Hon. P. Mitchell, New Brunswick.
Capt. James Norris, M. P., Co. of Lincoln.
Hon. E. Benson, Senator.
The Clinton Insures only Insured Property, and is subject to not more than Two Thousand Dollars in any Risk.
This Company Effects Insurance as follows:
1st.—On the PREMIUM NOTE PRINCIPLE, that is, a small payment each year. In this branch for the past 15 years, a trifle more than one-half the notes have been sufficient to defray the expenses and pay the losses.
2nd.—On the SHORT DATE NOTE PRINCIPLE, that is, the amount to be paid in full at any time within six months at the option of the Applicant.
3rd.—On the CASH PRINCIPLE, that is, all down at the time of insurance.
By the two latter methods the applicant knows at once the amount to be paid, and by the Premium Note Principle, the applicant is liable only for the Amount of Cash Note and the good sense of the Company tends to lighten his payments.
CHARLES C. CARLYLE, Esq., Manager, has been appointed General Agent for the Maritime Provinces, through whom all applications for a full share of the Insurance should be made.

The Forest Trees.

BY ELIZA COOK.
Up with your heads, ye sylvan lords,
Wave proudly in the breeze;
For our cradle bands and coffin boards,
Must come from the forest trees.
We bless ye for your summer shades,
When our weak limbs fall and tire;
Our thanks are due for your winter aid,
When we pile the bright log fire.
Oh! Where would be our rule on the sea,
And the fame of the sailor hand;
Were it not for the oak and cloud cover'd pine,
That spring on the quiet land?
When the ribs and masts of the good ship live
And weather the gale with ease;
Take his glass from the tar who will not give
A health to the forest trees.
Ye lend to Life its earliest joy,
And wait on its latest page?
In the circling hoop for the rosy boy,
And the easy chair for Age.
The old man totters on his way,
With footsteps short and slow;
But without the stick for his help and stay,
Not a yard's length could he go.
The hazel twig in the stripling's hand
Hath magic powers to please;
And the trusty staff and slender wand
Are plucked from the forest trees.
Ye are seen in the shapes of the blessed plough
And the merry ringing fall;
Ye shine in the dome of the monarch's home
And the sacred altar-hall.
In the rustic porch, the panel'd wall,
In the gay triumphal car;
In the rude-built hut, or the banquet hall;
No matter! there ye are!
Then up with your heads, ye sylvan lords,
Wave proudly in the breeze;
For our cradle bands to our coffin boards,
We're in debt to the forest trees.

THE INDIAN'S PAYMENT:

"Me No Forget."

BY MRS. C. A. SOULE.

It was late in the month of November. The day had been cold and gusty, with occasional dashes of rain, and the evening, which set in early, promised to be one of gloom and tempest. The wind went rushing about with that low, mournful howl which is known only in the autumn-time, fanning the naked boughs of the old forest-trees with its furious surges, whirling the dead leaves which lay heaped in the dark ravines into whirling eddies, and driving everything before it with a violence that made them only too glad to flee. The clouds had hung in scattered masses while the livid sun sent its straggling beams among them, gathered themselves into a single mighty one and shrouded the heavens with a pall, threatening every moment to burst into dreaching floods.
'God pity the homeless-to-night!' exclaimed a young man in an emphatic tone, as he pushed open the rude door of his log cabin, he dragged in the old back-log that was to warm the rough hearthstone and irradiate the brown rafters through the long cheerless hours of the autumn storm. 'God pity them and help them too, for a cold and weary time they'll have. I trust no one wanders to-night in this wilderness; but just one there should be, I'll do what I can to give them a beacon-light,' and even while he spoke, he planted the huge, knotty stick into a bed of crimson coals and filled the space between it and the old iron fire-holders with a generous armful of light dry kindling, which soon burst into a brilliant blaze, not only scattering light and heat across the dim apartment, but sending a stream of moon-like rays through the tiny windows, that went dancing like a thing of life through the outer darkness till it was lost in the mazes of the untracked forest.
'There,' said the warm-hearted woodsman, as he watched the sky-bound sparks and the continuous glow, 'I've done my part towards leading them to a home, if any there be abroad and wandering, and now I'll enjoy myself,' and he drew his seat to the homely board on which sat the hunter's fare—steaks from a deer, a stew of birds which he had while standing in the door of the cabin, and cakes of powdered corn, baked and browned on a stick over the fire's heart. A dog, the faithful friend of the woodsman, lay curled up on the floor, and it was not till the night was far advanced that the door opened and a man came in, his face as white as the snow, and his hands outstretched till they were stiff with cold.
'Me your friend, and me your brother,' said the Indian, in a hoarse voice, 'me sick and me hungry; me—' but ere he could speak more the door flew open and he was bid to come in and be welcome.
'Friend nor foe stands outside my door on a night like this,' said the sturdy host, as he threw on a generous armful of his light wood, and bid the deer heat till they were stiff with cold.
'Me your friend, and me your brother,' said the Indian, in a hoarse voice, 'me sick and me hungry; me—' but ere he could speak more the door flew open and he was bid to come in and be welcome.

fore the fire. 'We shan't starve yet awhile, Moll—not while there are birds in the trees and game in the woods, and strength in these brawny arms. Only keep a warm hope in your heart, little wife, and our home will yet be a bonny spot!' And then he folded his hands on his bosom, and bent his head, and seemed to be reading bright fancies in the warm firelight. And when her light evening chores were done up, his wife drew her seat close beside him, and as we are all wont on such stormy nights, when the hearthstone beams, the two warmed their young memories and strengthened the pinions of hope. And the evening sped on, wildly and awfully without, but calmly and beautifully within, by the side of the blazing fire, whose streaming light was the only star that gleamed in that dim old forest.
'We'll keep the fire up all night, and as bright as we can, too,' said the brave pioneer, as he leaped into bed, instead of raking the coals, he threw on a fresh bundle of splinters; 'it's too awful a night to sleep sound, and I may as well tend it as not. God help them that roam, if any there be, and guide them this way. It shall never be said that I darkened my fire in a night like this!'
Once and twice did he rouse himself from the slumber that in spite of his awe of the storm would steal over his senses, and renew the blaze that was dying away, but then the rain ceased its dashing, and fell only on the rough roof with a lullaby tone, and the wind hushed its howls and only moaned in a weary-like way, he suffered himself to sink into that calm deep sleep which comes only to those who have laboured with hands that were clean and hearts that were pure.
An hour or two passed on, and still he slept, and the blazing brands died in the ashes, and the old back-log cleft with the evening's flame, dropped slowly its crimson flakes, giving out no longer a brilliant flash, but only a steady, ruddy glare.
Just then, footsore, wearied and sick, there leaped against the rough door a poor Indian hunter, a brave and right royal descendant of those red men who, ere the pioneer girdled his tress, was king of this wide old wood. Many a long, weary mile had he traveled since dawn, and in the dark night set in so stormy and cold, he had drawn his torn blanket about him and sought only to find in the grove some hollow in which to lie down and chant the death-hymn that had rung all day in his ears. A long time he wandered, entangling himself yet deeper in the intricate windings of the dense old wood. But just when his feet lagged most, and his heart was sorest, a beam from the woodman's fire lit on his path, and lit, too, a hope in his bosom. He followed the ray, and ere the last brand had fallen, was so near the rude home that his Indian eye could track the path which his owner had made in the forest, and follow it to his door.
But there he paused awhile. Would the white man be kind to his red-faced brother, and give him the food he craved and a skin by the fire?
'Me try him,' said he, as he pushed against the door, 'me try him,—he be good to me, me no forget,—the wooden bar rattled and the woodman awoke, startled, but not afraid. One bound brought him to the door, and with one hand on its guard and one hand on his rifle, he called, 'Who's there—what want you?'
'Me Indian; me sick and me hungry; me—' but ere he could speak more the door flew open and he was bid to come in and be welcome.
'Friend nor foe stands outside my door on a night like this,' said the sturdy host, as he threw on a generous armful of his light wood, and bid the deer heat till they were stiff with cold.
'Me your friend, and me your brother,' said the Indian, in a hoarse voice, 'me sick and me hungry; me—' but ere he could speak more the door flew open and he was bid to come in and be welcome.

a smoking meal to tempt the palate of his guest. Then casting a bundle of skins on the floor, close to the hearthstone, and taking from off the bed whereon lay his wife, trembling in silent terror, a heavy blanket, he told the poor Indian to rest himself there till morning, and longer if he chose. And then with a heart, lighter and happier than when he arose he lay down again, drawing his pale companion closely to his breast, and quieting her fears with endearments as gentle and soothing as those a mother bestows on a frightened child.
When they awoke in the morning their Indian guest lay still upon the floor in a sound, refreshing sleep.—When he rose from his rustic couch, they asked him not whence he had come and whither he was going, but only to partake of their hospitality so long as he thought fit. With Indian taciturnity, he said nothing, but ate with them, and then lay down again, and in this way passed two days. On the morning of the third, when the hearty breakfast had been disposed of, he drew his blanket around him and went to the door. As he crossed the threshold, he turned his face to the still seated husband and wife, and said emphatically, 'Pale face good to Indian—me no forget; and as an arrow darts from his bow when the strong arm draws, he sped from the sheltering roof and was lost almost instantly in the mazes of the dense old wood.
For some weeks the incident was dwelt upon frequently by the family, but gradually it faded from the memories, and as years passed on, it was only once in a while recalled, the request of two buoyant lads, that 'father would tell them an Indian story, a true story about a live Injun.' Then taking them on his knees, he would relate to them what has just been written, and they would draw his arms yet closer round their trembling forms, and wonder if they would dare go to sleep while the fire was stretched before the door, or if they would say, 'weren't you there?' and cuddle up to the seeming to feel their throats straight.

Alas! they nor he, nor the beautiful wife thought them sorrow that 'live Injun' was upon their happy hearts, would those little ones have seen him, and fairer arms than these have been wound about his neck, and his forehead kissed, and his eyes and sad, and his shining eyes.
Many changes had come since the pioneer had cleared his land and built his cabin. What was only a wild and tangled game starting up at once, and become, before the first plow and cultivation, a beautiful plain, dotted with white hills. Not now, as it once was, the hunter shot a booby, and his own room now away over the grassy meadow, and round the hill, ere he would see the deer heat till they were stiff with cold.
'Me your friend, and me your brother,' said the Indian, in a hoarse voice, 'me sick and me hungry; me—' but ere he could speak more the door flew open and he was bid to come in and be welcome.

Long and weary were the months of captivity that ensued—long weary to the captive, torn so long from his household treasures, longer an I sadder, too; the ones left behind—for their agony of suspense, and of all agonies that is the most hard and wearing, extinguishing itself. For a while Hugh of the idea of escape, but the continued watchfulness of his and his situation in a wild and by the red man, unfrequented pathless only to the moose and best to submit patiently to and trust in God.

numbered that on the morrow a hunt came off, and he knew at such occasions all the bravest of the bravest were gone, and inferred that as he should be left as he had been any time before, in the care of a squaw and perhaps one or two dians, his deliverer had selected at the propitious time to effect his escape.

RICHIBUCTO BRANCH RAILWAY.

Since the final location of that portion of the Intercolonial Railway extending from Newcastle to Moncton, which entirely excludes Richibucto from participating in any of the benefits likely to accrue from speedy communication with business centres, the people of Kent, and Richibucto particularly, have made repeated efforts to obtain a branch to run from the latter place to the main line, which passes by at the head of Richibucto River, a distance, if we remember correctly, of about 20 miles. The failure of the people of that fine agricultural county in the past to obtain the much desired boon, has no doubt resulted from the unsatisfactory and somewhat manner in which, until very recently, they have been represented at the Parliament at Ottawa. In fact, we say it advisedly, that the manner in which Kent was represented during the first five or six years of Confederation, was prejudicial to the general interests of the County. But now a change has come, Kent is represented by a man who is thoroughly acquainted with its business requirements, and who will doubtless urge claims upon the Dominion Govt. with all the vigour of a pushing business man. The time for energetic action has arrived. The Intercolonial Railway is being constructed for the accommodation of the people throughout the Dominion, and there is no just reason why the people of Kent should be an exception to the rule. We hope, therefore, that the public meeting to be held on the 26th, (as stated in our issue of the 12th inst.) will be attended by a large number of the energetic and vigorous members of their part, coupled with the presence of their representative in the Dominion Parliament, we feel that success will eventually attend their efforts. We hope also, that the Dominion Government will, on the matter, note the claims of Kent in exports of fish, and do what is possible to its people what we believe, is a just and fair titling.

Chatham Railway.

It is interesting to note that there has been a meeting in the St. John's district, in connection with the construction of this Government Suburban Railway, when it is to be hoped there will be a large attendance of all interested parties.

Inquest.

On Thursday last, an Inquest was held before Coroner Benson, on the body of William Bateman, of Blackville. Bateman, it appears, was working in the woods, in the employ of John Fairley, Esq., Boiestown. For some days before leaving camp, he complained of not feeling very well. The foreman advised him to go home, saying he would never get well where he was, and on Monday week his son and another man, took him away from the camp on a sled. The party arrived at Mr. Fairley's residence the same night. Bateman stood the journey remarkably well, but appeared to be getting weaker. Mr. Fairley did all he could to administer to the man's health, and on Tuesday morning he died. The coroner inquired into the cause of the patient's illness, and stated that the patient had been ill for some days before he died.

Our Climate.

In answer to a Mr. Bell, who writes from Quebec to the London Times, respecting the climate of Canada, the Toronto Globe says:— "Let us see what facts say to the healthiness of this awful climate, which we are assured only the most robust can stand. In the census of the Dominion, taken in 1871, we have the population arranged according to their ages. This embraces the four provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, with a population of 3,200,000. Well, how do we find that these statistics record the climate? In this way:— Under 100 and over 90; 13,120 under 50; 51,422 under 30; 124,783 under 20 and above 10; 100,000 under 10 and above 50. We know, but will England or any other country give a better account than this of our climate, according to the statistics of the census? In this way:— The memory of the just is blessed."

Died.

At his residence in Derby, on the 9th December, JANE COOK, wife of John Cook, a native of County Antrim, Ireland, aged 88. At Douglastown, on the 9th inst., JAMES H., second son of William and Isabella Yorton, aged 38 years. At his residence, Burnt Church, on the 4th inst., after a short illness, Mrs. WATSON, aged 40 years, a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland. (Canada papers please copy.) At Douglastown, December 9, after a short but severe illness, Mr. WILLIAM O'LEARY, aged 41 years. Deeply regretted. He was a diligent and able parent, a kind husband, and affectionate father, and charitable to the poor. He was universally esteemed for the uprightness and integrity of his character. The memory of the just is blessed. At Black Brook, on Wednesday, 2nd inst., of typhoid fever, ELIZABETH, third daughter of Mr. Philip Savoy, of this place, and wife of Mr. Oliver Foster, in the 64th year of her age, leaving a disconsolate husband and four small children to mourn their early loss. Her death will be greatly missed. The grave never went empty from her door.

Fishery Matters.

On the night of the 27th November, Edmond Clark was found by Overseer Hogan fishing bass with an undersized net, at the N. W. Boom. A complaint was lodged against him, and on the 4th instant he was fined $4.00 and costs, or 8 days in goal, under the fishery regulations. The fine was paid. We are glad to see that the illegal fishing is receiving attention at the hands of the Overseer, who it seems, is determined to put a stop to the nefarious work, or at least so far as he is able. If the department will only pay attention to our remarks of last week, and push the matter vigorously by examining the fish in St. John, we have no doubt that illegal fishing will soon be stopped. The Overseer here is strictly attentive to his duties, (which are not always the most pleasant or agreeable) but his work would be much more effective by the co-operation of the department in the manner we suggest. We also understand that parties who indulge in this "smuggling" business, often resort to abusive and uncalled for language toward the Overseer in the performance of his duty. This is altogether wrong and unmanly. We sincerely hope that the parties who use such unbecoming language will remember that there is a limit beyond which patience ceases to be a virtue, and govern themselves accordingly, for the law is quite strong enough to protect any officer, in the honest discharge of his duty from such ungentlemanly assaults. During the latter part of last month Overseer Hogan sold at auction from twenty five to thirty salmon nets, of legal size, which were taken by the Overseer and Wardens in North Esk district, from parties found fishing after the close of the season. Twenty eight salmon nets, of illegal size in the mesh, taken by the officers in the same district, were destroyed, as the law directs. All of the latter were taken in the rapids on the North West and Little South West rivers.

The Harkins' Academy.

Considerable discussion has taken place of late with reference to the Harkins' Academy and its general management. That defects exist, (and these not at all owing to the law, as the Freeman unfairly puts it) none will deny, not even the teachers, who are fain to acknowledge that the graded system, in its purity, is yet in its infancy in the institution. Well, while there has been dissatisfaction expressed at the progress made by some of the pupils, this is not sufficient to prove that therefore educational development in the Academy is at a standstill. Not at all. Viewing the matter calmly and dispassionately, we must acknowledge, in a spirit of fairness, that the teachers, for some time past, have been placed at a disadvantage. For lack of school accommodation, the rooms have been overcrowded for many months, the result of which has been that as one department became surcharged, children not sufficiently advanced for the change were taken from such department and placed in a higher one, much to their own disadvantage and to the detriment of the whole institution. To all who have watched the working of the Academy, and who feel an interest in its success, it must be evident, that if the people of Newcastle are desirous that the system of grading shall be worked out in a satisfactory manner, and in keeping with the requirements of the Board of Education, they will have to toe the mark, and provide, by a larger assessment than formerly, the funds necessary to carry on the work. For instance, the departments taught by Miss Sinclair and Miss Burns, have a registered daily attendance of 110 children, and these little ones, for want of the necessary accommodation, are taught in one room. So long as this state of things exists, results the most satisfactory cannot possibly be attained. The education of the children aside, for such a number to be confined in the room now used, is detrimental to their health and physical development. The other departments are also filled to their utmost capacity, the whole showing a registered attendance in the institution during the last six months of 340 or 350 children. Either the building will have to be enlarged, or another school house provided, and this in addition to the upper end of the district. This will necessitate a larger staff, and we are of the opinion that the increase must shortly take place, if we are to keep pace with other sections of the province. These and other matters will no doubt be fully ventilated at the annual meeting in January, when it is to be hoped there will be a large attendance of all interested parties.

Accident.

On Thursday last a man named Fitzpatrick, belonging to Barnaby River had his hand and arm frightfully lacerated in a threshing machine which was working at one of his neighbors' barns. Dr. Bishop was in attendance, but owing to the extreme prostration of the wounded man, no operation was attempted until Sunday evening last, when the doctor, in attendance, assisted by Dr. Benson, removed the shattered limb about 2 1/2 inches below the elbow. We are sorry to hear that Mr. Fitzpatrick, who is 75 years of age, is now in a very critical condition. The patient stood the operation heroically, watching the movements of the doctors with considerable interest. When asked how he felt, he said coolly, that the operation was not quite so bad as the mangling in the machine.

Fire.

The house of Mr. William Traor, Castle Street, was on fire on Monday last. The alarm soon gathered a willing crowd, who speedily brought the fire into subjection. Very little damage was done. Fire was caused by the stove pipe passing through the ceiling of the upper flat without the protection of a stone. We believe has been remedied, by order of the Firewards.

Intense feeling has been kindled in France by some of the papers read in the Von Arnim trial, one despatch especially, in which Bismarck says he cannot but wish to see France weak, and desires it undesirable to strengthen her by contributing to the establishment of the monarchy, causes profound indignation.

Berlin, 14th.

The argument in the Von Arnim case was commenced to-day. The public prosecutor spoke for two hours and a half, and concluded by asking that the prisoner be sentenced to imprisonment for two years and a half. The counsel for the defence argued that even if all the charges were admitted, as acquittal was unavoidable, on purely legal grounds. It could not be maintained that the Crown had any proprietary rights in the missing documents. The accused, in his conflict with Bismarck, considered that he was defending his honor.

Nevertheless, the quantities of liquor of one kind and another, manufactured or imported into the Dominion, runs up to rather formidable proportions when all the items are placed together.

It may be interesting to our readers to take a hasty glance at what we really did drink in 1873. In doing this, it will be convenient to take first the liquor imported, and then the quantity manufactured by ourselves. The foreign importations entered "for home consumption" in 1873, with the quantity and value of each, were as follows:

	Gals.	Value.
Perfumed Spirits, not
Flasks,	5,139	$16,444
Perfumed spirits, in
Flasks,	116,200	51,720
Brandy,	555,039	988,992
Gin,	610,665	271,274
Whisky,	243,882	10,330
Whisky,	172,085	108,968
Alcohol,	1,720	1,116
Strong waters,	1,677	2,642
Alc. Beer, &c., casks,	123,720	43,738
Do, bottles,	301,155	136,610
Wines, all kinds,	807,556	624,257
Total,	2,013,183	$2,105,925

This was certainly doing pretty well in foreign liquors, and it must be borne in mind that the quantity imported was much larger than the above statistics indicate, but the balance remained "in bond." It will be observed that the number of gallons is nearly one-third more than the number of dollars—at which the different articles were entered at the customs—a fact which, considering the retail prices generally charged for brandy, gin, rum and wine, is strikingly suggestive in money value.

Turning to our own production, we find the total quantity of spirits manufactured was 9,547,517 gallons; and of this, as closely as we can make out, there went into consumption 4,739,937 gallons. The difference, made up by 327,821 gallons exported, and the balance remaining unsold. The malt liquor manufactured, comprising ale, beer, porter, etc., runs up to 11,000,521 gallons; deducting 85,361 gallons exported, the home consumption may be set down at 10,975,160 gallons.

Now, let us see how the whole sums up. Of imported liquors, such as brandy, wine, etc., we consumed 2,013,183 gallons, and of home produced spirits, mostly whisky, 4,739,937 gallons—making a total consumption of 7,312,650 gallons. Of foreign ale, porter, beer, etc., there were drunk 439,875 gallons, and of the product of our breweries, 10,725,160—making a total consumption of this class of stimulants of no less than 11,415,085 gallons. In other words there was enough used of the former to give every man, woman and child from the Atlantic to the Pacific, two gallons each, and of the latter, over three gallons! Five gallons apiece all round! That certainly was—all things considered—a liberal supply for a single twelve months.

The quantity of grain used in distillation and brewing was quite large. In the production of malt liquors there were used 30,309,789 lbs. of malt and the grain consumed for the manufacture of spirits was as follows:—

	buhs.	Value.
Malt,	4,002,575	11,710
Indian Corn,	67,988,199	1,309,914
Rye,	11,288,170	309,881
Wheat,	5,792,945	93,214
Oats, &c.,	2,489,811	70,223
Milch, &c.,	7,311,907	77,388
Total,	91,432,558	1,738,146

There was, therefore, no less than 121,742,342 lbs. of grain and malt used in Canada in the manufacture of liquors last year. The greatest part of this was Indian corn, which was chiefly imported from the Western States, although it will be observed that a considerable quantity of our own barley, wheat and oats, were consumed in this manufacture.

What the drink consumed in 1873 cost the Dominion, is a question which has been in the hands of the moralist, might become a very extended one. Such an enquiry would lead us beyond the scope of this article. Keeping strictly to the actual outlay to the consumer, the total amount must be truly formidable. There are no means of which we are aware to ascertain this exactly, but we can make an approximation to it, and we fancy the following rough calculation will not be found very far from the mark:—

	Value.
2,013,183 gals. Whisky, &c.,	$5,000,000
4,739,937 gals. Whisky, &c.,	2,500,000
11,415,085 gals. Beer, &c.,	5,000,000
Total cost,	$12,500,000

This calculation is based on the consumption of the consumer, and we have considered in making it up that the greater part would be purchased by the glass, and the lesser portion by wholesale. We do not claim for the above that it is more than a rough estimate. But it cannot be far astray, and certainly it shows that the people of Canada pay out for intoxicants each year $31,564,703! We could scarcely have believed that such an enormous amount was annually squandered in liquors, not to speak of tobacco, cigars, and other stimulants. But there stands the calculation, and we fear it is too true.

Large as was the consumption in 1873, however, it shows a falling off, as compared with the two preceding years. The total excise and customs duties collected by the Government for the last four years, were as follows:—

Years.	Excise.	Customs.
1870	$2,640,000	1,067,000
1871	3,704,170	1,350,000
1872	3,841,540	1,578,192
1873	3,510,000	1,500,000

There has been in the revenue from importations, and nearly $500,000 in the Excise revenue from spirits since 1871, but the statistics for 1873 are still sufficiently large to be startling. Their amplification, and the lessons to be drawn therefrom, may be safely left in the hands of those friends of moral reform, who specially devote themselves to such questions. But we commend the subject to our readers, who, we doubt not, will be as interested as we have been, with the statistics brought before them.

Boyton at Sea.

The Cork, Ireland, correspondent of the N. Y. Herald gives the following description of Captain Boyton's adventure with his new ocean life preserver:—

The thing however, was done, and the hero of it was Captain Paul Boyton, of the New Jersey Life-guard, Atlantic City. The gentleman, a professional diver of well known daring, left New York about fortnight ago in the National Company's steamer Queen, taking with him a patent swimming costume. It was Captain Boyton's intention when from two to three hundred miles distant

John Bunyan's Grave in Bunnhill Fields.

The grave of the author of the "Pilgrim's Progress," whose remains lie in the Nonconformist burial ground, Bunnhill-Fields, is at the present time in a very unsatisfactory state. Whether owing to atmospheric influences or other injuries, the recumbent figure of Bunyan is rapidly crumbling away; three parts of the nose having already disappeared. This two has relief on the side of the tomb, representing Pilgrim, sitting down, resting on his journey, and Pilgrim, at the close of his journey, kneeling humbly at the foot of the Cross, have been subjected to a disgraceful act of vandalism. The nose, upper lip, and chin of the latter figure, have been deliberately chipped off, and that very recently; whilst on the former the nose has been similarly treated. The monument was erected by public subscription in May, 1862.
