frankly, for a moment I thought about attempting at this late point to ask for unanimous consent to repeat a request of a Member of the House. I think, with his consent, I will not now do so. The Bill is that far along that we will see it through this afternoon. I am sure the Member would agree with me that while the legislation would be better and the results would be better by having his amendment in place, nonetheless we would rather have the Bill pass with this one fault than not have it pass at all. We will not take the chance of not having it passed. The amendment was very simple. I will not read it in detail, line after line.

The amendment was simply that any witness appearing before the Canadian Aviation Safety Board would have the right to the protection of the Canada Evidence Act. It is very simple, half a dozen words, but it has a lot of meaning. A great deal of stress was put on this in the Committee by the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) and others who felt that these few words in the amendment would have given people appearing before the Board a safety factor that they do not now have. It would take time, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, to see exactly what will happen. I guess the only thing we can say is that, slightly flawed as it is, we would rather see the legislation go through knowing that a few months down the road we will have an opportunity to act as a Government and, if we see that it is necessary, we can put an amendment in place at that time. At that time, Mr. Speaker, they may well agree to it.

There is little need for further comment on the Bill. The Bill is, as I said, the result of years of effort on the part of the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East. It is the result of the definitive effort of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) as a former Minister of Transport. We have, indeed, taken too much time now to bring that Bill to fruition. I am delighted that we finally have it. I hope that, given the kind of co-operation that we always received in the Standing Committee on Transport, we will have the opportunity soon to implement much of the balance of the Dubin inquiry report.

I cannot resist, Mr. Speaker, putting a plug in here for a document on domestic air carrier policy that was prepared by that same Committee on Transport. This was unanimously approved by a committee that worked hard, day and night, for many weeks. It was submitted to the previous Minister over a year ago. To date we have had no report. We assume that the major appointment to the Canadian Aviation Safety Board will be that of a friend of the Government. We get used to that sort of thing. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that this is an extremely important post. We trust that when the Government starts looking for a friend to put in this prestigious position it will look very hard and choose one that is competent, because it is a particularly important post. It is needed now and it has been needed for some time.

With that, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of our Party I will give our blessing to the legislation now so that it passes this afternoon.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to join with the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and my colleague for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Ellis) in speaking on third Reading of this Bill.

I know that I am biased and other Members who were members of that Committee might be as well, but over the 15 years and some months that I have been here, and historically, Governments of both the old-line Parties have seen fit to accept amendments from, and take seriously and do something about the recommendations of, the Standing Committee on Transport, which used to be the Standing Committee on Canals, Telegraphs and Railways.

Mr. Speaker, I have noted particularly under the new rules that one of the reasons put forward for the House not sitting beyond six o'clock was that this would allow the committees opportunities to meet in the evenings. I have not checked the record, but my impression is that most committees have not been meeting in the evening. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the Committee on Transport met evening after evening after evening all summer, all fall and some of the spring. We did, in fact, function in the evening when the House was not sitting.

On this legislation, as my colleague for Prince Edward-Hasting has said, there was a determination by Members to achieve speeds parliamentary action on instituting legislation for the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. There was no disagreement on the principle of having such an institution. There was disagreement on some particular parts of the Bill; some were resolved by amendments and compromises. I suppose I could also say I am happy to see this Bill going through because crows are part of aviation. I might want to have some aviation safety board hearings on the crows that might get shot down if another Bill passes.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Committee, the Hon. Member for Prince Edward-Hastings, the Parliamentary Secretary and the Minister of Transport for accepting my amendment. There are two others they did not accept, but I guess nobody is perfect. The one that they did accept is welcomed, with a great sigh of relief, by the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association, the Air Traffic Controllers Association and the Canadian Association of Pilots and Owners. It was not the objective of the Aviation Safety Board to apportion any blame or liability in connection with aviation occurrences. After meeting with the officials and discussion in the committee we came up with the revised wording. I was assured by the officials and we agreed in the Committee that the wording would meet the objective that I had in mind with my original amendment.

There is much confusion about the words "occurrences, incidents and accidents". An occurrence can be merely that, or an occurrence can be an incident, or an occurrence can be an accident. Concern was expressed by those involved in the aviation industry—again I am thinking of the pilots, the air traffic controllers, the flight attendants, the Pilots and Owners Association, the Canadian Air Transport Association—that the purpose of an aviation safety board is not only to investigate an accident, an occurrence that is an accident, or an occurrence that could lead to an accident. This is where I had some difference of opinion with my colleagues in the Committee and with the Government officials. It is the responsibility in law of the Department of Transport and its air transport committee to investigate occurrences that could lead to an accident or an incident that would be dangerous. It is also its responsibility to look into the efficacy of regulations. My experience has been in another mode of transportation years ago. Certainly what employees in the aircraft industry, the aviation industry, the marine industry and other transportation modes have said is that too often there is a tendency on the part of either a Government or a corporation to do what is called "scapegoating".

There have been three or four incidents and accidents involving Canadian commercial aircraft in the past year or so. I do not want to interfere with grievances that might be going on between the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association and Air Canada or any other grievance, but all this indicates to me that people are still looking around for someone to blame.

When I worked on the railway, Mr. Speaker, there was a mishap about ten miles away from where I was working and the chief dispatcher sent me over to handle train orders and such things. The section foreman at my place of work who handled about 15 miles of track, in three different years had been awarded the prize for having the best section in the whole 600 or 700 miles of track in the Medicine division. Every spring he would plead and beg and ask for enough new ties, rails, rail anchors, spikes, ballast, weed spray and other things to keep the track in a safe operating condition. Every year his requirements were cut back. Although he had been awarded the prize for the best kept section in the division, when that accident occurred in the snow and rain in April, there were eight carloads of grain in the ditch—two of them contained flax which at that time was worth about $3.50 per bushel—and after it was all over, that poor section foreman received 30 or 40 demerit marks because of a broken rail. That man never missed a day of work. Every time a train went by he followed it and inspected the track. Even on Saturday and Sunday when he was off duty, if there were extra trains, he would follow them. He got demerit marks. Still, he was blamed for not finding the broken rail. It did not matter that every year he had begged and pleaded for new rails, or complained that some of the rails in use had been made in 1905 or 1910.

Quite often the causes of transportation accidents, in this case an aviation accident, can be traced back to those who are in charge and have the final responsibility—the place where the buck stops. The pilot who saves lines while his aircraft is out of fuel deserves a medal; he does not deserve to be taken out of the service.

If the regulations governing training of ground crews and refuelling are not enforced sufficiently and properly, then mistakes will occur somewhere down the line and some poor pilot or some poor kid holding a jet fuel hose on the tarmac will be the victim. I submit that the Aviation Safety Board should follow matters up the line to determine who goofed in not making sure that everyone was fully aware of his responsibility and that he carried out those responsibilities so there is no scapegoating when we have a terrible occurrence, and aviation accident.

I appreciate the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Prince Edward-Hastings about the Canada Evidence Act. The failure of the Government to include that is going to leave the Government open to lawsuits down the road. It seems to me that two things will happen if the protection of the Canada Evidence Act is not available. First, some of the legitimate efforts of the Aviation Safety Board will not be carried out because witnesses who could shed light on the matter will be less than forthcoming, or not forthcoming at all. The Minister should have an amendment made when the Bill goes to the Senate. When it comes back to the House we will deal with it in an hour or two; there is no problem about that. But without the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, if a witness is forthcoming fearful of being blamed and ends up being or found liable even in part, I suspect he will go all the way to the Supreme Court; not only on account of the Evidence Act, but on account of the Charter of Rights.

The purpose of a Canadian aviation safety board is not only to find out causes, why an accident happened, but to determine the chain of events, without laying any blame or assessing any liability, so that subsequently the courts or the lawyers for the parties concerned can assess matters and arrive at agreement, or the courts will settle the matter. I submit that that should be the limit of the work of an aviation safety board.

There may be incidents, such as near misses involving aircraft separation. This is where there may be some duplication of the legislation. The Department of Transport and the Air Transport Committee could be looking into occurrences and incidents that do not necessarily end in an accident. The whole matter of aircraft separation and ground movement on an airport while air traffic movement is going on is a concern. There was a problem about that recently. In the end, the Ministry of Transport has responsibility, and the legislation requires an investigation of occurrences that are incidents or occurrences that do not result in an accident in order that any deficiencies in the regulations or training, or whatever, are corrected, and corrected promptly.

The difference between the authority of the Department of Transport and the Aviation Safety Board is the difference of time. An aviation safety board may take months or years to arrive at conclusions, whereas investigations of incidents and occurrences—as was set out in the amendment that the Government did not accept in committee—are the responsibility under law of the Department of Transport and the air transport committee of the CTC and can be dealt with much more quickly. They can be very minor things, but they can be dealt with in a matter of days or weeks. The effect could be something like preventive medicine. If an Aviation Safety Board takes upon itself the investigation of an occurrence that did not result in an accident—and it can under the legislation—I submit that will do nothing more than give the Department or the CTC an excuse or may compel them to delay making a decision.

That is the problem with the duplication of effort that will occur as a result of the law as it stands and the provisions of the Bill. I hope that those who administer it and those who serve on the Aviation Safety Board will not be in conflict. I hope they will confine themselves to the area in which they are best qualified to act upon and to report on. If that is accomplished, Mr. Speaker, then we have done some excellent work with this legislation, because of the trauma a whole nation feels when there is an accident, whether or not there are any lives lost. A number of my colleagues and myself attended the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference in New Zealand in 1979 when the DC-10 crashed at the South Pole. That whole country went into trauma. It was widespread around the world, but in that country itself the soul-searching and agonizing has gone on ever since. What did we do wrong? What could we have done to prevent that from happening? A piece of legislation like this, Sir, is important to the whole matter of safety for every nation.

I believe the laws of this nation are very deficient in railway health and safety practices, in highway health and safety practices and in marine health and safety practices. It took years to get survival suits for sailors on vessels sailing in the wintertime in the northern climate of Canada. It was to give these men a chance to survive and perhaps allow them to survive a few hours in cold water, and the years it took to get that done is no credit to this Parliament or this Government, and no credit to those who owned the ships and did not want to do it because it was too expensive.

We must do whatever is required with this legislation and the law as it already deals with transportation. When it comes to health and safety you cannot put price tags on the lives of people, whether it is a customer or an employee. The more we can do as a country to maximize safety and, more important, the prevention of accidents, whether by air or any other mode of transportation, the better we are as a society and the better we do as a Parliament.

I hope that the Minister of Transport will reflect upon the work of the Committee on this legislation and on other pieces of legislation. Perhaps he will allow the Transport Committee to consider Bill C-155 for a few months. He might then find himself with some legislation which will be acceptable to most of those affected by it.

We are prepared to support this legislation. I hope the Minister will ask the Senate to consider the amendment mentioned by the Hon. Member for Prince Edward-Hastings regarding the Canada Evidence Act, so that there will be no delay. The Senate can then return it, we can deal with it in an hour or so, and the Bill will be much improved.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-152, an Act respecting the Organization of the Government of Canada and matters related or incidental thereto, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Hon. Members are aware that there are eight motions on the Notice Paper at report stage of Bill C-152. I have examined these motions and have concluded that Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3, 7 and 8 should be grouped for debate. A vote on Motion No. 1 will also dispose of Motions Nos. 2, 3, 7 and 8 as in each case the words "of State" are being inserted. Motions Nos. 4, 5 and 6 will be grouped for debate and voted as follows: (a) the question will be put first on Motion No. 6. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 6 will dispose of Motions Nos. 4 and 5; (b) a negative vote on Motion No. 6 will necessitate the question being put separately on Motions Nos. 4 and 5. We are grouping at this stage Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3 7 and 8.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-152 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out line 1 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"4. A Minister of State for International Trade".

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-152 be amended in Clause 5 at page 2 by striking out line 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"5. A Minister of State for External Relations shall"

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-152 be amended in Clause 12 by striking out line 19 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"12. Subject to section 6, the Minister of State for"

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-152 be amended in Schedule 1, Item 21(b), Column II, at page 20 by striking out the words "The Minister for International Trade" and substituting the following therefor:

"The Minister of State for International Trade".

Motion No. 8

That Bill C-152 be amended in Schedule 1, Item 21(b), Column II, at page 20 by striking out the words "The Minister for External Relations" and substituting the following therefor:

"The Minister of State for External Relations".

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is an amendment I would like to have put forward, notice of which has not been given. I would like to ask the Chair to seek the unanimous consent of the House for notice to be waived on this particular amendment, which is as follows:

That Schedule 1 to Bill C-152 be amended by—

Mr. Lambert: On a point of order, please.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has recognized the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council so as to hear what he has to say. We will then deal with the point of order, if there is one.

Mr. Evans: The motion continues as follows:

(a) adding, immediately after item 4 thereof, the following item:

"5. Canagrex Act 1980-81-82-83, c. 152

Paragraph 4(3)(c) is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(c) one from the Department of External Affairs." "

(b) renumbering the subsequent items accordingly.

The intent of this amendment is simply to allow a member of the Department of External Affairs to sit on the board of Canagrex. That is the only intent. I am asking that the Speaker seek the unanimous consent of the House to waive notice and allow this particular amendment to be introduced.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council has asked the unanimous consent of the House to introduce at report stage a further amendment to the Bill. This can be done only with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There appears to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, I was rising on a point of order as to your groupings, and that has to be done at this point. If the Bill is perused with some care, one will see that the Minister of State for International Trade and the Minister of State for External Relations hold two different offices. The Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) has a whole section under the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), whereas the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) is frankly an assistant Minister and is so described in the legislation. He will do those things that are assigned to him by the Minister. Those two are not in the same category, therefore why should they be lumped together in one vote?

Mr. Bosley: Lumped together for debate or for the vote?

Mr. Lambert: Lumped together for debate and for a vote. This is what I find rather extraordinary. Someone has given this matter insufficient consideration, and I humbly submit that Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 should be together and, as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley), says, Motions Nos. 2 and 8 should be lumped together. There is no way international trade should be confused with external relations. The two offices are quite different.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has made a point of order. The Chair will take the Hon. Member's observations under careful consideration. Meanwhile the House can perhaps proceed on the grouped Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 provisionally while the Chair re-examines the point the Hon. Member has made.

So we invite at this stage debate on Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7. The Chair reserves the right to make further observations having examined the argument the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) has made. At this stage the Chair invites the Hon. Member for Edmonton West to confine his remarks to Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, this Bill received some discussion in the House and I am the proposer of these amendments, although my colleagues whose specialties are in external relations and international trade and DREE will be carrying the bulk of debate in so far as the organization of Departments are concerned. I will accept the fullest responsibility, if any, with regard to the deletion of Clause 25 of the Bill because that is a different matter.

Let us look at the purport of Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7, which have to do with the title of the Minister for International Trade. Clause 4 of the Bill says a Minister for International Trade shall be appointed. This is a mandatory requirement in the House that we should have a Minister and he shall assist the Minister for External Affairs in carrying out his responsibilities relating to international trade. Therefore, he is a Minister appointed to assist another Minister in carrying out a portion of what you might call Canada's external relations. That is the trade side. Then the Minister of International Trade has certain responsibilities which may be given to him as they appear in Clause 12 of the Bill at page 4. But here there was an amendment introduced in committee, which met with unanimous consent, that Clause 12 would be subject to Clause 6 because:

A Minister appointed pursuant to section 4 or 5 shall act with the concurrence of the Minister in carrying out his responsibilities and shall make use of the services and facilities of the Department of External Affairs.

This is in effect taking the trade commissioner service and all those aspects of trade out of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and merging them into the Department of External Affairs. There will be an under-secretary of state for external affairs who will be the senior deputy minister. Then there will be the appointment of a person of a deputy minister rank who will be in charge of the administration of international trade. He will have the rank, I suppose, of an associate under-secretary of state for external affairs, to keep the title in the same sort of wording.

Then we have another appointee who is going to be called a Minister for External Relations, and that has to do with those amendments which appear in Motions Nos. 2 and 8. But he has no direct responsibilities except to assist the Secretary of State for External Affairs in discharging those duties which may be assigned to him by the Minister. This is what we have seen in practice. The Minister of State for External Relations is here in Ottawa and he becomes the spokesman for the Government on an international matter, non-trade, in the event the Minister for External Affairs is absent from the country or incapacitated.

In addition, the Minister for External Relations can also be a spokesman for the Minister for International Trade in the event that that individual is absent from the country, incapacitated or unable to speak on behalf of the Government. If the Minister for External Affairs is not able to act, for whatever valid reason, it is the Minister for International Trade who shall be senior in the Department and Acting Minister for External Affairs.

This was explained to the committee in some detail. However, strangely enough, there has been an odd choice of people for the jobs. The man who presently occupies the position of Minister of State for External Relations is the number three man in seniority in the Cabinet. In the absence of his Minister, who happens to be the Deputy Prime Minister and number two man in seniority in the Cabinet, it is the Minister of State for External Relations who speaks over his colleague, the Minister of State for International Trade, who would otherwise have spoken. That is one of those little accidents that occur in the combinations of seniority on the Privy Council list and the so-called seniority of the pecking order of that Department.

This combination has been going on for some time. As a matter of fact, we know that in Canadian posts abroad, the trade commissioner has been under the active direction of the ambassador or head of mission for perhaps 12 years, if my memory serves me correctly. In fact, if one examines the list of heads of missions across the world today, one will see a good number of men and women whose careers began in the service of the trade commissioner. I think that this has proven to be a fair combination. If it had not, there would have been too much emphasis in the Department of External Affairs on what they call the straight or political people.

Another change that has occurred is that the heads of missions have assumed direct control over the representatives of any Department represented in a foreign mission. To that extent, immigration officers, for instance, fall directly under the head of mission. That is why there now exists this stupid anomaly. I say that it is stupid because it creates another layer of bureaucracy in which to lose people and to lose track of files. It creates another bureaucratic strata of immigration people in the Department of External Affairs. I see no reason for that and I have already run into that difficulty when trying to find a file. The people in the Immigration Department jealously guarded that file while I talked to a senior officer over on the—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair hesitates to interrupt the distinguished Hon. Member. The Chair would like to make a ruling.

The Chair has considered the matter the Hon. Member raised previously. Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 are now being grouped for debate. It is assumed that a vote on Motion No. 1 will dispose of Motion Nos. 3 and 7 at the same time. Motions Nos. 2 and 8 are being grouped subsequently. A vote on Motion No. 2 will dispose of Motion No. 8.

The Hon. Member has been speaking for ten minutes on the first grouping. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to extend his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lambert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I was just winding up by showing that this very large empire has been created. To that extent, we are not impressed. I think that experience will show that the wheel can go around and perhaps ten years from now, Hon. Members in the House will be asked to approve the decentralization of this Department, as has happened to many a Department in the past.

I saw the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce being born back in 1964. It is now being buried. It is dying through this Bill. Trade has now disappeared into the Department of External Affairs, and I suppose commerce will now be included in the Department of Industrial Expansion. We do not know where domestic trade will go, but that is another question.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, dealing with the question that was raised by the Hon. Member, with whom I have worked very closely and co-operatively over the years with regard to the titles of the Ministers, I believe we are dealing with those amendments at this time. I will deal with the reason for the change that has occurred in the titles of Minister of State for International Trade and Minister of State for External Relations.

Although the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) and the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) will have identical powers as Minister of State, they will still be Ministers who assist the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen). The purpose of identifying them as such and creating these positions through a new Act rather than through the Ministries and Ministers of State Act is to provide a higher international profile for these Ministers. It is important that they be seen as full Ministers in the international sphere even though they are Ministers of State for purposes of administration within the Government of Canada. That is precisely the purpose for the change.

If the Hon. Member considers the Bill very carefully, he will see that the powers of these two Ministers are restricted to those powers granted to Ministers of State even though they are not called Ministers of State. They will have a higher international profile and a higher profile within the configuration of the Department of External Affairs. That is why the titles were changed. The Hon. Member has asked that question and has proposed to change the titles back to Minister of State. The Government has certainly put these changes forward for a very good reason. We would be reluctant to see those titles revert to the more traditional titles for those Ministers.

Mr. Lambert: May I respond, Mr. Speaker?

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I would be glad if the Hon. Member would respond. If I may say so, and I expect the Hon. Member will agree with me, the Parliamentary Secretary has missed the point the Hon. Member was making.

As we in the House have pointed out previously here and in committee, one of the great anomalies in this Bill is that whereas the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) has a deputy minister under him, the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) does not. In fact, the administrative chart indicates that the Minister of State for External Relations is hanging in limbo. We will deal with that in more detail when we reach the next two motions.

We understand the reason for this technical change in the title of Minister of State to Minister. There is no question in our minds about that. We also understand why the post of Minister of State for International Trade is a post that shall be created whereas the post of Minister of State for External Relations is a post that may be created. I do not think the Parliamentary Secretary needs to worry about our understanding of these particular amendments as we have spent a very great deal of time on them in committee.

I first addressed the larger problem in the House on June 22 of this year, as reported beginning at page 26,705 of Hansard. In the case of the grouping of amendments, the problem is whether or not the Government made a wise decision when it decided to break up the old Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and put the industry part in the new Department of Regional Economic Expansion and put the trade part in External Affairs. As the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) said, we are not too sure where the domestic commerce part will be put, but it will probably be put in the Department of Regional and Economic Expansion. Unfortunately, that is now a fait accompli.

I do believe that the reorganization which has resulted in this Bill was the brainchild of the former Secretary of the Privy Council. The Cabinet simply found it difficult to unravel this incredible creation that he had made. It will probably take the Department years to try to accommodate itself to these reorganizational changes as is quite clear when one examines the most recent chart issued by the Department of External Affairs.

With respect to attempting to combine trade with external relations, it will have two consequences. I simply want to repeat those consequences but not dwell on them today since it is a fait accompli and not much can be done about it. The first consequence of separating industry from trade is that the trade side is deprived of its clientele, so to speak, which is the industrial base in Canada. When the two were together one could examine the export performance of Canadian industries in particular and relate that directly to the trade needs and expectations of the Canadian Government. While trade commissioners were under the authority of External Affairs in their missions abroad, there was a very tight link at home between the people involved with trade and those involved with industry. Some of us fear that this linkage, which is so essential to the development of Canadian export industries, will be lost in this reorganization, and that industry, which is currently under the Department of Regional and Industrial Economic Expansion, will be narrow and inward looking rather than in the broad and outward looking tradition of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Indeed, I can remember when the Department of Industry was first created as a separate Department from Trade and Commerce in approximately 1964. It operated that way for a few years until it was recognized to be more desirable to combine industry with trade and commerce for the very reasons I have given.

Now, as a result of the elaborate ideas of the former Secretary of the Privy Council, they are separated again. In my opinion it is a mistake and will be shown to be so as this unravels.

There is a second reason why some of us are concerned about placing the Minister of State for International Trade essentially within the Department of External Affairs to assist the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen). Rather than being a separate Minister in the Cabinet, we have a fear that trade orientation in the Department of External Affairs could possibly take over from orientation on policy and political matters, which is so crucial in all foreign policy discussions and decisions. Indeed, the Minister of State for External Relations appeared before the Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates. He was asked before the Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates. He was asked if the message from this departmental reorganization was that our External Affairs would be much more dominated by trade orientation—although I think it will be unsuccessful—to which the Minister said, "Yes, that is the message."

Some of us would have thought that it would have been far better to leave trade and commerce with industry where it was operating quite satisfactorily. There were close links at the mission level in the field with External Affairs. If we wanted to give a particular message in foreign policy terms, it might have been more desirable to have a Minister assisting the Secretary of State for External Affairs in such matters as arms control and disarmament. I suggest that could have been the type of additional policy thrust that could be used and, in my view, should have been used.

These points have been raised before and I have already indicated that there is almost no further point in talking about them because this is a fait accompli. Since the reorganization is under way I can only hope that when it comes time for the Committee to discuss the performance of the new Department we will have more clear charts of the organizational structure so that we can better understand it and have a clearer picture of the process of integration that all of this reorganization is supposed to achieve. While we are skeptical at the moment, we hope that at least within a year there will be something good to say about this particular reorganization, and specifically on these motions in relation to the Minister of State for International Trade.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon)—Garnishee, Attachment and Pension Diversion Act—Delay in proclamation. (b) Source of objections to proclamation; the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling)—Finance—Trust companies' restrictions on renewal of mortgages. (b) Request for legislation to assist home owners. (c) Government position; the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen)—Energy—Radioactive land fill in British Columbia.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-152, an Act respecting the organization of the Government of Canada and matters related or incidental thereto, (as reported with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, and Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3, 7 and 8 (Mr. Lambert), and Motion (Mr. Evans).

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Mr. Speaker, this is of some interest to members of the Committee and I rise to speak on this Bill because Members who were on the Committee know that this Bill has been the subject of some conversation in Committee. I hesitate to correct the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) but it is important to realize, in understanding this, that the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) does not have a deputy minister for international trade. There is a deputy minister for international trade who does not report to him but in fact reports to the Secretary of State (Mr. Joyal), as was pointed out a moment ago by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary. I will come back to his remarks because they reflect the nub of this issue.

To bring Members up to date let me say that some time ago the decision was taken to merge international trade with External Affairs. That decision has been taken and the reorganization has taken place. As the Hon. Member who preceded me stated, it is a fait accompli. In fact, when we were dealing with the diagrams with regard to this Bill at the committee, we discovered that the diagrams were out of whack with the Bill. The Government had to amend the Bill to bring it into conformity with the diagrams it was already circulating to its employees. This meant quite clearly that we were dealing with an administrative event after the fact. Let us accept that because we accepted it at committee.

When we were asking the question why we were changing the status of a Minister, it became very clear that there was more to this than the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary suggests. As the Government proposed, there was not to be a department of international trade within the Department of External Affairs, as there could have been, with the Minister at its head. There were some who believed that that was the streaming that made sense in order to preserve the integrity of the trade officers and the trade commissions. However, the Government, in its wisdom, chose not to do that but to make the whole thing report to a three-headed ministerial group, one of whom shall be the senior Minister and two of whom shall be junior Ministers. Quite reasonably, the Government used the Prime Ministerial power of appointment of Ministers of State to say that there shall be two Ministers of State under the Prime Minister's authority, one for international trade and one for external relations.

That is when the problem arose. I should explain that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has the right to appoint, withdraw or change his Ministers of State at any time unless those Ministers of State have status in law as the head of a Department under which the departmental authority is given to them by the House. We had two Ministers of State. The question arose as to whether the position of the Minister of State for International Trade could be abolished? The answer was that it could. Then someone wisely said that we had better come forward and obtain legislative authority to say that there shall be a legislative mandate stipulating that there shall be somebody—and I will come back to this in a minute—for international trade under the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Then we got the Bill indicating that there shall be—not may be—a Minister of International Trade. The proposed amendment suggests that there shall be—and that wording is important because it protects, as was intended, the guarantee that there would be somebody responsible for International Trade—somebody responsible in the Department. The amendment before the House guarantees that because we believe there should be somebody in the Department responsible for international trade. However, the Government went further than that. It did not simply say that there shall be a Minister of State but, rather, it said that there shall be a Minister. The argument made in committee, as was made here a few minutes ago by the Parliamentary Secretary, was that in the world at large there needed to be a Minister as opposed to a Minister of State.

The role of the Minister of State underneath the Minister is generally used in the world. In fact, if we look to our Mother Parliament, we find that the Secretary of State for External Affairs, or the British equivalent, has four Ministers of State under him, all of whom are widely accepted around the world in the export development role, the trade role, the general bilateral role between countries and the expected multilateral discussions, whether they be for foreign affairs, trade or whatever.

Then we return to the question of why Canada was doing it. In other words, why were we being asked to change a Minister of State who had no Department, no authority or no people, into a Minister? There are two answers to that question, which go beyond the question of the international role of developing trade. First, the incumbent of the post of Minister of State for International Trade did not like being called Minister of State; he preferred being called a Minister. It was not an international issue; it was a domestic issue. However, the most important part, after reading the entire Bill, was that under the Salaries Act a Minister of State who does not have a Department, as is the case of the two current Ministers of State, is not eligible for or does not count in the creation of the post called "Parliamentary Secretary". I will deal with the section on Parliamentary Secretaries in a moment, but it is relevant to mention it for the time being. Ministers of the Crown count in the creation of the post called "Parliamentary Secretary". The maximum number of Parliamentary Secretaries which can be created today is equivalent to the number of Ministers of the Crown.

The Bill proposes to say that the maximum number of Parliamentary Secretaries shall be the number of Ministers of the Crown, plus the number of Ministers of State who have Departments to administer. Lo and behold, someone figured out that neither the Minister of State for International Trade nor the Minister of State for External Relations would count in the Parliamentary Secretaries section because neither of them had a Department. In order to create two more Parliamentary Secretaries, the Government proposes to rename the two Ministers of State as Ministers. It does not change one whit, as the Parliamentary Secretary admitted a few moments ago, the status, power, ability or legislative authority of any of the occupants of the positions to call them "Ministers". It changes the capacity of the Government to add two more folks to the roster or the Government's payroll who will be called "Parliamentary Secretaries". Everyone who knows the House of Commons knows that we are desperately running out of Liberals who have not already had the plum. That is the only effect of the change as it is proposed.

I suggest that Hon. Members opposite should read the amendment very carefully because it is designed and written to meet the concerns of the Department and those concerned with international trade. It is reasonable that there should be the word "shall" in the clause on appointment in order to ensure that someone exists who is charged exclusively, if under the Secretary of State for External Affairs, with the responsibility for international trade development. This is absolutely essential to the future of Canada, but it is not important in terms of the administration or the law. It does not make any difference whether that person is called a Minister of State or a Minister.

Hon. Members opposite may or may not choose to rise to debate this point. I ask them to bring forward evidence, because none was presented before the committee, to refute it. We have asked repeatedly those involved in international trade whether the issue was a guarantee that there would be somebody named in the law, somebody who cannot be withdrawn by the Prime Minister, somebody who has been created by an Act of the House of Commons, to work exclusively in international trade, given that trade was being merged into external affairs. The answer has been, "That is what we want. If we cannot have a full trade commission, if we must accept the merger, at least give us someone responsible for trade".

In this amendment we are saying that there shall be a Minister of State for International Trade, but there does not need to be another Parliamentary Secretary and, therefore, there does not need to be a word change from Minister of State to Minister, a Minister who will have no staff or authority, save that delegated in writing and over the signature of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, no Department, no people to administer.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, I did not take part in the committee hearing, but I have heard what has been said this afternoon. I am amazed, with the television program from Great Britain, "Mr. Minister", having such wide appeal across Canada, that the Government would suddenly create another Minister for no purpose. Can we imagine a Minister being asked, "What is your Department?", and the Minister saying, "Oh, I do not have one; I am sort of the runaround boy for the Minister". Who will say, "Yes, Minister"? Does the Minister say, "Yes, Minister" to the Minister's Minister? Where do we go?

This is an effort to add to the illusion of having a Cabinet Minister responsible for something when in fact we do not have a Cabinet Minister responsible for anything other than carrying the bags of the Secretary of State for External Affairs. If that is what is intended, why does the Government not organize to have a series of Parliamentary Secretaries to assist the Secretary of State for External Affairs or, at the very most, a Minister of State to assist him? Surely to goodness to create another Minister who has no Department or direct responsibilities just so that he can be called a Minister makes no sense. That is what is being proposed by the Government in Clause 4 of the Bill.

Therefore, the amendment of my colleague makes eminent sense. We cannot go on forever trying to pretend that people are something they are not. The Government is pretending that it has a Minister in charge of international trade. Well, it does not. It has a Minister who is responsible to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It does not have a Minister for International Trade; it has a person who carries the suitcase of the Secretary of State for External Affairs when he goes on a trip. It may be someone the Minister can send on a trip to represent him, but the person is really not a Minister because the person has no direct ministerial responsibilities.

I, for one, feel that the reorganization Bill is wrong. We should have trade commissioners who are responsible to a Minister of trade. Trade matters should be followed up separately and distinctly from matters involving diplomacy, peace, war and the rest. Trade is perhaps one of the most important things we can be doing. Efforts should be made to have a Minister in charge of international trade as well as a Department of international trade. We do not need someone following the Minister of External Affairs around the world, somebody who is not directly responsible. We need someone who is responsible for ensuring that international trade is conducted for the advancement of the affairs of Canada.

This is a hopeless system. We have a Minister, but there is no Department for that Minister. The Minister is to assist the Minister in carrying out his responsiblities relating to international trade. What kind of law is that? If we are going to have a reorganization of the Government, we should rethink the whole Bill. If we want the person in charge of international trade as a Minister, as he should be, surely he should be responsible for international trade and have a Department. He should be the Minister of International Trade.

That is not what is happening here. This person who is to be called Minister is not a Minister, but a batboy. He is somebody who will carry the suitcases. He does not have the right to make a decision, he does not have a Department to direct and he cannot commit the Minister. He is to assist the Minister. He is an assistant or executive secretary.

That is not a Minister, and let us not say it is. Let us call him a Minister of State. There is nothing wrong with having Ministers of State. In fact, this is probably an excellent way of organizing the Cabinet system. Let us not get carried away by calling someone a Minister who is not a Minister.

As the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) said, the only reason for this is so that the Government can appoint an extra Parliamentary Secretary. Why have a Parliamentary Secretary for a Minister of State? If there is a need for additional help, surely that can be obtained. Perhaps we need more parliamentarians involved on the Government side. We should involve Parliament more often, but it should not be necessary to appoint a Parliamentary Secretary to a Minister who is not responsible for anything other than to carry the bags of the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

All that has happened here is that the current Ministers of State involving external relations and international trade feel a bit slighted by being called Ministers of State. They want to be full Ministers. That is too bad. Is there any reason why we should change the legislation of Canada in order to come to grips with the personal problem of two Ministers who should be Ministers of State because that is the way the organization chart works?

The statute we are now debating is not to be debated because of the personalities of the two Ministers of the Crown. They are Ministers of State. If their obligation is to follow the directions given to them by the Minister of External Affairs, that is their obligation in the Cabinet system. In that sense they are Ministers of State. Let us not call them Ministers, because they are not Ministers. They are batboys or servants, but not Ministers.

In the organization of Government, we must determine what is meant by the designation "Minister" and what is meant by the designation "Minister of State". It has been that the Minister of State is a Minister who assists another Minister, a sub-Minister or assistant Minister, if you like. We have a Minister of State for Finance to assist the Minister of Finance. That is proper. It is perhaps the way it should be organized.

I have some difficulty with this, but if it is the Government's organization pattern, then there should be a Minister for External Relations or External Affairs and Ministers of State as may be required to handle the External Affairs portfolio. Perhaps two or three Ministers of State are required to assist the Secretary of State for External Affairs. After all, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) is not very competent. We saw how competent he was in the Finance portfolio. Undoubtedly he needs a lot of assistance. He needs a great deal of help. There is certainly no call to have all of his helpers called full Ministers.

On that basis, it is totally wrong to follow through on the Bill in the way it has been presented. I commend to the House amendment No. 1 and the other amendments dealing with this issue in Clause 3. This is the way a matter of this nature should be handled.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I rise to take part in this debate on Motion No. 1 in the name of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert). The speakers from this side who preceded me have made the points very well. I will enter into the debate from the position of looking at other Departments. If you read the Bill, you will see that it states:

A Minister for International Trade shall be appointed—

The active word is "shall", not "as may be required". It states "shall be appointed". If that was standing by itself without the knowledge that we have of the Department and of the reorganization Bill, it would probably be an acceptable amendment. If the Government wished to create a Minister, it would imply that there would be a ministry. We could all accept that.

However, it goes on to say, "Shall be appointed by commission under the Great Seal to assist the Minister in carrying out". That refers to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. If that is put in context, the amendment that stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Edmonton West turns that around and states, "A Minister of State for International Trade", not a Minister.

Most people in Canada consider that a Ministry includes a Minister. If you look at the reorganization chart for the External Affairs Department, you see a fairly solid line connecting the present Minister of State for International Trade, who under this Bill will become a Minister. If you turn it around and look at the other side of the Department and look at the Ministry of State for External Relations, it is a very thinly dotted line connecting that part of the Department of External Affairs to the External Relations Secretariat as it now exists.

Mr. Speaker, if you would like to draw another conclusion with other Government Departments that we see now, under the Secretary of State there is a Secretary of State for Multiculturalism, and under the Department of the Secretary of State there is a solid hiving off with officials and with responsibilities under the Secretary of State for Multiculturalism. As a matter of fact, that Secretary of State for Multiculturalism, included in the Department of the Secretary of State, has more power than the Minister for International Trade, who will be assisting the Minister of External Affairs in his responsibilities under this Bill. He has more power to act as a Minister, to sign on behalf of his hived-off Department than we see under this amendment. Bill C-152 says that there will be a Minister of International Trade created, but there is no Ministry for that person to become involved in.

I guess you could go two ways; either there is a Secretary of State for International Trade and that is all, or there is a full Ministry. But under the Government reorganization Bill it is neither chick nor fowl. We are half in and half out. There is not the responsibility, there is not in this Bill a full Ministry, yet we are pulling a hoax, we are trying to prevent a Member on the Government side from having that power and being a full Minister.

What would happen if there was conflict? I think, Mr. Speaker, we are all aware that in international affairs there can occasionally be conflict between trade and relations with other countries in the External Affairs Department. If there is some point of recognition by the Government through External Affairs of some action which could jeopardize trade, who would carry the message for the trade side? Would it be, as in the Government reorganization Bill, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Regan), who really is just an assistant to the Minister of External Affairs, or if it were set up as a separate Ministry, would they argue as equal Ministers or, as it is under our amendment, would it be the secretary of state for international trade who, all in all, would then be recognized purely and simply as being an assistant?

I do not think, Mr. Speaker, we can expect understanding and sympathy from the Canadian public when words really do not mean anything. Either a Minister is a Minister with a full Department or a Minister is a Secretary of State assisting another Minister in a Department. If we are going to be straightforward and factual, as in the amendment put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton West, the Minister of State shall be called the Minister of State for international trade. There would not be any hoax. There would not be any use of words that misdirect people into thinking that there is a full Ministry behind the Minister for International Trade.

I hope that because the Government would like to represent itself as being straightforward so that there be no misunderstanding about its direction in this reorganization Bill it will accept the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West that the minister of state for international trade shall be appointed. When you say "shall" you are appointing a Minister without the full responsibility which most people in Canada expect from a Minister of the Crown.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I want to add a few observations as well to the amendment put forth by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 are an attempt by my colleague to bring some common sense to a proposed Government reorganization. Of course we know it is not going to be accepted in spite of the fact that it would be in the best interests of the nation and it makes sense, just practical, on the street common sense. It will never come about because the Government, the Cabinet, has decided it is going to be a certain way and it does not matter what any of the Opposition Members think. The Government will be backed by its Members who will not understand one bit of what this is really about but will stand and rise because the Cabinet made the decision.

We also know that the reason for the decision to call these two gentlemen Ministers rather than Ministers of State is really simply to flatter their personal egos. Where you were once a Minister to be seen to become a Minister of State is an enormous demotion in your personal status and image. Therefore, the whole operation of the Government of Canada is going to be shifted around so that two individuals can "keep their egos intact".

What a ridiculous way to run a Government. Surely the bottom line should always be what is in the best interest of the nation. I think the evidence is clear from many, many experts in the field that you simply cannot weld all of that world of external affairs where you have to deal with individuals in foreign countries and you have to deal with all sorts of political ideologies. You might, as a matter of external affairs, need to take a position in your country that is quite opposed to a position that you might take in trade. For example, throughout many wars in the past, where nations as a matter of external affairs have been in a state of war, they have continued at a different level to operate in trade. With both of those functions being under the Minister whom we normally call the Secretary of State for External Affairs, he has the total and final responsibility to try to weld these two together. It simply cannot be done. That is why we argue.

My friend, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) said that if we are going to go into this as a matter of principle we should have a separate Ministry for international trade. There are a lot of arguments to show that should be in place, because we are, as Canadians, a trading nation. We are a small nation with enormous resources. I think that most of our ordinary citizens genuinely do not appreciate the extent to which foreign trade brings wealth to this nation. Perhaps in the West we understand it because so much of our population is engaged in agriculture where the grain is exported directly. I would have thought that in manufacturing, most people working in plants, particularly the automobile industry, would realize that a lot of the automobile parts and cars are exported to the United States. At the grassroot level we do not seem to appreciate the fact that we are a tremendous trading nation and therefore surely that should be the most important of Departments.

What has the Government done? The Government has decided to make International Trade de facto a Ministry of State because all the powers and functions of the Minister responsible are the functions of a Ministry of State with no Ministry underneath, no departmental officials. Because of the ego factor we have to call them Mr. Minister so that they can feel important even though they do not have any Department. That is an incredible statement about the conduct of the national affairs of this nation by the Liberal Party and the Cabinet.

Mr. Speaker, this reorganization also shows the incredible departmental battles that go on below the Cabinet level of which most of us as individuals, even though we are elected here and attend committee meetings, have no idea. We had an example of that in the Canagrex battle where it was agricultural officials against IT and C officials. Unfortunately, again in that instance, Industry, Trade and Commerce lost the battle. All their trade officers, who have done an excellent job in international trade, were lost. They lost the battle, and a new Crown corporation, Canagrex, was created which can put officers in the field. We have further emasculated the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and put the trade operation in with the Department of External Affairs. We are going to have an industry in Canada carrying on with no direct links with the trade function and the trade commissioners. At the same time, the Department of Agriculture will be operating on its own. We could have half a dozen officers in Tokyo all from different Departments and acting as agents for the Minister of State for International Trade, and none of them knowing what they are doing. There will be confusion and, as a result, export sales will be lost. I can say without fear of contradiction that within a few years, even months, we will be reorganizing that Department. When it costs us exports, it costs us jobs, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps then, when thousands more people are drawing unemployment insurance, the Government will respond and common sense will prevail.

If we had put this in the hands of half a dozen Members of Parliament and ignored the politics of it we could have found a solution which was far different from this one. The parliamentary task forces have shown that it is possible.

I hope the Government has listened carefully to the Canadian Exporters' Association which made the case, and very forcefully, that policy and trade cannot be mixed. That association is convinced that the officials in the field who should be signing the bottom line, will now spend their time developing papers to be sent back to Ottawa will be taken over by policy end of things. We will have to watch that very carefully but under the present structure, I think it is inevitable.

I would ask my colleagues opposite to consider seriously Motions No. 1, No. 3 and No. 7, and not just follow the Government line. They should do what is right for the nation. It is clearly right for the nation that these people be called Ministers of State: that is what they are, de facto. Let us make them de jure what they are, de facto.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, last week in the House we had an example of an extraordinary situation of stumbling in precedence. The person who is third on the list in the Ministry is the Minister of State (External Relations). A question was put to the Minister of State (External Relations) (Mr. Pepin) which related to an external relations matter, namely the situation in Grenada. Up popped the Minister of State (International Trade) (Mr. Regan) to answer the question. The Minister of State (International Trade), is, at a rough estimate, about number 12 on the list of precedence. The Minister of State (External Relations) was in the House but he did not answer the question. The Minister of State (International Trade) answered the question on external affairs although the appropriate Minister, who is number three on the list of precedence in the Ministry, sat in his place and allowed the Minister of State (International Trade) to answer the question on international affairs.

I do not know whether this Bill is intended to sort out these anomalies and to clarify the situation with respect to precedence. As I understand precedence, it is arrived at by the date on which various members of the Ministry take the oath to become Minister. Therefore, I find it more than a little strange that number 12 on the list should override number three on the list and answer questions relating to a matter to which number three on the list would normally be expected to reply.

I suppose this whole thing boils down to the Bill before us to try to sort out the organizational mess in the Department of External Affairs by creating three Ministers—which is what the Bill seems to suggest is required—in order to run that huge Department. At one time there were something in the order of ten under-secretaries and assistant under-secretaries in that Department. About a week or ten days ago when I checked I found that there are 42 assistant under-secretaries or associate under-secretaries or deputy under-secretaries. Perhaps the creation of Ministers rather than Ministers of State is to give Members of Cabinet sufficient authority to keep track of and control these numerous members of the top echelons of the Department of External Affairs.

I know there has been a movement in the direction of integrating the trade commissioners service in Ottawa with the Department of External Affairs and getting the officers who have served abroad in the trade commissioner service under the same roof as members of the Department of External Affairs when they are at home. The purpose of this is not entirely clear to me. Having served a fair number of years in the Department of External Affairs, it was always my experience that members of the trade commissioner service were well integrated in the operations of the mission abroad. I can cite five, six, seven or eight posts in which I served where that was the fact. The reporting was done directly by the trade commissioner service to the Department of Trade and Industry. Through weekly meetings the other members in the post were made aware of the efforts being made by which the trade commissioner service abroad would find markets for our products.

Now we find that instead of remaining with the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, the trade commissioner service officers have been shifted, for administrative purposes in Ottawa, into the Department of External Affairs. We find that in order to look after their affairs in that Department, we need a Minister of State (International Trade) or, as this legislation suggests, a Minister for International Trade. Perhaps the problem, Mr. Speaker, is that the Minister of State (International Trade) is not able to control the trade officers who are under his jurisdiction and, therefore, he has to be a Minister. This triple Ministry—tricephalous is a good word—is a three-headed monster, if I can translate for your edification, Sir. The Department of External Affairs is a three-headed monster. There is no shortage of monsters. A couple of them have been picked and now they want three of them, and they have decided they shall be called "Minister Monsters", and this Bill is intended to create those Ministers.

The amendments which have been proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert), is to restore the designations which they ought to have since they are not really in charge of a full Department. They should continue to be called, for example, "Minister of State for International Trade". That eliminates the brackets. At least it does that, Mr. Speaker. I commend the Hon. Member for bringing forward an amendment which would eliminate those brackets, as they appear in the list of Ministries in the Wednesday Hansard. The same applies to Motion No. 3, "The Minister of State for", and again Motion No. 7, "the Minister of State for International Trade". There are three Ministers in one Department and it is described in subsequent clauses of the legislation that the "Minister" shall do this, and the "Minister" shall do that. It says in Part I(2):

> The Secretary of State for External Affairs (in this Part referred to as the "Minister")

Now they are introducing two additional Ministers in that section. Perhaps the best way to categorize this legislation is that it is very sloppily drafted. It bears all the marks of an organizational whiz-kid who decides that he wants to reshuffle matters, possibly to the satisfaction of the recipients of those titles, so that they may satisfy their egos that they are indeed Ministers and not just Ministers of State.

I do not know whether one Minister or the other was instrumental in ensuring that this Bill was drafted and brought forward in its present form. However, I believe if we were to look at the table of precedents in the most recent Wednesday's Hansard, we would find that there are in fact nine Ministers of State responsible for a variety of different areas of Government; External Relations, the Canadian Wheat Board, International Trade, Economic Development, Science and Technology, Multiculturalism, Fitness and Amateur Sports, Small Business and Tourism, and Finance. Are we going to be faced, Mr. Speaker, in the days to come, with the requirement that all these Ministers of State, some of whom have Departments under their jurisdiction, some of whom have not, will be required to be called, for example, Minister for Fitness and Amateur Sports? The Minister of State for Finance will be in some difficulty because we already have one Minister of Finance, and that, Mr. Speaker, if I may suggest, is quite enough.

I do find it odd that we should today be debating this particular matter. Incidentally, I should add that a little advance notice on this would have helped. I had a number of notes on the reorganization proposals for the Department of External Affairs which I had hoped to be able to use in any discussion in the House on this particular Bill. I find, however, that those notes have somehow or other disappeared with a lot of other papers and have become mislaid. Consequently, I am not able to focus on these amendments to the extent I feel they deserve.

In the final analysis, Mr. Speaker, we cannot have a three-headed Department of Government. I think we are asking for trouble. I think we should decide now to accept the amendments, and I do hope that Members on the other side will consider the disputes which can arise as to jurisdiction within that Department. At one time, I believe, members of that Department could hold up their heads with pride at the job they were doing. Now, unfortunately, I have to say that altogether too many of them are just waiting for the day of their retirement. They are putting in their time, and that is a dreadful thing to have to say about public servants. They are not putting in that energy, that professionalism for which they have spent many years in training, into that particular Department. They are having to juggle themselves and rearrange themselves and unfortunately, I must admit, jockey for positions within that Department rather than attend to the matters to which they originally, with a great degree of dedication, were prepared to commit themselves to serve Canada both at home and abroad.

In support of my contention that they are having to jockey for position, I would suggest to you that some of the most highly trained, some of those with the greatest of experience, are serving at home because they find that the possibilities of getting along in the Department are much more likely to occur if they are within the range of one or other of these Ministers—it used to be just one. Now they will have to deal with three Ministers to make sure they have jockeyed in the right direction.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I do urge upon Hon. Members opposite that they consider most seriously the amendments which have been put forward by my colleague, and that when the time comes to vote on these amendments, they will vote in favour.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to draw something to the attention of Hon. Members and to the Chair. There somehow seems to have arisen in Motions Nos. 7 and 8 some words which, frankly, result in a bit of nonsense. The purport of Motions Nos. 1 and 2 is to create positions, or to insist that there be positions of Ministers of State. Ministers of State are normally paid under Section 5 of the Salaries Act if they have a departmental responsibility. They are known as Ministers of State. If one looks at the amendment sections as proposed by the substitution, one finds the words:

—and substituting the following therefor: "the Minister of State for International Trade".

One sees that one is amending Section 4 of the Salaries Act which deals with Ministers only. In other words, not Minister of State, but "Ministers".

I do not know where this came from, where the gremlin crept in, because the memorandum of amendments which I signed at the Table did not include these two amendments. I do know, however, that there was a phone call to my office which suggested that something had to be done, there had to be something done to Schedule I. Thanks to the vigilance of the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) who alerted me to the, shall we say, double-whammy of these amendments, and with the consent of the House I would amend my Motions Nos. 7 and 8. Motion No. 7 would be amended in line 4 by stopping after the word "Trade", period. There is no substitution. Motion No. 8 has not yet been called but I propose to do the same thing after the word "Relations".

Therefore, I move:

That Motion No. 7 be amended by deleting in line 4 thereof all the words after "Trade".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member seeks the unanimous consent of the House to amend his Motion No. 7 such as to leave in the words "the Minister for International Trade"—

Mr. Lambert: And strike out everything else.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): —and strike out everything else. I apologize to the Hon. Member but could he indicate to the Chair again what he wants to do with Motion No. 8?

Mr. Lambert: Strike out everything after the word "Relations". But only when Motion No. 8 is called.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): As the Hon. Member indicates, we are not yet at Motion No. 8.

The Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) seeks to amend his own motion such that the words following "The Minister for International Trade" would be struck out. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Chair is, of course, seeking other Members who may wish to enter the debate on Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7. Otherwise I will put the question.

Mr. Lambert: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I should indicate that it was Madam Speaker or the Deputy Speaker who ruled that Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 would be grouped for debate and a vote on Motion No. 1 will also dispose of Motion No. 3. In that event I will put the question on Motions Nos.—

Mr. Lambert: Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is not so indicated here. Therefore, I will put the question on Motion No. 1, and in due course that may or may not dispose of Motions Nos. 3 and 7. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I declare the motions lost on division.

Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 7 negatived on division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In accordance with the ruling it would appear that the motions for debate at this point will be Motions Nos. 2 and 8. They are grouped for debate and a vote on Motion No. 2 will dispose of Motion No. 8. The Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, this deals with with position of the Minister for External Relations. In committee an amendment was introduced by the Government where, in Clause 9(2) the deputy minister shall be known as the deputy minister for political affairs. I do not know how many more types of affairs we are going to have but we have a Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), a Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), and his deputy minister for political affairs. I know I am facing up to the Government in its monolithic thinking where the Cabinet has said that this is going to be and the voices line up behind it. We have had the explanation for the creation of a Minister for International Trade. That takes the Trade out of Industry, Trade and Commerce and of course the Industry part is going over to a Minister of Industrial Development, and Commerce just dies. Except that, initially, the Commerce part dealt with business in Canada, but somewhere along the line no continuing emphasis has been maintained in that connection.

As I explained on Motion No. 1 which dealt with international trade, we have in this particular instance a Minister whose duties could quite conceivably be discharged by an efficient Parliamentary Secretary, in fact, a second Parliamentary Secretary if the Minister is so over-loaded due to the indolent nature of the Minister. We know he is not the most active and energetic of men, a man who rather than face up to an issue will duck out and not appear. This we have seen time and time again when he was the Minister of Finance and in other capacities. I have known him for 20 years as a Minister and frankly that has been one of the characteristics of his administration. So I do not see the necessity for having these Ministers, and quite clearly, as the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) said, these appointees are being given a title so that in the foreign pecking order they shall rank in title as full Ministers.

Then we have the Minister for External Relations. Well, if you did not know the difference, you might think he was the Secretary of State for External Affairs. But on the international level there is that ultimate pecking order and that is what we are being asked to look after in this particular amendment. In addition to which we are raising his title to that of a Minister under Section 4 of the Salaries Act so that he may be paid not only his salary as Minister but he shall be entitled to a Parliamentary Secretary. You see, Section 5 of the Salaries Act, Mr. Speaker, covers Ministers of State. Ministers of State who do not have as a specific assignment a section of a Department are not entitled to a Parliamentary Secretary. For example, the Minister of State who is responsible for financial institutions is not entitled to a Parliamentary Secretary. This particular appointee is being classified as a Minister for External Affairs so that he may have a Parliamentary Secretary. This Bill could become popularly known as the financial emancipation of the Liberal backbenchers Bill because it creates a maximum of five more Parliamentary Secretaries.

Section 25 of the Bill will allow for some Parliamentary Secretaries to be named in the other place because, apparently, somebody must be able to reply there beyond the two or three Ministers who are there already, none of whom have any departmental responsibilities. I suppose therefore that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) would like to have a nominee Parliamentary Secretary in the other place. Perhaps the Minister of State for External Affairs might like one as well.

I know that there will be two or possibly three Parliamentary Secretaries created by this particular Bill. I would like to reserve my argument on that, Mr. Speaker, until we get to the appropriate section. That is the only reason for the provisions of this Bill. They are purely cosmetic and will not improve the operations of the Department one jot or tittle. The Department of External Affairs will not be improved one iota by reason of the possible appointment of a Minister who will be called a Minister for External Relations.

Under the Ministries and Ministers of State Act there is already the power to appoint a Minister of State. This new Act allows for the appointment of a Minister for External Relations. He will be present in full cutaway coat and striped trousers if need be. That along with the creation of more Parliamentary Secretaries is the purpose of this Bill. Of course, the creation of more Parliamentary Secretaries is within the discretion of the patronage of the Liberal backbench. In the maximum of two years that it takes to rotate the Liberal backbench, somebody somewhere will have been able to collect something during that time.

There are presently 35 Ministers. There were 36 Ministers until one appointment went off like a damp squid. There are 27 Parliamentary Secretaries. There is now the potential for another five Parliamentary Secretaries. So the score in the football game will become that much closer. It will only be 35 to 32.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, if I could see something in these provisions which would improve the Department of External Affairs, I would agree with them. However, there is already a Minister of State, and my amendment proposes that he shall exist. That could have been done under the Ministries and Ministers of State Act. The responsibilities of the Minister would have been the same. There would have been no changes, but because of the title that is to be given to this Minister, he may parade on the square in full dress uniform and will become entitled to a Parliamentary Secretary.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): Before I recognize the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett), I would like to remind the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) that there was no seconder for the motion which was put before us. It would be helpful to the Table if we could have a seconder.

I recognize the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon) as seconding the motion.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. May I at this moment bring forward the remarks I made with regard to Motion No. 8 which require amendment? I do not think I have to repeat the words, but the amendment, with the unanimous consent of the House, is to delete all of the words after the word "Relations" in line 4 of Motion No. 8 which is standing in my name.

I therefore move:

That Motion No. 8 be amended by deleting in line 4 thereof all the words after "Relations".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The House has heard the Hon. Member for Edmonton West and it has heard the amendment he has proposed with respect to Motion No. 8, which was identical to that which he proposed for Motion No. 7. That amendment is that after the words "Minister for External Relations," all other words in his own amendment be struck out. Dealing with the seconder to the amendment, I thank the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro). It was moved by Mr. Lambert and seconded by Mr. McKinnon (Victoria) as I have indicated to the House. It requires unanimous consent, and I presume that the House is prepared to give that consent.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): May I indicate that with respect to Motion No. 7 we simply lack a procedural formality and that is that there was not at that time a seconder for the motion. I would ask the House if it is acceptable that the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich be the seconder on that motion.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, while we are tidying up the motions of the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert), I wonder if I could draw to his attention the fact that he has made what I am sure is an inadvertent mistake in Motion No. 2. He has said, in relation to line 2 of Clause 5 of Bill C-152, that the following should be substituted therefor: "A Minister of State for External Relations shall." Of course, I am sure that the wording that he intended was: "A Minister of State for External Relations may."

It is almost six o'clock, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I may continue my remarks tomorrow and perhaps I may remind the Hon. Member for Edmonton West that Clause 4 which reads "shall" was deliberately made to read "shall"; i.e., it was mandatory that there be a Minister of State for International Trade. Clause 5 reads "may" because the Minister for External Relations may or may not be appointed. A great many of us were confused by this and it was explained to us in committee. As a matter of fact, I very much hope that Conservative Members are not saying that a Minister of State for External Relations must be appointed. We do not think there should be any such Minister at all, but if the Hon. Member inserts the word "shall" as he does now, then it will become obligatory to appoint a Minister of State for External Relations. I do not think that is what the Hon. Member intended. May I call it six o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): No, I would prefer it if the Hon. Member did not call it six o'clock for a moment. So that debate may continue in an orderly way tomorrow, I would call upon the Hon. Member for Edmonton West so that we can clear up the matter and move on at six o'clock.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, it is very clear that the answer to that question is that if the word was not present, the hon. lady would not be talking about this amendment and could not put forward her argument about not appointing the Minister.

Miss Jewett: I think the Hon. Member has missed my point.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In that case, I think the two Hon. Members can confer on this matter tomorrow.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

GARNISHEE, ATTACHMENT AND PENSION DIVERSION ACT—DELAY IN PROCLAMATION. (B) SOURCE OF OBJECTIONS TO PROCLAMATION

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, on September 16, 1983, I asked the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) a question concerning a delay in proclaiming Bill C-38. I now rise to participate in this adjournment debate because I find myself shocked and distressed at the treatment Bill C-38 has received since it was passed by the House on June 18, 1982. It is a year and a half since this House passed the Bill and it has not yet been proclaimed in all parts.

The Minister said in his answer, and quite truthfully, that the handling of this Bill was a "spectacle which might be considered rather unedifying for the people of the country." I am not certain that many people in the country are aware of this Bill. It mainly affects single parent families whom I do not expect have much time to watch the procedures of this House and look for this legislation. I would assume that the Minister responsible for the status of women is totally unaware of the effect the delay in proclaiming this Bill has on a very large group of women.

Part I of the Bill was proclaimed and is not part of my objection. Parts II, III and IV have not yet been proclaimed and consequently are not in effect after 17 months.

Let me read the title of the Bill so that Members will understand what I am talking about. Bill C-38 is:

An Act to provide for the garnishment or attachment of Her Majesty in right of Canada and for the diversion of pension benefits payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada under certain enactments.

The final paragraph of the Bill deals with proclamation. Clause 56 states:

(1) Part I shall come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation.

(2) Parts II, III and IV shall come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation.

I am particularly concerned that Part II, which deals with diversion of pension benefits to satisfy financial support orders, has not been proclaimed 17 months after it passed.

In general terms, Part II provides for the diversion of pensions to provide enforcement of financial support orders against pension benefits payable pursuant to the Superannuation Acts and like enactments referred to in the Schedule.

After waiting several months for Parliament's will to be done, I began to ask questions regarding this Bill. I believe I questioned the former Minister of National Defence on this matter at five or six consecutive meetings of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence. It became apparent that a stall was being imposed on Parliament by its own bureaucracy.

In response to one of my inquiries, I received a copy of a memorandum sent to the Minister of Justice on June 20, 1983, which said:

Part II dealing with pension diversion is to be proclaimed at some point in the future. No time has been set for proclamation because of the need to iron out technical problems relating to the pensions of MPs and Senators.

That was signed by a departmental assistant in the Department of Justice. In all my inquiries about this Bill and its proclamation, I have never found a Senator or MP who questioned this Bill. In fact, they were quite unanimous in support of the Bill when it was before Parliament.

Another example of the attitude taken of Parliament by the bureaucracy in the case of this Bill is contained in a letter which the Minister of National Defence sent to me in reply to a question as to why a court order diverting 50 per cent of an annuity had been paid at a fixed dollar amount instead of rising with the indexation of the pension. The Minister of National Defence stated:

The legal advisors are of the opinion that 'Armed Forces pension income' refers to the CFSA annuity only and does not apply to any increase payable under the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act.

Part II of Bill C-38, which has not been proclaimed, indicates at page 9 that "pension benefit" in subparagraph (g) "includes any benefit payable under the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act or the Public Service Pension Adjustment Act in respect of that pension, annual allowance or annuity." In other words, it means that indexation will be applied to the payments made to the families.

The case before the courts which the Minister mentioned concerns only Part I of the Bill which has been proclaimed, garnishment of wages. I cannot see any reason a court action concerning garnishment should be used as an excuse for continuing delays in proclaiming Parts II, III and IV which deal with diversion of pensions to satisfy court orders for family support. It is quite different than garnishment of wages.

Members of Parliament knew what they were doing when they passed this Bill divesting themselves of an archaic financial self-protection device which was neither suitable nor equitable in this day and age. The Senators and the Crown agree, and what we have been faced with is a monumental affront to Parliament in this continuing war between democracy and bureaucracy.

Mr. Al MacBain (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, on September 16, 1983, when the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon) questioned the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) in the House about the delay in proclaiming Parts II to IV of the Garnishment, Attachment and Pension Diversion Act, litigation was proceeding in a local Small Claims Court. At that time the Minister indicated that perhaps further legislative clarification as to whether or not Members and employees of Parliament were affected by that legislation might be required. On October 12, his Honour Judge Tierney of the Seventh Small Claims Court of the Judicial District of Ottawa-Carleton ruled that the salaries paid to employees of the House of Commons may be garnisheed under the Act.

The decision on whether or not to honour the decision of the Court or to pursue an appeal is in the hands of Madam Speaker and the employee in question. I would simply note at this point that the Minister indicated that should legislative action be deemed necessary, he would be consulting with the House Leader and Opposition critics.

When Parliament passed Bill C-38, of course it fully intended that Members and the staff of Parliament should be subject to the Garnishment, Attachment and Pension Diversion Act. All of us want to ensure that this intention is carried out. If legislative action is required, I am certain the House will act quickly and expeditiously.

FINANCE—TRUST COMPANIES' RESTRICTIONS ON RENEWAL OF MORTGAGES. (B) REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION TO ASSIST HOME OWNERS. (C) GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, on October 14, as reported at pages 28027 and 28028 of Hansard, I asked questions of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) regarding the Interest Act and the fact that some trust companies and others were including a clause in their mortgage renewal loan agreements which required applicants for mortgage loans to waive their rights under Section 10 of the Interest Act.

I should like to quote from a current mortgage document. It reads:

> You expressly waive any right of prepayment you now have or hereinafter may have pursuant to Section 10 of the Interest Act (Canada) and/or any similar federal or provincial legislation permitting prepayment prior to the maturity date of the loan agreement.

The Government of Canada, in its wisdom, caused to be passed an Act entitled the Interest Act. That Act gives a right to a mortgagor who wants to prepay a mortgage. The Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba have passed similar legislation which gives rights of prepayment to a mortgagor. The essence of Section 10 is that one may prepay a mortgage which has a five-year or longer term upon the payment of three months of interest penalty.

It now appears that a federally-chartered trust company can write into a contract a clause which strips the rights given a home owner or mortgagor under legislation passed by the Parliament of Canada and the provincial legislatures of Ontario and Manitoba. I say that this is wrong. No corporation or other organization should be allowed to take from a citizen of Canada a statutory right passed by the Parliament of Canada and the legislatures of the Provinces and Territories.

Further, there was an action before the Supreme Court of British Columbia that dealt with the five-year period set down in Section 10 of the Interest Act. An insurance company claimed that the mortgage date for determining the five-year period set forth in Section 10 was the date of the Mortgage Renewal Agreement. By that strange logic you would never be able to exercise your rights under Section 10. By juggling the renewal date, they could arrange it so that the five-year anniversary date would never occur.

The B.C. Supreme Court ruled that the effective date of the mortgage for purposes of calculating the five-year period was not the renewal date, but rather the date the original mortgage document was signed.

To counter the ruling of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, some trust companies are adding a sentence that reads "The original mortgage is deemed to be dated as of the maturity date of the existing loan". This sets aside the ruling of the Supreme Court of British Columbia. There was no challenge to the ruling of the court. No appeal was launched. They merely added 17 words to a mortgage renewal document that sets aside the ruling of the court.

Where is this leading us? Is the Government and Parliament going to allow a handful of trust companies to write into their contracts provisions that take from one party in the contract a right of prepayment set forth in federal and provincial statutes? Is this what Canada is all about? Are trust companies above the law? Can they, by adding a clause to a mortgage contract, set aside the decision of the Parliament of Canada and the legislatures of the Provinces of Canada as expressed in statutes passed by those bodies?

Any commercial or private contract, mortgage, or other instrument that, through its languages, expressly removes a right given to one party in a contract by federal or provincial statute should be prohibited by law.

It is no defence to say the matter would be defeated in a court of law. That view only compounds the seriousness of the actions of some trust companies. It smacks of manipulation of the law, for it says that if you, the mortgagor, have the time and the money, you can pursue a decision through the court and thus exercise your right under the Interest Act. Otherwise, you are bound by the terms of the contract even though they may be declared void by an action in a court of law.

We are not dealing here with a corporation with resources. We are dealing with a home owner who has a mortgage, the interest rate of which has been increased, putting financial stress on the home owner. You may wish to argue that the financial condition of the plaintiff is of no concern to the court. Whatever your argument, it should not be lawful for a corporation or anyone to cause one party to a contract to be stripped of his or her rights in that contract.

There are those who would have you believe that a contract is a contract and the matter ends there. In fact, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) has said as much; at the same time expressing her concern for the mortgagor.

Again, this is no defence for the trust company. We have written proof that the waiving of rights under Section 10 of the Interest Act was not discussed with prospective mortgagors. The addition of an interest differential charge was not discussed during the mortgage negotiations. In other words, most of the mortgage negotiations between some of the trust companies and the home owner seeking a mortgage were less than truthful.

We did have The Trust Companies Association before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. They were able to respond to a question on this subject, but the Chairman of the committee ruled that we must pursue other matters as The Trust Companies Association was before the committee on another subject.

We must continue to ask questions and take part in these debates and bring this matter to the attention of Parliament. Sometimes I wonder if anyone is listening out there, if anyone really gives a darn or if this matter will be frustrated along until, through the passage of time, the mortgages will run to term and the trust companies involved will have been successful in the largest rip-off in our history.

Adjournment Debate

Mr. Douglas Fisher (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling) certainly shares with me and the Government considerable concern on this particular issue. I personally welcome the inquiries he has made and the initiative he has taken on this, and the opportunity he has given us to discuss government action and future courses of action.

I was with the Hon. Member on the Finance Committee when we deliberately raised this with the trust companies. I think he heard, as I did, that this is really a balancing act that we are trying to get across. On the one hand, as he pointed out very articulately, we have a problem with potential fraud or at least misleading innocent home owners. On the other hand we do not want to solve those specific cases by ruining the whole mortgage market. The Hon. Member knows that full well.

What has the Government done in this regard? First of all, I would remind him of the ongoing operation of the Canada Mortgage Renewal Plan. I personally helped one of my own constituents to get a $3,000 grant under this scheme to lower the impact of the mortgage payments on their family income. That grant still stands. It is a good safety valve for individual home owners.

Second, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) indicated that she has the director of investigations and research checking, under the Combines Investigation Act, whether some kind of criminal or misleading behaviour has taken place.

Third, the Government has made it clear that it wants to review the Canada Interest Act to strengthen its provisions in order to avoid these kinds of misleading operations in the future.

Finally, we must remind all Canadians that they are signing a contract; that they are binding themselves.

I understand that there were about 750,000 people who took out high interest rate mortgages during the real crisis period of 1981 and 1982. Of those, we estimate that approximately 80 per cent or 600,000 took short-term mortgages, and that those people are seeing their problem solved now because mortgage rates have dropped so dramatically.

As for the other people, the vast majority knew what they were doing. They wanted the security of a four or five-year mortgage and they undertook that deliberately. The balance are people whose cases we have to investigate without destroying the whole mortgage market, but without allowing improper or misleading practices to continue I join the Hon. Member for Burlington in his concern about this issue.

ENERGY—RADIOACTIVE LAND FILL IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, on September 23 I rose in the House to ask a question of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien) regarding a land swindle that took place in Surrey in 1975. A constituent of mine innocently bought some valuable commercial property for his business only to find out later that the land fill on that property was material brought in from outside British Columbia which contained low level radioactive thorium, with the result that everyone in the surrounding area, and certainly the employees of the company working there, are very concerned about the exposure they face from that low level radiation. It may be that there is no immediate health danger, buit it may be that there is.

I have been working on this problem since 1978. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I have a letter dated September 2, 1978, from the former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, one Mr. Alastair Gillespie of "coalgate" fame.

An Hon. Member: Cheap shot.

Mr. Friesen: He states, in the last paragraph of his letter: "I have asked the AECB to give priority consideration to the resolution of this matter in the interest of the concerns of the Surrey community". That was in 1978. If that is the speed with which this Government operates it is no wonder the country is in the mess it is in. At the time I did not know the interrelationship of that particular swindle.

A former Member of Parliament of the Liberal Government, one Mark Smerchanski from southern Manitoba, owned a company called Fundy Chemical. He represented southern Manitoba from 1968 to 1972, but was defeated in the 1972 election. Knowing what he was doing, he foisted that polluted land onto an innocent customer. As soon as the customer found out what he had bought he took Mr. Smerchanski to court. At the beginning of the court proceedings Mr. Smerchanski had $250,000 in a Fundy Chemical account, but by the time proceedings were finished the account was bone dry with the result that the company received nothing and is still waiting. Even though the customer won an $800,000 settlement, he has received nothing from Mr. Smerchanski.

I ask the Government whether it understands the kind of financial implication this has for a company? Does it realize that all the financial structure of a company like this is based on the value of its property? If that property is worth $800,000, or $1 million, according to the court's settlement, and he takes the value of that property to the bank as collateral for a loan and the bank realizes the land is virtually valueless because it is contaminated, how much would the bank give him? The whole financial structure of the company is raped because this one man violated a sense of trust with a customer.

Is the Government taking all these years to deal with the problem because it has a cozy relationship with Mr. Smerchanski and does not want to contaminate that relationship? Is the government slow in acting because it does not know what to do with the material or because it does not care? Is the Government pursuing options in British Columbia as a result of the possibility of a new site for this kind of material being found in the general area of Ashcroft. Does the Minister realize what this has done to the financial picture of this company? Does he realize at all what it means to a company like this in terms of its financial future?

I ask the Parliamentary Secretary if we can expect an immediate resolution of this problem so that the employees working on the site can expect to work in safety. Will the Government underwrite soil removal on that land fill site so that employees are not in danger? For example, would the Government get different property for this company so that it does not have to bear the cost of having semi valueless property? Will it remove all that material to a site that will contain radioactivity, and thereby remove any threat to the health of the people of British Columbia, and particularly of Surrey? What kind of financial support will the Government underwrite for a constituent who has been violated by a former member of the Government and needs some kind of recourse to restore the health of his company?

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have always had a good deal of respect for the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), but I must say I am a little disappointed that the case he advocates today is so full of innuendo.

It should be noted that the involvement of a former Liberal MP in this case has not in any way influenced the actions of this Government. I would remind Hon. Members that the low level radioactive waste at Surrey B.C. is the result of the importation and processing of a metallurgical ore in 1972. The resulting 350 tonnes of slag was on the Anvil Way property of Fundy Chemicals when it was bought by Comor Supplies in 1975. The import licence for the ore material included a requirement to obtain AECB approval before disposal.

The new owner was informed of the radioactive content of the slag by an AECB inspector in 1976 and has since successfully prosecuted the former owner for fraud. The latest judgment, which was for $642,000 from the B.C. Supreme Court in August 1982, was based on the cost of cleanup and removal of the wastes from the Anvil Way site. The new proprietor has also introduced a court action against the AECB and the B.C. Ministry of the Environment which, if successful, would require that a site be found for the waste. The federal Government is now actively co-operating with the B.C. Government in trying to resolve this problem once and for all.

However, the Hon. Member asked if the Government of Canada was doing anything or was concerned about low level radioactive waste. I wish to inform him that a Low Level Radioactive Waste Management Office under AECL has been set in motion and that office, Mr. Speaker, has two main objectives. The first is to undertake those studies and actions necessary to resolve historic waste problems which are the responsibility of the federal Government. Historic wastes are those which have been managed in a manner no longer considered satisfactory and for which the original producer cannot reasonably be held responsible. The historic wastes consist mainly of soil contaminated with radium and uranium and were formerly the responsibility of the Federal-Provincial Task Force on Radioactivity. The second objective is to establish or arrange for the establishment of a waste management collection and disposal service which can be used by appropriate producers and users of radio isotopes on a fee for service basis.

I am pleased to say that since the formation of this office considerable progress has been made with the co-operation of the provincial governments. I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that in the coming months and, indeed, the coming years, this matter will be resolved, not only to the satisfaction of the residents of the Hon. Member's constituency, but also to the satisfaction of Members of Parliament.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It being 6.30 p.m., and in view of the honoured presence of the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker), the House now stands adjourned until eleven o'clock tomorrow morning.

At 6.30 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT (NO. 3)

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council) moved that Bill C-169, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act (No. 3), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to explain very briefly the tenor of this legislation, which, as agreed, will be passed at all stages within the next few minutes.

This bill introduces several amendments to one of the most important parts of the Canada Elections Act, namely, the provisions concerning election expenses. These changes have received the unanimous support of all parties represented in the House of Commons, and embody the recommendations of the Chief Electoral Officer and the political parties as formulated after the general elections of 1979 and 1980.

This legislation should be seen as both updating a number of rules and revising others. It would, however, be useful to point out four major changes. First, there will be indexation of maximum election expenses for parties and candidates. Second, there will be a new formula for reimbursing candidates' expenses. Third, there will also be a new formula for reimbursing expenses of political parties, and finally, election expenses may no longer be incurred by third parties.

The first change is therefore to index maximum election expenses for parties and candidates. The present maximum was set in 1974 and has not been adjusted since, despite a constant increase in election costs, so that now the maximum is much too low. This situation has to be corrected if all candidates are to be able to conduct a normal election campaign. The adjustment formula is based on annual indexation according to the consumer price index, going back to 1981, one year after the last general election. With this formula, it will no longer be necessary to amend the Canada Elections Act from time to time to adjust maximum expenses. Candidates and parties will now be able to spend about 30 per cent more during the next federal election than they could in 1979 and 1980.

The second change brings a new formula for reimbursing expenses of candidates. At the present time, reimbursement is based on postage costs for mailings to voters.

Because of the constant rise in postal rates since 1974, candidates in densely populated ridings would have been entitled to reimbursements equal to or in excess of the present maximum. This would have put candidates in sparsely populated ridings at a distinct disadvantage and would also have been a contradiction of the intent of the Act which is to encourage candidates to raise funds from their supporters.

Under the formula being proposed today, reimbursements to eligible candidates will be not more than 50 per cent of allowable expenses.

The third change introduces a new formula for reimbursing expenses of political parties. At the present time, 50 per cent of the broadcasting time purchased by political parties during an election campaign is reimbursed, which encourages parties to concentrate election expenses on advertising in the electronic media. Under the formula being proposed today, the parties, provided they meet certain criteria, will be reimbursed for 22.5 per cent of their election expenses, whatever these may be. This change was made in response to representations by the printed media regarding a formula they considered discriminatory.

Finally, the fourth change concerns the elimination of election expenses incurred by third parties. The intent of the present legislation is to equalize the chances of all candidates in all parties, by setting reasonable limits on election expenses and by guaranteeing reimbursement of a considerable part of those expenses. This basic principle of equality is unfortunately ignored at times by groups or individuals, other than political parties or candidates, that make substantial election expenditures during an election campaign without going through a candidate or party. There is no record of these expenditures, which gives some candidates or parties an undue advantage. Under the Bill before the House today, all election expenses shall be made solely by the parties and the candidates who are running.

Finally, the Bill provides that a broadcasting arbitrator, rather than the CRTC, will decide on the apportioning of broadcasting time to the parties concerned.

If I may summarize, Mr. Speaker, these are amendments that became absolutely necessary as a result of what happened during the last two general elections. They reflect the intent of the Election Expenses Act of 1974, now part of the Canada Elections Act, which is to provide a legal framework in which all candidates and parties are given a fair chance during elections.

[English]

Mr. Chuck Cook (North Vancouver-Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak to the amendments to the Canada Elections Act, which I believe to be one of the most fair in the world. In two elections a millionaire candidate ran against me and quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, without the Canada Elections Act I doubt very much whether I would be here today. The Act limits the spending of candidates so that the poor man has as equal an opportunity to convince his riding that he should be sent to Parliament as the wealthy man.

In the past, of course, many elections were bought. If one candidate could spend $150,000, $200,000 or $300,000 on an election and another candidate could only spend $20,000 to inform the riding of the issues, the wealthy chap was more likely to get his message through. Those days are gone due to the Canada Elections Act; the amount of money that an individual candidate is allowed to spend now means that politics is not just a rich man's game.

We are all familiar with the abuses in elections in the past. This Bill covers most of them and the changes will contribute to an improved Act. We are all familiar too with the five-dollar voter who was common in other jurisdictions, with the excesses of New York's Tammany Hall over the years and those great elections in Chicago in the twenties when practically every resident of every cemetery in the city voted in the civic elections! The interesting thing about that was that, generally speaking, they voted twice in two different districts.

Of course, there has been the long, long struggle in terms of universal suffrage and ensuring that half of humankind—women—got the vote on an equal basis with men.

These amendments to the Canada Elections Act have been discussed, gone over and looked at in meetings I have attended for at least a couple of years now. All parties were involved in open discussion. There is no advantage to any individual party in these amendments, but there is an advantage in terms of every Parliamentarian and everyone who might wish to be a Parliamentarian.

I will give an example of exactly how this process works by referring to an amendment which went through earlier this year. All parties, represented by officials of the individual parties, had discussions with the Chief Electoral Officer. It was decided that there should be some change made in the length of time that an election ran. The discussions went on far into the night on many occasions. Quite frankly, coming from an urban riding, I was highly in favour of what some of the Provinces had done, that is, cut an election period back to 28 days or 30 days, something of that nature.

However, it became quite evident in these discussions, and particularly when the amendments got to the Privileges and Elections Committee, that there were many ridings where this would be totally unfair. In my Province of British Columbia, Mr. Speaker, we have ridings which are 500 miles long. It takes more than a full day to drive from one end of the riding to the other. There are other ridings, of course, much more compact in city centres. We found this distance to be a problem, not only in British Columbia but in Alberta, and I am sure some of the Quebec and Northern Ontario ridings also required more than that minimum time just to get around the riding.

For example, a riding up the coast of British Columbia right now wishes to hold its nominating meeting. It takes a minimum of five days—more likely eight days—to hold a nominating meeting. That is because meetings have to be held in five centres of population within that riding. That may sound a little strange to urban Members; however, when one travels to what we call "up country" in British Columbia, it is a totally different ball game. Therefore, there was a compromise involved. Certainly the period was shortened. It is now 50 to 55 days for an election, which is not really satisfactory to the urban people, but more than fair to those with these large country ridings. It was done in a sense of co-operation. It was agreed to by all parties in order to do what was best.

That is the way the process worked with these amendments. What are these amendments? There are a number of small housekeeping amendments which I do not believe need to be mentioned here, Mr. Speaker. However, there are some important amendments. There are seven major amendments. The major amendments will increase party and candidate expenses, and candidate expenses in geographically large ridings; stabilize party and candidate reimbursements; eliminate special interest advertising during the campaign; and clarify broadcasting provisions for the election period.

The calculation of fractions, I believe, is the first amendment which should be commented on. Bill C-169 proposes to link party and candidate election expenses to increases in the Consumer Price Index. The fraction calculated by the Chief Electoral Officer, using 1981 as the base year, is 110.8/88.9. That works out to about a 27 per cent increase. This fraction, when multiplied by existing party and candidate spending formulae, will provide spending ceilings for the individual candidate. This fraction is valid only until March 31, 1984 and at April 1, 1984 a new fraction, reflecting Statistics Canada's average index for 1983—which is published in January of 1984—will be calculated and published in The Canada Gazette. It looks very much like spending limits will increase by approximately 32 per cent to 33 per cent over the last election.

Although that sounds like a deal, it is only fair. If you look at the 1979 and 1980 elections, Mr. Speaker, and compare the costs of printing, advertising, stationery and telephones at that time with, hopefully, the spring of 1984 when we should have an election in this country, then you can see it is only fair and reflects inflation.

The established formula for calculating a Party's spending limits remains. It is determined by multiplying 30 cents by the number of names appearing on a preliminary list of electors in those districts where a Party has endorsed a candidate. This amendment would also link increases in Parties' spending limits to increases in the CPI, again something that all parties in this House can agree upon as it is fair to everyone.

On the limitation of expenses for candidates, the established formula for calculating a candidate's spending remains. It is determined by multiplying each of the first 15,000 names on the preliminary list of an electoral district by one dollar, plus 50 cents for each name in excess of 15,000 but less than 25,000, plus 25 cents for each name in excess of 25,000. Actually, when you talk about that dollar in terms of the next election, it is likely to be about $1.32 in spending. Again it is linked to the CPI.

There is one change here, and again I mention the large ridings, some of which we have in British Columbia, ridings which are 500 miles long and very widespread. The extra costs encountered in large electoral districts for postage as opposed to hand delivery, the long distance telephone calls, the travel costs of persons other than the candidate and the cost of extra campaign offices are not considered in the present formula. However, to be fair to these large rural areas of Canada, in electoral districts where there are less than ten electors per square kilometre, candidates will be permitted to spend an additional 15 cents per square kilometre, to a maximum increase of 25 per cent of his spending limits over those in urban ridings with less costs involved.

The major provision in this Bill is in regard to candidate reimbursement. The amendment would prevent candidate reimbursement from exceeding 50 per cent of electoral expense. This may and will mean densely populated urban ridings. The new formula will provide an immediate pay-out, upon return of the writ, of 15 per cent providing the candidate has received 15 per cent of the votes cast. Candidates spending in excess of 30 per cent of their limits will receive a subsequent reimbursement equal to 50 per cent of their actual election expenses, less that initial 15 per cent. The existing formula for candidate reimbursement is linked to the cost of mailing a first-class letter. The increase in postal rates from 17 cents to 32 cents in 1983 precipitated this amendment to save the taxpayers of Canada money.

As to Party reimbursement and other things, Parties spending 10 per cent of their limits will be reimbursed 22.5 per cent of their actual expenses. It will no longer be tied solely to the cost of broadcasting but will apply to all election expenses, which means the broadcasters lose some slight advantage, the print media perhaps gains a slight advantage. In many regions of the country it is the local weekly newspaper which may perhaps be the most important election medium that can be used.

There is I suppose only one controversial amendment. I say it is controversial because I think it will undoubtedly end up being tested in the courts. This amendment would eliminate third party or special interest group advertising during the election period unless the third party had the express consent of a party or candidate for such advertising. In that case, the party or candidate would have to include the cost of that advertising as an election expense. As well, if the third party ceases to be a special interest group by registering as a political party and nominating candidates in at least 50 electoral districts, it could advertise.

This amendment is more severe than is realized and is more severe than the proposals discussed at the ad hoc meetings with the Chief Electoral Officer, but we agreed to it on the basis that it will be much easier to police. However, I suspect that any number of groups in the country may wish to challenge that provision as it strikes me as somewhat of an interference with the rights of an individual to lobby on behalf of a political party or candidate.

I shall turn now to the broadcasting provisions. It used to be that the CRTC decided on the broadcasting time of six and a half hours. Apportioning broadcasting time will now be done by a broadcasting arbitrator. Those are the chief provisions for which I propose changes. The changes are all useful and are all helpful.

I would like to take a few moments to show Hon. Members in the House and others who may be interested in the electoral process how these proposals will actually affect one riding and the cost involved in one riding. As an example, in my own riding of North Vancouver-Burnaby the existing formula provides for one dollar for the first 15,000 and so on, to a total of $27,544 that could be spent in an election under the present rules. With the indexing of the spending limits, that figure will rise to $34,319 so there will be a realistic raise in terms of inflation.

Under the existing formula for the reimbursement of that riding, if we were to use a 32-cent postal rate as we have now, that would mean that the riding would receive back $21,500. If we were to use the existing formula which provides for a 17-cent postal rate, the riding might receive back $13,000. Now, compare that $21,000 with the proposed formula, which will hopefully become law shortly. This would mean that the riding would get $17,000 back, not $21,000, a direct savings to the Canadian treasury of over $4,000. I do not think those figures are out of line for many other urban ridings as well.

There is far to go yet but these amendments to the Elections Act are another step on that road. After this Bill is enacted, elections in Canada will be a little more fair. Perfection is difficult to achieve, but I believe that this Act is another step toward a perfect Elections Act. I endorse the changes on behalf of our Party, Mr. Speaker. We are delighted to see this legislation go through because it is fair to all concerned.

Canada Elections Act

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to have the opportunity to rise on behalf of the New Democratic Party to give our endorsement to the proposed changes within the Canada Elections Act. Bill C-169, the Bill which introduces these changes, is one step or more in the right direction.

• (1130)

The goal sought by our Party is that we not only have the political and stated right to run in elections, but also the economic means for all Canadians to run in elections. Not long ago the majority of people in the House of Commons were professionals such as lawyers, doctors and businessmen who could afford to run in campaigns. It was not long ago when individuals would spend 10 to 20 times as much as others on a campaign within a riding. It was not long ago when we heard of people spending up to $90,000 on an election campaign to seek election to the House of Commons.

The changes that came about in the mid-1970s and the changes that are proposed in the legislation before us today are really steps toward what we can call economic political democracy. There are many who still find it difficult to be elected to the House of Commons, as is evident by the fact that there are very few women and native people in the House of Commons. It is important that limitations on expenditures remain realistic, for if those reasonable limitations are removed the situation will return in which people will almost buy their way into the House of Commons.

Therefore we see these changes as steps in the right direction. However, we do have some concerns about this legislation. For instance, we are concerned that other changes suggested by the Chief Electoral Officer will not be passed prior to the federal election.

There are other changes that our Party feels should be included in the legislation. For example, the Hon. Member from the Conservative Party spoke earlier of the need to allow more expenditures in large geographic ridings. As the Member for Churchill, I represent a riding which comprises two-thirds of the Province of Manitoba and contains 160,000 square miles within its boundaries. Yet people who run in ridings such as mine are not allowed extra expenses to take into account the fact that we have more than one campaign office during an election. As well, long distance telephone charges are one of the largest items in our election budget. Nor are we allowed to claim as an exemption the travel expenses of those other than the candidate during the campaign.

It must be recognized that we are not asking to have unlimited expenses for these items but that those limitations should recognize that some expenses are incurred solely because of the large geographic ridings. Those expenses should be above the other expenditure limitations. As I said, these include telephone costs, travel expenses for those other than the candidate and extra campaign offices. The guidelines should allow for extra amounts to be set aside over and above the present limitations.

We believe other changes should be made in the future. My colleague from Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) has often risen in the House to talk about the need to increase the ability of absentee voters during an election campaign. Examples of these people include miners and woodworkers who may live in one constituency but work in other constituencies or remote areas. They find it difficult to exercise their franchise under the present rules and we believe new amendments should be introduced to take this into account. We have the assurance of the Government House Leader that he would speak with the Chief Electoral Officer about this issue. We believe this improvement is necessary.

Another amendment I personally would like to see is the provision of extra child care expenses within a candidate's expenses. I believe one of the problems women face in running for election is the fact that they quite often, rightly or wrongly, bear the main responsibility for child rearing in this society. This makes it difficult to run for election. While some expenses for child care are allowed under personal exemptions, I think a separate exemption should be given serious study in the next changes to the Canada Election Act in an effort to achieve real equality.

There are two other items I would like to raise at this time. The first is that according to the new formula 22.5 per cent of the costs of the federal Party are covered by the Government of Canada. That is a step in the right direction since it is not just money allocated for broadcast advertising but considers the total expenses of a party of which 22.5 per cent will be paid by the taxpayers of Canada.

While that is a legitimate step, I am still concerned that the majority of money spent by policital parties during a campaign will come from outside sources. This means that the banks in Canada, large steel corporations and others will pay the majority of the costs of a campaign. Therefore only those parties which appeal to that small segment of Canadian society will receive their funds. I suggest that this is an infringement on economic democracy.

It is interesting to note that American corporations have not been allowed to give direct funding to parties for many years and I believe an amendment such as that should be studied in this country in an attempt to enhance economic democracy.

I hear the fringe right of the House talking about unions. Unions do give money but I think that is legitimate because there are limitations simply because unions are not rich. They do not give the same amount of money as banks such as the Bank of Montreal. But if that is a concern we are willing to consider limitations on all outside parties. We recognize that corporations, especially banks which are committed to a high interest rate policy, should not give $50,000 and another $50,000 to the Liberal and Conservative Parties. Improvements are needed in this area so that corporations as well as unions have some limitation on the amount they can give to political parties during election campaigns.

The other matter I would like to speak on today is that of third party advertising and third party advocacy during a campaign. I share the concerns of the Conservative Party that this may be an area which would be hard to enforce under the Charter of Rights. It does in some way impinge upon the rights of individuals or organizations to represent their opinions during an election campaign. I submit that all Members recognize that some of the most partisan, vicious and one-sided advertising takes place during election campaigns on behalf of so-called third parties. I believe it is incumbent upon the House not to follow the American example where all sorts of groups spend enormous amounts of money during an election campaign to emphasize a single issue while not always being bound by the truth, fairness or honesty. They are simply pushing a very emotional issue to the extent that it clouds the real political issues of a campaign. Therefore I look forward to the Chief Electoral Officer attempting to control and regulate advertising by third parties.

Just as the parallel campaign of the labour movement counts against the actual expenses of the NDP during an election, I believe if third party groups are advertising or working on behalf of a candidate or party, the expenses they incur must be part of the limitations of the party or individual they are supporting during a campaign.

In closing, a number of changes must take place in the Act in the future and I look forward to a new set of amendments being produced in the House. I am especially concerned there are not prosecutions for contravention of the Act at the present time. If we are going to have an Act seriously supported by political parties, by candidates and by official agents in the campaign, then they must feel that the Government of Canada, and the Chief Electoral Officer, are going to prosecute those who openly and blatantly break the provisions of the Act.

With that, Mr. Speaker, there is a lot to do but these amendments and this Bill are a step in the right direction and we will support them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Before putting the question, the Chair should explain that when I put the motion earlier it was understood the Bill would be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections. It is the Chair's understanding that there is agreement among the Parties to refer the Bill instead to the Committee of the Whole House. Therefore, if there is consent, I will now put the question in that spirit.

Mr. Pinard moves:

That Bill C-169, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act (No. 3), be now read a second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, considered in committee, reported, read the third time and passed.

BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENTS ACT (NO. 2)

AMENDMENT TO INCREASE SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

Hon. Roy MacLaren (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-168, an Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act (No. 2), be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to a Committee of the Whole.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us has the purpose of amending the Bretton Woods Agreements in a way which will increase members' quotas in the International Monetary Fund. Before addressing that specific question, I wanted to say a word about the circumstances in which the need for such an increase in the members' quotas has come about.

In the post-World War II world, members may recall the deep concern about the adequacy of the international monetary sytem in light of the chaos created first by worldwide depression and second by the severe disruptions of the Second World War. The International Monetary Fund was one of three post-World War institutions created to provide order and flexibility in the trading system upon which the prosperity of the world would depend. The IMF was created to lend stability to the global monetary and financial system. Paralleling the creation of the fund was the creation of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development to provide long-term financing to member states in need of such support. Third, of course, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was instituted to bring a more liberal trading system to the post-war world.

The specific task of the international monetary system was to provide exchange rate stability and a greater degree of monetary co-operation among member states. From its inception in the immediate post-war years through to the 1970s, that was the paramount role of the International Monetary Fund and it played that role with outstanding success.

In the mid-1970s, however, the growth in world trade and the entry of substantial new players in the world trading picture required a new system of international monetary arrangements. I speak of the introduction of floating exchange rates by a number of countries which replaced the immediate post-war practice of fixed exchanges. The International Monetary Fund adopted, in the face of that growing need among member countries for greater flexibility, a recommendation of its main policy advisory committee to allow the fund to adapt to the practice of floating exchange rates. I might note that the chairman of that principal policy advisory committee which brought about that major change in the practices of the fund was the then Canadian Minister of Finance, John Turner. More recently, the IMF's efforts have been directed to maintaining financial stability of both developed and developing countries.

In the last decade a major change has occurred in the world trading scene and the world monetary scene. I speak of the impact in principle of the oil price increases, the sudden and in some cases devastating impact of price increases by the oil producing countries. All of us are conscious of those price increases here at home in Canada and indeed in the industrialized world generally. Nowhere was that impact felt more severely than in the oil importing developing countries.

Equally, at the time when the large oil price increases were implemented, a worldwide recession was felt which, of course, produced a slump in world trade. The demand for the products of many developing countries fell off sharply, contributing to their already difficult balance of payment problems. Creditworthiness of such nations deteriorated sharply. The result was that the International Monetary Fund had a new challenge to confront, a new challenge to overcome.

A number of developing countries, including some of the largest debtor countries of the last decade certainly, have encountered severe liquidity problems and have sought renegotiation of their debt obligation. I need not remind the House of the problems that face a number of developing countries, particularly in Latin America, concerning their very large debt burdens which they attempted to finance against the background of much higher import costs, particularly for oil, and a sharp decline in their export earnings.

I am happy to note that the international debt situation is easing now, particularly as a result of falling interest rates around the world. The repayment schedules for the debt that has been incurred is easing. Of course, the improvement in terms of trade of a number of developing countries has also contributed to an improvement in their liquidity position. The expected increase in the net volume of exports of the developing countries in 1983 and 1984 should contribute to the further facilitation of their debt repayments. Nevertheless, a number of developing countries still face an acute debt service problem.

We in Canada have joined with a number of other countries in encouraging those debtor nations to seek International Monetary Fund assistance in easing their repayment problems. The IMF has responded to this difficult situation in two major ways. The first has been that it has contributed, as it has on many occasions in the past, to the financing of temporary balance of payment difficulties of the member countries affected. It has also brought together, and in this the Fund has played an imaginative and constructive role, the major creditors to renegotiate the debt agreements and to reschedule the debt repayment. Equally important, it has developed with the debtor countries the program of adjustment which has allowed them not only to meet their debt obligations, but to provide some degree of financing at home for their development commitments.

The provision of temporary financing by the International Monetary Fund, which is one of the elements of the broader subject we are discussing today, enables countries to make the necessary adjustment to their economic situation without resorting to many of the disruptive tactics which marked the world of the 1930s and, indeed, has characterized the activities of some nations which are not members of the IMF or have not been able to meet the IMF requirements. I speak, of course, of trading and capital restrictions that were imposed in such a way as to disrupt the channels of trade. We have seen countries engaged in aggressive exchange rate policies which equally disrupted world trade or imposed at home unduly restrictive domestic measures which have burdened the people of the country with policies that have curtailed their own growth and development. All those practices and others have been avoided by the role of the International Monetary Fund in creating a situation where such practices are unnecessary and where major disruptions to our international trading system are quite unnecessary.

Hon. Members will wish to recall that the International Monetary Fund does not itself engage in long-term financing. That is a role for the World Bank and for the regional development banks under the United Nations umbrella. The IMF does provide for a flexibility in our trade and global financial situation which is unique and which is available to those countries with balance of payment difficulties. That essential role of the Fund will be enhanced by the increase in the subscriptions or quotas which are provided for in the Bill in the case of Canada and provided for in the resolution of the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund last spring.

The increase in quotas is reviewed every five years. This is the eighth review by the IMF members of their quotas. It has resulted in a proposal of an increase in the overall quotas of members of some 47 per cent. The legislation before us today provides for Canada's increased quota within that total goal set by the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund.

May I just take a moment of the time of the House to engage in some numbers which may seem rather arcane, but it is worthwhile to spend a moment looking at what this Bill means for Canada.

Canada's quota subscription will increase from two million SDR, special drawing rights, or approximately $1.2 billion Canadian, to 2.9 million special drawing rights or approximately $3.8 billion. That is Canada's share of the total equity increase from the special drawing rights of $61 billion to $90 billion, which as I suggested a moment ago was approved last spring by the Fund's Board of Governors.

Before any Member concludes that Canada is undertaking a very substantial transfer of funds amounting to something over $2 billion to the International Monetary Fund, I would reassure that Member that the actual Canadian dollar cash payment as a result of this legislation will amount to about $3 million only. The remainder of the increase in the Canadian quota is paid in special drawing rights or in Canadian Government non-interest bearing demand notes. Therefore, the increase in our equity will maintain our relative share of IMF quotas. It will ensure Canada's continued right to elect an executive director and have a seat on the committees of the Fund.

I am sure Members will understand that that increase in quotas also has the effect of increasing the resources available to Canada in the case of need. If at some stage we have to draw upon the resources of the IMF, our eligibility for future allocations of special drawing rights is increased by the measure before us today.

There is in a broader sense a benefit for Canada in moving forward with this legislation today in that it reaffirms Canada's support for international co-operation in maintaining an open trade and payment system so necessary to combat the protectionist tendencies which we have noted in the trading world, protectionism that can be a real brake on economic recovery as not only Canada but the world generally emerges from recession.

The flexibility that is afforded to the IMF by the larger quotas will contribute to confidence in the capacity of the international financial system to cope with current strains arising from global recession. I am sure that Hon. Members will want to support the work of the Fund by adopting this legislation so that it can continue to monitor and to ease the international debt problems which are hampering the development of the poorer nations.

The language of the legislation is somewhat arid, but it masks a real need and suffering on the part of many people in the developing world. The International Monetary Fund has an essential role in providing for gradual increases in the standards of living for many developing countries. The language of the Bill, as I say, may seem sterile, but behind that language resides the problems of a large number of developing countries in great financial difficulty, partly as a result of global recession. I do not doubt that Hon. Members will wish to support enthusiastically the role of the International Monetary Fund in contributing to the alleviation of those problems.

I am sure that we all recognize the need to sustain the global monetary system to promote the financial health of its member states through the medium of the Fund. I know that Hon. Members on all sides of the House will wish to join in supporting the decision to increase our contribution to the resources of the International Monetary Fund so as to contribute in that way. I quote from the Articles of Agreement of the Fund:

> To promote international monetary co-operation through a permanent institution which provides the machinery for consultation and collaboration on international monetary problems.

The Bill before us today helps to do just that. I would urge all Members of the House actively to support the work of the International Monetary Fund as well as the World Bank and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, as essential elements in global economic recovery, particularly the development of the poorer nations.

Mr. Heap: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, are questions permitted at this time?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Under the provisional Standing Orders normally no, but by unanimous consent, if the Minister wishes to accept a question, I suppose it could be done. Is it agreed?

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, I thank Hon. Members for permission and I will be brief. The Minister in explaining the purpose of the IMF and the World Bank, to which we are asked to give more money, outlined its general goals and work. In that connection I would like the Minister to comment on the recent disparities which arose in two cases. When consideration was given to lending money to South Africa, which is invading its neighbouring country Namibia, contrary to United Nations declarations, this was not considered by the United States to be a reason for refusing the loan to South Africa. When consideration was given to Vietnam taking a loan, at a time when it was invading its neighbouring state, Kampuchea, that was considered grounds for refusing a loan. Would the Minister comment on the principles of the Fund as relating to those two contrasting examples?

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to take the time of others who may wish to speak during second reading of this Bill. We shall shortly go into Committee of the Whole when we could address any questions briefly, given the limitations we are working under today.

It is not, of course, for me to speak to the queston which the Hon. Member raises about the policy of another country, but I am glad to state for him the policies of this Government and indeed of Canada since the creation of the International Monetary Fund. In essence we believe that the Fund provides an essential service to its member states. It is of an apolitical nature, of a technical character if you wish, and which should not raise questions relating to the political coloration of member states.

I think that the Hon. Member opposite will recognize that different members of the International Monetary Fund will have different opinions about other members. If political considerations became a dominant element in deciding upon the functioning and activities of the Fund, a paralysis would soon set in that could only be of real detriment to the member states and particularly to the developing countries who are members of the IMF.

The Articles of Agreement of the Fund underline what I have described as the technical nature of its activities. I would only add that in supporting those Articles we recognize that it is impossible for the Fund to discriminate among members for political or other reasons.

Finally, there are ample channels, ample fora, available for the debate of political questions which exist outside the IMF.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to be able to get up and support the Government on something occasionally. This is a Bill in which we wish to support the Government. There are a number of reasons but the first essential reason is that the people of Canada depend for their livelihood very, very extensively on international or foreign trade. I have not had a chance to get all the statistics together but I think around 28 per cent or 30 per cent of our GNP comes from our foreign trade. Seventy per cent of that is with the United States, but in addition to the United States, of course, we have trade with the other countries of the world. Unless we have an international financial regime that enables the countries with whom we trade to pay us for the goods and services we sell them, we will be having no international trade whatsoever, or very little. Every person in this country will suffer if the world financial system no longer permits the 160 or 170 countries of the world to trade among one another knowing that they are going to be paid eventually for the goods and services they have sold.

It is of absolute first priority for us to support the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. To do that, as a western industrial nation and one of the wealthier nations of the world, we have to show our support for the International Monetary Fund. Never has its work been of such importance and never has it been in such a sensitive position as it is today. We are all familiar with the fact that there is almost a crisis in the international financial system. There are a number of countries that have huge debts. There are debtor nations that owe creditor nations of the world huge amounts of money. We are familiar with the situation in Argentina, Chile and Brazil and there are a number of other countries that have a great foreign debt at the present time. Because of the economic conditions that have affected the world for the last two or three years, they are not in a position to meet their obligations in this debt load that hangs over the world.

It is my opinion that there are at least two important conditions that affect whether we are going to have much economic recovery in the next few years. The first is the situation with respect to real interest rates. The second is the deficit position of the various Governments, including the United States and Canadian Governments. That has a tendency to keep interest rates high because of people's perspectives and their fears of the future. The third thing would be the status of the huge debt burden which is principally held by Third World countries and whether they can have an economic recovery that will enable them to meet the financial obligations they entered into in the last ten years.

The IMF is of first importance in determining whether they will be able to whether the storm. A functioning IMF with ample credit of its own to assist them is essential. It has to be in a position to offer financial relief if they meet its conditions. One of the great conundrums at the present time is whether these countries are prepared to meet the IMF conditions. Unless the Fund has that facility it cannot set any conditions for the economic rejuvenation of the countries involved. Argentina is the example at the moment and it is a question whether it can meet the conditions set for it. Brazil is another example. Canada has to do its share in providing the international financial facilities that are needed.

I did not hear all of the Minister's introductory remarks because I was engaged in other business. However, I believe that the last increase in the IMF quota was agreed to in 1978 and took effect in 1980 and that the current increase we are now considering was agreed to in April of 1982 and is to take effect on November 30, 1983. It is needed because of the debt crisis that I mentioned that affects so many Third World countries, South American countries in particular.

I was on a parliamentary visit to South America a year ago last August. At that time the effects of the recession had struck all those countries which are in a desperate state. In many of them the whole export revenue is required to meet the interest on the foreign debt. They depend on the IMF to keep going and to be able to overcome their problems.

As I understand it, there are 30 contributory countries that have now finished the legal process that is necessary to increase their contribution to the IMF; the United Kingdom is one of these. We are all familiar with the fact that President Reagan in the United States is dealing with Congress now so that the U.S. can meet the increase in its credit. It is a very controversial topic in the United States. I think that passage of this legislation and the Government's contribution may help in the argument that is now going on in the United States.

Our governor on the IMF is Mr. Bob Joyce. He is a very able civil servant and was Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance in 1979-80, when I was Minister. He is our representative on the Board of Governors and is doing a first-class job.

The amount we are being asked to contribute increases our quota from $2.7 billion Canadian to $3.9 billion Canadian, a 45 per cent increase. The average quota increase for all IMF members is 47 per cent.

For these reasons we are prepared to support the Bill. As a matter of fact we have agreed to co-operate in passing it in one day because of the importance of Canada meeting its obligations in this area.

A Member of the NDP brought up a question with respect to the criteria for loans by the IMF and other international agencies. I agree with the Minister's response. I think it would be an extremely retrograde step if we were to accept the principle that international agencies like the IMF, the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank or any other agency, were to make loans based on political considerations or arguments about human rights or whether a country violates human rights. If those kinds of considerations are to be involved in decisions about whether loans are made or not, the result will be chaos in the international financial system. If the criterion is whether we approve of some other government and all its actions, that will cause a great deal of uncertainty in international lending. That would not be to our advantage or to the advantage of anyone else. It would only add to the chaos and repression in the countries involved.

I believe that loans made by the IMF, the World Bank and its agencies should be made on the basis of whether the loans are likely to be repaid, whether the economic and financial conditions set down by the IMF have been accepted and whether the country asking for the loan is prepared to put its economic house in order.

Those are the considerations that should be in the minds of the governors of the IMF, not whether they agree with the domestic policies of government in the field of human rights, civil rights, agriculture or any other area. If we are to make these kinds of value judgments, I do not know where it will end. Of the 160 or 170 countries in the world today, we know that the civil and human rights records of most of them leave a lot to be desired. It is not our job to be policemen for the world; our responsibility in this area is to ensure we have an international system that works so that we as a trading nation can trade with other nations. We must be in the position to know that we will be paid eventually and that they will be too. We need stability in the world's financial system. To allow these other considerations to enter into it would cause chaos, and I am opposed to the suggestion that this should become a feature. It would not help those people if that kind of step were taken.

We support the adoption of this Bill on second reading, Mr. Speaker, and we support its being passed today. We support Canada meeting its commitments and this should be done before November 30. We hope that the United States will meet its commitments as well. The alternative would be financial chaos in the world's economic system. Canada is one nation that would be most endangered as it is one of the nations most dependent on foreign trade for growth in its GNP.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak to this Bill particularly on a point that I consider has not been sufficiently examined by either of the previous speakers.

The problem I wish to point to is that whatever was in the minds of the people at Bretton Woods who created the IMF, and whatever may have been the conduct of the IMF and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development in the first years, the bank is now not what it set out to be.

● (1220)

I would like to quote from Article 1. One of the purposes of the International Monetary Fund is:

> To facilitate the expansion and balanced growth of international trade, and to contribute thereby to the promotion and maintenance of high levels of employment and real income and to the development of the productive resources of all members as primary objectives of economic policy.

In fact, the IMF and the World Bank have not been following a policy of promoting high levels of employment and real income. This is the problem with which we have to deal. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development has a similar statement of goals and both of them together have been following policies which in fact, in the words of the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), have contributed to the present chaos in international finance.

The Hon. Member suggested that if we took human rights into consideration, we would mess up the business world, that business should not have anything to do with human rights. In fact, the following of that principle, at least in recent years, has boomeranged on the business world in the form of the kinds of debts to which both the Hon. Member and the Minister referred and which now have the international financial community scared.

If the purpose of the IMF and the World Bank is to help undeveloped or developing countries to develop, then that purpose is being very rapidly perverted by the direction taken in some critical decisions by the IMF and the World Bank. And those decisions are being heavily pushed by the chief shareholder, the United States of America, as represented by its government.

One instance of this in recent months was the scandalous case of the loan to South Africa. We all heard the statement today that Canada does not introduce political considerations into the decision to lend money. I will come back to that because that is not regularly and consistently the position taken by our Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen). On that occasion, however, that was the principle to which he appealed, that "we do not let our disapproval of apartheid influence our decision as to whether or not we should lend money through the IMF or the World Bank to South Africa". It was argued that by lending that country money we were subsidizing South Africa's war against its neighbour, Namibia. It was said that the money we were giving South Africa in fact replaced money it was spending to conduct a brutal war against the people of Namibia and against all the declarations and decisions of the United Nations, to which Canada was a party. With one hand, Canada says do not fight the people of Namibia. With the other hand, Canada gives the money to do it. But at that time the Minister claimed that was quite acceptable.

Since that time, Mr. Speaker, it is very interesting to note that there has been a report of the IMF staff which says that even on economic grounds that loan should not have been made. In part the report cited impediments on the geographic mobility of black workers in South Africa as a very serious problem. The study team said in general that this regulatory system of the workers in South Africa is based on non-economic considerations. As an example it cites the fact that the expenditure of money on the education and training of workers is so unbalanced that a white person in South Africa receives 13 times as much money for training as a black person does.

The International Monetary Fund's own staff claimed that on grounds such as that—of which that is only one example—the loan ought not to have been made. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, the IMF staff are arguing on economic grounds. In other words, what the IMF staff itself said in its report is that business cannot be separated from morality. When the black people are so outrageously oppressed, intimidated and robbed, as they are in South Africa, that is bad business. It may make a few people wealthy, but it is bad business from the standpoint of the economic criteria which the IMF and the World Bank are supposedly following.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, Canada has the key vote. Without Canada, the United States had only 48 per cent of the votes to put that loan through. The 4 per cent of the votes of Canada brought it to 52 per cent and South Africa received the money with which it is now murdering people in neighbouring Namibia. This was Canada's application in that case of the principle "We hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil" in regard to the domestic policy of a country. We simply lend it the money if it meets narrow economic criteria. We do not look to see how its conduct may negate the purpose of the loan.

In other cases, however, Canada takes an opposite stand. I refer you, Mr. Speaker, to a recent statement made by our Secretary of State for External Affairs in Bangkok on June 27. He said:

—I can assure you that Canada will continue to support ASEAN in opposing Vietnamese challenges to the credentials of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea—

He further states:

At the same time Canada will not support in either its bilateral programs or through multilateral institutions the provision of economic assistance to Vietnam which would have the effect of subsidizing or rewarding Hanoi's continued military occupation of Cambodia.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, when it is a question of a multilateral body lending money to Vietnam, all of a sudden our Secretary of State for External Affairs introduces the question of the policies of the country. Are they engaging in war with a neighbour? If so, do not lend it the money. Whereas a short while before, when it was a question of South Africa engaging in a war with its neighbour, the attitude of the same Government was "Give it the money". In other words,, what we have here is the rankest sort of political favouritism because Canada likes doing business with South Africa and praises its apartheid policy with faint damns. It just quietly says: "Gee, we wish you would be nicer to those poor devils". What Canada likes is its profitable trade relations with South Africa and the profits which Canadian banks make out of South Africa, partly with the help of the IMF and the World Bank. Therefore, Canada is willing to shut its eyes to the continuing war of South Africa against Namibia. Because Canada does not like Vietnam, Canada is willing to become suddenly very prim and judgmental and say: "We could not lend it money because it might use the money to buy guns to use against Kampuchea". That is completely inconsistent.

If one takes the name "Vietnam" out of the Minister's statement and inserts the name "South Africa", one would have a complete reason for refusing to give that loan to South Africa. The Minister surely remembers what he said. The question is whether in future he will attempt to be more consistent on either the one side or the other. That, Mr. Speaker, is a very grave example, considering the many years in which Canada has issued statements of condemnation of apartheid.

There are many other examples also, and I would just like to give two of them. This is not so much an example of the direct policy statement of Canada, but I wish to illustrate the kind of thing which is becoming typical of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund which we are being asked to support with our taxpayers' money.

In the Philippines the World Bank has been busy for a dozen or so years and the IMF is supposedly helping them fix up their economy. In fact, they have been helping to impoverish the vast majority of the Filipino people. In a recent staff report again to the World Bank, it was pointed out that during a period of ten years of martial law when the real wages of Filipino workers dropped 50 per cent from 1971 to 1981, the principal reason was that the World Bank and the IMF had forced the Marcos government to devalue the peso. In other words, the stated goal of the World Bank of improving the living standards of the people in these countries and maintaining high levels of employment and real income was primarily defeated by the World Bank and the IMF.

There are many other examples of what is happening in the Philippines, but I wish now to move to Nicaragua.

Mr. Nickerson: Why don't you?

Mr. Heap: I might do that, Mr. Speaker. It has been suggested some more people go down to Nicaragua. I think they need help against the American army and its friends who would like to make business out of killing Nicaraguans.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Heap: The United States has used every dirty trick it can find to destroy the government of Nicaragua. A recent statement in the Washington Post, for example, indicated that, The U.S. will oppose any loan to Nicaragua by the World Bank or the Inter-American Development Bank until the Sandanista government makes major changes in its domestic economic policies.

Mr. Friesen: Like elections.

Mr. Heap: We have just heard from the Hon. Minister that Canada does not interfere with another country's domestic policies. Canada lends money, for example, to Marcos, whether he has elections or not or what kind of elections he may have. Marcos declared himself president without elections for about ten years and Canada supports loans to Marcos through the IMF. But now the U.S. has said it will bar loans to Nicaragua because of its domestic policies, and the question is: Where does Canada stand on that? Do we support the hypocritical policy of the United States or not?

Mr. Shields: No, the hypocritical policies of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Heap: The reaction of the U.S. was to use the IMF to try to force Mexico to cut off its oil shipment agreement with Nicaragua. To its very great credit Mexico, in spite of the difficulties, refused to dishonour its commitment to Nicaragua. I would hope that Canada, whose troubles are not nearly so severe as Mexico's, would show the same courage in standing up to pressure from the U.S.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in Committee of the Whole I will be asking for unanimous consent to waive the rule of notice to move an amendment which would have the effect of asking the IMF, through our Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde), to incorporate into its Articles a statement of principles of human rights. If that were done, it would be quite clear when we lend money that we consider not only the balance sheet in strict accounting terms, but also the balance sheet in terms of human welfare. Will the money be going to build up the country according to the stated purposes of maintenance of high levels of employment and realistic income, or will the money go to a government like the government of Pinochet in Chile, the former government of Somoza in Nicaragua, or the present government in Guatemala or El Salvador? Will the money go to a government which uses the money and its power to destroy the freedom of its people and the living standards of the workers and peasants? Those are human rights questions which were addressed by a subcommittee of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence which recommended in those words I used earlier that this be part of Canada's foreign policy. I will be asking that this House vote according to the words in the report of that Committee to this House. The Government has not seen fit to bring that forward for debate, but I wish to do so.

If Hon. Members wish to deny those words and say that human rights should have nothing to do with Canada's foreign policy, that we will simply go for the big buck no matter how our friends and allies kill and rob to get that buck, then let Members say that, but at their peril. The chaos that the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) referred to in international finance is being fueled by this very policy of saying we do not care how we get the money so long as they repay our banks. That is what has caused riot upon riot upon riot in Manila. That is what is causing growing violence in South Africa. That is what causes the unrest in Central America which all the troops of the United States or its friends would be unable to put down. I am asking that Canada dissociate itself from the corrupt and perverted policy the U.S. has forced on the World Bank and the IMF, and the adoption of the motion I will move in Committee of the Whole would have that effect.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could have unanimous consent to ask the Hon. Member just one short question.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) has suggested that by lending money to South Africa we enable them to kill Namibians. I wonder if he is suggesting that if we sell wheat to the Soviet Union on credit we are helping the Soviets to murder Afghans?

Mr. Heap: There are two questions there. One is what we will do with a multilateral lending agency, and what I have asked for is that the two entirely contradictory policies expressed by our Government within the last few months, by saying yes and no in two different cases which are essentially the same, should be brought together on the basis of human rights.

As to the question whether we should sell wheat to the Soviet Union, I leave it to the Hon. Member to discuss that with the constituents in the Canadian Prairies who grow wheat.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I, too, might have consent to ask the Hon. Member for Spadina a question.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, if I understand the Hon. Member's argument correctly, it is that the World Bank and IMF should not lend money to countries which have, in our opinion, poor human rights records, especially when they use the money or equivalent amounts for military purposes.

What does the Hon. Member think of the situation in India? Surely nothing can be more deplorable, to our way of thinking, than the state of the Untouchables in India and the caste system which still exists. At the same time the government of India has high military expenditures and at times has engaged in open warfare with Pakistan in Bangladesh. My view is that, despite the infringements on human rights in India, I would be quite prepared to see a continuation of the IMF lending to that country. I wonder what the opinion of the Hon. Member is in this particular circumstance?

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, that is a good example to raise. What the IMF and the World Bank profess to be doing is to look at a country and ask, are they trying to improve the bad conditions? A good many of our reports indicate that India is trying to improve the bad conditions the Hon. Member spoke of.

If the Hon. Member is suggesting that we might be standing on weak ground when we refuse Indian money because we treat our aboriginal people perhaps as badly as Indians treat the Untouchables, I would not disagree with the Hon. Member.

I am not asking that an instant list be produced today enumerating which countries we will lend to and which we will not. I am asking for the adoption of a principle which could be used on the basis of information that we would gather for that purpose through the usual government and other sources, but a principle that we would use to try to make such a decision.

The extreme case is the case of South Africa and I understand the Hon. Member's sensitivity on that subject. Canada has clearly condemned the apartheid policy of the government of South Africa and therefore that is a very special case on which the policy of the Canadian Government has foundered.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Corbin in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-168, an Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act (No. 2).

On Clause 1—Payment of subscriptions out of C.R.F.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Chairman, I seek unanimous consent to waive the rule of notice in order to move two brief amendments to Bill C-168, an Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act. The motions are as follows:

That Bill C-168 be amended at page 1, Clause 1, Subclause (1), line 18 by deleting the period and adding the following therefor:

"provided that the Minister of Finance shall request the International Monetary Fund to amend Article I of its Articles so as to incorporate in its purposes the principle of human rights, embracing both the right to a decent material existence, such as access to food, shelter, employment and health care, and civil and political rights which provide the means to give effective expression to the needs and dignity of every person".

The second amendment, Mr. Chairman, deals with the same principle but relates to the second paragraph of the clause. The motion is as follows:

That Bill C-168 be amended at page 2, Clause 1, Subclause (2), line 5 by deleting the period and adding the following therefor:

The words that follow would be the same as those that I have already read in the first motion, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The Chair should inform the Committee that, first, unanimous consent is not needed to introduce these amendments at this time. Second, the Chair has some reservations as to the appropriateness of the amendments in terms of the scope of the Bill. In any case, the Chair will give the Hon. Member the benefit of the doubt and the House will have the opportunity to dispose of the amendments in due course.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Chairman, since our Party attempted to submit some amendments yesterday by asking for unanimous consent and were denied that courtesy by Members of the New Democratic Party 24 hours ago, why should we extend that same courtesy to them today?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. It is my understanding that unanimous consent was sought yesterday at the report stage and that is an entirely different matter. We are now in Committee of the Whole and it is quite proper for Hon. Members to propose amendments in Committee of the Whole. To begin with, that is what Committee of the Whole is all about. It is an entirely different matter, however, for the Chair to rule on the acceptability or unacceptability of the amendments being proposed.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Chairman, I am quite aware of that but the Hon. Member for Spadina evidently was not aware of that because he is the one who asked for unanimous consent.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Chairman, I stand corrected by the Chair and by the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta on the procedural point. I am glad to know that I did not need to seek unanimous consent to have that motion introduced.

I was not present in the House yesterday and I am not aware of the substance of the motion that the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta is concerned about. Therefore, I cannot comment on the grounds on which it may have failed to receive unanimous consent at that different stage. However, I would still hope that Hon. Members would consider the present motions.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I thought I had made it very clear that unanimous consent is not needed at this stage. It is the Member's prerogative to propose an amendment. In any case, the amendment has been proposed and I will put it to the House. Hon. Members have heard the terms of the amendment.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, it is my view that these amendments, by introducing a condition precedent, go well beyond the principle of the Bill. The principle of this particular Bill is merely to increase Canada's contribution under special drawing rights, nothing more and nothing less.

The Hon. Member's amendments could perhaps be attached to a general Bill on the Bretton Woods Agreements and may be in order if they were to find a proper place in the amending Bill. However, I suggest to you, Mr. chairman, that the amendments are well out of order in that they introduce an entirely new principle into the Bill by proposing a condition precedent for any contribution by Canada.

When I say that, I am not attacking the motivation of the Hon. Member because I think that in some cases we might find some sympathy for the amendments. I do say on behalf of the Official Opposition that we would want to give this matter much more mature consideration than we could give it when presented with these amendments at this particular time.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I would briefly suggest to you that the amendments are out of order in that they go much beyond the principle of the Bill even under the present rules. I do not accept that second reading is a matter of principle that is set in stone but this goes much beyond a mere amending Bill.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, I rise on the same point of order. It would be my submission as well, Mr. Chairman, that the amendments are out of order. I would rather you studied the matter and gave us your ruling as to whether or not they are out of order before we proceed to debate the amendments.

It is my understanding that the Bretton Woods Agreements Act arises out of an international treaty to which Canada was one of the signatories. That treaty to which we are party does not contemplate the type of restriction being put on our contributions or the type of restriction on the lending of the international agencies dealt with in the treaty that the Hon. Member would now try to have us make. For that reason, I do not think we have it within our power at this moment to amend an international treaty by amending the Bill we have before us today.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Chairman, I rise on the same point of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Spadina has already spoken on a point of order with respect to the amendments.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Chairman, I have spoken on my motion. Have I spoken on a point of order?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Spadina on a point of order.

● (1250)

Mr. Heap: Mr. Chairman, with respect to the points raised by my two colleagues, I will deal with the second one first. I understand that what we are dealing with involves an international treaty. My motion, therefore, is only to ask that Canada seek such an amendment by the body which administers that treaty, obviously seeking the consent of other parties to that treaty. I hope in that respect it would be in order.

With regard to the point made by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West as to the scope, I would point out that there is no other opportunity even to have this question addressed. This is a question which has arisen over the years in the course of administration and it relates to the fact that more money is being asked because of the chaos to which the Hon. Member for St. John's West referred. Therefore it is appropriate to stop and take stock. I would hope, therefore, that you would find the motion in order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Chair has expressed reservations about the appropriateness of the amendments in the first instance and those reservations have been given some credence by the arguments advanced by both the Member for Edmonton West and the Member for Western Arctic. The Chair still maintains reservations about the motion's acceptability in terms of its qualifications which the House is asked to put in the Bill now before the House at second reading.

In any case, the best way to dispose of such a proposal is for the Chair to put the amendments to the House and the House will make the ultimate decision.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I do not think it is within your competence to accept an amendment on which there is doubt and put it. The unfortunate part is that this incident may be used as a precedent for accepting an amendment which is, in my submission, clearly out of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I suppose that the Chair could always want to take advice on the matter, but I should remind the House that we are under a covering agreement to dispose of all stages of the Bill before one o'clock today.

The Hon. Member for Edmonton West is correct. I suppose the Chair could always rule very strictly and declare the motion out of order, but I would want to provide myself with sufficient argument before ruling definitely one way or the other. It has happened in other cases that the House is always the best and ultimate judge in these matters. Therefore I will ask if the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Spadina will carry.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Amendments (Mr. Heap) negatived.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, I have a very brief question. Am I to understand that the increase in contributions from each state that is a party to the Bretton Woods Treaty is in the same ratio, or are some countries to be called upon to increase their subscription or contribution in a proportion that is greater than that of other countries?

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Chairman, a very brief answer to a very brief question. The increases in quotas are, broadly speaking, what the Hon. Member for St. John's West noted. They are an approximately 47.5 per cent increase across the board.

There are however some slight variations. For example, Canada's increased quota is 45 per cent. The variation results from slight adaptations that are made in light of changes in the economic circumstances of individual member countries according to the formula that the IMF uses.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It was agreed that we would commence debate on Bill C-152 at three o'clock this afternoon. That being the case, and in view of the fact that there are Members who will want to participate in that debate but might not be here at this time, could we call it one o'clock?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We agree to that proposition.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1:00 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

THE LATE FRANK A. ENFIELD, Q.C.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER MEMBER

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (York-Scarborough): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 21 to inform the House of the death of the former and first Member for York-Scarborough, Mr. Frank A. Enfield, Q.C.

Frank was educated in Toronto, and graduated from the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall Law School before joining the RCAF during World War II. Frank served with distinction in the war, rising to the rank of Flight Lieutenant.

After the war Frank was married—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am very sorry but this kind of statement cannot be made under Standing Order 21. The Hon. Member might want to rise at three o'clock in order to make this type of statement.

POLITICAL PARTIES

LIBERAL PARTY FUND RAISING DINNER WITH PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Otto Jelinek (Halton): Madam Speaker, it is billed as "An Evening with Pierre Elliott Trudeau" a "one time only occasion" . . . "to meet the man." In fact it is an invitation to a $250 a plate Liberal dinner sent out by the rainmaker himself, Senator Keith Davey.

One can assume that sales of tickets to the 23 per cent of Liberal supporters have been exhausted. In fact, those who have bought tickets are being bussed in, in mini buses. In his wisdom, the Senator is now tapping the 62 per cent who really count. As one who belongs to that majority I was flattered to receive not one but two invitations to this great occasion to hear the man with whom we have grown up for the past 15 years.

Since the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in those 15 years has made more speeches outside Canada than in this House, I briefly considered attending this one time event. However, I understand he is retaining his best lines and announcements for his forthcoming trip to India, Bangladesh, and Kuwait. Besides, I could not find anybody, Liberal, NDP or Conservative, to join me in forking out $250 to save a sinking ship. Instead people in droves have bought tickets to hear Brian Mulroney, Leader of the Opposition and the next Prime Minister of Canada, at a sold out dinner that is planned to take place in Toronto on November 24.

In any event, I wish Senator Davey good luck in his efforts to sell tickets to what should be billed as "PET's Last Stand."

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

INDUSTRY

ESTABLISHMENT OF HELICOPTER PLANT IN QUEBEC—POSITION OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, on Friday, September 30, I rose in the House under the provisions of the Standing Orders and urged the Leader of the Opposition, who was present at the time, to clarify the position of his party on the anticipated establishment of a Bell Helicopter plant in Quebec. I referred to statements by the Progressive Conservative member for Erie (Mr. Fretz), who objected to the Government of Canada intervening in favour of Quebec in this matter. On October 11, 1983, the Hon. Member for Erie again criticized the Government for encouraging Bell Helicopter to come to Quebec. Now, 26 days later, the Leader of the Opposition has yet to answer the two following questions: first, does the Progressive Conservative Party officially support the establishment of Bell Helicopter in Quebec? Second, if so, what is the Leader of the Opposition going to do about the Hon. Member for Erie? The Members of this House are anxious to know whether the Conservative leader's new job creation policy for Quebec consists in closing down mines and refusing to subsidize new plants.

FISHERIES

NATIONALIZATION OF EAST COAST OFFSHORE INDUSTRY

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, the whole of the East Coast fishing industry of Canada has been clobbered by this Government whose actions have been clumsy, careless, confusing, damaging, and divisive. On July 4 the Minister of Fisheries announced that the government was unilaterally going to proceed to take over the offshore trawling industry of Newfoundland. Since then it has taken over the offshore trawling industry of Nova Scotia. The federal Government did not bother to agree on its actions with the provincial Governments or other bodies involved. That was July 4.

Four months later there is still no direction for this new nationalized company. No one knows what is to happen. No one knows what the quotas will be for the new offshore Newfoundland company in 1984-1985. No one knows who is in charge. No one is giving it direction. No one is in a position of authority to set the budget for next year. No one knows anything. There is endless confusion and damage.

In my own district of St. John's West, at the major fish plant at Trepassey, the work of repairing the wharf and the ice shed has been stopped for the last several months. Unless this work recommences immediately, the plant cannot open again in January and the 500 or 600 employees will remain out of work. Not only that, Madam Speaker, but the Government has spent four months fighting its own creature. It owns 48 per cent of the Canada Development Corporation. It has been battling with that Corporation, and just last Friday agreed to compensate it. It is a disgrace, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

EMPLOYMENT

DIFFICULTIES OF PEOPLE OF SCHEFFERVILLE, P.Q.

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, this morning I met with a group of people from Schefferville to talk about the problems still being experienced by the citizens of this northern town. I would like to welcome the Mayor of Schefferville, Mr. Bégin, and the Chairman of the Adjustment Committee, Mr. Forté. Madam Speaker, perhaps the Department of Employment and Immigration, after doing so much for the workers of Schefferville, could ask the Iron Ore Company—and I would have liked to see the Leader of the Opposition in the House today—to sit down at a tripartite conference with the provincial and federal governments, to find a solution for Schefferville businessmen and owners of mobile homes. The people of Schefferville have the impression, and in some cases they are sure, that they have been abandoned by the company, and it is important to settle the problem now, because we can expect further problems on the North Shore with other towns. It is important that the company be held morally and socially responsible and that it meet its obligations to its workers.

CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

W. GIFFORD-JONES FOUNDATION—APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, all Members of the House will be aware of the continuing debate over the merits of legalizing the medical use of heroin for the relief of terminal cancer pain, and the fact that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) has established an expert advisory committee on the management of severe pain. They will also be aware, I hope, of the important role played by the W. Gifford-Jones Foundation in stimulating the debate that led to the creation of the advisory committee, and the continuing role which this Foundation is playing in the necessary debate which society must experience about the difficult questions which attend the reality of suffering, pain, and death.

The Foundation's advocacy of the legalization of heroin has been a prime mover in bringing this issue to the attention of the public, and in thereby pressuring the experts to consider such decisions as matters of public policy and not just of technical expertise, which is a welcome development.

Recently the Foundation applied for registration as a charity, and was turned down on the grounds that it was political and therefore not eligible. I ask the Government to review that decision by Revenue Canada in the interests of a fully informed public on such issues, and, while it is at it, it could review its entire policy on the granting of charitable status, which, as it stands now, is highly arbitrary, inconsistent, and inadequate when it comes to the appropriate role of churches and other groups, in contributing to public policy debate.

EXCISE TAX

INCREASE IN TAX ON TOBACCO

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Madam Speaker, I rise on behalf of the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Growers' Marketing Board and many of my constituents to express their strong opposition to the Government's persistence in applying an excessive increase in excise tax on tobacco.

The levy of an excise tax which annually generates its own increase ad valorem is doubly unfair to the poor. Not only is this a regressive tax, but its negative impact becomes more pronounced year by year as its value is increased automatically. If the Government were as deeply concerned and committed to social justice as it purports to be, then surely its six and five guidelines would apply equally to this tax as they do to the wages that must pay for it.

The automatic indexing of this excise tax undermines the fundamental principle calling for parliamentary approval of all tax increases to ensure that people are taxed in a manner that is equitable and fair. If the Government were so principled, I would not have to call the attention of the House to the problem that this tax poses for the many tobacco growers in my constituency. Their views are represented in a letter which I received from Judy Fulop of Tillsonburg, Ontario, in which she states:

The reason for this letter is to protest the manner in which taxes are slapped onto tobacco products. Monique Begin's pretense about caring about peoples' health is a false front and her reasoning for increasing the price to reduce consumption is an underhanded tactic to "rake in" as much tax money as possible. If she really cares and if tobacco really is that dangerous, then it should be banned completely. Why put the industry through a slow death?"

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

PROVISION AFFECTING BRITISH COLUMBIA COAL LANDS

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, I rise to express opposition on behalf of British Columbians, to Clause 62 of Bill C-155, which will give the federal Government control of 50,000 acres of valuable coal bearing lands. The Bill before the House directs that the federal Government "may dispose of or otherwise deal with" these lands "in any manner and on any condition" the Government thinks fit.

The Government of B.C. has taken the position of negotiating, rather than demanding the return of these lands. This weak stand fails to reinforce the position of B.C. MPs and could result in the takeover of this valuable resource by none other than Petro-Canada. Section 50 of the Constitution Act, 1982, strengthens and reinforces provincial ownership vis-à-vis natural resources within the boundaries of the Province.

The federal Government has no constitutional right to these coal lands. Unfortunately, the two amendments introduced to the Bill which would have returned ownership of these lands to the Province of B.C., you have deemed beyond the scope of this Bill. In 1982, Canadian grain exports amounted to $6 billion. It is estimated that the value of the B.C. coal lands could be $450 billion. This is the equivalent of 75 years' worth of grain exports.

In view of the above, B.C. Progressive Conservative Members of Parliament demand that the coal lands be returned to the original owner, the Province of British Columbia.

DISARMAMENT

WOMEN'S DISARMAMENT DAY—PROTEST AGAINST TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, a few days ago the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was wondering about the lives of Canadians. What kind of people lived here, he asked. Many Canadians wonder about the Prime Minister. They wonder where he really stands on the issue of disarmament. They were disappointed when he gave the go ahead for Cruise missile testing, but they are hopeful that something positive will come out of his disarmament task force.

Today is Women's Disarmament Day, and it is important to note that over 60 per cent of Canadian women oppose testing the Cruise missile. What the women want, and what all peace loving Canadians want, is the Prime Minister to bring his actions into line with his rhetoric.

In Victoria on Saturday hundreds of ordinary Canadians cast ballots calling on the Prime Minister to cancel the Cruise testing agreement and to make Canada a nuclear weapons free zone. They asked me to deliver these ballots in a way that would symbolize the power of public opinion and the desire for peace. I would ask a page to come forward—

Madam Speaker: Order. I would ask the pages not to collect the ballots. The Hon. Member is not allowed to exhibit objects in the House.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SOUTH AFRICA—LIFE EXPECTANCY RATES—CONDEMNATION OF APARTHEID

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of the House the results of a study conducted by Johannesburgs's Witwatersrand University in South Africa. The study has shown that the average life expectancy of that country's 4.6 million whites is 65 years. For the 24.7 million blacks, it is 45 years. The medical experts there have no doubts that the South African apartheid system of so-called "separate development" of the races is a factor in this great difference.

The great gap between the quality of life of blacks and whites in South Africa is clearly shown in the infant mortality rate, which is 21.6 per thousand among whites and 123.9 among blacks in towns, and between 200 and 300 for blacks in the rural areas of that country. The segregation of medical staff and patients means that there is one doctor for every 330 whites, but only one for every 91,000 blacks.

Because of these awesome disparities, I would urge the Government of Canada seriously to consider opposing all future International Monetary Fund loans to South Africa until the apartheid system is effectively dismantled. Sweden and Norway have already adopted such a policy, as has the House of Representatives in the United States.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—INVASION BY UNITED STATES FORCES

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It relates to the drama that continues to unfold on the island of Grenada. Was the Canadian Government asked for its advice at any stage of the proceedings in preparation for the move on Grenada, either by our Caribbean friends, neighbours and allies, or by the United States of America?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, at seven o'clock yesterday afternoon, or 1900 hours, on Monday, our embassy in Washington was informed by someone from the State Department—the Minister can perhaps give details as to names—of various options that the Americans were examining with a view to ensuring the protection of their nationals in Grenada.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, that is an unusual answer. Someone in the embassy was contacted by someone in the State Department, and somebody else can give the names. It is a pretty sad admission as to the role of the Government.

INQUIRY WHETHER ADVICE SOUGHT FROM CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): We have been trying with questions for a number of days to alert the Government to the vital significance of what was unfolding on Grenada. I repeat my question to the Prime Minister. Was his Government asked for advice or input by the United States of America or any of the Caribbean allies to whose friendship he has made frequent reference?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the answer is no in so far as Caribbean allies are concerned. In so far as the United States administration is concerned, Mr. Motley of the State Department approached Mr. Roy of our embassy in Washington. Mr. Gotlieb having been away at that time, it was Mr. Roy who was approached. Now that I have satisfied the Leader of the Opposition about names, perhaps he can get to the substance of his concerns.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, the substance of my concerns may be lost on the Prime Minister, but I can assure him that they are not lost on the Canadian people. I can assure him of that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Inasmuch as the events have transpired, what is the current position of the Prime Minister and the Government with regard to developments in Grenada? Does the Government support the initiative that has been taken, or is it opposed? If so, has such sentiment been conveyed to our NATO allies or Caribbean partners?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it is clear that the substance of the concerns of the Leader of the Opposition is to ask questions. I am sure that will not be lost on the Canadian people either. He is asking us what concerns we expressed. The Minister expressed them earlier this morning when asked about them. I think I could best repeat his statement to the media. It was that there were American nationals there. The United States was certainly entitled to attempt to protect those nationals. Whether it used the only available means and the proper means to protect them is something that we do not know the answer to, because we are not in possession of the facts.

I understand that Secretary Shultz will be explaining the reasons for the invasion this afternoon and I am prepared to wait to hear the explanation of the American Government on why they found it necessary to invade the island in order to protect their nationals.

In the case of Canada I know we had permission from Grenada to evacuate our nationals. I do not know if, for some reason or another, the Americans did not have that permission from Grenada. I hope we will have the answers.

POSITION OF NEIGHBOURING CARIBBEAN COUNTRIES

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I am surprised that the Prime Minister would want to hear from Secretary Shultz this afternoon. He could have heard from President Reagan this morning, who stated very clearly on television, in the presence of the Prime Minister of Dominica, that the action was taken to ensure the safety of the residents and to maintain the democratic option for the people of Grenada.

In light of this very clear statement by the President and by our Caribbean allies, do the Prime Minister and the Government approve of the action that has been taken, or is the Government in disagreement? The Prime Minister pointed out to the House the other day that he would be guided in his actions in regard to the island of Grenada by what the neighbours wanted to have done. The neighbours have made it very clear what they want to have done, and I want to know whether the Prime Minister generally shares that view.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, in so far as neighbours are concerned I would remind the Leader of the Opposition that I was correcting the statement by him which he was attributing to the Minister of State for External Relations, who said that we would consult neighbours before deciding whether to extend recognition or not. That is a different matter from an invasion.

The second point is that the Leader of the Opposition quotes President Reagan as having said that they intended to ensure the safety of the Americans there. That is not enough for me to justify or to condemn the action. Were there other ways of ensuring the safety of the Americans there than by proceeding by invasion?

In the case of Canada, as I have said, we had authority from Grenada to take our citizens out. I do not know if the United States was refused that authority or not. If they had the authority to do that, I cannot see any reason for invading to protect their nationals when you can protect them by getting them out. I am in hypothesis here, Madam Speaker. I do not know. Perhaps Secretary Shultz will tell us. If the Leader of the Opposition is satisfied with the bland explanation that invasion was necessary to protect nationals, then he obviously knows more than I do.

I do not know why invasion was necessary. The Leader of the Opposition goes on to quote President Reagan as saying that the invasion was also intended to maintain the democratic system. The Leader of the Opposition said that should suffice for me. Obviously it is sufficient for him. I would ask him what would happen if the United States gave itself authority to invade any country where the democratic system did not exist?

NATURE OF UNITED STATES NOTIFICATION

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister who has indicated that they were notified at 1900 hours yesterday. Would the Prime Minister indicate what specifically they were notified of? Was it to be an American rescue operation, or was it in fact the multi-nation entry into Grenada that actually occurred?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, at about seven o'clock last evening Mr. Motley met with Mr. Roy, Minister at the Canadian Embassy in Washington, and outlined a number of options that the American authorities were thinking of in relation to protecting the safety of American nationals in Grenada. Those options largely could be characterized as being of the rescue operation type. There was no indication at that time that an invasion would take place within a matter of hours.

SELECTION OF AIRCRAFT TO FLY CANADIANS TO SAFETY

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question again is for the Prime Minister who will recall that yesterday the Minister of State for External Relations described the preparations that had been made with respect to taking the Canadians that wanted to leave off of the island. In view of that answer yesterday, would the Prime Minister confirm to the House that in fact the aircraft that was secured was a LIAT aircraft and, as matters developed, it turned out it needed the consent of each of the Caribbean Governments that own a piece of that company? When that consent was forthcoming this morning it was too late to take the Canadians off as the invasion was then under way. Would he explain to the House why Canada did not secure a Canadian aircraft, or charter an aircraft to take the Canadians off the island, so that they would be secure and safe, if that was their wish?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member ignores the fact that there were no problems in relation to the utilization of the LIAT aircraft which was already in the area and, therefore, able to be used on relatively short notice, until we were very close to the time scheduled for the flight to Grenada to pick up the Canadians yesterday.

I believe that flight had been scheduled for 2.30. Earlier approval had been received from the office of Prime Minister Tom Adams of Barbados and it was only shortly before the departure time that two or three other countries that share in the ownership of the airline objected to having an airliner, in which they had part ownership, being seen flying into Grenada. By the time it was cleared up with those countries it was too late in the day for the flight to occur. Indeed the crew had dispersed. Obviously this morning was too late. I do not think there were any reasonable grounds to anticipate that that aeroplane would not have been able to be used.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

CANADIAN CONTENT PROPOSAL—JAPANESE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry. On Friday last the Minister of Industry, in answering a question asked by me, indicated:

> The Canadian way is the negotiation route, Madam Speaker. We will continue in this direction, but if we are not successful then we might have to take other action.

This was in response to a question with regard to the Government's intention in terms of the implementation of the recommendations of the task force on automotive parts. The Ambassador from Japan has indicated that they do not favour the Government of Canada taking this route, and they have indicated that they will retaliate if Canada moves in that direction. Is the Government presently involved in negotations with the Government of Japan? Is there a deadline for those negotiations? If that deadline is met without the negotiations having been successfully concluded, will the Government of Canada implement those recommendations?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, as I have indicated on several occasions in this House and other public fora, we are trying to negotiate with the Japanese automobile companies to make a major investment here in Canada as they have in many other industrialized nations around the world. Until such time as we feel we are not making any progress in these negotiations it would be very irresponsible for me to indicate what other possible action the Government of Canada might take.

ALLEN INDUSTRIES—ANNOUNCEMENT OF HAMILTON PLANT CLOSURE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, on May 12, with regard to another section of the automobile industry, I asked the Minister if he would look into the suggestion that Allen Industries, which is located in the area of Hamilton, was going to move to the United States. He indicated at that point that his ministry officials were on top of it, and that the Minister of Indian Affairs was also on top of it. On top of it they may be. Have any actions been undertaken to stop the most recent announcement of Allen Industries that it is going to close the plant this spring and move out of Canada?

● (1430)

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, I am not aware of the specific announcement that the Hon. Member is alleging.

Mr. Deans: You are supposed to be on top of it.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—INFORMATION PROVIDED BY UNITED STATES AUTHORITIES

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, I wonder if I might go a little further with the Prime Minister or the Minister of State for International Trade, and ask whether, in the consultations yesterday in New York between the American officials and officials of our embassy there, we were left, formally or informally, with any impression that an action was being contemplated because the United States had reason to believe that the Government or the administration of Grenada was now in the hands of the Soviets or Cubans? Were we given any reason to believe that that might have been the cause of the precipitous action?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to consultations in New York yesterday; I presume he means Washington. According to the reports of the discussions that we have received, there was no mention of the possibility of the Government being in the hands of any foreign country.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, the paucity of information is becoming a little puzzling and a little amusing.

ROLE OF CUBANS AND SOVIETS IN GRENADA

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister? Does he have any reason to believe, or did he have any reason to believe over the last eight or ten days that in fact the administration or the Government of Grenada had passed from Grenadians to Cubans or Russians? I ask that question, bearing in mind the very clear reports coming out of Grenada, as recently as an hour ago, of the securing of 30 Russian or Soviet officers for the purpose of facilitating their leaving that island. Is that part of the difficulty?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member would know that since Maurice Bishop took power there had been accusations levelled at him as being the tool of the Cubans and of the Soviets. That accusation had been coming from various quarters including, I believe, some of the Caribbean countries. The Hon. Member knows that was not our view. We thought we should maintain relations with Maurice Bishop and with that Commonwealth country, lest by isolating we forced him precisely to depend exclusively on the Cubans or the Soviets. That is not a new story.

Whether something specific happened in the last ten days to which the Hon. Member may be alluding, I am not aware of any such event.

SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister when are we going to get those Canadians who wish to leave, out of Grenada? It had been possible in the last week to make them out by two or three different means.

While he is on his feet can he respond to the humanitarian question posed yesterday by the Leader of the Opposition which respect to extending the protection that Canada can offer to Grenadians who are in Canada on student visas, visitor visas, work permits, or otherwise? Can he give the assurance that these people can feel free to approach Canadian immigration authorities, where necessary, for an extension of their visas or permits until such time as events and conditions in Grenada are normalized?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I am glad that after this lengthy discussion on the events that are occuring in Grenada today, someone has shown some interest in the welfare of the Canadians who are there. I compliment the Hon. Member in this regard.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: I am talking about today. May I say that this is the first question today, since the invasion, that has dealt with the welfare of the Canadians.

Let me say that we are in constant contact with the American task force in Grenada and we are informed, through our contacts, that 25 of the Canadians, the ones who had designated that they wished to leave the island in yesterday's proposed flight, are safely in the Ross Point Inn, some three miles from the town of Bridgetown and away from any fighting or conflict. There are five CUSO young people who are in the Bridgetown area and we have no reason to believe that they are in any particular danger. There are seven to ten other Canadians who have not registered or indicated any desire to leave the island, whose whereabouts throughout the island are not known at this time.

As the situation is clarified later in the day, we think it will be possible to make concrete plans in relation to the removal of those Canadians who wish to leave immediately, since both airfields are now in the hands of the American authorities.

RELATIONS WITH COMMONWEALTH CARIBBEAN COUNTRIES

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. It is fascinating that, now that there is a task force, we can talk to it. We did not have any idea that it was being formed.

Since the Prime Minister indicated yesterday and before that that we had been in conversation with Caribbean countries to try to develop our position, can he please inform the House how it can be that the senior member of the Commonwealth in this hemisphere, Canada, the senior member of the Commonwealth, was not consulted or advised, or in any way involved by the Caribbean countries involved? How can he possibly explain to the House why Jamaica and Barbados did not want to get Canada's advice at any time?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think the answer to that is rather simple. These countries, as facts show, were determined to support an invasion. They know that Canada is not in the habit of supporting invasions of other countries.

PRIME MINISTER'S PEACE INITIATIVE

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I thank the Prime Minister for the honesty of his answer. I have a supplementary question because last week the Prime Minister initiated something that I think a lot of Canadians hope will work, and that is an attempt to solve East-West tensions. If the Americans, the Jamaicans, the Barbadians, and our allies in the Caribbean have no trust in the Prime Minister and the Government of Canada, why should Canadians believe that his initiative will work?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think the question is very well put. I would certainly say that those Canadians who believe that Canada should have its armies ready to invade islands or other countries, the Governments of which they disagree with, should vote for the Hon. Member and his Party. The others can vote for our Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BANKS AND BANKING

LEVEL OF PRIME INTEREST RATE

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. The Minister will know that when you compare interest rates to the rate of inflation, the real cost of borrowing money in Canada is unrealistically high. The banks are now charging 11 per cent prime. The Minister will know that if you compare that with the LIBOR rate or the Eurodollar rate, their rate of interest is considerably less. What effort has the Minister of Finance made, or what effort will he make, to persuade our chartered banks to reduce their prime rate to a more realistic level?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member will be happy to learn that at a certain stage in the last two years our rates were as much as 4 per cent or 5 per cent above U.S. rates, and since July our short-term rates have been below the United States rates by as much as half a point. Over the last two months the prime rate in Canada has been at the same level as in the United States which has a lower rate of inflation than Canada. In the U.S. the latest figure for inflation was 3.7 per cent while our rate was 5 per cent. In practice, therefore, the real interest rates in Canada are 1.3 per cent lower than in the United States.

I would argue with my friend that we have pursued a policy in this country of bringing interest rates down as low as could sensibly be done while still maintaining a reasonable value for our dollar. The record shows that we have done a better job in terms of reducing the real interest rates than the United States.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER PRESS BANKS TO REDUCE RATE

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, the Minister knows that when the Hon. Member for St. John's West was the Minister of Finance our prime interest rate was 1.5 per cent less than the American prime rate. The Minister knows that the banking system is prepared to lend long term money, one year money, at less than the prime rate. The Minister knows that business depends on prime rates. Why will the Minister not then press the chartered banks to reduce their prime rate to a more realistic level, in order to stimulate employment and get our recovery going again?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am afraid the hon. gentleman is living in a world of his own. Economic recovery in Canada has been very vigorous, as the Hon. Member is well aware. In fact, the growth rate in Canada was 7.5 per cent in the two first quarters of 1983. We are creating jobs in Canada at a faster rate than any other industrialized country, and as far the growth rate is concerned, we are competing directly with the United States, and who knows which of our two countries will have the highest growth rate by the end of the year.

In September, we brought inflation down to 5 per cent, the most substantial drop in any industrialized country during the current year.

All these figures should convince the hon. gentleman that economic recovery in Canada is well on its way and that he should support the Government's efforts.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—BUILDING OF RACING YACHT

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister in the House responsible for Canadair and ask him if he is aware that Canadair is building a yacht for entry in the 1984 Trans-Atlantic race? Does the Minister sanction this kind of expenditure by a Crown corporation which has just lost over $1.4 billion and is back to the till for another quarter of a billion dollars?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, if I remember correctly, I believe the work was done in partnership with a private company.

LAW SUIT OVER BILLING

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Madam Speaker, the Minister is obviously aware of this issue. In view of the fact that he is aware that the work was done by Canadair for a private company, which was Technique Avant Garde, a company which has taken Canadair to the International Court in a law suit for over $135 million, would the Minister advise the House if there is any chance of Canadair collecting the billing on this yacht? And could he tell us what is the billing to Technique Avant Garde?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I shall make enquiries and shall be glad to inform the House and the Hon. Member in due course.

THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS

INFRINGEMENT BY ONTARIO PUBLIC SERVICE WAGE LEGISLATION

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. Yesterday the Ontario Supreme Court ruled that those portions of the Ontario public service wage control legislation which prevented employees from negotiating non-monetary clauses, was in violation of the Canadian Constitution and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms within that Constitution. In light of that court decision, is the federal Government willing to change its legislation, Bill C-124, to enable workers to negotiate clauses such as worker safety, technical change, and job security?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, we have not had an opportunity to study the decision which, I am told, has over 200 pages. We will certainly do that with our legal advisers. However, I would be very surprised if this ruling were not appealed by the Ontario authorities.

WORKERS' RIGHT TO NEGOTIATE NON-MONETARY ISSUES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, in the judgment, the Ontario Supreme Court said that legislation which is supposed to be regulating pay packages, which also prevents workers from negotiating any other non-monetary clause, is unconstitutional. As part of the Government which brought in the Charter of Rights, does the President of the Treasury Board not feel that workers should have a right to negotiate non-monetary clauses at this time?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, I repeat that I feel it is premature to say what type of binding precedent that decision is going to be, because I am sure it is going to be appealed. If my Hon. friend would take another look at the Public Service Compensation Restraint Act he will find there is a provision in it for negotiating collectively with the Government on matters both monetary and non-monetary, as long as the six and five framework is accepted.

POSITION OF EMPLOYER

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, the President of the Treasury Board is right. There is a clause in the federal Government's legislation which allows negotiations, if the employer agrees. However, will the President of the Treasury Board not also admit that only two contracts have been signed under that provision? In other words, the vast majority of workers who fall under the federal jurisdiction have not been allowed to negotiate any non-monetary clauses whatsoever.

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, I believe my hon. friend is mistaken. He is referring to Section 7 of the Act. I invite the Hon. Member to take a look at Section 16 which allows the Governor in Council to exempt a contract from the coverage of the Act if it accepts the six and five principle. And there have been more than two such contracts, if I am not mistaken.

AGRICULTURE

INCREASE IN FARM BANKRUPTCIES

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, despite the fact that the Minister of Finance talks about a glowing economy, 46 more Canadian farmers went bankrupt in September, bringing the total to 333 so far this year. Obviously the year-end total is going to surpass the 1982 total of 410. I would like to ask the Minister of Agriculture if he is now prepared to change his tune. To be specific, his response last month to farm bankruptcy statistics was that Canadian farmers were doing all right. In light of these new figures—that 46 more Canadian farmers went bankrupt in September—does the Minister of Agriculture still intend to live in his dream world, or is he now prepared to do something which will help to reverse this trend toward more farm bankruptcies?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I know the Hon. Member, from his vast experience, is quite knowledgeable in agriculture. I know some of the areas he supports.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: I do not know whether or not he used that in his campaign, but I would just like to say to the Hon. Member that when he talks about farmers, let him be honest as to what farmers are in difficulty in Canada, why they are in difficulty, and then face the issues as they are presented.

Agriculture in Canada is a joint responsibility between the Provinces and the federal Government. I met the farmers in British Columbia. The Minister of Agriculture of British Columbia is in Europe. As far as I know, he has not met these issues yet.

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, the farmers I am most concerned about, I suppose, are the farmers from my own area of Manitoba.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): But I am also very concerned about the fact that more Canadian farmers are going bankrupt at a time when this man is Minister of Agriculture than at any other time in Canadian history since the 1930s.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR INCREASED FUNDING

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, as a supplementary question, why will the Minister of Agriculture not persuade the Minister responsible for fiscal economy, the Minister of Finance, to make more money available through the Farm Credit Corporation so there will be fewer farmers instead of more farmers going bankrupt?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I was wrong on where the Hon. Member cultivated farmers. He has obviously cultivated farmers in Manitoba. However, if he wants to check the facts, he will find out that in the Province of Manitoba this Minister of Agriculture is responsible for double the benefits of the present Manitoba Government, and of the previous Government of Manitoba. Therefore, when the Hon. Member is talking about financing the farmers out of difficulty, he should know that we have recently loaned farmers the largest amount of money that we have ever loaned them. He knows, as well as I know, that we cannot always loan them out of their difficulties. It is the marketplace in many instances which is sick and is not giving them returns. His Party's agricultural critic, an Hon. Member from the same Province of Manitoba, said last week, "We do not want hand-outs. We do not want give-aways." The Hon. Member is asking me to do that very thing today in the House of Commons. Let that Party make up its mind what it wants.

GRAIN

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION PROGRAM—REQUEST FOR PAY-OUT

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Why will the Minister not be honest with the Canadian farmers, quit playing politics with their money and pay out the western grain stabilization program, or come up with a formula which makes it possible to make a pay-out, and also do something about the initial price of grain?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member talks about honesty and playing politics. He certainly should know a lot about both of those things, as far as that goes. I read the record of what he said in the House of Commons last week and it leaves a lot of doubt when you really know what is happening in agriculture in Canada, where the money is coming from and where it is being spent. He says what we should be doing for agriculture in Canada. What did he suggest we should do last week?

Some Hon. Members: Answer the question.

Mr. Whelan: What did he suggest we could do?

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Western Arctic.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

NORTHERN CANADA POWER COMMISSION—NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD REPORT

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. He has now had the National Energy Board report on the Northern Canada Power Commission on his desk for the best part of a month. Why will he not release it publicly?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, the NEB Report has been made known to me in draft form. It is being formally presented to my by the directors today. It seems to me it is hardly courteous to raise the question of public disclosure of a report when the authors themselves have not formally presented it to the Minister yet.

Mr. Nielsen: News travels fast these days.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): He has a buddy on the Board.

PUBLIC WORKS

SURREY B.C. PORT OF ENTRY FACILITIES

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works who, in a letter to me last week, indicated that the port of entry facilities on the Pacific Highway in Surrey were not part of the special recovery program. In view of the fact that Transpo '86 is only two and a half years away and those facilities will have to be built to provide security for the Immigration Department as well as the extra customs traffic, why were they not included in that program?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, the choice of projects depended on many factors, but certainly we recognize the importance of the facility the Hon. Member has been promoting for some time.

MAINTENANCE OF SECURITY

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, in view of the fact that security will be an issue when Transpo '86 is on, with increased immigration and increased customs traffic, has the Minister consulted at all with the Minister of National Revenue or the Minister responsible for immigration to make sure we maintain security at that border crossing point and accommodate the extra flow of customs traffic crossing that area?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, if my memory is correct this project was being discussed and planned for before the special recovery program. I think that indicates the importance we attach to it.

GRAIN

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION PROGRAM—POSSIBILITY OF CHANGES

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, my question is supplementary to that of the very fine Minister for Brandon-Souris—or the Hon. Member for Brandon-Souris. He will be a very fine Minister next year.

Some Hon. Members: Want to bet on that?

Mr. Malone: Madam Speaker, I ask the Minister of Transport what changes are pending with respect to the Western Grain Stabilization Plan regarding the pay-out formula? Are there any changes pending, when will they be announced, and will they trigger a pay-out for 1983?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, that question has been asked in this House on two or three occasions. The answer has not changed. Yes, there is a review. It will be looking at the change in legislation which may be required to move from a five-year to a three-year average. I cannot give the exact time in which any recommendations would be made, because it is the responsibility of the Minister responsible for the Wheat Board to make recommendations to Cabinet.

PAY-OUT ADVOCATED

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, I can only assume the Minister is saying there will not be a pay-out in 1983. That being the case, and in light of the fact prices for farmers are the same as in 1973 but their input costs have tripled, why do the Minister and his cohorts continue to play Peter Pan politics and patty-cake the farmers with their own money, when in fact there is every reason for a pay-out in 1983?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member would spend more time looking at the statute and less time reading nursery rhymes, he would know that in fact it is a legislative requirement that it be carried over a five-year period.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

OFFER OF PARDONS TO SONS OF FREEDOM WOMEN MEMBERS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. Last week he apparently offered pardons to three women of the Sons of Freedom sect who have been convicted of arson and are now conducting hunger strikes in their B.C. prison, if they promise not to set any more fires. He is quoted as having said that this would not create a precedent. Would the Minister explain to the House and the Canadian people the purpose in offering these pardons? Is it only to relieve himself of the dilemma with respect to force feeding?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): No, Madam Speaker, it is not for that purpose. It is because the B.C. Government is making a concerted and very responsible effort to try to bring peace to the Doukhobor community. One of the issues causing considerable tension is the fate of these three prisoners who have been sentenced to terms which will see them released, I believe in all cases, over the next two years. I thought it would be useful for the Province of British Columbia, in negotiations, to have the possibility of these women being put on the street under two conditions: first, to be helpful in bringing peace to the Doukhobor community; second, in a way which would guarantee that no more victims would be created by Doukhobor violence or arson in British Columbia.

I think British Columbia finds the option interesting. I know that active negotiations are under way which may well result in the settlement of a decade long cause of difficulty in the Province of British Columbia, and I would hope that type of initiative might even have the support of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I hope the Minister will ensure, when he makes reference to this matter, that he refers to the Sons of Freedom sect rather than dealing with the Doukhobors who are not all members of that sect by any means.

REASONS FOR OFFER

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, why did the Minister make this proposal public? The women in question have not even heard of the proposal. Secondly, why did he take the pardon route as opposed to a form of parole? What does the Solicitor General consider to be the circumstances which must be present before he will pardon someone duly convicted of a crime and still serving a sentence imposed by a judge for that crime?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, why a pardon and not parole is because I have no control over paroles. They are the independent responsibility, pursuant to statute, of the Members of the Parole Board and they have special statutory considerations that apply. I approached the chairman of the Parole Board because some of the cases had been before the Board. Brian Smith, the Attorney General of British Columbia, invited me to do that to see whether these cases could be heard. According to the Parole Board, it was not an appropriate way of dealing with it.

Pardons, on the other hand, are available in residual types of cases where the normal types of considerations applicable to parole are not present. A pardon is a long-standing historic matter of Royal prerogative and it should only be applied in very special circumstances. I thought these were the very types of circumstances in which the use of a pardon might be of interest to the Province of British Columbia.

MULTICULTURALISM

FUNDING OF NATIVE FRIENDSHIP CENTRES

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. On May 30 last he and the Secretary of State, with great fanfare, made an announcement on increasing the funding for the Native Friendship Centres across Canada. To date those centres have not got this increased funding. As late as yesterday they went out on strike at the centres. Can the Minister bring us up to date on what he is doing about assuring the funding he and the Secretary of State promised on May 30?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is quite right. On behalf of the Secretary of State I made an announcement in eastern Canada while the Minister responsible, namely, the Secretary of State, was making an announcement in western Canada. Because he is the Minister responsible I think it would be appropriate if my colleague, the Secretary of State, specifically answered the question.

PROMISES OF FUNDING

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, will the Secretary of State answer the question? While he is at it, will he not give us the same promises he has been giving for the last six months to the native centres, and not producing?

• (1500)

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I am glad to repeat to the Hon. Member that, in response to a similar question from a representative of the New Democratic Party last week, I mentioned that the policy that was announced in the month of May would remain as the policy of the Government. I said that it is a good policy and that by the end of this week I would be in a position to make sure that the requests that had been put forward by the representatives of the National Association of Friendship Centres would be met.

PETITIONS

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, today I have the pleasure of presenting a petition which is signed by residents of Île à la Crosse, Saskatchewan, a community in The Battlefords-Meadow Lake constituency. The petition comes from an area of Saskatchewan which the petitioners describe in a letter to me as being: "An area involved both in the production of uranium and the proposed testing of nuclear capable weapons. Both activities take place on lands formerly and rightfully used for fish and fur by Métis and Indian people".

The petition, Madam Speaker, calls upon Parliament to recognize that the Cruise missile testing in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and to debate and pass Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone.

MR. FULTON—TESTING OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, I have two petitions to present to the House. The first petition is from 11 petitioners who are principally residents of British Columbia and are concerned about nuclear disarmament, particularly on the Queen Charlotte Islands. They are concerned that Masset on Graham Island is a first order target due to the presence of submarine tracking military operations. The petitioners ask that the House stop the production, promotion and sales of Candu nuclear reactors and prevent the storage, positioning or testing of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil or in Canadian waters and that Canada take a leadership role in world disarmament.

MR. FULTON—OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, the second petition also comes from some of my constituents who are concerned about the lifting of the moratorium on West Coast oil exploration. They ask for the disallowance of any offshore oil and gas development until aboriginal claims have been negotiated and that the Government include outstanding native claimants as active participants to any federal-provincial negotiations concerning ownership, revenue sharing, environmental standards and all other matters dealing with the ocean, its resources and their development.

MR. PARKER—RIDING OF KOOTENAY EAST-REVELSTOKE

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Madam Speaker, today I have the honour to present a petition from over 300 residents of the community of Revelstoke in my riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke. Last spring, the Electoral Boundaries Commission recommended that this community be severed from the riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke and added to the riding of Kootenay West. Unfortunately, the commission held no hearings in the community of Revelstoke to allow people to have a chance to make their views known. This decision came as a complete surprise to them.

The citizens of Revelstoke feel that this decision ignores the many things Revelstoke has in common with the other areas included in the riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke. These people request Parliament to permit them and their community to remain within the riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke.

Madam Speaker: Motions. May I again ask Hon. Members who have the intention of moving their motions to rise so that I may call their names?

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, we are prepared to make the same exception today as we did yesterday on the understanding that no precedent will be set.

Madam Speaker: That was understood yesterday.

Mr. Nielsen: It is understood every day.

Madam Speaker: My memory is not that bad!

THE LATE FRANK A. ENFIELD

TRIBUTES TO FORMER MEMBER

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (York-Scarborough): Madam Speaker, I believe I have the consent of the House Leaders to make a brief statement. I have discussed this matter with the House Leader for the Conservative Party who at this time is on his feet. Perhaps he could indicate that he has agreed that I might make a brief statement. In addition, I have discussed this with the House Leader of the New Democratic Party and I understand he consents as well.

Madam Speaker: Is there consent to allow the Hon. Member to make a statement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Order Paper Questions

Mr. Cosgrove: Madam Speaker, I wish to inform the House of the death of the former and first Member for York-Scarborough, Mr. Frank A. Enfield, Q.C. Frank was educated in Toronto and graduated from the University of Toronto at Osgoode Hall. He joined the RCAF during World War II and served with distinction, rising to the rank of Flight Lieutenant.

After the war, Mr. Enfield was married, began a law practice and in 1949 was elected to the Scarborough Board of Education as a trustee. He held that post until he was elected to this House in 1953. Coincidentally, Madam Speaker, I moved to York-Scarborough in that year and observed first-hand that Mr. Enfield was admired and respected in his community.

The riding that he represented 30 years ago was the largest in Canada. It remains the largest riding in Canada today. Frank approached this heavy responsibility with personal warmth, with a quick smile and with wit. He will be missed by all of those who had contact with him and I know that all Hon. Members, Madam Speaker, will join with me in sympathizing with his family and his friends.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I rise to associate this Party with the remarks made by the Hon. Member. This is a task which the Hon. Member for Rosedale (Mr. Crombie) was going to perform, but in his absence I feel that I am perhaps best qualified to do so since it was in 1957 that I first entered the House and made the acquaintance of Mr. Enfield.

I do personally as well as on behalf of my Party join in the sentiments expressed by the Hon. Member in view of the background of the late Frank Enfield in the RCAF and his distinguished service on the part of his country in that force. We would also like to extend the sympathies of Members of this Party to those who have survived Mr. Enfield.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, on behalf of my Leader and Members of my Party, I would like to associate our Party with the remarks that have already been made about Frank Enfield, the former Member for York-Scarborough. We would also like to extend our condolences to members of his family.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION ACT, 1983

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Monday, October 24, 1983, consideration of Bill C-152, an Act respecting the organization of the Government of Canada and matters related or incidental thereto, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates; and Motions Nos. 2 and 8 (Mr. Lambert).

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I was saying yesterday at six o'clock that Motion No. 2 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) concerning Clause 5 of Bill C-132 reads: "A Minister of State for External Relations shall". If the Hon. Member wishes the motion to remain with the word "shall" included rather than the word "may", then of course there is no possible way we could support this motion.

The original Clause 5 states that a Minister for External Relations may be appointed by commission under the Great Seal to assist the Minister. While I agree that it should be a Minister of State for all the reasons that I gave yesterday, my own feeling and that of my Party is that there should not be and there need not be such a Minister at all.

As a result of the motion by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West stating that a Minister for External Relations "shall" be appointed, rather than "may", he is making it obligatory for the Government to appoint such a Minister, as is the case in Clause 4 respecting a Minister for International Trade. Clause 4 states that a Minister for International Trade "shall" be appointed, so that the Government has no choice but to appoint a Minister for International Trade. We do not want to see that same obligation with respect to the Minister for External Relations. That is why I said yesterday that I thought the Hon. Member had inadvertently made a mistake and used the word "shall" instead of the world "may". Apparently he wants to continue using the word "shall".

Our Party does not see any reason why there should be a new Minister called the Minister for External Relations. As many Members of the Official Opposition pointed out yesterday, it is in fact even more ludicrous than including the Minister for International Trade, because at least the duties of that Minister are specified in the Act. I agree with the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) that the Minister does not have his own departmental structure under him, but nevertheless a working relationship has already developed between the Deputy Minister of International trade and the Minister for International Trade. I am sure the Hon. Member for Don Valley West would agree. But in the case of the Minister for External Relations, that relationship does not even exist.

The third Deputy Minister in the department which is provided for in Clause 9 under Subclause (2) is the Deputy Minister for Political Affairs. When one examines the chart, one can see that there is not a solid or dotted line from the position of Deputy Minister for Political Affairs to anyone at the ministerial level. Although the officials to whom I have talked agree that there should be a dotted line between the position of Deputy Minister for International Trade and the Minister, there will be no line at all with respect to the Minister of External Relations. Therefore that Minister is really in limbo under this incredible reorganization. There has already been appointed a Minister for External Relations, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Lapointe). The present Minister of State for External Relations is the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Pepin). Judging by the problems they have experienced in the House and elsewhere so far, it is quite clear that in the case of the Hon. Member for Charlevoix, he was not clear, and in the case of the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton he is not clear, about the functions of the Minister for External Relations.

I have already stated that I do see some logic for including the Minister for International Trade—although I would have preferred the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce to remain as it was—but I see no logic in having a Minister for External Relations. When I asked the committee why it was necessary, one reason suggested was that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) was a very busy person since he was also Deputy Prime Minister and had many other duties. I could not help but recall that when the Secretary of State for External Affairs held that portfolio a few years ago, he was also a Deputy Prime Minister and had many duties to perform. At that time he did not need an assistant called the Minister for External Relations. We are all aware that this Minister has no functions whatsoever described in the Act itself. Clause 11 outlines the powers, duties and functions of the Minister, that is to say the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Clause 12 outlines the duties of the Minister for International Trade. The duties or powers of the Minister for External Relations are not delineated anywhere in the Act.

I suggest that when students of political science and public administration look at the Act and indeed the departmental chart to try to determine the functions of the new Minister for External Relations and a totally unconnected Deputy Minister for Political Affairs, they will be entirely baffled as is, indeed, the Government and the present Minister for External Relations.

At least the Government stated in Clause 5 that a Minister for External Relations may be appointed and was not insisting that there always be a Minister for External Relations. I suspect that after the present incumbent moves on to the other place or wherever, the Government may realize that it will not need to fill this post and for that reason has used the word "may".

Again, I would urge the Official Opposition—after what I thought was an inadvertent mistake—to change the word in Motion No. 2 from "shall", as it is now, to the word "may".

As I have already indicated, we could not possibly support a motion which would make it obligatory for the Government to appoint a Minister for External Relations when we do not believe there is any need to have such a Minister at all.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to spend a few minutes speaking on this Bill because I want to reiterate what a disappointment this Bill is. I was the External Affairs critic when this Bill originally came before the House. It is the greatest illustration of the uselessness of royal commission reports of any piece of legislation that I have ever seen in my life.

Why do I say that? Because we had a Royal Commission on Conditions of Foreign Service. I have the report here in my hand. It reported to the Government in the fall of 1981, I believe November. The report was made public in December. The Royal Commissioner was Miss McDougall who was asked by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to study the foreign service. She reported on October 21, 1981.

In January, 1982, just a couple of months after this Royal Commissioner reported, the Government ignored her report completely and all of her findings and entered into the most complex, complicated amalgamation of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce with the Department of External Affairs that has ever been undertaken. It flew in the face of what she recommended. For example, her recommendation, which was never carried out, was that:

> The Royal Commission Report be tabled in the House of Commons and referred to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence; that one year from the date of reference the Department of External Affairs and the central agencies involved report back to the Committee on the steps that have been taken with respect to the recommendations; and that the Committee deal with the report as a separate item on the parliamentary agenda and not as part of the consideration of the Estimates.

● (1520)

That was never done. It was completely ignored. There has never been a report, either to this House or to the External Affairs Committee, on what has happened to the recommendations of this report.

In the report the Commissioner found our foreign service to be in a very serious state. Let me read what she reported as found at page 261:

> That there has been a failure of management in, and of, the foreign service is patent: there is a fragmentation of managerial authority and responsibility in Ottawa and at posts and a level of mistrust and competition between various foreign service elements that robs the service of effectiveness.
> There is across the service confusion about role and function, uncertainty about careers, an inflexibility and pettiness in administration that is destructive of morale and esprit de corps. There is in Ottawa, and to a lesser degree at posts, a preoccupation with internal procedure and process at the expense of operations that erodes purpose, obscures objectives and frustrates policy.

Those were her findings. What does the Government do in the light of that? It entirely preoccupies itself with procedure and process. Instead of dealing with the evils and weaknesses which the Commissioner found to exist, the Government went ahead and increased the confusion and it obscured the objectives even further. The Government frustrated policy and eroded purpose by starting an immense and complicated amalgamation of other departments with the Department of External Affairs.

The Government did not deal with the problems found by the Royal Commisioner. Miss McDougall went on to say at page 261:

> The failure of management in the foreign service is not so much the failure of individuals as it is the failure of system.

The Government then takes the system and makes it 100 times worse, this system which the Commissioner investigated and which she found to be so deficient. That is why I, for one, have no intention of supporting this legislation. It is a monstrosity. It is monstrous for the Government to cast aside that report. Miss McDougall was never consulted by the Prime Minister as far as I know after she brought in that report. The Prime Minister who appointed her never consulted her. I asked her that question in the External Affairs Committee. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) never spoke with her or even received the report, or did any of the other characters of the triumvirate, the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) and the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan). None of them saw the commissioner after she presented this report. They went ahead with this monumental piece of ineptitude, this monstrosity, this bureaucratic nightmare in January, 1982 which is still not completed today. At the Pearson Building the fighting is still going on as to who controls what, who has what floor space, how much floor space and all the rest of it.

Here was a finding on the management of the foreign service completely ignored by the Government. What was the purpose of this whole reorganization, which did not deal with the evils or the conditions that Miss McDougall found to exist? Let me make one more reference to the report. At page 85 we find:

> Misunderstanding of the foreign service role is not particularly an "Ottawa" problem either. What is a problem in Ottawa is an apparent inability to balance the two elements in the foreign service role and to use the foreign service effectively.

On the next page we find:

> On the operations side, there is little sense at the posts that Ottawa really knows or cares what goes on there on a day-to-day basis—and there is little to be heard in Ottawa to dispel that belief.

Out in the field they do not think that Ottawa knows or cares what is going on or that anyone is listening. Does the Government do something to attempt to deal with that problem? Not at all. It makes the problem ten times worse by undertaking monumental and confusing restructuring. Whenever the Government does not know what to do, whenever the Government has no clear sense of purpose, whenever it does not have any clear policy, that is what it does and we have seen a complete failure of the Government's foreign policy today. We have seen it manifested in this House today. Canada is supposed to be a leading country with connections with the Caribbean—our tremendous Commonwealth Caribbean connections—yet it is ignored by the six countries of the eastern Caribbean which, together with the United States, invaded Grenada during the last 24 hours. Canada was not even warned in advance by any of those countries we have assisted, Mr. Speaker.

What a positive testimonial to the complete and utter bankruptcy and failure of Canadian foreign policy! The Prime Minister of this country puts himself up to be the great connector. He is going to be the great peacemaker. He was going to resolve East-West tensions. He is going to get the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. together. But our own great ally, President Reagan and his government, does not even inform the Prime Minister of the actions they are going to take in the Commonwealth Caribbean, in our backyard, before they go ahead and take those actions. Why not? Because they have no trust.

Mr. Evans: Order. That is not relevant. This is report stage.

Mr. Crosbie: The Parliamentary Secretary over there is croaking that I am not relevant. He can cease croaking. Nothing could be more relevant. This is what comes of ignoring the—

Mr. Evans: This is report stage.

Mr. Crosbie: I do not care what stage it is. It is important that this be said and that it be reported.

We have the ultimate proof today of the failure of the Canadian foreign service, and we know that neither the United States nor the Commonwealth Caribbean countries, Jamaica and Barbados, trust our Prime Minister. They do not even ask him for his advice. They do not ask him to join them in the actions they have decided to take. He is a washout as far as they are concerned.

The Government is not serious and the Prime Minister is not serious when he has a Royal Commission undertake this kind of task and then ignores completely the report brought in.

Mr. McDermid: It is put on a shelf to collect dust.

Mr. Crosbie: Yes. Now we have another one. We have the Macdonald Commission. There are ten people on that Commission. There was only one on the one I have referred to, Miss McDougall. On the Macdonald Commission there are ten people the Government can ignore—perhaps it is 12—except big Donald Macdonald. Of course, the Government is not going to ignore him. The Government is hoping to do something with poor Donald. Why have a Royal Commission if that is the way it is treated?

Not only am I opposed to this Bill because it is a monumental flop, a travesty, but I am opposed to it because of what the Government has done to the Department of External Affairs, how the Government has crushed it and how in 20 years it has become almost beyond laughing at. Its stature in the world is laughable because of the abysmal kind of leadership it has. I am opposed to this Bill because of what the Government has done with DREE, Mr. Speaker.

The Prime Minister said on January 12, 1982, when he announced the reorganization of these Government departments, that he was going to establish a new Ministry of State for Economic and Regional Development. He was going to replace DREE by a Department for Regional and Industrial Expansion. It is "I" before "E". He is going to change DREE to DRIE. He said: "The long-standing priority of assisting the disadvantaged regions of Canada is as high as before". That is a complete falsehood. I say at this report stage that it is a complete and utter falsehood and, if told deliberately, would be in the category of a complete lie.

What has the Government done with assisting the disadvantaged regions of Canada? While they are drowning, the Prime Minister and the Government steps on their heads to help them drown. They do not put out their hands to help them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): While I am on my feet, I did listen attentively, as I usually do, to the Hon. Member's remarks. After checking in some detail the contents of the amendment and its relationship to the Bill, I must say that the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) did depart extensively from the amendment.

It is too late now for me to ask him to undo what he has said, but I caution Members who will be recognized next to please adhere to the standard practice of relevancy in addressing their remarks to the amendments presented by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

Mr. Crosbie: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I apologize.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): I rise to make a short contribution to the debate, Mr. Speaker. I should say, and I think you would agree with me, that while the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) may not in parliamentary terms always be relevant, he is informative, always useful and always entertaining. I am sure that is why Members opposite chose not to rise to their feet and ask you to rule on his relevancy. That probably should have preceded any ruling made by yourself. I only want to respond to the comments made by the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) who asked why we have this form of amendment. It is for two reasons.

• (1530)

The points I want to make briefly are that the reasons we prefer the term Minister of State to the suggestion that the Minister be a full Minister are very similar to those I made in the intervention I made yesterday with regard to the Minister of State for International Trade. The Parliamentary Secretary nods his head and grins slightly. We do not need to repeat at length the argument that changing the title of Minister of State to that of Minister is not done for an international reason. It is strictly an internal reason in terms of increasing the number of Parliamentary Secretaries that can be created.

Here we have a case that one might describe with irony as equity. The decision was made that since the Minister of State for International Trade was to be a Minister, I suspect somebody decided that equity meant that the Minister for International Affairs ought to be a Minister and not a Minister of State. In fact, that creates another Parliamentary Secretary for the Government to appoint. I suspect that is the real reason behind this change.

The amendment as we have moved it is in form the same as the amendment with regard to the proposal to change the title of the Minister of International Trade to that of a Minister of State. In both cases we have used the word "shall", in other words that the appointment must be made.

There is a technical reason for that. As I indicated yesterday, Ministers of State may be appointed by the Prime Minister without reference to any piece of legislation under the Ministers of State Act. In this case, the proposal was to create a Minister of External Relations without a Department to administer. In fact, if you moved an amendment to say there may be a Minister of State for International Relations, there would be no necessity to move that amendment. In fact, Mr. Speaker, you would have ruled that that was a deletion. Certainly this was true in committee, that that would in effect have been a deletion since there is no authority required in the law to appoint a Minister of State. That authority exists in the Ministers of State Act. Therefore, the only form of amendment that could bring it to the floor is an amendment that there shall be a Minister of State for International Relations.

The arguments of some on the question of whether it is an absolute necessity that there shall be one are most interesting. I am here to say as the shadow Cabinet spokesman for the Minister of State for International Relations that I believe the post is absolutely essential and that Canada's foreign relations are best assisted by spreading the load. One of my colleagues tells me not to push that too far. I will not.

I believe that the ideal circumstance would be to create a situation in which we got to the resolution and simply said that we believe there should or may be a Minister of State for International Relations. The only way to put any pressure on the Government to agree to that decision was to move that amendment.

I do not really believe the Government is likely to agree to that. As I said earlier, its chief intent in all of this is to increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries. That seems to be its clear intention. We will return to that when we get to the amendments on Clause 25. I only wanted to respond to the Hon. member for New Westminster-Coquitlam as to her understanding about why the amendment has been moved in the form that it has been moved.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I would like to come back to the problem that has been created by this Bill. I am going to invent another word. I used one yesterday which was a little heavy. I will transform it into a verb. What they are trying to do is to "tricephalize" the Department of External Affairs. When it was operating with a Secretary of State for External Affairs as the principal and only Minister, Canada stood high in the eyes of the world as having a coherent, reputable and eminently reasonable foreign policy stance around the world. Some time around 1966, 1967 or 1968, a whole shift in that stance occurred.

I have just recently seen the latest volume of one of the most outstanding of Canada's foreign service officers, Mr. Charles Ritchie. This occurs in the book. I cannot give the exact words, but it goes like this. In his first interview with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), he was asked whether the Department of External Affairs was a necessary function of Government. Coupling that with the attitude which this Prime Minister has about the role that he himself could play, ought to play and intended to play on the world scene, I can understand that question. It was never difficult to answer. It was one of those impudent sort of questions which the Prime Minister would, I suspect, take a great deal of delight in asking.

I do not know whether he was satisfied with the answer given to him by Mr. Ritchie, but following very shortly after that man's appearance as the Prime Minister of Canada, a sequence of shifts, turns, contortions, twists and manipulations of the Department of External Affairs occurred. First, consultants were called in to examine the organization of the Department. I see a Member shaking his head. I was in the Department of External Affairs and I experienced that.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The only reason I was shaking my head as the Hon. Member was referring to me was that the Hon. Member's comments were about the history and evolution of the Department of External Affairs. We have before us now two motions. Those motions refer specifically to the establishment of a position called a Minister for External Relations. Certainly the Hon. Member's comments would be very appropriate at third reading stage when we are talking about the final discussion of the philosophy of the Bill. I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that you rule on the relevancy of those comments as they pertain specifically to the two motions before us for consideration at report stage.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order! The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) seems to be raising a valid point. The Chair was listening carefully to the comments of the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro), and I also thought the Hon. Member's remarks were rather general in scope. However, the Chair prefers to give the Hon. Member who has the floor the benefit of the doubt, and perhaps he could inform the House in what way his remarks are related to the two amendments being considered.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, since we are discussing the matter of appointing two additional ministers to the Department of External Affairs, I think this justifies the comments I just made.

● (1540)

[English]

We have now before us the notion that the Department of External Affairs is not properly organized and it needs two more Ministers. Here we are suggesting there be Ministers of State. I served for some 25 years in the Department of External Affairs and I think I know something about it.

There can be only one Minister responsible for that Department in the eyes of Canada and in the eyes of the world. It is the designation of those particular Cabinet Ministers that we now have before us. I think we have to remind ourselves that it is very likely to be no more than an ego trip on the part of the possible holders of those fancy titles to be designated the Minister for External Relations or the Minister for International Trade, as the case may be. We are talking about both of them.

In international parlance, one Minister must speak for a Department or the Government with respect to the affairs of his Department. Here we are talking about three Ministers being authorized to speak on behalf of their Department on the domestic or foreign stage. That is why I felt that it was appropriate that I should describe the whole sequence of transformations and mish-mash that have been imposed on the Department of External Affairs.

I suspect that there are other designs, perhaps even to abolish the Department, but the only explanation I can think of for proposing this as the logical sequence beyond all the other proposals that were made is to destroy the morale of the Department of External Affairs. In that Department you have a group of officers who were loyal proudly up to a point in time. I was mentioning that point in time when I started to list the manner in which they were being demoralized, first by introduction of managerial studies of one kind or another. What happened? Those who examined the Department of External Affairs found it was a nice Department to work in, so in the reorganization of the Department, they wanted to make a place for themselves. They knew damn all about External Affairs but they wanted to get a little piece of that action. They wanted to be in because it was a prestigious Department. Rightly so. Therefore, on two or three occasions that occurred. Each time there was a re-examination of the Department's organization, whether on geographical lines, on functional lines or a mixture of the two, the examining consultant managed to infiltrate and leave behind a number of those who were assigned the job of examining it.

These people are professionals. They are trained very carefully. They have to be because they represent Canada abroad. And then the notion of collective bargaining for tradesmen is introduced into the whole operation of the Department of External Affairs. That was unsettling. Then you have budgeting by objective. Instead of reporting on what they were supposed to be reporting on, they have to spend an unusually large amount of time trying to analyse the requests that they were getting from Ottawa to do their budgeting on objectives. I think the expression that was used was "budgeting by objectives".

Then there is the integration of the clerical staff of all services abroad; immigration, trade and so on. They were taken into the Department of External Affairs, swelling the clerical staff personnel and leaving the trade officers, immigration officers and what have you without clerical staff under their direction. Then you have the integration and reclassification of the trade and immigration officers and the recommendations of the McDougall Commission which verbalized the confusion and distress of the foreign service officers of that professional staff.

And now capping it all we have the attempt to tricephalize, as I call it, this Department.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those in favour, will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed, will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion the nays have it. The motion is defeated.

Motions Nos. 2 and 8 (Mr. Lambert) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Before proceeding to the next grouping, the Chair should perhaps remind Hon. Members that Motions Nos. 4, 5 and 6 were grouped for debate. The affirmative to Motion No. 6 would dispose of Motions Nos. 4 and 5. In the case of a negative vote on No. 6, the Chair would put the question on Motions Nos. 4 and 5 separately.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) moved:

Motion No. 4

That Bill C-152 be amended in Clause 25

(a) by striking out lines 24 to 28 at page 10; and

(b) by striking out lines 34 to 40 at page 10.

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-152 be amended in Clause 25 by striking out lines 29 to 33 at page 10.

Motion No. 6

That Bill C-152 be amended by deleting Clause 25.

He said: This is possibly the more controversial portion of the amendment of this particular Bill. What it purports to do is to create more Parliamentary Secretaries in the House of Commons and in the Senate. No Minister appeared today to explain the rationale of the Government in this regard. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) offered his opinions, but of course he was handicapped by his position. In this context of the Canadian Parliament, Parliamentary Secretaries are not given the authority of the Minister at the time of discussing a Bill before a committee. I have known that for over 26 years. I started my parliamentary life as a Parliamentary Assistant. In those days one's presence was tolerated but one's voice was not to be heard except to accept a question on behalf of one's Minister. Subsequently, the quality of the men who occupied the positions of Parliamentary Assistants, and then Parliamentary Secretaries, was such that they overshadowed their Ministers. That was the chief drawback to Parliamentary Secretaries. If they overshadowed their Ministers they were sent on trips to the North Pole.

I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary or someone speaking on behalf of the Government will explain clearly the rationale for having Parliamentary Secretaries in the other place. Is it a reflection that the two or three Members from the other place who are presently Ministers in the Cabinet, one of them for Social Development, another as Government Leader in the Senate and a third responsible for the Wheat Board, want someone appointed who will relate more to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) say, or perhaps External Affairs? I do not know what the choice will be.

Apparently there are to be at least two more Parliamentary Secretaries in the House of Commons, one for External Relations and one for International Trade. At the present time there is one Parliamentary Secretary without a Minister. According to Wednesday's Hansard there is a Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Mines, although that position is defunct. No reason has been given for this.

One can ask, as I did yesterday, if this Bill is an attempt to bring a closer score to the game. At the present time there are 35 Ministers and 27 Parliamentary Secretaries and if my count is correct, with somewhere between four and six more we will have a tie football game—a nip at the post on behalf of Cabinet, before the Parliament comes to an end.

I do not believe this standard rotation once a year is necessary. It is almost a distribution of an additional $10,000 to some 25 to 28 Members of Parliament on the Government side, some of whom, quite frankly, do not earn one-tenth of it because they are not assigned any duties by their Minister. Quite often the Minister does not require a Parliamentary Secretary because there are no duties that the Minister cannot cover. Those are the problems of the limited scope of one Department compared to another.

There are constituencies in various Provinces where the population is such that they do not require what you would call a full time Member of Parliament even, as well as all the support staff that is accorded to that Member, compared to some of the more populous constituencies like Mississauga North. I sympathize with Members like the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Fisher). There are counterparts on the Opposition side where the population of a constituency far exceeds the average and a Member is hard put to give the same degree of service simply because he cannot get the facilities. He is told that his standard issue is so much and he is paid the same amount as the man who represents less than half the number of people he does. That is one of our problems.

The Minister of Finance, for instance, receives the same salary as the Minister from the smallest Department of Government. I think there is a very strong case to be made about the present number of Cabinet Ministers. How they can put together a coherent policy with a group of 35, is beyond me. Years ago I was in a Cabinet of 25, and at times we felt it was difficult to get a consensus and to get our work going unless the chairman was a very draconian person and cut that discussion off by even one or two minutes per Minister should they claim the right to speak. Funnily enough, just as in the House, If there is not a time limitation on debate, everybody decides he is going to have the same amount of time. Administratively, this cannot be done as there is just too much work to get through.

Instead of having a reduction we are now getting an expansion. With six more Parliamentary Secretaries—the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council indicates the number is four but I think at a stretch we could get a fifth one—it means $40,000 in additional salaries and an additional secretary assigned to each Parliamentary Secretary. Of course, the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council does not get an additional salary because there is no Department, it is an office and the Minister is the Government House Leader. All that is required, Mr. Speaker, is an office in the parliamentary building. That is all.

Therefore, I would strongly urge Hon. Members to vote in favour of my amendment, because we do not see that need for additional Parliamentary Secretaries.

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, in a sense there are two aspects of this motion which are of particular significance. The first is that it refuses the power to create four additional Parliamentary Secretaries. The second, of course, is that it says that the appointment of Parliamentary Secretaries should be from the House of Commons only and should not include Senators. The New Democratic Party has long been in favour of both these points, particularly the latter, of course.

What I find particularly discouraging is that in committee, the then Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre), told the Hon. Members in the Conservative and New Democratic Parties that he would undertake to talk with the House Leader and others on the Government side because he felt there was a disposition—I do not want to put words in his mouth, and one can read the committee minutes and see exactly what he said—on the Government side to at least remove that part of Clause 25 which would allow for the appointment of Parliamentary Secretaries from the other place. Although he could not, of course, promise anything, he did make us all feel that we need not push and keep pressing the matter in committee because we might find that when the Bill finally came to the House for report stage, the Government itself would have decided at least to remove that part of Clause 25 which allowed Parliamentary Secretaries to be appointed from the Senate. Indeed, it might decide to put that part in as it was originally. Either the Hon. Member did not do that, or he tried and was unsuccessful. However, it did cause many of us to discontinue to press the matter too strongly in committee.

I feel I speak for most of us who were on the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee when Bill C-152 was before it when I say we really did expect that to happen, given the degree of opposition, not only on the part of the two Opposition Parties, but also on the part of a number of Government backbenchers, to the idea of appointing Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate.

The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) was present on behalf of the Government, and I have forgotten his capacity.

An Hon. Member: Something minor.

Miss Jewett: Something minor. However, he made a rather incredible argument that one of these days the Senate would be reformed and it might even become a partially elected body. In that case, it would be desirable to have Parliamentary Secretaries appointed from the Senate as well as the House of Commons. That was the argument of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre in supporting the proposal of the Government. Several members of the Committee pointed out to him that it would be time enough to address the issue of the appointment of Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate after it had been reformed—and we have no guarantee whatsoever that it will be reformed or, preferably, abolished. They said also that until there is such a guarantee—in fact, until such reforms are in place—we should not be giving any consideration whatsoever to appointing Parliamentary Secretaries from that body. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre said that that was a good point. That was his main argument for defending a policy of appointing Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate. Then, when we suggest to him that it will be time enough after the Senate is reformed, he agrees that is a good point. So I cannot for the life of me understand why the backbenchers on the Government side did not persuade the Government to withdraw that part of Clause 25 of the Bill.

I do not know if other members of the Committee feel the same way, but I almost feel a little cheated by the Government on this issue. I feel that we were really made to feel that the Government would certainly reconsider this favourably. However, it did not.

I agree with other Hon. Members that the increase by four of the number of Parliamentary Secretaries is totally unnecessary. As has already been pointed out, we have far too large a Cabinet now for the efficient operation of Government. We do not need any further Parliamentary Secretaries. My mind boggles when I think of the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), about whom I was talking a little earlier this afternoon, now being eligible for a Parliamentary Secretary because he is a Minister and not a Minister of State. None of us can figure out—nor can the Minister, for that matter—what the role of the Minister is. What are his powers, his functions? Nothing is in the Bill about that whatsoever. The former Minister, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Lapointe), could not figure out entirely what he was doing when he was Minister of State for External Relations. In fact, I have it on excellent authority that he went on bended knees to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and said, "Put me somewhere where I will know what it is I am supposed to do". I have that on excellent authority.

Mr. Lapointe (Charlevoix): That is not true.

Miss Jewett: He did. His mind boggled also, Mr. Speaker, when he realized that he would also be entitled to a Parliamentary Secretary. He did not know what he was doing himself, but he would have to explain to a Parliamentary Secretary what the Parliamentary Secretary should be doing. So the Prime Minister kindly obliged and moved him on to a job where he has a little better delineation of his workload. To think that the Hon. Member might have had a Parliamentary Secretary from the Senate, the mind boggles even more. That, perhaps, was one reason why the clause which includes the Senate was left in, because they figured they did not know either what the Minister should do, and since people do not expect Senators to do all that much, perhaps it should be left in the Bill that Parliamentary Secretaries can be appointed from the Senate so the Minister of External Relations could have a Parliamentary Secretary who does not know what his function is.

Although we are concerned about the growth in the number of Parliamentary Secretaries, and that is why we support this motion, we are, as I mentioned earlier, particularly concerned about drawing Parliamentary Secretaries from an appointed body. It is simply not good enough to say that perhaps one day that body will be reformed and will become elected, or partly elected, as the main reason for drawing Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate. I hope that perhaps some of the multitude sitting across the way wish to speak on this motion and wish to give it their support. I have a number of friends still on that side of the House and I would wager my last dollar that the vast majority of them would prefer to keep our institution as democratic as possible and would prefer, therefore, to have Parliamentary Secretaries drawn from the democratically elected body of this country, that is, the House of Commons.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak on behalf of my colleague on this amendment as well. I think it ties in directly with the previous amendments put forward, Motions Nos. 2 and 3, I believe they were, in connection with the nomenclature and whether it be a Minister or Minister of State. They are all linked together and the intent is to increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries. This is a very simple change but I think there is some significance to it and that is what I wish to address my remarks to.

We are looking at the thin edge of the wedge here because, as others have pointed out, there is no control at all on the number of Ministers of State we can have. We have seen as part of Bill C-152 that as the number of Ministers of State increases, so can the number of Parliamentary Secretaries. During this Parliament there have been three new Ministers of State created, the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. MacLaren), the Minister of State for Mines, and now the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin). That will give us three Ministers plus three Parliamentary Secretaries in the global effort in external affairs. On the other side of this Government reorganization Bill we have three more Ministers and possibly three more Parliamentary Secretaries being created. This leads me to think that there is a very real danger of looseness at the top of these particular Departments when you have six people who are in a very loose way responsible for different elements of the administration.

What concerns me, and I addressed this in part in my remarks on second reading, is that there needs to be a very tight administration of these Departments in order to ensure proper linkage, for example, between the trade effort and the industrial policy effort. I said earlier that the philosophies of the two Departments being merged were different. One was creating jobs, regional development, and the other was trying to take advantage of excellence in Canadian industry in order to capitalize on trade opportunities internationally. Given the merger, there is a possibility those two very worth-while objectives will be submerged, with the result that the over-all effort will be much less effective than it had been under two separate Departments.

We see the same problem in the Department of External Affairs with the trade function. There must be a very close relationship between the trade function and external affairs and the industrial development function in the Department of Regional Economic Expansion. Those two functions have been together, I submit, because of past relationships or friendships amongst the individuals who have worked together in the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. But as the two are split and as time passes and people move on to other jobs, we will not have those personal relationships. For that reason there should be a very clear and tight administration from the top. Once we lose that, as will happen if we have three Ministers and three Parliamentary Secretaries, then we have lost that very valuable link which is critically important in capitalizing on trade opportunities in very difficult and competitive international markets.

Let me ask another question, Mr. Speaker, relating to the three amendments of my colleague. Why do we need to have Senators as Parliamentary Secretaries? I have not heard this addressed properly by Hon. Members opposite. I might say that the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Lumley), who is a very critical element of this particular legislation, has yet to speak, and we have only 90 minutes of debate left. I asked the Minister as he was leaving the House today when we would get his side, his understanding of how he was going to address the problems Members have brought forward in a very constructive way in debate on this legislation. He said, "Not today. I am sorry, I cannot do it today". We have to have these answers, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to have some understanding of how this enormous reorganization of the two Departments will affect us as Members of Parliament, affect the private sector, and what sort of policy will come forward in the coming months.

To get back to my point concerning the Senators, what has brought the Government to the point of expanding Parliamentary Secretaries to include Senators? Do we need all that help in the Senate? I am not aware myself, Mr. Speaker, of the Senators being run off their feet with activity. In fact, one of the concerns expressed by some Senators is that the Government has not involved the Senate to the extent necessary to keep them as busy as they would like to be. I am sure there are other Senators, particularly from the other side, who would be a little upset that I am encouraging a greater degree of activity there, but are we to infer from what the Parliamentary Secretary said that this is a very integral part of Senate reform and the Senate must be brought into the process to a greater extent?

Mr. Epp: Who said that?

Mr. Wilson: The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans). This must be viewed as part of parliamentary reform.

Mr. Evans: I said it could be.

Mr. Wilson: He says it could be. Why are we jumping the gun? Why is it necessary to throw another $10,000 into the path of the Senators? Surely putting them in the trough until age 75 is good enough. Do we have to give them another $10,000 or whatever it is to keep them happy? Are they not happy enough now with that sinecure for the next 20, 30 or 40 years of their lives? I would have thought that a Senate seat was enough. Maybe the Parliamentary Secretary can take us into his confidence and tell us about some of the problems Liberal patronage is having these days as the Liberals look at the 62 per cent figure in the polls. Maybe that is the problem, they have to pack some of these things in a little more tightly before the end of this Parliament.

Let me make just one final point concerning the signal this conveys to people outside of Parliament. Why do we have to broaden the number of Parliamentary Secretaries to include the Senate and pay people additional money for carrying on these services? We have been told this is a Government of restraint, but surely that is not so, given the way it is throwing money around. It is not a big amount of money. We are not going to go broke because of the expenditure of that amount of money. We are broke already and we have to demonstrate to Canadians that we in the Houses of Parliament are serious about the problems that we are facing with the size of the Government deficit. This is just one more signal that is being conveyed to Canadians to demonstrate that this is not a Government of restraint and it is not a Government which takes seriously in any way at all the very important financial problems that we in the country are facing.

I call upon Hon. Members opposite, and particularly the backbenchers, to support us. We now have the opportunity to vote on an element of the Bill that is not very significant to Government reorganization as such but is only a sideline to that reorganization. A vote against that will not cause the reorganization to stop in its tracks. We know that the Government must force this Government Organization Act through. It has been in operation for 18 months now, and we cannot turn back the clock. Decisions have already been made, and we expect that. However, this is one point on which backbenchers can demonstrate their independence from the Government. They can demonstrate to the Government their dissatisfaction with the example set of increasing the size of the trough for the Party in power, and they can also demonstrate to the people of Canada that at least the backbench, if not the Government, takes very seriously the question of Government restraint.

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I think this is a very important amendment and a very important issue which is now before the House and it is one which disturbs me a great deal. The way I approach an amendment of this nature, Mr. Speaker, is to first ask why the changes have been proposed. We Progressive Conservatives very much believe in change but we believe philosophically that there must be a demonstrated reason for that change. We do not believe in change simply for the sake of change.

When I ask myself why this particular proposal has been made, I find it very difficult to find a convincing answer. It has been suggested, of course, that there should be more Parliamentary Secretaries and that those Parliamentary Secretaries should in some cases be selected from the Senate. Looking at the question in those terms, any reason I can find for the Government having proposed this legislation is rather unconvincing. Why do we need more Parliamentary Secretaries? There has been no real evidence presented as to the need for more Parliamentary Secretaries in terms of workload.

One cannot help but think that this proposal represents some sort of boondoggle on the part of the Government. More Parliamentary Secretaries would mean more opportunities to reward faithful Party supporters either within this House or within the other. It therefore seems to me that more Parliamentary Secretaries would enable the Government and the Cabinet to keep the backbench in line.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, if one were to be Machiavellian, one could see that it would be useful for the Government to distribute more patronage at a time when the Gallup poll shows that there are reasons for concern on the other side of the House and at a time when we are led to believe that there is dissatisfaction within the ranks and therefore a need for more goodies to be distributed. Surely, Mr. Speaker, that reason is an inadequate one for proposing a change. The possibility that such a reason may exist is one reason why we on this side of the House would oppose this particular measure.

I am particularly concerned, Mr. Speaker, by the suggestion that Senators should be eligible for appointment as Parliamentary Secretaries because I can see no reason for that proposal. Surely none of us would contend that the Senators themselves need the additional stipend of some $10,000. Surely we do not believe that there is such a lack of talent on the other side of the House that they must go to the Senate to find people to fill these positions should the positions be created. Surely we do not believe that this proposal in itself will somehow make the Senate a more viable institution than it is now.

At the Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, we expressed the opinion that perhaps if the Senate were reformed, there would be some legitimate reason for making this proposal. If it is reformed, then it might well be appropriate for this measure to be introduced in the House. Prior to that reform taking place, I can see no logical explanation whatsoever for this proposal to be made at this time.

It has been suggested that we are only speaking about four Parliamentary Secretaries and therefore, it has been suggested, we are only speaking about the expenditure of some $40,000. I think, Mr. Speaker, that that is a very important point which must be addressed. In the minds of many Canadians, $40,000 is a great deal of money. It may not be very much money when it is compared to the size of the deficit that the Government has incurred to this point in time. However, to the unemployed Canadian, $40,000 is a great deal of money.

We read in the papers that the various Ministers on that side of the House are searching through their budgets in an attempt to find money to deal with unemployment. There has been some suggestion that if they can find this money, they will direct it toward youth unemployment. I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that if the Government is serious about its concern for the unemployed youth, it now has the opportunity to withdraw this particular measure and support the amendment which is before the House, which will prohibit this expenditure of $40,000. That in itself would be a step in the right direction.

This morning I spoke to a young lady who was in great distress. She told me that she had $86.19 left to her name. She was searching for employment and she was searching for a place to live. For someone in that particular position—and unfortunately there are too many who are in that position today—the unnecessary expenditure of $40,000 is a shame, and it is an irresponsible act about which all Members of the House should feel very, very concerned.

We on this side of the House believe in economy whether it be of a huge sum of money or of a smaller sum of money, and we advocate that this amendment is a very small step but a significant step in that direction. We also believe, Mr. Speaker, that we have a responsibility to our constituents to try to achieve smaller rather than bigger Government. During the course of the recent byelection in Brandon-Souris, I knocked on many doors and stood on many doorsteps. Many people expressed the opinion to me that Government had grown to such an extent that it was largely out of control. I would therefore oppose the addition of four Parliamentary Secretaries for that reason, Mr. Speaker, if for no other reason.

It seems to me that this measure to provide for the addition of Parliamentary Secretaries and the eligibility of Senators, if it is passed, denies the concept of responsible Government as I understand it. As I see the function of the other place at this point in time, prior to the reform which we hope will occur, it is really an institution of a sober second voice which may perform a very useful function in terms of operating at committee stage and the like but does not really play a role in responsible Government as most of us understand that principle.

Responsible Government as we understand it means that members of the executive should essentially and primarily be Members of this House and they should be accountable to Members of this House. It is very important, therefore, that the principal players in the Government be selected from the House. I can see no reason why we should make Members of the other House eligible for appointments of this kind as Parliamentary Secretaries. In fact, according to my studies, it would be a negation of the principles of responsible Government.

I would urge Members of the House, including Members opposite, to accept this amendment. Surely there must be some Members opposite who feel a bit uncomfortable about a proposal which suggests that somehow there are too few Members of the House of Commons to fill the positions of Parliamentary Secretaries. They must also feel uncomfortable with the expenditure of unnecessary funds in a time of high unemployment and a time of high deficit. I would urge them, therefore, to take this opportunity to negate a small but very important part of this Bill by accepting the amendment which is before the House which would negate the principle of an increased number of Parliamentary Secretaries and negate the idea that Senators should be eligible for appointment to such positions.

We do not need more Parliamentary Secretaries at this time. We do not need an additional expenditure of $40,000 of a frivolous nature. Very decisively, we do not need Senators to be appointed to these positions. Those who were appointed to the Senate were appointed perhaps for dubious reasons but for a well established purpose. I suggest that they carry on with their task, and I think that we in this House should carry on with our task. We do not need this proposal, and I urge Members of the House to support the amendment and negate the Government proposal.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I join the debate in support of the amendments that are now before us regarding Parliamentary Secretaries. I do not know whether the Members opposite have recently looked at the Wednesday edition of Hansard where the list of the Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries appears. If they were to do so, there is no doubt a good number of them would be very pleased to see their names figuring there.

In order to set this debate in some sort of context, I would like to begin my remarks by drawing the attention of the House to the fact that, as those of us in the House know and perhaps some who are watching these proceedings may not know, every Wednesday Hansard lists at the back the names and attachments of the Ministry and the Parliamentary Secretaries. There are 35 members of the Ministry in the latest Wednesday edition of Hansard on October 19. There will be another list issued tomorrow, and perhaps there may even be 36 Ministers listed. There are 27 Parliamentary Secretaries. We are now being asked in this legislation before us, if it passes without the amendment, to create the power to designate additional Parliamentary Secretaries, which would make approximately 31 or 32. There is almost a race between the Ministry and the Parliamentary Secretaries. While the Ministry is keeping just ahead of the Parliamentary Secretaries, if we are not careful, the Parliamentary Secretaries might very well overtake the Ministers. However, I hope that at least some of the machinery being used in the Privy Council office will enable those who designate Parliamentary Secretaries to realize that any Minister should not have more than one Parliamentary Secretary.

I noticed that no one from the opposite side rises to enter into this debate. I suspect it is probably because they would like to feel that they might be included in one list or the other. Perhaps it is a stage in the direction toward a minister to become a Parliamentary Secretary and learn the procedures in the Department. To the best of my knowledge, Members of the Government have every facility to do that without being Parliamentary Secretaries. Whenever a Parliamentary Secretary rises in his place to answer a question in the absence of a Minister, the answer is almost invariably, "I will take notice of that question and get back to the Member." That is what Parliamentary Secretaries do, as far as this House is concerned. I think we might as well have a little button on the desk where the Minister sits and, if he is away, his seat mate could just press the button and the tape recorder would say, "In the absence of the Minister I will take notice of this question and report back to the Member." That would serve an equally good purpose because we do not get the answer to the question when the Minister is not there.

In fact, I wonder whether Parliamentary Secretaries should even be entitled to reply to questions on the floor of the House. Presumably they have some duties back in their Departments.

Perhaps when the Minister cannot get away, the Parliamentary Secretary addresses a meeting of the Liberal Association in a certain riding or the Chamber of Commerce or the Kiwanis. But that is hardly the sort of duty that fits the Parliamentary Secretary title. The Parliamentary Secretary should have a role in Parliament but does not. However, we are still being asked to authorize the Government to appoint additional Parliamentary Secretaries.

To this point we have been discussing Ministers of State and trying to transform them into Ministers. I believe it is rather interesting to note that in this list which I mentioned at the beginning of my discussion, there are ten Ministers of State within those 35 Ministries, of whom three have Parliamentary Secretaries. One is the Minister of State for Economic Development and the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Johnston). He has a Parliamentary Secretary. Another is the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Collenette), who also has a Parliamentary Secretary. The third is the Minister of State for Small Businesses and Tourism (Mr. Smith). That makes three Ministers of State who have Parliamentary Secretaries.

What about the other seven? They do not have Parliamentary Secretaries, and perhaps that is one of the purposes of this legislation, to put them in a position to designate a Parliamentary Secretary, although I believe it is within the prerogative of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to decide which of the backbenchers is the most deserving to be designated as a Parliamentary Secretary to a Minister.

There is one Minister in particular, the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. MacLaren), who is the last Member on the list of precedence. In many respects, he serves as the left or right hand of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde). He is a glorified Parliamentary Secretary, in a sense, who can travel about the country to speak at the meetings of the chamber of commerce and other organizations with the cachet of the Minister of State.

It strikes me as being most peculiar that some Ministers are anxious to have Parliamentary Secretaries. I guess it is the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) and the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) who seem to be anxious to have Parliamentary Secretaries. If the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board wanted to have a Parliamentary Secretary, I wonder if legislation could be forthcoming, once the Government gets this particular legislation through, and it would use its majority to get Parliamentary Secretaries for everyone including the Minister responsible for the Wheat Board and the Minister of State for Social Development, both of whom sit in the other place. It would be a justification to have a spokesman here, but I should not mention that because someone might favour that notion to designate a Parliamentary Secretary here to speak for the Minister of State who sits in the other place. I suspect that if someone has that idea and will pass it along, the result will be that we will have more Parliamentary Secretaries. But, with all due respect, that would make a great deal more sense than some of the idiocy that is in this particular legislation by creating another couple, at least two, more Parliamentary Secretaries in the area of external affairs, external relations or foreign trade or whatever you want to call it. I just lost a title for the Department for which I once worked.

I leave that thought with some backbenchers who are rather anxious or feel neglected that they might want to use this notion to be spokesmen for the absent Ministers or Ministers of State,—those Ministers who do not sit in the House and cannot be questioned. But let me warn any such Parliamentary Secretaries. They had better have some answers and not say, like a broken record, "I will take notice of the question and I will get back to the Member at a suitable opportunity in the future." That is not good enough. A Parliamentary Secretary must have a definable role to play, and I think he should play it honourably and not use the title for the perks. I am sure there are perks. There are financial perks attached to the Parliamentary Secretary status. We are now in times of restraint, restraint of six and five that we hear about, which we now see on the stationery of the Minister. Here we are suggesting that there be not a six and five increase in the Members' emolument by creating him Minister of State, but that it be considerably more than that. I leave it at that with those notions. I think it is a spurious operation. I do hope that we can get some backbone into Members on the opposite side to approve the amendments which have been put by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, along with other Members of my Party I wish to support the amendments put forward by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert), that would eliminate those conditions of the Bill which provide that Parliamentary Secretaries can be appointed from the Senate and which increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries that can be appointed.

We are not opposed in principle to the idea of Parliamentary Secretaries. The principle, I suppose, is a reasonable one in that these Members of Parliament should be able to increase government accountability to the House of Commons, to the elected representatives. They should be able to answer in the House for the Minister when the Minister is not present. It seems reasonable that, up to a point, Parliamentary Secretaries can serve a useful function in that way. Also, being a Parliamentary Secretary serves as a training school for future Ministers. We recognize that, with the heavy load on certain key Ministries, there is difficulty of access. Theoretically, the Parliamentary Secretary can help improve that access and can serve as something of a troubleshooter for the Minister. I know, for example, that one of the former Parliamentary Secretaries to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Munro) did an excellent job in representing the minister in very difficult situations in which Indian people found themselves across the nation. He represented the Minister, helped in negotiations and reached certain agreements in good faith. Yet, when he came back and tried to implement some of those agreements, he found out he had to buck the Department, that the Minister was not willing to stand behind him and that he lacked the political clout to implement the agreements in which he had entered in good faith.

Even where a Parliamentary Secretary acts in an effective way as a troubleshooter, we see the situation is often a fraudulent one. It increases the appearance of accountability and increases the appearance of access to Government but in many cases it lacks effective substance.

While we recognize there is some justification for appointing Parliamentary Secretaries to key Ministries, Ministries where there is a heavy workload involved, we oppose the idea that this can be used to justify a Parliamentary Secretary for every Minister, including junior Ministers who report to senior Ministers. It is almost as though having a Parliamentary Secretary for some of these junior Ministers is the equivalent to having the key to the executive washroom.

We oppose the appointment of an increased number of Parliamentary Secretaries. We see this as opening the way for more patronage. This Government has a sorry record on the whole question of patronage. If I were in the Government, I would be trying to cut down the appearance of patronage rather than going along with the situation like this, one through which most Canadians will see and which will be recognized as an increase of patronage. Of course, patronage is the only method the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has for keeping his caucus in line. Perhaps he needs a little more of it at the present time as his unpopularity grows by leaps and bounds.

We believe in difficult times the Government should begin to count the cost of Government. Instead of magnifying that cost and enlarging the size of Government in areas where it is absolutely unnecessary, the Government should begin to show a little bit of restraint. In our Party we believe that restraint has to begin with Government itself rather than its being a method of loading repression on ordinary people. We believe the Government itself should begin to exemplify that spirit of restraint. We certainly do not see it in any proposal that would increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries.

Our Party is particularly opposed to the idea that Senate appointees could become Parliamentary Secretaries. We know, and all Members of this House know, that the Senate is already the greatest source and goal for Government patronage that we have in Canada. We only need to look at some of the recent appointments to see where the Prime Minister has appointed his personal cronies to the Senate. I suppose we should be thankful in our Party that he chose to appoint the former Member for Spadina to make way for the present Member, but apart from that we have not seen much to commend in Senate appointees.

The Senate as a source for Parliamentary Secretaries is completely unacceptable to our Party. The Senate is an unelected body and an unrepresentative body, a body that is completely out of touch with the thinking of ordinary Canadians. Perhaps the best illustration of that is the most unfortunate case that we saw when the Senate was considering the constitutional accord and Conservative Senator Donohue made racist comments about Canadian Indian people. Although the Senator was a Conservative, even other members of the Senate from the Liberal Party did not feel it incumbent upon them to speak out against this because they thought it was more important to maintain the kind of comfy old boys' tradition than to condemn that kind of racist, bigoted attitude. That is the sort of people we have in the Senate. I say, we do not want them as Parliamentary Secretaries.

We say we do not need any increase in the number of Parliamentary Secretaries. We are not opposed to the basic principle of having some Parliamentary Secretaries, but the number should not be increased at the present time. We are absolutely opposed to the principle of piling patronage on top of patronage and appointing Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate.

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to speak very long. As I mentioned before in my two earlier interjections, I have quite strong views about Clause 25 of the Bill. I do not think it will take a long speech to explain them. I maintain that, for reasons I do not fully comprehend, the ancient and important tradition of the Parliamentary Secretary, whose origins are in the British House, has been substantially and, in my view, outrageously eroded in the last dozen years. It has been eroded primarily by a decision taken by the current Government to make a Parliamentary Secretary an almost automatic appointment. The current practice is that Parliamentary Secretaries are appointed on a rotational basis for a term not to exceed a total of two years. A consequence is that every Member of the backbench of the current Government, if he arrived here, for example, ten years ago, can at some point reasonably expect to become a Parliamentary Secretary, automatically, regardless of merit or ability. That is a shame.

• (1650)

The best tradition for Parliamentary Secretaries was that at any given time when you have a Ministry—this Ministry has 35 Ministers and it will be 36 if we get a new Minister of Mines—it is not unreasonable to assume that the Government of the day, of whatever Party, may need to look down the road for the potential replacement of perhaps half a dozen or a dozen Ministers. In fact, in the history of this Parliament, the largest shuffle of a Cabinet ever held removed six Ministers. That was the largest elimination of Ministers conducted in a shuffle.

Mr. Lambert: Other than by election.

Mr. Bosley: Yes, and the next election will potentially remove quite a few Ministers from office. However, that is a different subject for a different day.

Any Government that wants to be in a sensible management position of the country's affairs should attempt to train and prepare newer Members of Parliament, men and women, for office potentially as a Minister. If the maximum number to be replaced at any one time is to be six, which is our history, it might be reasonable to say that the maximum we should be training at any one time, as a reasonable choice for the Prime Minister, is between 18 and 20. That would be three times the maximum number ever promoted at one time. It would be equally reasonable to pursue the old tradition—in fact, at one time it was pursued by the Liberals—that when a Parliamentary Secretary is appointed, that is the purpose of the appointment. Those named as Parliamentary Secretary would be looked at as potential future Cabinet Minsiters. For years that was understood.

When the practice changed to become an automatic, routine, by rote appointment, which was for a maximum of two years, every Member of the backbench could then expect to be appointed a Parliamentary Secretary, receive the extra money and then pass on to something else, usually not being a Parliamentary Secretary. That was the end of it. In my view, that seriously eroded the value of the institution of Parliamentary Secretaries. It turned it into a partisan plum appointment, not what it should be, which is the development of successor Ministers.

There is now a capacity for 27 Parliamentary Secretaries. The Government claims the capacity should be 31. To show the ludicrousness of this portion as clearly as I can, it is to say that the Secretary of State for External Affairs, who has a Parliamentary Secretary, is to get two Ministers to assist him because he needs help. The present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) may need help on another level, but in an administrative parliamentary way he needs two Ministers or Ministers of State to assist him. It does not seem right to argue that, having given him two new Ministers, you have to create the potential for two Parliamentary Secretaries.

It is administratively impossible to argue that we need to go from a Minister with a Parliamentary Secretary to three Ministers with three Parliamentary Secretaries. Nobody in his right mind could believe that the workload has tripled. That in a nutshell is my view of the lunacy of the proposal to increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries.

It should also be clear to the House that there is nothing in the law that prevents the Government or the Prime Minister from appointing Parliamentary Secretaries to any Minister at any time in any number. All the law stipulates is a maximum number of Parliamentary Secretaries. If you read Hansard, you find that two or three Ministers of State today have Parliamentary Secretaries. While they do not count in creating the total, it has been deemed necessary to give them assistance given their workload. That is an honourable tradition.

Not long ago, in Great Britain I met with the Parliamentary Secretary to the equivalent of our Secretary of State for External Affairs, who is at the same time the Parliamentary Secretary to one of the Ministers of State. Their equivalent to our Secretary of State for External Affairs has three Parliamentary Secretaries cross appointed, even though there are not many Parliamentary Secretaries. That is an application of resources to a work-load problem. It is fair and reasonable.

If the Prime Minister thought it were necessary, he could in law appoint all 27 of the existing Parliamentary Secretaries to himself, if he thought he needed the help. Of the 27 he could appoint three to the Minister of Finance. Never have we seen the people involved used in that way by this Government. Nobody has come to the House to say that the Minister does not have a Parliamentary Secretary and needs one. All they have said is "We have 27 and we are now arguing that we need 31". Nobody has put that argument here or in committee.

It is quite clear that the objective of the Bill is simply to increase the number. There was no justification given to us in terms of workload or time demands to increase the number of people who shall receive extra pay in the House of Commons. Frankly, as a taxpayer and a citizen, I find that offensive.

On the Senate question, I differ to some degree with other Members of my Party. I am not as offended by the idea that a Member of the Senate could or should be a Parliamentary Secretary, to be perfectly honest. We should speak on these questions as Parliamentarians. I can be persuaded, if necessary, that the Government of the day may believe that it needs to present its case more adequately in the Senate than it is presenting it. It could argue that the Deputy Leader or Leader in the Senate, who does not have a Parliamentary Secretary, should perhaps have one.

The only way to approach this issue is to say that if the argument being made to defend the increase in numbers is a workload issue, then show us the workload. It has never been shown to Members of the House of Commons or the committee. As someone who believes that our Party will soon be the Government and believes that we will be faced with the issue of how many Parliamentary Secretaries we will appoint—in fact I was past Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister in the Clark Government—I say there is no justification for an increase in the number of Parliamentary Secretaries. I urge the Government to reconsider its decision that for some reason we always need more and more Ministers of the Crown and Parliamentary Secretaries without ever at least justifying that recommendation to spend more of the public's money in this way. That at least ought to be defended on a workload basis.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it is my purpose to speak in favour of the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) which would have the effect of deleting Clause 25 from the Bill before us. That would mean that the law respecting the appointment and pay of Parliamentary Secretaries would remain as it is now. The Government would still have the opportunity to appoint Parliamentary Secretaries to each and any Minister up to a certain maximum. I think that the present law is quite suitable for their purposes and will prove quite suitable for our purposes when we form the Government in the near future.

● (1700)

First, I want to deal with a minor item in Clause 25(3). I am not clear as to what exactly this means. It says:

A Parliamentary Secretary shall be appointed to hold office for a period not exceeding 12 months from the date of his appointment—

It does not really say whether or not that person can be re-appointed at the expiration of the 12 months' period. In certain instances I would deem it desirable that a re-appointment should be made, even for a short time. If, for instance, there was a piece of legislation that was going through the House and committee which the Parliamentary Secretary had been involved with for some time, it might be desirable that he or she should stay on as Parliamentary Secretary until that legislation had been completed. Sometimes when I look at the dearth of talent opposite I think it would be absolutely essential, if they want Parliamentary Secretaries of any worth at all, that some of them be eligible for re-appointment.

I would like to make a few comments on Parliamentary Secretaries in general. The Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) gave a very good discussion on the historical role of Parliamentary Secretaries. I would be inclined to agree with him that a certain amount of degeneration in the institution has taken place over the last few years. In the appointment of Parliamentary Secretaries by the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) the main objective has been to provide something for backbenchers to do. I know this is a problem. As a backbencher, especially on the Government side, the requirement always is that you should sit down and keep quiet and not do very much. We see that in operation this afternoon. It is necessary that you give people something to do, let them see their name in Hansard once in a while even if it is only on the list of Parliamentary Secretaries that is published each Wednesday. When you have a large majority, as we expect we will have in a few months from now, the problem of finding adequate duties for the backbenchers will become even worse. I know that we will have to face the same problem.

The workload on Parliamentary Secretaries would depend on several factors. In my observation, because I have never been fortunate enough to experience having been a Parliamentary Secretary, it depends primarily on the parliamentary workload of the Minister at any point in time. If there is a number of Bills, especially complex Bills, going through the House then the Parliamentary Secretary finds himself with something useful and worth-while to do. The personal relationship between the Minister and his or her Parliamentary Secretary is important. I have observed that some Ministers have been quite willing to delegate considerable authority and give their Parliamentary Secretary responsibilities, whereas others have not been willing to do so.

When I look over the past years of the present Government, I find that the experience with Parliamentary Secretaries has not been anything to write home about. There have been three Parliamentary Secretaries who have, in my opinion, done a good and worth-while job and have earned a pay cheque. I am pleased that one of the Hon. Members is with us. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans), in my opinion, worked very hard, as he had to do, when he was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen). He certainly had a lot of explaining to do to Canadians at that time. I am sure it did not come easily to him, but I compliment him for his work.

Also, I want to give honourable mention to two gentlemen who are not here. One of them is now the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. MacLaren). I look back to the time when he was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources at the time the Minister was pushing the national energy policy, Bill C-48, through the House. I disagreed with both the Minister and his Parliamentary Secretary on the contents of the national energy policy, and especially of Bill C-48, but I have to compliment the Parliamentary Secretary for the way in which he conducted his task and discharged his responsibilities. I wish he had not performed as well as he did. We might not have been saddled with the national energy policy as we know it today. The third Hon. Member opposite whom I want to single out for a special compliment is the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Fisher) while he was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Finance. If Clause 25 is enacted as we have it, it would not be possible to make that type of appointment because Parliamentary Secretaries could be appointed only to Ministers of State who had an actual Ministry. I do not think it would be possible to appoint a Parliamentary Secretary to the present Secretary of State for Finance (Mr. MacLaren).

The Hon. Member for Mississauga North did an exemplary job when he was Parliamentary Secretary to the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. Cosgrove). It is unfortunate that the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough, when he was Minister, knew very little about his portfolio. I do not think he had had any experience previously in the responsibilities for financial institutions. If we on this side wanted to know anything about the particular Bill in question, we found it very useful to approach his Parliamentary Secretary.

Generally speaking, the present system we have with Parliamentary Secretaries is a mechanism for allowing the Prime Minister of the day to keep his backbenchers in line. To a certain extent it is an exercise in patronage and trains them in the art of patronage. I have seen Parliamentary Secretaries flying all around the country handing out cheques, when the Minister was not available. Some of the Parliamentary Secretaries do a good and necessary job, but in general they are a superfluous species. I suggest that if Parliamentary Secretaries are appointed to the Ministers of State responsible for Economic Development, Social Development and Science and Technology, as contemplated in this Bill, they would certainly come under the heading of superfluous Parliamentary Secretaries.

I see you are indicating that my time has expired, Mr. Speaker. Therefore, I will not burden you with the rest of the revelations I was about to make in this regard.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Lambert: As a result of consultation in the usual way, an agreement has been reached. I have consulted the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett). I would ask the House for unanimous consent to withdraw my Motions Nos. 4 and 6. We would take the feel of the House on Motion No. 5, and then the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) would make a proposal regarding amendment No. 9 which is also by agreement. Then there is a form of amendment which has been screened for drafting by the Department of Justice. It will represent the consensus of the House to increase the number of Parliamentary Secretaries by four but it eliminates any question of appointments in the other place. To that extent we have agreed.

• (1710)

The House will then move to third reading, there will be a few remarks at that stage and then we hope we can see the clock at six o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) to withdraw Motions Nos. 4 and 6?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 4 and Motion No. 6 (Mr. Lambert) withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 5. All those in favour of the motion, please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion, please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Lambert: On division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion negatived on division.

Motion No. 5 (Mr. Lambert) negatived.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council) moved:

That Bill C-152 be amended in Schedule I by adding immediately after item 4 thereof, the following item:

"5. Canagrex Act 1980-81-82-83, c. 152

Paragraph 4(3)(c) is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(c) one from the Department of External Affairs."" and by renumbering the subsequent items accordingly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Evans) agreed to.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that if you sought the unanimous consent of the House you would find that there is a disposition to allow me to waive notice and, at report stage, introduce the following motion:

That clause 25 of Bill C-152 be amended by striking out lines 21 to 40 on page 10 and substituting the following:

1978-79, c. 13, s. 31

"25. Subsection 2(2) of the Parliamentary Secretaries Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

Maximum number

"(2) There shall not be appointed more Parliamentary Secretaries than the number of Ministers who hold offices for which salaries are provided in sections 4 and 5 of the Salaries Act." "

The purpose of this, as the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) had indicated, is to allow for the increase in the number of Parliamentary Secretaries, as the Government has asked. It would reflect the view of the House that appointments to the post of Parliamentary Secretary occur only from the ranks of Members of the House of Commons and not from the other place.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion, please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Motion (Mr. Evans) agreed to.

Hon. Monique Bégin (for Mr. Trudeau) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? Pursuant to Order made Monday, October 24, 1983, now.

Hon. Monique Bégin (for Mr. Trudeau) moved that the Bill be read the third time and do pass.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If there is unanimous consent, we would agree that this motion be adopted without debate and that we call it six o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is the understanding of the Chair that two Hon. Members wish to be recognized for brief statements at this point. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) and the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) wish to be recognized.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I had prepared a text for third reading but I think we have heard a great deal today. During report stage comments were made that were really third reading speeches. We heard remarks to the effect that certain Members of the Opposition felt that this was an unnecessary change to Government organization. I would strongly disagree with that. I think the reorganization is very seriously needed.

The Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) referred to certain difficulties, and the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) raised the issue of a morale problem in the Department of External Affairs and the problem of conflicts in the line of command. Part of that derived from the fact that the trade function was reporting to the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the consular function was reporting to the Department of External Affairs, so there was a crossing of lines of communication.

One of the major features of the reorganization is that the trade function is put with the consular function so that the entire External Affairs operation reports through the Department of External Affairs. That cleans up the line of command and makes trade representations much more effective in the field since they will be under one administration. It is a step forward.

The other feature is that the Department of Regional Economic Expansion was established to enhance regional economic opportunity in the country. Over the years we found that the Minister of DREE became one voice among many in trying to advance the cause of regional expansion. By reorganizing the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion into the new Department of Regional Industrial Expansion, the regional aspect of the Government policy becomes integral to Government economic policy. As a result of this Bill, every Minister becomes responsible for bringing to the attention of Cabinet items and issues related to regional expansion.

It is terribly important, if we agree about regional expansion—which the Government does—that it be a prime focus of all Government policies. The placement of federal officers in each of the regions of the country to focus all Government programs, what is best for that region of the country, into a regional expansion mode, I believe is terribly important. That happens as a result of this Bill.

These are the matters brought forward as well as the changes to the Ministries, and the Parliamentary Secretaries from the Senate. However, the much more fundamental features of this Bill deal with cleaning up the lines of command in the External Affairs field so that the external thrust deals with the trade aspect as well as the external relations aspect, and it is all under one head, one line of command, and Regional Economic Expansion becomes an integral part of the economic policy of the Government and not simply a separate Department which tries to fight on its own for resources among the competing demands from other Ministries in the economic area. These features will, I think, set up two very important functions for internal economic development and expansion with clear lines of command and clear authority, and set up an external affairs operation which is clear again, under one set of command, one line of authority which deals with trade and external relations as an integrated package. I believe this is a very good Bill, a Bill which is long overdue.

I thank Hon. Members opposite for the co-operation they have shown in pushing forward the debate and making adjustments as we saw necessary, and coming to agreement in the way this House of Commons should operate all the time. I am proud to stand and speak on third reading.

I will close by saying that, as a result of the changes we have made in Bill C-152, Canadians will certainly have the kinds of mechanisms in place to further the economic development goals of the country and to put a new face and new thrust on our external relations.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I am not quite so sanguine as the Parliamentary Secretary is about all the good points in this Bill. He talked about clearing up the difficulties of cross-communication between the counsellor and trade sections of the Department in the foreign missions abroad, and that this Bill now will square that away and there will be straight linear connections. Perhaps he could tell us what they did with the immigration part which has been hooked onto External Affairs? This provides out of the foreign missions, shall we say, an immediate 90 degree turn to the right, because it comes back to Ottawa and then must go from External Affairs over to Employment and Immigration. I hope we can get that particular matter cleared up.

There is another matter I am concerned about. I trust I can get the ear of the Parliamentary Secretary at this stage. Perhaps he could tell us whatever happened to the proposed amendments which were coming in from the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Lumley) whereby he agreed—in the words of my colleague for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson)—that the word "Expansion" in much less attractive than the word "Development". All these amendments were to be brought in. I saw the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion running back and forth as though consultations were going on, and I fully expected the Parliamentary Secretary would come in with those amendments which were necessary. It may be that in Part II of the Bill, which deals with that particular matter, there are too many references to regional industrial expansion, so people could not make the necessary amendments, shall we say, in the style which was appropriate. In any event, I am sure my colleague for Etobicoke Centre will be most disappointed. If they have agreed not to bring it forward at this time, so be it.

There is something I would like to say with regard to Parliamentary Secretaries. I could not agree more with what has been said by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley). I do not believe that Parliamentary Secretaries should be rotated on the basis of the calender, because that means that everyone is being given a crack at an extra $10,000 for two years. Some do not even earn 10 per cent of it, others will put in a fair day's work. That is because of the vagaries of the Minister to whom they are responsible. May I say, however, that it certainly does not provide the same training ground as is required in the British House of Commons where Parliamentary Secretaries may be shifted. What it does do is to conceal from people in certain constituencies that their Member has been tried and found wanting. In other words, this is the cover-up report, shall we say, from the teacher which says, "Well, Johnny is a reasonable student. Even though he is not able to read as well as he should, and he cannot calculate, I think he is a good boy." That is about all that happens when a person is retired after two years' service. No one is rated. I do not feel that should be so.

This is serious business. We pile onto the legislative side a remarkable additional expense, and for what? It is not for greater glory. Everyone has become a former Parliamentary Secretary, even though they did not do any work to earn it. To that extent, I can only say that I only hope this Bill will be looked at again in the future and that future Prime Ministers will be much more rigorous, first of all, in their choice of Parliamentary Secretaries. This House only requires about eight or ten Parliamentary Secretaries, who should be rotated. In fact, some of them might be in a particular position for nearly three years, because if one is going to replace a promising individual, it may take that long to do so. In October of every year we have seen Members from various constituencies who personally have what it takes to do a job. The next day we see them shunted to the back row because of a whim of someone who wants a total change. This is nonsense. I feel we can do a great deal better.

I do not want to force a vote on third reading, so all I will say in conclusion is that I will let this Bill go through on division.

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, we also will agree to the Bill going through on division, not because we support it—indeed it is almost as much a dog's breakfast as it was when it first emerged well over a year ago—but rather because the Government reorganization to which it refers is pretty much a fait accompli and we realize there is not going to be any chance of getting any major changes now.

The Government offered only one change, and I am glad to see that it did, namely that a clause which would have allowed Parliamentary Secretaries to be chosen from the other place is no longer in the Bill. Other than that it has done very little, either to elucidate upon the Bill in the House or committee, or try to come up with some suggestions to get a stronger, better and more understood reorganization. It remains, particularly the part relating to the Department of External Affairs, a baffling outline of what looked clearly to most of us to be the creation of unnecessary Ministers and deputies, and about the only time I was not able to get any collaboration from the Conservatives on our criticisms of the Bill was when I could not persuade the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley)—

Mr. Bosley: I explained it all.

Miss Jewett: —to join me in lambasting this new portfolio, the Minister for External Relations. I would have thought he would agree with me entirely that it was totally unnecessary.

Mr. Bosley: Oh, no.

Miss Jewett: We have no idea what the Minister does. The former Minister, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Lapointe), laughingly admitted himself that he had no idea what that Minister for External Relations was going to do, and I could not get the Hon. Member for Don Valley West to support me on this because he is the putative Minister, or he thinks he is the putative Minister, if that is the word—

Mr. Prud'homme: Yes, but watch how you pronounce it.

Miss Jewett: —should the day ever come, heaven forfend, that the Tories form the Government. Otherwise we did agree on a good number of the matters but we were unable to persuade the Government to try to bring more enlightenment and clarification to this Government reorganization Bill, particularly the part relating to the Department of External Affairs. The main reasons for the Government not wanting to provide greater clarity and efficiency is that it got a marvellous idea, particularly on the reorganization of the Department of External Affairs along with an incredible chart which accompanies it, that for every single young person in this country who was applying to become a foreign service officer in that Department or a trade commissioner, or a combination of the two, the Government realized you need to have the toughest possible qualifying examination, and it could think of nothing tougher than to ask all these students who are going to apply to explain the organization of the Department of External Affairs.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Forrestall: On division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Carried on division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Pinard: I do not have my glasses, Mr. Speaker. I think it is six o'clock, and if you call it six o'clock we will agree.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 6 p.m. this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 5.35 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—CONDEMNATION OF INVASION BY UNITED STATES FORCES

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Madam Speaker, while we were truly shocked by the bloody coup d'état in Grenada two weeks ago and would have supported reasonable international action to deal with that situation, we can in no way approve of the action taken yesterday by the United States Government in invading that small country. There is no doubt that the invasion of Grenada by United States marines is a clear violation of international law, the United Nations Charter and, in effect, constitutes an act of war against Grenada.

If the United States' action was taken solely to protect and evacuate United States citizens after less extreme alternatives were attempted, then there could be some justification. This does not seem to be the case. It is significant that the United States did not even discuss its true plans with Canada, despite the fact that Canada is the senior Commonwealth nation in America.

The other reason given by the United States was to restore democratic institutions. While that is a noble intention, it is hard to believe, since many of the Governments supported by the United States in Central America, the Caribbean, and Latin America, are military dictatorships. If the United States is sincerely interested in restoring democracy in Latin America, will it now invade Chile?

The United States action in Grenada must be condemned, Madam Speaker, not only because it is a violation of international law but also because it allows for the settlement of disputes by force rather than by peaceful means.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

POLITICAL PARTIES

INVITATION TO LIBERAL PARTY FUND RAISING DINNER—MR. TAYLOR SENDS HIS REGRETS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, would you believe it, Senator Keith Davey sent me—yes, me—a personal letter. He thinks I am a Liberal. I am angry, enraged, furious, indignant, fuming, incensed, boiling, maddened, irritated, galled, offended, umbraged, miffed, nauseated, outraged, riled, envenomed, soured, wounded, vitiated, debased, peeved, nettled, defiled, annoyed, smeared, chafed, rasped, triturated, abrased, furcated, defiled, stained, soiled, blemished, stunned, bewildered, puzzled, befuddled, bemuddled, confounded, mystified, perplexed, baffled, baited, devilled, lured, decoyed, vulgarized, debased, and insulted.

The Senator wants me to send him $250 for a ticket for a dinner with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). I am beseeched, entreated, adjured, implored, pleaded, supplicated, obsecrated, obtested, solicited, tintinnabulated, blandished, wheedled, blarneyed, inveigled, blubbered, bothered, buttered, cajoled, wheedled, and coaxed to attend.

It made me disconsolate, inconsolable, unconsolable, comfortless, forlorn, heartsick, soul sick, heartsore, heartbroken, and dejected. I coughed, wheezed, hawked, expectorated, vomited, and puked. In plain English, Madam Speaker, will you tell the Senator that I will not be attending the dinner because I am a Tory.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NICARAGUA—THREAT OF INVASION—CALL FOR CONDEMNATION OF UNITED STATES POLICIES

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, yesterday Xabier Gorostiaga from Nicaragua visited with several Members of this House to explain the present situation in his country. He is responsible for the creation of the Nicaraguan Institute for Social and Economic Research. He explained to us that during the year 1980 the economy of Nicaragua had progressed by 10 per cent, by 6 per cent in 1981, that there was a bad year in 1982 because of the floods, but that it recovered again by 4 per cent in the first semester of 1983.

He wanted to tell the people of Canada about the fear he has of an invasion which could possibly follow the same model as that which took place in Grenada yesterday. Yesterday's invasion violates international law and contravenes the Charter of the United Nations. At the same time, he spoke of the fear of the Nicaraguan people because this is the time of year when their economy, based on cotton, sugar and coffee, is in the most extreme danger. It can easily be destroyed by guerrilla action. There is already a CIA army in Nicaragua for that very purpose.

I call upon the Government of Canada and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to condemn the policies of the United States in that region of the world, and to look seriously at the peace proposal that was given by the Minister of External Affairs for Nicaragua to the Americans last Thursday, which was blatantly thrown out on Friday. Otherwise, that part of the world could become a new Vietnam, a regional war.

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM—IMPACT ON SAGUENAY-LAC-SAINT-JEAN REGION

Mr. Pierre Gimaïel (Lac-Saint-Jean): Madam Speaker, about ten days ago, the newspaper Le Soleil published an article confirming that Alcan had sent written notice to Gaz Inter-Cité Québec Inc. of its firm intention of purchasing several hundred million cubic metres of gas over the coming years. Madam Speaker, I am delighted with this decision, especially since it means that from $230 to $240 million will be invested, in addition to what the Canadian Government is already doing for the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area to develop the economy during the coming year. The Company has already sent an application to the Canadian Government and, more specifically, to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien), for the release of necessary funding for construction of a section of the gas pipeline that is vital to our economy. Once again, I want to point out to the people in my riding and in the region generally that natural gas is coming to Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean because a national energy program was established by the Canadian Government and by the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) when he was Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, to develop our economy and attract investment for the creation of permanent jobs in our region, with the objective of helping resource regions like ours to achieve the kind of infrastructure that will help us take advantage of our full development potential in the years to come.

POLITICAL PARTIES

FORMER NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY CANDIDATE'S SUPPORT FOR PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, Mr. James Stark of Operation Dismantle spoke at White Rock on Thanksgiving Day. He said, among other things, of the Leader of the Official Opposition:

> . . . I really don't want to prejudge him, but I think we are actually better off with Trudeau than with Mulroney, and that's saying something. However—and I am saying this everywhere and I want to be very clear about this—I vote NDP. I was an NDP candidate.

There it is, Madam Speaker. Finally someone who has been an official spokesman for the New Democratic Party has come out of the closet. We have known for some time that the marriage between the New Democratic Party and the Liberals was consummated in secret. Now the vows have been pronounced in public. It is refreshing to hear at least one member of the NDP who is not ashamed of his marriage partner.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF EXECUTIVES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, on Monday of this week the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) made an announcement describing the plans of the Government for the future of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Both the vagueness of the document and the failure of the Minister and the President of the CBC to clarify the goals of the Corporation, and the means of achieving those goals, have led to a questioning of the intentions of the Government in this matter.

Indications are that 500 production level employees of the Corporation will be laid off because the Minister has stated new programming must be paid for by "increased efficiencies", which is a euphemism for lay-offs. While we were asked to accept employment cuts so new production can get rolling, six new vice-presidents have been appointed in the CBC, and the Minister and the Presdident of the CBC propose to create a new and undoubtedly well-paid position of chairperson of the board. Production level firings and increases in executive levels only reinforce the growing bureaucraticism and centralization within the CBC. Production and programming decisions increasingly are made in Ottawa, which is isolated from production centres.

If the Corporation is to improve service to Canadians, produce exciting and stimulating drama, and meet its objectives, where is the money to come from? The Minister sets out a mandate for the Corporation without providing the means to bring it about. The Minister, since his announcement Monday, has been absent from the House. He is unavailable to answer the questions of the Opposition on his plans for the CBC.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE—IMPACT ON QUEBEC'S NORTH SHORE REGION

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, last week, the magazine La semaine, in its October 22 issue, published the following headline:

Sept-Îles, a dying town

Madam Speaker, I would like to point out that the impression given by the press is false, because Sept-Îles is not dying. It has serious problems, like the town of Port Cartier, except that its problems are directly connected with the iron ore issue, and at the present time, thanks to the Canadian Government and the establishment of the National Harbours Board at Sept-Îles, which is working on setting up a German aluminum refinery in the region, we feel that future developments on the North Shore will be successful. Similarly, the federal Government is working very hard to support the Province of Quebec in reopening the Rayonier Québec plant at Port Cartier. Madam Speaker, I think it is important to set the record straight about the North Shore. Sept-Îles is not just the Iron Ore Company, there are other companies, including Wabush Mines which is doing very good work. In fisheries there has been a tremendous expansion during the past season, and the federal Government has invested around $40 million in the region in the past year. All of this has been done to provide a proper infrastructure and to diversify. I felt it was important to point this out, I hope the Leader of the Opposition agrees with the Member for Manicouagan.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

LACK OF SERVICE IN NORTHERN COMMUNITIES

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, just think what it must be like to live in a community which is only accessible by air and is 100 miles or more from the nearest post office. Although I raised this question several times in the House of Commons, and local post office employees are doing everything they can, people in such communities are still stymied by senior post office bureaucrats from the south.

In villages where there are no banks it is especially important that post office services should include CODs and the issuing of money orders. Nahanni Butte, Trout Lake, and Jean Marie River have no post office. Lac La Marte and Rae Lakes have no post office even though the combined population is over 500 and they are served by a regularly scheduled air line. It would be easy to establish contract post offices in such locations, as has been done in similar places. People in the north have an equal right to proper postal services, and they are thoroughly disgusted with a Liberal Government which completely neglects their interests.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—ARRANGEMENTS FOR EVACUATION OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for International Trade who answered questions yesterday with respect to the Grenadian situation. Will the Minister confirm, or otherwise, a recent Canadian Press story which stated permission had been denied to Canada to send a plane to evacuate Canadian national from the island of Grenada? Would he also indicate whether all Canadians on the island are safe?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the national Defence Forces of Canada have a 707 on the ground at Barbados ready to evacuate Canadian nationals who wish to leave the island of Grenada at the earliest point they can get permission from the occupation authorities to land on the island. However, there has now arisen the complication that the condition of the airport may not be such as to receive a plane of the 707 type. Within the next two hours a Hercules aircraft will be departing Canada to be available to airlift Canadian nationals, the Hercules being able to land on the type of runway presently in use on Grenada.

The Americans have not given clearance up to this point in time. They said they were giving priority to military aircraft because of their concern with the conflict which is still under way, and military needs of that type. I have, within the past half hour, met with the United States Ambassador to Canada and requested that he make arrangements on a most urgent basis for permission for a Canadian aircraft to land on Grenada to remove our nationals.

SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, I would like the Minister to assure the House that all Canadians are safe to this point. Would he also explain to the House the Government's slowness, its lethargy, in getting Canadians off that island, bearing in mind that up until Monday 12 days had elapsed from the time Prime Minister Bishop was deposed, five days had elapsed from the time he was slaughtered along with three other Cabinet Ministers, and why could the Government not have had the 707 in place earlier to remove these Canadians and ensure their safety?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member's memory goes back as far as yesterday, he will know that his Leader and others were referring to the state of great confusion on the island in those preceding days. We encountered difficulties in obtaining clearance for an aircraft to go in, but we did obtain it eventually from the Grenadian authorities late on Sunday. As the Hon. Member knows, if he was in the House yesterday, we at that time had available an aircraft of a local airline, but there were difficulties in obtaining the necessary permission from all of the islands which participate in the ownership of that airline.

If the invasion had not intervened, our 707 aircraft would have attempted to go in yesterday morning. If one were to look at the situation in relation to the nationals of other countries, I think that one would find that Canada reacted in a very thorough manner in relation to the protection of our nationals and, during those days of confusion, managed to remain in contact with them.

As to their present safety, we have been in contact with all Canadian nationals known to be on the island, although we have not had contact since late yesterday with five of them who are in the town of St. George's. We have no reason to believe that they are in any danger.

Mr. Stevens: Madam Speaker, in the explanation given by the Minister of State for the failure to remove Canadians, he overlooked the fact that he was certainly warned about it by this side. My Leader and my colleagues made 18 separate interventions expressing our concern for the safety of the Canadians and asking about the position of the Canadian Government on this matter, all prior to Monday night.

CANADIAN POSITION ON INVASION

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, would the Minister now indicate if he is finally in the process of sending a note to Washington stating Canada's position with respect to the entry of the Caribbean nations and the United States onto the island of Grenada? Second, if he has that note available, would he now table it?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to a note. What I specifically did was I called the American ambassador. As I indicated earlier, His Excellency met with me earlier this afternoon. At that time I outlined in detail a number of Canada's concerns in relation to the military intervention in Grenada, and also in relation to the question of the evacuation of Canadian personnel.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON INVASION

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. The Minister is reported to have said yesterday that he believes the invasion of the island of Grenada is, in his mind, comparable to, or the same as, the invasion of the Falkland Islands. Could the Minister please tell the House whether that is in fact true, and how he could possibly in any way compare those two events?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I regret that the Hon. Member may want to twist around my words on a matter of such importance in the international sphere, for political reasons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: What I said yesterday, and what I would repeat gladly, is that it does appear to me that military intervention into another country should only be taken, if at all, after the widest possible consultation among the other countries involved because of the danger of subjective values leading to a wrongful conclusion as to the degree of justification involved. I used as an example military interventions such as those which occurred by Argentina into the Falkland Islands, and in various other parts of the world in the last few years, albeit of a different character, or of different degrees of justification in our eyes. Nevertheless, the very fact of military intervention into sovereign nations carries with it the danger of increasing world tension, and is a movement toward the possibility of war.

GOVERNMENT'S UNDERSTANDING OF SITUATION

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, since the Minister refuses to say that there are differences between the two, I would ask him the following question. In the view of the Canadian Government, how much would a government in the Caribbean have to be deposed; how much of the intervention would have to be sponsored by other nations; how much trouble would Canadians have to be in before the Government of Canada would face the fact that there is a difference between the deposition of a parliamentary government, the intervention in that country by Argentina, and the shooting of the leaders of a country, to take over and operate a régime that appears in international terms to have desperate consequences for the people of that country? When will we in Canada understand the difference?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, what we have said in relation to the invasion of Grenada is that we do not have available to us the grounds that would seem to justify that action. I would only say to the Hon. Member, as we have said already, that there may well be good justification that the United States has not disclosed as yet. But the Hon. Member is indeed dealing with a tricky area when he says that internal turmoil will be, in itself, sufficient justification for other countries unilaterally, without consultation with broadly based international fora, to undertake a military intervention of this type.

● (1425)

COMPARISON WITH ARGENTINE INVASION OF FALKLAND ISLANDS

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, when the Minister says that the invasion of the Malvinas by Argentina is in any way comparable, can he not understand the degree to which he is making it very difficult for others to consult Canada because, when Ministers of the Crown say that, they believe that Canada is proving that it is not trustworthy in the western hemisphere?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, there are two things that I would have to say to the Hon. Member. I am sure that he does not want to justify actions by the Soviet Union, but the question of internal political strife was exactly what existed in Poland when the Soviet Union wrongfully decided that it was justified to move into that country, and elsewhere.

Let me add that the fact the Hon. Member must keep in mind is that the position that Canada is taking on the American military intervention in Grenada is one that is strikingly similar to the position of the United Kingdom, which is a Government for which I think the Hon. Member has some feeling, if not for ours, and it is indeed mild compared to the position that has been taken by Mexico, Trinidad, and all of the South American countries.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER CONDEMN INVASION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It has everything to do with the position the Government is taking on this issue. Considering that the invasion of an independent country in the Commonwealth by forces led by the United States of America not only contravenes international law but violates Article II of the United Nations Charter, will he now join with other national leaders in the world who believe we ought to use peaceful means to resolve difficult problems, and condemn this act of violence in a forthright way?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, that is the substance of the message I understand was conveyed to the United States Ambassador by the Minister of State, the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, and which is being conveyed in Washington today by our officials meeting in the State Department.

POSITION OF CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, just for perfect clarification, as I heard the Minister answer a minute ago, he said that he conveyed to the Ambassador of the United States certain "concerns" of the Government of Canada about this invasion of Grenada. I would like the Prime Minister to be very specific with the House so that we can send a message around the world on this invasion, which the Prime Minister knows can set off tensions not only in the Caribbean but all over. Is he now prepared to say in the House that the Government of Canada categorically opposes this invasion of Grenada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the language used by the Minister, as I understand it, was that Canada regretted the action, the military intervention. The Minister restated what I said in the House yesterday, that unless we had information which showed that this action was necessary to protect and rescue American nationals, and unless there was no other way of doing it, then the intervention would seem unjustified.

Yesterday, I indicated that we thought we might get that information from Secretary Shultz's statement yesterday afternoon. I feel that he did not give any such explanation that they had to invade in order to protect their nationals. Indeed, it seems to me that the reason invoked by the United States and the other Caribbean nations involved is that they wanted a different sort of Government there. It was not so much a question of protecting nationals as it was of ensuring a Government which was compatible with their views as to how a Government should operate. If there is no further explanation than that, I think we would quite clearly say the actions were unjustified.

NICARAGUA—POSSIBILITY OF INVASION BY UNITED STATES AND ALLIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the evidence is clearly out. In The New York Times it has been reported that U.S. envoys who went to Grenada on the weekend were assured there would be no problems for American citizens. We have since learned, also from the same source, that the invasion was being planned in midweek, last week, by the United States of America.

Because of the very serious regional implications, is the Prime Minister aware that in recent weeks the United States re-established CONDECA, a Spanish acronym for Central American Defence Council, which includes Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, and the United States? Is the Prime Minister aware that the U.S. just recently reconstituted this organization? Is the Prime Minister not concerned that the violent action that has been initiated by the United States in recent days against Grenada will simply be a forerunner of a similar kind of group action taken by CONDECA against the people of Nicaragua?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker. I have not heard of the reconstitution of this group, nor do I share the apprehensions of the Hon. Member. I think the facts, as we know them about Grenada, have led us to make the statement I have just made. I would not want to speculate on a hypothetical situation in Nicaragua or elsewhere.

Oral Questions

SYRIA—ROLE IN LEBANON—MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister and it also deals with exernal affairs. Last Wednesday and Thursday the Secretary of State for External Affairs was in Damascus, Syria, where he gave a press interview in which he had some surprising things to say about Syria and its role in Lebanon. Among other things, the Secretary of State was quoted as saying:

Syria, like Canada, wants Lebanon to be sovereign and independent.

Is it the view of the Government that that is why Syria, along with 5,000 Soviet troops, is occupying the Beka'a Valley in eastern Lebanon? Is it the view of the Government that Syria is playing a useful role and that the Syrians are there in eastern Lebanon because they want Lebanon to be sovereign and independent?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I believe the comments made by the Secretary of State for External Affairs in Syria last week, when accurately read, are consistent with the policy which the Canadian Government has taken, and the rhetorical conclusions that the Hon. Member reaches are not justified by his position.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Andre: Madam Speaker, I will be glad to send the Minister the quotes of his senior Minister's statement.

PALESTINE LIBERATION ORGANIZATION

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): My supplementary question is for the Prime Minister because it deals with government policy. The Secretary of State for External Affairs was also quoted as saying that Canada has authorized the establishment of official contacts with the PLO and that the PLO had a role to play in the peace negotiations. Can the Prime Minister tell the House when Canada officially recognized the PLO and can he indicate which faction of the PLO, that which supported by Syria, or that under the leadership of Arafat? Can the Prime Minister tell the House whether he feels that the PLO has a role to play in discussions on the sovereignty and independence of Lebanon?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's question is not based on his premises. He asks when have we recognized the PLO. The answer is we have not recognized the PLO.

FORTHCOMING COMMONWEALTH CONFERENCE IN INDIA—POSSIBLE CANADIAN PROPOSAL FOR GRENADIAN POLITICAL STABILITY

Mr. Louis Duclos (Montmorency-Orléans): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. As a member of the Commonwealth, Canada has a special relationship with Grenada and with the other Caribbean countries that took part in the U.S. military intervention in that country.

Considering this common membership in the Commonwealth, could the Right Hon. Prime Minister inform the House whether Canada, possibly in consultation with Great Britain, intends to take advantage of the next conference of Commonwealth countries to be held in India next month and which the Prime Minister will attend, to submit to co-members proposals aimed at restoring political stability in Grenada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, we shall certainly be discussing the situation in Grenada at the next Commonwealth conference. I believe I have already indicated that it was discussed at the last Commonwealth conference, that is, at the Melbourne Summit in 1981, and also at the regional summit held in St-Lucia at the beginning of 1983. We shall certainly be discussing this subject again in November.

[English]

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for St. John's West.

Mr. Crosbie: Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans who was here, but he is like the Scarlet Pimpernel. I presume he is behind the curtains somewhere. I would like to wait for him to come back, if you do not mind.

EMPLOYMENT

PRIVATE SECTOR INVOLVEMENT IN YOUTH JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Minister knows that a healthy private sector is the key to the establishment of long-term jobs for Canadians. However, this past weekend the Minister was reported as saying that he doubts the private sector would be interested in a co-operative program with Government to hire young Canadians in these economic conditions. What does the Minister feel has to be done to facilitate recovery in the private sector so that the private sector would be willing to participate in co-operative programs to hire young Canadians? What are the Minister's plans to achieve private sector involvement in long-term job establishment?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): No, Madam Speaker, what I said this weekend was that we have not had as strong a take up as we had expected in some of our industrial training and skills development programs. The reason for that has been the reluctance of some employers to take on young people as trainees given the overhead costs involved, even though there is substantial support or contribution coming from the federal Government to encourage that to happen. I believe, as the recovery from the recession continues and strengthens, we will see in the next year that the private sector will be more and more eager to take up the possibilities which those plans envisaged. I expect, therefore, that we will be able to overcome the problem which I described is the one we had last year.

As for the impact of economic recovery, that is a question which I and the Minister of Finance have dealt with in the House on frequent occasions. If the hon. gentleman is more specific in his supplementary, I will try to give him a response.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF GOVERNMENT PLANS

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, my supplementary is for the same Minister. The Minister knows that the Government has discouraged private sector job creation, and we cannot depend solely on the spillover from the American economic recovery. What are the Government's plans for working with the private sector on the establishment of long-term jobs, and I mean in definitive terms? Why does the Ministry seem to be waiting for a Speech From the Throne to announce those plans?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Again, Madam Speaker, the assumption of the Hon. Member's question is entirely mistaken. The kind of tax changes which were proposed by my colleague, the Minister of Finance, in his last budget were expressly designed to provide assistance to the private sector in creating jobs. What we do wish to have is a co-operative partnership with the private sector in creating jobs. That is also the premise which we have followed in using, for instance, Section 38 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, to work with the private sector and in using unemployment insurance funds to create jobs through the private sector which will be of long-term benefit to the economy.

In the hon. gentleman's own Province, I could say there are a variety of projects which we have developed, for instance, those under the Employment Bridging Assistance Program which was directed to co-operation with the private sector to create jobs, but the rug was pulled out from underneath those programs by his provincial Government. I wish the Hon. Member would speak to his provincial Government about that.

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON ACHIEVEMENT OF FULL EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. He will know that yesterday the Bank of Montreal suggested the possibility of full employment in Canada was millions of years away and predicted the likelihood of unemployment reaching at least 15 per cent by the end of this decade. Countries such as Austria, Sweden, Norway, and even Japan, have managed to obtain full employment. These countries are highly competitive with us and are highly productive. Why is Canada unable to do the same as they have done?

• (1440)

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, it is difficult to respond to that question with a short reply. I am not responsible for the Bank of Montreal's assessment. There are a whole variety of assessments of what is likely to happen in the future in relation to employment, and there are a whole host of definitions of what constitutes full employment. It is not particularly useful to have rhetorical quibbles over what constitutes full employment. That does not provide any better basis for action than setting objectives in terms of job creation and expenditure programs.

To simplify very much the substance of the reply to the Hon. Member's specific question, I suggest that the most appropriate way to answer the question he posed is to look at the growth of the labour force in those countries which he described. He will find that it is very different from the rate of labour growth in Canada.

Mr. Riis: We on this side certainly have no difficulty defining full employment. It means that every man and woman in the country who is able to work has full employment. I do not think that is very mysterious at all.

REQUEST FOR MASSIVE STIMULATION OF ECONOMY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shushwap): Japan has full employment because of a co-operative approach to its economy. It has a planned economy, a low inflation rate, and low interest rates. However, it realizes that a very difficult winter is coming. Japan has just announced a massive stimulation program for its economy.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Riis: The same situation will exist in our country in the winter months—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the Hon. Member could describe the situation in Japan on some other occasion. For the time being, we would appreciate a question.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, why is the Minister not taking similar steps in our country to provide massive stimulation to the economy in order to make Canada's winter a little less bleak for Canadians?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I do not know where the Hon. Member has been. Quite clearly we have had stimulation.

Some Hon. Members: Where? Where?

Mr. Roberts: Given the levels of deficit we are experiencing at the present time, that constitutes an extraordinary stimulation of the Canadian economy. The bringing forward of the Special Recovery Program of $2.5 billion of construction expenditure, and of the NEED Program in Employment and Immigration, constitutes the kind of stimulation that creates jobs in the Canadian economy. If one were to limit oneself to the description in the Hon. Member's question, one would have to say that Japan is following our example, not leading it.

MULTICULTURALISM

FUNDING OF NATIVE FRIENDSHIP CENTRES

Hon. John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. As he knows, he made an announcement of a change in programs for migrating Indians. Until now the new program announced in the spring has not had the financing it needs to come into place. When will the Secretary of State be able to get his program through Treasury Board so that new programs can come into place in Native Friendship Centres across Canada?

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I am happy to inform the Hon. Member and the House that the points which have to be dealt with to ensure that the announcement made in the month of May could be implemented were dealt with yesterday, due in particular to the intervention of the Hon. President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Finance. It is my intention to write today to all Centres across Canada to inform them that the announcement made in May will be fully honoured and implemented by the Government of Canada.

FISHERIES

FUTURE OF RESTRUCTURED NEWFOUNDLAND FISHING COMPANY

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. On July 4 the Minister announced the take-over of the Newfoundland offshore trawler fishery, with the jobs and livelihoods of thousands of plant workers, trawler fishermen and inshore fishermen at stake. Four months have passed since then, and the Government has spent its time fighting with the Newfoundland Government and the shareholders of those companies, and sales have been lost to the United States.

When will action be taken to put someone in charge of this new company? When will there be some central direction so that decisions can be made on the budget for 1984? When will there be decisions on fish quotas for that new company? When will decisions be made on refitting trawlers for northern fishing, and refitting the fish plant at Trepassey so that it can reopen? In other words, when will action be taken to start operations, because everything is at a standstill in that area at the moment?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I am really surprised, for a Member representing Newfoundland, that he is one of the few people who is not aware of what is going on. Mr. Peckford signed an agreement which he hailed as being the most important bilateral agreement signed by Newfoundland since it joined Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. De Bané: That was done under the leadership of the Prime Minister. Today Mr. Peckford and I announced that all the legal action taken by CDC has been resolved to the mutual satisfaction of both Governments. As to the question of the appointment of the new presidency of the company, both Governments are working closely together on a short list of names which we will put before our two Cabinets. Finally, I am happy to tell the Hon. Member that I have every confidence the new company will be in operation starting with the next fishing season, that is, January 1, 1984.

Mr. Crosbie: I never asked what agreements were signed. I asked what action was being taken. I know that there are 500 people out of work at Trepassey, 400 people out of work at Fermeuse, and hundreds more out of work these last four months while the Minister fiddled around retrofitting agreements.

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF COMPANY PLANS

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister when the plant at Trepassey will be put into operation. When will there be a managing director of this new operation? When will it be financed? When will he tell them what are their fish quotas so that they can use their trawler fleet next year? In other words, when will people start to work, or are they to lose all hope altogether? I know what is happening in Newfoundland. It is not the dream world the Minister is occupying up here in Ottawa.

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is definitely an unguided missile.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. De Bané: When he accuses me of fiddling around, actually he is accusing Premier Peckford of fiddling around because Mr. Peckford is now working very solidly with the federal Government on that issue.

As to the question of fishing quotas, I am happy to tell the Hon. Member that I have said publicly we will give the new company a five-year enterprise allocation so that it will know for five years ahead what will be its fishing allocations.

Mr. Crosbie: When? When will they know?

Mr. De Bané: When? When I receive—

Mr. Crosbie: They are out of work in Fermeuse, Trepassey, and in other places.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. De Bané: All the participants in the fishery in St. John's were there to prepare their consultative reports to the Minister of Fisheries. I will not jeopardize the consultative process wherein all participants have their say. The Minister of Fisheries, with the provincial Minister of Fisheries, will be making a decision on time for the new fishing season.

Mr. Crosbie: These are your decisions.

Mr. De Bané: I think it is time the Hon. Member realizes that Newfoundlanders are fed up with a guy playing politics with Newfoundland's most vital industry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Come down and run there, and you will see.

FUTURE OF INDEPENDENT FISHING COMPANIES

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I, too, wish to direct a question to the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. When he nationalized the "big five" in Atlantic Canada, in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, he actually made sacrificial lambs of the 200 or more independent operators who survived the Government's mismanagement of the fisheries. Since the spokesman for the independents stated that the Government-created monster could destroy the life investment of private operators and thousands of jobs in Atlantic Canada, will the Minister take steps to see that the independents are involved in the Government-controlled company's negotiations on wage settlements, on fish prices, on quota arrangements, and on fishing zones?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member remembers that the Premier of Nova Scotia, when he gave his joint press conference with me, took pains to emphasize that we were not talking about nationalization. We are talking of a company with several shareholders because that company is on the stock market, as you know. It will continue to be publicly traded. The creditors will sit on the board. No civil servant will be part of it, certainly not from my Department, precisely not to put the Department in a position of conflict of interest.

• (1450)

Second, I have the greatest sympathy for our dynamic private entrepreneurs in Atlantic Canada, particularly in Nova Scotia. I can give them the assurance that while that company will be run as a commercial business and will have to compete in the marketplace, it will be looked at by the Department in exactly the same way as others. I can give the firmest assurances on that to our dynamic private sector in Atlantic Canada.

REQUEST THAT AUDITOR GENERAL EXAMINE BOOKS OF RESTRUCTURED COMPANY

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, when the federal Government owns 60 per cent of the stock in this restructured company, the provincial Government owns 25 per cent, and the Bank of Nova Scotia owns 15 per cent, that, in my view, is nationalization. That is what we face.

The Minister's deputy has stated publicly that the restructured company has no set policy on profit margins. Will the Government permit the Auditor General of Canada to examine the books of this new Government-supported company annually? How will the Government of Canada inject its $75 million into the Province of Newfoundland and its $90 million into the Province of Nova Scotia? When will the Government release its secret agreement with the Bank of Nova Scotia?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, in response to the first part of the question, I am surprised that the Hon. Member puts the Bank of Nova Scotia in the public sector. This is quite a stretching of reality.

As for the other questions, I can say to the Hon. Member that I take notice of two or three specific inquiries that he made and I will answer him as quickly as possible. I want to assure the Hon. Member that that company will have to be run as a commercial business. If a Government ever wants to destroy a corporate decision of that company it will have to pay the full cost of it. That company will have to compete in the marketplace and not be permitted to count on unlimited funds. It should make its services available to the private sector which would like to use them for marketing or other purposes. I do not see that company as an unfair competitor. If that were so, then the remaining independent sector would have legitimate grounds for grievance.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

RESPONSIBILITY FOR CHILD WELFARE

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. Canadian Indians appearing before the United Nations working group on indigenous people protested child welfare practices that led to apprehension of their children, their placement in non-Indian homes, and their eventual assimilation. In response the Government indicated that it was now transferring responsibility to Indian communities for their own child welfare. In light of these facts why has the Minister disallowed recent band by-laws that would have recognized the bands' responsibility for child welfare in their own jurisdiction?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member has quite accurately stated, we have moved very significantly in three or four Provinces toward entering into agreements with the Indian people and the Provinces for turning over welfare services to Indians so that there will not be Indian children put with non-Indian families any longer.

With reference to some by-laws that Indian bands may have passed, I have no choice. If independent legal advice indicates that a by-law is in contravention of the Indian Act, then I have to obey the law of Parliament as it stands, irrespective of what I may think of it. I think the Hon. Member knows that I think the Indian Act is very much outdated, as I am sure does he.

ROLE OF PROVINCES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, the Paul Band in Alberta objects to the Department's attempt to push it into a tri-partite agreement with the Province of Alberta regarding child welfare. Does the Minister not recognize that Indian people want to develop their own child welfare models rather than being forced into the assimilationist apprehension model followed by the different Provinces? Will he now extend to these Bands the right to control their own child welfare instead of trying to extend provincial jurisdiction to Indian reserves?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, in all of the agreements signed so far it is not a question of extending provincial jurisdiction to Indian reserves which has been the motivation behind the federal Government and the Indian people signing agreements with the Province. The Provinces have indicated they are prepared to lend expertise to the Indian people at their request in order to run services, hire Indian personnel and, in many cases, be supportive financially. It is not a question of forcing the Province or the Indian people. It is a question of three parties entering into an agreement voluntarily.

As far as Alberta is concerned, it is not a question of forcing the Indian people to do anything. If they do not want to sign the agreement, they do not have to sign it. We then bilaterally have to endeavour to do the best we can to attain the same objective. In most cases it was the Indian leadership itself that wanted the Province involved for the reasons I have stated.

LABOUR RELATIONS

LABOUR DISPUTE AT TÉLÉ-MÉTROPOLE IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Oliver (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour.

The Minister is aware that for more than ten months there has been a very serious labour dispute at Télé-Métropole, a major television station in Quebec. Could the Minister inform the House, first of all, whether following negotiations or meetings with the union or the Company, the Minister would be willing to appoint a special mediator, if both parties were agreeable to finding someone who could resolve this conflict?

Second, would the Minister also be willing to make a commitment to the effect that, as soon as he receives the consent of both parties, he will appoint a special representative and settle a conflict that has gone on far too long?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, two of my departmental officials have already intervened in this conflict with a view to reaching agreement between the parties concerned. First Mr. Saint-Hilaire, as conciliator and then Mr. Drouin, as mediator. Obviously, if both parties feel that appointing a special mediator or a special investigator would be useful I would be glad to appoint such a person. However, I want to be sure that both parties agree that this is what they want and that the appointment will be useful in helping this matter progress towards a final settlement.

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE FOAM INSULATION—TERMINATION OF REMOVAL PROGRAM

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The Government's program to assist people who have urea formaldehyde in their homes terminated as of September 30. Does the Minister feel that this program has fully met the needs of Canadians who have urea formaldehyde in their homes, and is she aware of any difficulties within the program?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, there are always difficulties within a program but, by and large, we have dealt with most of these problems very fairly. We treat each case that comes to our attention on a case by case basis. The $5,000 grant has met the needs of most of those home owners who have been faced with the problem. The latest figure indicates that an average figure of $4,900-odd is the submission. it is very close to the $5,000 mark that we have offered to home owners.

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF PROGRAM

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. The CHRP Program has been discontinued and can no longer assist home owners. In rural areas the contractors in many cases have not been able to make proper estimations and there have been some real difficulties in getting registered contractors. In view of this, is the Minister considering extending the Program beyond the September 30 date, or would she consider some special measures that would allow people to co-operate in some way in order to make the $5,000 grant more effective?

● (1500)

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, no, we do not intend to open up the deadline, which was September 30, but we intend to honour all those submissions made in time for the September 30 deadline.

I should like to bring to the attention of the Hon. Member that we have a urea formaldehyde advisory committee with which we are working very closely. A number of problems have been brought to its attention, which are then discussed and possible solutions investigated. The committee is open to discussion and advice. In those areas where there are problems we offer the services of this committee, which then works with us and the Urea Formaldehyde Centre.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I should like to designate tomorrow as an Opposition day, this being subject to change.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

MR. KEEPER—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Madam Speaker, I have a petition from about 1,000 residents in my constituency who state that on February 10, and April 21, 1983, the Canadian and U.S. Governments concluded weapons testing agreements that paved the way for testing the unarmed Cruise missile in Canada; that the technological capability of the Cruise missile clearly makes it a weapon for fighting a nuclear war and not for deterring such a war; that the Cruise missile is being tested for deployment in western Europe, which would further escalate the nuclear arms race, and that such escalation poses the most grave and immediate threat to world peace and the survival of humanity. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to demonstrate its commitment to suffocation of the arms race by refusing to permit testing of the Cruise missile in Canada.

Madam Speaker, 1,000 members of my constituency have signed this petition of concern with regard to testing the Cruise missile but I must point out that there were 12 constituents who were in favour of the testing.

Motions

INTEREST ACT

AMENDMENT RESPECTING TERM OF MORTGAGES

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-693, an Act to amend the Interest Act.

Some Hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, the purpose of this important Bill is to permit the renegotiation of any residential mortgage of a term of one year or more, as opposed to the present five-year requirement. Thousands of Burnaby home owners are trapped in very high interest mortgages which banks and trust companies are refusing to renegotiate now that interest rates have dropped. This Bill would require that these financial institutions use some of their recent record profits to prevent home owners from being locked into these exorbitant interest rates.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Madam Speaker: Motions.

An Hon. Member: A point of order—

Mr. Mazankowski: A point of order.

Madam Speaker: The Minister of Transport.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I move—

Mr. Mazankowski: A point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: A point of order.

Mr. Epp: A point of order.

Mr. McKnight: A point of order.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): I move:

That the Hon. Member for Yukon be now heard, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Pinard: A point of order.

An Hon. Member: There is a motion on the floor.

Mr. Pinard: A point of order.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, with due respect, you are aware that I may raise a point of order before the Chair puts the motion, which it has not yet done. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) had already started to speak when the Member opposite was recognized on a point of order, and consequently, he is out of order and does not have the right to move his motion at this time.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: The motion must be put, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: I am really consulting to find out whether the Hon. Minister had already said "Madam Speaker".

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: Obviously if he had already said Madam Speaker, he already had the floor legitimately.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the record will show that regardless of what you may or may not have seen the President of the Privy Council do or not do, the Chair clearly recognized, and was heard by Members to have recognized, the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member for Vegreville then, at the invitation of the Speaker, rose and put his motion. I suggest—

An Hon. Member: On a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: I suggest, Madam Speaker, that the Chair has no alternative now than to put that motion without further debate. To those who say that it cannot be done on a point of order, I say it can only be done on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, what happened is that the Chair recognized the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) under the item Motions. The Minister started to speak under this item. He said: Madam Speaker. Then someone on the other side, and this is the sequence of events, asked to be recognized on a point of order. The Chair had no choice but to recognize the Hon. Member to find out what he wanted, but you then realized that he was proposing a motion to give the floor to another Member, which is out of order, because the Minister of Transport had started to speak. It was therefore normal for the Chair to recognize the Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), but the Chair was correct in not putting the motion, because the Minister of Transport had started to speak, and considering the nature of the motion, it was out of order.

[English]

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I have been watching the proceedings very carefully. I distinctly heard the Hon. Member for Vegreville shout, "Point of order" as the Minister was rising.

Madam Speaker: I think Hon. Members will recognize that the important point is whether the Hon. Minister was in possession of the floor. The indication that he would be in possession of the floor, as I stated earlier, was whether he had uttered the words, Madam Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: In these particular circumstances it is obvious that when a Member is in possession of the floor he cannot at that time be interrupted on a point of order where a motion is—

An Hon. Member: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: I certainly gave him the floor not knowing what the point of order was.

A point of order whereby a motion is offered that another Hon. Member be now heard, cannot be entertained once another Member legitimately is in possession of the floor.

I could entertain a point of order on something else, but in this particular case I cannot entertain the point of order.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER REPORT AND THIRD READING STAGES OF BILL C-155

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport) moved:

That in relation to Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, two sitting days shall be allotted to the consideration of the report stage and one day shall be allotted to the third reading of the Bill; and

That, 15 minutes before the expiry of the time provided by Government business on those days, any proceedings before the House shall be interrupted, if required, for the purpose of this order and, in turn, every question then necessary in order to dispose of the stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively without further debate or amendment.

He said: Madam Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank Hon. Members for their gracious welcome to this motion.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Axworthy: The fact of the matter is that we have now been examining the matter of the Crow rate for over two and one half years.

Mr. Smith: Right on.

Mr. Axworthy: This Parliament has been seized of the matter since last spring. On second reading, over 97 speakers had the opportunity to express their point of view.

Mr. Taylor: We do not want to hear the snake from Winnipeg.

Mr. Axworthy: We then had three solid months of committee hearings at which time over 200 representations were heard. At that point in time, Madam Speaker, the Government allowed an additional two weeks beyond the allotted time in which that committee could go through every single amendment proposed, give it full examination, and decide upon that amendment.

Mr. Smith: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: On report stage, Madam Speaker, there have been over 78 different speeches presented. We have consented to a wide number of amendments. The fact of the matter is that during all that time, at report stage, rather than dealing with the matter according to the proper etiquette—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: —and proper orders of debate, Hon. Members of the Opposition proceeded simply to filibuster that Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Instead of acting in the spirit of positive, constructive proposals to make the position of the western farmer better and more effective—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Axworthy: —all we got is the kind of howling and yowling—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): May we have order in the House, please.

An Hon. Member: That's disorder over there.

Mr. Axworthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Let's go to the people.

Mr. Axworthy: I feel it is important for all Hon. Members who are seriously engaged in this debate to recognize that there should be a degree of order prevailing so that this House can proceed with the business of dealing with the important amendments, of dealing with the necessary and essential legislation which we provided.

The one thing that Hon. Members of the Opposition do not want to recognize is that this is the single most important economic initiative which has taken place in this decade.

Mr. Smith: Right on!

Mr. Axworthy: This Government is building a second railway across western Canada—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: —to move our grain, to move our potash, to move our coal.

I hear the Hon. Member from British Columbia yelping and I see him jumping in his seat. I want him to go back and tell his constituents that he opposed the Crow. We want them to hear that he opposed the Crow.

Mr. Huntington: I am in much better shape than you are. You will not come back here.

Mr. Axworthy: Because, Mr. Speaker, in that Province alone over $5 billion of benefits will accrue to that Province.

Mr. Fennell: That is absolute nonsense!

Mr. Axworthy: There is a Member of Parliament standing in his—

Mr. Taylor: Communist, that is all you are, Communist.

An Hon. Member: Sit down!

An Hon. Member: Wait until the voters get hold of you, Lloyd.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, they just want to talk about the—

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Some Hon. Members: Order!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please.

Mr. Taylor: Turn the microphones off. We do not want to hear you.

Mr. Axworthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The other reason why it is very important that this Bill pass is that it is quite clear that the number of major construction projects which are standing in the wings waiting to occur in Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba—

An Hon. Member: Order!

Mr. Taylor: That is nonsense.

Mr. Axworthy: —which will provide for the proper capacity to move to export those major goods of western Canada, will stand in abeyance unless this Bill is passed, Mr. Speaker. The future of economic growth and over 300,000 jobs which Canadians are waiting for will be standing in abeyance. How long have we heard from Members of the Opposition, since we have been back in session, that the issue is jobs, jobs jobs? I would like to know why they are howling in their seats today against a measure which will bring forward—

Mr. Taylor: We do not like your sneaky, dirty tricks, that is why.

Mr. Axworthy: —over 300,000 of those jobs.

Mr. Smith: That is right.

Mr. Huntington: That is nonsense. We are not standing in the way.

Mr. Axworthy: I would like them to stand up in the House and explain to Canadians why they are trying to frustrate the will of the House, to frustrate the proper Parliamentary procedures, to frustrate the proper courtesies of introducing a Bill, and why they are standing in the way of over 300,000 jobs being created in this country.

An Hon. Member: We are not standing in the way.

Mr. Axworthy: That is important, Mr. Speaker. They will have to answer for that some day. They are going to answer for their hypocrisy, their contradictions, their flip-flopping and their jumping around.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: That Party will have to answer for the fact that it does do not believe—

Mr. Taylor: You are a snake.

Mr. Axworthy: It does not believe in creating jobs in this country. Otherwise those Hon. Members would be standing in their places and saying to the Minister of Transport of the Government, "Get on with the job and get the Bill passed."

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: Let me also point out, Mr. Speaker, that during the course of this debate, this Government has at all times responded with the utmost flexibility, responsiveness and willingness—

Some Hon. Members: Oh!

Mr. Taylor: Snake!

Mr. Axworthy: —to accept amendments and changes to alter proposals. Some 20 amendments were accepted from the opposition during committee stage alone. We accepted amendments during report stage. We did that on the grounds that we want to put in place—

Mr. Taylor: Tell it to Moscow. Canadians do not want to hear your communistic talk.

Mr. Axworthy: —a statute which will provide a good and effective transportation system for western Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I believe that we demonstrated our good faith and our willingness to act in a spirit of co-operation. I believe we have shown that we came to this House willing to construct in a positive way the kind of legislation which will allow the western rail to begin to grow and expand. All we ask for, Mr. Speaker, is one small iota of willingness from the other side to at least allow the proper parliamentary procedures to continue. But all we have faced from the time we brought that report in the House was various acts of filibuster, frustration and obstruction to the parliamentary procedure. We were faced with a form of parliamentary guerrilla warfare, of parliamentary blackmail. That is the reason, Mr. Speaker, we had to bring in time allocation. We cannot allow a Bill which is so important to the economy of this country—

Mr. Taylor: You cannot allow it? That is more Communism.

Mr. Axworthy: —which is so important to the farmers of western Canada to move their grain and products to market, and which is so important to the men and women across this country who want to go to work—

Mr. Taylor: More Communism.

Mr. Axworthy: —which is important to the steel industry in Trenton, Nova Scotia, and to the steel industry in Hamilton and to the people who make locomotives in London, and which, above all, is most important to the farmers, suppliers and producers in western Canada who know full well that within a year or two, unless that capacity is in place, their grain cannot move to market and we will not be able to sell our produce to a world which is willing to pay the price. That is the point of the motion we have brought forward today, Mr. Speaker. We must get on with the proper business of the House and allow Parliament to decide on an issue which carries with it much of the future growth of western Canada, and with it the future economic growth of the entire country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

● (1520)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a very sad day for Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: The actions of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) today only prove that there is no room for reasonableness, constructive criticism and the offering of positive alternatives. This House has been treated to the most extreme exercise in trickery. What is in essence happening here is that the elected representatives of western Canada are being ignored, they are being denied the opportunity to have their views debated and put forward on a very major issue. What this amounts to is an exercise in taxation without representation.

I really regret what the Minister has done today. The position of this Party has been one of constructive criticism. We have offered alternatives, tried to improve the Bill and seek out reasonable solutions. But the Minister is so skittish about his own Bill that he has to move closure. He will not allow the alternatives to be debated. The interpretation in western Canada can only be that this Government is engaging in another attack upon the West. First of all, this Government does not have a mandate to dismantle the Crow take system. It was not an election issue. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said time and time again that the Government would not proceed on any measure to dismantle the Crow unless there was a consensus in western Canada. I humbly submit to you,

Mr. Speaker, that there is not a consensus in western Canada, certainly not for the proposals outlined in this Bill. There is no support from any corner of the agricultural community or any agricultural organization. The grain producers do not support it. The livestock producers do not support it. The commodity producers do not support it. Every farm organization has found fault with this Bill.

Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, the livestock and commodity groups have really been sucked in by this Government. They too were betrayed. They worked toward developing a realistic and comprehensive approach which would serve the broader interests of agriculture in western Canada, and the Government pulled the rug out from under them. So the Government really has no friends and no support out there whatsoever. I repeat, there is no consensus that this Bill should be proceeded with, yet the Government is hell-bent on forging ahead.

Let us look at the history. After two days' debate on second reading, the Government moved time allocation. In the committee stage it put on an artificial time limit. We worked day and night—it was the most rigorous exercise committee Members have ever gone through. Here we have an opportunity to debate some of the positive alternatives advanced by our Party, and that is being denied. What is so sad is that we are dealing here with a western issue, one which affects the lives of every person who lives in western Canada. It is more than simply a freight rate issue. It goes to the very economic and social fabric of western Canada. And here we have a Government with no membership in the House from rural western Canada. This issue is really being resolved by a centrally dominated Government. I say to you, Sir, that it is only going to cause further alienation, division and disharmony, and it will increase the strains on Confederation.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, how much more can this country stand? We have gone through a number of very, very contentious and controversial issues. But nothing has been handled with the callous contempt with which the Government has handled this issue. It surely has a blatant disregard for western Canada. Rather than working toward a solution, the Government decided to use force. We have offered a proposal which would ensure the retention of the existing statutory rate until the review process is completed. The Government obviously has some misgivings about this legislation, but it insists on forging ahead. We said, "Back off, wait a little while, do your analysis before you strangle the producers of western Canada with these enormous increases in freight rates". But no, it decided to move.

Members opposite suggest they are acting in the best interests of the country because they are being stubborn. If this Government believes that through stubbornness it is demonstrating strength, I can tell you that we view it somewhat differently in western Canada. If the Government believes it is demonstrating leadership through confrontation, I can tell you as well that we view that in another context. It is that kind of stubbornness and confrontation which has divided our country and destroyed our economy. We have seen it in the Constitution, in the National Energy Program and now we see it in the Crow. Those are three areas in which the Government has engaged singularly in an all-out attack on western Canada.

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that we in our Party have tried to work toward a positive and satisfactory solution. We have opposed and we have proposed. We have offered alternatives. We have listened to the evidence before the committee, listened to farm groups and we have offered alternative proposals. We did it in committee and again in the House. But we are very saddened by the fact that we have not been able to debate the alternative proposals we believe would go a long way toward improving this Bill. We have not even had a chance to debate the Government's own amendments in committee or in the House. Moving closure before the Government has a chance to debate its own amendments is to me, totally ridiculous and incomprehensible. We can only conclude, Sir, that it does not have the necessary confidence to defend its own proposals. Members opposite do not have any confidence in this Bill because they know it cannot withstand the critical test of debate. If the Government is so skittish and paranoid about this issue, why does it not go to the people and call an election?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, my suggestion is that rather than this Government's moving closure it should dissolve the House and call an election and let the people decide. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen):

That the Orders of the Day be now read.

Mr. Evans: That is out of order.

Mr. Nielsen: It is not. Mr. Speaker, if there is any—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) rising on a point of order?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker if there is any doubt in the mind of the Chair as to the acceptability and regularity of that motion, I would like to speak to it before any ruling is made.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair finds the motion in order. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those in favour of the motion, will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed, will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Call in the Members.

• (1710)

And the division bells having been rung:

Madam Speaker: Order, please. It now being 5.12 p.m., under the provision of Standing Order 82, the two hours since the commencement of the proceedings on the motion now before the House have expired. Accordingly, under the terms of the Standing Order, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put every question necessary to dispose of the motion. The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen).

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I thought you would be seeking advice from Members prior to putting the question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: I am still prepared to listen to advice. That is why I recognized the Hon. Member; I thought he had some advice to give me.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the Chair was faced, of course, with a problem in the interpretation of Standing Order 82. Since that Standing Order found its way into our rule book, this is the first time upon which an occasion has arisen where we are confronted with a situation of voting on a procedure established under Standing Order 82 with a dilatory motion, which the Chair has described so often, in front of it, namely the motion put by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski).

That was brought about, with no intention whatsoever of reflecting on the actions of the Chair, by the process of this afternoon when at the same time the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) rose, the Hon. Member for Vegreville rose, and I rose. It came to the application of Standing Order 33 which sets forth:

> When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who first rose in his or her place; but a motion may be made that any Member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate.

I have had the opportunity during the interval prior to 5.12 p.m. to examine the "blues". What transpired was that the Minister of Transport had risen in his place and the Chair recognized the Minister of Transport. The Minister of Transport got so far as to say "I move". That is where it stopped. Then the Hon. Member for Vegreville, who was on his feet at the time—

• (1720)

Mr. Mazankowski: Before.

Mr. Nielsen: Let us be fair and say that we were all on our feet at the same time. He then sought recognition and he was recognized by the Chair. He had the opportunity of putting the full text of his motion. That appears clearly on the tapes and on the "blues". We, of course, believe that at that point the Chair was boxed in, as I submitted before, but the Chair has made a contrary ruling. That has brought on this dilemma with which the Chair is now confronted.

This all stems from the application of Standing Order 82. Without reading the entire Standing Order, the last sentence—and this deals of course with the motion made by the Minister of Transport for the allocation of time—on page 87 reads:

> Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon—

That is on the motion of the Minister of Transport.

> —the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

Two matters arise here that should be taken into consideration in deciding whether we are in the right time frame in taking this vote. I intend to support my submission that the vote should be taken at six o'clock rather than at 5.12 with my submissions to the Chair.

If we were only confronted with the motion of the Minister there would be no problem, because there can be no question that during the time the bells were ringing the clock was running and the debate would have terminated at 5.12, two hours after the proceedings had commenced. Normally, had debate continued, at the end of that two hours there would have been a 15-minute bell and the vote would have been taken. But here we had, in front of the motion for time allocation made by the Minister, a dilatory motion.

The two points I have to make with respect to Standing Order 82 have to do with the interpretation of the word "motion" where it is referred to in the final sentence of Standing Order 82—"to dispose of the said motion", namely the motion made by the Minister of Transport. The other point I have to make has to do with the interpretation of the word "proceedings". I will be contending and supporting it by authorities that the word "proceedings" in effect means debate.

To deal with the first question with respect to the interpretation of the words "to dispose of the said motion", I submit that the obligation of the Chair under Standing Order 82 is to put every question necessary to dispose of the motion of the Minister of Transport, and I contend that in the ordinary case that would be done two hours after the debate had commenced by the initiative of the Minister of Transport. However, in this case we had an intervening proceeding, namely a dilatory motion, a motion which the Chair has so often ruled is a dilatory motion, in front of the motion of the Minister of Transport. That led me to the interpretation of this Standing Order and, in the absence of any precedent whatsoever with respect to the interpretation of these particular circumstances, to the conclusion that the dilatory motion could only be disposed of regularly by waiting until six o'clock. Then, based on the precedents the Chair has repeatedly set in defining dilatory motions and their effect, that would have called the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville up at six o'clock, at which time that motion would have been disposed of, and the debate having been deemed to have been over at 5.12 on the motion of the Minister of Transport, the vote on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville would be immediately followed by a vote on the motion of the Minister of Transport. That all hinges on what interpretation the Chair chooses to place on the word "proceedings".

I contend, in the context in which that word is used in Standing Order 82, that the word "proceedings" can only mean one thing, and that is debate; and that debate can only mean one thing, and that is debate on the motion put by the Minister of Transport.

The other interpretation, of course, which can be placed on it is that included in the interpretation of the word "proceedings" is the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville. Because Standing Order 82 never contemplated a situation such as this, it is my respectful submission that that would be a distortion not only of the literal wording of Standing Order 82 but also the intent of Standing Order 82.

In Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, we find no specific reference to "proceedings" and its definition, but we find a reference to "Incidental Interruption to Proceedings" at page 228, which sets forth the following under paragraph XIV:

> Incidental Interruption to Proceedings.
> Besides such interruptions of business as are prescribed by the rules of the house, such as private bills at 8 o'clock on Tuesdays and Fridays, or by a member, after due notice, rising to move a closure of debate, or by some special order, the time for a consideration of which has been reached, the proceedings of the house may be interrupted by a question of privilege or of order which calls for the immediate interposition of the house, by occasions of sudden disorder in the house and proceedings occasioned thereby, or by a message from the governor-general requiring the attendance of the house in the Senate. When the cause of the interruption has ceased or the proceedings thereon have been disposed of, the debate or business in hand is resumed at the point where the interruption had occurred.

My submission is that such an interruption occurred in the proceedings triggered by the Minister of Transport in the form of the motion made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. Therefore, I cite that paragraph in support of my contention that his motion should have been disposed of at six o'clock rather than now, and then we would have proceeded with the motion made by the Minister of Transport.

One further submission I wish to cite in order to support these submissions to the Chair—regardless of what happens here tonight vis-à-vis the vote, it is going to happen; but I hate to see a bad precedent sitting on the books with respect to the timing—from the Eighteenth Edition of Erskine May. I do not believe the wording has been altered in the more recent Nineteenth Edition. At page 84 of the Eighteenth Edition, the meaning of the term "proceedings in Parliament" is set forth. Allow me, Madam Speaker, to cite at some length from that precedent:

> The meaning of the term "proceedings in Parliament."—
> The primary meaning, as a technical parliamentary term, of "proceedings" (which it had at least as early as the seventeenth century) is some formal action, usually a decision, taken by the House in its collective capacity. This is naturally extended to the forms of business in which the House takes action, and the whole process, the principal part of which is debate, by which it reaches a decision.

● (1730)

I cite that particular passage from that precedent, Madam Speaker, to support my submission that "proceedings" as used in Standing Order 82 means debate and that the two terms are interchangeable and exclusively so. The citation goes on:

> An individual Member takes part in a proceeding usually by speech, but also by various recognized kinds of formal action, such as voting, giving notice of a motion, etc.—

I could write the words in there "a motion to proceed to Orders of the Day", such as that made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. I again quote:

> —or presenting a petition or a report from a Committee, most of such actions being time-saving substitutes for speaking.

One might question the veracity of that observation, Madam Speaker. I quote:

> Officers of the House take part in its proceedings principally by carrying out its orders, general or particular.

And so the precedent goes. My submission is—I am having difficulty, even with the assistance of the public address system, overcoming the murmurs opposite. I am sure they would not want to see a bad precedent put on the books any more than we would. The time is being—

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the time is being very usefully spent and I am very happy that the Chair and its officers want to hear these submissions for the purpose of coming to decisions in the future with respect to this kind of situation.

The submission that I am making is that the term "proceedings" used in Standing Order 82 is limited to debate and that the question on the motion put by the Minister of Transport should have been put after the time for the lapsing, according to the Chair's own numerous rulings, on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

It is, in my submission, more logical to interpret Standing Order 82 to have meant that we should have returned here at six o'clock, had the bells rung that long, for the purpose of voting on the motion put by the Hon. Member for Vegreville, and then immediately thereafter have proceeded with the motion of the Minister of Transport. However, it may not be necessary for the Chair to come to a conclusion which might—I do not suggest it will, but if my submission are accepted I could use that term—set an improper precedent.

If the question were now to be called on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville, it is going to take us 10 to 15 minutes to record the division. The Chair will then be obliged to call the motion of the Minister of Transport. The yeas and nays having been heard, the bells are then limited to 15 minutes and that will take us to six o'clock.

May I suggest to the Chair that, this argument having been made, it is not necessary to make any firm decision at this point as to the regularity or propriety of having come back here at 5.12. I know that the Chair has been advised and is convinced that it is right in having done so, but the Chair does not have to adopt that position in view of the time and may leave this question open for a later decision rather than having a questionable precedent on our books.

I make that submission sincerely since it is not necessary to come to the kind of conclusion which I anticipate the Chair might do if we still had two hours or more to go.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I should like to disprove some of the allegations the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has just made. After I have completed my remarks, he may not have to rely on the bell ringing for an additional 15 minutes and calling Hon. Members for a vote to reach 6 p.m., the time for the adjournment of the House. I wish to indicate to the House that there is in Beauchesne's 5th Edition a single citation which disproves the point the Hon. Member for Yukon has been trying to make concerning the definition of proceedings or délibérations.

Before coming to that particular citation in Beauchesne's which clearly states that proceedings include the holding of a vote and the voting procedure, I should like to return, for the information of the Hon. Member, to the previous course of events. About 3.12 p.m., you recognized the Hon. Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) under the item Motions and not on a point of order. He rose under the item Motions and was about to start his remarks, and as was indicated by the Hon. Member for Yukon himself, the Minister of Transport had had time to say "I move—" I submit that was enough to stop any Hon. Member of the House from moving a motion under Standing Order 33 which provides that when several Hon. Members rise at the same time, one of them may rise and suggest that some other Hon. Member be heard.

You were perfectly aware of Citation 302, which appears at page 99 of Beauchesne's 5th Edition and which reads:

(2) A motion that a Member "be now heard" must be moved before the Member recognized has begun speaking.

That is clear, Madam Speaker, and justification enough for you to say after a while to the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) that his point of order was unacceptable. Still, since he had called your attention to raise a point of order, it was only logical that you listen to his point of order. That is why you had to interrupt the Minister of Transport who had begun speaking, even though he had not gone very far, he had said at least two or three words, but indeed you had to know the nature of the point of order which the Hon. Member was trying to raise. When he moved his motion, you were then in a position to realize that he was moving a motion pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 33. I raised my objection and drew your attention to the fact that the Minister of Transport had begun speaking. You remembered Beauchesne's Citation 302 and said to the Hon. Member for Vegreville: "I cannot entertain your motion because, according to parliamentary procedure experts and past practices, it is out of order". You made your ruling on that, and I do not think that the Hon. Member for Yukon wanted to challenge or question your ruling when he referred to those facts. However, we have to go back to those facts to understand where we stand now.

Therefore the debate on the motion under Standing Order 82 began at 2.12 p.m. Standing Order 82 concludes as follows:

—two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

The word "proceedings" is used.

It seems quite clear to me that you have made the proper decision. The Standing Orders are quite specific and bind the Speaker who "shall" put an end to the proceedings. We have to ask ourselves, since the Hon. Member for Vegreville had subsequently moved that the House proceed to the orders of the day, if calling in the members must be considered part of the proceedings. The answer to that question, Madam Speaker, is found in the fifth edition of Beauchesne. First, citation 251, at page 85, I quote:

Motions, amendments, references to committees, and the three readings of bills come under the term of "proceedings in Parliament". They are the means used to the end that a matter may be considered and disposed of by the House. The word "proceeding" is derived from the verb "to proceed" which means "to advance" or "to carry on a series of actions". Members take part in the proceedings usually by making speeches; however, many proceedings take place without any debate.

In view of the late hour, I spare you the rest of the quote. But there is another quote in Beauchesne that is still more specific it supports and confirms my point, and it refutes that made by my learned colleague from Yukon. It is found at page 91, citation 284, paragraph (2), bottom half of the page. It is short but precise. I quote:

It has never been understood in the House of Commons that the word "proceedings" covered speeches; it is not applied to arguments but it covers such things as utterances bearing directly on making motions, moving amendments, presenting reports, putting the questions, answering questions placed on the Order Paper, voting, naming a Member; it is construed as relating to procedure and not to debates.

● (1740)

Therefore, Madam Speaker, it is clear that you had to stop the ringing of the bells, you had to stop the voting procedure on the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Vegreville, because Standing Order 82 provides that two hours after the commencement of proceedings on a motion to limit the debate, you shall interrupt the proceedings. Proceedings are involved when the bells ring! . . . they are proceedings because a voting procedure is involved, and this is established by the quotes I just referred to. Finally, when my hon. colleague says that the Chair must put the motion of the Minister of Transport before the motion of the Member for Vegreville, I must insist that this indicates a poor comprehension of Standing Order 82. The Standing Order provides, and I quote:

> Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

The motion of the Minister of Transport.

Therefore, the matter of calling a vote on the motion of the Member for Vegreville must be disposed of before putting the motion of the Minister of Transport. I think that is clear, and I feel we must not lose sight of what is involved here, unless we want to create a precedent that may prove troublesome for the Official Opposition in the future. It seems to me the Standing Orders are sufficiently clear. If the Chair says the Member for Yukon is right or if it refrains from interpreting Standing Order 82 as we just did, it will subsequently be impossible for the House to vote on a matter in the case of time allocation, because an Opposition Member would be able to move, not only a dilatory motion but another motion that is not dilatory, and the Chair would have no justification for terminating the proceedings at 6:00 p.m. on the grounds that the motion in question was dilatory.

Consequently, we might well find ourselves with limited debates that would be limitless. Thus, the Chair made the right decision, and we support it. The Standing Orders are clear and Beauchesne is clear. I think my hon. colleague from Yukon is satisfied. In any case, the House will adjourn at six o'clock before disposing of the items scheduled before getting to the Order of the Day, and I think the ruling made by the Chair will prove very useful in future as a contribution towards more orderly proceedings in this House, so that when we limit debate, it will in fact be limited and Members will not be able to make undue and abusive use of dilatory measures.

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, since the Government House Leader is interested in the facts, I would suspect that he might be interested in what actually transpired in the House during the course of the exchange, according to the "blues". If he will check he will note, according to the "blues", that you, Madam Speaker, called for motions. At that time an Hon. Member raised a point of order and it was followed by:

> MR. MAZANKOWSKI: A point of order.

Then Madam Speaker said:

> The minister of Transport.

The Minister then said:

> Madam Speaker, I move—

And then the following appears:

> MR. MAZANKOWSKI: A point of order.
>
> MR. NIELSEN: A point of order.
> MR. EPP: A point of order.
> MR. MCKNIGHT: A point of order.

Then Madam Speaker said:

> The Hon. Member for Vegreville.
> MR. MAZANKOWSKI: I move that the Hon. Member for Yukon be now heard, Madam Speaker.

The exchange went on from there. If the Hon. Government House Leader is interested in the facts, it should be clearly noted that, according to the exchange that took place in the official record of Hansard, it was very clear that I was on my feet before the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and that it should be so recognized.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I think my hon. colleague from Vegreville should make the distinction: I said that the Member had not been recognized before the Minister had started his speech, and that is the Standing Orders.

Madam Speaker: May I start by answering the point made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. It is quite possible that Hansard has recorded in a certain order what has been heard on the floor of the House. If someone is in a room and several people are speaking at the same time and there is some secretary who is taking a verbatim report, that person will certainly organize it in a certain order.

What has to be clear and what I reaffirmed before the House is that several Members rose at the same time, and at any rate the Minister of Transport did catch the eye of the Speaker, in my view first. Then I heard points of order and I recognized the Hon. Member for Vegreville. I think the House has to allow that the Speaker, standing or where she is sitting, is supposed to be well placed to determine inasmuch as it is humanly possible who has risen first and who has risen second and third. However, that being said, we have entered into a proceeding and at this point we are deciding on something else.

I listened very carefully to the presentation made by the Hon. Member for Yukon and the only thing I did not really like about it was that he was inviting me to shirk my responsibility, not make a decision, pretend that the clock was just ticking by and that I need not make a decision now. That is not the kind of Speaker you have.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: I will live or die on the decision but I feel impelled to make it because I did decide to come into the House at 5.12 p.m., indicating then that that was my interpretation of the Standing Orders.

The rest of the Hon. Member's remarks I enjoyed very much because he is always very careful to bring forward arguments which help the Chair to take its decisions. It seems to me that the Hon. Member was inviting me to let the bells ring until six o'clock so that I could lapse the motion that an Hon. Member be now heard, as I have lapsed other motions at six o'clock. Indeed, that motion probably would have lapsed at six o'clock. I could have lapsed it but the situation is quite different in that we were in the midst of a proceeding whereby a motion had been presented by the Hon. Minister of Transport under Standing Order 82 where a two-hour debate is to take place after which—and the Standing Order is quite clear in this when it says:

Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

It seems that the two-hour limit hangs on the interpretation that is given to "proceedings". I am very fortunate in that I do not have to interpret it myself. It has been interpreted by other greater authorities than I and interpreted based on the experience of several Parliaments, including our own. I will read back to the Hon. Member from Erskine May's Nineteenth Edition, which is the one I have, but I think the wording has not changed very much as he says. It reads as follows:

The primary meaning, as a technical parliamentary term, of "proceedings" . . . is some formal action, usually a decision, taken by the House in its collective capacity. This is naturally extended to the forms of business in which the House takes action, and the whole process, the principal part of which is debate—

As debate is the principal part of it, it does mean that "proceeding" may have other parts to it, namely all other actions which may be taken by Members, such as voting, presenting amendments, presenting motions, etc.

An individual Member takes part in a proceeding usually by his speech but also by various kinds of formal action, such as voting, giving notice of a motion, etc., or presenting a petition or a report of a committee, most of such actions being time-saving substitutes for speaking.

● (1750)

I will read from Beauchesne's "Interpretation of Proceedings":

Motions, amendments, references to committees, and the three readings of bills come under the term of "proceedings in Parliament" . . . The word "proceeding" is derived from the verb "to proceed" which means "to advance" or "to carry on a series of actions". Members take part in the proceedings usually by making speeches; however, many proceedings take place without any debate. Speeches are not essential; they either help or hinder a proceeding—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: It is nice to see that Beauchesne had a fabulous sense of humour!

—but they are not a proceeding.

It seems clear to me that I am obliged by Standing Order 82, as it states very clearly "two hours after the commencement of the proceedings", to take all votes necessary to dispose of the question.

The Hon. Member argued that it is all votes necessary to the "said motion", as the Standing Order said. I agree with the Hon. Member that "said motion" means the motion presented by the Minister of Transport. However, in the way of "said motion" I have another motion, and the House must dispose of that motion, which is the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

If I were to deal with that motion afterward, that motion simply would not make sense. Therefore, the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Vegreville is in the way of the motion with which I must now deal, according to Standing Orders, two hours and some after the commencement of the proceedings. Therefore I am obliged to put the question to the House.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Mazankowski) which was negatived on the following division:

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BROADBENT—PROPOSED S.O. 30 MOTION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As Your Honour knows, I gave notice earlier today of my intention to move a motion under the provisions of Standing Order 30, concerning a subject of great importance which is recognized by all the Parties in the House, namely, the invasion of Grenada. I know that by the time we finish the second vote it will be past six o'clock so I am asking if we can obtain the unanimous consent of the House to have the Chair make its ruling on that motion after we take the next vote.

● (1800)

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is asking in fact that we go through all of Routine Proceedings before adjourning?

Mr. Broadbent: Yes.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Chair to go through Routine Proceedings past six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Pursuant to Standing Order 82, it is my duty to put the next question which is as follows: Mr. Axworthy, seconded by Mr. Pinard, moved that in relation to Bill C-155—

Shall I dispense?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: No—an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, two sitting days shall be allotted to the consideration of the report stage and one day shall be allotted to the third reading of the Bill—

[Translation]

—and—

—that, 15 minutes before the expiry of the time provided by Government business on those days, any proceedings before the House shall be interrupted, if required, for the purpose of this order and, in turn, every question then necessary in order to dispose of the stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively without further debate or amendment.

[English]

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Madam Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Madam Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Madam Speaker: Call in the Members. Shall we dispense with the bells?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Nielsen: Ring the bells.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen).

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, this is a closure motion: the bells will be rung.

Mr. McDermid: They have to be!

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Axworthy), which was agreed to on the following division:

POINT OF ORDER

MR. NIELSEN—ALLOTTED DAYS, S.O. 62—PROPOSED MOTION

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There seems to be some doubt with respect to whether or not we in the Opposition, as of right, have the privilege of filing notice of an allotted day subject after six o'clock. It is clearly after six o'clock now and if the House would feel so disposed to grant its consent to extend time for filing under Standing Order 47, we would want to move the following motion for tomorrow's allotted day which has been designated by the Government House Leader:

That this House condemns the Government for its contempt for the taxpayers of Canada, which it demonstrates by the creation of a taxation system in the form of the Income Tax Act that is increasingly incomprehensible for individual taxpayers and by its failure to end capricious and unfair practices of the Department of National Revenue.

Madam Speaker: I do not think I will hear much argument. I will ask whether there is unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Madam Speaker: No, I am sorry. It being past six o'clock, I must adjourn the House until eleven o'clock tomorrow morning, pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6.34 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

The House met at 11 a.m.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. NIELSEN—CONSIDERATION OF ORDERS OF THE DAY

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have to rise at this time in order to present to the Chair a submission with respect to what should be the Orders of the Day today. I believe it is important in raising this matter prior to the calling of the Orders that I should cite from Beauchesne's Fifth Edition Citation 237, which states at page 79:

A point of order against procedure must be raised promptly and before the question has passed to a stage at which the objection would be out of place.

● (1110)

Standing Order 62 provides, Mr. Speaker, that 25 days are to be allotted for the consideration of the business of supply in any given year. On those days Opposition motions shall take precedence over all Government supply motions. Standing Order 62(5) outlines the semesters of supply and establishes that in the period ending not later than December 10 each year, five days are to be allotted to supply. To date in this semester the House has considered the business of supply on one day only.

Yesterday, the Government House Leader stood in his place and announced that today would be an allotted day for the consideration of the business of supply. His words may be found at page 28349 of Hansard, and I read those words under the heading "Business of the House":

MR. PINARD: Madam Speaker, I should like to designate tomorrow as an Opposition day, this being subject to change.

The form of the Government House Leader's notice that he would be allotting today for supply is fully consistent with the established practices of this House. I emphasize the word "practices". Following upon the notice given by the Government House Leader, the Opposition was required by Standing Order 62(4) to give written notice of the motion to be considered on the allotted day. Standing Order 62(4)(a) and (b) outline the notice periods for Opposition day motions. Standing Order 62(4)(a) says:

Forty-eight hours' written notice shall be given of motions to concur in interim supply, main estimates, supplementary or final estimates, to restore or reinstate any item in the estimates. Twenty-four hours' written notice shall be given of an opposition motion on an allotted day or of a notice to oppose any item in the estimates.

Standing Order 62(4)(b) says:

If an opposition motion pursuant to section (9) of this Standing Order is to be proposed on a Friday, forty-eight hours' written notice shall be given that the recorded division on the motion, if demanded, is not to be deferred.

Those are the two applicable Standing Orders to my submission. Today being Thursday, only 24 hours' written notice was required for an Opposition motion. Although the notice requirements are expressed as a period of 24 or 48 hours, the long established practice of this House has been to understand these requirements such that the 24 hours' notice requirement is fulfilled if notice is submitted during the sitting day prior to the consideration of a motion, and such that Citation 400(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition states:

The publication of a proposed motion, once in the Notice Paper and the next day on the Order Paper, is sufficient to cover two days' notice under S.O. 42.

I emphasize, too, the submission that the practice requirements have been met so long as that notice is submitted during the sitting day.

If the notice requirement for today's Opposition day motion were to be strictly interpreted as amounting to 24 hours, Mr. Speaker, there would have been insufficient time between the time the Government House Leader rose in the House to allot today as an Opposition day and the time of 11 a.m. this morning when the House was scheduled to enter into consideration of Orders of the Day. That is the reason for the long established practice of notice being sufficiently filed if done within a sitting day.

● (1115)

Yesterday the House did not sit until 2 p.m. Thus, if a full 24 hours were required to elapse between the filing of a written notice and the time that a motion could be taken up in the House, an Opposition day motion could not be considered prior to 2 p.m. today. Because the Government House Leader could not rise for the purpose of giving notice of his intention to allot today for the consideration of the business of supply before Routine Proceedings had been reached, the 24-hour period, strictly interpreted, could not begin to run until at least 3 p.m. yesterday.

However, Mr. Speaker, Citation 399 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition notes as follows under the heading "Publication of Notices":

The exact time at which notices should be handed to the Clerk at the Table is of minor importance.

As authority for that, there appears the reference to Journals, April 14, 1913, at page 461.

Point of Order—Mr. Nielsen

A written notice of motion pursuant to Standing Order 62 was filed with the Table during the sitting yesterday. On that basis, I submit that the Opposition has met the notice requirements for an Opposition day motion and that the business of the House today should be the consideration of an Opposition day motion. Instead, Mr. Speaker, the Projected Order of Business indicates that the business to be considered in the House today is the report stage of Bill C-155. As well, today's Order Paper contains no reference to the motion that I submitted to the Table on behalf of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). In other words, the supply day that was allotted by the Government House Leader yesterday seems simply to have disappeared.

In anticipation of your dealing with Standing Order 47, Mr. Speaker, I submit that it has no applicability here. It is Standing Order 62 that deals with supply days. As there may be some concern that proper notice was not given yesterday or that the events which transpired in the House prior to the adjournment last evening may have blocked the filing of the notice of motion, I would like a moment to discuss yesterday's events as they occurred and the practices of the House with respect to the notice requirement.

It was at 5.12 or 5.15 yesterday, when Members returned to the House to vote on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), that the Government House Leader spoke to me to confirm the fact that today would be an allotted day. I do not rest my case on that but I think that fact should be made known. He did the same thing last week when he allotted a day. Out of courtesy, he simply confirmed to me that there would indeed be an allotted day today. You will recall, Mr. Speaker, as can be demonstrated by reference to page 28349 of Hansard, that the announcement made by the Government House Leader was, in his own words, subject to change. At 5.12 p.m. yesterday, the Government House leader informed me that there would be no change and that the Government intended to proceed with an allotted day today.

Immediately after my discussion with the House Leader, proceedings began in the House again and I became involved in presenting a lengthy point of order on which the Government House Leader also made a submission. At the conclusion of the point of order, the House proceeded to the division on the motion for the Hon. Member for Vegreville. Throughout this period I did not have the opportunity to file the Opposition day motion with the Table. However, I did file with the Table a copy of the notice of motion during the time in which the division bells rang prior to the division on the time allocation motion moved by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). At that time the House was still sitting and, indeed, still had a decision to make. In other words, the notice of motion had been given to the Table well before I rose to seek the consent of the House to file the motion.

● (1120)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May the Chair interrupt the Hon. Member to ask him a question at this point? At what time yesterday was this notice filed? I am asking the Hon. Member if he cares to offer this information.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, it was filed after the division had been recorded on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville and before the division on the motion of the Minister of Transport. The House was still sitting, waiting to record the division on the motion of the Minister.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is being very helpful and very explicit. I hope he understands the reason why the Chair is asking the question. This was after six o'clock?

Mr. Nielsen: Yes, of course it was, and I will get to that in a moment. It appears quite clearly from the record.

However, my point is that it was filed while the House was still sitting. As I noted in my remarks last evening, I submit that consent was not needed. The Government House Leader was of the same view last evening, and I believe that he still is, although he may have some quarrel with my submission as to the correct order to be called today. I rose to seek consent last night so that there could be no question that the motion had been filed and there could be no question that the motion was properly before the House today. I did that because of a knowledge of some apparent doubt which existed with one or two of the officials at the Table.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that the NDP at that time refused to give their consent to the filing of the motion. I can only presume that they did this in order to facilitate debate on the Crow and to prevent the House from considering the matter of Revenue Canada's abuse of authority. But Madam Speaker, having determined that consent was not forthcoming, adjourned the House for the day. At that point in time the House was still sitting. Indeed, the House was called upon to make a decision as to whether or not that consent would be forthcoming.

Therefore, we arrive at the current stage of the proceedings. The motion is not on the Order Paper and I question the absence of it. The Projected Order of Business indicates that Bill C-155 is the business for today. If Bill C-155 is proceeded with, I believe that the House could not then move to an Opposition day motion and complete consideration of that motion today. That is plain. As a result, it is most important that any outstanding questions with respect to the procedural acceptability or validity of the motion of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe be settled now, at this stage. It is something we cannot reserve.

The key point in my submission rests on Citation 399 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, as previously cited. The substance of Citation 399 may be traced back at least as far as the Third Edition of Beauchesne which also contains, at pages 827 and 828, the Speaker's ruling on which the citation was based. That ruling is quite lengthy but I believe it bears directly on the events of yesterday and that it will help the Chair to make a ruling on the point of order now before the House.

The ruling by Mr. Speaker Sproule was based on the rules of the House as they existed at that time, November 21, 1912, when Standing Order 40 under "Notice of Motion" had this to say about the practice then:

● (1125)

Two days' notice shall be given of a motion for leave to present a bill, resolution or address, for the appointment of any committee, or for the putting of a question; but this rule shall not apply to bills after their introduction, or to private bills, or to the times of meeting or adjournment of the House. Such notice shall be laid on the table before five o'clock, p.m., and be printed in the Votes and Proceedings—

I emphasize, the time was explicit—at five o'clock p.m. Mr. Speaker Sproule of that day had to deal with the same question that is now before the Chair. As reported in Beauchesne's Third Edition at page 827, we find the following:

(a) The publication of a proposed motion once in the Votes and Proceedings and the next day on the Order Paper is sufficient to cover two days' notice under Rule 17 (now S.O. 45).

Rule 17 is now Standing Order 45. The (b) paragraph is most important. It reads:

(b) The exact time at which these notices should be handed to the Clerk at the Table is of minor importance.

The paragraph continues:

The House, according to Order, resumed the adjourned Debate on the proposed Resolution of Mr. Borden, to amend Rule 17* of the House of Commons, and the proposed motion of Mr. Hazen: "That the question be now put."

A point of Order was raised by Mr. Maclean (Halifax), That as forty-eight hours had not elapsed between the time the notice was given and the said Resolution was proposed in the House, the said notice was insufficient.

On the next page we find the following:

MR. SPEAKER: I have only to say that my understanding has always been that the notice is intended to be given to the members of Parliament for a specific purpose, namely, that they may not be taken unawares, but may have an opportunity to prepare for the motion. The two days' notice, as I have always understood it—and I have discussed this question with the Clerk previous to the present one, and with the one before him—means that the notice must appear on the official paper of the day twice, first on the day after it is given, in the Votes and Proceedings, and then, on the day following that, the day that it might be considered, on the Order Paper of the House. I am told that the usual practice has been followed in this case.

It was not followed in the case before us today and it should have been, in my submission. Mr. Speaker Sproule continued:

With regard to the exact time at which the notice should be laid on the table of the House, my information always has been that that is for the convenience of the officials who prepare the Votes and Proceedings for to-morrow, and the Order Paper for the following day, and for the convenience of the Printing Bureau. Therefore it was provided that the notice should be laid on the table of the House before five o'clock. I had occasion some years ago to make inquiry with regard to the time when these notices were laid on the table of the House, and I found that in many cases it was done as late as eleven or twelve o'clock, and sometimes after twelve o'clock at night. The first clerk whom I sat under, Mr. Patrick, when I applied to him gave me the explanation that the exact time at which they were laid on the Table did not matter so much but the essence of the rule was that they should appear on the official papers twice—first in the Votes and Proceedings, so that the members might have full notice, and the second day upon the Order Paper for that day. Therefore my decision is that the point is not well taken.

In other words, notwithstanding the late filing, the motion was accepted and the business of the House was allowed to proceed, as I will be suggesting it should be allowed to proceed today.

In my submission, it was possible to file the notice of the Opposition day motion at any time during the sitting of the House yesterday and, at the same time, meet the 24-hour notice requirement, notwithstanding Standing Order 47, which has no application in this instance. But even if it did, that six o'clock has not pursuant to our practices in this place been so stringently interpreted as to mean that a notice filed at 6:01 p.m., 6:05 p.m., or indeed 6:15 p.m., could not be accepted as long as the House was sitting. That such a filing should happen to take place shortly after 6 p.m., as is the instant case, rather than precisely at 6 p.m. or before 6 p.m., should have placed no great burden upon the Table as the Order Paper could not be printed until such time as the House had completed its sitting last night.

● (1130)

It is the right of Members to give notice of motions, and I submit that in any case where there is any doubt as to the procedural validity or standing of a motion, the Chair and the Table should err on the side of Members rather than deciding not to print the notice of motion on the Order Paper. In this case, however, there can be no doubt of the procedural regularity of the notice. At the time the unanimous consent of the House was sought by the Speaker yesterday, the House had not concluded yesterday's sitting. We still had two decisions to make—first, the recorded division on the Minister's motion and, second, just before adjournment when the Speaker at my request sought unanimous consent so as to remove any doubt which might have been in the minds of the officials at the Table. At the time unanimous consent was sought by the Speaker yesterday, the House had not concluded yesterday's sitting. This point is born out at page 28360 of Hansard, where the following may be found under the heading "Point of Order" and under the sub heading "Allotted Days, S.O. 62—Proposed Motion":

HON. ERIK NIELSEN (YUKON): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There seems to be some doubt with respect to whether or not we in the Opposition, as of right, have the privilege of filing notice of an allotted day subject after six o'clock.

That gets to the point the Chair was asking me. It continues:

It is clearly after six o'clock now and if the House would feel so disposed to grant its consent to extend time for filing under Standing Order 47—

That was the Standing Order which was causing some concern to the officials at the Table.

—we would want to move the following motion for tomorrow's allotted day which has been designated by the Government House Leader:—

At that stage it still had the status of being designated. Then I read the motion which appears in the official record of the debates during the sitting yesterday as follows:

That this House condemns the Government for its contempt for the taxpayers of Canada, which it demonstrates by the creation of a taxation system in the form of the Income Tax Act that is increasingly incomprehensible for individual taxpayers and by its failure to end capricious and unfair practices of the Department of National Revenue.

MADAM SPEAKER: I do not think I will hear much argument. I will ask whether there is unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Then the Hon. Members to my left said "No".

MR. PINARD: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

At that point I know the Government House Leader wanted to rise and make the same kind of argument in his usual expert fashion that I am making right now, so that we could proceed with an allotted day today. Hansard continues:

MADAM SPEAKER: No, I am sorry. It being past six o'clock, I must adjourn the House until eleven o'clock tomorrow morning, pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6.34 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

The motion was given to the Table and it was later read into the record by myself. Both events took place before the adjournment of yesterday's sitting and in the presence of 223 Members who were present in the House for last night's vote on the time allocation motion.

Mr. Beatty: There were 224 counting Madam Speaker.

Mr. Nielsen: Yes, 224 counting the Chair; I am corrected quite properly. On the basis of the traditional understanding of the 24-hour notice requirement as referring not to a set period of hours but to the fact that motions subject to a 24-hour notice requirement must be filed, at the latest, on the sitting day prior to the day—I am in the final stretch and I would like the undivided attention of the Chair, which has been listening very conscientiously to the important point I am making—that they are taken up for consideration in the House, and on the basis of Mr. Speaker Sproule's ruling and the subsequent citations in Beauchesne, there can be no doubt that adequate notice was given and that the motion should be before the House today.

The House was still sitting. If we are to apply with that degree of stringency the time of six o'clock, which seemed to be in the heads of some of the officials at the Table last night, then we discard all those past practices. That motion could have been printed on the Order Paper. Without intending any disrespect to the decision made by the officials at the Table in not including it in today's Projected Order of Business or the Order Paper, I seriously question that decision. It should have been printed, and I think I raised this point on a previous occasion. While the House was sitting, the Table was seized of the motion; indeed, 224 Members were seized of it. The whole purpose of providing that kind of notice is to put all Members on the alert so that they can prepare for the following day's business.

In fairness to the government House Leader, I should say that somewhere around nine o'clock or 9.30 o'clock last night—I do not have the exact time with me—an official in his office called me on the telephone to inform me that today's order would be Bill C-155. I thanked him for the courtesy of the information, but it did not deter me in my resolve to raise this very important point today.

I believe, with great respect, the fears or doubts of the officials at the Table, with whom I spoke last night were not well-founded. Sometimes, like me, even they could be wrong. The practices of this place have long been that the notice requirements are met even though the notice may have gone slightly beyond the six o'clock requirement. If there is any doubt whatsoever in the mind of the Chair on this question, it surely, in my submission, must be resolved in favour of the Standing Order 62 process rather than the rigid application of Standing Order 47.

Therefore Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition I request that you call the motion of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) for debate this morning.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

● (1140)

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I shall try to be very brief. This morning, three Standing Orders are being applied, namely, S.O. 62(4)(a), S.O. 47 and S.O. 22(2), which gives the Government the power to determine the Orders of the Day. That being said, it seems to me the situation is very straightforward. First of all, this debate is purely academic, since the Government decided yesterday to put consideration of Bill C-155 on today's Orders of the Day. It could have decided to do so this morning, and we could even at this very minute decide that not Bill C-155 but Bill C-12 will be on the Orders of the Day, since it is up to the Government to determine the order of business in the House, and the Standing Orders do not require notice of such a decision, except that it must be made before the Orders of the Day are called.

What happened yesterday is very simple. At three o'clock, on a point of order, I designated today as an Opposition day, and I was under no obligation to add what I did and I do so occasionally—namely, that this was subject to change. At that point, the Opposition had all the time in the world to table a notice of motion before six o'clock. Whatever the intentions of the Opposition were, I am not going to make a mountain out of a molehill, since this would be as childish as it is useless. For some reason, they preferred not to table their notice before six o'clock, claiming that it was subject to change anyway and they wanted to find out whether I was going to change my mind.

My learned colleague refers to what happened around 5:12 p.m., when he asked me whether this was going to be an opposition day or not and whether I was going to change my mind. I merely answered that I did not think I was going to change my mind and if I did, I would let him know in due time. He could have tabled his notice before, and he could still do so at that point, until six o'clock. However, he did not. Subsequently, after six o'clock, the Member for Yukon (Mr.

Nielsen) felt obliged to seek the unanimous consent of the House for tabling his notice, which he read very quickly in order to have his notice read into the record and prepare his case for this morning. It was past six o'clock—this is important—and he asked for unanimous consent. The mere fact that the hon. gentleman asked for unanimous consent proves, in my opinion, that he had dropped the idea that he could do so without seeking the unanimous consent. In any case, I say we do not need this argument to win our case. Consent was denied, and the hon. gentleman seemed to anticipate what I was going to ask on a point of order. If the Chair had recognized the Hon. Member, I was going to say that I would advise the Opposition later that evening of the business of the House today, and I was certainly not going to rise to argue that unanimous consent was not necessary.

When my hon. colleague says that he felt I was going to argue his case, he is wrong. My purpose in rising on a point of order was to say that since unanimous consent was not forthcoming, I was not going to challenge the Chair's decision. Later, I would inform the Opposition of the business of the House for tomorrow, which is today.

Subsequently, about half an hour later, I managed to reach the House Leader of the New Democratic Party personally, and I confirmed that the business of the House for this morning would deal with Bill C-155. I personally tried to reach the Member for Yukon, but unfortunately, there was no answer. Maybe I had a wrong number. In any case someone in my office, as the Hon. Member acknowledged earlier, managed to reach him around 8:00 or 8:30 to confirm that the Orders of the Day would include Bill C-155. I spoke to the Clerk of the House myself to let him know that consideration of Bill C-155 would be on today's Orders of the Day, and I was not obliged to do so before six o'clock.

In the circumstances, the point raised by the Opposition House Leader is purely academic. He is not losing an opposition day, because today is not a designated day, and as they say, I undesignated it. I changed its designation. Today's Orders of the Day were determined yesterday. They were advised in time. That is our prerogative. It is Bill C-155, there is no problem. However, if the Opposition House Leader wished to reserve the right, in future, to table a notice after six o'clock but before the end of the sitting day, this is another issue on which a debate could be held if the situation warrants. It is a point that could be discussed. There are those who will say that a notice of motion which according to Standing Order 62(4)(a) requires twenty-four hours' notice, must, according to Standing Order 47, formerly S.O. 42, be tabled before six o'clock, and incidentally, in the citations from Beauchesne mentioned by my hon. colleague there is a reference to Standing Order 42, now Standing Order 47. Thus, when he says that S.O. 47 does not apply here, he should not refer to citations that are based on S.O. 47, formerly S.O. 42. There is a contradiction here.

There are those who will claim that by analogy, the twenty-four hours' notice mentioned in S.O. 62(4)(a), must be given before six o'clock, pursuant to S.O. 47. I can live with that, and I think that is the opinion we have received up to now. Once again, the problem is purely academic, because the Orders of the Day were changed yesterday to accommodate the Opposition. We were polite and we advised them. The Hon. Member for Yukon cannot deny this, since he himself felt obliged to seek unanimous consent, which was not denied by us but by someone else in the House.

Finally, to stress once again the perhaps pointless aspect of this argument when he refers to Citation 399 of Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, I feel the decision does not contradict the point I am trying to make, and in any case, even if the Hon. Member for Yukon claims that Citation 399 contradicts what I am saying, let it suffice for me to say that the citation dates back to 1913, when the House did not adjourn automatically and sat until late at night. There was no set adjournment at five or six or nine o'clock, which explains the comment that the exact time at which notices are handed to the Clerk at the Table is of minor importance. In 1913, no one ever knew at what time the House would adjourn. I do not think my hon. colleague was here at the time, but I am sure that if he cares to check what I just said, he will realize that his point is not a valid one. This citation can not apply here because it does not refer to the same Standing Orders.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I said that I would be brief. First of all, pursuant to S.O. 22(2), it is up to me to determine the Orders of the Day. That is clear. Changes were made and this has happened before. We decided to change an Opposition day when the Progressive Conservatives played a trick on our colleagues who were in Europe. We can do it again if necessary. We did so yesterday evening, not as a response to that kind of trick, but to another kind of manoeuvre. My hon. colleague is smiling, and he knows very well what I mean. We did so to accommodate them, and S.O. 22(2) gives us the authority to determine that the Orders of the Day will include Bill C-155.

Second, I have some comments on the Hon. Member's notice that was not submitted in time. If he had not sought the unanimous consent of the House, what he said this morning, would have gained in credibility. Third, I think that, by analogy, we have no choice but to apply the time provision in S.O. 47 when dealing with the issue of twenty-four hours' notice pursuant to S.O. 62(4)(a).

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has a problem at this time. There are a number of Hon. Members asking to be recognized. In fairness to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), who should be recognized, the Chair would like to give the Hon. Member for Yukon an opportunity to reply afterwards, if that is agreeable.

Point of Order—Mr. Nielsen

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I really think it would be helpful if I made the additional point so that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain could deal with it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Briefly, the Hon. Member for Yukon.

Mr. Nielsen: The Government House Leader raised a question which I really did not develop fully for consideration of the Chair, and that is the rights of Members to have their motions printed in the official documents of the House. The Chair will note that that motion last night which was left with the Table during the sitting does not appear on the Notice Paper of the Order Paper. It does not appear anywhere.

I have not had the time to be able to cite specifically the precedent, but the House will remember that within the last year we had put down, after being notified of an allotted day, a motion, filing it with the Table. It was printed in the records of the House. The New Democratic Party on the same occasion put down a motion for the same allotted day, which would have caused the Chair to have to make a decision. But that is not relevant here. The relevant point here is that both of those motions were printed on the Notice Paper and both appeared in the official records of the House. Indeed, the Government changed the allotted day and the printing of both of those motions was carried on until the allotted day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In fairness to the Hon. Member, he is developing an area where a good deal of argument could take place. The Chair is not persuaded that it is absolutely relevant to a decision on a matter that must be before us. The Chair at this point would like—

Mr. Nielsen: It is before you now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is before us at this point.

Mr. Nielsen: The second one is before you now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are other points that obviously could be considered. The Chair is trying, with the greatest attention that the Chair can offer, to focus on the essential points and would recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain at this point.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I intend to deal only with the question originally put before you, if I may. At the outset I want to make it clear that I am obviously sympathetic to the purpose of the point of order of the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). It would evidently be to the advantage of the Opposition to be able to file, should this Chair find in favour, a notice at any point after six o'clock.

The question before us, however, is a different one, I think. I hesitate to say it but the Hon. Member for Yukon and his colleagues are the authors of their own misfortune. It has been the practice in this House for some long period of time, as I understand it, that the filing of an Opposition day notice has been required to be done prior to six o'clock. In fact, yesterday when I was informed at about one minute to six that no motion had been filed, my immediate reaction was that perhaps the Opposition day was intended to be ours and that we had not been informed. Knowing how competent the Hon. Member for Yukon usually is in these things, I could hardly believe that he had been so tardy and slipshod. Nevertheless, it turns out that this was the case and I regret having to say that.

There are two matters before you, Mr. Speaker. The first is whether it was required last evening that unanimous consent be sought to have the motion filed late. The Hon. Member for Yukon clearly believed that it was required, otherwise he would not have raised a point of order and sought that unanimous consent. The events of the day were not so filled with turmoil as to make it impossible for a Member to have filed notice prior to six o'clock.

Immediately upon calling orders of the day after three o'clock there was a dispute about whether the Minister or the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) had the floor. Subsequent to that the decision of the Chair was made that the Minister had the floor. The Minister moved his motion under Standing Order 83 and spoke for the ten minutes he is allotted. The Hon. Member for Vegreville followed with his speech, and for some reason that escapes the majority of sensible people in the House of Commons, he moved to go to the orders of the day. Effectively, what he did was eliminate the opportunity for any other Member to speak against the Government's attempt to impose time allocation. I can only assume that was his intention since no other intent could be read into his action.

What he effectively did was to make sure that only the Minister and himself were able to speak during the two-hour debate allotted for the purpose, thus excluding any Member of this Party or any individual Member of the House from speaking. The result was that at the end of the two-hour period prescribed in the Standing Orders the Chair, quite properly in my opinion, put all of the motions necessary to dispose of the question. That occurred at 5.15 in the afternoon so there was still lots of time to file an opposition motion.

The Hon. Member for Yukon then rose to argue on a spurious point that somehow or other the vote should not take place until six o'clock. It was an interesting but quite irrelevant argument, I thought, and he took up, as he has this morning, about half an hour of time making this argument based, I submit, on faulty background information. Nevertheless, he made it and time went by.

The vote was taken on the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville that we proceed to orders of the day. My Leader rose at that point and sought unanimous consent to extend the time of sitting to allow us to continue through the proceedings prior to orders of the day in order that he could move a motion, or at least receive a ruling on a motion for an adjournment debate on the very important question of the invasion of Grenada. That was refused. It is an important point to recognize that it was refused. In refusing to extend orders of the day it became quite clear that at the precise moment that the vote on the motion of the Minister was concluded, we had technically arrived at six o'clock and the only thing left to do was to move to adjourn.

At that point I contend that the Hon. Member for Yukon could have made the argument he made this morning. He could have risen and said that having been informed by the Table that they were not going to accept his motion, it was his opinion that a Speaker's ruling was required then and there on whether there was a necessity for unanimous consent or whether the Standing Orders and precedents he has cited today should and could prevail. The Hon. Member chose not to do that.

I would refer Your Honour to Beauchesne, page 78, Citation 235, which reads as follows:

Any Member is entitled, even bound, to bring to the Speaker's immediate—

I emphasize "immediate", Mr. Speaker.

—notice any instance of what he considers a breach of order. He may interrupt and lay the point in question concisely before the Speaker. He should do so as soon as he perceives an irregularity in the proceedings which are engaging the attention of the House. The Speaker's attention must be directed to a breach of order at the proper moment, namely the moment it occurred.

I contend that if there was a question to be decided at that point, it was not whether the Hon. Member was entitled to file, having been refused permission to do so by the Table; the question before him was, should he rise on a point of order and get a ruling from the Speaker to permit filing to take place? He chose not to do that. I cannot help but read into his actions that he believed he had exceeded the time limit under normal practice and that he was requiring the unanimous consent of the House to do that which otherwise he could not do. I contend that his rising on the question today at eleven o'clock, interesting though it is, is too late. The question was quite clearly before him and should have been raised in the House yesterday at 6.15 if, indeed, it was a point of order.

Frankly speaking, I suggest that although as a Member of the Opposition I would be happy if you could find a way to rule that we are entitled to file a notice of motion after six o'clock, as it would be to our advantage if the Opposition could file at any time, the practices of the past have made it necessary to conclude that filing must take place prior to six o'clock.

Since the Hon. Member missed the opportunity to raise that precise point of order at a time when it could have been ruled upon by the Speaker, and since today's decisions passed by without the Hon. Member having raised the point, the Hon. Member then pursued the matter through asking for unanimous consent which he must have believed at the time was necessary. With the benefit of overnight reflection he seems to have changed his mind, but unfortunately he has not made a case sufficient to justify overwhelming support.

As I started, Mr. Speaker, I end. The Hon. Member for Yukon is learned in the rules of the House, and he constantly informs us of this. He has frequently pointed out to me and others when we are in violation of the rules, and I have accepted his advice graciously on all occasions. I can only conclude on this occasion that because of his inadvertence, neglect, tardiness, slipshod manner or whatever, he failed to do what is necessary. I regret that I cannot support the import of his argument although I do support the desire he has in mind.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has heard one spokesman from each of the three Parties. The Chair will now propose to hear the Hon. Member in whose name the motion was attempted and then will render a decision on the matter.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your courtesy. There are a number of key points which the Chair will want to take into consideration. I want in particular to respond to one argument made by the Government House Leader and the House Leader of the New Democratic Party. It relates to the procedure followed yesterday afternoon when my House Leader rose following six o'clock to ask for unanimous consent to allow the motion to be filed.

The suggestion was made by the Government House Leader and the House Leader for the NDP that the action of my House Leader was in some way a confession on his part that he did not, by right, have the ability to file that notice of motion last night after six o'clock and that somehow the fact that he rose at that time prejudiced my ability to have my motion considered today. Nothing could be further from the truth, Mr. Speaker. The reason my House Leader rose when he did last night to seek unanimous consent was to avoid precisely what has happened this morning.

Instead of going on to debate the Crow, as the NDP would like, we on this side of the House want to debate a motion dealing with Revenue Canada. Our Members are prepared to deal with that motion. Many of us have worked for a considerable period of time in order to deal with it. What is essential here, Mr. Speaker, is that the ability of Hon. Members to act on motions such as this should not be circumscribed by a literal interpretation of procedures or by a decision made by the Table which would prejudice the rights of individual Hon. Members; in this case, myself.

What has happened today because of the New Democratic Party's unwillingness yesterday to give unanimous consent to the very reasonable request which was made by my House Leader is that we have already lost one hour of the time which is allotted for an Opposition day. Even if you find, Mr. Speaker, in our favour—as I hope you will and as I believe you must—the effect of the NDP refusal to give consent has been that a minimum of one hour has been lost to debate what would be the Order of the Day.

That was the reason my House Leader rose yesterday to seek unanimous consent. The record is very clear. He said: "There seems to be some doubt with respect to this." He did not say: "I believe I am no longer entitled to put down this motion". In order to eliminate any question and to facilitate the proceedings of the House, he asked quite properly for unanimous consent, which would have avoided the procedural debate we are having at the present time. It certainly would have facilitated matters for the Chair and for every Hon. Member, including Hon. Members of the NDP and the Government, who would be taking part in the debate today. Surely, one of the reasons why notice is required is to enable Hon. Members to do their homework in preparation for debate.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that we should certainly set aside the argument which was made by the House Leaders of the NDP and the Government that in some way my House Leader prejudiced our right to make this argument today by his actions yesterday, or that he was in any way conceding that we did not, as a matter of right, have the ability to put that motion down.

A second point was raised by the House Leader for the New Democratic Party. He referred at length to the attempt by his Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), to ask for unanimous consent to extend the hours of sitting yesterday. The argument the House Leader made was that when Government Members refused that unanimous consent, it was then clear that the proceedings would lapse at six o'clock. Yet, Mr. Speaker, if you look at the final line in yesterday's Hansard you will see it says precisely this:

> At 6.34 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

The record of the House of Commons itself makes it very clear that the House was in session. The House was sitting until 6.34 p.m. last night. The record also makes it very clear that both at the time my House Leader submitted that motion to the Table and at the time he rose to ask for unanimous consent, the House was still proceeding. It is perhaps a reflection on Madam Speaker which is made by the House Leader of the New Democratic Party if he suggests that it was improper for my House Leader to be permitted to raise this matter at that point. However, Madam Speaker was clearly of the opinion that the House was sitting. Otherwise she could not have given the floor to my House Leader, and otherwise she could not have sought the unanimous consent of the House as requested by my House Leader. Again, the argument which is made by the House Leader of the New Democratic Party is spurious and irrelevant.

The question is this, Mr. Speaker. The first issue that has to be considered by you is whether or not Standing Order 62(4) is to be taken literally. Does it in fact require, literally, that 24 hours of notice be given before an Opposition day? On the face of it, clearly that is not the case. Clearly it would have been physically impossible yesterday, because the first that any of us in the House learned that it was the Government's intention yesterday to designate today as an Opposition day was following three o'clock. How could we conceivably have squeezed 24 hours into the period between three o'clock and eleven o'clock this morning? There has never been any dispute about that in the House. We have never had a case where the New Democratic Party and the Government House Leader have risen to argue that the 24 hours referred to in the Standing Orders must be taken literally.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, that point was amply made by his House Leader.

Mr. Beatty: Good. As long as you accept the point which was made by my House Leader, Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased, because it is a key argument which has to be made here. It leads to this question: What is intended by the House in terms of the requirement of six o'clock? Why is there any requirement for a specified time? My House Leader alluded to that when he referred to the citation in Beauchesne and quoted from the decision which was made by one of Your Honour's distinguished predecessors. It was very clear that the reason that procedure exists is to ensure that Hon. Members are aware of what the next day's business would be. If the procedure has been interpreted by the Chair throughout the course of time as meaning that notice must be given during the present sitting day about what is happening the following day, clearly there is no dispute whatsoever about it, Mr. Speaker.

The record of the House of Commons itself shows that at the time notice was given, at the time unanimous consent was requested, the House was sitting. The sitting day was continuing. It cannot be argued that because it was after six o'clock, that somehow takes away from the right of Hon. Members of Parliament to submit these motions, notwithstanding the fact the House was still sitting, and notwithstanding the fact that, according to Hansard, at that time some 224 Hon. Members were present in the House. If we were to accept that, Mr. Speaker, what we would find is that this would be a negation of the whole principle which was accepted by you a minute ago when you said the House Leader put the case very clearly, that that Standing Order is not to be taken literally.

Mr. Nielsen: Nor is 47.

Mr. Beatty: And, as my House Leader has just said, nor is Standing Order 47. If the Chair accepts the principle that the reason for requiring notice is to ensure that Hon. Members are given the right and the ability to know what the next day's business is during the sitting day, one has no option except to conclude that the notice was properly given during the sitting day and on time. To set an arbitrary cut-off time, which is not in the rule book, of six o'clock, I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, would be grossly unfair and would undermine the whole principle of this question which has existed since, I believe, 1913.

There is another matter which I would like to develop and which has not been touched on by the Hon. Members who have spoken today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, the Chair listened intently to the argument of his House Leader and the Hon. Member so far has repeated what his House Leader has said.

Mr. Nielsen: No, he has not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I invite the Hon. Member, if he has a new point to make, to make it.

Mr. Nielsen: He is doing it.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated, that is precisely what I intend to do. I would like to refer the Chair to Standing Order 55 which reads as follows:

Whenever the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion offered to the House is contrary to the rules and privileges of Parliament, the Speaker shall apprise the House thereof immediately, before putting the question thereon, and quote the Standing Order or authority applicable to the case.

My submission, Mr. Speaker, is that if there was doubt as to the procedural acceptability of a notice of motion filed after 6 p.m., the proper procedure was not for someone to decide not to include it in the Orders of the Day today and to prejudice my rights, as an Hon. Member, to deal with that motion, but rather for it to appear on the Orders of the Day and for the Speaker now, before calling the motion, to deal with the question of procedure. I would argue, Mr. Speaker, that my rights as an Hon. Member are prejudiced when a decision is made arbitrarily that a motion which is submitted by an Hon. Member on this side of the House in good faith, believing fully that it is within the rules of the House, is summarily not included in the Order Paper for today.

If one looks, even in a cursory way, at the Standing Order 55, the procedure which should be followed is very clear. For someone simply to make the decision that the notice of motion would not appear because it was filed following six o'clock departs from the principle established in Standing Order 55 and gravely undermines my rights, Mr. Speaker, as a Member of Parliament to deal with this matter and have my motion considered. I consider that element every bit as serious as the matters raised by my House Leader and the House Leaders for the other two Parties, because it is my rights as a Member which are in jeopardy as a result of this decision.

If you were to accept the argument that since it does not appear in the Orders of the Day today because it was filed after six o'clock we are to go to Government Orders and not debate an Opposition day motion, then I suggest that deeply undercuts my rights as a Member and prejudices my ability to defend an action which I believe, and which my House Leader believes, was entirely in order and consistent with precedent.

Mr. Fisher: You can say that without blushing?

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I believe that on the basis of Standing Order 55 alone a compelling case can be made for the procedure followed last evening, and that not including my motion on today's Order Paper was wrong and my rights have been prejudiced. Additionally, I believe the argument by my House Leader was compelling since there is no question that when the order was filed last night it was filed consistent with the practices of this House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to Hon. Members, the Chair has heard a good deal of argument—

Mr. Mazankowski: Procedural acceptability.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Well, the Chair is not going to listen to a series of repetitive arguments; but if the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) has a short point of order, the Chair will listen to him. But the Chair does not intend to listen to a lengthy repetition of arguments.

Mr. McKnight: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Mr. Pinard: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): I move:

That the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster be now heard.

Mr. Pinard: A point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: The motion must be put without debate.

Mr. Ouellet: The motion is not yet put.

Mr. Pinard: I got up on a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: The motion has to be put.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville has moved that the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) be now heard.

Mr. Fisher: Who seconded the motion?

Mr. Nielsen: I seconded the motion.

Mr. Pinard: I raised a point of order before the motion was made.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Those opposed please say nay?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): I rise to follow my House Leader and the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) on the matter of the allotted day assigned by the Government House Leader with the caveat that it may be changed. As my House Leader and the Hon. Member in whose name the motion stands have expressed, that motion was subject to withdrawal.

The rationale for rising in his place to ask for unanimous consent, which I think would have facilitated the movement of the business of this House much more rapidly than we have this morning by carrying on this debate, was the time that had elapsed. If we are indeed to be consistent concerning the ability of Opposition Members to have allotted days, it would appear to be incumbent upon those of us on this side and on the Government side to inform my House Leader whether the offer of an allotted day would stand or be withdrawn.

When my House Leader rose to seek unanimous consent and read the motion, as he did last evening, it would appear he was trying to facilitate the business of the House. That motion appeared to be agreed to by the Government House Leader. I thought I saw his head nodding in the affirmative and he had no objection to that happening. For some reason Members of the NDP refused to give unanimous consent, and therefore at the first opportunity my House Leader—

Mr. Althouse: Get your facts right.

Mr. McKnight: —presented the argument for the Opposition day. I fail to understand why anyone would not consent to a motion which would remove Revenue Canada from the backs of the taxpayers in Canada.

Mr. Althouse: A point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: We are on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster is on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We have been on a point of order all the way along. The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre rises on a point of order.

Mr. Althouse: I am sure the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster would not wish to break the rules of the House and impute motives to any Members or any Party, particularly when, if indeed there was a "no" yesterday, it was not clear where it was from.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is not making a point of order. The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster has the floor. The Chair requests the Hon. Member, in the interests of the House, not to repeat arguments but to deal with essential items concerning the point of order raised by his House Leader.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I did not realize I was casting aspersions on anyone. I just said that the NDP denied unanimous consent.

Mr. Keeper: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. Is it not necessary for a Member to tell the truth?

Mr. McKnight: The Hon. Member who put this motion feels that he was denied the right of a Member of Parliament to have a motion which he feels very strongly about debated on the floor of the House of Commons. Rather than repeat myself, I now move:

That the Hon. Member for Yukon be now heard.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Pinard: By unanimous consent.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The concern the Chair has at this point is that motions of a particular form, repeated with a dilatory purpose, raise some fundamental questions about the way in which this House conducts its business.

Mr. Nielsen: Then hear us out.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair will hear the Hon. Member for Yukon and then render a decision on the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Yukon.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, it has been the practice in this place for many, many years for the Chair to listen to submissions and hear Members out who feel they have a contribution to make to a procedural debate. I urge the Chair to reconsider the imposition of any guillotine on a procedural debate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sure the Hon. Member, being an experienced Parliamentarian, is well aware of ample precedents in which the Chair has listened patiently to arguments, and beyond a certain point has decided the argument has been sufficient for the purpose of the Chair to render a decision to the House. The Chair has listened for well over one hour, and listened patiently, to the Hon. Member. I am sure the Hon. Member, who has a great respect for Parliament and who at some time may face even greater responsibilities than he has now, will realize the implications of what he is doing.

Mr. Pinard: Oh, never!

Mr. Nielsen: There is no doubt about the truthfulness of your last two sentences, Mr. Speaker.

I have now had provided to me the precedents in order for the Chair to come to a balanced decision with respect to the rights of Members to have their motion printed in the official records of the House, which is part of the point of order I raised initially. Perhaps while I am presenting my argument, these precedents could be obtained for the Chair or I will pass mine up. However, I think it would be helpful if the Chair had them while I am arguing.

● (1220)

I shall refer to Hansard of February 12, 1982, at pages 14953 to 14966 inclusive. At that time, a very full debate on this question was raised and the Chair reserved its decision. Three days later, on February 15, at page 14997 and page 14998, the question was resolved. On February 12, 1982 I raised a question under the subheading:

MR. NIELSEN—PRINTING IN ORDER PAPER OF FILED OPPOSITION MOTION—CHANGES TO ORDER PAPER MADE BY GOVERNMENT

I made a lengthy argument at that time on the basis that the Order Paper had been changed. At that time as well, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain sought a meeting with the Chair to discuss the subject. He is not present at the moment but he will recall that. He sought that meeting in order to discuss this matter with the Speaker, but was unable to do so because of the events that were occurring during that time.

On that occasion, as reported at page 14954 of Hansard, I said the following:

Let me read now the Order Paper following upon the announcement Thursday by the government House leader, the Order Paper and Notices for Friday, February 5, 1982. At page 2 the Chair will note that Friday, February 12, has been designated as (Allotted Day—Supply).

That situation is on all fours with the situation that is before us here. In that case, the words "Allotted Day—Supply" appeared in italics and in brackets. I was making the argument that the Government, having announced that allotted day, could not smuggle in a change on the Order Paper by the use of the Standing Order allowing it to set the business of the House. The point I am making is that under the Order Paper of that day appeared this heading:

Notices of Supply Proceedings Pursuant to Standing Order 58(4)(a)—

That is now Standing Order 62(4)(a).

NOTE: Friday, February 12, 1982—Third allotted day for the supply period ending March 26, 1982.

Today's Notice Paper goes that far. That much is printed. I want to emphasize and underline the fact that that notice which has been carried throughout the week on the preceding Friday stipulated, following the word "Note", the date of Friday, February 12, 1982. I would underscore that as I underscored the appearance today on the Order Paper of the announcement by the House Leader yesterday making today an allotted day.

I shall now deal with the motion. In the precedent that I cited on page 14954 of Hansard for February 12 appears this passage:

As the Chair appreciates, under our Standing Orders there must be 24 hours' notice filed in order to set the allotted day down for debate. It is past history that notice of that motion was set down at 1.12 in the afternoon of Thursday, February 11. The motion that was set down first, I point out, bore no date. It was as follows:

The notice that followed was printed in the Order Paper under Standing Order 58(9). The point of that debate as it relates to this one was that the motion itself was in the possession of the Table. The House was seized of it, having been given it during the sitting, and it was printed in full on the Order Paper. The Speaker reserved her judgment with respect to the right of Members to have motions printed on the question of alterations and I would like to cite briefly from her ruling of February 15, 1982, at page 14997 of Hansard, under the subheading:

MR. NIELSEN—PRINTING IN ORDER PAPER OF FILED OPPOSITION MOTION—RULING BY MADAM SPEAKER

MADAM SPEAKER: I would like to rule on the point of order which was brought up last Friday by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). His point of order was that the notice filed by him in the name of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) pursuant to Standing Order 58(4)(a) did not appear on the notice paper of Friday, February 12, 1982.

Before dealing with this point, I should like to clarify certain references made to the Order Paper by the Hon. Member in his submission on Friday last. The Hon. Member alleges that the government, merely by verbal announcement, has altered an item appearing on the Order Paper.

I respectfully submit to the Hon. Member that the government does not alter the Order Paper. Only decisions by the House can have that effect. On the other hand, the notice paper is made up of notices given by members of the House in accordance with the Standing Orders. The production of these papers is under the direction of the Clerk of the House.

Reference was made to page 2 of the Order Paper which is entitled "Projected Weekly Order of Business". Although it is not an official part of the Order Paper, it is inserted for the information and the convenience of Hon. Members. The same is true of the notes projecting dates—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has brought his instances to the attention of the Chair and has argued his case very well. The Chair has listened patiently to his argument. The Chair is now in the position of being able to make some observations that might perhaps be of assistance—

Mr. Nielsen: There are other points to be covered.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair must at some point decide and—

Mr. Nielsen: There are other points to be covered which you have not even heard yet.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has been given ample opportunity. This is the third occasion he has been recognized on the same point of order. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I would like to repeat to him a remark that I made before. What he is doing to Parliament by this procedure is something for him to weigh with his own conscience and his accountability to the people of Canada.

Mr. Nielsen: Is that a threat?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: At this point, with all due respect to the Hon. Member, the Chair is prepared to make an observation on the point.

Some Hon. Members: Point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair is prepared to make an observation. The Hon. Member is seeking to substitute a procedure different from that which has been the practice of the House. The Hon. Member for Yukon very correctly pointed out that Standing Order 62(4) cannot be taken literally. Twenty-four hours' notice cannot be given and has not been given. The Hon. Member for Yukon, in a very learned and well prepared presentation, has cast reflections upon whether or not Standing Order 47 is relevant. The Chair has some concern as to whether or not it is relevant. However, the Chair must ask the Hon. Member for Yukon what he is arguing. He is arguing that the sitting time of the House should be the limit and not six o'clock. That is his argument.

I call to the attention of the Hon. Member the fact that yesterday there was a motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) which, if granted by the Chair, would have had the effect of allowing for a sitting beginning at eight o'clock and continuing until an undetermined hour. I call the Hon. Member's attention to the fact that there are a number of provisions in our rules to allow for the extension of the sitting time of the House. I call to his attention that if we are to substitute a rule that a motion can be put down any time while the House is sitting, that would in effect make for a chaotic situation. In fact, there was once a time when we sat for 26 hours. If that kind of a sitting had preceded a designated day, there would have been no limitation whatsoever, according to the rule put forward by the Hon. Member for Yukon, on the time for which a motion would have to be set down.

The Chair is therefore required by the logic of the situation to look at the practices that have evolved in the House since 1968. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, the procedures of the House in 1913 may be relevant but the Chair has some difficulty relating them to the revised procedures that we have adopted since 1968.

● (1230)

It is therefore the decision of the Chair—

Mr. Nielsen: A point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: —that the practice of the House of requiring a six o'clock deadline for the submission of motions is a legitimate practice of the House established since 1968 and the logic of the situation requires that it be observed. The Chair rules that the Hon. Member's point of order is not well taken.

Mr. Nielsen: It is an observation, not a ruling. I have a point of order.

Mr. McKnight: On a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight).

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I move:

That the Hon. Member for Yukon be now heard.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 33 reads as follows:

When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who first rose in his or her place; but a motion may be made that any Member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate.

At this stage we have had before us a point of order which has been decided on by the Chair.

Mr. Nielsen: I have another.

Mr. Taylor: I have another one also.

Mr. Malone: I have another one.

Mr. Taylor: I have an entirely different one.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair will recognize the Hon. Member for Yukon. Again, the Chair will fall back on an observation made before on procedures of a dilatory character. In the British House, the authority of the Chair to deal with dilatory motions is clear. In our practice in the past it has not been so clear. However, at some point Hon. Members in this House will have to ask themselves at what point are they going to have confidence in the Chair to deal in an orderly way with the business of the House in an absolutely neutral and impartial way.

If a series of dilatory motions can be put forward now, one after another, the effect of which is to prevent the House from proceeding to its business, Hon. Members will have to reflect on what they are doing because the procedures that are being followed now in their custom of precedent will not lightly disappear from the record. Whether or not orderly government is possible in the House of Commons if such procedures are followed through to their logical conclusion is a matter for Hon. Members to consider.

The Hon. Member for Yukon has the floor.

Mr. Pinard: This is not Schefferville. The Speaker is right.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, we would have that confidence in the Chair, but when an occupant of the Chair rises and clearly and repeatedly states that he intends to make observations and then, in the course of making those observations, it suddenly becomes a ruling before Members are heard, that we cannot accept from an occupant of the chair because it is simply not upfront.

Mr. Pinard: So you are blaming the Chair. You are accusing the Chair.

Mr. Nielsen: I was making a point which I was prevented from making when the Chair made its ruling.

Mr. Pinard: You are reflecting on the Chair.

Mr. Nielsen: The record will clearly show that I raised the point in my initial submission to the Chair and the Chair has chosen, for whatever reasons, to ignore that second point upon which a ruling should be made.

I ask the Chair now to consider the points that I was interrupted in making by the ruling the Chair made during its observations when I was attempting to make additional new points which were not before the Chair in order to assist the Chair in its ruling. How can we—

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to know if this is a new point of order. If not, you have ruled and I suggest that the Hon. Member should respect the Chair's ruling. If he is blaming the Chair for having made a decision and is now trying to argue again because you had not given him, according to him, full opportunity to be heard—which is, of course, not true—then I suggest he is not respecting the Chair and should no longer be heard.

Mr. Nielsen: Usually the Government House Leader makes intelligent observations.

Mr. Pinard: I do not waste the time of the House.

Mr. Nielsen: If he had been following my remarks, and he is closer to me than the Chair, he should know that I was making new points and arguments in support of a point of order that I raised initially here today and which has been ignored in the so-called observations of the Chair.

Mr. Pinard: The ruling was made.

Mr. Nielsen: Not on the point I raised initially. The Government House Leader says that the ruling was made. The ruling has not been made on the point that I raised with respect to the right of Members to have their motions printed in the Order Paper.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member—and the Chair has a great deal of respect for the Hon. Member's experience and background—he raised a point of order concerning whether a motion should have precedence over the item of Government business raised by the Government House Leader.

Mr. Nielsen: No, that is not my point at all. That is why the Chair should listen to my point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The point that the Hon. Member apparently made at some length, as I am sure the record will bear out, was that there should not be a proceeding with the item indicated by the Government House Leader—

Mr. Nielsen: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: —but that a motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe should have been the order of the day.

Mr. Nielsen: That is not my point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That was the original point of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Nielsen: That was not the original point and I would like to make my point.

Mr. Pinard: You had an hour and we still do not understand you.

Mr. Nielsen: I have not. I have been interrupted so often.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With respect to the question of the right of Members to have motions printed—

Mr. Nielsen: Now you are getting closer.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: —the Chair has indicated, and I thought it was clear, that a motion should be put down within the procedures by six o'clock. Obviously, motions before six o'clock would be printed.

Mr. Nielsen: I have submissions to make before another ruling is made. I have submissions to make on that point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has listened at considerable length. There is no requirement that the Chair must listen indefinitely or that the Chair must listen to repetitive arguments. That has not—

Mr. Nielsen: It should at least listen.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: —been the practice of any Parliament. The Chair has indicated that motions which follow the practice of the House and are left with the Table before six o'clock must certainly be printed and the precedents which the Hon. Member has cited, to the best knowledge of the Chair—

Mr. Nielsen: I have not finished citing them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member did cite some precedents previously. The fact is that motions after six o'clock do not have the same right as motions before six o'clock. That is part of the Chair's decision.

Mr. Nielsen: Since the Chair has not heard my submissions on the points that I had to make, it is my submission that it is the obligation of the Chair to hear argument on new points that Members wish to make before any ruling is made.

My narrow point which was totally distorted by the Chair—misinterpreted is perhaps a kinder word—was that Members have a right to have their motions printed on the Order Paper. I was in the middle of citing a precedent with respect to that matter when I was cut off by the Chair. I want to complete citing that precedent. I am reading from a ruling made by Madam Speaker. Surely the present occupant of the chair would at least listen to that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The present occupant of the chair is well aware of the matter that the Hon. Member is citing. The present occupant of the chair has done his very best, on more than one occasion, to recognize the Hon. Member for Yukon this morning.

In fairness to Parliament and in fairness to other Hon. Members, there are limits to the number of times the Hon. Member for Yukon can continuously rise at this point. I am sure, after mature reflection, the Hon. Member himself will recognize that Parliament must conduct its business in an orderly way. The procedures for orderly conduct of parliamentary business have evolved painfully, but Parliament rests upon the acceptance of those procedures, especially by experienced Parliamentarians who carry great responsibility in this House.

● (1240)

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, an impartial Chair has an obligation to listen to the arguments of Hon. Members and not attempt to impose discipline—

An Hon. Member: You are not being heard.

An Hon. Member: Your microphone light is out.

Mr. Nielsen: I am being heard by Hansard, if no one else wants to hear me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon has the floor.

Point of Order—Mr. Nielsen

Mr. Nielsen: We are governed by lights and dials and knobs in this place, and I could say a few words about knobs, too. I was saying that at page 14997, to refresh the memory of the Chair, Madam Speaker was dealing with this subject. I had reached this point, quoting her ruling:

Reference was made to page 2 of the Order Paper which is entitled "Projected Weekly Order of Business". Although it is not an official part of the Order Paper, it is inserted for the information and the convenience of hon. members.

That is where Bill C-155 appears today. That, Sir, is a new point which the Chair has not considered. Simply because Bill C-155 appears on the Projected Order of Daily Business does not fit within the Standing Order as being sufficient notice with respect to the change of the order of business—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Can the Chair put a question to the Hon. Member, with all due respect to him? He is quoting, I believe, from page 14997 of Hansard. Is that correct?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, you will recall—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: February 15, 1982, the Speaker?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, if you will tell those at the console to turn on my light I will be heard by you.

I said at the outset that in order to assist the Chair I wanted your officers to get you the precedents from which I cited when I was on my feet on this last occasion before being interrupted. I cited the page number of Hansard from which I was quoting—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I indicate to the Hon. Member that in the precedents quoted by Madam Speaker at that time both of those motions had been placed on the Table before six o'clock, within the required time.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, maybe I am having difficulty communicating. I am talking now about Bill C-155 and the idea that simply because it appears on the publication being dealt with by Madam Speaker at that time, the "Projected Weekly Order of Business"—did not constitute the kind of notice that Standing Orders refer to when the Government is given the authority to set the order of business of the House. Could we understand that point, Mr. Speaker? I am only one Member. There are 282 Members in this place who require notice. Last night there were 233, or whatever the number was.

Now as to what occurred. I was telephoned by an officer in the office of the Government House Leader. I managed to inform perhaps five or six Members of this Party that there had been a switch in the order of business today. None of the other Members had been communicated with so they are confronted today for the first time with something different to debate, and the Member in whose name the motion stands was not one of those I consulted after receiving the personal notice from the office of the Government House Leader.

Therefore, you have at least 93 or 94 Members of this Party who were unaware of any change in the order of business today. I dare say there would also be some Members in the New Democratic Party who were unaware there was a change in the order of business today. That is wrong, Mr. Speaker. The Standing Orders do not give the Government House Leader the opportunity, as broadly as you want to stretch them, the authority or the opportunity to come in in the middle of an order of business and change without due notice the order of business. That is what happened here.

We were aware that today was to be an allotted day. That is the business on the official Notice Paper, not Bill C-155. On the occasion upon which Madam Speaker ruled, and in defence and support of her ruling against the arguments I was making at that time, she said that the Projected Order of Business is not an official publication of the House of Commons and, therefore, the Government House Leader could do what he did. If that is a precedent, if Madam Speaker's ruling means anything, surely it means that Members should not be caught unawares by a sudden change in Government business at 8.30 p.m. or 9.30 p.m., as was the case last night when I was so informed. There was no way at that time that I could have given notice to Members here, particularly the Member in whose name the motion stands for today, or could—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could the Chair put a question to the Hon. Member? In the interests of clarifying the situation, is the Hon. Member contending that the Government House Leader did not have authority to call Bill C-155 as the business for today? Is that the Hon. Member's contention?

Mr. Nielsen: I certainly do contend that in support of the right of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe to have his order proceeded with today, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could the Chair ask the Hon. Member another question in the interests of resolving our difficulties? If that is the contention—

Mr. Nielsen: Why do you not let me complete a sentence before you stand up, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Courtesy is a normal procedure of the House.

Mr. Nielsen: Yes, it is.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair is attempting to observe it. If the Hon. Member's contention is that the Government House Leader does not have authority to call Bill C-155, what does the Hon. Member believe should be the order of business of the day and what is his contention?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, if I were to be allowed to complete a sentence, with great respect to the Chair, before being interrupted, the Chair might understand what I am contending. But if I am continually interrupted in mid-sentence, then there is no way that I am ever going to get through to the Chair so that it will understand.

What I am contending is that some 95 Members, in particular the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe, came here, on notice given on the official records of the House, prepared to debate a Private Member's motion. That is what they came here to do. They were not given notice of any other order until they received the Projected Order of Business in their mail some time before twelve o'clock today. That was the first indication those Members had that Bill C-155 and not the motion of the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe would be debated.

I say it is an abuse of the Standing Orders of this place for the Government House Leader to attempt to do what he has done; not with respect to me, because I had that notice, and not with respect, I presume, to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain, because he had that notice. But some of the rest of the Members had that notice. Therefore, being prepared, the Government having slipped up—I could be kinder to the Government than that—it is the doubts in the minds of some of the officials at the Table that have produced this problem, and I say that with respect to them too. But the reason we are not proceeding with something of which we had notice is because of what happened last night and today.

I contend, Sir, that the Government can only proceed with Bill C-155 today if it had given proper notice to all Members that it was the Government's intention to do so—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: the Hon. Member—

Mr. Nielsen: That is what Madam Speaker was asked on February 15, 1982, if you will hear me out, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has made his point. With due respect to the Hon. Member the Chair has listened to him for a considerable period of time this morning. I have recognized him on four occasions so far.

Mr. Nielsen: Only because you have interrupted me. It could have been once.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question which the Hon. Member seems not to accept, namely from the Chair is designed to clarify in the mind of the Chair the items before us. This is one which the Chair asks the Hon. Member to reconsider.

• (1250)

What we face is a situation in which the motion by the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe, which was put on the Table after six o'clock last night, has been ruled by the Chair not to be in order. In the circumstances, the business of the House has been indicated by the Government House Leader under Standing Order 22 and it is the opinion of the Chair—

Mr. Gamble: A point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is the opinion of the Chair that the Government House Leader, according to Standing Order 22, has the right to indicate House business and that Orders of the Day be called at this point, as indicated by the Government House Leader.

Mr. Gamble: A point of order.

Point of Order—Mr. Nielsen

Mr. Nielsen: I have a question of privilege.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair is not prepared to entertain a series of dilatory motions whose object—and I call this to the attention of Hon. Members—is to impede the orderly flow of House of Commons business. This is something which Hon. Members might well wish to remember. They may well wish to remember my words of today, because circumstances could well change in this place and Hon. Members are creating precedents that they themselves might have to live with. That is something that they will have to be concerned about and answer to themselves.

At this point the Chair recognizes the points of order that have been raised. It has ruled on the points of order that have been raised. It is always the right of Hon. Members to raise points of order, but there is a point at which the Chair has to decide that the proceedings are dilatory, designed to impede the conduct of business of the House, and under such circumstances the Chair has to exercise some initiative. The Chair is calling the item of the day and on the Clerk to read the item.

Mr. Mayer: A point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: I have a question of privilege.

Mr. Mazankowski: I have a question of privilege.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will hear a point of privilege from the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Nielsen: I have one too.

Mr. Mazankowski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I hope that you will find my question of privilege not dilatory.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could interrupt the Hon. Member for Vegreville for a second, because my question of privilege has to do with the remarks of the Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville has the floor.

Mr. Nielsen: My question of privilege has to do with the remarks of the Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville has been recognized.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I would gladly defer my question of privilege and yield the floor to the Hon. Member for Yukon, but I want to reserve the right to raise my question of privilege because it is a very serious matter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon.

Mr. Nielsen: My question of privilege arises out of remarks made by the Chair. The Chair accused me of having risen four times. I point out to the Chair, with respect, that the only reason I had to rise four times was because I was interrupted by the Chair six times.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect, the Chair's statement was that the Chair had recognized the Hon. Member four times, which is not quite what the Hon. Member has said.

Mr. Nielsen: The record will clearly show what happened, Mr. Speaker. I was continually interrupted.

The other question of privilege I have is that it is said that I would not answer questions from the Chair. Sir, with respect again, the Chair hardly gave me that opportunity to answer questions because of its continual interruptions in my submissions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vegreville has a matter of privilege.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I have had an opportunity to review the remarks in the official report of the House of Commons proceedings, Hansard, arising out of the exchange which took place yesterday at page 28349. Mr. Speaker, I want to tell you that I believe very sincerely that my privileges—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could the Hon. Member please serve notice on the Chair relating to this matter? I believe the Standing Orders require that he give the Chair notice under such circumstances.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, in fairness, the Chair has asked if the Hon. Member would give notice of it.

Mr. Mazankowski: I have just had the opportunity of reviewing the official record of the House of Commons proceedings. I will not be very long. I think—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, there is a point at which the proceedings and practices of this House have to be observed.

An Hon. Member: We want to hear what it is.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, if the Hon. Member has an item of privilege arising out of the conduct of proceedings, he does not need notice.

Mr. Gamble: Right here.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: But to raise a question the day after concerning what appears in Hansard, the Chair respectfully asks the Hon. Member to give notice. That is the practice of the House.

Mr. Deans: A point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I quote Standing Order 20(2):

> Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 47, any Member proposing to raise a question of privilege, other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting, shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

The Chair cannot disregard the Standing Orders of the House, nor would the Hon. Member really knowingly request the Chair to do so.

Mr. Malone: A point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: I just simply want to reserve the right to make a point of privilege which I think is very fundamental. I firmly believe that my rights and privileges as a Member of Parliament have been breached and eroded. I think that on the basis of the official record of the House of Commons proceedings—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member can give notice, and his privileges and rights will be observed scrupulously according to the Standing Orders of the House.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member, who is an experienced Parliamentarian, knows that this is the Standing Order and that it calls for notice.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Mazankowski: —to serve notice now that I will be raising this matter of privilege at the earliest opportunity—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has given—

Mr. Mazankowski: —this afternoon.

An Hon. Member: You have to give written notice.

Mr. Mazankowski: This is my notice.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, it says "shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House". If the Hon. Member is giving to the Chair a written statement, the Chair will be pleased to receive it and can assure the Hon. Member that his rights will be scrupulously observed.

Mr. Taylor: A point of order.

Mr. Mayer: A point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer).

Mr. Mayer: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think you know the respect with which I hold the Chair.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mayer: They can laugh, they can laugh. I am not speaking to Government Members; I am speaking to the Chair.

Mr. Nystrom: Throw him out.

Mr. Mayer: I fully agree with you, Mr. Speaker, when you say that we have to have confidence in the Chair to deal with the business of the House. I wrote this down, it may be paraphrasing, but you made the point that we must have confidence in the Chair in order to deal with the business of the House in an impartial way.

Mr. Evans: What is this, a conversation?

Mr. Mayer: I agree with that and I think all Hon. Members would agree with that. I can read the Standing Orders too. I believe you read Standing Order 33 from the Chair, but I will read it again:

When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who first rose in his or her place; but a motion may be made that any Member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate.

My point of privilege is that yesterday afternoon in the debate the Speaker—

Mr. Evans: You are out of order.

An Hon. Member: That happened yesterday.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member will be aware that his point of privilege falls into a category similar to that of the Hon. Member for Vegreville.

Mr. Mayer: No, no.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the matter arises out of yesterday's proceedings—

Mr. Mayer: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then I will hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. Mayer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It arises out of what happened I suspect less than a half hour ago in the House. My concern is that there is a conflict. I have to—

An Hon. Member: You suspect?

Mr. Mayer: —relate to what happened yesterday in order to point out the conflict I see with what happened today.

Yesterday, when the motion was put by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), Madam Speaker allowed some subsequent debate on that motion. She recognized the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) and she recognized the Hon. Government House Leader. Today, you did not allow debate; you put the motion forthwith. I submit that according to the Standing Orders—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member—

Mr. Mayer: Let me conclude, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has made a very serious accusation. This is that a Member be heard.

Mr. Mayer: That is right.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate is not permitted on that a Member be heard. The Standing Orders say "to be put forthwith without debate".

Some Hon. Members: One o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

SHIPBUILDING

NEED FOR MULTI-LEVEL MEETING TO IMPROVE SITUATION IN INDUSTRY

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, this week, the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association issued, through its Chairman, a press release on the disturbing situation in the shipbuilding industry. According to figures provided by the Association, after the 9 per cent cut in the Shipbuilding Industry Assistance Program, 100 commercial ships built abroad have been licensed in Canada, while only 51 orders for commercial ships were placed in this country. The Chairman admitted that the only short-term orders were placed by the Canadian Government, adding that this was only a partial solution to the present problems in the shipbuilding industry.

Yesterday in Quebec City, I attended a conference on recovery of the shipbuilding industry in Quebec. The comments of all speakers were rather calm and serene, in the circumstances. I seconded a proposal by Pierre Fortier, a Liberal Member of the National Assembly, to have a federal-provincial meeting in the near future to consider possible solutions to the problem. Actually, I would favour a multipartite meeting of representatives of the Government of Canada, the Government of Quebec, the municipal governments concerned and management and labour. This kind of consultation would certainly be a step towards a comprehensive response to the disastrous situation in the shipbuilding industry.

STATUS OF WOMEN

CONSEQUENCES OF STEREOTYPING

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, the level of poverty among Canadian women is unacceptable and the rate is steadily increasing. Of the 500,000 elderly poor in Canada, fully 350,000 of them are female. Inflation in recent years has eroded their incomes and impoverished their retirement. Working women earn less than 50 per cent of the wages of working males.

The problem, in part, is culturally derived from stereotyping. A recent Canadian study demonstrates that school age females still harbour many myths about working women. An astounding 80 per cent of school age females expressed the belief that a university degree would decrease their chances of marriage. More than half expressed the belief that children of working mothers became juvenile delinquents.

I therefore suggest that government programs of questionable value or marginal success be eliminated, or have their budgets reduced, so as to allow the available means for a national children's TV program to be broadcast in all regions, with an inter-mix of both official languages, with the objective of stimulating curiosity and reason, enhancing tolerance, and broadening the sex roles for both young females and males, putting language training and role shaping in concert with the most compatible age for such learning.

PARLIAMENT

RECORDING THE HISTORY OF THE THIRTY-SECOND PARLIAMENT

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Madam Speaker, the first session of the Thirty-second Parliament will end in a few days. Historians will judge it as perhaps the most profound since Confederation. Indeed, the session has evolved a new federation as the nation has become fully sovereign. Whosoever writes the history of this session carries on an enormous responsibility. John Ruskin wrote:

> The only history worth reading is . . . the history of what was done and seen, heard out of the mouths of the men who did and saw.

Every Member of this House, therefore, carries the burden of having to record that history as they "did and saw". I challenge the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the former Prime Minister (Mr. Clark), the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent), and in fact, every Member of this Thirty-second Parliament, to record in writing their emotions and experiences of this session. That challenge goes to you too, Madam Speaker. For months now, I have been writing mine in a document called "Parliament and Patriation—The Triumph of Unilateralism". It is a challenging undertaking. This session of Parliament has been truly exciting and historic.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

CONTAMINATED WATER SYSTEMS IN NATIVE COMMUNITIES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, the Fifth Report of the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development, tabled June 1, 1982, drew the attention of the House to serious water and sewage problems in Indian communities across Canada. The Committee recommended that a special capital fund be created to correct these problems. A year and a half have gone by and very little has happened. Indian people continue to suffer poor health because of impure water.

The Kingsclear band in New Brunswick is a case in point. For the last nine days the primary school has been closed because of a contaminated water system. The iron count is nearly three times the permissible level. The water runs black, and carries an offensive odour. Indian Affairs advised the band to flush the water system three or four times a month. Flushing means that for a few days the water runs brown instead of black. Several children have developed a rash, and the community hesitates to use the water for washing. Many families now carry their water from two nearby springs.

These primitive and subnormal conditions should not exist in Canada in 1983. The Government must accept its responsibility and make funds available now so that Kingsclear and other Indian communities can have decent water.

THE PRESS

LACK OF PRESS COUNCILS IN MANITOBA AND SASKATCHEWAN

Hon. Jim Fleming (York West): Madam Speaker, I seek the floor today to address the issue of press councils, an important issue because the print media in most Canadian cities have no direct daily print competition.

When the Kent Report was released, only three Provinces had press councils. In Ontario, less than half of the daily newspapers were members. Since the Government's proposal for a national advisory council on newspapers was made, there has been progress. In 1982 the Ontario Press Council had 17 members; today there are 34 dailies belonging to it. Equally encouraging is the establishment of press councils in British Columbia and the Atlantic provinces.

The only part of Canada where voluntary press councils are still not available is Saskatchewan and Manitoba. I use this occasion to urge the daily press in those two Provinces to act. Without such a mechanism, individual Canadians must deal with their daily newspaper at the benevolence of the publisher or editor or, in the extreme, through a costly trip to court. Such courses of action are not satisfactory when the print media have such a considerable impact on the public, and when so much of the media is in the hands of so few owners.

I reassert that the proposed national advisory council is completely independent of government and remains a potential means of redress for Canadians where advisory councils do not exist. If a point were to come when a national advisory council would no longer be necessary, surely that would be not only when we have voluntary press councils in all Provinces but when those councils are clearly free from potential influence from the publishers, both as the prime or major source of funding and appointments.

A free press has nothing to fear from independent press councils—

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

WITHHOLDING OF PROPORTION OF GRAIN EXPORT PRICES

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Madam Speaker, the nation as a whole, especially Canada's grain farmers, should not have to tolerate the Government's decision to hold back on average 25.2 per cent of grain producers' money from export sales. The Government, through the Canadian Wheat Board, is holding from producers 17.7 per cent of the export price wheat, 29.3 per cent of the export price of Durum wheat, 26.8 per cent for feed barley, 27.9 per cent for malting barley, and 24.4 per cent for feed oats. This amount, if multiplied by the number of tonnes exported this year, will result in a total pool account of approximately $1.1 billion by the end of this crop year.

This is totally intolerable and inexcusable at any time, but especially now when farmers are in such financial difficulty. The vast majority of farmers burdened with loan payments will be forced throughout the year to borrow money at rates of 14 per cent to 16 per cent, costing them additional millions of dollars. All of this will occur even though the Wheat Board can borrow at one-quarter per cent below prime. Therefore there can be no logic for these present holdbacks and the low initial grain prices.

• (1410)

One can only explain this by suggesting the Government is playing politics with the grain producers' money. It intends to withhold producers' money until it feels an election is imminent. The Liberals then will attempt to trick Canadians into thinking they are being good to farmers by giving back to producers the money that is already rightfully theirs.

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

POLITICAL PARTIES

INVASION OF GRENADA—POSITION OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): On Tuesday, Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mulroney) was pressing the Government to state a position on the U.S. led invasion of Grenada. It sounded clearly as though he was being supportive of the invasion. When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said the Government would like more information before making a decision, the Leader of the Opposition suggested this information had already been provided by President Reagan in a television report on Tuesday morning.

That was Tuesday, Madam Speaker. Yesterday, a day later, the Opposition external affairs critic was singing a different tune. In comments to reporters the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) said that the Conservatives were trying to be as neutral as possible on the invasion.

"We're trying to be more neutral . . ." he is quoted as saying by Canadian Press. "Let's get the evidence first," he stated.

What a difference a day makes, especially in the world of Tory policy making. We may well ask just who speaks for the Conservative Party on such serious and sensitive matters. Is it the Party Leader who wants us to support the invasion, or is it the official external affairs critic who says we should wait and see? Even worse, is the Leader of the Opposition shooting from the hip, or is he just ready to take a position for Canada on such important matters on the basis of what President Reagan says or does?

AGRICULTURE

FORMATION OF FARM WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, there have been numerous responses in the farm community to the current economic crisis in the agricultural industry. One of these has been from a women's activist group called Concerned Farm Women. Based in Bruce and Grey Counties, their expression of concern for the farming community exemplifies the traditional presence of agrarian reform groups throughout the histories of these two Ontario counties.

This farm women's lobby group was formed in response to the debilitating effects of high interest rates and other economic consequences of the recession. In an effort to preserve their communities, these farm women rallied together for their common cause. One of their many activities was to take on a project about farm women, to determine and document the extent of financial and psychological stress among farm families. The result of this project is the publication of a book entitled "The Farmer Takes a Wife".

This book documents the stress resulting from the recent crisis in the agricultural economy. Lack of profit from low commodity prices and high input costs, and other financial concerns were cited as the main factors contributing to stress on the farm. Higher degrees of stress were evident where financial problems were extreme. Specific financial problems causing stress included inability to pay the interest on bank loans; the impending possibility of losing all or part of one's farm; machinery purchases and repairs, and other farm expenditures.

The book concludes that farm women's priorities continue to focus on the traditional concerns for family and farm but that their work is now more complicated with the new challenges of financial stress facing them today.

Having defined the extent of the difficulties, Concerned Farm Women, with other—

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—MANAGEMENT OF NEWS BY UNITED STATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, the people of the United States are being told only the part of the story on the illegal invasion of Grenada that the Reagan administration wants them to know. It is called managed news.

The U.S. media are being outrageously deficient and negligent in reporting the whole story as it develops. For example, during the past night CBS Nightwatch presented mainly the statements and views of the U.S. Government and of individuals who support this immoral action. Not one word was broadcast of the objections by South American countries such as Colombia, Panama, Peru, Ecuador, Venezuela, Guyana, and Costa Rica.

No mention was made of objections by Spain, Italy, Sweden, Denmark, Greece, Portugal, West Germany, Japan, China or Canada.

There was not a word to the people of the United States that Grenada is an independent member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, like Canada.

This U.S. intervention ranks in the same category as intervention in Vietnam, the Dominican Republic, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Afghanistan.

The U.S. Government has even barred its own reporters from entering Grenada to report on-the-scene events.

American Free Radio has broadcast to the world for decades to tell us about freedom and democracy, including freedom and responsibility of the press.

The question is who is going to tell the American people?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—UNITED STATES REPLY TO CANADIAN REPRESENTATIONS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, in regard to the situation in Grenada, I want to deal with the reported reply given by the Deputy Secretary of State of the United States to our ambassador in Washington when our ambassador complained that Canada had not been consulted prior to the action taken in Grenada.

For the Prime Minister's benefit I quote the reply attributed by Mr. Gotlieb to Mr. Kenneth Dam, Deputy Secretary of State. Canada was not consulted, according to Mr. Dam, "because of concerns on the security side that the invasion shouldn't be too widely known".

In view of the grave implications of Mr. Dam's statement for on-going Canada-U.S. relationships, has the Prime Minister communicated with President Reagan or other senior officers of his Government to obtain clarification of this rather remarkable statement?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition calls it a remarkable statement. I think he has made some rather remarkable statements himself in the last couple of days. I would add to his astonishment the fact that, according to Margaret Thatcher, Prime Minister of Great Britain, she had not been consulted either. Presumably the United States did not find it advisable to consult her, or to consult Canada.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, I want to assure the Prime Minister that as a Canadian citizen I take no pleasure in reading that kind of statement that was on the front page of the newspapers today. I do not have to assure the Prime Minister of that.

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF UNITED STATES REPLY

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): In view of the importance of it, may I repeat, Canada was not consulted, according to Mr. Dam, "because of concerns on the security side that the invasion shouldn't be too widely known". I ask the Prime Minister, in the interests of the Government of Canada, if he has consulted with the Leader of the American Government or one of his leading officers to obtain clarification of that.

It seems to me that this kind of statement should not be left on the record unchallenged. I should like to know, for the record, if the Prime Minister has communicated with the President to obtain that clarification?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the answer is that on that point I have not communicated with the President. I have been in correspondence with the President on other matters, but not on that point. I must say that I share the astonishment of the Leader of the Opposition. He is quoting a senior officer of the State Department as having said that. I do not know the implication of that. I do not know the impact of that. I just know that the United States apparently chose not to consult Canada, not to consult Britain and, presumably, not to consult France either, although I do know for a fact that the eastern Caribbean countries had agreed among themselves that Canada should be consulted. Something apparently happened in the urgency to act that they did not consult us.

There was a communication to Canada at seven o'clock or 7.30 on Monday evening—apparently the same kind of communication went to Great Britain—where we learned that the United States and the other members of the task force or invasion force were saying to us that various options were being considered for rescuing the American citizens on the island.

I could add, Madam Speaker, that when I learned of that on Monday night, when the Minister phoned me back on Monday night, I immediately said that we should tell the Americans that they should envisage every way of rescuing or making sure their citizens were secure before contemplating an invasion. That message in fact was not delivered because, by the time it was ready to be delivered the next morning, the invasion had already taken place.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, I do know that we were supposed to have been consulted. I have been told this by Prime Minister Seaga of Jamaica, who phoned me to apologize for the fact that the person who was supposed to notify Canada had not done so. That person was not the President of the United States. It was one of the other political leaders of the area. The same thing may have happened in the case of Great Britain. I have read in the dispatches that the opposition in Great Britain is chiding Prime Minister Thatcher precisely because she had not been notified, either. Was it for reasons of security? I do not know the reason Margaret Thatcher is being given.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER CHALLENGE REPLY

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I believe it is clear from the reply of the Prime Minister that he also reads very serious consequences into the statement, because as a NATO ally and as a NORAD partner of the United States of America our relationship must be based on mutual trust at all times. That occasionally requires us to resolve doubt in favour of our greatest friend, neighbour, and ally, the United States of America.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: This is a very disturbing reply, having regard to the unique degree of trust and confidentiality which must exist between our allies. May I ask the Prime Minister if the Government intends to allow this statement by the Under Secretary to remain, or will he challenge the statement and advise the House of the manner in which he would propose to do that?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am not challenging the statement, nor do I agree with the Leader of the Opposition when he said on Tuesday in this House that President Reagan had explained everything he needed to know in his statement on Tuesday. I believe there are a lot of things we have to know, Madam Speaker, which we are trying to find out. The instance raised by the Leader of the Opposition is one of the things which puzzles us. However, I will tell you, Madam Speaker, that there are a lot of pieces to the puzzle which we cannot put together.

I tell the Leader of the Opposition again that I was phoned by Prime Minister Seaga after the event, apologizing for the fact that the person who was supposed to communicate with me had not done so. I also know, I repeat, as is apparent from the debate in Great Britain, that Mrs. Thatcher had not been informed, either, of the invasion. It is apparent that most of the allies had not been informed of the invasion. It is something in which a few participating parties were involved, but no one from the outside.

It is quite conceivable, Madam Speaker, that the United States and the other participating partners did not want anyone to know. It is possible also, as I indicated, that they wanted us to know and that the persons who were supposed to contact us did not do so. I repeat, it was not the United States which was entrusted with letting us know of the invasion, it was another Caribbean leader, and the message did not come through.

FOREKNOWLEDGE OF BRITISH AUTHORITIES

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister who has left the impression with the House that perhaps the British were not informed, as he was not informed. Would the Prime Minister indicate if he is aware of the fact that Sir Geoffrey Howe stated in the British House of Commons that:

> Britain had been told last Friday that the Organization of East Caribbean States might be asking for military help in invading Grenada.
> The next day those States decided to form a multinational force and the United States informed Britain that a request for assistance had been received in Washington.
> Sir Geoffrey said that on Saturday night Britain had been told by Washington that the United States would proceed "very cautiously."

Would the Prime Minister indicate if any of that type of information was conveyed equally to the Canadian Government?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it will depend on what the Hon. Member means when he says, "proceed cautiously". That is the whole point. "Proceed cautiously" with what? I suggest that there was no firm knowledge conveyed to Canada that "proceeding cautiously" would involve a disembarkment of American and other troops on the shores of a sovereign country. There were all kinds of hypotheses put forward.

We do know—we were informed—that several of the eastern Caribbean leaders were quite indignant and incensed about the events going on in Grenada, particularly about the murder of Prime Minister Bishop. These views were conveyed to us. Some were talking that we should act physically. Some were talking that we should even try to get groups together to restore order. However, I am saying that, as far as we know, the decision to invade was not taken, as advised by the United States, until some time, perhaps, late Sunday or during the day of Monday. I do not even know at what hour that decision was conveyed to the Caribbean leaders.

I do know that in that period of time, between the Sunday and the invasion on Tuesday, a message was supposed to come to me, personally, about the invasion, asking my views about it, even asking if we would be prepared to participate. That message never came to me because the call was was never put through by the responsible political leader.

POSSIBILITY OF COMMONWEALTH PEACEKEEPING FORCE

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, would the Prime Minister indicate to the House three things? First, who was the responsible political leader who did not put the call through? Second, in view of the fact that the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States has asked the Commonwealth Secretariat for a peace-keeping force to take control of Grenada—assuming that security can be forthcoming—until such time as an election may be held, would the Prime Minister indicate if any request has been made to Canada to join in that Commonwealth peace-keeping force? Third, what would be our response in the event such a request were made? Would we willingly join?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I have sought the answer to part of that question, to wit, whether the request had been made to us directly. So far as I am able to find out, no such request has been made to us. We know of Secretary General Ramphal's suggestion, or appeal. However, I believe it was made generally to the Commonwealth countries. I have myself been attempting to communicate with certain Commonwealth leaders to explore the same type of idea, Madam Speaker.

If an election is to be held after the invading troops leave, then presumably some kind of Commonwealth force would be required. I am offering, subject to the approval of Cabinet, to participate in such an observation force on an election.

If, Madam Speaker, and I hope it is not the case, but if the hostilities are prolonged—and we have no certain information on that, either, but it appears that the invaders are meeting with considerably more resistance than they thought—I would even go further and suggest that perhaps we could call for a truce, ask all foreign nationals to leave the island of Grenada, and then the Commonwealth could send observers in to ensure that that truce is respected. This is a strange way of making this suggestion public, Madam Speaker. I am trying to get views of other Commonwealth leaders on that, but I feel it is appropriate in these circumstances, because of the great confusion surrounding the whole operation, that I take Parliament into my confidence in this matter.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—INFORMATION PROVIDED BY PRIME MINISTER OF BARBADOS

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, I was going to address this question to the Prime Minister but I will ask it of the Minister who has otherwise been fielding questions on the Grenadian situation.

I understand from External Affairs that there was a meeting last Friday in Barbados between officials in our Commission in Barbados and Mr. Adams, the Prime Minister of Barbados. At that meeting Prime Minister Adams said there was a very strong likelihood of a U.S. led invasion of Grenada. Was this information passed on to Ottawa? I am told it was the Minister for External Relations, who has disappeared from the scene in the last few days, who received this information. If so, why was no immediate action taken on Friday or Saturday to remove Canadians from Grenada? Or was the Government, with advance knowledge of an invasion, deliberately failing to evacuate Canadians in order not to undermine the United States rationale for carrying out an invasion, namely, to save its nationals?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I apologize to the Hon. Member that the Prime Minister has stepped out to take a call from Mrs. Thatcher. He will be returning shortly.

Relating to the Hon. Member's question, the premise is inaccurate. It is true that our High Commissioner in Barbados,

Mr. Noble Power, met with Prime Minister Adams last Friday. In the course of that discussion Prime Minister Adams mentioned the possibility of the Eastern Caribbean states considering military action and that it would have to be discussed at a subsequent meeting of those states. He made no mention of a decision for an invasion, nor did he make any mention of any participation by the United States.

The accuracy of his recollection of that meeting and the report he gave on it is confirmed by a meeting High Commissioner Power had yesterday with Prime Minister Adams in which the Prime Minister apologized, through Mr. Power, to our Prime Minister for there not being prior consultations with Canada.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, the Minister has not given us the assurance I think this House needs, that the Minister for External Relations was in fact informed of the meeting and the speculation—if it was only speculation, because I understood it was much more than that—that there was going to be an invasion.

REMOVAL OF CANADIAN CITIZENS FROM GRENADA

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, to the same Minister, I am particularly worried about all Canadians there and about the six CUSO workers—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I really have to ask the Hon. Member to come to her questions more quickly. This is the supplementary question and it looks like it is going to be as long as the first one.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, I was just coming to the question. Has the Minister any information about whether the United States has at last stopped stalling Canada's attempts with a Hercules aircraft to evacuate the Canadians there?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I say to the Hon. Member, through you, that I have no evidence or indication that the U.S. at any time has been stalling in relation to our rescue operation. We have been anxious that Canadians be brought out at the first possible time it was safe to do so. Indeed, our consular official who travelled yesterday to Grenada returned and said it was not safe to move Canadians from the Ross Point Inn to the airport at that time because of the areas in which fighting was still occurring. I subsequently explored the possibility of the use of American helicopters to move our people to the airport.

During the night, when I received a call from General Sturgess, who is in charge of our military mission in Washington, we received permission for the Hercules aircraft to go in and take the people out as soon as they could be safely removed to the airport.

While I cannot vouch for the absolute authenticity of the latest word, I have just been handed a note which says that the High Commissioner in Barbados has phoned and that Canadians are now being assembled at Point Salines and the Hercules has departed Barbados for Grenada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: I would add that, in the meantime, seven Canadians elsewhere in the island, and we do not have their identities as yet, have apparently been evacuated by American aircraft to South Carolina. There may be several Canadians still in the St. George's area and we are doing everything possible under the military conditions, which are quite different than have been portrayed in the last day or two, to make effective contact with them.

Miss Jewett: Given the length of the Minister's replies, it does show the need for an emergency debate in this House.

FATE OF GRENADIAN LEADERS

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, does the Minister have any information at all on the fate of government leaders in Grenada, particularly the fate of Bernard Coard, and can he give us any information about the puppet Government the United States is organizing in Barbados—

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Miss Jewett: —for Grenada?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I have no information at this time relating to the fate of Bernard Coard or other government leaders on the island, although I do have a report that contact has been made with the Governor General, the details of which are unknown.

Again I want to emphasize to the Hon. Member that the conditions on the island are such, particularly in built-up areas, that there are far more people with arms opposing the invasion than had been anticipated, and communications as well as movement are extremely difficult. Under those circumstances it is not surprising that it is not yet possible to have information on the whereabouts of former government leaders. I have no information whatsoever with reference to the possible formation of a new government.

REPORTED REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FROM GOVERNOR GENERAL OF GRENADA

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is for the same Minister who will know that in a parliamentary democracy the highest constitutional authority is the Governor General. Given that Prime Minister Eugenia Charles, Prime Minister of Dominica, indicated that the original request for assistance this past weekend in fact originated with the Governor General of the island, has the Government changed its view of the event?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, we have no confirmation of the fact that Governor General Scoon initiated an invitation for an invasion. I would only say its credibility is, I suppose, somewhat in question because of the fact it had not been mentioned in preceding days. However, I do not exclude that possibility, and we will continue to make inquiries in that regard.

● (1440)

Mr. Bosley: Madam Speaker, the Minister will know that the reason that was at least claimed for no earlier knowledge of this information was that Mr. Scoon was under house arrest and that his life was in risk if this information came out.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Bosley: Madam Speaker, Members opposite claim that the Governor General of Grenada was under house arrest by the Americans. That just shows their lack of knowledge of what is going on. My question, Madam Speaker, to the Minister is—

An Hon. Member: It's cheap.

Mr. Bosley: It is not cheap, Madam Speaker. It is the Members opposite who are being cheap.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. member ask his question?

Mr. Bosley: Madam Speaker, you are obsolutely correct.

GOVERNMENT POLICY INQUIRY

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): To paraphrase what the Prime Minister said earlier this week, is it Canada's policy to support the requests of Governors General of Commonwealth countries when they ask Commonwealth countries to come to their aid?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I shall begin by dealing with the first part of the Hon. Member's question in which he said the reason that the information was not communicated in the last two days was because the Governor General was under house arrest. If he had communicated an invitation to the Americans to undertake such an invasion, then, as I was suggesting, it was obviously in the interest of the Americans to have made public the fact that they had received such an invitation, and I would find it surprising that they had not done so.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: In relation to the second part of the Hon. Member's question, the question is hypothetical and obviously would depend upon the circumstances. Those circumstances would be judged by any sensible Government on the basis of the merit therein.

SAFETY OF GOVERNOR GENERAL OF GRENADA

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, could the Minister please explain to the House how the Government of Canada, recognizing that the then Prime Minister of the country was shot once he was released from house arrest, can maintain that the Governor General of the island was not at some risk from the people in control of the island?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I am not sure if the Hon. Member is not listening or whether he is desperately trying to find grounds for a supplementary question. I have never at any time said that the Governor General was not under some degree of risk. He may well have been. That is not at all relevant to the matters which we have been discussing. Perhaps the Hon. Member would like to check the "blues".

INCOME TAX

DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF TORONTO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MUSICIANS

Mr. Jim Peterson (Willowdale): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue.

[English]

A recent ruling by Revenue Canada requires that musicians with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra be taxed as employees rather than as independent contractors or professionals. Liberal Members of Parliament from Toronto have been deeply concerned about this particular ruling, and the matter is now urgent. In order to meet Revenue Canada's deadline, the bank would have to start today to redesign its payroll deduction systems, and the orchestra's annual meeting is to be held at four o'clock this afternoon. Can the Minister offer to the orchestra or its musicians any hope that this ruling will be reconsidered?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for his question. I would like to point out that yesterday afternoon, I discussed this matter with some of his colleagues, including the Members for Scarborough Centre and Mississauga North—

[English]

After those discussions, I asked officials of my Department to stop any actions related to the ruling made by the district office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Bussières: Madam Speaker, I also want to inform the House that I will be meeting with representatives of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra on Tuesday, November 1—

Mr. Crombie: A supplementary question—

Madam Speaker: If the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North does not take the floor, I will give it to someone else.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

APPOINTMENT OF VICE-PRESIDENTS—PROPOSED INCREASE IN CANADIAN CONTENT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Communications. In the Minister's policy statement of several days ago he set out a very laudable objective for CBC television which is, that within a relatively short period of time, the CBC should provide 80 per cent Canadian content during prime time. However, the Minister made it clear that there would be no more money forthcoming for that kind of increased production and suggested that the money could be raised by the CBC through increased efficiency, which we assume would mean the laying off of another 500 employees. Given the fact that CBC has announced the appointment of six new vice-presidents, would the Minister explain how CBC can achieve that goal without more money, and how it can become more efficient by firing employees and appointing more vice-presidents?

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I can inform the Hon. Member that I did indeed mention at least four ways in which the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation could have access to more funds, including the Hon. Member's suggestion for better management of the CBC which today has a budget of $850 million. I would like to add: giving CBC senior management an opportunity to reallocate resources and make its international sales operations more aggressive than they have been in the past. In doing so, they could release funds that would give them access to another fund we established as of July 1 of this year, which would enable the CBC to purchase nearly $115 million worth of new productions made by private Canadian producers. There is also a possibility for the CBC to make co-productions with major French and European television networks and with the private sector in general. All this would help produce a very substantial amount of new programming in this country.

[English]

LOCALE OF PRODUCTION DECISION PROCESS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Going back as far as the Fowler Commission, every study that has been done of the CBC recommended that more production decisions should be made at the regional level rather than in Ottawa, yet in the last couple of weeks we have seen the resignation of the senior person in charge of CBC productions, Mr. Herrndorf, obviously because more of those responsibilities are being shifted to Ottawa. How can the Minister square this increased bureaucracy in Ottawa with the recommendation that production decisions be made at the local and regional levels?

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, it goes without saying that a network like the CBC must have strong regional production. The only way we can create a national network is through strong regional productions which are then fed into a national network.

Regarding the substance of the Hon. Member's question, he may have noticed that one of the measures taken very early on by the new President of the CBC was to appoint a new Regional President responsible for ensuring that the regions have access to senior management in Ottawa and can report directly to the head office in Ottawa, thus emphasizing the importance of regional resources.

INCOME TAX

REQUEST FOR MORATORIUM ON TAX RULINGS AFFECTING ARTISTS

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. I would first like to thank him for changing his mind since Monday and placing a moratorium on the tax ruling from his Department with respect to the musicians of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crombie: Thank you very much. I had raised in the House previously a question requesting that similar action be taken on behalf of the artists and painters of our country. At that time the Minister also indicated that he could not do so. However, I would like to ask him today if, in light of his decision with respect to the musicians, he would reconsider his response and place a moratorium on the tax rulings affecting artists so that they can now enjoy the kind of tax regime which will allow them to be creative again.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, unfortunately, I can not consider both cases in the same light.

When early this week, the Hon. Member asked his question about the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, he pointed out that there were differences between various orchestras in Canada. For instance, I know that at the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra and in Vancouver and Halifax, musicians are considered to be in an employee-employer relationship with the orchestra and are therefore subject to payroll deductions such as unemployment insurance premiums and Canada Pension Plan, which does not apply to the case that led to a ruling by the Department, a ruling, now suspended, with respect to the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, nor, for that matter, to the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

In view of the different treatment of some symphony orchestras in Canada, I have decided to suspend the ruling and to review the contracts and determine how orchestras are dealt with as far as the employer-employee relationship is concerned.

If we look at the matter of deduction of expenses for other artists, including painters, engravers and so forth, the situation is quite different, since it concerns the provisions of the Income Tax Act for deduction of expenses incurred to produce a work of art, in relation to the sale of the work in question, and I feel that since these cases are not related, I cannot deal with them in the same way.

ENERGY

IMPORTATION OF VENEZUELAN OIL—SECURITY OF SEA LANES

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The current crisis in Grenada has raised some serious doubt about the security of major sea routes in the region, especially from the point of view of the importation of oil into Canada from the whole region and the possibility that that importation might be jeopardized. Given that the Atlantic Provinces and Quebec together import approximately 100,000 barrels of oil a day from Venezuela alone, has the Government assessed the implications for Canada of any threat to the security of these crucial Caribbean sea lanes as a result of current or potential de-stabilization in the general region of Grenada?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I do not think there are any major problems in this respect, because Canada's sources of oil supplies are very diversified, and if there were a communications problem between Venezuela and Canada, I am sure we could find alternative sources for the oil supplies needed in the Maritimes and Quebec.

[English]

GOVERNMENT PLANS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, notwithstanding the answer the Minister just provided to the House, in the event that the Caribbean sea routes for oil shipments from Venezuela, for example, to eastern Canada are jeopardized by the instability in the region, however remote that possibility might be—although many experts claim it is real—is the Government planning any contingency measures? If so, what are they?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I do not think we need be overly concerned about this problem. I wish to thank the Hon. Member for raising the matter, and we shall take appropriate action, but as far as I am concerned, I do not think there is a major problem, nevertheless I will raise the matter with my officials as soon as possible.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—PRIME MINISTER'S CONVERSATION WITH BRITISH PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I understand that the Prime Minister just had a conversation with the Prime Minister of Great Britain. Is he now in a position to tell the House specifically about the nature of that conversation? More specifically, did he discuss with her any of the possible options that might be taken by Commonwealth countries concerning the extremely serious situation in Grenada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, at this stage I would think it advisable not to take the House into my confidence about what I said to Prime Minister Thatcher or what she said to me.

Mr. Broadbent: I would assume from what the Prime Minister said earlier in Question Period, however, that he will at some point take the House of Commons into his confidence.

HIGH COMMISSIONER'S INFORMATION PRECEDING INVASION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I wish to return to a question that was asked earlier concerning the possibility that, as early as last Friday, the Canadian High Commissioner knew about the possibility of an invasion being one of the serious options under consideration. If this was known, was it transmitted to a member of the Cabinet or a senior member of External Affairs in Ottawa and, if either an official or Minister of the Crown was informed of this possibility, why was action not taken then to evacuate Canadians?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, there was information conveyed to the Government about the Friday meeting between our High Commissioner and the eastern Caribbean heads of government when they met in Barbados. But that was in the context of the question we were then discussing, about whether or not we should extend recognition to the new regime.

The House will recall that the then Acting Minister said that we were consulting other countries in the area. It was in the framework of these consultations that certain statements of eastern Caribbean state leaders were made to the effect that something should be done, and the idea of having some physical intervention was expressed by one of them. However, I know of no planning and, according to all of our information, certainly there was no involvement of the United States at that point.

I repeat what I said earlier. I think the decision to have an actual invading force was taken some time between late Sunday and late Monday. That was well after the events to which the Hon. Member is referring.

TRANSMITTAL OF INFORMATION TO CANADIAN AUTHORITIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, if it is the case that the High Commissioner of Canada was provided with a variety of options last Friday, including the possibility of invasion, would the Prime Minister tell the House if this was conveyed to the Government of Canada over the weekend? If so, in addition to dealing with the problems of Canadians residing in Grenada, why did the Government of Canada during that weekend not send back its opposition, in the strongest possible terms, to any possible invasion?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, because the first real news that we had of the invasion was Tuesday morning. The first suspicion that we had that an invasion might take place was Monday night. The moment that I heard about it I did ask for that message to be sent.

What happened on Friday was not, as the Hon. Member said in misquoting me, that a variety of options, including invading, was put to us. There was a group of leaders who were expressing their strong feelings about the events that had taken place in Grenada. There was no plan for invasion, nor was that option put to us. But, as a result of those events in the preceding week, we did take steps to try to ensure the safe evacuation, if need be, of Canadian nationals who were in Grenada. That much we did attempt to do.

The House was told by the Acting Secretary of State how our attempts to have a LIAT charter plane evacuate Canadians were frustrated by the elapse of time and hesitation of some of the authorities involved in the Caribbean area.

EMPLOYMENT

EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT'S JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS IN CALGARY

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. According to his employment creation formulas, for one program he uses data that is 54 months out of date, while in another the date is 18 months out of date. In each riding of the city of Calgary he creates 5.5 jobs for every 8,000 unemployed. Is it the Minister's opinion that that is an adequate response to unemployment in the City of Calgary?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think that is virtually the same question that the Hon. Member asked me last week. If he will check Hansard, he will find that the answer is exactly the same today.

SUGGESTION THAT LOTTERY ALLOCATE JOBS

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, it has been suggested by a constituent that the Minister conduct a lottery for those 5.5 jobs for 8,000 people. Will the Minister fund a lottery to choose the 5.5 people who get a job?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Personally, Madam Speaker, I am not very inclined to lotteries. I am not certain that the hon. gentleman means his suggestion seriously.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

INELIGIBILITY OF NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERMEN

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On September 21 the Minister indicated that he was looking at options to deal with the problems faced by Newfoundland inshore fishermen as a result of a catch failure. There are over 2,000 fishermen involved. The Minister has been contacted by the fishermens' union and by the Newfoundland Government. Has he now examined the options? What action is the Minister prepared to take in view of the fact that these fishermen do not qualify for unemployment insurance?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, that is, in contrast to the previous question, a very sensible one. I have been, as the Hon. Member has suggested, examining the situation. I have asked for a set of proposals in relation to it. I had hoped to have those recommendations today. I expect to have them tomorrow or very early next week. Once I have seen them and been able to chose among the various options which my officials have suggested to me, we will be able to make an announcement very quickly.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—INVASION BY MULTINATIONAL FORCE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I rise on House business. Some consultation has taken place. Would it be possible to obtain the permission of the House by way of unanimous consent to allow the question you had before you in the name of the Leader of this Party requesting an emergency debate on the situation in Grenada to be put? As you know, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) filed proper notice yesterday. Unfortunately, the matter was not dealt with. He has since filed notice today requesting that the question of Grenada be dealt with by the House of Commons by way of an emergency debate. Could you seek the unanimous consent of the House to deal with that matter now rather than in its proper order, so that we could determine whether or not such an emergency debate might well take place?

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, on this side of the House we are most certainly agreeable to the Chair considering forthwith the request made under Standing Order 30. We give our consent as requested by the New Democratic Party.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, we too would agree to the request of the Leader of the New Democratic Party. Further, we would be prepared to go so far as to relieve the Chair of the necessity of ruling on the urgency of the matter and agree to give consent now to an emergency debate on the motion tonight at eight o'clock, when it will occur in any event.

Madam Speaker: As we have unanimous consent it is so ordered that there will be an emergency debate upon a motion to be moved by the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent). Since there is unanimous consent for an emergency debate at eight o'clock, perhaps the House will agree also that the Hon. Member for Oshawa give the House a brief statement so the House will know exactly what the subject matter of that debate will be.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I think the most concise way of giving the House a statement of the subject-matter would be for me to move the motion, which following the events that have transpired during the past 24 hours, has changed somewhat in nature.

I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett), the adjournment of the House under Standing Order 30 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely: the invasion of Grenada, an independent member of the Commonwealth whose Queen is also Queen of Canada, by a multinational force led by the United States of America, an action which violates the principles of international law, contravenes the Charter of the United Nations, and, according to a Minister of the Crown as revealed in the House of Commons yesterday, has resulted in endangering the lives of Canadians; an action about which the United States in extraordinary unconcern did not even inform the Government of Canada.

PRIVILEGE

MR. MAZANKOWSKI—APPLICATION OF S.O. 33

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. At the outset I would like to say this. Since the point I want to make does come close to a ruling that was made yesterday, I want to tell you in advance that I am in no way intending to reflect upon a decision of the Chair. However, having said that, I do firmly believe that I have a bona fide and legitimate question of privilege, particularly after having had an opportunity to review yesterday's proceedings.

My breach of privilege, Madam Speaker, I believe occurred at Routine Proceedings at page 28349 of Hansard. Briefly, there is absolutely no doubt in my mind that I rose at precisely the same time as, if not before, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). I think that is confirmed by the official report of the House of Commons debates, namely Hansard. I can say to you that we really have no other official record to go by. There is really nothing else to go by but the record of Hansard.

I want to quote precisely what happened. At page 28349 we find:

MADAM SPEAKER: Motions.

AN HON. MEMBER: A point of order—

MR. MAZANKOWSKI: A point of order.

MADAM SPEAKER: The Minister of Transport.

MR. AXWORTHY: Madam Speaker, I move—

MR. MAZANKOWSKI: A point of order.

MR. NIELSEN: A point of order.

MR. EPP: A point of order.

MR. MCKNIGHT: A point of order.

MADAM SPEAKER: The Hon. Member for Vegreville.

HON. DON MAZANKOWSKI (VEGREVILLE): I move:

That the Hon. Member for Yukon be now heard, Madam Speaker.

MR. PINARD: A point of order.

AN HON. MEMBER: There is a motion on the floor.

MR. PINARD: A point of order.

I would then like to refer to your words, Madam Speaker, at page 28357 for October 26, 1983, prior to the vote. You stated in your observations, I guess would be a fair way of putting it:

What has to be clear and what I reaffirmed before the House is that several Members rose at the same time—

If you go back and look at the actual transpiration of events, Madam Speaker, you will note that those Members to whom you referred were recorded as having risen after I was recorded as asking to be recognized on a point of order and after the Minister of Transport had been recognized by you. I merely point that out. You said that you were having difficulty in ascertaining who should or should not be recognized because there were several Members—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I did not say I had difficulty. I said that the Chair has to select when several Members rise at the same time. That is what the Chair has done. I selected one of the Members who had risen at the same time.

I have dealt with the matter the Hon. Member is raising. If the Hon. Member were writing the verbatim report of what took place in the House and if three Members rose at the same time and shouted "A point of order", how would he list them in the report? He would make an arbitrary listing of those three people who rose at the same time. The argument the Hon. Member is using is not totally convincing. It does not convince me. Furthermore, the Hon. Member knows that when several Members rise at the same time it is customary to recognize a Minister before any other Member. This kind of courtesy has been afforded to Ministers in our House and in many other Houses. I do not have the exact reference, but I am sure it was in Erskine May that I read it was the practice in Great Britain.

I have dealt with the matter. Further, the Hon. Member does not have a question of privilege. It is a point of order, if he has one. I dealt with this the other day. Furthermore, the entire proceeding is over. We have had the motion, we have had the debate, we have had the vote—the entire proceeding is over. I really do not see what is the point of raising a point of order on that particular matter at the present time.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I hope you will allow me to make one further point. I was not aware that Standing Order 33 provided for a different status of Member being recognized. That is really my second point. If there was any doubt, it seems to me it is incumbent that there be a strict application of Standing Order 32 and Standing Order 33. Under the heading "Rules of Debate", Standing Order 32 reads:

Every Member desiring to speak is to rise in his or her place, uncovered, and address the Speaker.

It is fair to say that I was uncovered, and probably so was the Minister of Transport. Madam Speaker has sugested that there are two classes of Members, but Standing Order 33 reads:

When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who first rose in his or her place; but a motion may be made that any Member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate.

There is a no indication there about having been recognized or about whether a Minister has the floor. It reserves the right for a Member of Parliament to be heard.

There are the rules which have been established by the House of Commons. The House of Commons is master of its own house. It establishes its own rules, it administers them and enforces them. I humbly submit that under the provisions of Standing Order 33 my rights as a Private Member of this Chamber were denied. I believe very firmly that I had the parliamentary right to put my motion. If we are to have a set of Standing Orders, then there should be provisions that qualify how the Standing Orders will be applied. They are certainly not contained in this rule book. Either this rule book has some meaning, or we might as well thrown it out the window.

Madam Speaker: The rule book has a lot of meaning, but it has to be read against practices, against interpretations of several authors, the authority of which we accept, namely, Erskine May, Bourinot, Beauchesne and possibly others, and against the precedents. This is what the Chair is constantly doing.

I am sure the Hon. Member does not want to suggest that Members do not have equal rights. They all have equal rights in the House, but courtesies are afforded to certain Members as a matter of practice and as a matter of general consensus in the House. For instance, the Leader of the Opposition will rise during Question Period; he can ask two, three or four questions. It is a courtesy. He could rise, and if other Members had risen before him and attempted to catch the eye of the Speaker, the Speaker would not expect the Leader of the Opposition to jump up several times; the Speaker would immediately recognize the Leader of the Opposition. Does that mean that the Leader of the Opposition is not equal to any other Member? He is equal, but perhaps he is a little more equal in the sense that those courtesies are afforded to him, as they would be to a Member who has perhaps sat in the House a very long time. This is in the parliamentary spirit, and I do not think I am betraying the spirit of the House by allowing that.

Mr. Mazankowski: You are allowing the Minister of Transport.

Madam Speaker: Yes, there are a few criteria. The power to select of the Speaker, of course, is absolute; that is one sure thing. The Speaker relies on a few criteria, one being that the Speaker tries to recognize those who rise first, naturally. That is tout à fait normal. If several Members rise at the same time—one, two or three on the same side—of course I am free to select anyone I choose to select. I wonder whether the Hon. Member would have any objection had all the Members been on the same side.

I will refer to what Bourinot said about recognizing Ministers. Under the chapter entitled "Precedence in Debate" it reads:

> It is usual, however, to allow priority to members of the administration who wish to speak and to new members who have not before spoken—

That is not the case with the Hon. Member. It continues, "and in all important debates", and so on. I have dealt with that problem. I am sure I have not been unfair to the Hon. Member. Now he says, quoting Standing Order 33, that his motion should have been put forthwith, but Standing Order 33 has to be read against something else; that is to say, when an Hon. Member has possession of the House, he cannot be interrupted by a motion that another Member do speak. If he does not have possession of the floor, of course on a point of order such a motion may be entertained.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, the question which has been raised is a serious one. I rise for the purpose of seeking clarification for the future because of its importance. First may I observe, as the Chair has quite rightly pointed out, that the recognition of the Leader of the Opposition in the circumstances described is a long-standing practice of the House, because he is the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. There is no Standing Order requiring that; it is a practice. Similarly with respect to Ministers of the Crown, quite rightly the Chair pointed out, on the basis of the strength of the Bourinot citation, they are given that courtesy as a matter of practice. However, there is no Standing Order which gives Ministers that kind of priority.

Here we are dealing with a Standing Order of the House, created by the House as the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) said, and enforced by the House. There are two aspects to that Standing Order that have to be viewed in light of yesterday's events for which clarification is required. The Hon. Member for Vegreville is not only on the record as having been recognized but clearly on the record as having moved his full motion. That relates to Standing Order 33, which I suggest to the Chair has to be taken in two parts. The first part reads:

> When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who first rose in his or her place—

At that point there is a semicolon in the Standing Order. The second part of the Standing Order reads:

> —but a motion may be made that any Member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate.

It is the second part of that Standing Order on which I seek clarification. That was the situation yesterday. The Hon. Member for Vegreville rose and was recognized, and he put his motion on the basis of the second half of that Standing Order. Without reflecting at all upon the discretion of the Chair which the Chair exercised yesterday in recognizing the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), quite properly, the Chair went on then to recognize the Hon. Member for Vegreville, again quite properly; but it was at that point the motion was made. The provisions of Standing Order 33 after the semicolon require the Chair to put the question forthwith on that motion.

There need not be any number of Members rising at all because that applies to the first half of the Standing Order. If I wish to rise in my place, even if no other Member stands, my interpretations of the last half of that Standng Order would permit me to advance a motion that the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. LaSalle) or any other Member be now heard or now speak. If I make such a motion without any Member standing, I think that the question has to be put to the House. A fortiori, even stronger, if one Member rises, I can put the second half of that Standing Order to the House by moving that kind of motion. If more than one Member rises, we shift to the first half of that Standing Order. In either event, in any circumstance that I have described, such a motion would be in order. That is the area that we are dealing with.

The Chair might want to think about that before giving me the clarification for guiding our future practices in this House because it has been important in the past and will become increasingly important in the future.

I have one last point before I resume my seat with regard to the proceedings of yesterday. The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) indicated to me that he was going to raise the matter. Again, without any intention whatsoever of reflecting on the exercise of any discretion by the Chair yesterday or any ruling made by the Chair today or yesterday, the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette, like myself, looks at that Standing Order and sees the final wording that the question shall be put when the motion has been moved by a Member forthwith without debate. Those are the words. Anything that occurs in this place is, of course, debate. We have a precedent that says even Question Period is debate.

Yesterday the Government House Leader was heard after the motion was put. I was heard. Today, the Chair was confronted with a situation where he had to put the motion without debate. He applied the Standing Order, in my view quite rightly, rigidly and put the question immediately without hearing any points of order or whatever—because they are all debate.

That area has to be clarified because, Madam Speaker, one thing was done yesterday and quite another thing today. We are, therefore, in somewhat of a dilemma. I would suggest very strongly that you might want to hear other Members, particularly the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette. I suggest very strongly that you do not come to any decision today on that question but take it—I see the Chair nodding its head in the negative. I make the suggestion not for the purpose of asking her, as she said yesterday, to shirk her responsibility. I would never do that. However, I would ask her to take it under very careful consideration, look at past practices in the House, look at the orders and at the precedents before coming to any precipitous ruling. The question and its future application is important not only to the Opposition but the other side as well, because they also have used that Standing Order.

Referring to precedents of the Chair, particularly when it is not necessary to come to an immediate conclusion today, it might be prudent for the Chair to consult with her officers and satisfy herself by a personal reading of the precedents that there might be some merit in what I am saying so that we can be guided more efficiently in the future.

Madam Speaker: I think we can end this matter. I do not see why the time of the House should be taken for clarification by the Speaker on points of procedure. I am not in the habit of giving clarification of points of procedure in the House. That is not my function.

This case is clear enough. It has been dealt with. The total proceedings took place yesterday and everything was perfectly in order. Today, after the proceeding is all over, Members are asking for points of clarification for future conduct, as the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) says. Certainly the Speaker is not going to fall into the trap of giving clarification and applying it to future conduct which the Speaker knows nothing about. Future situations in the House will be judged as they occur, taking into account all of the circumstances, the Standing Orders and precedents which may apply to the particular situation which has arisen.

The Hon. Member says quite rightly that a motion that an Hon. Member be now heard has been dealt with one way on one day and a different way the other day. That is precisely because the circumstances were different. The Hon. Member did not mention the fact that, of course, Members may on a point of order ask that an Hon. Member be now heard as long as no other Member has the floor legitimately. Beauchesne states that a motion that a Member be now heard must be moved before the Member recognized has begun speaking. If the Member recognized has simply said "Madam Speaker," that is enough to be in possession of the House and, therefore, under those circumstances a motion that another Member be now heard is not in order. If the Hon. Member who has been recognized has not exercised his right to speak and another Member rises and proposes that another Member be now heard, then the motion has to be put to the House forthwith and voted upon.

The two circumstances were different. They are quite clear to me and, I am quite sure, they are clear to all Hon. Members. I consider this matter closed. I do not feel it is necessary to hear any other argument unless we have a seminar on procedure. We could do that at some other point; we could go out of the House and have a seminar on procedure. I will be quite willing to share my knowledge with Hon. Members and to share their opinions on a number of matters, but I do not think this is the time or the place to do it.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. DEANS—APPLICATION OF RULES OF DEBATE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I have been attempting since twenty minutes to one to gain the floor on a point of order on a question that arose at twenty minutes to one or thereabouts. Strangely enough, it touches upon something that was raised without dealing with the same circumstance. I know the Speaker may feel that I am trying to rehash, but I am not. I hope she will listen to me in this instance. I would raise it later, but I have to raise it at the earliest possible moment.

This morning during debate, two things occurred that require, in my opinion, the Speaker to make a ruling. The first was that a Member had the floor on a point of order. Another Member took the floor away from that Member by rising on a point of order. That happened this morning. The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) was speaking on a point of order. At that point a motion was made by another Member who rose on a point of order that the floor be given to someone else.

I do not want to go into the detail. I would simply ask that the Speaker review the debates of this morning to determine whether or not my submission on that is accurate and, if it is, to rule, as I would have asked had I got the floor, that one Member who has the floor on a point of order cannot be interrupted by another Member rising on a point of order. That is the first question. It is important that that be upheld; otherwise chaos would ensue.

The second point is, in my judgment, equally important. The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) sought the floor and got the floor today during the discussion on points of order. The only way that he could have got the floor was to rise to speak to the point of order that was then under consideration. However, having engaged in discussion for a moment or two, in fact for a minute or two, he then moved that the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) be now heard. I contend that that is out of order. A Member who gets the floor on an existing point of order surely is not in a position to move that another Member be now heard. If there is a point of order being discussed on the floor of the House, a Member rising on that point of order cannot then move, under Standing Order 33, that another Member be now heard.

I ask, for the sanity of the place if nothing else, that that matter also ought to be reviewed and that a clear ruling be made that when a point of order is under discussion it is not then possible for a Member to rise and, in advance of the point of order having been ruled upon, make a motion that another Hon. Member be heard. I would suggest that that is quite improper.

I further suggest that if it were to be allowed that a Member, once engaged in discussion whether on a point of order or something else, whether in debate, on a point of order or a question of privilege, cannot then transfer his speaking place to another Member simply by motion. If that were the case it would be possible for one Member or one group of Members to preempt any other Member from gaining the floor legitimately.

That speaks in part, although I did not intend it to, to the point raised by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). I did not intend to address the question he raised but I put it to you that, unfortunately—and this is no reflection on the Chair because these things do occur—it can create some very difficult situations. This was the case this morning. If that prevailed, once one Member got the floor, he or she could transfer that speaking order to another Member who could transfer it to another Member who could transfer it to another Member, and so on. The only way to stop that would be to hold a vote, and I do not think that is what Standing Order 33 was intended to so.

Madam Speaker: I suppose I have to thank the Hon. Member for bringing up the matter. I was not in the Chair this morning when those events occurred but I understand that the Member who tried to pre-empt the Member who was speaking on a point of order was ruled out of order, and that was to the satisfaction of the House. Exactly what the Hon. Member says should not be allowed to happen was prevented by the fact that it was ruled out of order.

I will review the matter raised by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). I see the Hon. Member shaking his head. I am not going to review the other point brought up because that matter is closed. I will look at what the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is referring to. If there has been any injustice to any Member, we will certainly try to correct it.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. While you will be making all those beautiful reviews, perhaps you would consider reading Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, Citation 117, Subparagraphs 4 and 5. I think that if those provisions were to be applied we would have more order in the House.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I should like to suggest that you review the "blues" for today when a point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse)—I did not have my electronics functioning as they usually do—I rose trying to say to the Chair that there could not be a point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre when there was already a point of order before the Chair; but the Chair allowed that. It is no reflection on the Chair but that is the kind of thing I mean. That is my recollection. I could be wrong.

PRIVILEGE

MR. GAMBLE—RIGHT TO BE RECOGNIZED ON A POINT OF ORDER

Mr. John Gamble (York North): Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege as a result of the occurrences in the House this morning. It is not very often that I take positions of this nature or become involved in procedural matters. I came into the House at a quarter after eleven and was here until one o'clock. During that very extensive period of time points of order were raised with respect to the nature of the business of the House for today. I came in to deal with the matter that I understood would be dealt with, and that was the motion of which this Party had given notice yesterday before the House closed and with respect to which there had been a designation of an Opposition day by the House Leader for the Government. As I finally viewed his conduct in the House at the end of that day, his acknowledgement of consent to the nature of the business of the House was the motion that I came into the House prepared to deal with.

These remarks are made by way of preliminary discussion only because this morning the Chair ruled that regardless of any of those consequences—quite frankly the nature of which I have discussed here and no one else has with respect to that last comment—the nature of the business of the House was not to be the nature of the business that I anticipated. I had on several occasions endeavored—

Madam Speaker: Order, I have to interrupt the Hon. Member. There was no ruling on this. The Chair had no choice but to contemplate the business of the House which was before the House. The business which was before the House was probably different from what the Hon. Member for York North was expecting it to be. The Chair does not determine what the business of the House will be.

The Hon. Member has to be quite clear that this is not the role of the Chair, and the Chair has not done that. The business of the House is determined by the Government which gives the Clerks an indication what the business of the House will be for the next day. The Clerk of the House of Commons has no choice but to write that down and make it the business of the House. I do not rule on that nor do any of the assistants in the Chair rule on it.

Mr. Gamble: Madam Speaker, I was making those remarks in a preliminary fashion. I do not have the "blues" for today and I did not really intend to deal with the merits of the issue, but I think if you will check the "blues"—I am rising now because I did not want to give notice as the issue happened today—I think you will find that in the course of making observations, the Chair ruled what the business of the House was to be. The business of the House was to be Bill C-155. Those, I think you will find, are the exact words used by the Chair this morning. My question of privilege however—

Madam Speaker: I am sorry, I cannot let that go by. The Chair quoted what the business of the House was to be, but it did not rule on what would be the business of the House. The Chair cannot rule on that.

Mr. Nielsen: It did.

Madam Speaker: I should like to know what the question of privilege of the Hon. Member is. I have listened for quite a while and I still do not know.

Mr. Gamble: Quite frankly, the question of privilege is the most basic privilege which a Member of Parliament can have, and that is, the right to be heard without prejudice as to what the Member of Parliament is going to say. I have stood in my place time and time again to make an observation by way of point of order that I was not permitted to make.

I understand the Chair may hear a number of Members on a particular point or order and may in fact come to a conclusion that he or she has heard enough, but I can tell you what I do not understand. I do not understand how anyone occupying the chair can decide that the nature of the intervention of any Member is for a dilatory purpose. That was exactly the kind of comment we heard from the Chair this morning. I make these remarks without intentionally reflecting on the Chair.

I ask, Madam Speaker, at this point, how does the Chair determine, before even hearing a Member stand and utter the first word, the nature of his intervention? Is it by the colour of his tie? Surely not. Surely some recognition must be made of the fact that there may be points that should be contributed to a discussion with respect to a point of order which is legitimately raised in connection with the conduct of the business of this House, a matter on which other Members are entitled to make remarks. I did not have that as a right, and I consider that to be a very serious question of privilege. It is a question which goes to my right as a Member of Parliament. It is as fundamental as my right to come into the House. That is my question of privilege, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: I was not in the House and I will have to look at the "blues" and the report in Hansard. I just cannot make any sense out of what the Hon. Member is now saying because I cannot refer to the actual comments which were made in the House. I am just making this reservation, that there has been a ruling by the Chair on what the Hon. Member is referring to. Of course, I will not reverse that ruling. The Hon. Member is shaking his head. He said he would not ask me to do that. Of course, I would not even want to attempt to look at a ruling if, by so doing, that would indicate that any Hon. Member can reflect on a ruling made by the Chair.

There is a possibility of objecting formally to a ruling of the Chair, and that is open to the Hon. Member if he wants to do so. However, once it is made, Hon. Members may not reflect on a ruling of the Chair. If that is the thrust of what the Hon. Member has just been saying, I cannot judge it because I have to look at it in the context of the debate which took place at that time. I will look at it and I will come back to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Gamble: Madam Speaker, my purpose was not to reflect upon the ruling of the Chair. My purpose was to draw to the attention of the Chair the fact that the Chair reflects upon the opinions of Hon. Members before they have had an opportunity to speak. That is the issue which will be made very apparent to the Speaker when she examines those "blues". I will be very grateful if she will examine them and get back to the House.

Madam Speaker: I will do that.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

Madam Speaker: Presenting reports from standing and special committees.

Mr. Nielsen: Did you say Petitions?

Madam Speaker: No, I said, "Presenting reports from standing and special committees." Tabling of documents. If the Hon. Member has a petition, we are just coming to it. Statements by Ministers. Petitions. The Hon. Member for Yukon.

PETITIONS

MR. NIELSEN—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I have a petition from the undersigned residents of Canada, primarily residents of Yukon, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, and humbly sheweth that the survival of the Yukon placer miners is threatened by unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by the federal Government Departments. Such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government would lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry in the Yukon. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation which would further threaten the security of employment in Yukon at a time when the staggering and unprecedented level of unemployment in Yukon threatens the quality of life in northern communities. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in certain assurance that your humble House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth: Whereas there is a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada; whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible; whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action that may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Madam Speaker, The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth; whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada; whereas this might be remedied as quickly as possible; whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I must remind Hon. Members that they must not read or quote all the "whereases". They must just read the title and the prayer. I would ask the Hon. Member to go immediately to the prayer because he has already given us the title.

Mr. Huntington: Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that whereas, Madam Speaker, there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, etc.—

Madam Speaker: No. Order. No "whereases". Not even one.

Mr. Bosley: Madam Speaker, I did indicate other "whereases". Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. NEIL—SAFE DRINKING WATER

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Madam Speaker, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth—and this has to do with the quality of the water in the cities of Regina and Moose Jaw, which is a danger to the health of the residents and visitors to those cities. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to enter into negotiations with the Province of Saskatchewan and the cities of Moose Jaw and Regina to grant substantial financial aid for the project. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this might best be remedied by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada in the towns of Carbon, Champion and Cochrane, Alberta, now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to insist on a general election being called now. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, I have the duty and honour today to present a 30-page petition to the House to the following effect. We the undersigned insist that Bill C-155, the Crow legislation, be amended to allow grain producers the option of either receiving their share in the Crow benefit as a producer payment, or electing to have it paid on their behalf to the railways. The purpose of this petition therefore is to express their concern with the present provisions of Bill C-155. The freedom of choice concept will guarantee the consensus which the Prime Minister and the Minister of Transport said they were seeking. And your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

● (1550)

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of the Provinces of Saskatchewan, Ontario and Quebec, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. Wherefore the undersigned have considered the alternative plan by the New Democratic Party on the Crow rate, which must be maintained. Also, considering that the railways of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern, efficient transportation system, they pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party's alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. It is signed by residents of Lashburn, Saskatchewan, and Ottawa and Hull.

MR. HAWKES—PROMOTION OF GAME OF CHESS

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty to present a petition signed by over 284 Canadians across the country on behalf of more than four millions of their fellow citizens who enjoy the self-discipline and intellectual stimulus provided by the game of chess. The purpose of this petition is to point out to the Federal Government the absolute necessity to follow the example of many provincial and national governments and to recognize in the game of chess a universal form of cultural expression combining physical with mental excellence.

[English]

The purpose of this petition is to ask the Secretary of State (Mr. Joyal) to change departmental policy to include measures to promote chess and consequently physical and mental excellence. The petitioners hope, Mr. Speaker, that in your examination of their petition you will find it in order, sense the urgency of their plea, and use the discretionary powers vested in your office to allow discussion and referral to committee at the earliest possible moment. On a previous petition there were over 1,000 signatures, Mr. Speaker, and I hope you use your office to refer this matter to committee. It has been dragging on for several years.

Petitions

MR. McKENZIE—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Mr. Speaker, the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy.

Whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and this might best be solved by calling a general election immediately, we the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. McGRATH—LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by citizens of this country exercising their ancient right. The petition refers to a serious crisis of confidence in the Government of this country. If you read through the ancient form of the petition, in short it calls upon this House to vote non-confidence in this Government.

MR. BENJAMIN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition to this House. The undersigned residents of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right. I must add this with all due modesty, Mr. Speaker—

An Hon. Member: You have lots to be modest about.

Mr. Benjamin: —but these 98 petitioners from Spirit River, Rycroft and Grand Prairie, Alberta, have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the NDP and Les Benjamin, MP for Regina West—wasn't that nice of them? They urge the Parliament of Canada to adopt the provisions in order that the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rates may be maintained and that the railways of all Canada be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system. The undersigned have carefully considered this alternative plan and do ever humbly pray that the House of Commons and Government will act upon it.

MR. FRASER—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Mr. Speaker, the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The petition refers to the need for an immediate national election. Therefore, we the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Petitions

MR. FRIESEN—CALL FOR RESIGNATION OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, the undersigned residents of the Province of British Columbia now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide the remedy. Humbly sheweth that we the undersigned, a group of concerned Canadian citizens, wish to express our disaffection with present Liberal Government policies and demand the resignation of this Government. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is signed by residents of Aldergrove, White Rock, Delta, North Vancouver and Langley in British Columbia.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Mr. Speaker, I, too have a petition signed by citizens of Canada asking to avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners in the certain assurance that this honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. The petition, in most graphic terms, talks about the crisis of confidence in Canada. It calls for an election and it says that we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to move as soon as possible to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petitioners now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. My petitioners humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and it might best be remedied by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. FRETZ—INCREASE IN ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY TOLLS

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Mr. Speaker, the undersigned residents in Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. There has been a 100 per cent increase in Seaway tolls in the years 1978 through 1981, and they ask that there be no further increase in tolls for the use of the St. Lawrence Seaway for the foreseeable future, or at least until the shipping industry has seen a substantial recovery. Wherefore the undersigned humbly pray that your honourable House will accept the aforementioned recommendations. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present a petition signed by some 321 residents of Canada who were on Parliament Hill on Saturday, October 22, expressing their opposition to the Government's decision to test the United States Cruise missile on Canadian territory. The petitioners state that the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to the peace of the world, and that history proves that as military strength increases, so does the temptation to use that military strength. The petitioners stress that Canada can play a more crucial role in achieving multilateral disarmament, and call upon Parliament to debate and pass Bill C-678, an act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone, which would allow Canada to act as a mediator along with other countries who will participate in a worldwide nuclear disarmament process. As in duty bound your petitioners ever pray.

MR. TAYLOR—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The undersigned residents of Canada in the towns of Vulcan, Stavely, Exshaw, De Winton and Cluny now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to insist on a general election being called now. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. PATTERSON—INCREASING DIVORCE RATE

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present a petition on behalf of almost 100 of my constituents in the riding of Fraser Valley East. The purpose of the petition signed by these people is to express their concern for the family unit as a God-given institution and a basic foundation unit of society. Believing that the rapidly increasing divorce rate and breakdown of the family unit is one of the major factors contributing to the rise of numerous social ills in our present society, they urge that Parliament oppose attempts to permit quick or easy divorce. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to encourage the preservation of marriage and the family as a basic foundational unit of society and oppose legislative attempts to permit quick or easy divorce.

MR. SCHELLENBERGER—LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. To the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada from the Vancouver area now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The undersigned say that whereas there is a crisis of confidence in Canada, there must be a remedy immediately, and therefore we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a peitition to present to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Meacham, Colonsay and Viscount in Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in 1981-82. This grain in turn contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade, and the undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy and that western farmers will pay one times Crow. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain rate.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the removal of the Crow rate will see its replacement by an imposition that will set grain freight charges five times Crow rate or higher by 1990; that such increases are being imposed at a time when grain prices for producers are at the 1974 level; and that detailed calculations show that the rate of five times Crow will cost the community of Weldon $471,800,000 because of higher rates, these figures being based on the actual deliveries in 1980-81—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I think the Hon. Member is aware that under the rules of the House, the description must be of the briefest nature possible.

Mr. Hovdebo: Wherefore the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as presently guaranteed by statute and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. COOPER—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition from the people of the Hines Creek, Spirit River, Worsley and Wanham areas of Alberta who believe that there is a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and believe that that can only be solved by a federal general election. Therefore, we the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. NICKERSON—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I too present a petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. This petition is signed by a number of residents of Canada, primarily residents of Yukon, who avail themselves of the ancient right to submit a petition to the House. They state that the survival of Yukon placers miners is threatened by unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by the federal Government Departments. They believe that such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government would lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry. Therefore, Sir, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation that would further threaten the security of employment in Yukon at a time when the staggering and unprecedented level of unemployment in Yukon threatens the quality of life in northern communities.

I feel obliged, Sir, to point out that one of the signatories to this petition gives as his address Anchorage, Alaska. I believe that this gentleman is a Canadian citizen, but I do hope that his signature on this petition will not invalidate the petition the petition which has been signed by so many other genuine residents of Canada.

MR. NYSTROM—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I am sorry, I should have said Mr. Speaker. This is difficult.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I do not agree.

Mr. Nystrom: If someone is to blame, Mr. Speaker, it is the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

I also have the honour to present a petition signed by the residents of many towns in Saskatchewan, namely Herbert, Saskatoon, Rush Lake and other communities such as Morse, all of them residents of Canada who now exercise their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy.

They humbly sheweth that:

Whereas Western Canadian farmers paid $131 million for grain in 1981-82 under the Crow rate, whereas this in turn contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade of Canada; whereas the undersigned believe that this represents an equitable contribution to the Canadian economy and that Western Canadian farmers shall pay only one time the Crow rate, wherefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to retain the present Crow rate for grain. And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, forgive me for having called you Madam Speaker.

[English]

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled a petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy; humbly sheweth that since there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, which can only be done by the calling of a general federation election immediately, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I too have the duty and honour to present a petition to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition is signed by 288 citizens of the Dominion of Canada resident in Brentwood Bay, Calgary, Cassidy, Chemainus, Courtenay, Duncan, Edmonton, Langley, Lantzville, Ladysmith, Kelowna, Nanaimo, Parksville, Sooke, Vancouver, Victoria and Wabush, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide the remedy; humbly sheweth that having due regard to the serious economic dilemma which faces Canada today, including widespread unemployment, business bankruptcies and personal hardships affecting millions of Canadians, and whereas the Liberal Government has shown little confidence in reversing this disastrous crisis, the undersigned 288 petitioners have lost confidence in the Government of Canada and thereby insist that Parliament be dissolved and a federal general election be called immediately. Your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, but not for too long, I hope.

MR. DARLING—LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that Your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy; humbly sheweth, that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I want the House to know that those people across the way who are presenting those petitions forget the fact that they had the power for just a few months and did not know what to do with it. I do not know what they mean by these petitions.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If the Hon. Member is so concerned about our not knowing what to do with power, I would challenge him to go to his Leader, ask him to call an election and see if we would then know what to do with power.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I might comment on the point of order by simply saying that we knew what to do with it, but he did not know what to do without it.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners with certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. Whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada; whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible; and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners ever pray.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Just before I recognize the next Hon. Member, no doubt on a petition, may I remind Hon. Members that under House rules, since there is an emergency debate tonight, there will be no adjournment motion from 6 p.m.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 25 residents of the towns of Bramlea, Brampton, Mississauga, Bolton, Ontario, Orangeville and one from Rural Route No. 6, which is in Shelbourne, Ontario. They now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitoners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy.

They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Goverment of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitoners will ever pray.

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I too, have a petition to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. To the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election, immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

[Translation]

MR. KEEPER—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to present a petition.

To the honourable House of Commons of Canada and Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada in cities such as Blaine Lake, North Battleford, Krydor, etc., who now avail themselves of their old and inalienable rights to voice a common grievance, with the firm assurance that your honourable House will find a remedy.

They humbly declare that:

Whereas the farmers of Western Canada have paid $131 million to export their grain in the year 1981-82, in accordance with the Crow rate;

Whereas this will contribute $6.3 billion to Canada's trade balance;

Whereas the undersigned believe this is a fair contribution to the Canadian economy;

And whereas western farmers have no intention of paying the Crow rate more than once;

Wherefore, the petitioners humbly call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain Crow rate.

And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

MR. McKNIGHT—INCREASE IN ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY TOLLS

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House of Commons will therefore provide a remedy; humbly sheweth that any proposed increases in the tolls on the St. Lawrence Seaway be frozen at least until December 31, 1985. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to fulfil this wish of your citizens.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition submitted by a number of residents of Tofield, Alberta and Sherwood Park. It is to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. In the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy; humby sheweth and claim that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada; that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and might be best done by the calling of a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition, largely from a group of residents of the Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe constituency but also from other Ontario residents ranging as far afield as Willowdale and Gravenhurst, Ontario. The petition is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. To the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable the House will therefor provide a remedy. The petitioners refer to a serious crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and call for an election. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. FRETZ—SAFE DRINKING WATER

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, in the petition the undersigned residents in Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that because some of the most powerful poisons known to man have been discovered in the Niagara River, the source of drinking water for millions of people including thousands of Canadians, and because adequate action to stop the pollution of said river has not been undertaken by the former Minister or the present Minister of the Environment, immediate and decisive action must be taken to stop the flow of toxic materials into this once beautiful water course. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that your honourable House will accept the aforementioned recommendation and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ALTHOUSE—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of COmmons of Canada, in Parliament assembled I have a petition of the undersigned residents of the town of Wadena in the Province of Saskatchewan who now exercise their right to present a grievance. They humbly sheweth that they are very much against missile testing in Canada, that the U.S.A. can keep its missiles at home, that we call upon the Government to refuse to test the Cruise and your petitioners as in duty bound, will every pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and privilege to present to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The purpose of this petition is to indicate as clearly and as forcefully as they can to the federal Government that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this might be best done by calling a federal general election immediately.

Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland-Colchester): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by a number of residents from various areas of British Columbia. I am very happy to join with my B.C. colleagues in indicating that the people in my constituency associate themselves with British Columbians in so far as this petition is concerned.

To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. PARKER—SALE OF HOUSES IN B.C. NATIONAL PARK

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an honour for me to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada, in Parliament assembled. In the petition the undersigned residents of Canada now exercise their right to present a grievance and humbly sheweth that the residents of Field, B.C., are faced with restrictions on the sale of their homes within the national park that make it virtually impossible for sales to take place. This is creating hard ship for residents, especially senior citizens, for widows of park employees, for workers transferred to other areas and for people forced to move because of health reasons.

We, the undersigned petitioners, call upon the federal Government of Canada to expand the rules to allow residents from the adjacent park and Lake Louise to purchase homes in Field, British Columbia. Failing this, we petition the Government of Canada to purchase the buildings at the appraised value, and as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, to point out just how people across Canada have come to view this Government, I have a number of petitions from the Province of Quebec. Although I cannot read the title with any great clarity because it is in French, I know the English translation. They call upon the Government of Canada to resign and to call a federal general election because they, like the rest of Canadians, are fed up with this Government.

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and the honour to present a petition on behalf of a number of citizens of western Canada who wish to avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present to this House a grievance of concern to them, in the assurance that this honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I wish to apologize to several Hon. Members when I mistake their names and ridings.

The Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) or the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is a strong urge to hear from the Hon. Member for Regina East.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my appreciation to all Hon. Members who want to hear me present a petition to you this afternoon, a petition mainly from citizens in and around Ottawa, Ontario. They express their concern about the proposed legislation that is before us. The petitioners have signed this petition to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The undersigned residents of Canada now exercise their right to present a grievance that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-1982 crop year. This grain, in turn, contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade. I point out that these are people from Ontario who are not directly involved in farming but they appreciate the situation, and the undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the economy and that the western farmers are willing to pay one times Crow and no change. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain rate. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. I am presenting this petition to you and to the House of Commons from Canadian citizens, mainly from Ontario.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from 207 citizens of the Dominion of Canada, citizens who are residents of Brentwood, Inuvik, Sidney, Sooke and Victoria, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy; and humbly sheweth that having due regard to the serious economic dilemma which faces Canada today, including widespread unemployment, business bankruptcies and personal hardship affecting millions of Canadians, and whereas the Liberal Government has shown little competence in reversing this disastrous crisis, the undersigned petitioners have lost confidence in the Government of Canada and thereby insist that Parliament be dissolved and that a federal general election be called immediately, and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Translation]

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the duty to present to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled today.

The petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy.

Whereas there exists in Canada a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada,

Whereas this must be remedied as soon as possible,

Whereas this might best be done by the calling of a general federal election immediately,

Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action is necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada,

And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray that this happens as soon as possible.

• (1630)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish), and the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington), in that order.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I have a very serious petition to present to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might be best done by calling a general election immediately.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—INVASION OF GRENADA BY U.S. FORCES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I had the pleasure of being in Guelph, Ontario last night prior to the visit of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) there today. I was presented with a petition signed by those in attendance last night and was asked to bring it before Parliament.

The petitioners, as residents of Canada and as members of the British Commonwealth, request that the Prime Minister of Canada express outrage to the President of the United States of America at the invasion by American armed forces of Grenada, another member of the Commonwealth. The petitioners believe that no country in the Americas is safe from interference in its sovereign affairs if the United States deems it vital to American foreign interests. The petitioners appeal to Parliament on behalf of all humankind who fear that such irrational action by a nation as powerful as the United States may, and could eventually, plunge the world into a nuclear holocaust.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present from some people in the most beautiful riding in Canada to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there is a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible by the calling of a general federal election immediately.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), the whistling bird.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I take it the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) was referring to Surrey-White Rock-North Delta.

Mr. Huntington: No, I was not, and you know it.

Mr. Friesen: I have a petition to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is signed by the residents of Surrey, White Rock, Vancouver, West Vancouver, and North Vancouver.

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada from the Prince George area of British Columbia, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that the best way to remedy it is to call a federal election immediately.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SARGEANT—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present a petition to the House of Commons from residents of my constituency in the Province of Manitoba, in particular from the fine communities of Riverton and Gimli, Manitoba. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada and Parliament assembled, we, the undersigned residents of the Province of Manitoba, exercise our right to present a grievance which humbly sheweth that the Crow rate is an important benefit to western Canada and one of the earliest incentives granted to settlers; that the changing of the Crow rate will reduce farm incomes, contribute to the breaking up of communities on branch lines and increase trucking and road costs; and that three Royal Commissions have recommended retention of the Crow rate.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as currently guaranteed in statute. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will humbly ever pray.

MR. HAWKES—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty, and indeed it is a pleasure, to present a petition on behalf of many citizens of the City of Winnipeg, the home of the "never to be forgotten" but "soon to be replaced" Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). The objective of this petition is to indicate clearly to the federal Government the urgent crisis which exists in Canada today and which all of us can see in terms of unemployment, bankruptcies and considerable difficulty. The purpose of the petition is to ask the Government of Canada to call a federal general election at the earliest possible date so that that crisis can be overcome and the country can return to being healthy.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the petitioners hope their petition will be examined, that the Chair will find their petition acceptable and realize the urgency of their plea, and that the Chair will make use of its discretionary powers to allow this petition to be considered and refer it as soon as possible to committee.

[English]

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth, having due regard for the serious economic dilemma which now faces Canada, including widespread unemployment, business bankruptcies and personal hardships affecting millions of Canadians, and whereas the Liberal Government has shown little competence in reversing this disastrous crisis, the undersigned petitioners have lost confidence in the Government of Canada and thereby insist that Parliament be dissolved and a federal general election be called immediately. Your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. NYSTROM—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present which is signed by 45 or so Canadians mainly from Alberta and Saskatchewan but also by a well-known and distinguished former journalist, Mr. Bruce Levy of Ottawa and a widely renowned and learned academic from Quebec, M. Jean Ethier of Hull. These two well-known people and the others are calling for the House of Commons to preserve the Crow rate for western farmers. They maintain that western Canadian farmers pay over $100 million a year to move export grain under the Crow rate and that this grain is contributing over $6 billion per year to the balance of trade, which they say is very important for all Canada, including central Canada.

Also they say that we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory Crow rate. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners shall ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Mr. Speaker, it may come as no surprise to you that I have a petition to present this afternoon from a fine group of Canadians who feel that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada. They want an opportunity to remedy this as quickly as possible. They feel that that may be done by calling a general election. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, of course, that is, by calling an election immediately.

• (1640)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled a petition signed by residents from the area of Mundare, Alberta, Vegreville, Alberta, and Innisfree, Alberta. In the petitions the undersigned citizens of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there does exist a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and must be done by the calling of a federal election immediately. We, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. BENJAMIN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I must apologize to the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). I should have sent this petition to him since I know he is an ardent proponent of keeping the statutory grain rate. He is having great difficulty, mainly with some of his own colleagues. Some 60 petitioners from Assiniboia, Scout Lake, Lafleche, Rockglen, Lesieux, Kildeer, Lakenheath, Meyronne and Ottawa, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan proposed by the New Democratic Party and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternative plan in order that the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rate may be maintained and that the railways of all of Canada may be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transport system. These petitioners do humbly pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that has been signed by a number of Canadian citizens from Kimberley, B.C., Wycliffe, B.C., and Brantford, Ontario. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by the calling of a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 28 residents of towns of Mount Forest, Guelph, Kenilworth, Ontario, and R.R. 4 Kenilworth, Ontario. They now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present a petition on behalf of some of the very fine people of the community of Lamont in the well served federal riding of Vegreville. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. Whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas it might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners forever pray.

MR. KEEPER—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan in the communities of Etonia, Calgary and Mantario, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of Canada must be developed into a modern and efficient transport system. Wherefore, we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternative plan, which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rates and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. NIELSEN—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the House of Commons. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, primarily resident in Yukon, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the survival of the Yukon placer miners is threatened by unfair changes in the legislation and regulations proposed by the federal Government Department in that such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government would lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry in the Yukon. Wherefore, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation that would further threaten the security of employment in Yukon at a time when the staggering and unprecedented level of unemployment in Yukon threatens the quality of life in northern communities and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Bill Wright (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor present a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might be best done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and privilege to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The purpose of this petition is to indicate to the federal Government as clearly and as forcibly as possible that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this can best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HOVDEBO—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned residents of the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that increases in the Crow rate will affect the prices of producers' grain which are now at the 1974 level and that it will cost the community of Hoey $180,100 per year. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as presently guaranteed by statute, and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. This petition is signed by a number of people from the communities of Domremy and Hoey in Saskatchewan.

MR. SCHELLENBERGER—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. For the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, all from northern B.C., now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They are also concerned about the crisis of confidence in Canada and feel that the only way to solve this is by calling a general election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. McDERMID—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by individuals from Carmacks, Pukaskwa, and Whitehorse in the Yukon regarding a grievance common to your petitioners that the survival of the Yukon placer miners is threatened by unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by federal Government Departments. Such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government would lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry. Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation that would further threaten the security of employment in the Yukon at a time when, we all know, the staggering and unprecedented level of unemployment in the Yukon threatens the quality of life in the northern communities that I mentioned, and many others.

MR. FRIESEN—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Governemnt of Canada, whereas this might be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is signed by residents of the City of Alberta.

MR. KEEPER—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled, I have a petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan and communities such as High River and North Battleford, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a common grievance. Your petitioners, in certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of all of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transport system. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate, and, as in duty, bound your petitioners ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition mostly signed by residents of Dufferin County in my constituency but including residents of other areas of Ontario. The petition is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. To the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy.

The purpose of the petition is to demand an early election in Canada. The petitioners conclude by saying that therefore, we the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present a petition on behalf of some of the wonderful people from the communities of Princeton, British Columbia, North Vancouver, Canyon, British Columbia and other communities in that Province along with citizens from Edmonton in Alberta.

To the honourable House of Commons and Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in certain assurance that the House will provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will forever pray.

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from citizens in the beautiful Province of British Columbia from Fernie and Sparwood and then we move over into Alberta. There are probably 25 citizens who state in the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now do avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, that there exists, in their opinion, a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and that this could be remedied as quickly as possible. Therefore, there should be a federal election called, and, therefore, they state, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ALTHOUSE—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of the Nipawin-Craik River-Choiceland area of Saskatchewan, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the removal of the Crow rate will see its replacement by rates that will impose a higher rate cost of five times the present Crow rate and higher by 1990, that such increases are being imposed at a time when the price for producers' grain is at the 1974 level, and the detailed calculations show that the rate of 5.1 times the Crow rate will cost the community of Nipawin $564,600 per annum extra in payment for grain freight that would otherwise have stayed in that community based on actual deliveries in the 1980-81 crop year. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the Parliament of Canada to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as presently guaranteed by statute. In duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HARGRAVE—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Bert Hargrave (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from 34 petitioners in the city of Vancouver. To the Hon. House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, this must be remedied as quickly as possible. Whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. McDERMID—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition here from the residents of Victoria, British Columbia, from Whitehorse in the Yukon, from Lake Laberge. A number of them are placer miners themselves. The petition is to the honourable House of Commons in Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, primarily residents of the Yukon and some other parts of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the survival of the Yukon placer miners is threatened by unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by federal Government Department. Such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government could lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation which would further threaten the security of employment in the Yukon at a time when the staggering and unprecedented level of employment in the Yukon threatens the quality of life in northern communities. As in duty bound, your petitioners will every pray.

MR. FORRESTALL—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, I as well have a petition. I might like to put forward another one. Hon. Members will at lest know Canadians are now out of Grenada and more or less en route to Barbados.

To the honourable House of COmmons in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will provide therefor a remedy, humbly sheweth, Mr. Speaker, that whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

This is signed by 38 residents of the Province of British Columbia.

MR. SARGEANT—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present a petition on behalf of a number of Saskatchewan farmers. They petition the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-82 crop year. This grain, in turn, contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade. The undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy and that western farmers will pay one times Crow, in other words, no change. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory Crow rate. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. TAYLOR—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, the undersigned residents of Canada in Blackie and Irricana, Alberta, which are farming towns where practically everyone farms or derives his livelihood from farming, feel that their livelihood is going to be jeopardized by Bill C-155 if it passes. They now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to insist on a general election being called now. As in duty bound, your petitioner will ever pray.

MR. GUSTAFSON—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, this petition relates particularly to the very serious cash flow problem which farmers face. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, with the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the initial price for grain producers in western Canada should be raised to a level which more accurately reflects the prevailing world price of grain. Wherefore, we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada.

MR. NEIL—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition signed by residents of Esquimalt, North Vancouver, West Vancouver, Vancouver and Burnaby. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned petitioners of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that it can be remedied by the calling of a general federal election immediately. Wherefore, we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition here today to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents in the Province of Saskatchewan who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of all Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the alternative plan of the New Democratic Party which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rates. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present a petition on behalf of some of the citizens in the communities of Burnaby, Vancouver, Surrey and Richmond, British Columbia, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, wherefore, we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from citizens of the Lower Mainland of British Columbia and Southern Ontario. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada which should be remedied as quickly as possible by the calling of a general federal election immediately. Wherefore, we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

● (1710)

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 17 residents of the cities and towns of Toronto, Brampton, Georgetown, Rexdale and Downsview. The Chair will be pleased to know that it was not Mr. Danson who signed from Downsview. They avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and this must be remedied as quickly as possible, which might be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. KRISTIANSEN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, as the Member of Parliament for Kootenay West, an area whose history in the past and its one-time threat of secession was in part responsible for the building of the Crowsnest Railway, I am proud to present the following petition to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition was signed by 18 residents of the Province of Saskatchewan and the communities of Maidstone, Waseca and Lashburn, along with residents of Ottawa, Ontario and Hull, Quebec. They now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the NDP that the Crow rate be maintained and that the railways of all of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transport system. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the NDP alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HAWKES—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty, on behalf of some citizens of some of Alberta's smaller towns, to present a petition to this House. The petitioners are from Tofield, Beaumont, Leduc and Villeneuve. The objective of their petition is to bring to the attention of this House and the Government the fact that there is a crisis of confidence. In particular in their region, agriculture and energy policies, along with issues affecting tourism, have caused bankruptcy, loss of jobs and severe hardship for many of these people. The purpose of the petition is to call upon the Government to give urgent consideration to the necessity of restoring confidence in this country and to suggest to the Government that the only possible method of restoring confidence is to go through the process of a federal general election.

The petitioners hope that in your examination of their petition you will find it in order, sense the urgency of their plea and that you might use the discretionary powers vested in your office to allow discussion and referral to committee of this matter at the earliest possible moment.

MR. McKNIGHT—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, request that the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board make any change necessary to the formula used to calculate payments under the western grain stabilization fund in order to trigger an immediate payout from the over $900 million currently in the fund. I am pleased to see the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) in attendance.

Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to provide a remedy. As in duty bound, your petitioners ever pray.

MR. FORRESTALL—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, Canadians are now half way from Grenada to Barbados on their way to freedom.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the Hon. Member restrict his remarks to the petition?

Mr. Beatty: That was a news flash, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The rules of the House call for order at this point. If the Hon. Member is introducing a petition, his remarks should be strictly relevant to that.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow I will have a petition from Grenada.

To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore we, the undersigned petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada.

MR. NYSTROM—CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition concerning the merchant marine, signed by 42 Quebecers from a number of large and small centres in Quebec, and also one Leslie Benjamin of Somerset Street here in the city of Ottawa.

An Hon. Member: Who?

Mr. Nystrom: Regina, sorry.

[Translation]

It is a petition by the Seafarers' International Union of Canada to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled.

The petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a common grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians have been deprived of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial spin-offs because we have no industrial maritime strategy and the federal Government has neglected to provide Canada with a consistent maritime policy, although more than two years ago it promised to announce such a policy, and that the Government's action is endangering Canada's economic growth. Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be asked to adopt forth with a consistent and effective maritime policy, resulting in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and expansion of Canadian industry and the shipping industry and related sectors. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, British Columbia especially, now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in Canada. This should be remedied as quickly as possible, which can best be achieved by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action is necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty to present a petition to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. Whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada and this must be remedied as quickly as possible, which might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is dated this 27th day of October in the year of Our Lord 1983.

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Mr. Speaker, I know that the people who are represented by the Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke (Mr. Hopkins) will be interested in this petition because it is signed by a number of people from Pembroke and Petawawa in the Ottawa Valley. That is an area with which you and I are so familiar, Mr. Speaker. The petition is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that there is no doubt that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. That petition is dated October 27, 1983.

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I too rise to present to the House a petition which I think the Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. Hamilton) should be interested in since many of the petitioners are from the riding of Swift Current-Maple Creek. The petition is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of Canada must be upgraded and developed to provide a modern and efficient transportation system. Whereas the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like your direction on this matter because I am not as familiar with the rules and the etiquette of the House as are many of the people who have been in the House for years. I seek your direction and perhaps your advice on a matter that arose when I spoke. While I was reading a petition, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) said: "I spy a stranger in the House". I think, Mr. Speaker, that he was referring to me because I have recently come back from a trip.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect, I am sure the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) is reverting to a time-honoured formula of the House, and the Chair noted that and looked around. I am sure such a formula is never used with reference to Members duly elected to the House of Commons.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to present a petition signed by Canadian citizens from Campbell River, Surrey, West Vancouver, North Vancouver and Vancouver proper. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. The petition is dated October 27, 1983.

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of British Columbia and, as citizens of the Dominion of Canada, they avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a suitable remedy. They believe, Mr. Speaker, that there exists a lack of confidence in the Government of Canada today and that the only way to remedy this would be to call an election. Therefore, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present a petition on behalf of some very fine and thoughtful citizens from the communities of West Vancouver, North Vancouver and Surrey and from many citizens of the good community of Valleyview in the Province of Alberta. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore the confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HOVDEBO—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the House would be interested to know that farmers have occupied the Department of Transport offices in Winnipeg, Edmonton and Regina this afternoon. To the honourable, House of Commons—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, he should confine his remarks strictly to the presentation of his petition.

Mr. Hovdebo: To the honourable, House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the Crow rate is an important benefit to western Canada and one of the earliest incentives granted to settlers and that changing of the Crow rate will reduce farm incomes, contribute to the breaking up of communities on branch lines and increase trucking and road costs, and that three Royal Commissions have recommended retention of the Crow rate. Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as presently guaranteed by statute. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SHIELDS—IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON PLACER MINERS IN YUKON

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which was circulated in the placer mining capital of the world, Dawson City, where the largest placer mining operations in the country have taken place. Because of the potential destruction of the placer mining industry, petitions were circulated in Dawson city and I would like to put on the record what the petitioners asked for. The letter stated that the Yukon Placer Mine Survival Committee is seeking the support of all northerners in their fight for survival against unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by federal Government Departments which would lead to the destruction of the industry. It goes on, "If you feel you could help us, please add your address and phone number." The petition was circulated in Dawson City.

• (1730)

The petition is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, primarily residents of the Yukon, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the survival of the Yukon placer miners is threatened by unfair changes in legislation and regulations proposed by federal Government Departments and that such changes in the legislation and regulations as those proposed by the federal Government would lead to the destruction of the placer mining industry.

Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to enact any proposed legislation that would further threaten the security of employment in the Yukon at a time when the staggering and unprecented level of unemployment in the Yukon threatens the very quality of life in northern communities. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. This is dated October 21, 1983.

MR. MAZANKOWSKI—FEDERAL SALES TAX ON FARM FUELS

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada signed by some 40 residents of Canada. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the crippling federal sales tax on farm fuels in having a very deleterious effect on farmers' incomes and input costs. They are asking that the federal sales tax on farm fuels be reduced.

Therefore, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take the necessary action to provide a remedy and relief in this particular area. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present to the House of Commons. It is to the Honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. It is largely from residents of Wellington County in my constituency. In the petition the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will thereby provide a remedy. The petitioners demand an early general election. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and pleasure to present a petition to the House of Commons on behalf of many citizens of Grand Prairie, Alberta, a community that is depedent partly on agriculture, partly on oil and gas and partly on tourism.

The objective of the petition is to bring to the attention of the House that there is a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada. Members of this community have watched bankruptcies as a consequence of the National Energy Program and they are concerned that Bill C-155 will cause similar bankruptcies in the agricultural sector. There is a shortage of jobs and the Government continues to create jobs in other parts of the country at a rate which it refuses to do for the citizens of Alberta.

The purpose of their petition is to suggest a remedy to the House of Commons and to the nation. That remedy would be a federal general election at the earliest possible moment. If Members on the other side care about Canadians, their economic wellbeing and their health, they will comply with the sense of this petition and cause an election to occur at the earliest possible moment.

Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada, and that includes a federal general election at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure and the duty to present a petition on behalf of the fine people of Claresholm, which is in the southern part of my riding, of Stavely, Mossleigh and also from some people who were visiting there from Surrey-White Rock and Victoria, British Columbia. These people are very concerned because scores of them have lost their jobs, many farms have gone into liquidation, others fear bankruptcy and businesses fear that they will fold up. Consequently they have petitioned the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled and now avail themselves of the ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that Your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. One of the remedies suggested is that the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to insist on a general election being called now before the whole country fails. As in duty bound, your petitioners ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present to the House of Commons a petition signed by residents of the Province of Nova Scotia from such places as Mabou, Baddeck, Inverness, Sydney, Belle Cote and New Waterford. The petitioners stress that the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to world peace.

The petitioners further stress that multilateral nuclear disarmament must occur in order to secure peace in the world.

Therefore, the petitioners call upon Parliament to debate and pass Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapon's free zone, which if passed, would allow Canada to act as a mediator along with other countries that wish to participate in the worldwide nuclear disarmament process. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners as in duty bound, will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that Your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is a cross-Canada petition with signatures from "Toronto the Good", Valleyview, Grande Prairie in Alberta, Maple Ridge in British Columbia; Neilburg, Saskatchewan; Birtle, Manitoba; Fox Creek, Alberta and other communities.

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis in confidence in the Government of Canada, and whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. This petition is dated October 27, 1983. It is signed by residents of Kamloops, British Columbia, Calgary, Alberta, Tranquille, British Columbia, Terrace Bay, British Columbia, and a number of other ridings and communities in the Province of British Columbia.

● (1740)

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 28 residents. They all come from Orangeville, Ontario, which is noted for having a very distinguished representative in this House, the Hon. Perrin Beatty.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is the custom in this House to refer to Hon. Members by constituency and not by name.

Mr. McKinnon: Mr. Speaker, I was simply overcome with my admiration for the Hon. Member and I have difficulty remembering his lengthy constituency name, but I do apologize to the Chair.

The petition of the undersigned citizens, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to yours petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled the petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that having due regard for the serious economic dilemma which faces Canada today, including widespread unemployment, business bankruptcies and personal hardships affecting millions of Canadians, and whereas the Liberal Government shows little competence in reversing this disastrous crisis, the undersigned petitioners have lost confidence in the Government of Canada and thereby insist that Parliament be dissolved and a general federal election be called immediately. Your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. SARGEANT—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition.

The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada who now exercise their ancient and undisputed right to present a grievance with the full assurance that the House will remedy it.

Humbly sheweth that:

Whereas Western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-82 crop year;

Whereas this grain in turn contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade;

Whereas the undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy;

And whereas Western farmers will pay one times Crow;

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain Crow rate,

And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. NEIL—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by a number of Canadian residents who reside in Tofield, Alberta, and Sherwood Park. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. FLIS—CALL FOR VOTE PASSAGE OF BILL C-155

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by taxpayers of Canada who reside in the Provinces of Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled the petition of the undersigned citizens, residents of Canada, humbly sheweth that, due to losses from the carriage of grain, Canada's railways are unable to invest in the expanded railway capacity that is needed to maintain Canada's heretofore good reputation as a reliable exporter-supplier and that Bill C-155, the Western Grain Transportation Bill, will allow this investment to take place while providing the necessary protection to the farmers of western Canada, and that with the passage of this Bill tens of thousands of jobs will be created across the country thereby contributing to economic recovery. Therefore, we the undersigned petitioners humbly pray all Members of Parliament to cease the unnecessary procedural wrangling, immediately conclude debate and vote upon Bill C-155. Your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Bert Hargrave (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from the good citizens, 23 of them, of Gananoque, Ontario to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. It reads as follows. The undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. It calls upon the House of Commons to call an election at the earliest date and concludes: "Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray."

Unlike the petition presented by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis), pray here is spelled p-r-a-y and not p-r-e-y.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. House Leader inspected my petition and found it in order. I ask the hon. gentleman to withdraw his remarks and respect the rules of this House.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I did indeed inspect the petition. It was not signed by three Members of Parliament. It has to be, to be in order.

MR. KRISTIANSEN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of hands across the mountains, I am pleased as a Member for British Columbia to present the following petition signed by some 18 residents of Maidstone, Battleford and Waseca, Saskatchewan; Hull, Quebec and Ottawa, Ontario, to the honourable House of Commons in Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan and others who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of all of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transport system. Therefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, as in my duty as a Member of the House of Commons, I wish to present a petition on behalf of residents of the great riding of North Vancouver-Burnaby. The purpose of this petition, signed as it is by concerned Canadians, is to indicate to the House that there is a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada. The nature of the petition is to demand that a general federal election be called immediately.

The petitioners hope, Mr. Speaker, that in your examination of their petition you will find it in order, sense the urgency and desperation of their plea, and that you might use the discretionary power vested in your office to refer this petition to His Excellency the Governor General at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, that this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and that this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada and in the Canadian Parliament. And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I have the unique, extraordinary and special privilege of introducing a petition on behalf of the thoughtful and wise people from the community of Windsor, whose Minister and Member was in the House just a few moments ago. Those good citizens of Windsor petition the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. BENJAMIN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, in order to speed up the representation of petitions, I will present two petitions which I really should have given to the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) because I know he is an ardent supporter of keeping the Crow.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please state his petition.

Mr. Benjamin: I would be glad to, Mr. Speaker. These are two petitions signed by 37 people from Chaplin, Central Butte, Moose Jaw and Ottawa who humbly petition the House of Commons that they, the undersigned, have carefully considered the alternative plan presented by the New Democratic Party. Wherefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the NDP alternative plan in order that the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rates may be maintained before we have a general election and that all railways of Canada may be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system.

CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and honour to present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada a petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They humbly sheweth that there exists a crisit of confidence in the Government of Canada which must be remedied as quickly as possible by calling a general election. Wherefore, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is signed by 23 citizens from Fairmount, British Columbia; Spruce Grove, Alberta; Radium, British Columbia; Bawlf, Alberta; Calgary; Edmonton; Canal Flats; and Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned citizens of the Dominion of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that, whereas there exists a crisis of confidence in the Government of Canada, whereas this must be remedied as quickly as possible, and whereas this might best be done by calling a general federal election immediately, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to take whatever action may be necessary to restore confidence in the Government of Canada. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray. It is dated this day, October 27, 1983, and it is signed by 25 residents of Kamloops, British Columbia; Barrie, Ontario; Huntsford, British Columbia; Oak Bay, British Columbia; Delta, British Columbia and Edmonton, Alberta.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present signed by 287 Canadians, many of whom live in Banff where the people are angry with the Government over the destruction of a beautiful park in order to accommodate an ex-Liberal Cabinet Minister who built a hotel there and sold it for a sizeable amount of money. Many of these people are also very angry because the Government has extracted—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please state his petition.

Mr. Taylor: Does the Government not want to know why the people are angry?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is an experienced Parliamentarian. Will he please state his petition?

Mr. Taylor: I would be very happy to present it on behalf of the people of Banff, Canmore, and even a chap from Halifax; there are also signatures from Exshaw and Ottawa. They are all angry with the Government and ask that a general election be called because of many reasons we do not have time to outline now. They avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to the petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. Your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to insist on a general election being called now. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. WADDELL—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada who now exercise their ancient and undisputed right to present a grievance with the full assurance that the House will remedy it.

Humbly sheweth that—

[English]

—Since my mother is in the gallery and does not understand French, perhaps I could read it in English. They humbly sheweth that the Crow rate is an important benefit to western Canada, where she is from, and one of the earliest incentives granted to settlers. The changing of the Crow rate will reduce farm incomes, contribute to the breaking up of communities on branch lines and increase trucking and road costs. The petition is from Saskatchewan. It is signed by a number of petitioners from the great Province of Saskatchewan who humbly pray that their petition will be accepted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 6 p.m., I do now leave the chair until 8 p.m., at which time the House will proceed to the question of the invasion of Grenada, pursuant to Standing Order 30.

At 6 p.m., the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 30

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—INVASION BY MULTINATIONAL FORCE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Leave has been granted to the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) to move the adjournment of the House pursuant to Standing Order 30 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the invasion of Grenada by a multinational force led by the United States.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa) moved:

That this House do now adjourn.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the invasion of Grenada which took place not many days ago is an act which should be condemned by every person in all lands representing all ideologies who believe that negotiations, not violence, should be what conducts the affairs of mankind as they are organized in states, and who believe that no state has the right to impose its particular system of government upon any other. That is what this debate is about. I will come back to that point in a moment. Before I do so, I want to say what the debate is not about and to clarify a few matters.

The debate is not about whether one liked or disliked the Government of the former Prime Minister of Grenada, Mr. Bishop, a man who was brutally murdered. Whether one agreed or disagreed with his form of Government, or with what he was doing according to his principles in his land for his people, is not, I repeat, what this debate is about. It is not approval or disapproval of him.

• (2010)

Nor is this about the brutal act of murder that not only took Mr. Bishop's life but that of many members of his cabinet as well as two or more trade union leaders. That kind of brutality, however unacceptable it is—as surely it is among all civilized people—is not what we are debating tonight.

Nor, third and most important, is the debate about the violence that Grenada as a state was involved in vis-à-vis other states. No one involved in the invasion of Grenada that I am aware of has suggested that the State of Grenada itself was embarked upon any form of aggression against any of its neighbours.

Those are the three important matters that I want to say that the debate is not about, Mr. Speaker.

I now want to turn to the essence of the matter. What we are talking about is an act of aggression, as open, as calculated, as inhuman as any other act of murder. I use my words with care because I think it is important for us as politicans to keep in mind what acts of unjust war, in particular are all about. Wars in general are about killing people. Today, as we are debating in Canada, in a fellow member country of the Commonwealth young men and probably young women also are being killed. This means, and we should think of these things,—that when their lives are snuffed out they will never see a cloudless sky with stars again. They will not have the pleasures and the friendships we will have, and they will not experience the joys of parenthood. They will not do all the mundane or blissful things that are part of the human existence.

These people who are being killed, whether young Grenadians defending their land, whether Cubans who happen to be in their land, or whether a young soldier from Iowa who happens to be a U.S. marine and who has been instructed by his Government to act in this way, and, like young soldiers in any nation, is inclined to accept what he is told to do as being the right thing, are lives being lost today. War is not some abstract entity that is a collection of mere statistics. War means that men and women, particularly young men and women, are going to disappear from the planet in a violent and cruel way. We must keep that in mind in this debate.

In my view what we are involved in, in this debate, in this Parliament, is an act that was deliberately and coolly calculated to create violence. It was an act coolly and carefully calculated by a great democracy in the world, the United States of America. I will come back to that in a minute, Mr. Speaker.

Although fellow members of the Commonwealth were involved in this decision to invade Grenada, anyone who understands the political reality of war in this hemisphere or anywhere else on the planet, knows that the United States of America, as the great power involved in this instance, is really behind the activity. For anyone who has any doubt, I ask them to consider whether it is conceivable if the other states involved in this so-called joint action would be taking this action were it not for the United States Marines. Would they, on their own, be combining to invade Grenada? My own judgment, and I suspect that of anyone who thinks about it seriously, would be that they would not be involved.

This is an act to invasion, an act of aggression initiated and led by the United States of America. We in this Parliament have an obligation to state the truth, to accept the truth and, in unpalatable cases, to try to change the reality. That is what we are involved in tonight.

If, as I say, this act of aggression was something initiated in its fundamental causality by the United States, I want, with care, to say why I think that. In so doing I want to deal with the reasons offered by the United States, its President, its Secretary of State, and other spokespersons, for the action and I want Members of the House to consider them.

No doubt as we are here tonight the President is on television and is readdressing these questions and reasserting the arguments and dressing them up with so-called fact. But just consider the arguments and consider whether anyone would believe them if they were offered, for example, by the head of another super power in another part of the world to justify acts of aggression in another part of the world.

First of all, the President has suggested that the United States has been involved in this act to protect its own citizens. That was one reason that was given. Surely we have to see this as a bogus argument. We now know, not through our own sources but through the New York Times as well as other American media, that the United States sent envoys, special representatives of the State Department, a number of days ago, shortly before the invasion, to ascertain whether there was necessity for involvement by the United States of America and its armed forces, presumably, and the answer they got was no.

We also know that the spokesperson for the largest single group of Americans there, namely, the university students, had openly expressed the wish that their President and the United States not take any violent action that could create problems for them.

It takes someone with a rather fanciful imagination to believe that the reason for the action of the United States was to protect its own citizens in Grenada.

Second, the United States has had the audacity, I say, in that region of the world to claim that it was acting to lay the foundations of democracy. I just mention some other countries in that region and ask Members of the House to try to place themselves in those countries and hear the words of the American President. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to think of Haiti, Guatemala, Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic. All those countries in our lifetime have had violence inflicted upon them by the United States again, I regret to say, as a democrat. These countries have been attacked, have experienced the violence of the United States marines and invariably the argument given was that the purpose was to create conditions for democracy. Quite the opposite occurred. After each of these actions of violence by the use of the military, democracy did not grow. Vicious, inhumane dictatorships were what emerged from these invasions—dictatorships that lasted not for a year or two but for a number of decades.

As Senator Moynihan of the U.S. said a couple of days ago, you do not create democracies by using violence, and particularly you do not create democracies in one state by inflicting upon it the organized violence of another. Senator Moynihan said in criticism of his own government: "I don't know how you restore democracy on the point of a bayonet". That sums it up very well.

The third reason given for this action by the United States, Mr. Speaker, was that the American Government was asked by the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States to participate in this intervention—again, not to mince words, "to participate in this invasion". I say again, Mr. Speaker, that this argument is bogus. I say so for a couple of reasons. The most fundamental reason is that no collection of states, whether or not they are democracies, has the right to say, "We will get together and gang up on another state". I do not care, Mr. Speaker, if 45 countries in the world get together and decide that the 46th country is wrong in terms of what it is doing internally. The 45 states should not impose their will on that one state.

This is not the first time in history this has happened, Mr. Speaker. We should keep in mind that democracies use power like tyrannies. Athenian democracy was the same. There was an Athenian empire which sought to impose its will upon other people. A democracy, I repeat, can abuse its authority, its power. It can violate its norms when it deals with other states. The so-called collective decision of a group of states to invade one state in a region has no moral—and I would also argue legal—authority.

The next point I would make, Mr. Speaker, is that the charter of this collection of Eastern Caribbean states has two important requirements in it, both of which were violated. One is that for such action to take place unanimity is required. Grenada is a member of that organization. It should not surprise many people that Grenada did not participate in that decision. That was the number one violation of their own charter. Second, and very important, collective action taken by members of the Eastern Caribbean Organization was to be directed toward an outside aggressor who was taking action against one of its members. Again, Mr. Speaker, that requirement was not met.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the three arguments which have been offered with great seriousness in the U.S. media by the U.S. President and by its Secretary of State simply do not hold water and we in this House, like the rest of the civilized world which wants to be honest, must see that reality.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I would also add, Mr. Speaker, that the action taken by this collection of states against Grenada violates the Rio Treaty. It violates the principles of international law and goes against the United Nations Charter. It goes against the preamble of the Charter and it goes against Article I and II of the Charter. In particular, Article II of the United Nations Charter says that members of the United Nations should refrain from "threat or the use of violence against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state".

I say in passing, Mr. Speaker, that it is a rather sad irony that the attack against Grenada should have taken place the day after the thirty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, the United Nations whose very name was suggested by a very distinguished and very great democrat by the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. I believe that if Mr. Roosevelt was alive he would have grave concerns about the abuse of the very principles of democracy, the very principles of co-operative action upon which the United Nations was founded, and for whose purposes he worked so hard.

I would like to turn now, Mr. Speaker, to what I believe are the real reasons for the invasion of Grenada. They should concern us as members of a country which is part of the Americas. They should also concern us at this particular time in world history when matters are so precarious, when nuclear weaponry make a distinct possibility of the obliteration of mankind. I happen to think, and the evidence can be adduced, and if we had more time I would be only too happy to provide it, that the Reagan administration—not the Carter administration and, not many members of the United States Senate or the United States Congress, but the Reagan administration—has been waging an undeclared war against Nicaragua. It has aided in the suppression of human rights in El Salvador, and it supports the dictatorship which exists in Guatemala. These are unpalatable truths for a democrat. These are unpalatable truths for many people in the U.S. Congress.

The Reagan administration is turning, in my judgment, the whole of Central America into a crusade. It is doing its best to turn that region, and a good part of its members, into a crusade against any kind of political regime which can be seen in any sense of the modern use of language to be philosophically left of centre. It is supporting in this holy crusade—or unholy crusade—any kind of regime on the right, providing that such regime supports the government of the United States. Just as during the Crusades, Mr. Speaker, when the so-called Christian heads of state perverted the very principles of morality, of Christianity, in the name of Christianity, so do we now find people in the Reagan administration completely perverting the most fundamental principles of democracy in the name of democracy. George Orwell told us what this was all about.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: It is in this context, Mr. Speaker, that I say that the attack on Grenada was simply an event just waiting for an excuse to happen, in the mind of the Reagan administration. If we in this House do not say in the clearest way that this is unacceptable, if we do not make it clear that the American administration is doing things which are fundamentally wrong, we betray our own traditions as a democratic people and we will also not be supporting those thousands of American democrats who oppose their government in this kind of activity.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired. He could be allowed to continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Broadbent: I thank Hon. Members of the House. I will try to conclude very quickly.

We must make very clear here in the Canadian House of Commons that we do not support this kind of activity, this aggressive behaviour which has been undertaken against the nation of Grenada, because if the United States—and again I stress, the present administration of the United States—succeeds with this, and that is why President Reagan is on television again tonight, then I ask, can Nicaragua be far behind? And after Nicaragua, will it be Cuba? After Cuba will it be the Dominican Republic? And after the Dominican Republic, who knows?

We have a very basic obligation, Mr. Speaker, to send a message to the Government of the United States that it is morally wrong. I also want to stress, Mr. Speaker, that, as is very often the case in politics, morality counts for practical events. They are not disconnected aspects of human existence. Morality in politics frequently counts in the way states behave. If we do not make the proper decision in this instance as a parliamentary democracy on the northern borders of the United States, not only will we be doing a disservice to moral principles, we will not be sending the kind of practical, moral message which must be sent to the Government of the United States. That is what is involved in this debate.

So I say, Mr. Speaker, that the Parliament of Canada tonight must now join France, Britain, Sweden, Venezuela, Mexico, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic and many other States in making it unequivocally clear that we condemn this invasion.

● (2030)

On the opening day of this session of Parliament, Mr. Speaker, an extremely serious debate took place in this House. On that occasion, as was the case today, I moved a motion under the provisions of our Standing Orders calling for an emergency debate. I did so because the Government of the Soviet Union, through whatever series of events, and in one sense it matters not, got involved in a decision that took the lives of 259 civilians. All of us in this House representing all Parties condemned that action, and correctly so. We did not hesitate when we thought through all of the important intricacies involved, and there were many, and in the final analysis said that was a morally wrong thing to do.

As I said the other day, most actions in politics, whether domestic or international, cannot be reduced to the simplicities of black and white. Most political issues are complex and involve very weighty and practical moral judgments. Occasionally you get clear-cut issues when you look honestly at the evidence. We did that, Mr. Speaker, on the opening day when it came to the shooting down of a Korean civilian aircraft. I suggest we are in exactly the same situation today regarding the clarity of the issues involved. We do not have an issue which is clouded by ambiguity. Anyone who wants to see the facts and see them honestly, I suggest, can only reach one conclusion.

In this sense, Mr. Speaker, I think it is a test for Parliament, a test of the integrity of the Members of Parliament of all Parties, to see if they can apply the same moral standard to that great democracy to the south of us when it acts wrongly, as we did in applying standards and judgments to the Soviet Union when it acted wrongly.

Therefore I would like to propose we resolve this debate by coming together on a motion today, as we did on the opening day of this session. I would like to propose that motion, and I would hope that after consideration it could obtain the support of all three of Canada's political Parties in this House. It is:

This House supports the judgment of the Secretary of the Commonwealth—

That is our Commonwealth, Mr. Speaker:

—who just recently described the invasion of Grenada as:

"A deplorable act of blatant aggression."

In the name of decency, Mr. Speaker, in the name of a fundamental commitment to democracy, in the name of a commitment to the principles of non-violence in relations amongst the nations of the world, I urge all Members of the House to support that motion.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, as you know, I was able to make a short statement on this matter yesterday, but considering the short amount of time allowed for that type of statement I was not able to complete my remarks. Therefore, I would like to very briefly make those same points again tonight.

I pointed out how deeply shocked I and many other Canadians were two weeks ago when the bloody coup d'état took place in Grenada, and how many of us would have supported reasonable international solutions to the problem which had arisen there. But we could in no way approve of the U.S. invasion of that small island which took place earlier this week. There is no doubt in my mind that that invasion, as was said by the previous speaker, is a clear violation of international law, the United Nations Charter, and in effect constituted an act of war against Grenada by the United States. If that action was merely to protect and evacuate United States citizens after other less severe alternatives had been examined, then there could be some justification for the attack. But there has been absolutely no evidence thus far that that was the case.

The other reason given by the United States Government for its action was to restore democracy or protect democratic institutions. I said that was a noble intention but very difficult to believe, Mr. Speaker, since many of the governments supported by the United States in Central America, the Caribbean and Latin America are military dictatorships. I referred to the example of Chile where there was a democratically elected government which was undermined by the United States Government and replaced by military dictatorship, and we see no signs of an invasion by the U.S. against that Government. Many other examples could be given as well.

Nor is it enough to argue that this action was necessary because of the bloody coup d'état which occurred a few weeks before. Do we forget, or do Americans forget that their very beginnings were born in bloody military revolution in 1776 when Americans took up arms in rebellion against the British?

Would it have been tolerated in principle by the Americans that there would have been intervention by, let us say, the monarchies of Europe at that time? Not at all, Mr. Speaker. That is not a legitimate excuse.

The United States action in Grenada must be condemned not only because it is a violation of international law, but also because it sets an example. It allows that a large powerful nation can invade a smaller, weaker nation, if it does not approve of its system or structure of Government, or even if it does not approve of political developments in that country. How was this any different than the reasoning given by the Soviets for intervening in Poland and Afghanistan or the actions of Libya in Chad or the Cubans in Angola?

If we do not condemn the United States in this case, Mr. Speaker, how can we ever with any sincerity, with a straight face, condemn others who would do likewise again? What hypocrisy. If the United States can flout the principle of national sovereignty when it thinks it is appropriate to do so, then so can anyone else. Some will say those others have already done so, so why not the United States? Well, we expect more from the United States. In the U.S. there is freedom to criticize, there are freely elected governments, and there is a constitution based on very high principles. We do not expect the United States to act like the Soviet Union. We expect much more than that from the United States. We expect the United States to respect principle in international relations. Once we dispense with that principle, then we accept that might is right in international relations and that smaller nations must submit to the large powerful nations. World law and world institutions then become meaningless.

It is encouraging, Mr. Speaker, that many countries see this situation in much the same way. Many NATO countries and allies of the United States have criticized and objected to the action taken by the United States. The Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) has mentioned some of those countries which include Britain, France, Italy, Greece, Denmark and Sweden.

Another very sad commentary on this whole incident is the lack of consultation by the United States with its allies. It told some of its allies almost at the last minute what it was about to do, and it told others a few days before, but in such terms that what it was about to do could not really be understood. The United States certainly had no clear and straightforward consultations with the allies it relies upon in so many other ways in international relations.

The House and the people of Canada must certainly reject the puppet policy statement which was made by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mulroney) in the House the day this incident occurred. The Leader of the Opposition was urging the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to jump on the bandwagon of the United States immediately, even before the facts were established. In responding to the Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister said at the time that he was not ready to condemn or condone the American action because he did not yet have the facts. The next day, which I believe was yesterday, the chief spokesman for the Conservative Party criticized the Prime Minister for taking the whole matter a step forward and delivering a note to the United States. He said that the Government was acting too quickly because it needed more facts and more information before it could make any statement. One wonders who really speaks for the Conservative Party on these matters.

An Hon. Member: Do you speak for the Government?

Mr. Allmand: I am touching upon sensitive nerves now, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mazankowski: You're being silly.

Mr. Allmand: Canadians are asking the same question. As a matter of fact, I have received many calls today which have put that very point to me. It is very evident, Mr. Speaker, that there is a fuzzy approach on that side with respect to this whole matter. Their position would be amusing if it was not so lamentable and if the issue was not so important.

This invasion, Mr. Speaker, must be condemned. That type of action repeats all of the errors found throughout history which have led to all-out war. A small invasion here or a small incursion there are the kinds of sparks that set aflame the tinderbox of war on a worldwide scale. Countries like the United States and the Soviet Union should realize that fact, especially in an age when there are enough atomic and nuclear weapons in the hands of both sides to wipe out mankind entirely. One might call this incident in the Caribbean small, but it can be the sort of incident which can lead to much more horrible catastrophes.

After the terrible conflicts of World War II, the United Nations was established and it was established on great principles. As was mentioned, we celebrated its anniversary on Monday of this week. Although it has had its faults, and we admit that it has, it offers a much better way of resolving disputes than unilateral military action. As Churchill once said, better jaw-jaw than war-war.

Peace requires patience and wisdom, not a hasty military action like that which took place in Grenada by the United States. In particular, peace does not require actions taken by the powerful against the weak.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, a moment or two ago, the Government Whip asked me if I would defer my speech until after the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) had spoken in order to allow the Minister to speak second. That apparently will not happen, otherwise I would be following the Minister.

Mr. Turner: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Minister was invited outside by the CBC to do a television show at 9.45 p.m.

An Hon. Member: The CBC is more important. Where are his priorities?

S.O. 30

Mr. Nielsen: As my colleagues have said, that is an indication of the priorities of the Minister.

Mr. Waddell: Where is your Leader and foreign affairs spokesman then? Where are their priorities?

Mr. Nielsen: For the enlightement of the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), I will be addressing the question of where the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition (Mr. Mulroney) is. If the Hon. Member will recall the events today, it was after the Leader left the House to meet a commitment in the riding of the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens), our foreign affairs critic, that the Leader of the New Democratic Party came to me and sought consent for this debate. I believe I even went beyond what he asked me by consenting to the emergency debate tonight. However, that occurred after both the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition and our critic had left the House. They are unavoidably absent this evening.

Mr. Prud'homme: That's the same thing. We know where their priorities are.

Mr. Gimaïel: Where are their priorities?

Mr. Nielsen: I do not think the Hon. Member for Lac-Saint-Jean (Mr. Gimaïel), who would countenance any position including the adoption of communistic stances in order to retain the Liberal Party in power, should be heard to be intervening at this time.

[Translation]

Mr. Gimaïel: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member for Lac-Saint-Jean (Mr. Gimaïel) on a point of order.

Mr. Gimaïel: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it clear to the Opposition House Leader that my Party is the Liberal Party, not the Communist Party as he is insinuating.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair would appeal to Hon. Members. If we spoke to the motion that is now before the House, it would help matters greatly. The Hon. Member for Yukon has the floor.

Mr. Nielsen: In any event, I have explained the absence of the Leader and the critic.

Before embarking upon my remarks, I would like to say that I was affected by some of the remarks made by the Leader of the New Democratic Party tonight. I find that I have to reject absolutely the principle espoused by the Leader of the New Democratic Party that at no time is an intervention to prevent the takeover of a country by a tyrant ever justified. I say that to him sincerely because I have had personal experience of what acts of war are all about.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: In answer to the groans on the other side, I have been there.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: I have seen countries like Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Denmark, Norway, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Africa succumb to that kind of action by states. There is a point—

Mr. Broadbent: They were attacked by another state.

Mr. Nielsen: Peace in our time. Since that time, I have seen the acts that were committed by Russia and Hungary and Czechoslovakia in Poland, Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, so there are occasions when the justification is there.

Mr. Broadbent: What about the U.S. in Guatemala and Haiti?

• (2050)

Mr. Nielsen: Surely it is premature to come to any final conclusion when all of the facts are not in. Surely it is premature to form any final judgment on the actions that we are discussing tonight.

Mr. Nystrom: Terrible. Ask Margaret Thatcher.

Mr. Nielsen: Canada has a long history of involvement with the Caribbean countries—

Some Hon. Members: Ask Margaret Thatcher.

Mr. Andre: He listened to you.

Mr. Nielsen: —from the days when Nova Scotian two-masters carried Canadian fish and other products to the Islands, up to the present when Canadian investment in the Caribbean runs to hundreds of millions of dollars in both the public and private sector. It has been a history of trade and friendship based on mutual respect for parliamentary government in the Caribbean countries of the Commonwealth, as in Canada. On many grounds, Canada has a direct and positive interest in the welfare and stability of the Caribbean Commonwealth countries.

It must be kept in mind that the current action in Grenada was initiated by the countries of the Eastern Caribbean at the request of the Governor General of Grenada and carried out with their co-operation. In the interests of lending co-operation to our neighbours in a time of stress and difficulty, it is imperative that the Government of Canada be on top of the situation, fully informed of developments, take part in the consultations that are going on and show initiative in meeting the serious problems that are developing and which is aware are developing. Unfortunately, there is little indication that this was the attitude of the Canadian Government.

The Liberal and the NDP Parties, together once again, are trying to narrow the issue to the landing of the United States troops in Grenada along with troops of six Caribbean countries. Implicit in this narrow view is that no guilt shall attach to those responsible for shooting down the Prime Minister and four of his Cabinet along with dozens of innocent people. In my judgment, that is not the view that will be taken by most Canadians. This view of the NDP and the Liberals totally discounts the right of the people of Grenada to freedom of choice.

Of concern to Canadians is whether a Caribbean country, member of the Commonwealth, should be turned over to the Cubans and Soviets against the wishes of its people. Premier Castro has admitted to the presence of 600 or 700 armed Cubans in Grenada. They virtually controlled the country. By no stretch of the imagination can this be made to appear as any shining example of democracy.

The Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) position would have resulted in this state of affairs continuing. It would have allowed the Soviets and Cubans to strengthen their grip on the Island. It would have perpetuated a situation where Grenadians had no rights in their own country. It would have sanctioned and approved instability and fear in the region. It appears that the Canadian Government was so anxious to maintain a hands-off attitude that no attention was paid.

We believe the Grenadians, with their tradition of Commonwealth membership, have the same right to free elections as any other country in the Commonwealth. The Government turned its back on the Caribbean situation and it was perfectly obvious that this was its attitude. This is one reason why it was neither advised nor consulted about the multinational force until the very last minute. We are now informed reluctantly by the Prime Minister that Canadian officials did in fact meet with the Caribbean leaders, including Premier Adams of Barbados, as early as last Friday at which time the possibility of intervention was mentioned.

The Government has made much of the fact that Britain has taken the same position as Canada. Even if this were so—and there are essential differences—it must be noted that Britain's situation is not in any way similar to Canada's. The Caribbean Commonwealth countries are former British colonies. Britain does not relish the liberation of a former colony by the United States.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: That was made clear. We do not consider this to be a laughing matter, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Waddell: You are making it such. You are absurd.

Mr. Nielsen: If they had read the debates in the British House of Commons, that was made clear. Britain did not have troops available in the immediate area.

The Prime Minister and the Government have rejected the intervention to restore calm and public order in Grenada.

President Reagan and Secretary Shultz have promised the removal of American marines and the holding of elections within a reasonable period after order has been restored. The Governor General of Grenada will be asked to form a provisional government to act in the interim.

The United States moved in only after a request was received from the chairperson of the Organization of States in the Eastern Caribbean. These States are bound by mutual defence agreements. It should also be noted that the Eastern Caribbean States were asked for help by the Governor General of Grenada, Paul Scoon.

Tom Adams, the Prime Minister of Barbados; Edward Seaga, Prime Minister of Jamaica; Eugenia Charles, Prime Minister of Dominica, who is also chairman of the Organization of the Eastern Caribbean States, were among those who requested intervention.

Great Britain was approached and expressed doubts about armed intervention. Canada was not formally approached or consulted until a few hours before the intervention took place.

Canada has strong interests in the Caribbean. Only last February in St. Lucia, the Prime Minister committed this country to investing some $350 million in Caribbean aid. Private Canadian investment runs into hundreds of millions of dollars and of course, thousands of Canadians use the Caribbean for recreational purposes. There are many thousands of Canadians of Caribbean origin who are now making a substantial contribution in this country.

In a situation of murder and wholesale killing, the Prime Minister and three on his Cabinet shot down in Grenada, a strong Cuban military presence involving a threat to stability of the Caribbean community, the Canadian Government appeared totally unconcerned. It was caught flatfooted by events and now it is saying that it is all President Reagan's fault. Day after day, we asked questions about the Government's intentions and got no answers. Because the present Government does not have the confidence of its allies and partners, Canada was not consulted and advised about what was going to be taking place. The Government adopted its usual non-aligned posture, even to the point of not inviting consultation. Under the existing circumstances, this amounted to giving a green light to those who murdered the chief officers of the government as well as many others.

A Canadian Government with a realistic concern for Canadian interests would have taken steps to inform itself about what was going on. It would have consulted our allies and would have been in a position to offer advice and assistance. The simple fact is that we failed to live up to our responsibilities in that area. We emerged as an untrustworthy partner, one that could not be trusted to keep a secret. The Government was not informed. It was not even interested.

● (2100)

Canadians, Sir, were placed in jeopardy by the Government's lethargy and by the Government's failure to act. As a result Canada's standing in the Caribbean has diminished considerably. All of the wriggling and squirming that has been going on by the Prime Minister and his singularly ill-informed "minister of fate" cannot change those facts. Once again, this Government has let down Canada most deplorably.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

S.O. 30

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Mr. Speaker, the subject matter that has been brought before the House in this emergency debate is one of great importance and is of considerable gravity. It involves a circumstance, indeed a series of circumstances that are alien to what we have been accustomed to for the most part in this hemisphere. I would want to agree with the previous speakers to the extent that the matter is grave, but note that there is a very sharp divergence of opinion between the positions taken by the New Democratic Party, as very articulately expressed by its Leader, and the position taken by the Conservative Party.

I want to begin with something that I consider to be very important. The safety of Canadian citizens who, for one reason or another, found themselves in Grenada at the time of these happenings must be and is my prime responsibility and concern. Since the beginning of the weekend, the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) and I have laboured constantly, often with considerable frustration, to extricate our citizens from the position in which they find themselves in Grenada. In relation to those efforts, I want to say that they have led to many difficulties and much frustration for many worthy foreign service officers. I want to pay tribute to officials at External Affairs here in Ottawa, Washington and in Barbados who, with little sleep, have sought to find their way through the web of military confusion that exists in Grenada in relation to helping our people leave the island.

I want to say also that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), who is on a very important mission in the Middle East, has stayed in contact with the situation through reports on numerous occasions each day.

The military actions I have referred to, of course, make it very difficult to communicate with Grenada because the American occupied zone is under a military commander who has priorities other than civilian traffic. There are many contradictions. We have received incorrect information on a number of occasions, and indeed to the best of the information that we can discern there is a considerable amount of scattered fighting that is still going on in areas of the island that are by no means safe.

There is no question that under such circumstances the military authorities have priorities and have their preoccupations. I believe all of those have conspired against us. I am able to report to you, Mr. Speaker, that our latest indications are that all Canadians known to be on the island are safe.

Mr. Forrestall: How about the others?

Mr. Regan: We have no indication or reason to believe that they are in any imminent danger.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: We have confirmation that two Canadians have been airlifted to the United States, to South Carolina, but we are uncertain as to the exact time at which other Canadians will be able to leave the island.

We have a Canadian Armed Forces Hercules at Barbados. That aircraft has sought for the past 24 hours—longer than that, quite a few hours since the invasion—permission to land in Grenada. First we had another aircraft in mind but this one has been available to go in. We sought and finally during the night obtained permission for that aircraft to fly in today to bring out the Canadians. The aircraft finally received a time this afternoon, flew to Grenada, circled, but was unable to land. I can only report that probably for understandable reasons relating to the military operations, there is a state of high confusion in the operation of the airfield on Grenada. The aircraft was forced to return to Barbados without any passengers. We are in contact with a high source in Washington indicating our grave concern in this matter. We are confident that the Canadians who are still on the island will be airlifted from there tomorrow.

I want to say that the information that we have from the American sources indicates that Canadians had assembled and have assembled in the area of the airport, but we are unable to get any confirmation of earlier reports that a great number of them have been brought out on American aircraft.

I would like to review briefly the past events on Grenada which began to unfold from October 14. The position of this Government was that we were concerned about the political orientation of Grenada under the late Prime Minister Bishop since the coup of 1979 which overthrew the unpopular Government of Sir Eric Gairy. However, Canadian relations were maintained. There was dialogue. There was contact. Our Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) asserted the rights of countries to determine their own internal affairs, as long as they did not meddle abroad, at the St. Lucia Commonwealth heads of Government meeting in February. I want to say that we adhere to that belief. I think that there can be only the growth of uncertainty and grave danger for peace if we all assume the idea that, because a country has a government of a type of which we do not approve, there is the right for military intervention to change that type of government.

If I may move on, there was shock and dismay at the brutal assassination of Prime Minister Bishop and his many political colleagues and supporters. The situation from the Canadian point of view was monitored as closely as possible, particularly in relation to the safety of Canadians, by the first secretary of the Canadian High Commission, Joe Knockaert, who was in Grenada on aid business. He, with the help of members of CIDA co-operants, expecially Allan Bodey, established contact with as many Canadians as possible with a view to calming them and making possible evacuation arrangements. Those events were made extremely difficult by the rigid "shoot-on-sight" curfew. Nevertheless, the contacts were carried out in safety.

It was not possible to carry out an evacuation of the Canadians as early as we might have desired last weekend because the airport was closed for a period of time during the disorder and confusion as to who was in charge on the island.

However, Mr. Knockaert worked out a plan for the evacuation of the Canadians, starting on Friday, October 21, with the existing authorities in Grenada. They again contacted the Canadians to determine who wished to leave, and a charter aircraft was arranged to come to Grenada to pick up the Canadians and a number of other foreign nationals on Monday, October 24. The High Commissioner in Barbados made arrangements for a 48-seat aircarft.

Members will be at least partly familiar with the difficulties experienced with clearance of this aircraft because of the fact that it was one of an airline owned by a number of countries in the Caribbean area and that at the last moment, after permission had been given by Prime Minister Tom Adams of Barbados, other countries objected to it going into Grenada. By the time the confusion in the communications with those far-flung islands was overcome by the helpful intervention of Prime Minister Charles of Dominica and the work of our High Commissioner, Mr. Noble Power, it was too late in the day for the aircraft to fly into Grenada on Monday. As Members of the House know, the invasion occurred early the next morning, and that made evacuation impossible from that time up until the present moment.

In dealing with the events of last weekend, may I say that on Friday, October 21, consultations were initiated with the Commonwealth heads of Government by all four Canadian High Commissioners in the region. These consultations preceded meetings of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States late October 21 and October 22 in Barbados and of the Caricom heads of Government in Port-of-Spain on October 22 and October 23. At the time of these consultations on October 21, while some Caribbean States spoke of the possibility of physical intervention, none indicated any planning that was under way of a firm nature, and there was no indication that United States involvement was contemplated. I might say that at that time some of the Caricom states strongly opposed any idea of military intervention. The result is that they were not consulted further by those who eventually became involved in the invasion.

Also Hon. Members are familiar with the timing of the military intervention. At this point I want to say that after it occurred, when I instructed our High Commissioners in Jamaica and Barbados to contact Prime Ministers Adams and Seaga, they both expressed deep concern that Canada was not consulted. At least one of them spoke on the telephone with our Prime Minister. They indicated—and we have learned it from other sources—that Prime Minister Charles of Dominica had intended to explain the OECS position to the Canadian Government. She said this on television. Apparently it did not happen because of the rapid and dramatic resolution of events.

There was an extremely serious situation in Grenada, a situation of disorder, chaos and violence which caused consternation in adjacent countries and beyond. It was the type of situation which could have endangered the lives of foreign nationals as well as Grenadian citizens. I would be quick to grant that there were many who felt that something had to be done with that existing vacuum.

The principal questions with which we are all deeply concerned, whatever may be our views in the different corners of this House, are whether the action taken was justified and all other possible solutions of a less dangerous nature had been adequately examined. I hark back to the words of the Leader of the New Democratic Party because whatever the views of any Member, I do not think it is possible to find anyone in the House who disagrees with his description of the horror of war and what it does to young making, sometimes to young womankind, and so often these days to civilians. Only when the situation in Grenada has clarified will we know exactly what sufferings may have occurred there as a consequence of the course that was taken.

We understand the concern of other countries and the concern of the Leader of the New Democratic Party. War is terrible and, what is more, war is contagious. When it is seen that military intervention, no matter how noble the purpose may seem to be in one case, can occur in one location, there may be incentive for other countries under provocation to take that action with less justifiable motives.

We believe that wider consultations should have taken place before this action of military intervention occurred. We believe that it might have been possible—who can know now?—to have found a solution to the existing situation which would not involve the shedding of blood of young people, indeed of anyone.

Sir Geoffrey Howe said in the British House of Commons yesterday:

> The United States took one view, the United Kingdom took another. It is no more for me to condemn them than it is for them to condemn us.

The Canadian position has been remarkably similar. We have said that we deeply regret that the Americans found it necessary to take that action. We regret in particular the lack of consultation. Another aspect of our position which needs to be remembered is that we have constantly said that if there is justification, the Americans have not presented it yet. There may be justification of which we do not know. I can only say that President Reagan did not present any new material justifications in his remarks tonight on television.

Mr. Broadbent: We will have to wait a long time for them.

Mr. Regan: I wonder, as we ponder this difficult problem, whether the position of the Opposition Parties might be somewhat different if they had at this moment the responsibility of office.

Again I say that we regret Canada was not consulted. We clearly were not. At seven o'clock on the eve of the invasion we were told by an undersecretary to our Ambassador in Washington, rather than a contact on a Minister to Minister or Chief of State basis, that some sort of rescue operation was under consideration and that possibly it might be of a military type. We were told that these options had to be presented to the President and that other options included an action by the Eastern Caribbean States alone. That hardly was consultation or information that an invasion would take place within hours.

Indeed, the forces of that invasion must have already been in motion.

Mr. Lawrence: Why did you think they did not tell you?

Mr. Regan: The Hon. Member asks why I think they did not tell us. They did not tell us for similar reasons they did not tell Mexico, or Trinidad which had also indicated its opposition to the action, and for the same reason that they did not adequately tell Great Britain or any of the other countries. Apparently they consulted only the countries that indicated in earlier meetings that they were in favour of a military invasion. They did not consult with Canada because they felt that the doubts that have been expressed in this House, and indeed the doubts that exist in the minds of many Members of the Conservative Party, would have been reflected in the advice we would have given.

Mr. Beatty: Because they did not trust you.

Mr. Regan: The Hon. Member says they did not trust us. I say to him through you, Mr. Speaker, that I would not want anyone to trust me to give a blanket endorsement of an invasion in which people were going to be killed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. I wonder if the Minister of State for International Trade might care to seek the unanimous consent of the House to continue his remarks. At the moment his time has expired.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I gather there is unanimous consent.

Mr. Regan: I am indebted to Hon. Members for allowing me the time. We believed there was an unseeming hurry to follow the course that carried hazards for civilians, including our civilians, which created an unfortunate precedent for other countries whose motives may be most worthy. I want to make it quite clear; I want no mistake about it: I admire the great republic to our south. I admire the United States and I value the friendship of the United States. But as a Canadian, I am not prepared to endorse automatically every action that they take regardless of an examination of its merit.

Since the invasion there seems to be a situation in which the understanding by the American authorities—and they chose this course to the extent of military opposition—appears to have been followed. It would appear that their intelligence indicated a much easier situation than occurred. But, of course, it is the sort of danger that comes with military intervention because intelligence can often be faulty. In that case the sacrifice or the loss can be greater than anticipated.

There are many aspects of this web that could be examined, but I am now trespassing on the time of the House. Rather than review in any more detail the motivation or the situation that has existed, I want to deal with the reality of the fact that an invasion has occurred, or a military intervention; the word "invasion" has been used by the American authorities. I want to say that the most useful thing this House can do is to direct its attention toward efforts that may help to restore peace and self-determination for the people of Grenada.

We look to the future. The Prime Minister stated in the House this afternoon that no direct request has been made to us by the Secretary General of the Commonwealth to participate in a Commonwealth peace-keeping force, but that Secretary General Ramphal had made general suggestions along these lines publicly and to Commonwealth members. The Prime Minister indicated that he has been attempting to communicate with certain Commonwealth leaders to explore the same type of idea. As Hon. Members will recall, during Question Period today he indicated he spoke by telephone to Prime Minister Thatcher of Great Britain on this and other related subjects.

If an election is to take place after the hostilities cease and the invading troops leave Grenada, quite presumably some kind of Commonwealth force will be required, the Prime Minister stated. He offered, subject to the approval of Cabinet, to participate in such an observation of an election. He further said that if hostilities are prolonged, he would even go further and suggest that we could call for a truce, ask all foreign nationals to leave and then the Commonwealth could send in an observer force to ensure that the peace is respected. This may be a direction in which Canada can be helpful.

Governor General Scoon is the continuing link with legitimacy on the island of Grenada. That is the case whether he asked for outside intervention or not, and there is considerable controversy and doubt on that question at this hour. However, the Governor General is the representative of Her Majesty the Queen in a Commonwealth country and has a legitimate position. Since 1979, no other authorities have been popularly elected on that island, although there apparently was widespread support for the Bishop Government.

Subsequent to the Question Period today, I have spoken to the Secretary General of the Commonwealth, Mr. Ramphal, by telephone. I told him on behalf of the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) that we endorse his comments in relation to a role for the Commonwealth, as Grenada is a Commonwealth country and Canada is the senior Commonwealth member in this hemisphere. I conveyed to Mr. Ramphal our support and our willingness to participate in any peace force that the Commonwealth should establish to be helpful in Grenada.

I further indicated that the Canadian Government would be willing to assist in consultations with other Commonwealth countries, if that should be considered by the Secretary General to be helpful. After thanking me for our reaction, he undertook to be in further contact with us within the next few hours.

It is difficult at this point in time to know exactly what will evolve in the coming days. Indeed, the Americans, who are militarily in the island, will obviously have a point of view. We believe, however, that the sooner a healthy determination by the people of Grenada can freely take place the better, and there may well be an opportunity and an appropriate role for the Commonwealth.

In participating in this debate tonight, I recognize the seriousness of the situation as justifying the existence of an emergency debate in the House. I commend those Hon. Members, whatever their views, who contributed to an examination of this serious situation and I express my conviction that there may well be a role for the Commonwealth in re-establishing peace and self-determination in Grenada.

• (2130)

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Mr. Speaker, I intend to raise a number of questions and to make some points about this dreadfully serious matter. I will start by making the point that I wish I were as certain about anything in this whole matter as the Leader of the NDP seems to be certain about every aspect of it.

I would remind the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) that, contrary to his expressed view that it is the Cabinet that should decide whether Canada participates in a Commonwealth force, in fact it is the House that should decide that question. I should have thought that he would respect the privilege of the House in making his points on that matter a few moments ago.

A number of people have asked where this Party stands on the Grenadian question. Consistent with remarks made by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) I would point out that this Party as of now is of the view that it is too early to make a definitive decision on this matter. We do not propose to prejudge what happened in Grenada in the last couple of days. We do not know what happened on the days when those murders occurred, or we do not fully know. We are asking the Canadian people to reserve judgment on the matter until we have some answers, as I expect we will have shortly.

Let us see what results from talking to people like the Governor General, Paul Scoon, before Canadians and this Party decide what is in the best interests of Canada in this matter. Let us neither condemn nor congratulate anyone with respect to this; let us wait a little and see what the facts are.

The motion standing in the name of the Leader of the New Democratic Party makes a number of statements. I would take issue with the motion when it states that Grenada is "an independent member of the Commonwealth whose Queen is also the Queen of Canada". I would remind them that the regime of Maurice Bishop suspended the Grenadian constitution in 1979, that a week or so ago General Austin put Governor General Paul Scoon under house arrest, and that the United States only dared to reveal that it was he who had called for aid after he was safely out of the country. I agree with the Minister of State for International Trade that at the moment the Governor General would appear to be the most legitimate focus of government in the country.

I regret that the New Democratic Party has condemned the United States tonight without hesitation after 14 days of silence about the position of Canadians on the island of Grenada.

I gather that the Liberals are disappointed that they were not consulted about the matter. The United Kingdom was consulted, Friday, Saturday and Monday, I understand, but Canada was not told until the helicopters were in the air or landing on Grenada.

One of the aspects of this matter that is so serious to me is that the Caribbean states involved thought so little of Canada that they did not even consult us. As I understand it, none of them consulted Canada to see what advice we could give.

As a Member of the Party that I believe will form the Government of this country within a year or so, I also regret that the Department of External Affairs was so little aware of what was happening in and around Grenada that it did not apprise the Government, as I understand it, of events until the time of the invasion.

And last, Mr. Speaker, our best ally and friend, our major trading partner and one of the two countries with which we share this continent, did not trust us with information and did not consult us, as we were entitled to be consulted. I hope if something like this happens in the future we will be consulted. It seems to me that the Canadian Government has suffered a rebuff from the Caribbean States and the United States and from everyone involved in the tragedy that has occurred in an area where we used to think we had some influence and prestige.

I should like to refer to a note that I made last night of what the Minister of State for International Trade said on the CBC television program "The Journal". He said that his Government is unable to see any justification for this. I think that represents an overly broad generalization but we must wait to see whether it is borne out by the facts.

At this point may I give a perspective I obtained today from a member of the East Caribbean community. It is his view of what has gone on in Grenada. I do not want to reveal his name because I do not think it would be fair to mention it in this Chamber. He made the point that he, as a member of an East Caribbean country, thought that bulldozers, etc., were the stock in trade of people who were building airport runways. We heard tonight from President Reagan that a warehouse was found to be full of weapons and that there were 600 seemingly well trained Cuban construction workers and 30 military advisers on the island. My source from the Caribbean asked what the true intentions of Cuba were in building this runway and pointed out that 600 armed men could overrun any of the member states of the Organization of East Caribbean States.

The gentleman I refer to also expressed to me his profound concern about what 600 armed people could do in that region of the world. He reminded me that about a year ago a plot was uncovered in the City of Toronto of a coup to be undertaken against Dominica. That coup was fortunately stopped. He pointed out that 100 armed men could probably seize and take control of Dominica. He pointed out that those six States, three of which have no army at all, are terribly vulnerable to an armed takeover. That is why he and many other people were so concerned about what was going on in Grenada at the time.

I should like to turn now to the statement of Prime Minister Eugenia Charles of Dominica, who was trained as a lawyer in the City of Toronto. Her statement to the OECS Permanent Council on October 26 is quite lengthy so I shall only refer to a few points that she made. She said:

> Member governments considered that the subsequent imposition of a draconian 96 hour curfew by the military group in control was intended to allow them to further suppress the population of Grenada which had shown by numerous demonstrations their hostility to this group.

Then she said:

> Member governments have also been greatly concerned that the extensive military build-up in Grenada over the last few years had created a situation of disproportionate military strength between Grenada and other OECS countries. This military might in the hands of the present group has posed a serious threat to the security of the OECS countries and other neighbouring states.

She went on to say, and I will paraphrase it, that the military group in control under General Austin was going to consolidate the position of the regime and that the country could be used as a staging post for acts of aggression against its members. Then, referring to Grenada, she said:

> —a level of sophistication and size far beyond the internal needs of that country. Furthermore the member states of the OECS have no means of defence against such forces.

● (2140)

As Hon. Members here will know, she went on to cite Article XVIII of the Caribbean Treaty establishing the OECS, which is concerned with defence and security and indicates that members can take appropriate action.

I will raise a completely different point at this time, and that is the question of Canadians who have been taken today by American Hercules planes to North Carolina. I would put it to the Government, Mr. Speaker, that if its expressed desire that only Canadian planes should take Canadians out of Grenada had endangered the lives of those people, the Canadian people will never forgive this Government. I feel sure that when the facts come out there will be many people who will be interested in knowing whether Americans were removed from the Ross Point Inn more quickly than the Canadians who were gathered there. Given the fact that the United States offered to take Canadians out on an equal priority basis with Americans, if our Government, out of a perverted sense of national pride, kept those Canadians waiting in that hotel while Americans staying in the same hotel or nearby were removed safely, then I submit this Government will hear a lot about this during its remaining life in office. That is one of the matters which will come out in the days ahead. For the sake of those 40 innocent Canadians, I pray that this Government did not put its petty nationalism ahead of their lives and safety.

I next ask the question, why is it that Barbadian Prime Minister Tom Adams gave a speech on television last night indicating that Canada had been advised of the planned invasion of Grenada? This certainly would appear to me to contradict the statements made by the Government here in Ottawa. I would hope that that matter would be clarified in the days ahead as well.

On the question of consultation on the possible invasion, when did the Government of Canada first realize that this invasion was taking place? Was it really when the helicopters were in the air, or was it earlier? Canadians are entitled to know that, Mr. Speaker. What was it the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was getting at today when he told us that someone from the Caribbean was supposed to phone the Canadian Government to tell it what was going on, but forgot to do so? I feel that is something Canadians are entitled to know about as well. Why, for that matter, was not the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) recalled from the Middle East to try to deal with the question? He has good relations, I gather, with Secretary of State Schultz. One would wonder as a Canadian why he was not back here to deal with that important question which arose some time ago.

I ask again, Sir, why it was that after the execution of Mr. Bishop our Government did not more actively pursue the question of evacuating the men and women from Canada who were there? Was every avenue of escape investigated? Or were only avenues which involved the use of Canadian aircraft discussed? Why was it that the Canadian Government was reluctant to accept the American offer to evacuate the Canadians? When did the United States make that offer? For that matter, I do not beleive the Canadian Government has ever indicated how many Canadians are on Grenada and I would like to know why it does not know. Were the lives of Canadians placed in danger by the policies of the Canadian Government on the matter? That is something again that Canadians would like to know.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the all important question of the future. Will the Canadian Government really participate in the Commonwealth peacekeeping force? Will it take an active role in creating a new government which is broadly representative of Grenadian society? Will it give this House a chance to debate the nature and quality of such representation?

These are some of the questions which occur to me, and there are many more which may occur to other Hon. Members. I wish I were as certain about these matters as the Leader of the New Democratic Party. However, I believe that in fairness to our allies we owe it to them not to prejudge, not to decide prematurely that the United States in guilty of this or that. I believe that none of us should be making rash statements such as those made by the Leader of the New Democratic Party or the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand). We should all wait a little and act in fairness and goodwill to all parties involved in this matter. Then, and only then, should we be making categorical statements.

Mr. Pierre Gimaïel (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I want to take the first few moments of my speech to come back to what the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) said when he referred to a speech I made in this House about two years ago. I speak in English because I want to address myself to the people who have been subjected to the propaganda of the Progressive Conservative Party in the last months. I know that the Tories took out of context a portion of a previous speech I made two years ago. It was possibly one of the most humane speeches delivered in this assembly for many years, and that Party used it to make the Canadian people believe that the Liberals are Communists and that I myself am a Communist.

I want to tell the Hon. Member for Yukon—and the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) knows it quite well—that Communist armaments killed over 100,000 people in Lebanon, the country of my ancestors, in the past seven years. Why is he then trying to use a speech in which I was simply saying to the Canadian people that sharing is the future of our country and the future of our world to make the Canadian people believe that here on this side of the House we are Communists when we are not at all?

The Hon. Member and his colleagues, including the Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. Mulroney), from what they have shown in the last few days, are those kinds of people who are driving our world into the way of intolerance, which is resulting in actions like the ones which are occurring now in Lebanon, Afghanistan and, for a few days, in Grenada.

I said this in English, Mr. Speaker, because I wanted to make sure—although my English is not as good as I would wish—that people in Provinces and in areas other than mine will understand that Communism and goodwill are not the same thing.

[Translation]

To get back to today's debate, Mr. Speaker, Canada's position to date on the events in Grenada is in line with similar positions it has taken in the past, arising from the basic respect any political party and government must show other governments, whatever their allegiance may be.

Mr. Speaker, this last weekend was supposed to be a celebration of disarmament, but instead of showing us brotherly love, it showed us the horror of what happened in Lebanon, where young American and French soldiers who were there in a peace-keeping capacity were brutally murdered. It showed us how a small country called Grenada was ruthlessly invaded.

Mr. Speaker, the past prepares the future, and I remember a similar invasion that took place about seven years ago at the request of the government of the country that was being invaded. Seven years ago, the Syrians marched into Lebanon, at the request of the Lebanese Government. At the time, none of the Western or Eastern countries voiced any objections. Today, seven years later, the Syrians are still there. Syrian cannon and arms have thundered for months over the heads of anything that moved in Lebanon, whether Palestinians, Lebanese or others, and even more forces joined them. All this because countries throughout the world chose to ignore that act of aggression, the massive invasion of a foreign country.

When we refer to disarmanent, we generally mean nuclear arms and everyone knows about the nuclear arms race. A lot of people accept it alleging that, strategically, if both sides have nuclear arms, there is no danger of war. However there is another basic aspect to that famous theory which is aimed at deterring a possible enemy, and it is that in addition to having nuclear arms, both sides must show that they fully intend to use them. That is what concerns me, Mr. Speaker, because this is exactly what is going on. Both the Soviets and the Americans are now vying to show up to what length they are ready to go in their military operations. Everything began with Afghanistan. Let us see what occurred afterwards in the Middle East. Look at what happened afterwards in the Middle East. We are now speaking about events occurring very near our own country, in Central America, and the Official Opposition is asking us to endorse such an action, to endorse an aggression which can lead to a nuclear tragedy. We will not, I believe that it is too much to ask, Mr. Speaker. I believe that world leaders have to rise and say: The frontiers of any existing country, whatever it may be, have to be respected. Shall we continue, Mr. Speaker, to accept that the wars of other people be waged in countries which have neither the power, nor the will, nor the capacity to defend themselves, such as Lebanon? Are we going to tolerate such an action, even if we are a free country aligned behind the United States, a country which is proud and which plays a role in NATO, a country which is a member of NORAD, and proudly so, the second largest country in the world, a country located between the two most powerful hostile nations, the U.S.S.R. and the United States, our two neighbors? Even if we live in such a country, shall we accept that the frontiers of the weaker countries not be respected by the stronger countries? Did Canada not protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan even if the Afghan government had apparently requested such an intervention?

Mr. Speaker, can anyone give me one good reason which would allow us to justify and condone that kind of action? Unfortunately, on the basis of facts, there is no such reason. As I have said, politicians will have to rise and Canada will have in the years to come to remain in the eyes of the smaller countries the symbol of a nation which has always defended those who needed it, either within its own frontiers or abroad. Let us continue to view individual freedom and freedom of expression as important principles in our lives.

I watched the Members of the Official Opposition take offence yesterday because the Canadian Government had not been consulted. The explanation is simple. Canadians are not a bellicose people, they have never invaded any place, they have always gone where they were asked to keep the peace, they are always where they are needed. They never seek our permission to invade other countries, for they know for a fact that if they did, some 95 per cent of our fellow Canadians would stand up and say "no", for we know that we are not very many to defend our huge country and that our borders are quite vulnerable. We know that we must gain the consideration of others if we want them to respect our borders. We know that we must do unto others, no matter their size, number and strength, what we want them to do unto us. That is what being Canadian means, Mr. Speaker.

I am proud tonight to see that most countries are now supporting the position which the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) announced in this House a few days ago. I am proud also that the British Prime Minister who visited us in the House has indicated just how important it is for our allies to continue to help one another and to stand together against all possible foes, and that the so-called Iron Lady has adopted the same course of action as the Canadian government, for we just could not let the two super-powers continue to play as they do with the destinies of lesser countries.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to emphasize to you that there are no bombs falling on either Soviet or American territories and that both sides do not test their most recent weapons over their own territories. I am saying this, while fully aware of the part we have to play as a country, and that which the United States have to play as a world power. As President Reagan was reported as saying tonight, the United States is not a small country, and I agree with him when he says that super-powers must intervene in the affairs of the other countries. And I am saying this, knowing fully well that our basic values of freedom and brotherhood, the very values of Christianity which we have forever fought for, are at the mercy of potential enemies and that the Americans, just like us, must do their utmost to protect them.

What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that it does not give us the right to take up arms and impose our will as if it were a matter of agreement, freedom, cooperation and fraternity. I think instead that Canada has been setting an example for a number of years. In their own country, the Americans have been giving the example for years through their domestic policy. Why not continue, Mr. Speaker? I suggest it is somewhat like in our personal lives and, if we want to be respected, we have to respect ourselves first and then respect others regardless of their size, their abilities and their strength. In that respect, I am proud to belong to the same party as the Prime Minister of Canada, who has shown once again that being a Canadian is first and foremost to believe in the freedom of expression of men, nations, ethnic groups and ideas. I am active in politics mainly because I want the situation to remain as it has been in recent years.

In conclusion, may I express the hope that those Canadian citizens who are still on that island will be able to return home as soon as possible. Let us hope that once again Canada will play the great role it has been playing throughout the world as a peacemaker along with others which will help Grenada find peace and harmony for all the inhabitants of the island.

[English]

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I listened tonight to the speech made by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) who so quickly abandoned the high road that had been taken by the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) by introducing this motion. I then listened to the subsequent speech made by the Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour). I simply cannot understand why those two particular Members were chosen by the Conservative Party to lead off this debate. They have not taken any part whatsoever in the work of the subcommittee of the Canadian External Affairs Committee on Canada's relations with the Caribbean and Latin America.

Be that as it may, after listening to those two Members, it occurred to me that if they represent the Conservative Party and if, perchance, the Conservative Party forms the Government of this country, they will say that whatever the United States administration does is all right with them.

An Hon. Member: A blank cheque.

Miss Jewett: As my colleague said, it will be a blank cheque. I find this really horrifying. I have listened today to many American Congressmen and Senators, many of them who are of a conservative persuasion, lashing the Reagan administration for this invasion. I assume that Conservative Members of this House cleared the remarks they were going to make with their Leader and with their External Affairs critic, neither of whom could be here tonight, but in any event, neither of whom are here. I have to laugh, Mr. Speaker, when I hear the Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona say that the Americans did not consult with the Canadians because they did not trust them. What Hon. Members of the Conservative Party are really saying is that the only time the Americans will consult with a country is when they know that that country will be ready to do whatever it is they want that country to do.

The Americans have forgotten completely that although they phoned Mrs. Thatcher and she cautioned them not to do it, they did not in fact take her advice. They did not call her back, they did not wait when she asked for a bit of time; they simply went ahead with their decision. So much for consultation.

What has disturbed me perhaps more than anything else since the new Leader of the Conservative Party (Mr. Mulroney) came into the House has been the growing disposition on the part of that Party to not make any judgments on its own account on international affairs. We do not have to wait another ten days to make a decision on this invasion. We have to get as many facts as we can about it, and we have all tried to do that. Most of those facts now seem to be available. Then we make our decision. That is what the Secretery General of the Commonwealth has done and what the majority of Latin American countries that are opposed to the invasion have done. That is what many countries in western Europe have done and many members of the American Congress and Senate have done. They have made their decision. The Tories are still waiting to make their decision. I think that the Liberals have made their decision, although I was not entirely sure about that after listening to the Minister tonight. I hope that they have.

May I repeat for the benefit of the empty Tory benches that the motion we introduced is as follows:

This House supports the judgment of the Secretary of the Commonwealth who just recently described the invasion of Grenada as:

"A deplorable act of blatant aggression".

We all regret to say that that is exactly what it is. The Hon. Member for Yukon said that he totally and entirely disagreed with this motion. I cannot quote him exactly, Mr. Speaker, but I wrote down what he said as carefully as I could. He said that it is justified to intervene in a way similar to the intervention of the United States in order to prevent a takeover by tyrants. That is how the Soviet Union would justify an invasion. Now the Hon. Member for Yukon justifies an invasion on those grounds. I never thought we would see him taking a position that is totally immoral as well as illegal under international law and one which is in accord with the positions that we have seen taken by the Soviet Union.

The Hon. Member for Yukon made another incredible comment when he said that Britain does not relish the liberation of a former colony by the United States. Does anyone in the House think for a moment that that was Britain's concern? Does anyone think that Britain did not mind the action being taken but it simply did not like the fact that the U.S. took that action? Presumably Britain would have preferred it if another nation were to have taken that action. Apart from the fact that it is a tremendous misuse of the word "liberation," that is all that I can make of the Hon. Member's statement.

I would like to discuss the Government for a moment because the Minister is now in the House and he may wish to intervene about a matter on which the Canadian Government has not yet come clean. I hope that he will. We all understand the enormous confusion that there must be on this tiny island. The island is so tiny that one can fly over it in a helicopter in only two minutes. I understand that there must be a great deal of confusion there since all of the phone lines are jammed and so on. Nevertheless, the fact is that Prime Minister Adams, the Prime Minister of Barbados, in a speech on television last night that was referred to earlier, although this part of it was not, said that he had met with the Canadian High Commissioner, Noble Power, in Barbados last Friday at 8 p.m. at Mr. Power's request. It was the wish of Mr. Power to relay on behalf of the Prime Minister and the Government of Canada the concern about what had been happening until that point and more particularly the concern about the murder of Prime Minister Bishop and the concern for Canadians and nationals of other countries.

Last night on television, Prime Minister Adams who was in Barbados said that when he talked to Mr. Power, he told him that the only option was military intervention. He did not specify any particular nations but he did say that he had told Mr. Power that the only option for the Grenada situation was military intervention by a state or states unnamed. The report on the television program came from people who were there and who heard the comment. Perhaps it has been mixed up in transmission somehow, but it did come directly through the electronic device of television. If it has not been mixed up, it really gives me and my colleagues the concern that that was not communicated to Ottawa. I am sure the High Commissioner would have communicated that because it is quite alarming to hear that the only option in the Grenadian situation was military intervention. If that was communicated, I assume he did so probably for the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), whom, I understand, at that juncture was acting for the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), whom we have not seen too often in the House concerning this matter.

We could have acted then to try to persuade the Canadians to leave. I am sure many of them would have left if they had been told that the only option was military intervention. I suggest there was Saturday and Sunday, and possibly Monday, when they could have come out. While I am aware of the difficulty in getting the regionally based airline which the Minister told us about, I am speaking about the time earlier than that.

Mr. Regan: The airport was closed.

Miss Jewett: Not on Saturday.

Mr. Regan: Yes, it was.

Miss Jewett: There are other indications that it was not.

Furthermore, there is the most interesting fact that there was another evacuation planned. I do not know if the Minister realizes this, but he has never even told us about it. It would have involved evacuating American, British and Canadian citizens on the Cunard liner Countess. This story is in today's New York Times. That ship was due to dock in Grenada on Tuesday. The article states:

American officials said that in response to a request from the American Embassy in Barbados, the captain of Countess had radioed that he would take on free of charge all American, Canadian and British citizens who wanted to leave the island, but had to have word if this plan were acceptable by Monday.

Perhaps we did not hear about that, but I would think that our High Commissioner would be in touch with the American Embassy in Barbados. I feel quite strongly that we still have not been told clearly that the opinion of military intervention was being discussed and that it was known Friday evening. I assume that the High Commissioner told External Affairs, so that there is either great confusion in that Department or the Minister for External Relations was excluded from any further discussion on this matter since nothing was done on Saturday or Sunday.

What disturbs me even more is that the Minister is not coming clean about this. Yet this is exactly what Prime Minister Adams of Barbados said on television last night.

We believe that the Canadians are in the hotel. We do know that the United States has refused permission for the Hercules to land. One could suspect that the Americans want to return them on their planes in order to give some additional justification to their presence in Grenada.

The American invasion of Grenada brings to mind a scenario that was written at least two years ago. An article was written by Gail Lem in This Magazine in March of this year. The article is entitled "The Elephant and the Mouse: What's the US Doing in Grenada?" It is very much worth reading in full, but I will quote only the three first paragraphs. She is talking about something called "Ocean Venture '81". The article states:

> Like all such displays of military might, Ocean Venture '81 was weighted with code words, jargon and in-speak, but authorities did not waste undue language skills or political sophistication to disguise the real-life target of the exercise. In the eight-week flaunting of sea power by the United States and its allies in late 1981—their largest peacetime naval manoeuvres since World War Two—
> As many will remember—
>
> Grenada became 'Amber and the Amberdeens'—
> That was the code:
>
> And 'our enemy in the Eastern Caribbean'—
> This is a tiny three-island state which, according to Ocean Venture '81, was:
>
> —busy exporting terrorism, subversion and anti-democratic revolutionary activity' throughout the region under the influence of a menacing 'Country Red.' Citizens of Grenada and its sister island dependencies . . . were understandably horrified at finding themselves the object of the US effort in the Caribbean and they were doubly shocked with the scenario's denouement: an invasion of the country by the US after Amber's radicals seize American hostages and 'negotiations with the Amber government breakdown.'
> The United States carried out a full dress rehearsal of this mock invasion at Vieques Island, the US base off Puerto Rico. Under the direction of Rear Admiral Robert P. McKenzie, commander of the Florida-based Caribbean Task Force created by former President Jimmy Carter to counter a perceived 'Soviet threat' to US interests in the region, US paratroopers staged a dawn parachute drop into Vieques. Combat troops trained for mountainous terrain provided support, followed by 1,000 amphibious marine units and air assaults.
> The US State Department insisted that the operation was intended only to 'develop a quick reaction capacity for a hypothetical hostage rescue mission.' Why then did the battle plan also call for US troops to remain on the island after rescuing the hostages and to seize power from the 'unfriendly' Amber government in order 'to instal a regime favourable to the way of life we espouse?'

That is the direct quote, "To instal a regime favourable to the way of life we espouse."

That was the scenario in 1981. Apart from the fact that it was not a question of hostages, almost everything else that has happened in the last few days is identical. I fear that it will escalate rather than de-escalate.

American administrations have yet not learned that it is not in the best interest of the United States, their strategic interest or otherwise, to engage in military interventions of this kind. It was not successful in Viet Nam and it will not be now. I am afraid that it will lead to tremendous escalation.

The Cubans have nationals whom they will want to protect as well. They have lost 100 already. They did not start the invasion, and this will just lead, I am afraid, to a tremendous escalation of the situation.

I agree entirely to participating in a peacekeeping effort but I really fear for what will happen before we have an opportunity to do that.

For one per cent of the cost of this massive military invasion, massive in the context of Grenada, that country could have been given an enormous contribution toward economic development, prosperity and political stability. Prime Minister Bishop had sought international development assistance and financial support for the development of the economy and particularly for building its tourist industry base. Such support was not given by the United States, just the opposite. To think that only one per cent of the cost of this invasion could have brought some prosperity and democracy to Grenada!

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) has been making a great issue of the fact that the Minister has not come clean with Canadians. I think we are all prepared to admit that the Government has not come clean with Canadians. I suggest that the fact of the matter is that the Minister has not come clean because he obviously does not have all of the facts himself. They have not been given to him. His diffidence about imparting them to us, even those that he has, is very definitely related to the fact that he has so few to impart. That is obvious. The Minister, while he was out appearing on CBC this evening, obviously did not hear the President of the United States who was talking at that time and revealing that only two hours before speaking—and that was about four hours ago—there had been discovered on the island of Grenada three large warehouses stacked to the roof with arms and ammunition. That fact the Minister obviously did not know. I think none of us have the facts that we need on which to form a judgment.

There are some very disturbing news reports that I understand are now on the news wires. I will not give currency to them because I have no means of testing them, but they are very disturbing.

I think, Mr. Speaker, when you consider that in all sanctimoniousness today the New Democratic Party decided, and tried yesterday, to have a debate on this matter, it can be explained if we look at the chronology of events. On October 12 we learned that the Prime Minister of Grenada had been arrested. That was a Wednesday, if I remember correctly. Over the weekend we heard more disturbing events, and on Monday morning in the House the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall) asked the first question about this matter as a result of information which had reached him. That was Monday of last week. There were no questions whatsoever from the New Democratic Party. On Tuesday there was no Question Period because of a procedural problem. On Wednesday the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East asked another pair of questions. On Thursday, a week ago today, the Leader of Her Majesty's Opposition led on the matters relating to Grenada, and was followed again by the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East in probing and trying to find out what information there was. We did not know what was happening. We were not privy to the developments. We have had to read the papers and to rely on the newspapers and the wire services to get any information at all. And on that day, last Thursday, the NDP asked questions about fishermen in the north.

On Friday, the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) and I asked certain questions about recognition and consultation. There was consultation, I believe, going on at that time and we asked whether we were going to be party to that consultation. The NDP Members were asking questions about the Cruise missile, nothing about Grenada.

Then came Monday morning following that, and that was the critical weekend when the Leader of Her Majesty's Opposition (Mr. Mulroney) and the Hon. Member for York-Peel asked questions about the new regime, because we then learned that the Prime Minister of Grenada had been assassinated along with a number of members of his cabinet, or the information we had from the press at that time led one to believe that that was the case.

The Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Member for York-Peel asked questions pertaining to these events. The NDP was asking about disarmament. Then we come to Tuesday when we learned again from the press of the landing of U.S. and other troops on the island of Grenada and the NDP was asking about the automotive industry. There were four Members of this Party who were asking questions in order to determine what the facts were. None of us on this side had the facts. That Government ought to have had them. I know from experience it has a trained Department of External Affairs which normally gets at the facts. The Department did not get them. That is one of the problems with which this Government has been faced. It is not getting facts. But as I say, the New Democratic Party Members were talking about the automotive industry.

On Wednesday, in a statement the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ogle) asked about Nicaragua. At that time on Wednesday, yesterday, came the first question on the matter by the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent). He stood up and condemned the invasion, just like that. He knew all the facts. He could decide. An outright condemnation, he suggested, and that is basically what we are being asked to debate tonight.

How did they get their facts? I spent a fair amount of time looking in The New York Times, in the London Times, the Wall Street Journal and in Canadian papers. The facts are not all that easy to come by. The Government is not giving them to us. I think the Government is not giving them to us because it does not know them. The Government has been denied the facts. That is the regrettable conclusion to which I come.

Then we hear from the Prime Minister of Dominica, Miss Charles, who described the operation at the beginning of the month as a preemptive defensive strike in order to remove a dangerous threat to peace and security in the region. That was a statement by someone who lives next door to Grenada where the trouble is and about which we are learning more and more, about warehouses of arms and ammunition. Why should we not listen to those who lived with the problem? They probably have greater access to the facts than we have.

Then we learn, not immediately, and I have not heard all that much from the Government on this matter, that the Queen's representative was in protective custody within Grenada, incommunicado. Somehow or other, happily, he managed to get out a message asking for help. This was the representative of the Queen, the legal representative of authority in the country. There had been a coup d'état. The Prime Minister had assumed power in 1949 by a revolt and now, by a second revolt, he was replaced. These facts are now coming out very, very slowly. The people in the area feel there is a danger to them, to their way of life and to their institutions by the establishment in Grenada of a regime which has no basis in law, a basis only in revolution. Yet we have the sanctimonious New Democratic Party Members standing up and condemning whatever has been done to help those people in response to requests from them.

Next I would like to mention a report which I read from The New York Times Service. It is an analysis of the situation by a correspondent named Hedrick Smith. I do not know whether the name Hedrick Smith means anything to Members in the New Democratic Party. They probably have not read his book. I woulkd advise them to read it. Hedrick Smith's book is called "The Russians". He was The New York Times representative in Moscow for a number of years. We can remember Djilas' book and the story of the new bureaucracy that was being developed in Yugoslavia. Now we find Hedrick Smith describing, in very intimate and detailed terms, the new aristocracy of the bureaucracy which has grown up in the Soviet Union. Obviously Hedrick Smith knows what he is talking about when he is talking about matters related to the incursions, the insidious infiltrations by surrogates of the Soviet Union into other areas of the world such as the Caribbean. The facts are still coming out, but slowly. Obviously we do not have enough facts to form the far-out judgments which were put forward by the New Democratic Party in its resolution.

● (2230)

I was quite disturbed by some of the comments attributed to the Canadian Ambassador to Washington. This morning I read an article in The Globe and Mail which indicated some of the things he said about the Canadian Government having doubts about the need for the United States-led invasion in the Caribbean Islands. He said that from the information available to him they do not consider the invasion to have been justified. That could very well be, on the information available to him. As I already suggested, all available information was probably not made available to him. This same Ambassador is quoted as saying:

—the United States had offered to fly out Canadians who wanted to leave Grenada as soon as it was considered safe to do so, but Canada had refused.

I would like to think that the following quotation is incorrect. I hope it will prove, in the course of time, to have been incorrect. However he said, "I told him", "I" being the Ambassador and "him" being Mr. Dam of the State Department, "that we're a sovereign nation and that the only natural thing for us to do is to go in and look after our own people." This was at a time when a 707 was sitting on the runway in Barbados. Anyone with experience flying 707s would know that it could not have landed given the condition of the runways in Grenada. I would like to know how that planes was ever diverted to Barbados. I feel we ought to be given an explanation of that. I suppose someone on the other side ordered it to go there. When the Government orders, off goes the captain. I would not be surprised if the captain said, "There is no sense in going to the Barbados for me to take off and go to Grenada because I will never be able to land in Grenada". The Government would tell him to do what he was told. Eventually they had to get a Hercules. I gather the Hercules went there, as the Minister indicated. It was warned off and had to return to Barbados. All this time the Canadian Ambassador was saying that we were a sovereign nation, that we would look after our own kind, and that we did not need any help. That is a very strange way to look after one's own nationals.

I was glad to hear the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam mention the Cunard Line's vessel, The Countess, which was due to arrive in St. George's on Monday or Tuesday. It offered to take off all the Canadian, British and United States citizens who were there. However, it was warned off because of the inherent dangers in that country.

The conclusions about the operation itself are still very difficult to finalize. Perhaps we will not take that much comfort from the role of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), vaunted by himself and by his Party as being the great mediator and conciliator in the East-West talks and the North-South talks, boxing the compass, if one likes. It has been very seriously eroded in this particular operation. It is very evident that the facts were not reaching Canada as we would normally hope they would. Perhaps one day they will when we re-establish the credibility of our country. When we look over the record of the Prime Minister, it should not really surprise us. He made incredible inroads of destruction in the Department of External Affairs, in which I served, and divided the country by his policies of confrontation. Now he has eroded his own credibility.

To condemn, as this particular motion suggests we ought to do, the operation which has taken place in the eastern Caribbean in response to a request from four members of the area, I think is much too soon. As for the motion the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) presented at the end of his speech, I have yet to see the text of it but, as I listened to it, I found it even more upsetting, more hasty and based on fewer facts than are justified. While he might have been very happy to have it on the record to show, "What a fine boy am I", there is no question in my mind that it was premature. We have no position, and the Government is no help to us in putting us in a position to make judgments on the particular affair.

In conclusion, with the head of state of the country of Grenada unable to communicate with the rest of the world, with its government upset, with the countries surrounding Grenada seeking assistance and fearful of the consequences of a violent revolution in Grenada, and in the absence of more facts, we can do no more than hope that our Canadians will be brought back safely from Grenada shortly.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, it is with some personal sadness that I rise to take part in the debate on the motion brought to our attention by Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party. I welcome it in a sense because it gives me an opportunity to associate myself immediately with people around the world who have condemned, in the most forceful and justifiable terms, the events on the tiny island of Grenada in the Caribbean just two weeks ago. Their revulsion is a revulsion that I share. Prime Minister Bishop was a long and personal friend. I knew him throughout his political years. I had come to understand, in the sense that I understood the pressures under which he served his nation. There were pressures from those within his administration that would have him be less moderate than he was. There were those in his administration who would have him depart from his contact with the private sector. Others would have had him take a much more stringent, pure Marxist approach. They would have had him bind that nation even closer to Havana and Moscow.

I watched him resist those pressures. I watched him maintain his contacts with the western world, with western democracies. I watched him gain the respect of the Prime Ministers not just of the eastern Caribbean nations, but of the Prime Ministers of all Commonwealth countries, indeed countries within the western world outside of the Commonwealth grouping.

The lot of Maurice Bishop was not an easy one. His entry into politics was caused by his absolute frustration with the corruption of the democratically elected government led by Sir Eric Gairy. His continuation in politics was as a result of a frustration about the low standard of living under which the people of his country has to survive.

In absolute frustration some time after the death of his father, whose dedication was equal, and through the continuing legitimate concerns of his people, the Gairy Government was overthrown. That is all a matter of history. Bishop became the leader of that island nation. In the four and one half years that he was its Prime Minister, I watched the progress in medical care, dental care, education, clean water and agriculture. I watched him try and do for that tiny island that which I had come to respect in the man, an absolute desire to do good for people. I never lost an occasion, nor will I, to reaffirm to the people of Grenada the friendship and love that I and all civil and decent people throughout Canada hold for the people of that nation. Maurice Bishop did not die in vain, nor did his father, nor does any man who in fact sacrifices his life for the betterment of his friends.

The island nation is in trouble. It is not a time for Canada to cry out in condemnation of anything other than the brutal massacre of its Prime Minister, the brutalities inflicted upon him in the hours and days shortly before his death. We will learn of these things as the truth comes out. They are not fit subject matter to be discussed in the context of the debate tonight.

I want the people of Grenada to know that I share in their grief. I also share in what I know to be their joy, their relief in not having to live under Hudson Austin, self-styled "General"—killer, in my judgment. Because I know them, I know they are free people. They have been steeped in democracy. They are the students of British history, the product of British history and concern just as we are in Canada. What we do from here on in will mark whether or not Canadians deserve some of the charges being levelled against them in the Caribbean today.

I regret that we are being condemned for having abandoned the Caribbean. I say to my Caribbean friends that we have not abandoned them, nor will Canadians or decent free people anywhere in the world. We will support them; indeed we must support them. That is our responsibility.

The charges can and I believe will be refuted, not nearly as much by our words as they will by our actions. Grenadians today need medical supplies, food and clothing. I ask the Government whether plans are now in progress to meet those needs. It is the least we can do.

I was dismayed earlier last week when on two occasions I asked Canada to extend where necessary visas, student visas, or working permits to Grenadians in our country, where there might be a chance, against the uncertainty of their having to leave Canada because their visas, permits or authorities had run out. I regret that we were silent about that. I apologize to Grenadians in Canada because we would not even take that one little step. In the final analysis, I know that such extensions would have been granted, but it would have eased the anxiety of people who may have been facing that situation had that been stated. As the senior Commonwealth country in the western hemisphere, we might have said to Grenadians wherever they may have been around the world: "If you have to leave where you are and do not want to go home yet because of the instability and uncertainty, you are welcome in our country; please come". We did not do that. I extend to the family and friends of Maurice Bishop the deepest sympathies of Polly and myself. They will always have our prayers.

I want to join with my Leader in one other area before I sit down. I suppose that with all the uncertainty only time will prove whether there is a right decision or a wrong decision. I only know that when friends need help I like to help them. To say that the United States of America invaded Grenada out of hand on the basis of no solid information is wrong. We do not know whether they went in as a very deliberate act of responsibility in response to a clear invitation from the Governor General of Grenada, Paul Scoon.

I suggest that all the flaming rhetoric and America bashing is out of order at this time and I would reject it. I do not know the facts but it is my understanding from contacts that I have in the eastern Caribbean that in fact they did respond to an invitation. Church leaders have advised me that they are satisfied that the intervention was a direct response to a direct invitation from the Governor General who, I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, is a fairly responsible person. I want to make that point.

Time will sort out the facts for us. This bashing does not serve the best interests of Grenada nor any of those tiny islands, Grenadine, St. Vincent, Barbados, Antigua, Nevis or St. Kitts that lie in the chain. It does not serve their best interests or our best interests or human interests to run around bashing others for having taken action. Whatever the motivation of the United States of America, and this we will learn as time goes by, I plead with all Hon. Members to remember that Grenada is a tiny nation. It must now restore itself. It must choose what it wants to do but it needs our help. It needs peace, it needs quiet, it needs time. Let us give it that time and assist in any way we can.

I believe we should go to the island and lend whatever assistance we can, not as peace-keepers but perhaps as truce observers, if you will. It is the farmers, the fishermen, the clerks in the stores, the men on the banana and cocoa plantations who hold civility and decency together. They will be undaunted if they know that we care. It will not be our words but our actions that will tell them how we feel. I wish that there were more we could do, more we could offer, Mr. Speaker.

We have such a Government, such a process, that we lost 50 families; we found them again, I guess, and they are back at Ross Point and comfortable for the evening. There are some Canadians who say it is all over and that they want to stay and finish their vacation or get back to work. There are already non-Grenadians who say they will remain there.

Half an hour or so ago we learned that St. George's is secure and that people are beginning to move in the streets. I gather that there are still unsecured areas to the east of the city that are not safe. Already the island is beginning to settle down, not with flaming rhetoric or with blaming anyone—the Americans, the Bajuns, the Grenadians, Marxism, Communism or whatever. Let us not interfere with the process but rather by the extension of love, peace and prayers and perhaps some medical supplies, clothing and food, show that we want to restore to the island its way of life and peace.

Mr. Maurice Dupras (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, I commend the New Democratic Party for the timeliness of their motion to debate the matter of the invasion of Grenada by American troops. Before referring to my notes—

[English]

The Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall) expressed sympathy to the people of Grenada and the High Commissioner. I have already expressed these feelings to the High Commissioner and told him that I share their terrible grief.

Like you, Mr. Speaker, having experienced one war I can understand how people are relieved tonight if there is some movement on the streets of St. George's.

I should like to clarify the question about the Canadians who were lost this afternoon. They were thought to have left the island but it was found that they had not. When final arrangements were made to take the Canadians out with a high-wing aircraft that could land on Grenada, a motorcade was sent to bring them to the airport. On the way it ran into sniper fire and had to turn back with the intention of trying later. When they went back later the aircraft had landed but had taken off again because the crew was told by the control tower that no Canadians were left on the island. I am informed that finally they have been rescued.

As to the conversation that Nobel Power had with the representatives of Caricom, I should like to report the words of Mr. Thomas Adams of Barbados. Nobel Power's words will contradict the question of my colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) about whether Canada was consulted or not. This is the conversation reported by Noble Power and Tom Adams. Tom Adams said to Noble Power, "Tell the Prime Minister how very much I regret that this fissure has developed between our countries." And Noble Power says that a whole set of circumstances during which he found himself under terrible strain prevented him from consulting with Canada. This is information from our High Commissioner following a conversation he had with the Prime Minister of Barbados. I take these words as official and I have satisfied myself that this is the truth.

● (2300)

Miss Jewett: Mr. Speaker, would the Hon. Member permit a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Hon. Member has the floor to make a speech. He is free to accept a question if he wishes. Does the Hon. Member accept a question?

Mr. Dupras: Agreed.

Miss Jewett: I thank my hon. friend. It was not a question of consultation I was raising. Could I ask the Hon. Member if he could confirm the statement answer I was raising, namely, the statement on television last night by Prime Minister Adams to the effect that when he spoke with our High Commissioner on Friday evening he told him that the only option in the Grenadian situation was military intervention.

Mr. Dupras: Yes, that is correct. He had that conversation with Noble Power. However, at no time did he mention the participation of the Americans. It was understood when they separated that they would have another conversation on this question. It was not the last conversation they had on this question. I feel that we have to take the word of our diplomat in Barbados when he says that he received this information from the Prime Minister of Barbados.

I am struck, Mr. Speaker, by the irony that those who attacked and isolated Maurice Bishop for years have now used his death as a pretext for invasion. There is no question that those who killed Maurice Bishop are fully accountable for their crime. I am equally certain that the atmosphere of ideological hysteria whipped up by the critics of Bishop contributed to his death. It is a great tragedy that this tiny country of 100,000 people was chosen by others for their own reasons as a testing ground for global strategies.

The legacy of Maurice Bishop is that he began to rebuild a country devastated by years of corruption and mismanagement. International development insitutions such as the World Bank and the Intra-American Development Bank closely examined the Grenadian experiment and gave it very good marks. The basic needs of the people were being met while at the same time the financial management of the country was greatly improved. In short, for all its faults, Grenada was an experiment which was working. Unfortunately, there were those outside Grenada, just as there were those inside, who did not want the experiment to work.

It is true, Mr. Speaker, that a distinguished Canadian, well known in the House of Commons, visited Grenada for two weeks in 1982. He had been commissioned by a Canadian company to do a survey as to the political situation in Grenada in 1982. He left Ottawa on June 26 by Air Canada and came back on July 14. In his report he tells of the difficulty of flying to Grenada because no major airport could receive the big jets of the airlines. He had to go to Barbados and wait two and one half days before he could charter an aircraft, at great expense, to take him to Grenada. With the permission of the Chair I would like to quote some of the remarks he made in his report:

> While I could not check them out, I was advised that there were now a number of health care and nursing units scattered through the island, as well as some dental clinics. A number of these are manned by Cuban personnel, but the people in the country areas seemed to be quite thankful the service existed. The school system has been improved in various ways, including the virtual elimination of the public charge per pupil in the secondary school.

He goes on to describe in fact what he saw in St. George's of the great social improvement as well as the physical improvement of the country. He speaks of the roads and the lighting system, the sewage system and that type of thing. I quote again from his report:

> I talked to a number of businessmen and women in the private sector and learned there were a variety of opinions. In the main there did not seem to be any fear that the government would intervene, and many, particularly the younger people, thought the government people were co-operative. Some served on advisory boards set up by the government to deal with issues which arose. Some of the older people were more concerned, but I could not discover any case where there was clear-cut evidence of government takeover. The advice given to me by officials was that they were desperately anxious to preserve the private sector—

That is, the government.

> —and government would only enter into the picture to supply a service which was lacking (an opinion I have heard often expressed in government circles in Canada).

He went to see the progress of the building of the airport, and he said:

The construction work is being handled by Cubans with their engineers and technical people as well as workers. I was also advised that a large number of Grenadians were employed. A U.K. group has recently been given the contract to do the terminal and the lighting system.

All this I quote, Mr. Speaker, because I want to establish the quality of government and regime which Maurice Bishop succeeded in establishing in his country. I will try to compare that with the way he was criticized last spring by the American administration. The report also speaks of the better quality of life there, and I quote:

To start with I would judge that the great majority of the Grenadian people appear to favour Bishop over his predecessor Eric Gairy, who had dissipated the island's resources, and manipulated the electoral system to retain power (as well as employing the private roughhouse gang he kept on the payroll under the name of "Mongoose Squad") Bishop and others had sought appeals through parliamentary elections, but the prior administration held much too tight a physical control for this to happen. So the revolution.

His report concluded with the following comment:

I cannot take Ronald Reagan too seriously when he excludes Grenada from the C.B.I.—

The Canadian Basin Initiative.

—because they have discarded the Westminster system.

That is Reagan saying he excluded Grenada because they had discarded the Westminster system.

The U.S. discarded it many years ago . . . The people of Grenada are most unlikely candidates for outright Marxism—a steady and deep fundamental religious faith is clearly visible. In addition they have an ingrown attachment to individual enterprise, more so than many of the Caribbean lands I have visited.

This is a time for friendship and understanding, and continuance of some material assistance.

He ends his report with:

OTTAWA.
OCTOBER 1ST, 1982

The author of this report is our former colleague, Ged Baldwin. I take his word. He and I had discussed the situation in Grenada upon his return and he told me that he found very offensive the remarks of the Reagan administration about the administration of Maurice Bishop. Mr. Baldwin was angry because, he said, "Every time I hear these remarks it questions my intelligence and my judgment on things. Having been in Grenada I was in a position to know better than what was described on TV so often during the spring of 1983".

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity to meet Maurice Bishop on a few occasions, the first time in Belize and the second time in Mexico. He had an engaging and dynamic personality and he was trying to establish a political regime designed to improve the quality of life for his people. He was probably the most popular and most honourable politician ever in Grenada. My colleague from Halifax and Minister of State (International Commerce) (Mr. Regan) recalled that his father had known the same fate a few years before, that he was thoroughly dedicated to improve the living conditions of his people, and how successful he had been in his endeavours.

I should like to give some information concerning the economic activities of Grenada under the helm of Maurice Bishop, and say as well how justified he was to build the airport. I have here a list of airports in the Caribbean Islands whose population is roughly the same as that of Grenada.

In 1982, Aruba, which has an area of only 72 square miles and a population of 60,000, had an airport and a 9,000-ft. runway. The same applies to Antigua, with a population of 85,000. Barbados, which is more densely populated, has an 11,000-ft. runway. Curaçao, with a population of 60,000, has a runway of 11,187 feet. In Grenada, which has 111,000 inhabitants, engineers are building a 9,800-ft. runway, while St. Lucia, with its 120,000 inhabitants, much like Grenada, already has an airport with an 9,000-ft. runway. Nevertheless, this unfortunate country has been accused of building an airport to provide landing facilities for Russian bombers, when everyone knows it depends on the tourist trade to survive and that this was the only way to end a situation where people had to land in Barbados and wait two or three days, like Jed Baldwin said in his report, to get to Grenada, and because this unfortunate country has received aid from Cubans and Americans, because a Florida company did the initial excavation to install a sewage system and Canadians did other work, and the British who participated as well and so on, because this emerging country refused to accept the kind of society that was being forced on it and which Gairy had imposed for such a long time, it is being accused of being Communist and building an airport to receive Russian bombers. This is absolutely ridiculous!

Mr. Speaker, I would not wish to monopolize the time of the House, because I know other Members wish to take part in the debate. Nevertheless, I may say I am very anxious to hear some of my colleagues, especially the Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) who was a member of the Sub-committee, and also my colleague from Waterloo (Mr. McLean), who I hope will have a chance to speak, because he will be the only member of the Sub-Committee to have an opportunity to express his views on this very important matter of the events in Grenada.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recall the words spoken by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) at the United Nations on September 27 of this year. Perhaps I may quote him in the language in which he held his speech. He said:

● (2310)

[English]

One year ago, the Secretary-General inspired us to take a hard look at this Organization. We measured expectations against realities and, to no one's surprise, found ourselves wanting. We recognized that we were in the midst of what the Secretary-General called a "crisis in the multilateral approach in international affairs". We unanimously agreed on the "imperative need to strengthen the rule and effectiveness of the United Nations." We have not yet succeeded.

It is now time to move from high-sounding generalities, on which we can all agree, to specific measures for strengthening the multilateral system.

I invite my colleagues to read again the speech made by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) in September because it is very sound advice. It is almost as if he had a premonition that something serious would happen soon. We all expected something soon in Central America but not in the Caribbean. He recommended that:

—the Council should meet informally to avert potential crises by examining incipient disputes during in-camera sessions with the Secretary-General.

—the Secretary-General requires additional personnel and resources for the more effective use of his "good offices" in the resolution of disputes.

This is the crux of the problem. We have a serious problem in Central America. We have a new one in the Caribbean. But no one turned to the Secretary-General of the UN because I think we do not want him to have the resources he needs to play the role he should be playing. As we all know, he was not involved in the Falklands crisis and he should have been involved in this crisis. Of course with the limited resources he has, it has not been possible. I wish that in the near future members of the United Nations would take this advice seriously and make it possible for the Secretary-General of the UN to have more resources and personnel to assist him to use his good offices in keeping peace and bringing peace to wherever, and whenever it is necessary.

We heard the criticism of the invasion by a wide range of countries, which indicates that criticism is not based on ideology because it comes from all sides. It is based on something more fundamental, a respect for international law and order. The claim is made that the invasion was carried out to save lives when in fact more lives were lost. I feared for the Canadians, not after the assassination of Maurice Bishop, but when I learned that an invasion had taken place led by American troops.

The claim is made that the invasion was carried out to restore order when in fact it consisted of violence and terror. Finally, the claim is made that the invasion is to re-establish democracy in Grenada.

Similarly, when Argentina invaded the Falklands it did so in the name of the holy cause, reunion of the island with the motherland. What was the position of this House at that time? It was, Mr. Speaker, that regardless of Argentina's claims, the invasion was not an acceptable means of achieving the objective. Once invasion is used to achieve one's objective, it will be used to achieve another and another and another. The end result is national chaos in which the strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must.

Great Britain understood all this in the case of the Falklands, and Great Britain understands that in the case of Grenada. The Canadian Government understood that in the case of the Falklands, and the Canadian Government understands that in the case of Grenada, of course.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order! I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired. However, he may continue if he obtains the unanimous consent of the House.

[English]

Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to terminate his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Dupras: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

One of the most disturbing features of the invasion is the spectacle of a great power, one of the most powerful countries in the world, invading one of the tiniest. This creates tremors of fear for many of the small countries of the world, particularly those located near giant neighbours. I can tell that from conversations of the past few days I have had with members of the Nicaraguan Government. Nicaragua, for example, is fully convinced that the invasion of Grenada is a prelude to what may happen next.

The fear is not only of enemy forces arriving and occupying the country, but economic terrorism which devastates crops, buildings and roads. These are acts which Canada has consistently condemned when committed by terrorist forces and insurgents. They are likewise to be condemned when committed by a great power.

It is now essential to move beyond the debate as to why this invasion occurred and to plan a solution to the problem it has created. I am persuaded myself that Canada, working within the Commonwealth context, has a major contribution to make. Suggestions have been made by various parties that a peacekeeping force possibly composed of Indians and an African State, maybe Zambia, or other nations from Africa and Canada could provide the means for an early withdrawal of the invasion troops. I suggest that all Parties in this House put aside their differences concerning the invasion and get together to support some practical initiative for resolving the problem. This could be done under the auspices of the Commonwealth Secretary.

Finally, the example, as I said earlier, of great powers invading small powers raises the question of whether international law and order has to be found. My own feeling is that middle powers, whether inside or outside the Commonwealth, have a responsibility to play a much more active and creative role in international affairs than they have to this point. In my view, this applies whether one is speaking of North-South relations or East-West relations. It is my hope that Grenada may be one of the first places for such a middle power strategy to be put into effect.

● (2320)

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I hope that the recommendations formulated by the Secretary of State for External Affairs on September 27 of this year will be given very serious consideration, so that the Secretary General of the United Nations will have the resources, tools and staff to intervene personally in a peace-keeping capacity when necessary and to prevent the worst, whenever possible. I am sure that all Members would agree to providing the Secretary General of the United Nations with additional funding and resources, thus enabling him to play a peace-keeping role.

[English]

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to participate in this very important debate. When I woke up on Tuesday morning and heard the news on the radio and learned that the United States was invading Grenada, I was stunned. I cannot really say that I was surprised. I think that over the last few years I have become numbed to what any of the superpowers might do and particularly to what the United States has a history of doing in Latin America and the Caribbean. However, I was stunned that the United States would do something that was so patently stupid. I really wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Americans will ever learn. However, I will return to that point in a moment.

I was saddened, as I am sure were many other Canadians, the week before when I heard about the events that went on in Grenada. I, like many other Canadians, was saddened particularly by the death of Maurice Bishop, the late Prime Minister of that country. The Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall) who spoke earlier pointed out that many Canadians had a certain degree of admiration for Maurice Bishop and for the type of government that he brought to the country of Grenada. Certainly we all admit that that government was far from perfect. We would have liked to see a move toward a more democratic, pluralistic society. However, there is no doubt that it was a government that was vastly superior to the one that had been run by Eric Gairy, the former Prime Minister of that country.

One wonders what might have happened if the United States had not rebuffed Bishop's persistent attempts over the last year or so to achieve some sort of a rapprochement with the United States. Events may well have been very different. However, what kind of response did Bishop get from the United States for all of his attempts at friendship? As my friend the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) pointed out earlier, the United States continued to run its annual Caribbean amphibious exercise featuring mock battles or invasions of Grenada as usual and it pursued its habitual attempts to isolate Grenada within the Caribbean community.

As the Leader of the New Democratic Party said in his opening speech on this debate, the Grenada invasion was simply an event that was waiting for an excuse to happen. I think many of us recognize the fact that over the last few years since the Reagan administration has been in office, President Reagan has been itching for some kind of an excuse to involve himself in the politics of that area. Indeed, he has been itching for some excuse to go to war in that area and to put down the type of government about which he is so paranoid, any government which is slightly to the left of what he considers centre.

What happened in Grenada on Tuesday morning was very clearly a violation of international law. It was a violation of the United Nations Charter in a number of different ways, but notably it was a violation of Article II which calls upon all nations to refrain from threat or violence against the political integrity or independence of any other nation. It was a violation of the treaty and it was a violation of any and all standards of international morality. Ironically, Mr. Speaker, it was also a violation of United States law. It did not comply with the war powers resolution of that country.

I would like to deal briefly with President Reagan's rationale for the invasion. One of his reasons was that the invasion was mounted to protect the lives of American citizens. First, as has been pointed out in debate tonight and as has also been pointed out by the press, there is absolutely no evidence that the lives of the Americans resident in Grenada at the time were in any way in danger. Indeed, American students in that country sent messages through their families to the President the night before the invasion saying that they were in no way threatened and calling upon him not to take any kind of precipitous action. As the Leader of the NDP said in his speech, American envoys were in Granada a few days before the invasion and saw no threat to the lives of Americans in that country.

As well, Mr. Speaker, I think the Americans did not seem to make any attempts to remove their citizens peacefully from Grenada. The Canadian example was simply to ask and receive permission for a Canadian plane to go into Grenada and remove the Canadian citizens that were in that country. Ironically, it was the American invasion of Grenada that prevented that from happening. The lives of Canadians in Grenada were not threatened until the Americans invaded that country.

On the second point, Mr. Speaker, President Reagan has said that he invaded Grenada in order to restore democracy. When one looks at the American record of restoring democracy in Latin America, one does not hold much hope. During the greater part of the last century, we have seen American troops invade a number of countries in Latin and Central America. In the two most notable situations, what kind of a democratic system has been left behind? Take a look at Haiti, for instance. Papa Doc Duvalier was left as a shining example of democracy in that country. Take a look at Nicaragua where the Somoza family was left in power for some 50 years, I believe. Those men are some of the more oppressive and non-democratic despots that the western hemisphere has ever known.

I remember well that in 1965 I was a university student studying American foreign policy. At that time I watched as the Americans invaded the Dominican Republic under the pretext of saving that country or saving American lives and American interests from a Communist takeover. To this date, Mr. Speaker, some 18 years later, no objective observer has been able to find any evidence that that Communist takeover threat ever existed.

Speaking of restoring democracy in this hemisphere, have we seen the United States land troops in Chile or Guatemala or Paraguay, that country for which the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) has such great admiration? Have we seen those countries invaded to restore democracy? Indeed, ten years ago the Americans did the exact opposite in Chile. They toppled a democratically elected régime and replaced it with one of the worst scoundrels we have ever seen, a scoundrel who as of yet has not held a election in that country and shows no signs of doing so in the near future. Many of us have been astounded for many years when we see the double standard that the country to our south applies in international affairs. It is a "do as I say, not as I do" situation.

● (2330)

I recall from my studies of American history and American foreign policy President Woodrow Wilson's 14 points which were first delivered in a speech to the American Congress in early 1918 as a way of achieving peace in Europe at the end of World War I. Those points grew to some 27, almost all of which were rejected or put aside during the peace negotiations in Versailles at the end of the war. One of those 14 points survived, as I recall, and it was the idea of self-determination of peoples. It is an idea that Lloyd George, Prime Minister of England and Clemenceau, Prime Minister of France, tried to claim originality for at the peace talks, as Wilson tried to claim its originality. But that idea, I believe, is as old as democracy. It is an idea which is included in the United Nations Charter and in the United States Declaration of Independence. But where was that great American principle of self-determination of peoples on Tuesday morning in Grenada?

I think the Americans have forgotten their own history. I believe the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) pointed out the example of American history when they achieved their independence. I wondered earlier today what would have happened if a superpower of that time, a United States of the late 1700s, had decided to move into the American colonies to forestall chaos and restore the colonial government which was the system considered normal and the approved order at that time. Where would the United States be? Where would those 13 colonies have been in 1776 if someone else had moved in to forestall chaos?

If one claims to walk the high road, one must be careful not to step off. If one wishes to be critical of another person, group or nation, then one cannot commit the same sin and still maintain credibility.

We in the West like to claim a superiority over the Communist bloc and, in many ways, rightly so. We cannot underestimate the value of the freedoms we enjoy. We cannot underestimate the value of the quality of life we enjoy. We also like to claim a moral superiority. But can we do so with justification when the leading power in the so-called western camp, the United States, commits the very sins for which we condemned the Soviet Union, the leading power of the other side? While there certainly is a difference in scale, is there a difference in kind between the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the U.S. invasion of Grenada?

Mr. Dick: A big difference.

Mr. Sargeant: Tonight we have heard Tory after Tory try to give legitimacy to the American invasion of Grenada because they were invited by the Governor General of Grenada into that country. First, we have no proof of that. Second, let us recall Afghanistan in 1979. At that time the Soviet Union said that it was invited in by the regime to help maintain order.

We condemned the Soviets at that time for that phony excuse, and rightly so. In the four years since the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, we have called upon the Soviet Union time and time again to withdraw their troops, and rightly so. But do we hear our friends over here to my right calling for the United States to withdraw from Grenada? Have we heard them discounting this excuse that they were invited into that country? We have no assurances as to if and when the Americans will leave Grenada. In 1916 the Americans sent troops into the Dominican Republic. They left in 1934. In 1915 they went to Haiti and did not leave until 1924. Today, the United States Congress voted to restrict the American occupation of Grenada to 60 days; but President Reagan has ignored the Congress in the past and it may well happen again.

I took special note today of a cartoon that appeared in the Ottawa Citizen. It is a picture of two halves of a face, one half is Andropov with a caption beside it stating "U.S.S.R. occupied Afghanistan" and the other half is Ronald Reagan with a caption stating U.S.A. occupied Grenada. But there is only one voice coming from this person which says: "A clearly justifiable action aimed at protecting a country from the control of a group of thugs". That says a lot, Mr. Speaker.

I also took special note of a column in today's Ottawa Citizen written by Anthony Lewis of the New York Times. He writes:

> As the invasion of Grenada went forward in secret, high Washington officials met to work on a draft of President Reagan's announcement. They had a particular concern: to make sure, as one put it, 'that this does not sound like what Brezhnev said when the Soviet Union went into Afghanistan.'
> But however clever the words, the Reagan action speaks louder. And there is no way to avoid what it signifies. It undermines the ability of free people to complain effectively when the Soviet Union uses force for its purposes. It legitimizes Soviet intervention in other countries.
> If the United States is justified in using armed force to squash trouble on a tiny island how could we object to Soviet forces marching into Poland . . . If Ronald Reagan can violate treaties and international law at will, why should anyone listen when we condemn Soviet violations of the Helsinki accords—

He goes on:

> For the sake of a tactical military and political victory, Reagan has sacrificed the enormous American advantage of legitimacy. The long-term costs are likely to be extremely heavy.
> Consider some of the reasons given by Reagan for the invasion: 'To forestall chaos,' and 'to assist in the restoration of conditions of law and order.' No future aggressor in the world—no tyranny of right or left—will have any trouble meeting those loose standards.

A fundamental principle of international law makes national territory inviolable and forbids intervention by other countries. To undermine that principle is terribly dangerous. And Reagan violated not only the principle but specific treaties.

The actions of the President of the United States this week have done all of us serious harm.

I would like to say that on Sunday of this week, just two days before the invasion of Grenada, I joined with all Members of the House and all Canadians, indeed with people all over the world, in sharing American feelings of shock, anger and sorrow over the deaths of so many young Americans and young French soldiers in Beirut. I think we still share that sorrow. But American actions in Grenada this week make it very, very difficult to continue to be sympathetic.

I am deeply saddened when a country like the United States which in so many ways is a great society, in so many other ways proves itself to be an international bully.

● (2340)

In conclusion, I would say that I think we all have to condemn this aggression just as we condemn any and all unjustified invasions. We have to subscribe to the motion moved by my Leader this evening and to the comments of Shridath S. Ramphal, the Secretary General of the Commonwealth, that this was a deplorable act of blatant aggression.

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in the House this evening to speak in this emergency debate. I am reminded, as we have all been, that the invasion of this Caribbean Island underlines the fragility of our world and of our international systems. I am moved by this regrettable incident to join in this debate and to add my voice to those who have expressed sympathy, regret and concern, and also, in the moments given to me, to reflect upon some concerns regarding Canadian foreign policy and Canadian involvement in peace-making processes.

We have heard this evening in great detail the record of the events of the past week. We are seeking from this side of the House more clarification regarding the responsibility and the circumstances. Surely the intention of this debate is not just to beat the wind but rather that we be instruments in this Parliament and be expressive of the concerns of all Canadians that there be security and, a sense of peace and tranquility. This has been reflected in the speeches of leaders and spokespersons on all sides of the House. We heard the sentiments of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall) regarding the caring which may be a part of the Canadian response to this situation.

I want to say that it was a pleasure to work in close association with the Hon. Member for Labelle (Mr. Dupras), who was for more than 18 months the chairman of the subcommittee of this House, reviewing the matter of Canada's policy in relation to Latin America and the Caribbean, and also to work with the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett), who has already participated in the debate. The overriding finding of our subcommittee, which was made up of 15 Members from all sides of the House, was that Canadian foreign policy ought to be concerned with stability in the region and that all of our efforts ought to be directed toward being an instrument of stability. We saw, not only in Central America but in the Caribbean basin nations also, the seeds of great discontent. I echo the concern of the distinguished chairman of that subcommittee when he calls upon the Government for a middle power strategy. I ask with him, where is the Government's response to the committee report? If we had been taking action through this period, tonight at midnight we would not be echoing across the nation our hurt and concern for our hemisphere. We should have taken seriously some of the recommendations and the studies. In a motion I wish to echo for the House what we heard from leaders in the Caribbean basin regarding that particular area. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that tonight we can make charge or countercharge or we can take a moment to reflect on the fragility of our world, the needs of the United Nations and the need to revamp and to reorganize the Commonwealth. We can begin to use this unfortunate incident in the life of the world to set into place some of the instruments that will lead to some sense of stability in the future that will once again show Canadian leadership, something which unfortunately since the Pearson and Diefenbaker years has gone into the distant past.

I believe it is time for Canada to come forward with a sensible initiative as a senior and influential member of the Commonwealth, one that will encourage the deployment of instruments of order in our world rather than instruments of war. The potential role of mediator that international institutions are intended to play cannot be overestimated by this House or by Canadians.

Multilateral consultations are the only reasonable means of ensuring a balanced and lasting resolution to the conflicts we are now discussing concerning Grenada, the Middle East and other parts of our world. We ought to consider ways to strengthen United Nations' efforts in peace and security matters. Nations all too frequently bypass the United Nations with no condemnation or censure from this House, the Parliaments of the world, or the middle powers. We ought to be leading middle power initiatives, as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Labelle, calls on his own Party to give leadership in doing.

Let me suggest that UN activities are also hampered by the confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union. No organization can be fully effective without the co-operation of two of its most powerful members. They, like all others in the world, are open to suasion, to morale and to public opinion. The Security Council needs to utilize more fully its authorities under Chapter VI of the Charter. This authority is to prevent international disputes likely to endanger international peace and security from escalating into armed conflicts and to exercise preventive diplomacy. If this authority of the Security Council were being exercised, the controversy plaguing us in this House tonight might have been averted. Canada, to its credit, once pioneered the dispatching of peacekeeping forces to trouble spots in our world. Now is the time, with other like minded nations, for Canada to pioneer a world security system. Let me suggest, Mr. Speaker, that a reliable security system is what international relations in the 1980s demands. The events in the Middle East and the events in the Caribbean these days underline this firmly.

That machinery might, for example, include an international peace force individually recruited under the authority of an improved Security Council. Others have suggested an effective system of world courts and arbitration tribunals to strengthen the rule of law in international conduct might begin to give nations some sense and hope and recourse.

Charges are being laid in this House, around the world and in the media that world law has been violated. The Charter of the United Nations has certainly been contravened. On this we can all agree. How can we prevent this from happening again? A resolve to empower multilateral institutions with the clout they require is the key, a system of order, that can operate with the force of law rather than the force of military power.

But looking more closely at the crisis at hand, the invasion of Grenada which we are debating tonight, let us consider a means of reconciliation, acting within the structures that exist today as a part of our interdependent global network. Grenada is a member of the Commonwealth, a long standing institution of regional co-operation. It is a solid existing political mechanism through which we can find long-term solutions to the problems of the region and resist the tendency to respond with knee-jerk measures or band-aid diplomacy.

The Secretary General of the Commonwealth has a great deal to offer in the way of bringing about a peaceful resolution as opposed to a military one. Canada would be wise to seek his counsel and should have been seeking his counsel since the recommendations concerning our overriding concern for stability were tabled in this House one year ago. The result was a response from the Government to the recommendations of the subcommittee which said: "We know all about that." "Facile would be to put it mildly", was the response of the Hon. Member for Labelle (Mr. Dupras) which the committee received to that document. "We have already doing it", said the Government, "Why, we are well ahead of you". If it were well ahead of us, we would have been signalled of what was happening in Grenada. We would have seen initiative from the Government, which at least would have been attempting to respond in advance to the growing tide of tension in the basin and in Central America.

I believe we have an opportunity. The institution of the Commonwealth is widely accepted. It is time for Canada to take a stand in the region as a member of an association of nations and to push forward with proposals. We can press for moderation and for consultation. We can take a position that military means should only be a last resort.

I have travelled, through the region, as have other Members of the House, as a member of the subcommittee. I have met the people and seen with my own eyes the political, economic and social circumstances. I can compare them with my years of life in Africa and in other parts of the world. I have heard testimony, along with all sides of the House, from witnesses who foreshadowed this intervention and felt it was only a matter of time. They told us that as we travelled.

While in Trinidad, for example, we met with a number of regional officials of government and non-governmental agencies who, as far back as January 1982, feared such moves. Whom did we meet? We met, for example, Dr. Kurleigh King, Secretary-General of Caricom. We met with Father Peter Nicholson, editor of the Catholic Times in Trinidad. We met with Brian Dare, aid officer of the Canadian High Commission in Barbados. We met with William Demas, President of the Caribbean Development Bank. We met with Reverend Dr. Roy Neehall, Secretary-General of the Caribbean Conference of Churches. In the testimony of those days we find the following question, "Are there fears of an invasion in Grenada?" Also we find the answer, "Yes, events in Dominica show how easy it is to take over a government. In Grenada there is a national fear of Gairy's talks in the U.S. about invading the island". That was testimony of the officials of the Canadian High Commission. We listened to the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Conference of Churches when he indicated, "I should like you to know that the Caribbean Conference of Churches is happy about the end of the Gairy Government in Grenada. We are, however, upset that the churches in Grenada are on a collision course with Mr. Bishop. We are going to begin very soon a dialogue with Mr. Bishop regarding such questions as political prisoners, freedom of the press and elections".

I am left wondering why the Government has not taken a more active interest in the external threats to its Commonwealth colleagues regardless of where they come from. I am concerned that the Government did not seek to work within the Commonwealth structure to identify them and to avert them. Now we are going through a great smokescreen of charge and countercharge to cover up the negligence and failure to adopt a dynamic and positive foreign policy in relationship to our hemisphere, particularly to the Caribbean.

As I conclude my remarks in the debate this evening, I join in expressing sympathy to those who have lost family and loved ones and the people who find their nation island turned upside down. I join in the expression of hope that we as Canadians will continue to be open and to be responsive to human needs. I hope the House will come to the inevitable realization that the peace and security of our world hangs in the balance and that here we have a symbolic situation of much larger circumstances. We either seek political solutions to our conflicts on the international stage, or we will live in a permanent state of peril. We must come to grips with the principle of common security and join with neighbours and allies in a renewed commitment to the international institutions within which we have an honoured place. Should we not take that course, those who die in the midst of these tragic circumstances do indeed die in vain.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this most tragic and threatening situation regarding the invasion in Grenada. I appreciate the comments that were just made by the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean). I think all Hon. Members of the House would want to endorse his suggestions that there should be a world security system, that we should look at political solutions to problems rather than at invasion, and certainly at the idea that Canada should take the lead in middle power initiatives to introduce some of these political solutions.

Basically the debate this evening must focus on the deplorable act of blatant aggression which is seen in the American invasion of Grenada. It is naked aggression and it has to be condemned as such. We are talking about a small nation, about 144 square miles. It is about the size of Salt Spring Island in my constituency; it is a little larger. It has approximately 110,000 people. It is about the size of many of our constituencies. It is up against one of the most powerful nations in the world. There is absolutely no justification whatsoever for the invasion, as speaker after speaker from our Party has said.

We have to emphasize that this invasion was not a spur of the moment event. It did not begin with the overthrow of Maurice Bishop earlier this month. It is something which was predetermined and falls in line with the whole tragic history of American involvement in Central America and the Caribbean basin. For example, we could go back to the 1954 invasion of Guatemala. The present genocidal practices, which are being perpetuated against the Indian people of Guatemala, can be laid directly at the feet of the United States Government when in 1954 it went in and deposed the proper Government of Guatemala at that time. That invasion has been succeeded by one dictatorship after another, brutal genocidal dictatorships. As Hon. Members of my Party have pointed out, none of these invasions have been followed by any kind of restoration of democracy.

Earlier we heard from the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) about, "War Games—Ocean Venture '81", an uncanny preview of the invasion of Grenada, a frightening preview of what in fact happened. An account of this was published last March. Some Members of the Conservative Party have raised the fact that the Grenadians and Cubans were well dug in. Is it any wonder, when this kind of war game had been played on their doorsteps, that they saw themselves targeted for an invasion? We can ask why. The reason is that some people in the United States were determined to keep the Caribbean as an American lake. Grenada disturbed that tranquil dream, that pastoral scene that the Caribbean was an American lake, in March 1979 when Maurice Bishop, in a bloodless coup, took power.

● (2400)

On April 10, 1979, the American Ambassador to the eastern Caribbean warned the new government of Grenada not to develop closer ties with Cuba. This has a disturbing echo of the words of a couple of weeks ago of Ambassador Robinson telling Canada not to let Russian jets land in Gander, Newfoundland. I thought the job of an Ambassador was to try and facilitate better communication rather than to dictate from one nation to another.

When the American ambassador told Grenada not to develop closer ties with Cuba, Maurice Bishop replied as follows:

> From day one of the revolution we have always striven to have and develop the closest and friendliest relations with the United States, as well as Canada, Britain, and all our Caribbean neighbours . . . But no one must misunderstand our friendliness as an excuse for rudeness and meddling in our affairs . . . We are not in anybody's back yard and we are definitely not for sale. Anybody who thinks they can bully us or threaten us, clearly has no understanding, idea, or clue as to what material we are made of.

Obviously Mr. Bishop's statement was not acceptable to the United States.

In a speech that Mr. Bishop made in July 1981 welcoming members of the Socialist Internationals to Grenada, he detailed some of the American attempts to destablilize the Grenadian Government. First, he talked about propaganda destabilization. He pointed to an initiative that was taken to invite Caribbean journalists from all over the Caribbean, excluding Grenada, of course, to Washington for a conference. Shortly after the conference ended, there was another vicious round of anti-Grenadian editorials in Caribbean newspapers. Bishop then detailed the economic aggression that the United States has consistently used to try and isolate Grenada from its neighbours. For example, when the Windward Islands Banana Association, which had banana farmers from Dominica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Grenada, requested help after a hurricane, that help was promised on the condition that no Grenadian farmers would get any help. So-called humanitarian aid was being used for economic and political blackmail.

Bishop pointed to successful United States attempts to stop the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund from funding projects even after they had been approved by technical experts. He pointed to the offer from the United States of $4 million as a grant to the Caribbean Development Bank for lesser developed countries on the condition that Grenada be excluded from any of that money. These kinds of economic pressures led Bishop to say in that speech, and I quote:

> We certainly believe very strongly that the time has now come when we must move to elevate the question of propaganda destabilization, of economic aggression, of mercenary invasion or the threat of mercenary invasion, to the same level that world public opinion has already elevated the question of the direct landing of marines. The time has now come, in our view, when international public opinion must be so mobilized that not only when marines land in somebody else's territory, but also when there is evidence of a systematic and concerted plan of propaganda destabilization, of economic aggression or of political and industrial destabilization, or of mercenary threat, there must also be a great outcry.

I believe we have to learn to listen to what the late Maurice Bishop was trying to teach. There had to be a great outcry against all attempts to destabilize nations in the Caribbean and in Central America with which the United States does not agree. We should not have to wait until the marines land before we protest the American attempts to destabilize Nicaragua.

Yesterday our colleague from Saskatoon East (Mr. Ogle) spoke of the fears of the Nicaraguan people that CIA directed Contras could destroy crops which are now entering their most crucial phase in Nicaragua. Some of us heard Zabier Gorostiaga point out that the same pattern of economic warfare as we have seen in Grenada in the past is now being practised in Nicaragua.

The war games that the United States is carrying on in Honduras involve a similar invasion of Honduras by some enemy, presumably from Nicaragua. There would be a cry go to the United States for help and the United States would move in. This is the whole purport of those war games. There are 5,000 United States Army and Air Force personnel in Honduras at the present time.

There has been a lot of talk about the airstrip in Grenada. Several Honduran airstrips are being enlarged so that 250 foot long Galaxy transport planes can fly in U.S. military personnel. They are spending $150 million on air and naval bases on the Atlantic Coast and a new radar system is now in operation. All of this is intended to intimidate Nicaraguans, as President Reagan put it, into peace. We have seen a refusal to consider the Nicaraguan offer of non-aggression pacts with the United States and the Honduras and other countries in that area.

As we condemn what has happened in Grenada and condemn that invasion, there should also be a condemnation of all attempts to destabilize the Government of Nicaragua. Let us condemn them before they send in the marines. Let us call for a withdrawal of marine troops from Grenada, but let us also call for an end to the destabilizing efforts in Nicaragua.

We have to ask what it is the United States has to fear from these countries in Central America. It is a strong country. There is basic goodwill among their people, yet they live in a kind of paranoid fear. This underlines the basic problem of our times. Like the Korean Airlines 007 incident and the invasion of Grenada, the American paranoia about Cuba and Nicaragua underlines the fragile nature of the world society. The arms race in which both the United States and the Soviet Union are participating is destablilizing our entire world. That is the name of the game. Our entire world society is being destabilized by the arms race. It fits the kind of paranoia that leads to the shooting down of a passenger jet and the invasion of a helpless little island by the mightiest power in the world.

We have to redouble our efforts to put an end to the arms race. We have to speak out loud and clear at this time. We have to condemn the invasion and we have to call for a withdrawal of troops. We must ask the United States to recover its right mind and deal with the problems at home instead of trying to destabilize and destroy other nations.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Earlier this day it was moved by Mr. Broadbent, seconded by Miss Jewett, that this House do now adjourn. Is it the wish of the House to adjourn.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Agreed and so ordered. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until eleven o'clock this morning.

At 12.10 a.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

AGRICULTURE

WESTERN FARMERS' TRANSPORTATION COSTS

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, while farmers, particularly those in the West, are struggling just to survive, the federal Cabinet may actually approve a proposal which would serve to worsen the prairie producers' financial bind. As though it were not enough to propose huge increases in rail transportation costs over the next three years, the Government may now increase the cost of moving grain and other commodities along the St. Lawrence Seaway. Any such rate increase would be paid largely out of the pockets of prairie farmers. But these people absolutely cannot tolerate any further financial burdens.

Let me remind this House of the transportation costs western farmers already face. Collectively, farmers pay about $150 million each year to move their grain by rail. Under the Western Grain Transportation Act they will be compelled to pay an additional $219 million over the next three years. Add to that the $24 million which farmers currently contribute toward St. Lawrence Seaway tolls. Even a 5 per cent increase, which is within the Government's restraint guidelines, is asking too much. Indeed, Canadian farmers must be asking themselves where it will all end. Unfortunately for some of them it will end in bankruptcy, unless the Government wakes up to the serious financial problems facing Canada's farmers.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LEBANON—OCCUPATION BY PLO AND SYRIAN FORCES

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, the fact is well known that Lebanon has for many years been a scene of civil war between warring factions. The fact that the heavily armed PLO has been implanted into Lebanon by the Syrians and Soviets is well known. That the PLO served as a force which finally destroyed any semblance of sovereignty and authority by the Government of Lebanon is also well known. That the PLO conducted a reign of terror over the people of Lebanon, especially against the Christians and, armed with Soviet arms, used southern Lebanon as a base from which to conduct attacks against Israel is well known. That the PLO used Lebanon as a sanctuary and, under the pretense of the sovereign borders of Lebanon, used it as a shield from behind which to conduct its raids against Israel is well known.

Mr. Prud'homme: What about Shamir?

Mr. de Corneille: That the PLO and Syria have occupied and dominated Lebanon for years as occupying powers is well known. That Israel has tried to get protection, from the terrorist attacks, from the West is well known. That the presence of Israel in Lebanon is the only hope for a deal to eliminate foreign forces from Lebanon is well known.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Shamir is well known.

Mr. de Corneille: Why then has our Department of External Affairs not moved in the past to condemn the presence of the parasite PLO in Lebanon and the Syrian invaders, and demanded the withdrawal of Syria and the PLO? Why is the double standard now once again applied against Israel? Condescending statements are made castigating Israel for its presence in Lebanon, and calling upon Israel to withdraw unilaterally from Lebanon. Madam Speaker, such an unfair, unrealistic, and bankrupt policy is a disgrace.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Leeds-Grenville.

HOUSING

ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN TO PROMOTE ENERGY EFFICIENT HOMES

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, contractors all across Canada are being solicited by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources to build and promote super energy efficient homes under the R-2000 Program. However, we have here yet another example of the blatant mismanagement of public funds in the operation of this Program.

The federal Government's official in Toronto who was assigned the duty of co-ordinating the R-2000 homes has provided very little of the agreed upon assistance for the builders despite their repeated attempts to get the Liberal Government to live up to its end of the contract. The assistance promised to them in promoting and selling the R-2000 homes has fallen far short of its goal. The advertising for the program was held up by the Minister himself up until two weeks ago, and will not start appearing in local publications for yet another few weeks. These homes, built by persons more efficient than the Government officials running the program, have already been open for three or four weeks in some areas. Advertising and promotion assistance will be too late to enable those contractors to take full advantage of the Fall real estate market.

This Program, designed to spark new interest in energy efficiency, has instead degenerated into a bureaucratic nightmare for its participants and disappointment for Canadians who, once again, are the recipients of the Liberal Government's inefficiency. This is yet another example of why Canadians can no longer trust the Liberal Government, and substantiates the need for a general election.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

OBJECTION TO TESTING CRUISE MISSILE

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, when they hear the strange 1984 rhetoric of the arms race, intelligent people have great difficulty understanding what is happening. Today arms control is the new label used to sell the arms race. NATO plans to get rid of 1,400 old nuclear warheads at the same time as it is deploying new Pershing and Cruise missiles. In spite of rhetoric about arms control, this has nothing to do with disarmament. It is more like trading in a couple of old rust buckets for a new car. New missiles for old is not the path to peace and security.

● (1110)

Even though a majority of Canadians oppose testing the Cruise missile, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) agreed to the tests and suggested that somehow this would help the Geneva talks. In the United States, new chemical weapons and new missile systems are being justified in the name of arms control.

What our world needs for peace and security is not some phony kind of arms control, but genuine disarmament. No new weapons should be deployed by either NATO or Warsaw Pact countries. No new weapons should be tested by either side. Existing missiles on both sides should be dismantled. If the Prime Minister wants to give real leadership to world peace, let him begin by refusing the Cruise.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR MEASURES TO FACILITATE ADOPTION OF HAITIAN CHILD

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to draw the attention of the Minister of State for External Affairs to an adoption case. A year ago, Mr. Norman Richards, one of my constituents, was trying to adopt a young Haitian girl. After all kinds of bureaucratic delay at the Department of Employment and Immigration, the Immigration Appeal Board ruled that there was no objection to the girl being adopted by Mr. Richards of Blanc-Sablon. However, since July 27, the case has been sent back and forth by Department of Employment and Immigration, the Department of External Affairs and the Department of National Health and Welfare. Now, 90 days later, the girl is still in Haiti, at a time when the parents would have liked to have her in Canada so she could start the new school year.

I cannot imagine why our representative in Haiti cannot take steps to speed up the adoption proceedings. Since the Appeal Board had made its ruling, it seems to me that now, 90 days later, the bureaucracy should have been able to settle this matter. Madam Speaker, I am therefore appealing to the Minister of State for External Affairs for his help in ensuring that this matter will be settled by next week, because I find the present situation entirely unacceptable, both morally and emotionally.

WESTERN ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITIES CONFERENCE

STATEMENT MADE BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, at the Western Economic Opportunities Conference held in Calgary in 1973, Prime Minister Trudeau said, "... what the West wants is a fair deal—wider choice and opportunity within the West, and a fair chance to build a West which will be an integral part of a stronger and more prosperous Canada". Right on, Mr. Prime Minister! Why does he not practise what he preaches? Why is the Government handcuffing agriculture in the West with Bill C-155? Why are his actions not in conformity with his words?

The national energy policies all but destroyed our gas and oil industries. Bill C-155, if passed as is, will disadvantage almost every farmer in the West. Every producer will lose all freedom of choice. During the Prime Minister's tenure we have seen our hog, cattle and processing industries either reduced or moved East.

The recommendations in the Gilson Report gave us hope, but then the Government scrapped those recommendations. If the Prime Minister meant what he said in Calgary, he should amend Bill C-155 and turn to the Gilson proposals, or to the freedom of choice alternative suggested by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). He should not talk sweetly and then betray us.

DRUGS

EXCESSIVE PAYMENTS BY PROVINCES TO COMPANIES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, it has now been confirmed by provincial Government spokesmen that provincial Governments and drug companies have arrangements which have resulted in the Provinces having paid out over $50 million in each of the last three years to the drug companies in excess of that which is necessary for the procurement of drugs for those who have received benefits through the drug programs of the Provinces. This has happened in each of the Provinces, with the exception of British Columbia and Saskatchewan.

I would like to suggest, Madam Speaker, that provincial Governments be more careful in the way they enter into those arrangements. We cannot afford to have this kind of overexpenditure take place continuously. In particular, we cannot afford to have it continue knowing that the Governments are fully aware that the expenditures are unnecessary. I would ask that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin), in any future negotiations with the various Provinces, keep this matter in mind, and attempt to negotiate a more satisfactory arrangement in order that we do not waste the dollars of the taxpayers of Canada.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS—AIRLIFT ARRANGEMENTS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to one of the Ministers of State dealing with external relations. Would the appropriate Minister explain to the House what the current situation is with respect to the Canadians who are still stranded on the island of Grenada, around whom there is now grave danger and whose lives may be in jeopardy?

Would the Minister indicate to the House why, 16 days after the overthrow of Prime Minister Bishop and ten days after this matter was first raised in the House, the Government has been so totally inept that it cannot arrange an airlift that is a shorter flight than from here to Toronto, about 35 to 40 minutes? What, in truth, is wrong?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member covers a broad period of time with his series of questions. I will try to deal with them very briefly.

First, for a period of the time covered by the Hon. Member's question there was no desire expressed on the part of Canadians to leave the island. Then there was a period of time when the airport was closed during the chaos and it was not possible to do so. Canadian officials went into the island and contacted our nationals, and for those who indicated they wished to leave, arrangements were being made last weekend. At that time permission was received from the Grenadian authorities for Canadian aircraft or another aircraft to carry out the Canadians. Charter arrangements were made for a 48-seat aircraft to do that. That would have happened last Monday if there had not been last minute interventions by some of the countries that owned the airline which, in the confusion of the time, believed that they did not want their aircraft going into Grenada.

When that was straightened out by Prime Minister Charles of Dominica with her helpful intervention, it was too late into the day on Monday for the flight and the rescue attempt to take place. The invasion intervened, making it impossible to take place on the following morning, and American military authorities, who have been in charge of the airport since that time, have not been able to facilitate the combination of a time when the Canadian Hercules would be allowed to land and a time when it would be safe to escort the Canadians to the airport.

My position is that I want every opportunity for the Canadians to be removed as long as that can be done safely. But I have very firmly said that I do not want any attempt to bring the Canadians to the airport if that cannot be done safely, and if their lives would be endangered in doing so.

After consultation with the Americans during last night, we arranged that the Hercules went in this morning and landed at 7.10 to drop off two Canadians officials, Mr. Michael Daniel and Mr. David Brisco, whose task it is today and tomorrow, if necessary, to find and contact the Canadians who are on the island, who wish to leave, and attempt to have them brought safely to the airport.

I can say further that most of the group who had been at the Ross Point Inn have dispersed to other locations, making it more difficult. I am not aware of the premise of the Hon. Member that any of the Canadians are in any danger. The state of military operations on the island is such that there is little danger unless one seeks to move on the open highway. That is the situation. It is a matter of sniper activity from settled areas on high ground. We are in the position—

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Minister might have another chance to answer other questions.

NOTIFICATION OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Would he indicate to the House why the Government did not simply alert the Canadians that the Hercules aircraft was landing this morning and that, if they would be available at the airport, they could be brought back to Barbados? Second, now that he has referred to the sniper fire in which Canadians have been caught, will the Minister assure the House that none of the Canadians were injured?

● (1120)

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I am not aware of any Canadians being caught in sniper fire. I also want to say the attitude of the Hon. Member in suggesting we should have contacted the Canadians during the night to tell them to be at the airport this morning is a relatively naive appreciation of the situation on the island with respect to communications. There is chaos, and there is not a regularly operating telephone system.

Mr. McDermid: You were warned about it.

Mr. Regan: There are many difficulties in even getting straight answers from the American authorities at the airport, who are preoccupied with matters other than the evacuation.

Mr. Lawrence: Welcome to the club.

Mr. Regan: I want to say that once the Hercules went in this morning we could not have it wait to take the Canadians out because there is no parking room on the apron available to be assigned to this Canadian aircraft. The Americans instead have given us blanket approval to take the Hercules back in at any time, or on successive occasions, when groups of Canadians have been safely conveyed to the airport.

That is the situation. If the Hon. Member has ever had any connection with or any knowledge of a military operation, only then perhaps would he have an appreciation of the degree of confusion at the airport.

REQUEST THAT STANDING COMMITTEE BE CONVENED

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, in view of the continuing answers that we are getting from the Government demonstrating its ineptitude, may I put my question to the Chairman of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence? Would the Chairman immediately convene that Committee with a view to framing the Committee's own reference to look into the situation in Grenada and to find out why this airlift has been so ineptly handled and, second, why was Canada shut out of any meaningful knowledge of what has now transpired, bearing in mind that if the Government did not know about the entry in Grenada, even the Sunday Times last Sunday headlined it for the people of Britain to see? Would the Chairman respond to those two requests?

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Madam Speaker, it is well known when the Official Opposition and the third Party in this House express wishes as to other references for my Committee, I always consider their requests very seriously. I, therefore, intend very strongly to consider the possibility of at least calling the Steering Commitee to see what should be our next order of reference.

The Hon. Member for York-Peel, the critic for Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, knows very well that since the last days of June I already had an order of reference prepared. I was waiting for the end of this session so that in the very early days of the next session I could call my colleague from the Official Opposition and my colleague in the New Democratic Party to consider having as an order of reference a subject that is very apropos when we consider what the future will be in Grenada, namely, the peace-keeping operation, and more particularly, our role in Cyprus. I will, therefore, consider that for the weekend and advise, according to the rules of the House, my colleagues in both Parties in the Opposition.

OFFER OF PEACE-KEEPING CONTINGENT

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible at the moment for the Grenadian affair. In view of the proposals made yesterday in this House by the Prime Minister, has Canada to date made a formal offer to participate in a peace-keeping force in Grenada? If so, when, and to whom was that proposal made?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, subsequent to the Prime Minister's statement yesterday that Canada would be prepared to participate under appropriate conditions in a Commonwealth force that might have a post-hostility role in the island of Grenada, on the instructions of the Prime Minister I spoke with Mr. Ramphal, Secretary General of the Commonwealth, who had originally called for a possible role for the Commonwealth. I indicated to him that Canada approved of his initiative and that, if such a force is found to be useful and is constituted, Canada would be prepared to participate and that Canada would be prepared to be of assistance in consultation with other Commonwealth countries, if the Secretary General so desired.

Mr. Bosley: Madam Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer.

PROVISION OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister. Is Canada giving any consideration at the moment to what other assistance it might provide to Grenada, for instance, medical supplies? In fact, would such arrangements be made by the Government potentially through NGOs like Red Cross? Has Canada asked the Americans to deliver such supplies to the island on our behalf, since we are so inept at managing aircraft with regard to Grenada?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, if I may start with the last part of the Hon. Member's question first, I suggest that we have not been inept but have placed aircraft at the nearest position where they can be helpful. It is not we but the Americans who are in control of the airstrip. We also feel that only when people can be safely conveyed is it wise to have them airlifted from Grenada.

Mr. Forrestall: Use a boat.

Mr. Regan: In relation to emergency assistance, once hostilities cease we would very sympathetically examine any requirements for emergency assistance. The fact that Canada is now and has been at all relevant times represented on the ground by a representative of CIDA, and now by other officials of our High Commission in Barbados, we are in a good position to appraise the type of assistance which might be required and how it could best be delivered.

INFORMATION PROVIDED BY PRIME MINISTER OF BARBADOS—TRANSMITTAL TO OTTAWA

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I, too, would like to direct a question to the Minister of State for International Trade who acknowledged in the House yesterday that on last Friday evening at about eight o'clock, three and a half days before the Grenadian invasion, the Canadian High Commissioner to Barbados, Noble Power, met with Prime Minister Adams of Barbados to seek his assessment of the Caribbean situation. At that meeting Prime Minister Adams told Mr. Power that the only solution was a military intervention. Could the Minister tell the House whether or not the results of that meeting, this assessment of Prime Minister Adams, was passed immediately on to Ottawa?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, for the Hon. Member to understand what occurred on Friday it might be useful to recount that Canadian High Commissioners in the region were instructed to contact the Prime Ministers to discuss the Grenadian situation with them, particularly in respect to what they intended to do or not do with reference to recognition of any new or interim government that existed within the chaos on the island. That discussion occurred between Mr. Noble Power, our High Commissioner in Barbados, and Mr. Adams. The discussion covered a number of matters in relation to the situation.

According to Mr. Power's report, in the course of that discussion one item mentioned by Mr. Adams was that it might be necessary for the eastern Caribbean states to consider the possibility of a military intervention. He specifically said that this was a matter which had not been discussed at a meeting of the other States, that it would have to be so discussed, that of course no decision therefore had been taken, and that there was no mention whatsoever of any American involvement.

REACTION OF CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): The Minister did not answer my specific question as to whether or not this information was immediately passed on to Ottawa. I would like to ask the Minister again whether that happened. If so, if this information was passed on to Ottawa immediately, what kind of action did Canada take? Did we take immediate diplomatic action, such as calling our allies in Washington, in London, and in other Commonwealth capitals, notably in the Caribbean, to let them know, and I quote the Prime Minister who said in the House on Tuesday, that Canada was not in the habit of supporting invasions of other countries. If we did not take any action over the weekend on this, why not?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, our allies are well aware of the fact that Canada is not accustomed to supporting military interventions. In addition, I think the Hon. Member would be quick to agree that a military invasion purportedly to be undertaken by the eastern Caribbean states on their own does not sound to be the world of reality at all, because of the very limited facilities that those people have for transportation of military people and also the lack of military forces that exists in those countries.

This was a question of an appraisal of a type that the Hon. Member would have made, about one comment made by Tom Adams. Had there been any mention of the use of forces from other countries, or of any serious intention to take action in that regard, I think the reaction would have been quite different. However, in view of the circumstances, the reaction was one that I consider to have been appropriate.

AIRLIFTING OF CANADIANS—REQUEST FOR AMERICAN ASSISTANCE

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for International Trade. Why is the Government so reluctant, and what does it find repugnant about asking the Americans to assist in taking Canadians off the island of Grenada? They have the forces, the facilities, and the craft. Why will the Government not ask the Americans to assist in taking Canadians off the island with their own aircraft?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, we are anxious for the Canadians who wish to leave the island to be moved to safety by any means whatsoever. We said to the Americans that we have a Hercules aircraft immediately available that has as its sole priority the removal of Canadians and any other people who want to come along with them on the aircraft. The Americans said that they would undertake to evacuate the Canadians, but they have not said when, and what priority that would receive. Members will recall that the American aircraft that are there have other priorities of a military nature. Ours has the sole priority of immediately removing Canadians as soon as they can be available at the airport. That is the distinction.

Oral Questions

TRANSMITTAL OF BARBADIAN INFORMATION TO OTTAWA

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I come back to the Minister of State for International Trade and ask him very simply the same question that I have now asked twice. Was the information that High Commissioner Power received from Prime Minister Adams on Friday night passed on to Ottawa, and when was it passed on to Ottawa?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the report of the discussion that Mr. Power had with Prime Minister Adams covering all of the items discussed was passed on to Ottawa. It was passed on in the course of the weekend. I would have to check to find out the exact hour.

If Hon. Members will be quiet and patient, I will frankly and honestly tell them what we know. The report of his discussion was passed on to Ottawa, as is the practice. It was not passed on with any apprehension of any early military action on behalf of eastern Caribbean countries. There was mention of this remark by Tom Adams, but also many other matters that Tom Adams had discussed. I suggest for the Member to picture that Tom Adams talked only about the possibilities, at some definite time in the future, of eastern Caribbean countries considering the possibility of a military action, was something not given the high profile in the discussion by Tom Adams that he is now suggesting.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT—REQUEST FOR ACTION BY GOVERNMENT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Employment and Immigration, who has momentarily left the Chamber, perhaps I can direct my question to the Minister of Finance. In a document on the economy prepared by the Ministry of State for Economic Development last February, and released through Freedom of Information, there appears this interesting comment:

> Large numbers of unemployed workers in major urban centres, especially young people, are presenting a dramatically different series of problems for which we are by and large unprepared.

Given the fact that youth unemployment in Canada has been hovering around 20 per cent for the past 15 months, and in light of the warnings and advice that were given to the Government in the report of the Ministry of State in February, why have there been no initiatives in the last nine months to deal with this matter? Why must we wait for another Speech from the Throne? Why, in the name of a half million young Canadians unemployed, can this Government not act now?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, this statement by the Hon. Member is rather unbelievable. He quotes a document that was prepared last February, before the budget. It was part of the preparation of the budget that was released last April. I do not know where my friend has been for the last nine months, but he should remember that in April we had a budget which contained a very large amount of economic stimulus. It provided incentives to the economy of about $4.8 billion. It provided additional funds for the purpose of direct job creation, as well as providing large incentives to the private sector to create jobs.

The Hon. Member knows that since last November Canada has been creating jobs at a faster rate than any other industrial country in the world. This has happened since last November as a result of the recovery taking place in North America and also with the policies and incentives provided by the Government of Canada in the last budget. We have taken steps to ensure that our policies try to deal with the problems as they develop, and try to foresee the problems that are coming. The Minister of Employment and Immigration indicated that, now that the level of unemployment among adults seems to be coming down relatively fast, we must give even more attention to the problem of youth unemployment. He said he will be addressing this question more particularly in the next few months.

REQUEST FOR IMMEDIATE INITIATIVES TO CREATE JOBS

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I do not know where the Minister has been because, when he brought down his budget, he provided $90 million for 31,000 jobs for young people at a time when there were 600,000 young people unemployed, a time when the unemployment rate among young people was averaging 20 per cent over the previous 12 months. Why have there been no new initiatives, given the warnings back in February and the warnings by the Minister of Employment and Immigration who, incidentally, must agree with this because he was musing on the weekend about new initiatives, but these new initiatives will not come about until the Speech from the Throne. If there are to be new initiatives, in the name of all of these unemployed young Canadians, why cannot these new initiatives be taken now?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, very simply, my hon. friend should realize that when the Government provided $4.8 billion of incentives in the last budget, these incentives were not provided by saying that the young people cannot have access to them. That money has created incentives in the economic system in Canada to help all Canadians—adults, the young, males and females. The Hon. Member is completely distorting the fact when he contends that the only amount added for job creation among young people was $90 million over and above the hundreds of millions of dollars that were already allocated for the young people.

My hon. friend has to look at the total impact of the budget on job creation in this country which is available for young people as well as for adults. The Hon. Member should realize these facts.

As I indicated in my previous answer, the Minister is also considering whether there are additional steps that can be taken to deal with the very serious problem of youth unemployment. This is what he has been actively working on.

I have another suggestion for my hon. friend. If he is that concerned about unemployment and jobs for young Canadians, he should encourage his Party and the New Democratic Party to vote for the Crow legislation which will create 370,000 jobs in this country and create $35 billion in sales for this country.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

REQUEST FOR INTERIM GRAIN PAYMENTS

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. I would like to know how he intends to create jobs by bankrupting farmers. The Government now has in its hand over $1.1 billion of the farmers' money for grain sold. In the western Grain Stabilization Fund it has between $800 million and $900 million. Will the Government make an interim payment of the farmers' money before the end of the year? It might create some jobs.

• (1140)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, in response to the rhetorical question that was posed by the Hon. Member, the way that you create jobs is by building a new railway to move the farmers' product to export markets so it can be sold and they can make money.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Mr. Axworthy: If he does not know those basic economics then he should change his seat.

On the second part of the question, the Hon. Member knows very well that just last week the Minister of State responsible for the Wheat Board announced new payments on barley coming out of that particular program. We have indicated that we are reviewing the Grain Stabilization Program. There is a legislative requirement that payments be based on a five-year average. No Government can overcome that particular requirement under the statute. However, we are reviewing it to determine whether there can be a new formula determined. Rather than sitting and making great speeches about it, the Hon. Member might be prepared to adopt such measures when and if they are brought forward.

FARMERS' CASH FLOW PROBLEMS

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Minister knows that I referred directly to the grain sold. The Minister also knows that when we were in Government we made interim payments.

Madam Speaker: The question.

Mr. Gustafson: Is the Minister going to play politics with the farmers' money and make a large payment just before the election, or is he going to alleviate the cash flow problems they have right now?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, as always we will make the decision at the most prudent time.

CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION

DOMESTIC AIR POLICY HEARINGS—APPOINTMENT OF PUBLIC INTEREST COUNSEL

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. On September 27 the Minister asked the Canadian Transport Commission to hold public hearings on domestic air policy following the events relating to discount fares by Canadian airlines. He pointed out that there would be a counsel appointed by the Minister of Justice to represent the public interest. Could the Minister inform the House when this appointment will take place?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, first I am pleased to report to the House that the Canadian Transport Commission has decided to hold such hearings, the first of which will take place on November 15. Second, the Minister of Justice has agreed to my request and has appointed Mr. Morris Kaufman as special counsel to represent the public interest at those hearings.

IMMIGRATION

HONG KONG PROSPECTIVE ENTREPRENEUR IMMIGRANTS—EXORBITANT CONSULTANTS' FEES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On Wednesday he announced a policy making it easier for entrepreneurs to immigrate to Canada. Is the Minister aware of the situation in Hong Kong where a number of Canadian lawyers and so-called immigration consultants, mainly from Vancouver and Toronto, are operating out of expensive hotel suites in Hong Kong, issuing misleading newspaper advertisements, and exploiting Hong Kong business people with exorbitant fees of up to $15,000 a case for simply filling out forms, which can be done for free at the Canadian High Commission?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker, I have heard something to that effect of the activities of these so-called consultants, although not in the detail which the Hon. Member has described. It is difficult for us to restrict the kind of advertisements which may appear outside of the country. It is extremely unfortunate that this is taking place. We have arranged to station an increased number of officers abroad to handle the applications of the entrepreneur class which we are seeking to expand.

When we see such advertisements or activities of this kind in Canada we do investigate them with a view to seeing whether action under the Immigration Act to stop them is appropriate. I very much regret the activities that he is describing taking place. These consultants cannot provide better information or better access than that which is provided by the officers of my Department.

APPLICATION OF GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister. He might also want to know that the embassy has even countered some advertisements which claim that for $250,000 you can get into Canada.

A number of immigration consultants and lawyers, including the Hon. Minister's predecessor, Ron Atkey, the Conservative Minister, have been to Hong Kong to take advantage of this bonanza business. Does the Minister think that our immigration policy, which favours business investment over family reunification, can lead to inequalities, and encourages these sharks to go to Hong Kong and say that you can in fact buy your way into Canada, at a time when the Hong Kong people are very uneasy over the renewal of the British treaty with China? Is not the policy itself inherently inequitable when it leads to this kind of situation?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): No, Madam Speaker, I do not think so, for two reasons which I would like to underline. First, it is not true that anyone can buy their way into Canada. It is possible, using the entrepreneurial class, for people to come to Canada bringing investment and their administrative skills. However, there are qualifications which are attached to that, requirements which they must meet in terms of the amount of money they invest, their participation in the enterprise, and the creation of jobs.

The second point which I would like to emphasize to the Hon. Member is that in the announcement of the desirable levels of immigration quotas, we have not reduced the size of the family entrance group. There has not been an increase of projected numbers in the entrepreneurial class at the expense of family reunification. I hope that is understood. I think that the assumptions which he presented in his question are not entirely accurate and would not lead to the conclusion that there is an injustice in the way in which the system is operating.

EMPLOYMENT

APPLICATION OF SKILLS TRAINING PROGRAMS IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The national economic analysis prepared by the federal Minister of State for Economic and Regional Expansion, which has been referred to by my colleague from St. John's East, states clearly that current federal job training efforts in Prince Edward Island are "largely directed at off-Island employment opportunities".

According to the Government's own information and analysis, such programs rob the Island of its skilled young people in favour of other parts of Canada. What specific steps is the Minister prepared to take to correct this most serious deficiency in job-creation programs and job-training programs at the federal level?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the report to which the Hon. Member is referring is one which dates back to last February and I therefore am not sure that the description which he cites is entirely accurate or appropriate to circumstances which we now face. He posed his question originally in terms of Prince Edward Island and then concluded with a more general question. I will write specifically about the Prince Edward Island situation.

We do have the Skills Growth Fund and other programs which are oriented towards creating the technological skills which he touched upon in his question. I have said to the House in the past that we have been a little bit disappointed in the take-up of some of those programs over the last year or so, since the private sector has been unwilling to accept the overhead costs which are implied in those programs. Our anticipation is that with the continuation of the recovery and the strengthening of the economy the private sector will be more anxious to take advantage of those programs which we have put in place. That is the general answer to his question, and I will return to him more specifically on the question of Prince Edward Island.

SUGGESTED CO-ORDINATION OF PROJECTS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the same Minister. The same Government analysis to which I have made reference states that the major federal projects in Prince Edward Island have been poorly scheduled leading to "over-expansion in boom periods followed by over-capacity and unemployment". Given the millions of dollars which the federal Government is spending on Prince Edward Island on such projects as the national headquarters for DVA, the Charlottetown airport, the convention centre, and other programs, how does the Minister propose to co-ordinate those different projects to ensure maximum advantage to the local economy, especially to workers in the construction industry?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am a little bit puzzled. I am not sure whether the Hon. Member is suggesting that it would have been preferable if those projects had not proceeded. It is my impression that those projects are both active and of benefit to the Prince Edward Island economy. There are continuing discussions between the Government of Prince Edward Island and the Government of Canada, under the auspices of my colleague, the Minister for Regional and Economic Expansion, about the co-ordination of development activities generally on the part of our two Governments to ensure that the programs of one are coherent with those of the other. If it is the question of the mechanisms by which that co-ordination takes place, it might be best if the Hon. Member directed that question to my colleague.

THE ECONOMY

HIGH INTEREST RATES—POLICY INQUIRY

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I believe if the Minister would check his documents he might find it was the summer of 1983 document, not February of 1983.

My question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The same Government documents confirm that high interest rates impact upon consumer and business confidence, consumption, and capital spending in the housing industry. Why was it that during the recession the Liberal Party adopted a policy to induce high interest rates?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Government did not adopt a policy during the last recession. My honourable friend is mistaken.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: The "Economic Development Perspective" says high interest rates have been policy-induced.

CAPITAL FOR SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I would like to go on and, using the same document, ask the Minister of Finance another question. The report goes on to state that one of the major constraints to growth as the economy moves out of the recession will be the availability of capital on favourable terms. What specific action is the Government taking to guarantee capital to small business, to farmers especially, on favourable terms?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend should read the document carefully and realize that indeed the high interest rates resulted from the situation determined and guided by United States policy. The Hon. Member knows that. This is recognized all around the world. This has been the subject of discussions at the International Monetary Fund meetings, at the World Bank meetings, at the Williamsburg summit and, as a matter of fact, at the summit at Montebello last year. My hon. friend will remember that this very issue of high interest rates in the United States was discussed extensively because it was creating ripple effects around the world, including in Canada.

As far as the second part of the question is concerned, I remind my hon. friend again that in the last budget I provided about $2.4 billion of incentives to the private sector, particularly small business. These measures which were contained in the budget had a bias in favour of small business, whether in the area of research and development or in the area of general financing.

I remind the Hon. Member also that we have a program of small business loans. My hon. friend may not know that the majority of these small business loans, as a matter of fact, go to farmers. So we have a program therefore under small business loans which is available to farmers as well as to small business, which has met with great success.

INCOME TAX

FEDERAL COURT RULING ON DEDUCTION OF FARM LOSSES

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. The Minister will know that this week the Federal Court has ruled that a farmer can deduct farm losses against income earned off the farm. This court case came about as a result of the insidious way some of the Minister's bureaucrats have been interpreting Section 31 of the Income Tax Act. Would the Minister be prepared to treat this case as a precedent-setting case, and instruct his Department to interpret that section of the Act in line with the way the Federal Court has just ruled?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, very recently, yesterday in fact, we received the judgment in the case of Graham vs the Crown. Obviously, before drawing any conclusions with respect to policy or the Department's administrative practices, we shall have to make an in-depth study within the Department of this judgment and also consult with officials of the Department of Justice, to find out the scope of the judgment and what repercussions it might have on the policies referred to by the Hon. Member and on administrative practice as it relates to Section 31 of the Income Tax Act.

[English]

DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF FARMERS

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, I thank the Minister for that answer. However, surely the very least we could expect is that in the meantime, when the Department is carrying out a re-evaluation and looking at the "ambit", to use the Minister's word, the Minister would be prepared to instruct his Department to cease from prosecuting and collecting money in the very insidious way his Department is interpreting those rules. Will the Minister instruct his Department that the evaluators must cease collections and cease harassing farmers under that section of the Act?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I do not think we can conclude on the basis of a single judgment that all cases covered by Section 31 of the Act are similar to the case involved here. It will be necessary to consider the nature of the case, the scope of the judgment and also whether present policy and practice should be revised, and that is the exercise we shall be conducting in the weeks to come.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INVASION OF GRENADA—INFORMATION RECEIVED ON POSSIBILITY OF MILITARY INTERVENTION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I would like to go back to the question of Grenada, with the Minister of State for International Trade. Is there any possible or reasonable explanation of why our High Commissioner, having been told by the Prime Minister of Barbados that the only solution as he saw it was military intervention, did not consider that to be of some vital importance and did not recognize the necessity to inform the Government of Canada that this was in the minds of those people in the Caribbean? As a result of that we were unable to move to safeguard our people in Grenada and, more important, we were unable to move to try to intervene and stop the proposed aggression.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, in answer to the last related question, I can now tell you that the telex from Mr. Noble Power was received Friday evening at approximately 8 p.m. That telex did not portray events as the Hon. Member suggests. If the Hon. Member wants to make a judgment as to what was said in the conversation between Mr. Power and Tom Adams, I would like to tell him that the absolute and final answer as to the accuracy of what Mr. Power reported is the fact that, subsequent to the invasion, Prime Minister Tom Adams has apologised to Canada for the fact that it was not possible to consult, that it was not possible to have told us what was going to happen—

Mr. Stevens: Why?

Mr. Regan: —and if indeed what he had suggested was such that it was going to indicate to Canadians the urgent possibility of military intervention, then Tom Adams would not have found it necessary to have apologised after the fact for the situation in which Canada was not consulted.

Mr. Stevens: Why could he not tell us?

Mr. Regan: Events moved so fast and security was of such paramount importance that it became almost impossible to consult.

GOVERNMENT'S ACTIONS FOLLOWING RECEIPT OF INFORMATION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Now that we understand that the Government of Canada had in its possession the communique from our High Commissioner indicating that there was the possibility of armed intervention, why did the Government of Canada not take steps right then and there, immediately, to contact our allies—

Mr. Lalonde: Do not be ridiculous.

Mr. Deans: —in order to try to find a way to stop that before it occurred?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member must remember that the Opposition cannot have it both ways.

Mr. Deans: I can have it the way I am asking.

Mr. Regan: It cannot say on one hand that we were consulted and therefore we should have done something, then, on the other hand, say we were not consulted because we were not trusted.

Mr. Deans: Answer my question.

Mr. Regan: We either were or were not. The Opposition had better get its story together. That is the first thing I want to say.

The next thing I would like to say to the Hon. Member is that the problem is in his question, not in our answers. He continually says that we were told there was a possibility of an invasion. That is not the case at all. What Tom Adams said to Noble Power was that some of the eastern Caribbean states were interested in the possibility of a military intervention. It had not been discussed by them at any meeting. This was just one of the possibilities. Surely the Hon. Member is not going to try seriously to portray to the Canadian people that he believes there was a potential for the eastern Caribbean countries to carry out an invasion by sea or air.

• (1200)

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon on a supplementary.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I have a point of order.

Madam Speaker: I am sorry, I thought the Hon. Member was rising to ask a question. Points of order are not entertained during Question Period and I had intended, because there are a few here who are asking for supplementary questions, I presume on this matter of Grenada—

Mr. Kilgour: Yes.

Madam Speaker: Very well. The Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

CANADA'S RELATIONS WITH CARIBBEAN STATES

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for External Relations. Will the Minister not agree that the events of the last week show that Canada was trusted with respect to Grenada by neither the Caribbean states nor the United States? Will he not agree that the lesson is that if you try to ride all horses simultaneously, you end up being trusted by none? Will he also tell us why the Minister responsible for international trade is responding to questions on this subject rather than himself?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I am responding to questions on this matter as Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs. In relation to what the Hon. Member has said, surely, Madam Speaker, he is perceptive enough to know the reason we were not consulted was because of the fact we are known to be a country which is seeking peace and is hesitant about becoming involved in any military intervention.

I point out to the Hon. Member through you, Madam Speaker, that once there had been a meeting of the Caricom nations, and once Trinidad and Belize indicated their opposition to military intervention, even though Trinidad is the nearest possible country to Grenada and it was not consulted, no one was consulted except those countries in the area which had already indicated they were in favour of an invasion. They did not want to consult with anyone who was going to slow down the process or ask that remedies other than an invasion be carefully examined.

TEXT OF TELEX COMMUNICATION FROM BARBADOS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, first of all would the Minister be kind enough to facilitate the House by the tabling of the telex to which he referred? Also, who in fact is not telling the truth? He or Prime Minister Tom Adams, whom I have known for a long time, and his father before him, is an honourable man. He says he did advise our High Commissioner in Barbados that military intervention seemed to be the only answer.

Mr. Pepin: By whom?

Mr. Forrestall: Tell us who in fact is telling the truth. The Minister or Mr. Adams?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I have known Tom Adams for a long while. He was on my committee when I was chairman of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. I have a very high regard for Prime Minister Tom Adams. I do not think it is a question of who is telling the truth. I want to tell the Hon. Member to read the different versions of the New Testament by the different Apostles.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: He will see how different people recollect the same situation in different ways, and from different perspectives. I suggest that what you have here is a situation that in a discussion Noble Power had occasion, as our High Commissioner, to note carefully, as High Commissioners are trained to do, the contents of the discussion and report them immediately. That is contrasted with Tom Adams' recollection a few days later, after the very important other matters he had been involved in as a participant in the invasion.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: I will be lenient because it is the Leader of the Opposition, but I must tell him in advance that I have to allow only one question because Question Period is over.

REQUEST THAT TELEX BE TABLED

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, St. Francis of Assisi may never recover from what the hon. gentleman just said. Lent is coming in a hurry, and there is going to be a lot of penance on the other side to be paid for this kind of answer.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: The Minister made specific reference to an important telex in which an officer of this Government was apprised of an important fact by the Prime Minister of Barbados. Will he table that and related documents in the House immediately, so that Members of this House can pass an objective judgment as to which of the Apostles is telling the truth?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I would have thought that the Right Honourable—excuse me, the Leader of the Opposition—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: You are right.

Mr. McDermid: It is coming.

Mr. Regan: Madam Speaker, I had in mind that the previous Leader of the Opposition was Right Honourable. May I say I would have thought that the Leader of the Opposition, from his education at St. Francis Xavier University, would have learned that St. Francis was not one of the Apostles.

Mr. Mulroney: I never suggested he was.

Mr. Regan: I have to say that I am somewhat shocked. I knew the Honourable Leader was deficient in some other knowledge, but I thought he might have known that. I think it is more likely that he is here portraying the doubter, Saint Thomas.

I say to the Hon. Member that reports by High Commissioners and Ambassadors to the Government, as the Hon. Member will perhaps learn after some time here, are not the type of documents customarily tabled in the House.

Mr. Stevens: You read from it.

Mr. Regan: I certainly did not read from it, whatsoever.

Mr. McDermid: You did so.

Mr. Regan: The Hon. Member can contend that I did. I am saying that I did not read from it.

Madam Speaker: Order. Will the Hon. Minister come to the point because, as I said before, it is past the hour.

Mr. Regan: I say to the Hon. Member that I believe the appropriate and prudent course for me in such a situation would be to bring his request to the attention of the Secretary of State for External Affairs—

Mr. McDermid: Wherever he is.

Mr. Regan: —who returns to Canada tomorrow.

Mr. Nielsen: Point of Order—

Madam Speaker: I will put an end to Question Period before I entertain a point of order in the way that I sometimes do when I have reports of petitions, and I certainly have some today.

PETITIONS

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: With the exception of 11 petitions, I have the honour to report to the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members yesterday meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form. Those who do not meet the requirements as to form are the following: two presented by the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), two presented by the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Patterson); two presented by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight); one by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski); one by the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong); one by the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers); one by the Hon. Member for Erie (Mr. Fretz); and one by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson).

POINTS OF ORDER

MR. NIELSEN—REFERENCE TO TELEX BY MR. REGAN

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I do not believe the Minister has the luxury of hiding the telex from the High Commissioner to Barbados, which he is attempting to do. We all saw the Minister, in response to questions, quoting at some length from that telex, if he says—and we must accept his word in this House—that he was not reading from the document, he certainly referred to it at some considerable length. I would like to draw to the Chair's attention Citation 327 of the Fifth Edition of Beauchesne which stipulates that:

> A Minister of the Crown is not at liberty to read or quote from a despatch or other state paper not before the House, unless he is prepared to lay it upon the Table.

That is equated to the same rule of evidence in courts of law which requires production so as to enable all sides to a dispute to have all the evidence in order to come to a value judgment. Citation 326(2) reads:

> It has been admitted that a document which has been cited ought to be laid upon the Table of the House, if it can be done without injury to the public interest.

It submit the public interest demands that all the facts be known since the lives of some 50 Canadians were placed in jeopardy by the Government's ineptness.

The other citation I wish to quote is to be found on page 103 of the same edition of Beauchesne.

● (1210)

It might be argued that a Minister must either cite or quote specifically from the document before that rule applies. I have made this argument previously in the last three and a half years, Madam Speaker, and I must say that I have not been too successful in the outcome. However, I maintain and so submit that this rule does come into play when a Minister of the Crown refers to a document in his hand as being an official communication, in this case from the High Commissioner in Barbados, and when he is seen by Hon. Members of the House while answering questions to be referring to the document.

I cannot say that the Minister was reading because he said that he was not and I must accept his word. However, he was seen by Hon. Members to be holding that document up. He was seen by Hon. Members to be quoting or citing at length from that telex which he held in his hand. In the observance of all Members, it is quite clear that he was at the very least referring to, if not reading from, that document. On the basis of the clear perception of Hon. Members who saw him doing this, I suggest that he is now under an obligation by virtue of our practices and precedents to table that document. He cannot seek refuge by the application of any fine and stringent interpretation of Beauchesne.

It would be gravely disappointing to us, Madam Speaker, if in response to this situation you were to say that the Minister has said that he did not read and therefore we cannot compel him to table a document, or that the document was not cited from because the Minister said he did not read it. We all clearly saw him do this. I submit, Madam Speaker, that if there ever was a clear case for the application of the practice of Ministers being required to table such documents, this is certainly the case.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I wish to be very exact on this point of order. I am certainly in the hands of the House, but it is my recollection and my strong impression that I did not read from the telex. I have in front of me personal notes as well as a telex. In the course of Question Period, I did consult the telex. The Hon. Member said that I read at length from it. I have checked the telex and found that I have only used three or four words that are contained within that document. I paraphrased—

Mr. Nielsen: That is enough.

Mr. Regan: I said that I used the words, I did not read them.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: I was consulting from my personal notes. I am obviously totally in your hands, Madam Speaker, but in my view I did not read from the telex. I felt that I should stand and make it clear that the telex was on my desk along with my personal notes, and if that requires its tabling, then I would obviously be in the hands of the House. However, I do not feel that that is the case and I do not feel it is appropriate policy for such documents to be tabled unless I am clearly in the position that a rule of the House does require that I table the document. I was not reading from it.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I have now a specific citation to refer to the Chair in view of the admission made by the Minister. I refer to Citation 327(5) which reads as follows:

To be cited, a document must be quoted or specifically used to influence debate.

While we saw what we saw, Madam Speaker, the Minister has now admitted that he cited four or five words from the document.

Mr. Evans: It was from his notes.

Mr. Nielsen: No, he said that he cited four or five words from the document. That is what I heard him say and that is what we all heard him say. I would ask the Chair, Madam Speaker, to apply Citation 327(5) to this situation.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, you may recall a ruling made by the Chair involving paragraph (5), where you changed a word in Beauchesne, and the Chair is to be congratulated for having done so. Paragraph (5) reads in the published edition:

To be cited, a document must be quoted or specifically used to influence debate.

In one of your rulings, you substituted the word "and" for "or". Perhaps I could be more specific about dates, but I made a note in my copy of Beauchesne when you made your previous ruling. Therefore, the Chair must conclude that if the Minister used the telex, which is not the case, he did so in order to influence debate. But aside from that, and I just mentioned it for the sake of argument, the Minister was very clear about the facts. He did not quote the telex. He mentioned that he had some personal notes in front of him, that he may have been using two or three words that appeared in the other document, but a Minister has the right to quote from personal notes, without having to table them, and since he said clearly that he neither read nor quoted from the telex, he is not obliged to table it.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, I would recall for the House the circumstances that led up to the Minister referring to the telex and, as he has said, using the three or four words from that telex. You will recall that he was attempting to confirm his version of the actual message from Prime Minister Adams of Barbados. We have another version. He was attempting to influence the debate by saying that he had a telex and he waved that telex around. He used the words that he has now admitted to using and he made a biblical reference in order to confirm that his version was perhaps different from our version of what Prime Minister Adams had said. It is a clear example of why the tabling of such documents is required.

Madam Speaker: I believe that it is quite clear from Beauchesne that a Minister of the Crown is not at liberty to read or quote from a despatch or other state paper that is not before the House unless he is prepared to lay it upon the Table. The reasons for that are quite obvious. If a Minister is using a document in order to enforce an opinion or an idea, Members should obviously have access to that document.

As well, Citation 327(5) of Beauchesne reads as follows:

To be cited, a document must be quoted or specifically used to influence debate.

As I was listening to the arguments made by both sides, I felt that there might be a single restriction which might be put on this, and that is if it can be done without injury to the public interest. The Hon. Minister could have said to the House that something in that particular document should not be published in the interests of public security. However, on his own admission, the Minister did read from the document since he said himself that he used two or three words from it.

I cannot determine whether or not the Hon. Minister read from the document if he tells the House that he did not read from the document. However, he has now told the House that he read from the document—

Mr. Pinard: He did not say that.

Madam Speaker: I think that two or three words means—

Mr. Regan: I "used" them. On a point of order—

Madam Speaker: Sorry. He quoted the document and that is sufficient to have it tabled. It is clear to me that the document was read from and quoted in part and therefore the rules should apply.

Point of Order—Mr. Hawkes

I can look at the "blues" to see if there are any other points that would allow me to change my mind, but the Hon. Minister has offered to look at the document to see whether it is possible to table it without any injury to the public interest. Perhaps in the meantime, I can look at the "blues" after giving the House at this time my preliminary impression about what has just taken place in the House. That would allow the Minister time to reflect upon the nature of that document and tell the House whether or not he feels that it can be published without any injury to any matters of public interest.

MR. FLIS—PRESENTATION OF PETITION

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I stood up on a point of order right after you made your ruling on petitions, Madam Speaker. I would first like to thank you for ruling the petition I presented yesterday in order.

I draw your attention to yesterday's Hansard, Madam Speaker, where the Hon. House Leader of the Official Opposition got up on a point of order after I presented my petition. He said:

● (1220)

Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I did indeed inspect the petition. It was not signed by three Members of Parliament. It has to be, to be in order.

Knowing the parliamentary gentleman that the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) is, I wonder if he would stand up in the House and withdraw those words. Or do petitions require three signatures by three Members of Parliament, as the House Leader of the Official Opposition got up in the House and said yesterday to try to discredit my petition by making that statement?

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the Chair has ruled on the advice of her officers. I always respect those rulings and the advice which you receive.

MR. HAWKES—ALLEGED ERROR IN GOVERNMENT PUBLICATION

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have in my possession a Government document which was issued this morning. On page 2 of that document it makes clear that unemployment insurance payments by employees and employers go up 10 per cent. On page 1 it indicates—

Madam Speaker: What is the point of order?

Mr. Hawkes: The point of order is that this is the earliest opportunity for the Government to correct an error that cannot co-exist with the facts at the same point in time.

Madam Speaker: I know that was the Hon. Member's question during Question Period. He was waving that document at me during the Question Period. He is just trying to put in a question that he was not able to put in a few minutes ago. We will not have that.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

PRESENTATION OF TWENTY-FOURTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I have the distinct honour to present the twenty-fourth report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs in both official languages.

PETITIONS

MR. FULTON—PORNOGRAPHY—CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF BROADCASTING ACT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, I have received from the length and breadth of my constituency, petitions of concern about the degradation and exploitation of women, children and men through pornography, most recently from Telegraph Creek and the Queen Charlotte Islands. Today I have the honour to table petitions on this matter from Terrace residents.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to demonstrate its opposition to the denigration of women by enacting an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act, as introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on March 8, 1983. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ALTHOUSE—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, I have a petition from the residents of the town of Strasbourg in Saskatchewan to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the town of Strasbourg in the Province of Saskatchewan who do now exercise their right to present a grievance humbly sheweth that we do not need any more nuclear weapons or Cruise missiles and we call upon the Government to refuse to test the Cruise missile. Your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

MR. BENJAMIN—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I have the privilege and the duty to present a petition to the House of Commons assembled by the undersigned residents of Canada from the towns of Beausejour, Swan River, Lac du Bonnet and Ottawa, some 36 names, who say that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. This grain in turn contributed $6.3 billion to Canada—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member simply read the title of the petition and the prayer.

Mr. Benjamin: The undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution. Wherefore the undersigned will pay one times Crow and your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain Crowsnest Pass rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have the pleasure to stand here today to present to the House of Commons a petition signed by residents of the Province of New Brunswick who support the passage of the Private Member's Bill standing in my name, Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone.

The petitioners believe that testing the Cruise missile in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to the peace of the world. The petitioners stress that Canada has a traditional—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member resume his seat. I have to remind Hon. Members that what is allowed in the course of presenting a petition is a reading of the title and the prayer. No argumentation should take place in the course of reading a petition or using "whereas" to justify the particular petition.

I warn Hon. Members that if they have several petitions they should file them all when they are recognized, because I will not recognize Members twice on petitions.

Mr. Anguish: I find that a very strange ruling.

Madam Speaker: Order. Will the Hon. Member read his petition. That is what he is recognized for.

Mr. Anguish: The petitioners stress that Canada, as a traditionally peaceful nation, can and must play a crucial role in achieving multilateral disarmament—

Madam Speaker: Order. I am sorry to tell the Hon. Member that he does not seem to be listening to what the Chair is saying. I just told the Hon. Member that he should not be giving any more details than the title and the prayer. He continues exactly where he left off. If that is the way the Hon. Member pretends to obey the Chair, I must tell him that he does not have a clear notion of what parliamentary behaviour requires of Hon. Members.

Mr. Anguish: They believe that the passage of Bill C-678 will allow Canada to act as a mediator along with other countries that wish to participate in the world-wide nuclear disarmament process. And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

I have some other petitions here this afternoon so I should present them at the same time and I will just being to go through them.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. With great respect, the Standing Orders do not support the contention that a Member rising to present a petition must present all of the petitions that a Member might have in a bundle, whether they be two, three or a dozen.

Surely the Standing Orders support the Member's right to rise and present a petition which may deal with the two I presented yesterday, for instance, about the Yukon placer mining industry. If they have a petition with respect to the state of the egg industry in this country, they are entitled to present that separately. If they have some other subject matter from another part of the country, they may present that separately.

Surely the time-honoured right of presenting petitions is the right of the citizen in the various parts of this country to be heard in a distinct and separate fashion. The Member who rises to present that petition is honouring that right of the citizen in presenting the petition in that fashion.

I would therefore suggest that while the process could be speeded up somewhat, nevertheless the right remains in the citizen, really, to have a petition signed by a particular group of citizens submitted by a Member quite distinctly and separately from any others. If the rule were to be otherwise, we would have occasions when we would be duplicating some instances in the House which the Chair has frowned upon in the past with respect to petitions that are two or three blocks long with signatures attached to them. I suggest that while it is not our intention to engage in this process this day, Members should be entitled to proceed by presenting their petitions individually.

I believe the Chair is correct in restricting the presentation of petitions so as to exclude any debate thereon, certainly to exclude reading them because the rules do not permit that. The rules, however, do go slightly beyond the reading of the title and the prayer. The rules stipulate that the nature of the petition can be explained by the Member presenting it, for instance. There are other criteria set forth in the rules. If the rules were to be applied strictly to the petitions, I would have no problem with their presentation in accordance strictly with the rules. But you do get into the nature of a petition and you also get into the purpose of a petition under the Standing Orders. That is permitted, in my reading of the Standing Orders.

• (1230)

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, under the Standing Orders, petitions may be either presented orally or laid on the Table of the House. Of course, Members who want to waste the time of the House may present their petitions orally.

The Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish) was presenting another petition when you interrupted him to explain that you were not going to allow Members to present more than one petition unless they did so the first time they were recognized, and that this was the Chair's ruling. The Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake rose to object to this ruling, and he had the floor for barely two seconds. However, the Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) rose and the Chair gave to the Hon. Member the floor for two minutes to criticize the same ruling. Now, I wonder why the Member for Yukon would be more equal than the Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake? The former has been wasting the time of the House for weeks, and it would seem that just because Member for Yukon can outshout other Members, he enjoys privilege of being allowed to explain his arguments. I therefore wonder whether he is not more equal than others. When the Chair makes a ruling, it applies to all Members, including the Member for Yukon, and if the Chair did not allow the Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake to criticize its ruling, I do not think the Member for Yukon was entitled to the two minutes he was allowed.

Madam Speaker: I may point out to the Hon. Minister that as far as the Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake is concerned, it seemed to me that he was objecting to a procedure I was suggesting in order to speed up the process of presenting petitions. He then started reading all over again exactly what I had asked him not to repeat. That is why I was a bit strict with him.

As for the Member for Yukon, he was entirely justified in raising a point of order. I heard him, as is my duty to do so. He criticized a ruling! Well, I do not know whether he was criticising, but in any case, he did not attack the Chair. He seemed to be giving his interpretation of the Standing Orders, and I do not disagree with the Hon. Member for Yukon, in that he also felt that I was right in wanting to speed up the process. He agreed with me on that point. Where I did not agree entirely was when the Hon. Member argued that citizens have the right to present petitions separately. He seemed to be arguing that if I ask a Member to present all petitions when he or she is given the floor, the petitions are no longer presented separately. Well, they are separate, since all petitions are separate entities and the Member in question may read them one right after the other. So the argument raised by the Hon. Member for Yukon is not valid.

I also wish to point out to the House, as was done by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), that if the Chair finds that too much time has been spent on petitions, it has the discretion to ask Hon. Members to lay their petitions on the Table of the House instead of reading them in the House.

Mr. Pinard: Absolutely!

Madam Speaker: It is allowed, it is part of parliamentary practice, but the Chair nevertheless has some discretion in such matters. I would therefore ask Hon. Members to speed up the process so that we can go on to other business, without spending too much time on petitions. It is clear to anyone who follows the proceedings of Parliament that on days that Hon. Members are presenting flocks of petitions, something unusual is going on, and the Chair is well aware of this. It has noticed that on occasion, presentation of petitions is being used to delay the business of the House. Anything is legitimate, up to a point. That is why the Chair has discretionary powers.

The Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake has the floor.

[English]

Mr. Anguish: Madam Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. The difficulty I have is that in this House—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Did the Hon. Member want to rise on a point of order or to read his petition?

Mr. Anguish: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: The point of Order is finished. I have made my comments. That is finished. If the Hon. Member wants to read his petition, I have recognized him for that purpose. If he wants to raise another point of order, I will recognize him for that purpose as well.

Mr. Prud'homme: Just read your petition.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, the second of the many petitions that I have here today calls upon the House of Commons to find a solution to the grievance that the petitioners have put forth. They ask first that the Crow rate, the statutory rate, be maintained and that the railways of all of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system. Under no circumstances should the Crowsnest freight rate be changed. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, this petition I would like to present to the House of Commons today is one signed by some 60 residents of the Brockville, Ontario area, all of whom call upon Parliament to debate and pass a Private Member's Bill standing in my name, Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone.

I am pleased to say the signatures were obtained after a Brockville resident visited Ottawa and the Parliament Hill peace camp where he was able to see and obtain a copy of my petition. The petitioners call upon Parliament to recognize that the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to world peace. They call upon Parliament to pass Bill C-678 so that Canada can act as a mediator along with other countries that wish to participate in a world-wide nuclear disarmament process.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, the next petition I have is sent to me by residents of the Lloydminster and Marshall area. They call upon this House to seek a solution to their concerns. The undersigned have carefully considered the alternate plan put forth by the New Democratic Party. They want the Crow rate to be maintained, as we have insisted in the many debates in this House of Commons; that the railways of all of Canada be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system. The undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party's alternative plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Prud'homme: God has forgiven you, you have prayed enough.

Mr. Anguish: Only a few more, Marcel.

Mr. Speaker, the next petition I have is signed by residents of Marsden, Saskatchewan. They call upon the House of Commons in Parliament assembled to find a solution for their concerns and hope that this honourable House will provide a remedy. The undersigned want the statutory Crow rate maintained without question, without alteration, and that the railways of all Canada, especially those branch lines in western Canada so essential to the movement of grain, be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system. The undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party's alternate plan which will have no change to the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition this afternoon which calls upon the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Town of Colonsay in the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that they are opposed to the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada. They call upon the Government to refuse the testing of the Cruise missile, since they view it as a serious escalation of the nuclear arms race and to ensure that we become a nuclear weapons free zone to allow Canada, as well as other countries, to participate in a mediation role between the superpowers and other countries which currently have a nuclear arms capability, because it seems that they enter into conflict, not meaningful consultation or disarmament talks. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I also have the pleasure to present a petition signed by residents of Calgary, Alberta. The petitioners wrote me through Mr. Richard Collier of Mount Royal College, Calgary. They say that Canada must somehow turn back the tide of potential world destruction and express their fears of the deployment of the Cruise and Pershing II missiles. The petitioners stress that the testing of the Cruise missile escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to world peace. They call upon Parliament to debate and pass Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone, which would allow Canada to act as a mediator in the world along with other countries that wish to participate in the process and to work toward a world-wide nuclear disarmament process.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition which is signed by residents of the Marshall and Lashburn area. They call upon the House of Commons to find a solution to their concerns and ask that our honourable House will therefore provide a remedy for their concerns arising from Bill C-155. They want to impress upon the House the importance of preserving and maintaining the statutory Crow rate. Further, they want to see the rail transportation system in Canada improved and upgraded and especially their branch lines preserved because they are so important to the survival of their communities. The undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternate plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rates. And as in duty bound your petitioners ever pray.

MR. ANGUISH—CALL FOR PASSAGE OF BILL C-678

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have a fairly lengthy petition which gives me a great deal of pleasure to present. It is signed by some 216 residents of the Province of Alberta from such communities as Medicine Hat, Calgary, Banff and Red Deer, all of whom support the passage of the Private Member's Bill standing in my name, Bill C-678, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons free zone. The petitioners believe that the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada escalates the nuclear arms race and is therefore a serious threat to world peace. The petitioners urge Parliament to recognize that multilateral nuclear disarmament must occur in order to secure world peace and that Canada, as a traditionally peaceful nation, can play a crucial role in achieving multilateral disarmament by becoming a nuclear weapons free zone, thus allowing it to act as a mediator between countries with a nuclear weapon capability along with other countries that wish to participate in the process.

Those are all the petitions I have to present at the present time. However, I have some more which I will present in following days. I appreciate the indulgence of the Chair in allowing me to present these petitions this afternoon. They were sent as a result of very serious concerns on the part of the people who signed them. Whether they be on the issue of disarmament, statutory freight rates, pornography or whatever, it is very important for people to be allowed to express themselves through Parliament by the presentation of petitions through Members of Parliament should they choose to do so.

MR. WADDELL—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have only two petitions to present to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The first petition is from the undersigned residents of the Town of Viscount, in the Province of Saskatchewan, and of the City of Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance. They humbly sheweth that if the United States wants to test Cruise missiles, it can be done in its own country, not in ours. They call upon the Government to refuse to test the Cruise missile in Canada. The petitioners are duty bound and will ever pray. There are a number of petitioners in this case, about 20 people from those particular towns. I would like to sign and table that petition.

MR. WADDELL—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my second petition is from the Town of High River, a well-known town in Alberta.

An Hon. Member: A great town.

Mr. Waddell: Yes, a great town, as my friend says. The former leader of his Party came from that town; I hope he supported him. This petition is from residents of High River, Alberta and of Ottawa, Ontario. It is to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. They exercise their right and humbly sheweth that the removal of the Crow rate will see its replacement by rates which will impose higher freight costs of five times the present Crow rate and higher by 1990, that such increases are being imposed at a time when prices for producers' grain are now at 1974 levels, and that the calculations show, finally, that the rate of 5.1 times the Crow rate will cost the community of High River alone $732,500 in payments for grain freight, which otherwise would have stayed in that community, based on actual deliveries of 1980-81 crop. It is signed by some 19 people from High River, together with three people from Ottawa. The petitioners pray that this House will listen to their pleas. I would like to sign that petition and to file it.

MR. HEAP—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present a petition from undersigned residents of the City of Toronto, in the Province of Ontario. They now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition humbly sheweth that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) presented to the United Nations in 1978 the strategy for nuclear suffocation, that testing of the new Cruise missile in Canada is inconsistent with this strategy, and that Canada's NATO partners, Belgium and The Netherlands, have refused to have Cruise missiles deployed on their soil.

Wherefore we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request the Prime Minister to refuse to allow the testing of this new generation of weapons on Canadian soil. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this one on the back, I present it for tabling.

MR. HEAP—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition which was signed by some 59 or 60 residents of several different parts of Ontario. To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternate plan presented by the New Democratic Party, that the Crow rate must be maintained and that all railways of Canada must be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transportation system.

Wherefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternate plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this one on the back, I am prepared to have it tabled.

MR. HEAP—CALL FOR IMPROVED TRAIN SERVICE IN NORTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by residents from many parts of Ontario, especially northern Ontario, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that people in northwestern Ontario sometimes have to wait in unheated shelters for infrequent trains up to four hours late in wintertime.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to improve train service with modern, reliable and comfortable trains. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this petition, I will now give it to the Clerk.

MR. HEAP—INCOME TAX CLAIMS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition which is signed by some 20 people and addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the specific requirements for documentation from income tax claimants for non-resident dependants have been unfair and have imposed great hardship on some countries where such help is needed most. The Government of Canada has removed this claim from the 1982 tax year.

Wherefore we the undersigned do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to petition the Minister of National Revenue to cease all audits against such claims for 1979, 1980 and 1981. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this petition, I will now present it to the Clerk.

MR. HEAP—SALE OF MILITARY PRODUCTS TO LATIN AMERICA

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present another petition from a number of residents of Ontario to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians are greatly concerned about the possible use of Canadian-made military products in Latin America military adventures or by the dictatorships in Latin America.

Wherefore we the undersigned do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to refuse applications for DIPP and PEMD assistance and as well to refuse export permits to companies for the sale of military products to these Latin American dictatorships. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—AID TO HONDURAS AND NICARAGUA

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a number of residents of the Province of Ontario to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents, who do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians are greatly concerned about the presence of large numbers of American military advisers in Honduras and El Salvador and that Canadians are greatly concerned about the present training and other assistance being given to Somocista forces both in Honduras and in the United States.

Wherefore we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to condemn at the United Nations and through other diplomatic channels such interference in both the sovereignty of Nicaragua and the just struggles of the Salvadoran people. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this petition, I now ask the Clerk to receive it.

MR. HEAP—ASSISTANCE TO GOVERNMENT OF NICARAGUA

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled from a number of residents of Ontario who do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition humbly sheweth that Canadians are greatly concerned about the lack of support being shown by the Canadian Government for the Nicaraguan Government in its efforts to reconstruct their country and provide a decent standard of living for all Nicaraguans.

Wherefore, we the undersigned do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to establish a program of generous assistance to the Nicaraguan Government and to pressure the Government of United States to reinstate its purchase order for Nicaraguan sugar at the previous level of 58,500 short tonnes. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this petition, I present it to the Clerk.

MR. HEAP—SALE OF NUCLEAR REACTORS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the expenditure of government income on subsidization of the sale of nuclear reactors constitutes a theft from the social services needed for Canadians.

Wherefore we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to cease the sale of nuclear reactors and reallocate the money saved to such services as daycare centres, social housing and health care for Canadians. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this, I now ask the Clerk to receive it.

MR. HEAP—HIRING OF VISIBLE MINORITIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I have, Mr. Speaker, a petition from a number of residents of Canada. The undersigned do now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition humbly sheweth that affirmative action programs regarding the hiring of visible minorities by the departments of the federal Government have been sadly neglected.

Wherefore we the undersigned do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to petition the Minister of Employment to encourage the hiring of visible minorities and to undertake studies dealing with the problems faced by visible minorities. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Having signed this petition on the back, I call upon the Clerk to deliver it.

Perhaps we can call it one o'clock, Mr. Speaker. I have more petitions to read.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member has suggested that the House call it one o'clock. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

MR. HEAP—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I had been reading a petition when it was time to call it one o'clock, and as I explained to the Speaker then under the new rules I have some other petitions as well.

It is my honour to present a petition to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow rate in the 1981-82 crop year. This grain, in turn, contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade, that the undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy, and that western farmers will pay one times Crow rate, no change.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain Crow rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the testing of Cruise missiles in Canada compromises the integrity of Canada in striving towards peace.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to refuse to allow the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—PRODUCTION OF MILITARY PRODUCTS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there have been great public concerns regarding the use of substantial portions of Canadian human and materiel resources for the production of military products for use by dictatorships, that there has been great public concern regarding the corresponding lack of support for Canadian industries producing useful goods for Canadians.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to institute an industrial plan to convert those productive facilities presently involved in military production to the manufacture of goods to be enjoyed by Canadians. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The undersigned citizens and constituents of Burnaby have asked me to present this petition because they now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition humbly sheweth that, in the opinion of your petitioners, successive Liberal budgets impose undue and unfair hardship on low and middle-income Canadians, that the budgetary policies of this Government have served to increase the miseries of inflation and unemployment rather than reduce them, that budgets fail to reduce interest rates which thereby prohibit any economic recovery, that the citizens of Burnaby wish and need to be consulted about matters of public policy affecting their well-being.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to be dissolved in order that a general election may be held immediately. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—SOCIAL HOUSING

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the present lack of affordable housing for families in Canada constitutes a threat to the social well-being of millions of Canadians, that there are thousands of unemployed construction workers across the country presently dependent on Government assistance for survival.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to institute an expanded program of construction of social housing. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—IMPORTS OF CLOTHING AND TEXTILES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that imported clothing and textiles are threatening the viability of Canadian manufacturers and putting Canadians out of work.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to limit imports of clothing and textiles to 20 per cent of the Canadian market. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—REMOVAL OF OAKALLA CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. This petition is signed by residents of Burnaby in the Province of British Columbia who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition humbly sheweth that the Governments of British Columbia have in the past assured citizens of Burnaby that all prisons on the Oakalla lands would be phased out, that the citizens of Burnaby feel that the Oakalla buildings have outlived their usefulness and are not compatible with abutting parkland uses, and that Burnaby Municipal Council has expressed its desire that the facilities be phased out.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to urge the Province of British Columbia to undertake no further construction of prison facilities in the Oakalla lands and ensure the early removal of the Oakalla correctional facilities. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—LANGUAGE TRAINING FOR IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that language training skills are only available to one member of an immigrant family upon arrival in Canada and that immigrant women cannot participate in the work force of the community without the necessary language skills.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request the Government to provide funding to community and social service agencies to establish language training programs with daycare facilities to prevent these women from being isolated in their new homeland. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—SALES OF NUCLEAR MATERIEL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there is uncertainty as to whether uranium sold by Canada to the United States and other countries is being used for strictly peaceful purposes.

Wherefore we the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to cease its sales to the United States and other countries until it is proven beyond doubt that no Canadian materiel is being used in the manufacture of nuclear weapons. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—CLAIMS FOR REFUGEE STATUS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will now provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians are greatly concerned about the lack of safe haven for persons persecuted in Central American countries for their political beliefs and about the difficulties and dangers such persons have in making contact with the appropriate Canadian authorities to make a refugee claim.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to establish a well publicized program, in conjunction with international aid organizations, to assist persons wishing to escape repression to safely make known their desire to claim refugee status in Canada, and to be expeditiously accommodated. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—INTEREST RATES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there is great public concern regarding the present interest rates and their inflationary effect on the Canadian economy.

Wherefore, we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to legislate a maximum interest rate of no more than 1 per cent above the rate of inflation. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—IMMIGRANTS AND REFUGEES FROM FASCIST COUNTRIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which I will now present to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. This petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that immigrants and refugees from countries ruled by Fascist dictators are not given equal opportunity with immigrants from Communist countries, and that these immigrants suffer the indignities of torture, repression and imprisonment.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request the Government to review its policies regarding immigrants and refugees from these countries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—IMMIGRANTS AND REFUGEES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. This petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that immigrant and refugee groups strongly feel that the recent consultation process on immigrant settlement programs did not permit sufficient time for proper input.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to petition Cabinet to make no decisions concerning the policy framework for resettlement, integration, adaptation and language training prior to additional consultation among representative constituencies of the non-governmental agencies, the Provinces and the federal Government, and, further that the consultation process be extended until the resumption of Parliament for the fall session. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—CALL FOR MINISTER RESPONSIBLE FOR CHILDREN

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that presently no one federal department or Minister is responsible for the needs of children and their families.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to appoint a Minister responsible for children to ensure that their futures are protected. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that whereas there is a dearth of secondary manufacturing industries in Atlantic Canada, we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to promote the expansion of light manufacturing industry and other industries based on fishing and other maritime resources in Atlantic Canada in order to provide work and income security and to preserve the seagoing way of life. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL OF COMPANIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians are concerned about the massive lay-offs in the nickel industry and the apparent inability or unwillingness of business dominant in that industry to plan their operations to benefit Canadian workers.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to immediately bring Falconbridge Limited and the International Nickel Company of Canada under immediate public ownership and control. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—YOUTH EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition of the undersigned residents of Canada to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. These petitioners, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that in times of high unemployment the Armed Forces should not be used as a means of relieving unemployment among young Canadians.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, do humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request that the Minister of Employment and Immigration seek more creative methods of providing employment for the young. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the City of Toronto, in the Province of Ontario, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) presented to the United Nations in 1978 a strategy for nuclear suffocation and that testing of the new Cruise missile in Canada is inconsistent with this strategy, and that Canada's NATO partners, Belgium and The Netherlands, have refused to have Cruise missiles deployed on their soil—their soul, too.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request the Prime Minister to refuse to allow the testing of this new generation of weapons on Canadian soil. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. FULTON—OFFSHORE OIL EXPLORATION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, relates to the proposal by Chevron Oil to conduct offshore oil exploration on the West Coast.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament that there be full and complete public hearings into supply and demand for energy and the socio-economic and environmental aspects of offshore development before the moratorium is lifted. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. That petition is from residents of the south coast of B.C.

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, relates to the question of the federal Government's new energy legislation.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament that there be full public hearings into the demand for energy and the socio-economic aspects of offshore development. That petition is from residents of Saanichton and Victoria on Vancouver Island.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair is informed the Hon. Member has already been recognized for petitions today and the practice of the House will not be to recognize an Hon. Member twice on the same day for a group of petitions.

Mr. Nielsen: New ground being broken.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt but this is the practice that Madam Speaker indicated would be followed. If there are other Hon. Members rising to introduce—

Mr. Benjamin: I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, the Chair announced earlier this day that only one Member would be recognized to present petitions. That was after a number of Hon. Members had been recognized.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The ruling of the Chair is that a Member will be given an opportunity once in a particular day's sitting to present petitions. Are there other Hon. Members—

Mr. Benjamin: Point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please sit down? That is a ruling of the Chair. Are there other Hon. Members seeking to be recognized for petitions? The Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong).

Mr. Benjamin: Point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is seeking to reflect on a judgment of the Chair. I call to his attention that this is not permitted. The Hon. Member for Regina East.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, the Chair informed the House that it would only recognize—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please sit down? The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Regina East.

Mr. Benjamin: Another point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: He may have a new point of order. He might.

Mr. Benjamin: Point of order. I know, with all due respect, that the Chair would never countenance or take part in changing the rules in the middle of a procedure.

Mr. Axworthy: Order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is reflecting on a judgment of the Chair.

Mr. Benjamin: Exactly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: He has repeatedly done this.

Mr. Benjamin: Exactly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair does not feel obligated in the circumstances to recognize him again on the same point of order on which a ruling has been made. The Chair now recognizes the Hon. Member for Regina East.

If the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has an observation, the Chair is always prepared to listen. But the Chair is asking in the circumstances if the Hon. Member for Regina East can be recognized. The Hon. Member for Yukon wishes to be recognized.

Mr. Nielsen: The only observation I have to make, and I do not want to appear to be bailing out the NDP, is that I did not hear enough of the point of order of the Hon. Member for Regina West, even though it is not my responsibility to do so. I heard one sentence. It may well be that he is going to get into an area reflecting on the judgment of the Chair and the Chair at that point would be quite correct in curbing it. But I can think of a point of order he could raise legitimately—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member for Yukon, we cannot deal in hypothetical situations.

Mr. Nielsen: Let us hear it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon is an experienced Parliamentarian, and the Hon. Member for Regina East has been recognized for the purpose of petitions.

Mr. Nielsen: He has a point of order we have not heard, for heaven's sake.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Four times we have heard it.

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from people in and around the Swift Current area. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternative plan proposed by the NDP.

We, the undersigned, urge the Parliament of Canada to immediately adopt its provisions in order that the Crowsnest Pass freight rates may be maintained and the railways of Canada may be upgraded and developed into a modern and efficient transport system.

MR. DE JONG—REMOVAL OF OAKALLA CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Burnaby, British Columbia, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted rights thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the Government of British Columbia has in the past assured citizens of Burnaby that all prisons in the Oakalla lands would be phased out. They feel that these buildings have outlived their usefulness and are not compatible with the abutting park land uses. Burnaby Municipal Council has expressed a desire that this facility be phased out.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to urge the Province of British Columbia to undertake no further construction of prison facilities on the Oakalla lands and ensure the early removal of the Oakalla correctional facilities. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—CALL FOR GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the constituency of Burnaby, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth—

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I can get some guidance from you as to the accepted pronunciation and customs of the House. Mr. Speaker, is it "showeth" or "sheweth"?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member, as a Member of this institution, will surely be well aware of the proper style at this stage, having presented many petitions.

Mr. de Jong: All right, humbly sheweth, but "sheweth" sounds like a shoe.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member will please read his petition as best he can.

Mr. de Jong: It might be my immigrant background.

• (1430)

It is the opinion of your petitioners that successive Liberal budgets impose undue and unfair hardship on low and middle income Canadians and that the budgetary policies of this Government have served to increase the miseries of inflation and unemployment rather than to reduce them; that the budgets failed to reduce interest rates which thereby prohibit an economic recovery and that the citizens of Burnaby wish and need to be consulted about matters of public policy affecting their well-being.

Wherefore we, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to be dissolved in order that a general election may be held immediately. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Parent: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Perhaps the Chair could clarify something for me. Is it the understanding of the Chair that all of these petitions have to be read or can they simply be tabled in the House without being read?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Certainly the opportunity is offered for Hon. Members to leave petitions with the Clerk at the Table but the Chair cannot deny Hon. Members who insist upon reading petitions their right to read the petitions. However, if they choose to bear in mind the time of the House and the circumstances and allow their petitions to be placed with a Clerk at the Table, that option is certainly open to them.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. de Jong: It sounds like there is an atheist or some such creature over there.

An Hon. Member: It takes one to know one.

Mr. de Jong: Is that a point of personal privilege, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: At this point the Hon. Member is dealing with petitions. Would he care to proceed with the petitions that he is presenting?

TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that I wish to present to the House and to Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Town of Elrose in the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the Cruise missile should not be tested in Canada and call on the Government to refuse to test the Cruise in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Since Elrose, Saskatchewan, is my home town, I wonder if the Hon. Member could tell me how many people signed that petition.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member can merely present his petition at this point. If he chooses to indicate the petitioners' communities, it has been recognized that he can do so and he can also roughly indicate the number of signatures. However, at this stage there is no exchange or questions permitted, nor is examination of contents permitted.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I will continue reading my petitions. I suggest to the Hon. Member that he should go back to Elrose sometime and visit his own constituency a bit more often.

Mr. Speaker, I do have another petition addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the City of Toronto, in the Province of Ontario, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) presented to the United Nations in 1978 a strategy for nuclear suffocation and that the testing of the new Cruise missile in Canada is inconsistent with this strategy and that Canada's NATO partners, Belgium and The Netherlands, have refused to have Cruise missiles deployed on their soil.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I believe that this morning, Madam Speaker and yourself pointed out to the Hon. Member, who is a good friend of mine, that he should not be reading and giving us facts. He is still doing that, and although I find it very interesting, it is not what should take place at this time. He is supposed to read the title and to give the prayer—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The point of the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) is well taken. I shall quote from Hansard of April 12, 1973, the remarks of the previous Speaker of the House:

> Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that under the terms of the Standing Order he can only lay the petition on the table and not make a speech or present argument in support of the petition.

I call that passage to the attention of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on that same point of order. I am glad you limited the ruling to that extent because I do not think it need be denied that the nature and the purpose of the petition may be stated in its delivery.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) will recognize that the Chair has permitted this, but I think the Hon. Member for Yukon will also recognize that the Hon. Member who is presently on his feet is going a little beyond the scope which is normally permitted.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I certainly wish to apologize to you and to the House if I am breaking any rules or straying from the—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member will please read his petitions.

Mr. de Jong: Wherefore we, the undersigned, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to request the Prime Minister to refuse to allow the testing of this new generation of weapons on Canadian soil. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—OFFSHORE OIL EXPLORATION

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which is mainly from residents of Vernon, British Columbia, and it is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of British Columbia and other Provinces, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth—and I will try to make this brief, Mr. Speaker—that the oil companies, particularly Chevron, are considering a resumption of offshore explorations, that the federal Government is considering lifting the moratorium on offshore explorations, and that any future benefits to British Columbia are in question because of the federal Government's new energy legislation.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that there will be full and complete public hearings into the supply and demand for the energy and the socio-economic and environmental aspects of offshore development before the moratorium is lifted. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that I wish to introduce to the House. It is a petition that is mainly from people who live in and around the Swift Current area. We, the undersigned, have carefully considered some of the alternatives proposed by the Pepin-Gilson Report and we urge the Parliament of Canada to immediately adopt some provisions other than the Pepin-Gilson provisions in order that the Crowsnest Pass freight rate agreement may be maintained and to ensure that the railways of all of Canada may be upgraded.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to retain the Crowsnest Pass freight rate agreement.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has considerable misgivings concerning points of order during the presentation of petitions. If the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) has a point of order, the Chair is prepared to hear it. However, it is very difficult to conceive of a point of order under these circumstances.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I do not rise to enter into debate or to cause problems. I simply want to make a correction. I understood the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) to say that he was presenting a petition from Melrose, Saskatchewan. I come from—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, he is not making a point of order. The Hon. Member for Regina East.

MR. DE JONG—EXTENSION OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BENEFITS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that I wish to introduce to the House. It is addressed to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas the number of unemployment people in Canada far exceeds the present demand for workers and the number of people whose Unemployment Insurance benefits become exhausted each month and who are subsequently forced to exist on inadequate welfare benefits is a national disgrace, therefore we, the undersigned petitioners, call on the Government of Canada to extend the length of payments of Unemployment Insurance benefits to those who qualify for major claims by a further 52 weeks.

MR. DE JONG—STUDENT LOANS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas under present regulations people who are graduating from or leaving post-secondary educational institutions and who have taken out Canada student loans are required to begin paying back those loans within six months of leaving full-time study, and whereas with the present and projected level of unemployment at such a high rate many students find themselves without employment and in severe financial hardship for extended periods after leaving school, therefore we, the undersigned petitioners, humbly pray that the Government of Canada amend the Canada Student Loans Act to extend this grace period to 18 months.

MR. DE JONG—CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that I wish to present to the House. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas under present regulations Unemployment Insurance benefits are paid on the basis of 60 per cent of the recipients' insurable earnings, and whereas this regulation severely hampers the ability of lower paid workers to maintain a reasonable standard of living during their term of unemployment, we, the undersigned petitioners, call on the Government of Canada to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act to allow benefits of 90 per cent of insurable earnings up to the current maximum to be paid to recipients. Most of the petitioners are from the Province of Ontario.

MR. DE JONG—SALMONID ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas the continued existence of the salmon fishing industry on the West Coast of Canada is dependent upon the revitalization of the stocks, and whereas the Salmonid Enhancement Program has shown to be a viable vehicle for accomplishing this objective, therefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, call on the Government of Canada to continue and increase funding for the Salmonid Enhancement Program.

MR. DE JONG—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition I wish to present to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Town of Govan in the Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that, no way, it is our country and not theirs. If they must, let them foul their own nest. We call on the Government of Canada to refuse to test the Cruise. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—WEST COAST FISHERIES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas there are a substantial number of vessels, both domestic and foreign, fishing the waters off the West Coast of Canada without the presence of Department of Fisheries and Oceans observers to monitor their catches, and whereas it is essential to the health of the fishing industry in Canada that commercial stocks be closely monitored, therefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, call on the Government of Canada to provide adequate funding to the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and to ensure the implementation of an observer program for West Coast fisheries.

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition I wish to present to the House of Common in Parliament assembled, mainly from petitioners in and around Swift Current, Saskatchewan, who have carefully considered the alternative plan of the Pepin-Gilson Report concerning the Crow's Nest Pass Freight Rate Agreement. They urge that the Parliament of Canada immediately adopt its provisions in order that the Crowsnest Pass freight rate may be maintained and ensure that all the railways of Canada may be upgraded and developed to modern and efficient transportation for the benefit of the whole country.

MR. DE JONG—NANOOSE BAY NAVAL BASE

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by the residents of Canada to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas the Minister of Defence has indicated that he does not know whether or not submarines frequenting the U.S. naval base at Nanoose Bay, British Columbia, are equipped with nuclear arms, therefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, call on the Government of Canada to insist to the Government of the United States that it remove and prohibit any further use of this base by submarines which are nuclear powered or contain nuclear weapons. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—DEPLOYMENT OF SS-20 MISSILES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has complained that Canadians have not been vocal in criticizing the deployment of SS-20 missiles by the Soviet Union, and whereas the Prime Minister is the chief elected spokesperson for Canadians, therefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, call upon the Government of Canada to instruct the Prime Minister to condemn on behalf of Canadians the deployment of those missiles. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—U.S. INTERFERENCE IN EL SALVADOR

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas the Government of the United States continues to support financially the daily murders and repression in El Salvador, therefore we the undersigned, your petitioners, call upon the Government of Canada to demand in the strongest possible terms that the United States cease its interference in the affairs of El Salvador. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—STUDENT LOANS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition I wish to introduce in the House. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that under the present regulations people graduating from post-secondary educational institutions and who have taken out Canada student loans are required to begin paying back those loans within six months of leaving the full-time studies.

● (1450)

I wish to withdraw this petition, Mr. Speaker. I believe I have already introduced it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That seems a reasonable ground. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to withdraw his petition?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Petition withdrawn.

MR. DE JONG—HOME OWNERSHIP STIMULATION PLAN

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the Hon. Member checked that this petition has not already been introduced?

Mr. de Jong: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I apologize, and I will take special care to make certain that I do not duplicate my petitions to you this afternoon.

This petition is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The Government of Canada in its budget of April 19, 1983 made a commitment to extend funding for the Canadian Home Ownership Stimulation Plan until May 1, 1983. An increase in activity in the housing construction industry is of great importance to economic recovery in Canada and in particular to British Columbia.

We, the undersigned petitioners, call upon the Government of Canada to consider further extensions to this program. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—U.S. INTERFERENCE IN NICARAGUA

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition I wish to introduce. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, mainly living in the City of Ottawa, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the Government of the United States has cut back drastically on imports from, has refused foreign aid loans to, and has continued to financially support and anti-Government guerilla army in Nicaragua.

Wherefore the undersigned petitioners call upon the Government of Canada to demand in the strongest possible terms that the United States cease its campaign to undermine the Government and the economy of Nicaragua. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—JOB-CREATION PROGRAM WAGES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to introduce another petition. This petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise the right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that whereas wage restrictions in the various government job-creation programs have not increased in relation to the increasing cost of living, and whereas these wages are far too low to support even a small family in any reasonable manner, we the undersigned petitioners call upon the Government of Canada to increase the wage allowance that is paid to workers on job-creation programs in order to reflect the increased cost of living. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This is like signing my Christmas cards, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member will confine himself to reading petitions.

MR. DE JONG—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, a petition signed by the residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to prevent a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the undersigned have carefully considered the alternate plan presented by the New Democratic Party and that the Crow rate must be maintained and that the railways of all Canada must be upgraded and developed into a most modern and efficient transportation system serving everybody.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to adopt the provisions of the New Democratic Party alternate plan which will not change the Crowsnest Pass Freight Rate Agreement. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF BROADCASTING ACT

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned constituents of the riding of Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain, Province of Saskatchewan, and other concerned citizens, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission television broadcasting regulations do not extend to women the same protection against abusive comment or abusive pictorial representation as now exists for racial and religious groups; that the concerns of citizens have been recently heightened not only by the so-called adult programming on pay-TV but also by the proliferation of pornography in various media; that the degradation and exploitation of women, children and men through pornography is abhorrent to all people; that the Minister of Communications has been willing to empower the CRTC to regulate broadcasting to ensure Canadian content but has yet to intervene to ensure the protection of women against abuse. It is Parliament's responsibility as provided for in the Broadcasting Act to strengthen, enrich and safeguard the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to demonstrate its opposition to the denigration of women by enacting an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act as introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Miss McDonald) on March 8, 1983. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Parent: Send some over here and I will do some for you.

An Hon. Member: The Libs want in on the action.

Mr. Benjamin: Why don't you do your own?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

MR. DE JONG—OFFSHORE OIL EXPLORATION

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): I wish to introduce a petition to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that oil companies, particularly Chevron Canada, are considering a resumption of offshore exploration for oil and gas on the West Coast, that the federal Government is considering lifting the moratorium on offshore exploration on the West Coast and that any further benefits to British Columbia are in question because of the federal Government's new energy legislation.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament for full and complete public hearings into the supply and demand for the energy and the socio-economic and environmental aspects of offshore development before the moratorium is lifted. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. DE JONG—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have one more petition I wish to introduce to the House today. It is a petition mainly from residents of the Town of Cupar, Province of Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance and humbly sheweth that it is time their feelings be known about this important issue, that they do not agree to having the United States of America test the Cruise missile in Canada, and they call upon the Government of Canada to refuse to test the Cruise. And your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour today to present a petition which has been produced and addressed to the House of Commons. It is to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. They indicate that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars of industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because Canada lacks a marine industrial strategy; that the federal Government has by and large failed to enact or implement a coherent Canadian marine industrial policy, although it promised to do so over a number of years; and that economic growth in Canada and the wellbeing of the country are in jeopardy because of Government inaction. Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that the Government be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible and effective marine industrial policy which will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding industries. I have the honour to present this petition which was signed by individuals from Toronto, Peterborough, Thorold and numerous other locations in southern Ontario.

● (1500)

Mr. McDermid: You have never been there.

Mr. Skelly: On the contrary.

MR. SKELLY—PORNOGRAPHY—CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF BROADCASTING ACT

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, also I have the honour to present a second petition which is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned constituents of the ridings of Broadview-Greenwood and Spadina in the Province of Ontario and other concerned citizens, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the CRTC television broadcasting regulations do not extend to women the same type of protection against abusive comment or abusive pictorial representation as now exists for racial and religious groups, that the concerns of citizens have been recently heightened not only by the so-called adult programming on pay television but also by the proliferation of pornography in various media, that the degradation and exploitation of women, children and men through pornography is abhorrent to all people, that the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) has been willing to empower the CRTC to regulate broadcasting to ensure Canadian content but has yet to intervene to ensure the protection of women against abuse, and that it is this Parliament's responsibility as provided for in the Broadcasting Act to strengthen, enrich and safeguard the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to demonstrate its opposition to the degradation of women by enacting an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act, as introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on March 8, 1983. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. Of course this was signed by numerous residents of Toronto.

CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a third petition from numerous residents of the Province of British Columbia, representing the communities of Victoria, Steveston, Richmond and Vancouver. Their petition is addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because the Government has failed to implement a comprehensive and effective marine industrial strategy, that it has failed to enact the appropriate legislation to ensure that offshore oil and gas development benefits will accrue to Canadian industry and Canadian workers, and that Canada's economic growth is in serious jeopardy because of Government inaction in this very vital area.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to encourage the Government to implement immediately a sensible and effective marine industrial policy which will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition to present on a related topic. It is somewhat similar. It expresses very serious concerns. It is addressed to the—

[Translation]

—the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled.

The petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a common grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that Canadians have been deprived of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial spin-offs because we have no industrial maritime strategy and the federal Government has neglected to provide Canada with a consistent maritime policy, although more than two years ago it promised to announce such a policy, and that the Government's action is endangering Canada's economic growth. Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be asked to adopt forthwith a consistent and effective maritime policy, resulting in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and expansion of the Canadian shipping industry and related sectors. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

This petition is signed by numerous residents of the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present another petition of a similar nature. As a result of the very vigorous efforts of members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers who sought to present this petition in the Parliament of Canada, signatures have been obtained from residents of Elmira, Kitchener, St. Catharines and Waterloo, in the Province of Ontario. Essentially their petition is to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that because of a very serious omission in the development of a Canadian marine industrial strategy, Canadians are now losing thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in possible benefits; that the federal Government has failed to take the initiative to implement a coherent Canadian marine industrial policy, although such a policy was promised more than two years ago; and that this country's economic growth is being jeopardized because of inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to encourage immediately the Government to implement an effective Canadian marine industrial policy which would see the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition which comes from the riding of a colleague in the House, North Vancouver. A large number of people have signed this petition. It is addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. They are very concerned about the nature of shipbuilding and allied industries on the West Coast of Canada. They have made their thoughts known through the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that billions of dollars in industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because Canada lacks a comprehensive marine industrial strategy, with the result that thousands of jobs are being lost to Asia and Europe by the failure to implement this strategy and that the federal Government neglected to implement such a coherent policy is, therefore, deliberately aiding and abetting in the loss of employment and economic opportunities in this vital sector and the economic growth and wellbeing of this country is in serious jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to enact soon the legislation required to implement a Canadian marine industrial policy and to develop a Canadian merchant fleet. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

It is probably relevant to pray now that the Gallup poll shows our colleagues to be at 62 per cent. The intervention may be worthwhile. We should probably pray together.

Mr. Speaker, I want to present another petition from the Province of Quebec. This petition has been gathered by the Syndicat international des marins du Canada.

[Translation]

To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a common grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy.

Humbly sheweth that:

Canadians have been deprived of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial spin-offs because we have no industrial maritime strategy and the federal Government has neglected to provide Canada with a consistent maritime policy, although more than two years ago it promised to announce such a policy, and that the Government's action is endangering Canada's economic growth.

Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be asked to adopt forthwith a consistent and effective maritime policy, resulting in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of the Canadian shipping industry and related sectors.

As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

This is signed by numerous individuals in the Province of Quebec in many of the communities which depend upon shipbuilding and the allied industries for their basic livelihood. I would put my signature on and submit this for the consideration of the House.

Mr. Speaker, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to present another petition from residents of Burnaby, B.C., who have put forward this petition to the honourable House of Commons of Canada and Parliament assembled in the hope that Parliament will give consideration to the matter which they have raised. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that throughout Canada on the East Coast, along the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes and on the West Coast of Canada, and in the North along the MacKenzie delta, there have been thousands of jobs lost and billions of dollars of industrial benefits forgone. They have not accrued to Canadians because Canada lacks a coherent and effective marine industrial strategy. Canada's economic growth and wellbeing is jeopardized because of the Government's inaction in this area.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be encouraged to implement immediately a sensible, effective and direct marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of the Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. As I mentioned before, this is signed by numerous residents of Burnaby, B.C.

Mr. Speaker, I have the honour once again to present a petition which has been gathered by the longshoremen's union. They have obtained many signatures of residents of the communities of Vancouver and Burnaby, British Columbia, and many areas in the Lower Mainland where marine activities associated with port facilities are of serious concern to these people. They have indicated that they are addressing their petition to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are lost to Canada each year because Canada lacks an intelligent marine industrial strategy and that the federal Government for many years have neglected to develop and implement a coherent marine industrial strategy, even though that promise was made to the Canadian people many years ago, that Canada's economic growth and wellbeing are in serious jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government will immediately implement a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in Canada having a merchant fleet and expanded facilities for shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Petitions

● (1520)

Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by the residents of the communities of New Westminster, Nanaimo, Vancouver. I am looking for one from Rosemond, Alberta, but there does not seem to be one here. Certainly communities such as Richmond and Delta are represented, and so is North Vancouver once again. There are very large populations and areas which are dependent upon the ocean and marine activities for their way of life. They have addressed their petition to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because we lack a coherent and effective marine industrial strategy and that the federal Government has neglected to implement a coherent Canadian marine policy although it promised to do so. Canada's economic growth and wellbeing is in jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament that the Government be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible, effective, direct marine industrial policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This is an expression of very serious concern from the residents of Langley, British Columbia, Richmond, Vancouver, Surrey, Delta and New Westminster.

MR. SKELLY—APPOINTMENT OF WOMEN TO THE BENCH

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to introduce another petition. This is an expression of concern by many residents of Ontario. They have addressed their petition to the Honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that only 3.7 per cent of judicial appointments in the past year were awarded to women, that recent judicial decisions such as the Leatherdale and Brown point to a desperate need for a more balanced perpective on the bench. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to get cracking and to guarantee that all subsequent federal judicial appointments adhere strictly to the affirmative action program whereby as vacancies on the bench develop women and men will be appointed on an alternating basis. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. This is a very serious expression of concern that Parliament should address very quickly.

MR. SKELLY—CALL FOR ABOLITION OF SENATE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to introduce to the House the concerns of a number of residents of the Province of Ontario in the city of Ottawa. This petition is addressed to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the Senate has become a retirement haven for political appointees and that the salary paid to Senators is in all probability less than—I cannot make out this word here, but at a time when the old age pensions are limited to six and five, the petition does express some concern about the salary paid to Senators.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to abolish the Senate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This is the sincere expression of concern of many residents of the Province of Ontario, and undoubtedly in most Provinces of Canada, and I suspect it would be the majority.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): The Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) on a point of order.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago one of the Members raised the point of how you pronouce "sheweth". As an old, old schoolteacher, and after having verified by the Oxford Directionary I can say that the proper pronunciation is showeth.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): It is hardly a point of order, and the Hon. Member for Bow River is not as old as he pretends.

The Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. Cosgrove) on a point of order.

Mr. Cosgrove: Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I have the honour of serving as the joint chairman for the Joint Committee on Senate Reform, I would like to have the opportunity, with your concurrence, to receive a copy of the last petition introduced. This Committee has been seeking the opinion of the public, and we have sought opinions from coast to coast, on the subject of Senate reform. We would be very pleased to have a copy to consider the thrust of whatever body of opinion there is in support of the petition last filed with the Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River on a point of order.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite disappointing that the Committee would continue to seek opinion when probably the solution is self-evident and the institution should have been abolished years ago.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): The Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. Cosgrove) can, upon directing a request to the Table, obtain a copy of that particular petition.

Mr. Skelly: One further point of order, Mr. Speaker. It pertains to the previous comment by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). Certainly I concur with the Chair that the age is certainly overestimated and some of the ideas come out of the—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)): The Hon. Member is beginning to be facetious. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River had the floor.

The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme).

POINT OF ORDER

MR. PRUD'HOMME—SIGNATURES ON PETITIONS

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to direct my observation to one Member in particular. Out of curiosity and for my own enlightenment I have read some of the petitions being presented to the House. I intend to make a further study of most of these petitions over the weekend, but I would like to remind Hon. Members of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, at page 257, Citation 334 (1). I will read it because I think you will see exactly where I am leading. It reads:

A petition must have original signatures or marks, and not copies from the orignal—

I attract your attention to the following, Mr. Speaker.

—nor signatures of agents on behalf of others, except in case of incapacity by sickness;

Mr. Speaker, prima facie I am under the impression, having rapidly read a couple of them, that some of the petitions have been signed by the same people. I will double check that, but I would just like to remind Hon. Members that if such was the case it would be totally unacceptable to receive these petitions if they have been signed by one person with the same ink, with the same handwriting. This is against the rule, to say the least. I will say more on Monday, or next week, but I would like to remind Members of Citation 334 of Beauchesne, where it is absolutely clear that each signature must be made by each individual person.

● (1530)

Mr. Mayer: I rise on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. It seems to me what is going on here today is simply the presentation of petitions. Surely, after they are presented, Mr. Speaker, and sent to the Table, it is then up to the Table officers and the Speaker to rule whether they are in order to be received by the House. I believe the concern which the Hon. Member is raising is already looked after, in fact, after the petitions are presented.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. Each day the Chair announces to the House its ruling as to whether or not a petition is in proper form. It is up to the Chair and its advisers. It is not up to the Hon. Member to decide whether or not there is some kind of prima facie evidence of duplication or same signatures. Surely that is up to the Chair and the Chair's advisers and no one else.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, with all due deference to my good friend in the New Democratic Party, it is not my understanding of the rules. I would like a ruling from the Chair about that, if not today, then at some other time. The Table is only asked to receive petitions and see that they are in the right form. It is not the duty—unless I am convinced otherwise—of the Chair or of the officers at the Table to check if the names are factual or if the names do exist. That is not their duty. Unless, I repeat, I am convinced otherwise by Your Honour, it is not the duty of the officers at the Table to check if the name exists or if it is a duplicate. Their duty is to receive or not to receive petitions and to check them as to their proper form. That is their only duty. It is the duty of the Hon. Member, I contend Mr. Speaker, who presents the petition, to be very careful to make sure that it is acceptable and that there are not two signatures of the same person. That is my point of view and I invite the Chair's comments on the point I am making.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I simply want to speak to the point of order with respect to the comments made by the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer). He said that what we have here is a simple presentation of petitions. Nothing could be further from the truth. We have here a total hijacking of Parliament. The Canadian people should be aware that this has nothing to do with the presentation of petitions. It is simply a way of totally wasting the time of this House and the taxpayers' money. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we subject these petitions to the most rigorous test so that the Canadian people will know exactly how Hon. Members opposite are totally destroying this institution.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the point of order raised by the Hon. Member concerning the signing of petitions, very simply, what I said was that what we are going through as far as procedure today is concerned is the presentation of petitions. It is then up to the Chair, as I understand it, to decide whether in fact the petitions were presented in such a fashion as to be found to be in order. In fact, Madam Speaker did find that some of the petitions presented yesterday were out of order. We do not need any lessons or lectures from the Minister of Transport as to what is going on in Parliament when he has to bring in closure to ram through a Bill which affects the Minister's own part of the country. We do not need any lectures from that side on what this Government is doing or is continuing to do to Parliament, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Although a debate which is based on points of order made on the subject of the legislation which would be before the House on some other day may be more interesting than petitions, nevertheless I do not believe the Chair is in a position to allow the debate to take place, based on points of order.

Mr. Axworthy: At least it makes a change.

Mr. Taylor: Why did you sneak it in on Private Members' day? It was a dirty trick.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Some Hon. Members have indicated that at least it is a change. I agree. However, I do not think I should recognize other Hon. Members if what they want to do is to contribute to debate. The point of order is——a point of order—

[Translation]

[English]

—an appeal to the regulations of the House. I will recognize Hon. Members but I would ask them to stay within those limits.

Mr. Anguish: Mr. Speaker, I did not catch what you said at the end, but I would like to say, on the same point of order, that it is not a hijacking of Parliament, and it has been the New Democratic Party—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. What I was attempting to say to all Hon. Members is that a legitimate point of order has been raised as to how petitions are to be seen, how they are to be reviewed, what are the responsibilities of the officers at the Table and the people in the Chair. Those points of order which refer to issues on the Crow Bill or anything of that nature are not legitimate points of order. I would ask Hon. Members to stay within the limit of the matter of petitions and how they are dealt with.

Mr. Anguish: What I intend to address exactly, Mr. Speaker, is the point of order concerning petitions and the form and relevancy of them. First of all, I would like to point out that there is an urgency in presenting petitions because many of the petitions I have received deal with pieces of legislation which are possibly before Parliament. We all know that this session of Parliament is coming to an end very soon and that the Government wants to start a new session. Therefore, these petitions from my own constituents and from constituents all across Canada, which have been sent to us, need to be presented at this time because they will not be relevant after the new session of Parliament begins, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. There is no dispute as to the urgency, in the view of the Hon. Members of the House of Commons or anyone else. The only issue is the form. I might simply indicate that the responsibility of the Chair and of the Table is to establish that any given petition is acceptable in its form. I feel, perhaps, that the issue has been sufficiently ventilated. However, I understand that the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis wants to look further into it. I would reserve his right to do that and to pursue the matter further if he so wishes. No one is disputing whether or not these petitions are urgent.

Mr. Pinard: I rise on a point of order. I just want to confirm very clearly that the order of the day on Monday will be Bill C-155. I mention that now because I feel it is important that the Opposition Members do not find some other pretext on Monday to try to waste the time of the House, like it did yesterday and today, when the Government is attempting to create hundreds of thousands of jobs in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: It hurts, does it not?

An Hon. Member: Is that a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Partly.

Mr. Anguish: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker, if the Government is creating hundreds of thousands of jobs I would like to know what it is doing to create these hundreds of thousands of jobs. The way we see the present legislation—

Mr. Axworthy: Order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, you know I have been an Hon. Member of the House for 20 years. That is the reason my approach to this debate is more kind than partisan, in my view. I would just like to remind Hon. Members of the rules. After reading them a little more I am afraid that the rules are much more severe than I expected, even though I thought I knew them well. With all kindness to my colleagues who are at the moment presenting petitions—and I am not singling one out in particular at this time—I reserve my right to look at all petitions which were introduced this week. However, I already have one in my hand which, as I said, prima facie, appears to be signed by the same person for many names.

An Hon. Member: Shame.

Mr. Prud'homme: I do not want to say "shame" as my good friend and neighbour did. I would like to remind my colleagues that it is not the duty of the Table officers to check if the names are the same or are a reproduction. It is their duty to receive the petitions.

● (1540)

I will read, without comment at this time, from the Nineteenth Edition of Erskine May, at page 141. The heading is:

Presenting Forged, Falsified or Fabricated Documents to Either House or Committees of Either House.

Mr. Benjamin: You had better put your name on the line here.

Mr. Prud'homme: I am reminding Members—

Mr. Benjamin: Careful.

Mr. Prud'homme: I am more careful than you think.

Mr. Benjamin: Are you accusing anyone?

Mr. Prud'homme: I think you did not listen to me, sir, but if you force me to become partisan, I will.

Mr. Benjamin: You are such a neutral Liberal.

Mr. Prud'homme: I said I will, and if the attitude of the Hon. Member is such, I may become more partisan and do today what I may do on Monday.

Mr. Benjamin: Then you might show up in the House?

Mr. Prud'homme: It says:

> It is a breach of privilege to present or cause to be presented to either House or to committees of either House forged, falsified or fabricated documents with intent to deceive such House or committees or to subscribe the names of other persons or fictitious names to documents intended to be presented to either House or committees of either House, or to be privy to, or cognizant of, such forgery or fraud.
> Examples of this kind of contempt are:
> Forging signatures to petitions or subscribing fictitious signatures thereto (Pilkington's Case, C. J. (1825) 445;

There are many other cases cited. I just want to put that on the record. Members should follow what I have just said and be absolutely sure about some of the petitions presented. I did not make an accusation about any Member, I just read from Erskine May. If the Hon. Member wants to come with me, we will examine one petition and he will come to the same conclusion that, prima facie, I have doubt on at least one petition. That is all I want to say, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, it is incumbent upon the Member who just spoke, not any other Member, to present evidence, if he has it, of illegality or forgery or whatever. Until he does that, I invite him to finish reading the whole rule book, all of Beauchesne's and everything else, and he can take up the rest of the afternoon. We will be glad to listen to him.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, as a Member who had the privilege of presenting five petitions yesterday, I just want to make it very clear that I would be really concerned if I put forward a petition not in the proper form. I think a Member has his pride to contend with when he is presenting petitions. I suggest that is the issue, and the Table and Speaker's staff will find out whether the petition is in proper form. I think your own pride as a Member is at stake when you are using the petition process.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I sincerely think the point raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) is most serious. What he has said should be examined very carefully. I would like that some of those petitions tabled today be looked at in light of what the Hon. Member has said, because we would like the rules of the House to apply. What he was quoting was a clear indication of what can be and what cannot be done in this place. I have not examined the petitions but he has referred to some existing doctrines and I would like those who examine the petitions to take into serious consideration the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis before next Monday.

Point of Order—Mr. Prud'homme

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Chair has a difficulty. I have to respond to the point made by the Hon. Member or Saint-Denis by indicating I would be concerned as well if indeed petitions are presented in a manner not consistent with the spirit of parliamentary rules and the purpose of petitions. That could be a fairly serious problem.

I will recognize other Hon. Members on points of order in that regard, but I must say that the Chair can make no decision now because these petitions have not been examined as to whether or not they are in the proper form. That decision will be made probably by Monday.

Mr. McGrath: At the next sitting of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): At the next sitting of the House. But in the interim if there are serious problems with respect to form, perhaps Hon. Members might want to reconsider their presentation of petitions. I am in no position to give decisions one by one on these petitions. They will be done, as the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) has said, probably at the next sitting of the House on Monday, or not later than another day.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, this is a spurious point of order because clearly it is the responsibility of the Chair under our rules to examine petitions as to their proper form, as you just indicated. Quite frankly, I do not believe this is a point of order at all.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I would not want to comment because it is perhaps beyond our capacity at this point to do so, but I do not want the point of order to go by without raising an observation with respect to the procedure now being followed. Those who are watching us can draw no other conclusion than that motives have in fact been imputed, which may or may not have validity. To use the floor of the House of Commons to question another Member seems to me to be quite improper and somewhat outside of our practices, and I wish that practice to be stopped now.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I agree entirely with my deputy House Leader. I find it unfortunate that these kinds of allegations would be made. I know I have had an opportunity to present many petitions, and the practice and right is as ancient and as fundamental to parliamentary democracy as anything else. It is one thing to talk the procedure of presenting petitions, but another thing to talk about the collection process as far as signatures are concerned. I would feel very sad if in fact that is the kind of allegation made. I certainly speak for myself and everyone on our side when I say that in the many times I have had the chance to present petitions, that certainly has not been the case at all.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) has made some points. It is his suggestion that the Table officers take the weekend to consider them. I sought your attention to simply put on record one caution I would like to be exercised. The allegation is that one person has written a number of names. In the name collection process of petitions I have been involved in, such as the use of metric in auction markets, the petition was thumb-tacked to a bulletin board. I noted that with some frequency people would write Mr. and Mrs. and then the name, perhaps including children's names, all done in one pen and one hand. I think it is one thing to find a person is fabricating names, if that is the contention, but it should be noted that there is sometimes a duplication of names simply because of the close relationship of the people involved who are of the same opinion. They are separate, and I would not want them to be categorized in such a way as to say that one person cannot sign for his spouse or siblings.

Mr. Pinard: Each case would be looked at on its merits.

● (1550)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): At this point, I would ordinarily recognize the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) because of the number of occasions on which he has risen. However, I am not sure whether he is rising on a point of order or whether he is rising on petitions.

Mr. Skelly: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In that case, the Chair will now recognize that Hon. Member on that point of order.

There are a great many other Members who are rising on points of order. I leave it to each individual Hon. Member to decide whether the subject has been aired sufficiently or whether they wish to continue this particular point of order.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I think it is time to lay this question to rest. The petition sheet, on which this issue was called into question, contains some 30 additional pages of a petition that was circulated in the newspapers and mailed back. Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, these are tabled—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I do want to try to contain the debate on this point of order. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis did not raise an objection, and he specifically so indicated, against any one particular petition.

Mr. Skelly: Then, Mr. Speaker, he does not have a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In that case, I think it is out of order to refer to an argument on any one given petition.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, do we really have a point of order before us? The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) stood up in the House and gave notice of an admonition to the House, but he did not in fact in my opinion raise a valid point of order.

An Hon. Member: It was a broad brush smear.

Mr. Skelly: It was not a broad brush smear. He certainly expressed some concerns, but I am not certain that those concerns might exist other than his indicating that he had some evidence that he might wish to raise on Monday. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that we do have a point of order before us until the Hon. Member makes some kind of a specific accusation in the House. I think you should dispense with it, Mr. Speaker, and move on. I think that your original thoughts on this matter were probably the best for the direction of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I thank the Hon. Member for the compliment but I cannot refuse to see another Hon. Member on a point of order.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). I think it is appropriate to note that the vast majority of petitions are from people in western Canada. That is no accident because it flows out of what so many people in western Canada do say in response to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). It is when the House is sitting that the West is being oppressed and attacked, whether it is by the National Energy Program, the Crow—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member is entering into debate. A small voice in my ear indicated that I ought to correct myself about not being able to refuse to recognize Hon. Members on points of order. Of course it is possible that at some point the Chair may have to declare that there is an end to hearing points of order.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make two comments with respect to petitions. First, if anyone decided to write a petition and one person signed it on behalf of many others, that would be a complete fraud.

The second point I wish to make is that I see some petitions signed in front of me, but hundreds and thousands of them come through the mail. There is no way that I can swear an affidavit that any one particular person signed that petition. However, I have to give some credence to the credibility of the people of the country. They are not illiterate. They will not sign a petition unless they believe in what it calls for. It is an ancient right of the people to present a petition to their Parliament through their representatives. I do not think Hon. Members of the House should be questioning that right to sign a petition.

Thousands of these people have signed these petitions. They are very concerned. They are so concerned that they sign petitions and send them to their Members, many times even putting stamps on the letters. I think we should accept these petitions for what they are, and I wish the Government would realize that these petitions mean something. The Government should try to reflect the thinking of the people, as indicated by these petitions.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I think a very important point was raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), and although it did not deal with a petition that I had tabled, I did go with him to look at the prima facie evidence that he alluded to in his point of order.

I think it is important that Hon. Members of the House know just what it was the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis was talking about. It was a petition provided to the Members of the House by the Seafarers' International Union and it is clear on the surface, at least to the eyes of the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis and to my eyes as well, that the same hand put a number of signatures and addresses on the petition. However, I do not think it is for us as individual Members or for the Chair to decide. Perhaps it is for the Table officers to decide. It may well reflect upon what kind of meeting it was. Perhaps it was a meeting at which a great many handicapped people were present. Perhaps there was some reason why that was done.

I believe that the manner in which the point was raised has cast some doubt in the minds of those people who are watching this as to whether or not some kind of falsified petitions are being put forward. I think it should be clear to all Hon. Members and to the Chair that I went with the Hon. Member from the Government side and looked at the petition. That appears to be the case on that one petition and only for a limited number of names on a very extensive petition, which obviously contains a great many other bona fide signatures.

I do not think the people should feel that some kind of scam is going on whereby petitions are being tabled that have been put together fraudulently or by forgery. I agree with the prima facie point raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis but I do not think that the idea should be left in the House that there are some kind of fraudulent activities going on.

PETITIONS

MR. SKELLY—CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to have the honour to present 25 pages of petitions all dealing with the same subject sent by the Seafarers' International Union. I believe that these petitions match those for which there is presently concern. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because we lack a marine industrial strategy, that the federal Government has neglected to implement a coherent marine industrial policy although over two years ago it promised to develop such a policy, and that Canada's economic growth and wellbeing is in jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Therefore your petitioners humbly pray that the Government be encouraged to implement immediately a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

These signatures, Mr. Speaker, are those of people from virtually one end of the country to the other. The petition appears in both languages and is signed by numerous people and by thousands of different hands. I think this would probably reassure the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis that this is a bona fide petition and addresses a very sincere and serious concern of thousands and thousands of people in the country. If that will lay his mind to rest, I would offer him the weekend to examine this petition and examine the issue which gave rise to his point of order. I hope that it will help him.

MR. SKELLY—PROVISION OF INFORMATION FREE OF CHARGE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Moving right along, Mr. Speaker, I again have the honour of presenting another bona fide petition to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the intent of the Freedom of Information Act was to make Government information and files more accessible to the public and that plans to charge outrageous fees for information requests would undermine the spirit of the Act as well as make it inaccessible to less affluent persons.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to provide information under the Freedom of Information Act free of charge. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—SEXUAL DISCRIMINATION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present another petition that deals with a very vital and important question. The petition is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that all persons, regardless of sexual orientation, should have the right to employment, housing and social services.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to include sexual orientation in the Canada Human Rights Act and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms as a prohibited ground for discrimination. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—REJECTION OF BOUNDARY AT 49TH PARALLEL

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present another petition which is addressed to the Honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. It is signed by a number of residents of Ottawa in the Province of Ontario.

The petition of the undersigned residents, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that negotiations between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada in the 19th Century regarding the demarcation of the boundary between Canada and the United States were conducted under duress, and that the boundary fixed at the 49th parallel north of the equator has no force in law, and that the area bounded by the 42nd parallel north of the equator and the 49th parallel north of the equator and west of the continental divide does not legitimately belong to the United States although that country now defines this region as comprising the States of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to urge the Government of Canada to unilaterally reject the treaty that fixed the boundary between Canada and the United States at the 49th parallel north of the equator and undertake negotiations with the United States for the return of Oregon, Washington and Idaho according to the norms of international law that were so grievously violated in the nineteenth Century. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the present arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union is sheer madness, that Canada should not allow itself to be pressured into following American foreign policy.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to state outright now that Canada will not allow Cruise missile testing over its soil nor the manufacture of any components for the Cruise missile. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. I would like to recommend that petition to the House.

MR. SKELLY—DISCRIMINATION ON POLITICAL GROUNDS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to introduce a further petition to the House of Commons which all Parties, especially the Government, should consider. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that a person's political beliefs should not be used to justify barring a person from housing, employment or social services.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to include political beliefs in the Canadian Human Rights Act and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms as a prohibited ground for discrimination. As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—CALL FOR SALARY INCREASES FOR MP'S STAFFS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that, whereas the salary budget for staff of Members of Parliament is frozen until August 3, 1984, under the six and five program, and that MP's were not informed of the freeze until well into the first year of the program, and that as a result most MP's staffs will not receive any salary increases during 1983 and most of 1984, therefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to increase salaries of staffs of Members of Parliament so that these employees are able to meet the financial arrangements they entered into based on salary increases MP's and staff were led to expect. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. This is signed by a number of residents of the Province of Ontario.

MR. SKELLY—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-82 crop years. This grain, in turn, contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade. The undersigned believe that this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy and that western farmers will pay one times Crow, no charge.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory Crow grain freight rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This is signed by numerous individuals from across the Province of Saskatchewan, and in order to reassure the Hon. Member for St. Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), let me say that, to the best of my knowledge, the signatures are all different.

MR. SKELLY—OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS EXPLORATION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to present another petition on a matter of vital concern to residents on the West Coast of Canada. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that oil companies, particularly Chevron of Canada, are considering a resumption of offshore exploration of oil and gas on the West Coast. The Federal Government is considering lifting the moratorium on offshore oil exploration on the West Coast that has existed there for many, many years, and any future benefits to British Columbia are in serious question because of the federal Government's new energy legislation. There are obvious dangers to the environment which will affect the basis of the economy of the West Coast and the fishing industry.

• (1610)

Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament that there be full and complete public hearings into the supply and demand for energy and the socioeconomic and environmental aspects of offshore development before this moratorium is lifted, and in duty bound your petitioners ever pray.

This petition was also signed by numerous people with different hands from the communities of Half Moon Bay, Seashelt, British Columbia, Gibsons, North Vancouver and downtown Ladysmith.

MR. SKELLY—PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that inclusion of enjoyment of property in the Charter of Rights would have a serious implication for environmental rights, Indian land claims, workers' rights, etc.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to ensure full consideration of property rights, both in the House and in the Justice Committee, and to allow the public the broadest opportunity for input, and as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

That is a very sound recommendation, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SKELLY—CALL FOR INCREASE IN OLD AGE PENSION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which is addressed to the honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the application of the six and five program to old age pensions is obscene in that it hits out at our elderly citizens, many of whom can barely subsist on existing pensions.

Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to limit old age pensions to six and five, and instead to increase old age pensions to a minimum of 50 per cent of the average industrial wage. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—DECLARATION OF CANADA AS A NUCLEAR WEAPONS-FREE ZONE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present another petition to the House of Commons. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present their grievance, humbly sheweth that the present escalation of the military buildup by both the United States and the Soviet Union constitutes a no-win situation while draining public funds from social programs and job creation.

We, therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to declare Canada a nuclear weapons-free zone, and as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—CALL FOR INCREASE IN FAMILY ALLOWANCES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the Honour to present another petition. It is addressed to the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the application of the six and five program to the family allowance program undermines the principle of universality and hits hardest at those who can least afford it.

Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament not to limit the family allowance to six and five and instead to re-establish the original base for the program and to make retroactive compensation payments to Canadian families. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This petition is signed by a number of residents of the Province of Ontario.

MR. SKELLY—UNIONIZATION OF PARLIAMENT HILL EMPLOYEES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition addressed to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance, humbly sheweth that the existing denial of the right to unionize by all Parliament Hill employees contravenes the spirit and intent of the Canadian Charter of Rights and offends against our democratic sensibilities. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to extend to all Parliament Hill employees the right to organize and the right to collective bargaining. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

That petition is signed by a number of residents of Ontario.

MR. SKELLY—REVISION OF CONTEMPT OF COURT PROVISIONS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present their grievance, humbly sheweth that the existing contempt of court provisions are anachronistic, and that the greater role to be assumed by the judiciary under the Charter of Rights underlines the need for the public to have confidence in the judicial system.

Wherefore the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to revise contempt of court laws in the next Parliament, and in the process to allow the public to make representations on the matter. And as in duty bound your petitioners ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—ELECTORAL DISTRICT OF NORTH ISLAND-POWELL RIVER

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition of very serious concern to residents of Gibsons, British Columbia, Langdale, British Columbia—the sunshine coast. The petition is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the recommendations of the Electoral Boundaries Commission of British Columbia are that the area of the Sechelt Peninsula be placed in the electoral district of Capilano-Howe Sound; that the residents of the Sechelt Peninsula share a common interest with the residents of the proposed electoral district of North Island-Powell River by reasons of geographical boundaries and by communities of interest, including common transportation concerns and a common economic base; that the residents of the Sechelt Peninsula have very little community of interest with the residents of the electoral district of Capilano-Howe Sound, that electoral district being principally an urban one; and that the inclusion of the Sechelt Peninsula in the electoral district of North Island-Powell River will not create an imbalance of population.

● (1620)

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the House of Commons will recommend to the Electoral Boundaries Commission of British Columbia that the residents of the Sechelt Peninsula remain within the electoral district of North Island-Powell River. As I pointed out, this was signed by a number of people from the Sechelt Peninsula.

CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present a petition addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition is from a number of residents of North Surrey and Vancouver, British Columbia.

Mr. Friesen: Bob Wenman would not like that.

Mr. Skelly: Maybe they feel that another presentation is required. At any rate, the petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars of industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because they lack an industrial strategy, that the Government has neglected to implement a coherent industrial strategy although it promised many times in the past to do so, and that Canada's economic growth and wellbeing is being jeopardized by Government inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be encouraged to implement immediately a sensible and effective marine industrial policy which will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries.

Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present another petition signed by individuals from Oshawa, St. Catharines, Scarborough, Downsview, Bellechasse and Montreal. This petition deals with the topic of a sensible and effective marine industrial strategy for Canada. It is addressed to—

—to the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a common grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy.

Humbly sheweth that:

Canadians have been deprived of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial spin-offs because we have no industrial marine strategy and the federal Government has neglected to provide Canada with a consistent maritime policy, although more than two years ago it promised to announce such a policy, and that the Government's inaction is endangering Canada's economic growth.

Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be asked to adopt forthwith a consistent and effective maritime policy, resulting in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of the Canadian shipping industry and related sectors.

As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present a further petition, addressed to the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that because of the lack of a marine industrial strategy, Canadians are subject to substantial unemployment and tremendous loss of industrial spin-off benefits to Asian and European countries; that the federal Government over a number of years has failed to implement an effective Canadian marine industrial policy, although there was a solid commitment for years and years to do so; and that it is obvious Canadian economic growth and development has been severely harmed by Government inaction in this area.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government move quickly to implement the effective development of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure of being invited to present a petition which is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. It contains a substantial number of signatures of citizens of Lakeshore Road, Toronto and Mississauga, in the Province of Ontario, which appear to be in order. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are being lost each year to Canadians because the Government of Canada has failed to develop a Canadian marine industrial program, that the federal Government failed over many years to develop a coherent Canadian marine policy although it promised to do so, and that the Canadian economy has been harmed because of Government inaction.

Therefore your petitioners humbly pray that the Government be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding facilities and allied industries in Canada. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—ELECTORAL DISTRICT OF NORTH ISLAND-POWELL RIVER

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition addressed to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition is presented by a number of residents in the community of Grantham Landing, British Columbia. The petition basically recommends to the House of Commons that the Electoral Boundaries Commission of British Columbia take into consideration the fact that the Sechelt Peninsula has a large number of common interests with the proposed electoral area of North Island-Powell River. The petition requests that the Sechelt Peninsula be included in that electoral district rather than being moved into the electoral district of Capilano, which is the current proposal.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that the House of Commons will recommend to the Electoral Boundaries Commission of British Columbia that the residents of the Sechelt Peninsula remain within the electoral district of North Island-Powell River.

MR. SKELLY—PORNOGRAPHY—CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF BROADCASTING ACT

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of pleasure in presenting a petition that is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition is from the undersigned residents of Canada in the Province of Ontario, who now exercise their right to present a grievance. There is grave concern about the growing amount of pornographic material available in the community in many forms, especially the increase in violence depicted in pornography, degradation and sexual exploitation of children. There is increasing evidence of the direct harmful effects of pornography in sexual and other assaults and in child abuse. The Canadian obscenity laws are woefully out of date and inadequate for dealing with current problems.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to revise the obscenity laws to reflect community concerns about excessive violence and degradation of the human person, sexual exploitation of children and the portrayal of coercive sexual relations by imposing serious penalties for violations. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present another petition that is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. The petition is from the undersigned residents of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. This petition deals with the question of the marine industrial strategy of Canada. It indicates that there has been an enormous loss of income to Canadians, an enormous loss of unemployment and that this country has generally been harmed economically because of the lack of the Government's initiative in this area. The federal Government has neglected to pay attention to this area for decades. As a result, the Canadian economy has suffered and Canadian workers and businesses have been placed in severe jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be encouraged to move immediately to implement an effective policy of marine industrial development and the development of a Canadian merchant marine fleet and the expansion of shipbuilding and allied industries.

This is signed by people from the Province of British Columbia, White Rock, Port Langley, Surrey, Delta, Coquitlam, New Westminster, Haney, Port Moody, Aldergrove, Sardis. It essentially covers many areas of the Province of British Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, I have an excellent petition to present addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The signatures gathered in this petition will interest the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). They are those of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada on Homer Street in Vancouver, B.C. All the signatures appear to be in order. They are extremely concerned. They addressed the petition to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition is from the undersigned residents of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. They outline in very explicit detail that the Seafarers' of Canada have lost enormous employment opportunities. This country has suffered the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars in lost revenues because the Government of Canada has failed to develop a Canadian merchant fleet. The petitioners humbly pray that the Government immediately move forward to develop a Canadian merchant fleet, which would obviously result in the expansion of shipbuilding and allied trade in this country. It is my pleasure to present this petition on behalf of those individuals.

Mr. Speaker, this petition is brought forward and I have the honour to present it to this House. It is from St. Catharines and Windsor, Ontario, areas in which many individuals have suffered as a result of the failure to implement a marine strategy. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that there has been a tremendous loss of employment opportunities and an incredible amount of money in lost revenue for Canadians. That has taken place because the Government has failed to develop an industrial policy in this country, has neglected to implement such a policy for decades, and has placed in severe jeopardy many of those shipbuilding operations across Canada that are facing very bleak prospects because of Government action.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament that the Government be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries.

Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to present another petition from a number of residents of the Province of British Columbia who have expressed their concerns. This petition has been gathered by the CBRT and General Workers Union and they express their concern through the following text.

The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars of industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because we lack a marine industrial strategy and that the federal Government has neglected to implement a coherent marine policy, although it promised to do so over two years ago, and that Canada's economic growth and wellbeing is in jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray that the Government be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of shipbuilding and allied industries.

Mr. Speaker, I again have the pleasure to present a very important statement by way of a petition from residents of Lauzon, Quebec. They have addressed their petition to the House of Commons and have indicated the following.

[Translation]

To the honourable House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, the petition of the undersigned citizens of Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a common grievance, in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy.

Humbly sheweth that:

Canadians have been deprived of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial spin-offs because we have no industrial marine strategy and the federal Government has neglected to provide Canada with a consistent maritime policy, although more than two years ago it promised to announce such a policy, and that the Government's inaction is endangering Canada's economic growth.

Therefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government be asked to adopt forthwith a consistent and effective maritime policy, resulting in the creation of a Canadian merchant marine and the expansion of the Canadian shipping industry and related sectors.

As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

Mr. Speaker, I have examined this petition and have found it to be in pencil, which worries me somewhat. It may be that this will be called into contest, but I certainly think it is appropriate to give it consideration and the benefit of the doubt. It is signed by residents of Surrey, British Columbia, Maple Ridge and other places where the recession has hit very hard. It is addressed to the honourable the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled. The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners with the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits are not accruing to Canadians because we lack a marine industrial strategy and that the federal Government has neglected to implement a coherent Canadian marine policy, although it promised to do so more than two years ago, and Canadian economic growth and wellbeing are in jeopardy because of the Government's inaction.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray that the Government will be encouraged immediately to implement a sensible and effective marine policy that will result in the creation of a Canadian merchant fleet and the expansion of Canadian shipbuilding and allied industries. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

I wonder if we might get a ruling from the Table at some point on whether the pencil is okay.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I seek unanimous consent that we proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Skelly: You cannot even get it from your side.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I see why the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) did not rise on a point of order, but simply rose for recognition. It makes an interesting procedural point as to whether or not he acquired the floor without a point of order, and he did. Technically, in that sense, he is able to seek the unanimous consent to move to Orders of the Day. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is not agreed. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River in order that he may continue with his petitions. But first I recognize the President of the Privy Council on a point of order.

Point of Order—Mr. Pinard

[Translation]

POINT OF ORDER

REGISTRATION OF NAMES

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The President of the Privy Council on a point of order.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to take down the names of all Opposition Members who said no and who, consequently, do not want Parliament to operate normally and would rather prevent the Government from creating hundreds of thousands of jobs in this country and spending billions of dollars in Western Canada.

I think that for two days now the Progressive Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party have been quite irresponsible and that their objections ought to be recorded. They are the ones who do not want us to create hundreds of thousands of jobs throughout Canada; that should be made public and they ought to be officially censured by having that fact recorded in Hansard. Mr. Speaker, my request is simple: on a point of order, I ask that all Members who object to the Government creating hundreds of thousands of jobs through Bill C-155 give their name to the Clerk before we adjourn.

• (1650)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Perhaps the President of the Privy Council would refer the Chair to the particular Standing Order to which he refers.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, it is incumbent upon the Government to decide the Orders of the Day, as set forth in Standing Order 23(2). Now then, we have been trying for two days to debate Bill C-155 which will enable us to spend billions of dollars in Western Canada and create hundreds of thousands of jobs throughout the country, but owing to the dilatory tactics of the Opposition, we—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I believe the President of the Privy Council knows I must interrupt him in this regard. If he is referring to Standing Order 23(2), which entitles the Government to establish the Orders of the Day, that does not translate either into a right or an obligation on the part of the Chair to entertain a procedure which would cause all Hon. Members present in the House to register themselves in some fashion.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I would have appreciated being heard on that point. However, since you have disposed of it in a very able fashion, before hearing representations, I might suggest there is a way out of the dilemma which the President of the Privy Council suggests we are in. In order to establish the view, the national collective view, call an election.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pinard: We will certainly call an election. However, I do not know when. Certainly, we have always respected the Constitution of this country. We intend to keep on doing that. I do not want the Hon. Member for Yukon to turn this into—

Mr. Huntington: Hang onto your jobs while you can.

Mr. Pinard: —a joke. Our request is serious. There are over a million unemployed in this country who are watching the Tories and the NDP—

Mr. Nielsen: Who caused the unemployment?

Mr. Pinard: —wasting the time of the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) has the enormous advantage of being in my immediate vicinity so that I tend to recognize him very often. I would ask him, in return for his recognition, since he is rising on a point of order, that he apply himself to the Standing Orders.

Mr. Mayer: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With regard to the request of the Government House Leader that the number of Hon. Members who are in the House be recorded, I suggest there is a way out of that dilemma. If the Speaker would accept a motion of non-confidence we could vote on it and everyone would know who was in the House at this particular time.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kristiansen: Mr. Speaker, it is a point of order. I understand the difficulty which the Chair finds itself in with some Hon. Members being closer to the Chair than others. However, the President of the Privy Council rose to his feet, apparently not on a point of order, and was still recognized and allowed to set forth an option or a request for unanimous consent. At the time the President of the Privy Council rose, not on a point of order, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River, was still being recognized by the Chair, was still on his feet. He was still in the process of presenting petitions. If the President of the Privy Council did not rise on a point of order, how then, I must ask, did he ever gain the floor? If he did not gain the floor, then how could we have points of orders interjecting his participation in the proceedings of the House this afternoon? I am left in a quandary. I tried to raise this point at the earliest possible moment. I find it passing strange to realize how we got into the situation we are now in. If anyone, Mr. Speaker, is wasting the time of the House on matters which are certainly frivolous, not germane and totally out of order, it is the President of the Privy Council, and he ought to know better.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member makes a very serious point of order. He is wondering how I could be recognized while one of his colleagues had finished reading a petition and was signing it. It is very simple. Every Hon. Member has the right to rise in this House and present petitions. We have seen that for the last two days. When I rose and you recognized me, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River had finished presenting his petition and was in the process, perhaps of considering raising another one. Therefore, I believe I was very much in order. I would not like a precedent to be established that one could not rise, other than on a point of order, in between two petitions. I believe it is within the discretion of the Chair to recognize any Member in his place during the presentation of petitions or at any other time. I believe the Speaker recognized me in accordance with the Standing Orders.

That is, perhaps, a very serious answer to a very serious point of order. When my colleague says that he thinks I have been wasting the time of the House, I do not feel he can be serious. I can excuse him if perhaps he was using some kind of dry humour. Certainly, he will realize that for the last two days his Party and the Conservative Party have been preventing Parliament from working, and have been preventing Government from creating hundreds of thousands of jobs in the country.

Mr. Kristiansen: Since Madam Speaker earlier today—

Mr. Pinard: It is Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Kristiansen: —made a ruling. I am not sure if it was Mr. Speaker or Madam Speaker at that time.

An Hon. Member: Madam Speaker made the ruling.

Mr. Kristiansen: Madam Speaker made the ruling. As I thought, my recollection was correct. She made the ruling that Hon. Members presenting petitions would have to do so continuously and that if they gave up the floor they could no longer continue presenting what petitions they had, which are certainly considered to be rather urgent by those Canadians who have forwarded them to their Member of Parliament, or other Members of Parliament, for presentation. If the President of the Privy Council is suggesting that someone can intervene other than on a point of order while someone continues to have the floor and is presenting those petitions, in the only way Madam Speaker ruled today that they could, then the President of the Privy Council is obviously out on cloud nine and out to lunch, Mr. Speaker.

I suggest we go back to the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River. He still has the floor in my view and, quite frankly, because of that I do not know what I or any other Hon. Member is doing participating in debate on a point of order at this time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There are three minutes remaining to the House and it seems to me to be open to Hon. Members as to which way they wish to proceed. At the request of Hon. Members, the Chair will either, first, rule on the points of order; second, recognize the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River to continue with his petitions, as I gather he indicated he wishes to do; or, third, recognize any Hon. Member who rises on a point of order.

An Hon. Member: We want Skelly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): If an Hon. Member stands, I will recognize him.

Mr. Pinard: I would just like to draw to the attention of the House Standing Order 71(1) which is brief and reads:

A petition to the House may be presented by a Member at any time during a sitting of the House by filing the same with the Clerk of the House.

Therefore, the Hon. Members could have filed their petitions with the Clerk of the House during the last two days without wasting the time of the House. The Hon. Member's colleague does not have to be penalized because he is interrupted. He still has the right to file his petitions with the Clerk of the House. This procedure allows Hon. Members of the Opposition and Hon. Members on this side as well to do that. That is my point. It is very clear that Standing Order 71(1) applies. Hon. Members opposite cannot complain that they lose their rights if they are interrupted. They have always the right to file their petitions with the Clerk of the House. If they had done that, we would have saved two days. Parliament would have worked. Canadians would have been proud of their Members and we would have succeeded in creating hundreds of thousands of jobs in Canada, which the Opposition is now preventing.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Government House Leader quoted Standing Order 71(1). I draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to Standing Order 71(2) which says:

Any Member desiring to present a petition in his or her place in the House must do so during Routine Proceedings and before Introduction of Bills.

All that our Party has been doing is what Standing Order 71(2) says we should do.

An Hon. Member: According to the rules.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would ask that the Chair and the Table consider over the weekend the Citation 682(2) at page 211 of Beauchesne. And I ask that a ruling be made on the nature of the petitions which are being put before the House. Citations 682(2) says:

(2) A petition should seek the redress of grievances and should refrain from expressing an opinion with regard to the House, the Government or the positions taken by Members of the House. Expressions which would be in order from a Member of the House may not be in order when presented as a petition.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me, after listening to petitions for the last two days, many of the petitions put forward, especially the ones put forward by the Official Opposition yesterday regarding the calling of an election and the crisis in Government, are definitely, in my opinion, and I would ask a ruling of the Chair and the Table officers, expressions of opinion. If they are, then they should be ruled out of order by the Chair.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is five o'clock. I indicated earlier to the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) that there may be cause to examine the petitions. I think that he or any other Hon. Member has the right to do so. That will be looked at over the weekend. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary makes a similar request as to the nature and the matter of arguing the content of a petition. I hope the Hon. Member will give us a little more time than just over the weekend. If he would do that, perhaps I might wish all Members a good evening and a good weekend.

At 5.01 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Orders.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Monday, October 24, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 47 and 49 (Mr. Benjamin), and Motion No. 48 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, when debate finished on Monday a week ago at one o'clock, I was making the point that Motions Nos. 48 and 49 were important because they allow for considerably more time for debate on regulations which the Administrator would recommend than do the Government's proposals. The Government has suggested that one hour is sufficient time for Parliament to take a good look at those regulations.

Officials of the Ministry of Transport admitted that the ability of the Administrator to make regulations which could be brought before the House and passed was very important. In fact, it was admitted that it was so important that they thought it could not be done entirely by Cabinet but that it should have some relationship to Parliament. Because it was so important for this to be referred to Parliament, they implied that it would be wrong to apply awards and sanctions by way of Order in Council and that it therefore should be brought to Parliament. I do not have his exact words before me, Mr. Speaker, but an official of the department indicated that the applications of awards and sanctions were so important that they should not be left to Cabinet but that Parliament should be allowed plenty of time to look into the matter.

To Members on the Government side, "plenty of time" appears to be one hour because that is what was put into the Bill. The Government has allowed a one-hour debate on the matter. Conservative Members went one step further. Through Motion No. 48, they suggested that the opportunity for debate should be extended to three sitting days. We can accept that and would support that, Mr. Speaker. However, Members of the New Democratic Party have gone even further through Motion No. 49 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). That motion would extend the debate on that issue to an unlimited time until the House had decided that the debate was adequate.

Perhaps this is a pretty good indication of the value the three Parties put on the parliamentary process. Liberal Members would allow for one hour, Conservative Members would allow for three days and New Democratic Party Members would allow for full, responsible Government as indicated by unlimited debate.

The esteem Liberal Members have for Parliament is pretty well indicated by that particular clause in this Bill. Their arrogance and disdain for Parliament has been further strengthened by the very fact that they have now taken this Bill out of public debate by closure and will give Parliament two more days in which to find out what the country wants. It is not that they do not know how the majority of people in the country feel about this Bill. It had ample opportunity to find out and discovered that it did not have a consensus in the West which it promised it would get before it moved on this particular Bill. This has always been a bureaucrat's Bill and now that closure has been imposed we see that all the hearings and the shows the Government has put on in the West have had no real impact on the content of the Bill.

The essence of good government is consent. There has been no consensus with this Bill and there clearly has been no consent on the part of the Government because the people who are most affected by it do not want this Bill to be passed. Therefore the implication of that is that there is no way this Bill can reflect good government.

One only needs to ask the former Minister to see the indication of just exactly what western Canadian farmers feel about this Bill. For every letter he received in support of the Bill he received 561 letters opposing it. In fact, he received 38,713 letters opposing the passage of this Bill and only 69 letters in support of its passage.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair hesitates to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to make some comments with respect to the amendments that are before us today. Before doing so, I would like to express my concern about the fact that the Government has seen fit to invoke closure on a Bill which is of so much vital concern to the grain producers in western Canada. I think it is safe to say that the vast majority, if not all, of the grain producers in western Canada are concerned about the impact of this Bill and even more concerned that closure has been brought in to prevent a proper and intelligent discussion of the various amendments that were put on the Order Paper.

Having said that, I would like to make some comments regarding the three motions before us and Motion No. 48 in particular. This motion was proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and it seeks to extend the debate from one hour, as limited in the Bill, to three days. The debate that is referred to concerns the regulations made under Clause 21(a). These are very important regulations because they set forth the performance objectives and pertain to awards and sanctions by the various system participants in the grain handling and transportation system. These three types of regulations are of utmost importance.

What happens under the Bill as presently constituted is that the regulations are prepared, they are laid before the House in accordance with Clause 22 and within 20 sitting days 15 Senators or 30 Members may request the referral of these regulations to a committee. I have no argument with the 15 Senators or 30 Members as the NDP has. I think 15 Senators or 30 Members is a fair representation. The matter goes to the committee for a period of 30 days and the committee reports back to Parliament. At that point in time Parliament does not have the power to take any action. For example, if the committee said "We do not agree with these regulations, they are wrong," there is no provision whereby Parliament can deal with them at that time. The Minister, despite the committee's report on the regulations, can go ahead and prepare the regulations and put them into force. Having been put into force, they are laid before Parliament within 15 days. This Bill provides for a one-hour debate only on the regulations that have been promulgated by the Minister by Order in Council.

As I said at the outset, these regulations are very important. It seems to me that a one-hour debate with a ten-minute speech limit is very inadequate. What can this House do in one hour with a series of ten-minute speeches, which means six speeches? This is why the Hon. Member for Vegreville put forth amendment No. 48 which provides for a three-day debate with no ten-minute limit. In that three days it seems to me many Members will have the opportunity to express their views on these regulations.

Members of the New Democratic Party have said there should be no time limitation but we are dealing with regulations, not with a Bill. In my opinion and in the opinion of the Members of our Party we feel that three days is adequate. With this in mind, I would recommend to Members of this House that when this motion comes to be considered and voted upon, Members of all Parties give it their support.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Mr. Speaker, I want simply to follow up on the comments made by my distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), concerning the amendment put forward to Clause 24 of the Bill. What we have in terms of Clause 24 in this Bill is what I refer to as a rubber-stamp review of regulations on a very important element of the legislation. It gives you some sort of idea as to what this Government's attitude is with respect to western Canada, and what sincerity the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in the last Speech from the Throne had when he made reference to the fact that, although there are no Members in the Liberal Party elected in western Canada of any consequence, he would want to listen to representations made by Members on this side of the House from western Canada on the legitimate concerns of people in that area. It is a demonstration of the Government's view of western Canada. It is that western Canada is worth one hour of debate on this piece of legislation respecting the performance of the railways; that is all, one hour. That is all the Prime Minister and the Liberal Party think is appropriate in terms of an important piece of legislation which affects what has been termed the Magna Carta of western Canada.

We have quite a different view of the matter. We think there should be some reasonable opportunity for debate in the House of Commons on legislation which affects the very substance and essence of a particular region of Canada. I feel rather strongly about the proposition of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) with respect to extending debate for at least three days. We have to understand that the motion is now being considered in the context of closure being imposed by the Government on the legislation. This gives us three days to consider every element of the remaining legislation, although we have not been able to discuss the most important parts of it. By virtue of the Government majority, we are being given only three days to discuss the remainder of the legislation on the floor of the House of Commons. For the Government to come forward now and suggest that one hour of debate in the House of Commons concerning the provisions of the Bill relating to the performance of those elements involved in the grain delivery system, the system participants, is simply outrageous and offensive to any thinking person, particularly those persons involved in the production of grain in western Canada.

I rise to debate this particular provision with a sense of anger and disbelief that the Government has taken such a draconian step as invoking closure to bring the debate to a close. I know the feeling in my part of the country about the activities of the Government. I know what are the provisions of this legislation with respect to the operation of the system proposed by the Government. Complex to a degree, unequalled by any other legislation, the Bill is indecipherable to people, even those involved in the industry and legal scholars. I venture to say that it will cause us nothing but grief and difficulty, not only in western Canada but across the country, simply to determine what the Bill means. When we come to the provision for a review of the regulations being promulgated under a piece of legislation which in my estimation is impossible to understand, we have a double whammy. We have limited opportunity to consider the matter. All we have is a motion which will be placed before a committee and subsequently before the House of Commons. The motion is simply that we either accept or reject the regulations. It is an either/or, black or white proposition. There is no opportunity for us to work in a constructive manner to improve those regulations which may require improvement or delete provisions we think are harmful or difficult. We either accept or reject the whole package. That is what is indicated in the provisions of the Bill; that is what we are being asked to consider in one hour on the floor of the House of Commons.

I do not think people fully understand about what we are talking. We are talking about the livelihood of people in all parts of this country; the grain producer, the cattle producer, the transportation workers, those involved in the manufacture of farm equipment and rails for our railways, those involved in manufacturing in both central and eastern Canada. We are talking about the capacity of our ports on the West Coast and at the Lakehead. All these people are concerned with respect to the operation of this legislation, yet the Government says it is going to make regulations as to how the system is going to operate, that these unknown regulations will be promulgated and Members will be given an opportunity to look at them in the committee structure.

• (1125)

When it comes to debate and discussion on the floor of the House of Commons, there are serious constraints on what can happen. First and foremost is that there will be only one hour to discuss it. How can we carry out the responsibility placed on our shoulders by the Prime Minister in the first and only Speech from the Throne that we have had in this Parliament? How can we properly articulate the concerns of our people when Members will be vying for that sacred ten-minute slot in the one hour? How many Members of Parliament will be able to tell the Prime Minister what they think about this policy?

I am somewhat more sanguine than one would think about this provision. I can stand here and rest assured, as the people of Canada will rest assured, that there is a good prospect for an upcoming election and this crowd which has foisted this undesirable, badly thought out, wrong-headed legislation upon us after that election will no longer be seated on the government side. The few remnants of them will be over on this side wondering why they did not have the courage to stand up and fight the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and the Prime Minister when they brought forward this legislation. This kind of arrogance and disregard for important parts of the country will be the downfall and demise of the Liberal Party of Canada.

In the past, the Liberal Party had fine traditions and a fine sense of national purpose. At one time it had representation in western Canada. This outfit has frittered away its mandate. It has dissipated the fortunes of that Party in almost every part of Canada, particularly western Canada. I believe if the Liberal leaders of yore could see what is happening to the Liberal Party and the way it is conducting the affairs of this country, MacKenzie King, Laurier, and other Liberal leaders would be whirling in their graves wondering what has happened to the once great Liberal Party.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, we live in a country without a government. We live in a country where government is not here by mandate. It does not reflect representation of the peoples of the broad expanse of this country. Instead of a government running Canada, we have a club, a group of people.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. With respect to the Hon. Member, the debate at this point should be relevant to the amendments before us. I invite the Hon. Member to bear in mind that we are discussing Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, no one is more thoroughly aware that we are debating Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49 than I am. I am talking about Motion No. 48 which tells us that we do not have a government in this country. What we have is a club. That is what I started to say and that is what I will continue to say because it relates to Motion No. 48.

I come to this Parliament from a Province that sends 21 Members of Parliament here to face a government with only that many Members of Parliament from eight Provinces and two Territories. The rest of their Members come from two Provinces, Quebec and Ontario.

• (1130)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, this is a general observation and the Chair has difficulty relating it to Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, if you do not know we are on closure, I know we are on closure. I am talking about Motion No. 48. What we are talking about here today is a Government that does not have licence. Motion 48 of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) would give us three days to debate the regulations. I am telling you, Sir, that the Government would prefer that we have one hour on a question that affects us because the Government does not have regional relevance. It is a Government that has no representation west of Winnipeg, a Government that threw away its representation.

This Government in 1968 had 48 Members in western Canada; today it has two. Motion 48 is a most justifiable motion which states that we have three days for debate on an issue that deals with transportation objectives and all sectors relating to transportation. That requires more than an hour of debate.

Those who think this club which has been formed of a few people from central Canada can take a decision on a question which is not just transportation policy are wrong. This is not just a question of who drives the train and how much the driver gets, but even more a question of economic development for the entire West. It has been narrowly prescribed as simply a western issue. It is not just a western issue. This is an issue that affects central Canada. It deals with the automotive industry, the farm machinery industry, the fertilizer industry and manufacturing. Crow rate and manufacturing should be synonymous. If you steal money from the farmers of western Canada and from the treasuries of the western Provinces, central Canada feels the pinch and the pain. A regulatory measure that relates to transportation objectives requires more than one hour of debate, because it has a tremendous economic impact on all of Canada. Yet this club thinks it deserves only an hour, knowing full well in that hour that it is simply yeas or nays to a majority, where there is no chance for public opinion to reach for their telephone. Three days does not give enough time to reach for a pen and write, with a postal system like we have today. Motion No. 48 makes a reasonable request of the Government in asking for the opportunity to allow a reasonable amount of time for debate.

The NDP's response to the motion is that it be without limit. It may be argued that it ought to be a little longer than three days, but obviously within the framework of Parliament it could never be without limit.

Again, I submit to you that our motion is a reasonable one in light of the fact that we are facing one of the most major economic development pieces of legislation ever to face the Parliament of Canada. It is big in scope and its impact. It is also complicated. The fact that it is complicated requires that there be more than a one hour debate.

As one who comes to this place from the regions of Canada, I face a Government whose members are all collected around industrial Canada and which believes that the western people can be shunted aside and run over. This is because the Government is not regionally relevant; it does not represent the regions. Yet the economic impact on the regions of this legislation is such that if they misstep in putting the Crow in place, whether it be changed or otherwise, the impact falls back economically and heavily upon the industrial manufacturing base of central Canada.

One of the facts that I have observed is that any time a farmer in western Canada has extra money in his bank account he does what every other Canadian would do; he spends it. If he buys a new Canadian-made refrigerator it is made in central Canada. If he buys a new Canadian-made car it is made in central Canada. If he buys a new Canadian-made tractor it is made in central Canada. The clause that we are talking about now which deals with the performance objectives of transportation, which is what brings money to western Canada, is a clause that says we are dealing not just with transportation but with a whole economic development program for all of Canada. The magnitude of that program requires more than an hour of debate.

The Government's intent to limit debate to one hour is not just an insult to the West; it is an insult to—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for London-Middlesex (Mr. Bloomfield) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Bloomfield: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would not want to mislead the House. I think it is well known that one of the tractors that is built in Canada is built in Winnipeg, that being the Versatile.

Mr. Malone: I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, what point the Hon. Member wants to make. If he is trying to say that because there is one tractor company located in western Canada, somehow the development of our regions does not have an impact on the whole country, what an insult that that Member represents for his people here.

The fact of the matter is that we should not be talking in this House about western Canada, eastern Canada, central Canada, English Canada and French Canada. We should be Canadian. If the Government opposite realized that it could be more than just a little club in the middle, if it could reach to its two oceans as the Latin words on our Dominion emblem say, "From sea to sea", then we would not have to face a Government which thinks it can point out because there is a tractor company in Winnipeg, therefore the Crow rate is not relevant to them. We are all interdependent on one another. That is what makes this country.

Some of the Hon. Members opposite would like to form us into some kind of economic community with eastern Canada, central Canada, Prairie Canada and British Columbia as members. The truth of the matter is that because we are a country we should have an economic concept of total development. That is why Motion No. 48 is important. It is important because it asks for an appropriate amount of time on an issue that is big enough to demand that amount of time and for the reason that it would impact on all of us. We need not be insulted by a Government that has run this country like a club, a little group of people at the middle who think somehow they can govern without representation. They never once mentioned the Crow rate in the last election. It was three and a half years ago, in April, 1980, that we had the last Speech from the Throne. This country is bigger than that. This issue is bigger than that. It needs more than an hour of debate. It needs a minimum of three days so that we can have a proper airing of the issues.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, before the House today we have three motions. I know the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) was speaking basically about one of them. The first motion is in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). It is a motion which would amend Clause 22 of the Bill and I want to say a few words about that.

Clause 22 of the Bill talks about what will happen when regulations are made under Section 21(1). This subsection gives the Minister through the Governor in Council the power to establish regulations. You have been here roughly as long as

I have, Mr. Speaker, and I am sure you realize that when we give this kind of blanket power to a Cabinet Minister, we give him a lot of discretionary power to decide what the regulations may be. One of my frustrations with this place and I know one of the frustrations of the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid) is that this institution is often not very democratic. We tend to give a blank cheque to a Minister.

• (1140)

Sometimes the blank cheque is a good one because we have a Minister who is responsible and sensitive and who does a good job; but sometimes we have a flop as a Minister and someone who does not do a good job. Sometimes, even, the Minister does too good a job. I see the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) in the House and I remember the excellent job he did with the Indian people of the country, but because of that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) threw him out of the Cabinet. That is a shame.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With due respect to the Hon. Member, he appears to be straying from the motions before the House.

Mr. Nystrom: I would never challenge you, Mr. Speaker, as you have a lot of experience here, but I want to show what can happen when the House gives so much power to the Prime Minister's office or so much power to a Minister's office, as would be the case with Clause 21(1). As it stands it would give them the power to establish any regulation they want under this Bill. Clause 22 of the legislation provides that within 20 days of proposed legislation being laid before either the Senate or the House of Commons, 30 Members of Parliament may sign a request that there be a debate in the Commons Transport Committee, or 15 Senators can sign a request which would be referred to the relevant committee of the Senate. That is not good enough, Mr. Speaker.

I want to oppose that section of the Crow Bill very strongly, Mr. Speaker. I want to urge all Members of the House—and I am sure the Conservatives will agree—to vote for Motion No. 47 which would improve things marginally. It would change the number of Members of Parliament required to request a special debate in the Commons Transport Committee from 30 to 15. Why should only 15 Senators be required to request a debate? They are not elected and are not responsible, in any direct sense, to the people of Canada. They are not responsible in any way whatsoever. Why should 15 Senators be able to file notice for a special debate yet it would take 30 MPs to file for a special debate?

Mr. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): It is a smaller House.

Mr. Nystrom: I do not care what the size of the House is, it is an undemocratic House. It is a disgrace in the 1980s to have a legislative body that is not elected, that is not responsible. It is a house of patronage for the Prime Minister of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must call to the attention of the Hon. Member that he seems to be straying from the subject matter of the motions before us.

Mr. Malone: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I know you brought me to attention when I was speaking a few moments ago, but I must say that under closure surely Members should have more leniency on an issue as important as this. I believe, since it is a Member from another Party who is speaking—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is raising a point of order. What is before us is a debate on Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49, at report stage of the Bill. The fact that time allocation has been adopted is not the issue before the House; that was debated under a separate motion and was adopted.

The Chair is in the hands of the House. The rules of the House say that we are at report stage and we are debating Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49. I did call the Hon. Member to attention and he very politely conformed to the request of the Chair and found that he was able to make some very good points with regard to the motions. I am sure the Hon. Member who has the floor will be able to follow his good example.

Mr. Malone: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the Hon. Member making the same point of order? It is irregular to raise the same point of order.

Mr. Malone: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the Hon. Member is making a new point of order the Chair will listen, but the Chair asks the Hon. Member not to simply repeat his point.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, the point I want to make is that there are important amendments but they do not necessarily all follow, seriatim, as being the most important at the first.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has ruled on the Hon. Member's point. The Chair has no alternative but to call to the attention of the House the motions currently under debate, Nos. 47, 48 and 49, and to request Hon. Members to confine their remarks accordingly. The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, Clause 22 of the Bill deals with the House of Commons and the Senate and provides that it will need the signatures of 15 Senators to request a special debate but that it will need the signatures of 30 MPs for a special debate. We have moved an amendment to reduce the number of MPs to 15. Perhaps one of our reasons for doing that is that we are concerned about the future of the Liberal Party. The way the polls are going, there may not be 30 Liberal Members here after the next election. I am sure they will want to have the ability to file for a special debate on some of the regulations made under the Crow legislation. I know that matter is of great concern to the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River, Mr. Speaker, as he has already come over here to join me. Perhaps that indicates how he will vote in a few days time.

We have had an articulate speech on Motion No. 48 from "Red Ray", the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr.

Hnatyshyn). Motion No. 48 would amend Clause 25 which in subclause (1) provides:

A motion filed under section 24 shall be taken up and considered by the Senate or House of Commons, as the case may be, within five sitting days—

Then it goes on to provide that in the generosity of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) we will be allowed a one-hour debate. Imagine, a one-hour debate on something that might be vitally important to western Canada! That is disgraceful. A one-hour debate with ten-minute speeches means that six Members can speak and that is it. The regulations may be vitally important to western Canada. For reasons that are obvious, therefore, I want to support Motion No. 48 moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) who proposes a three-day debate.

That is my second choice. My first choice is Motion No. 49 in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) which would not limit the debate at all. As mature Parliamentarians we would be trusted to decide whether there should be a one-day, a three-day, or a ten-day debate. It would be open-ended. I think we have the sensitivity and responsibility to know when enough is enough. I think Parliamentarians must be trusted. This institution should be supreme and we should make the decision.

If Motion No. 49 is not accepted, then obviously as my second choice I prefer Motion No. 48 which would allow at least a three-day debate. I say that because of the importance of the Crow issue and of the transportation of grain in western Canada.

I find it absolutely despicable that we would only be allowed a one-hour debate on regulations that could be so vital to rail lines all across the country and to the movement of grain across the country in what is really the most important industry in Canada. If we do not have a healthy grain farming economy, that will affect jobs in Ottawa West, Montreal, in Toronto and all across the country. We should have a bit more democracy in this place and a bit more leniency so that we can speak on behalf of our constituents.

I want to make the argument for my urban friends across the way once again, Mr. Speaker. It is not right, nor is it fair, that we have this severe limitation on debate where it would take 30 Members of Parliament to petition that a certain regulation be referred to a committee of the House or 15 Senators to petition that a certain regulation be sent to a special Senate committee. That is not fair because of the discretionary power given to the Minister of Transport.

Even if the present Minister of Transport were to be fully trusted, if he were fully sensitive to the needs of western Canada—the Minister is not but even if he were—who will be the next Minister of Transport?

Mr. Blenkarn: Certainly not that one.

Mr. Nystrom: It could be the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), for example, though God help us. It might be someone who would do things totally against the interests of western Canada. He could be from any Party, Mr. Speaker. In almost any Government there could be someone who blows the job, who is a dud. And what recourse do we have? We have a one-hour debate.

● (1150)

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, as the fairminded arbitrator you are in this House, that if you were not in the Chair you would be standing on the other side of the House screaming about the unfairness, unjustice and lack of democracy which we have in Clauses Nos. 22 and 25 of the legislation which is before this House. I know that many Liberal Party Members, if they were not afraid of the immense power of the Office of the Prime Minister, would be standing as well and expressing their grave concern about this severe limitation which we have had imposed—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak this morning to Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49. You will be very pleased to know that I intend to keep strictly germane to the topic and not wander about. By speaking to this group of motions, Mr. Speaker, I would also like once again to register my opposition to Bill C-155, the Government's plan to kill the Crow rate. The amendments before us this morning, like all of the other amendments before this House, are very important. As I see it, the intention behind each of these amendments—two of them moved by this Party and one by the Conservative Party—is to protect the authority of Parliament in the face of a growing trend to govern by Order in Council.

It is a laudable provision contained within this Bill to give Members of Parliament, and even Senators, the ability to examine the regulations put forward by the Grain Transportation Administrator and to revoke those regulations if they are not appropriate. Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49 only serve to make those provisions much more workable and, I believe, much more fair than what is now proposed.

Motion No. 47 seeks to limit to only 15 the number of Members of Parliament who must give written notice for a regulation to be referred to committee. The same number is required for Senators. As it now stands, 15 Senators or 30 Members of Parliament can give written notice to have a regulation initiated by the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee examined by a committee. Why is that? I can understand why we should not try to double the number of Senators required to give notice to 30, the number now required for Hon. Members of this House. If it were not a Wednesday when the pay cheques are handed out, it might be very difficult to find even 15 Senators, let alone 30, who know anything about grain transportation, or who even care. However, setting that logistical problem aside for the moment, I must say that I cannot understand why this Bill would give to a Chamber filled, as my friend, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), pointed out, with political appointees, what amounts to twice the opportunity to have regulations examined as Hon. Members of this House who are elected and responsible to their constituents would enjoy.

Motion No. 47 does not remove altogether the ability of Senators to have regulations examined in committee. That kind of slight towards the Senate would, of course, be too much to bear for the Government or my friends in the Tory caucus. The Senate, after all, is the place to which they retire both Tory and Liberal hacks. No, this motion does not slight the Senate in that way. What it does do, though, is recognize the plain and simple fact that Hon. Members and Senators must have at least an equal opportunity to examine, and in some cases reject, regulations proposed for grain transportation. It seems only fitting to me, Mr. Speaker, that elected Members of Parliament should not have more restrictions placed on them in this regard than appointed Senators.

Motions Nos. 48 and 49 deal with the length of time allocated for this House to debate a motion that the proposed regulation be confirmed and brought into effect. As it now stands, a regulation dealing with performance guarantees or awards and sanctions for those involved in the grain transportation system must be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 days. Then a motion must be put that the regulation be confirmed and signed by a Minister of the Crown. That motion is then dealt with by the Senate or the House of Commons, as the case may be.

That is fine as far as it goes. However, what the Government intends with this Bill is to impose a prearranged closure on the debate. The Government has proposed to limit debate to only one hour. If that is all the time the Government feels should be allowed for Members of this House to deal with the motions confirming these regulations, then I must ask, why bother at all? Allowing one hour is the worst kind of tokenism, Mr. Speaker. How much of that hour will Opposition Members receive in order to debate the regulation? Forty minutes? Half an hour? Even a full hour, for that matter, is not very much time for this Government, which has only one Cabinet Member from the West, to allow Opposition Members to deal with regulations which may have long-lasting effects on western grain farmers. It is not very much House time which this Government, which hails largely from central Canada, is allowing western Opposition Members to tell it what is wrong with its proposed regulations for grain transportation.

The motion presented by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) would extend that limit to three days. That makes much more sense, as my friend, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), suggested. That is our second choice. However, I do not think that is enough. As Hon. Members now know, some of these regulations can be very complicated. And as we are seeing in this debate, it takes more than three days to enlighten the Government on the faults of complicated proposals.

Of course, some of the regulations proposed by the Administrator will be very straightforward and there should be no reason to keep them from being dealt with very quickly. However, I am uncomfortable limiting the debate on these regulations to three days for the simple reason that it may take more time than that to make all the points which need to be made. If a regulation is bad and is complicated at the same time, it could easily take Hon. Members of this House more than three days to convince the Government that the best route is simply to revoke the motion of confirmation in the regulation.

I am surprised also, Mr. Speaker, that the Tories would want to write in the limit of three days in this particular motion. Over the last few days we have heard that Party, and rightly so, complaining about the three-day closure which we are now suffering. I can only think that perhaps what the Hon. Member had in mind when he drafted this amendment was that since one day his Party may well be in power, he wanted to make sure that some form of closure or time allocation was in place for that eventuality.

For my money, Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 49 makes much more sense. It permits debate on the motions confirming regulations to continue until it is finished. Under this proposal, if it takes four days or even five days to deal with one particular regulation, then Hon. Members know they will have those four or five days to deal with it. They will not be faced with automatic time allocation and prevented from making the points which must be made.

I am glad, Mr. Speaker, that with these motions we are recognizing that some checks must be in place on the Government's ability to govern by Order in Council. I am happy that the Government seems to recognize that Hon. Members of this House must have the ability to examine, and if need be reject, proposed regulations which will come from the Grain Transportation Administrator. I believe, however, when we are recognizing that need, that we must ensure we are not limiting the ability of Hon. Members of this House in that regard more than we are limiting the ability of Senators. As this Bill now reads, that is exactly what we would be doing. We must ensure that once regulations have been examined in committee, Hon. Members have adequate time, if they need it, to debate those regulations in the House. One hour allowed for each motion confirming a regulation is not enough time. For that matter, neither may three days be enough time. Members should be allowed as much time as they need to debate contentious regulations.

● (1200)

As I have said before, in many cases no written notice will be given to have the regulations examined in committee and no debate will occur on motions to confirm regulations; but there will be times when the regulations must be examined and debated. There will even be times when the motions to confirm the regulations must be—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I value this opportunity to contribute to the debate on the motions which are before the House at this time. As a Member, I have often noticed that when debates take place and there is enough time allowed for Hon. Members to express their views, the Ministers responsible for the piece of legislation or regulations that are to be put into place will be present taking notes. Because of that, we do find some changes taking place.

The present Government wants to allow only one hour to debate regulations that could have a profound effect on an industry that is vital to all of Canada but particularly to western Canada. I am talking about the farming industry. Government Members who introduce regulations by Order in Council that could and would have a very profound effect upon western Canada often do not understand how the regulations proposed will affect the western agricultural industry. This is to be understood when we have a Government with no representatives from west of Winnipeg and when we have a Government that depends upon political hacks in western Canada to tell the Government what it should be doing or how a regulation will affect western Canada. I am referring to some of these aged members of the other place who are running around representing British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan. These men have not only grown old and in some cases quite senile but have absolutely no concept of what is happening in their own back yard. They are tired, old and have indeed been rewarded with a permanent pension by being appointed to the other place.

The motion put by an Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party calls for unlimited debate. I think that that is unreasonable. If in three days we cannot use our intelligence to indicate the opposition to a regulation that is being proposed by the Government through Order in Council, we should not be here. Of course, the New Democratic Party constantly reaches for the maximum. Its Members do not think about the legislation that must be put through the House.

The Hon. Member for Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Sargeant) said that three days of debate on one regulation or on a number of regulations would not be sufficient and that we were probably trying to limit debate to three days because we will soon be the Government and would want this automatic closure in place so that we would not have to worry. I am particularly pleased that he recognizes that the Conservative Party is going to form the next Government. We will form the next Government but not with the help of Members of the New Democratic Party because they are the ones who put in that gang across the street. They should always remember that.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member has clearly misquoted me. I said that some day the Conservatives may form a Government. I did not recognize that they were going to.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, again we have heard a very frivolous comment from a Member of the New Democratic Party. The comment made by the Hon. Member for Selkirk-Interlake was that we may form the next Government and we would want closure in place. That is totally irrelevant because the Bill that is presently before the House of which we are only dealing with one clause is a Bill that will have a profound effect and is composed of many pages and many amendments. That is why we are against the closure that exists today, closure that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) brought in. However, to suggest that we cannot discuss regulations that will affect western Canada in three days is ridiculous.

All that the Government is doing by limiting debate on regulations to one hour is perpetuating a system that has taken over the Government. I am talking about the system of having the bureaucracy draft regulations that become laws which can often severely penalize those who will be affected by those regulations to the point of fines, court appearances and incarceration.

There is something wrong when we in Canada allow the responsibility of governing and law making to fall out of the hands of the House of Commons and into the hands of the bureaucracy. That is what has happened time and time again. There is indeed something wrong. That is not why the people from our constituencies have elected us and sent us to Ottawa. We are here to be the law makers. We are here to account for those laws that are put into effect in the House of Commons. On the other hand, members of the bureaucracy are hired to carry out the policies and the laws that are passed in the House. More and more we see the bureaucracy setting down guidelines, rules and regulations that have profound effect. By limiting the debate to one hour with ten-minute speeches, the government ensures and absolutely underlines the fact that the bureaucracy will do the governing in the country.

One hour of debate on regulations after a motion has been initiated by a number of parliamentarians or Senators means 60 minutes of ten-minute speeches. The Government will use up three of those speeches and will then allow us only three ten-minute speeches to point out to the Government in a public forum the effect those regulations will have on the agricultural community.

We in the House all know that sometimes debate goes on for two or three days and it is not until the second or third day that members of the Press Gallery even realize or understand what we are talking about. It is only through this House that we signal to the press and through them to the Canadian people the detrimental effects that certain regulations will have. That is why I support my friend and colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), on his motion to allow three days of debate. Three days would be ample time and is at least a compromise position. One hour is totally inadequate. Again, I would not want to see unlimited debate on any one or two regulations that would be brought in.

With those remarks, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to close by saying that I hope the Government will recognize that we on this side are being sincere in requesting that this amendment for a three-day debate be passed.

• (1210)

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on the amendments which are before the House at this time. My concern about the Government's proposition to have a one-hour debate in the House of Commons on a regulation is that it does away with parliamentary control. Those of us who have been involved with legislation realize that regulations can be just as important as the Bill itself. They can be of any length, such as the regulation in the Department of National Defence concerning the rules of appeal for practices and procedures in courts martial which is over 14 pages long. Many words can be printed in 14 pages of The Canada Gazette.

I do not believe that Members of Parliament could ever agree to a clause which dictates that we must pass a regulation in one hour when it may take us five hours to read the regulation itself. If we really want to be the voice of the people and supervise the affairs of the Government, and if we really want to take the control of legislation and regulations away from the bureaucrats and restore it with the people's representatives, we certainly should have more than one hour of debate in the House of Commons.

Another provision I find offensive is that which suggests it takes 30 Members of the House of Commons to initiate this one-hour debate while it takes only 15 Senators to do the same thing. The situation may well arise when Members from one Province may wish to argue about a section in the regulations. I believe Members should have the automatic right to speak about a certain regulation, whether it is 10 Members or 15 Members. I find it hard to believe that anyone could suggest that two Members equal one Senator.

My main concern is that the Government, through this provision, is trying to limit the future role and authority of the House of Commons itself. The regulations on the awards and sanctions clause of the Bill will be very important to the agriculture and transportation industry in Canada. The provision in this legislation to provide only one hour in the House of Commons to debate regulations which could affect farmers, the transportation industry and the very way of life in western Canada is ridiculous. As one of my colleagues pointed out, even a time allocation motion requires two hours of debate in the House of Commons. The time allocation procedure under which we are presently debating this Bill allows us three days to debate the last two stages of the Crow legislation. Therefore I must ask how we could ever agree to a one-hour limitation provision which is more strict than any other rule in the House. It would give us less time for debate than we have for a Private Member's Bill and it is less time than we have for an Opposition day or for any Bill that comes before the House of Commons.

I must question why the Government wants to restrict us to a one-hour debate through this legislation when the regulations to be debated may be very important and of concern in the House two or three years from now and which may require a longer debate. If we agree to this one-hour debate, we will prevent future Parliaments from exercising their responsibility.

As a Member who represents the constituency of Churchill, which includes the Port of Churchill, I recognize the danger that this Bill to kill the Crow creates for a place such as the Port of Churchill. From the time this Bill was introduced we recognized that if variable rates were implemented and CN did not provide adequate repairs to its line, the Port of Churchill could be destroyed. For that reason the people in my riding are extremely concerned about this legislation and certainly would not want me to vote for it or any clause within it which would limit the power of the House of Commons to debate and supervise the affairs of the Government.

I certainly support the amendments put forward by my colleague for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). We should not limit ourselves in the future or today to a one-hour debate or even a three-day debate. We are all aware of the lengthy wording that bureaucrats put into regulations. If Members of Parliament are faced with 15-page regulations, how can we only allow them one hour or three days to debate? We should not set a limit on the length of debate when we do not know what the regulations will be. For us to limit our own ability to speak or investigate legislation which could affect all of western Canada and parts of eastern Canada would be complete folly and would run against the very nature of the House of Commons.

Each of us was elected to this place for the primary purpose of representing our constituents. The very history of Parliament has been for the people's representatives to review legislation. The very purpose of Parliament is to supervise the activities of the Cabinet and the bureaucracy. This limitation of debate to one hour as proposed by the Government detracts from the fundamental purpose and rights of Members of Parliament. I certainly will not support the Government's position and I suspect that Government Members, after reconsideration, would recognize that they are cutting their own throats if they pass legislation of this nature.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak for a few moments on the proposal put forward by my colleague from Vegreville that would deal with the regulatory process of this Bill. I suggest that all of us are looking for a reasonable position regarding the ability of the Government to design and implement regulations. The difficulty is that all of us have different ideas of what is reasonable.

The Government takes the position that once the legislation is passed it should have the right to design regulations that flow from that Act, regulations that would be pursuant to the Act. We feel that is true, but even those regulations deserve a certain amount of debate because it is not necessarily true that the Government will always present regulations that are pursuant to the Act or for the good of the people involved. I believe even Members of the Government would recognize that those who design the regulations and who have spent their years in Ottawa, rather than out in the fields where the producers are, do not necessarily remain in touch with the situation in the rest of the country. Since that isolation exists, the regulations flowing from the Bill that the Government designs may not necessarily be for the good of the producer. Certainly we have seen that in the legislation before us.

The motion put forward by the NDP goes to the other extreme. Their definition of reasonable is that we should be able to debate regulations ad infinitum. I do not know that that is necessary either. While all of us have our own definition of what is reasonable, it is not reasonable to have a one-hour debate on regulations that determine the future of an entire industry in Canada. I do not believe it is reasonable by anyone's definition when the Government can in one motion, by Order in Council, dramatically alter the rules by which the producers operate.

● (1220)

I think it would not take much effort to register how the tables would be turned. I would wonder how Government Members from the Maritimes would react if we brought forward a Bill dealing with the Maritimes fishing industry, that would alter the terms of reference for the entire industry and there was a provision in that Bill whereby you could debate all the regulations pertaining to that industry in one our. I would imagine there are a fair number of Members, including the Minister of Public Works (Mr. LeBlanc), who is here, who would have some concern that the Members from New Brunswick would be able to ventilate their views in one hour. I think the Minister of Public Works would like to see them given the opportunity to debate for more than one hour, unless he really wants to throttle his own colleagues from New Brunswick, though I do not think he is that kind of a fellow.

Mr. LeBlanc: We have heard a lot of ventilation in the last few weeks.

Mr. Friesen: When I ventilate, it is fresh air. What about Members from Nova Scotia or the two Members from Prince Edward Island? If we had a Bill dealing with the fishing industry that determines the future of the maritime Provinces, I think Members of the Liberal Government would be very exercised about the need to be able to discuss regulations that would affect the fishermen constituents whose future they are determining.

There you see the definition or reasonableness changes, Mr. Speaker. What now seems eminently reasonable, a one-hour debate affecting the future of western farmers, which is what seems to be reasonable to the Government, would change dramatically if the venue were changed, if it were to determine the fishing industry of the Maritimes.

We need to look very carefully at the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). By imposing a three-day limit to debate those regulations, he is being reasonable. Nobody is saying we have to debate the motion for three days. If we examine the regulations put forward by the Government and they seem to be meeting the needs of the producers, helping the producers operate comfortably within their arena and if those producers can function properly and the regulations are meeting those needs, why debate the issue for three days?

I suppose we can say that one of the most overworked committees in this House, one which does not get much attention but nevertheless is overworked, is the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. That particular committee has the burden of examining all of the regulations the bureaucrats design. Every once in a while we get notice that the bureaucracy has designed regulations that really are ultra vires or have gone too far and are really not operating within the constraints that ought to be theirs. In that case the Standing Committee on Regulations and Statutory Instruments has a very important function to fulfil. If we have only a one-day debate on a motion on regulations flowing from this Bill, rest assured that that committee will get an awful lot of extra work.

As the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) pointed out and we are talking about a one-hour debate on this motion the Government wants us to deal with it, by having ten-minute speeches. This means six speakers. Of those six speakers the Government will make very certain it will have three of them. The Opposition, at the maximum, will get 30 minutes of debating time to deal with very complex regulations. That is not within the bounds of reasonableness, Mr. Speaker, unless everyone unanimously wants to support the regulations. If our experience shows us anything or teaches us anything regarding this legislation, it is that we ought not to take for granted the reasonableness of the regulations that flow from this Bill.

I suppose at the bottom of all this is the whole concept of honour. Because of the experience we have had on this side of the House for the past three years, there is very little confidence left in the Government's sense of honour. Think back to the omnibus Bill presented to us a year and a half ago which brought on the ringing of the bells, Mr. Speaker. The Government tried to invoke about three principles in one Bill and made it impossible for us to debate it. In fact, in the Bill before us there are several concepts that we have allowed to pass within the Bill that are really in violation of the concept of good regulation.

The fact that the B.C. coal lands are incorporated in a Bill dealing with western grain transportation seems to me a contradiction of the whole concept of debate.

Mr. Mazankowski: How much are they worth?

Mr. Friesen: The coal lands are worth billions of dollars.

Mr. Mazankowski: Is it $450 billion?

Mr. Friesen: Let us try $450 billion within the life of those coal lands. We, representing British Columbia, might get ten minutes' debate on regulations determining the future of those coal lands under the Government's terms, assuming we get one of those three speaking slots.

Mr. Forrestall: Are those dollars 1963 dollars?

Mr. Friesen: That $450 billion is in 1972 dollars.

We are talking about an escalating figure as those coal lands are developed. By the time that land is developed it will be worth a lot more than the $400 billion we were talking about. But the Government wants to debate those regulations affecting the coal lands in ten-minute debating slots if we are lucky. The other Opposition Party might get one of those slots and certainly representatives of the prairie grain farming area will get some of those speaking slots. We from British Columbia might get no time at all to debate the regulations affecting the development of those B.C. coal lands.

I am saying that when it comes to a sense of honour we have had enough lessons in the past three and a half years to teach us not to take a position of trusting honour in the development of the regulations. We have to be sure. Therefore, we need a minimum of three days' debating time. If the regulations are good and we agree with them, we do not have to debate them for three days. But certainly it is reasonable to expect at least a three-day opportunity to debate those regulations if we sense that we need that time.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, I have an observation arising from a concern about a section in the Act. Although in this day and age legislation is becoming very complex. Thus it is incumbent upon us not to forget from time to time that we have a responsibility as Parliamentarians to ensure that people being affected by legislation and regulations made pursuant to a measure are understood. We have a responsibility to ensure that in this case producers understand clearly what Parliament intends when it introduces regulations.

If that concern is a valid one, it seems rather easy to me, indeed a very proper position for this House to take, to amend the present wording in the Act. As Your Honour knows, it sets forth with respect to debate on regulations a period of one hour. I have some uncertainty as to whether or not it is one hour for each regulation, one hour for all the regulations, or one hour for an amendment to the Act with respect to regulations which might be introduced at some point in the future. I am still unclear. If this piece of legislation produces a thousand separate regulations, it may well be that the House could be preoccupied for a thousand hours of debate. Of course, that is an extreme interpretation.

● (1230)

The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), together with those Members who laboured long and hard all summer with respect to the legislation, has adopted a much more reasonable position. The Hon. Member for Vegreville suggested that we should have three days of debate on regulations. That is reasonable. In three days it is possible for us to indicate clearly to those persons most directly affected by the regulations what we intended or what we meant, whether we understand clearly the position of the producers, but in theory the position of anyone directly affected by the regulations. Do we understand their position? The only way those directly affected will know is if they have access to a historical document, in this case the Debates of the Chamber. If they have access to the Debates, only in that way will they understand whether or not we in fact understood their needs or, to put it another way, whether or not the regulations do what they were intended to do, that is, to make the legislation itself operative, flow smoothly and serve the needs for which it was intended.

In seeking to amend the particular clause by striking out the one hour and replacing it with three days, Hon. Members of the House and indeed the Senate would be given an opportunity to put on the record their interpretation of what they believe people in fact want. Unless I am seriously mistaken, it seems that the function and role of government is to serve the people. It is not complex or complicated. We do that by proposing and debating laws which are good laws. Good laws are simply ones which people will instinctively want to follow and adhere to. Bad laws are just the opposite. In my judgment it is not good law to deny people access to an understanding of our intentions. The three days would allow that access; if it is a simple matter, it could be simply stated and perhaps clearly understood.

As other speakers have said, there is no suggestion that every regulation be debated for three days. On the other hand, if it takes more than an hour or one speech to indicate that clearly to those most directly affected by regulations, then that is our responsibility. I think it is a very clear one.

I do not see it as anything other than a reasonable proposition, and I do not understand the Government's objection. I did not understand when it objected to it during the committee debate. It seemed like a reasonable position. My friends in the New Democratic Party suggested some other changes which are quite recognizable from their point of view. Today they might qualify; after the next election they might not. They see themselves as holier than thou, the only spokesmen for western producers or as very specific representatives of particular interest groups. I understand their seeking to reduce the numbers required to communicate to the Chair their desire to debate a particular recommendation. I have no quarrel with that in any particular sense, so I will not in any way try to deal with it.

I would like to deal more particularly with the amendments of the Hon. Member for Vegreville and his colleagues who worked diligently on this, in order to facilitate the prosecution of a responsibility, that is, to ensure that anyone who is interested and follows the debate clearly understands what we intend. It might be that with the complexity of legislation today a speaker may not in ten minutes be able to deal completely with the implications of a regulation. It is incumbent upon us in the Chamber not to impose restrictions on people who participate in debates in such a way as to render it very difficult, if not impossible, to communicate their views to Hon. Members, or, much more important, to those people directly affected, and to have them on the historical record. To this end the ten-minute limitation seems unreasonable. Whether it is more unreasonable to remove that and have no time limit on the debate than the ten-minute restriction, I am not absolutely certain, but I am certain that whatever we in this Chamber do with respect to these guidelines it should be done in such a way as to allow individual Members and Members collectively ample time in the course of their interventions to make clearly known—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in support of Motions Nos. 47 and 49, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), and Motion No. 48, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski).

There are a number of issues before us in dealing with these three amendments. The first and perhaps the most offensive, not only to Members of Parliament but I suspect to the people of Canada, is clause 22 of Bill C-155. It states that it takes two Members of Parliament for every one Senator to request a debate on any of the regulations. When it comes to regulations regarding awards and sanctions, regulations regarding the allocation of railway cars, regulations that could affect the quota system or the block system or regulations that could discriminate against a system participant unfairly or discriminate in favour of a system participant unfairly, it surely requires some detailed attention by the House of Commons.

• (1240)

Surely those kinds of regulations deserve more attention, if they are deemed to be of sufficient importance by 15 Senators or 30 Members of the House of Commons, than ten minutes of debate for each of six Members of this House. Surely they require more attention than that if the question is of sufficient importance to some 30 Members of the House of Commons. The Government cannot have it both ways. If it is important enough for 15 Senators or 30 Members of the House of Commons to want to use the time of the House to debate those regulations, it is of sufficient importance not to be restricted to a one hour debate. That is a conflict in itself.

Perhaps government Members, regardless of what government it may be, are telling us in advance that little interest will be shown in a debate of the regulations, about as much interest as the Government is showing in the debate on this and other amendments we have been debating over the last couple of weeks.

I wish to quote a poem from the book "The Blasted Pine, An Anthology of Satire, Invective and Disrespectful Verse". If it was a long poem I would not read it, but it is comprised of only two lines. It says something about the silence that has been so evident in the seats across the way. The poem is entitled "Places" and was written by Joseph Howe. I quote:

As Bees, on Flowers alighting, cease their Hum,
So, settling upon Places, Whigs grow dumb.

I wish some Members opposite would show a little more belief in the project they are trying so hard to sell both to the House of Commons and to the people of Canada. They seem to have taken the position that, as far as they are concerned, it is of extreme urgency, so much so that they have refused time and again overtures from this side to split the Bill into its various component parts. By doing so, they could move ahead on the matter of rail modernization, something that was very important at the time of the last election and when they talked about the Western Canada Development Fund in two different years.

At the time that was discussed, there was no mention of the fact that it was going to require a five times increase in payments by western grain producers in order to get that modernization. When the Government talked about double tracking at the time of the last election, it did not mention that it would be only the western farmer who would pay. What happened to that promise? We now have 50 miles—or do I stand in danger of being prosecuted because I did not put that in kilometres? At the time of that promise, there was no mention that it would be only the western grain producer who would pay for the double tracking.

We also had the Western Canada Development Fund. We were assured that a lot of that would go for the modernization and upgrading of the rail system. There was no mention that that would not happen unless western grain producers paid for it. That went by the boards. It was repeated the next year, but there was still no mention of the fact that it would not happen unless western grain producers paid for it.

There is one overriding issue in this debate. The whole matter of the Crow debate can be put very simply: the people of western Canada do not believe the Liberals and they do not trust the CPR. That is the issue.

Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49 are trying to address different issues in the Bill. The Government wants to push them through all at one time instead of splitting them up in some reasonable way. The Government will get its way with regard to this legislation by virtue of its majority, which it obtained a number of years ago. Sooner or later it will have its way. It does not want the House to debate any of the regulations which may ensue from this legislation unless 15 Senators or 30 Members of Parliament request such a debate. If such a debate takes place, it will be restricted to six Members speaking for ten minutes each, or the equivalent amount of time.

It may be that the Members of the Liberal Party believe that it takes two Members of Parliament to equal one Senator. As far as I am concerned, and as far as my colleagues in this and the other Opposition Party as well as the voters are concerned, we have a somewhat higher estimation of the people who are elected here than those which the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) appoints. I suspect that Canadians trust their judgment to pick representatives who are at least equal to those selected by one man, a man who currently is not having a great love affair with the Canadian public, despite many of his credentials I am astounded at the reasoning and logic which produce that kind of solution.

I wish more Members opposite would rise in their place rather than simply alight on it. I want to know what is the logic for providing for 30 Members of Parliament or 15 Senators. Surely there has to be some and I would appreciate being edified on that point. I ask Members opposite to give us the reasoning behind that one item.

I am glad we have had an opportunity to discuss these amendments—alhtough I sometimes wonder how many are listening—and to point out some of the tortured logic that makes up much of the legislation before us. Nowhere has this been more evident than in the Government's treatment of the clauses which Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49 try to amend.

I conclude by again asking that the Government not only have some of its Members rise to defend the legislation, but consider splitting the Bill in order that we can progress with those items which they promised to the people of western Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to be able to participate in this debate on Motions Nos. 47, 48 and 49. As other speakers have indicated, these motions intend to strengthen Parliament's role and the role of Members of Parliament in debating and deciding upon regulations that the Government may wish to introduce from time to time to change, enhance or subtract from the powers of the Administrator and the Senior Grain Transportation Committee.

● (1250)

We on this side of the House are very concerned with the original legislation in Bill C-155, especially the role of Parliament. Throughout the evolution of Bill C-155 we have been gravely concerned with the method. We are concerned that Paliament has in many ways been by-passed, as the producers had originally been by-passed. It took the pleading of the combined Opposition to have the Government form a committee to listen to the producers.
