By Courier Leased Wire. Bulletin, London, June 15.—The British struck another blow last night on the front near Messines, the war office announces.

The British now occupy the former front trenches of the Germans from the river Lys to the river Warnave.

London, June 15.—The text of the official announcement reads: "Our troops attacked yesterday evening south and east of Messines, and astride the Ypres-Comines Canal. The enemy's resistance was quickly overcome and the whole of our objectives were gained in both localities.

As a result of these operations and the constant pressure maintained by our troops since June 7, we now occupy the German front trenches, from the river Lys to the river Warnave and have advanced our line from 500 to 1,000 yards on the whole front from the river Warnave to Klein Zillebecke, a distance of about seven miles.

"We made a successful raid last night north of Lens. Many Germans were killed in hand-to-hand fighting and a few prisoners were taken by us."

SUB. CAMPAIGN GROWS

And War Against Shipping of Entente is Held Satisfactory

By Courier Leased Wire. Berlin, June 15, via London. Under the caption, "Submarine Warfare and war costs," The North German Gazette, has the following to say.

How do the higher war costs affect the higher the war costs amount to, the less attention they arouse, and Lloyd George's words concerning the last silver bullet probably will never come true.

Far away to the north and east, spread undulating lands offering little opportunity for defensive positions, but to the south and east were the great forest covered ridges of St. Gobain, and the upper Forest of Concy, behind which lies Laone.

French aviators have been able to distinguish far behind the German front lines certain indications that a series of intermediate works has in some places been begun, and in others completed.

This retirement when it takes place, will not be a voluntary one, but will be the result of pressure by the French army.

Our enemies set up the slogan of "Foes for foes" on which basis they propose to obtain restitution for losses sustained through our submarines.

Such respect for losses never did obtain, and to-day they are more remote than ever. We may confidently permit our U-boats to make reply to such a demand.

Deputation Visits Ottawa in Matter of the Dover Swing Bridge

NEWS FROM OVERSEAS Pte. Perry McKay Goes to Front; Pte. Roy Myers Killed

(From our own Correspondent) Simcoe, June 15.—A deputation, consisting of H. P. Innes, K.E., of Simcoe, and Jno. S. Martin, H. W. Ainsley and Capt. Robinson, of Port Dover, went to Ottawa last night to interview the powers that be regarding the swing bridge. The Warden, and Messrs. Cunningham and Walker, of the County Council, and Guy R. Marston, C.E. were on the ground on Thursday in accordance with a resolution passed last week while the council was in session.

The engineer recommended some temporary makeshift supports for the present, just to keep the bridge out of the drink, but he considers anything like extensive repairs ill-advised. Apparently the matter has been shifted over from year to year till the old structure has apparently given its last penny worth of service.

Later on, perhaps, a deputation from the county council will go to Ottawa, but any addition to the considerable sum spent up to the present in these trips to Mecca will hardly make a dint, so long as the Port of Dover continues to be ignored, as has been the case for the last quarter of a century, and this by every branch of the government concerned, fisheries, marine, railways and canals, and public works departments, irrespective of the political complexion of those on the treasury benches. Of course, Dover got an appropriation which, up to the present, is a nice sounding word. The Galt council and board of trade are leaders in a movement calculated to inform the Government that there really is the making of a port at Dover, and a considerable population in the hinterland consuming annually a few tons of coal which might be brought over to Dover. Our advice is "keep knocking."

A Foundling at Teeterville
But Chairman Cunningham has other troubles than the Dover bridge. As Reeve of the Township of Windham, Theo. has been summoned to arrange for the care of a foundling, which was left on the doorstep of John Jackson's residence at Teeterville. The affair has caused more concern to the finder than his recent suit over the gasoline pump, but may turn out as well in the end.

Theo. was in town yesterday morning and did not get the assistance which he might have expected. "What shall I do?" was his query to Crown Attorney Slight. "Why feed it, not too much at a time, and at the proper temperature. It will grow and will bring a little help on the farm. Take care of it and it will repay you. In a few years, with proper care, it will be a bright little fellow that the township will be proud of."

"But I do not want to come to town with a baby in my arms every time I have occasion to come down."

The Attorney directed Mr. C. to the residence of the officer of the Children's Aid Society, and on the way he met Auctioneer Sam King. Sam's kindly smile bespoke sympathy and the Reeve unloaded his trouble as he requested further direction as to the whereabouts of the child. "Put it up at 'Attabin' with 'at' King. Give me the particulars: how old is it?" "Don't know. I did not see its teeth, one little hand and a little face was all I saw under the edge of a piece of rough woolen swaddling cloth. They say it is two or three days old." Arrived at the officer's home, Mr. Cunningham was advised that the rules of the Shelter put the age limit at one year, and he was directed to the President of the Society, Mr. Frank Reid. As Mr. Reid is in Montreal at the General Assembly, we lose Mr. Cunningham here.

The age limit at the county home is two years at least, and even were there no limit, special extra assistance would be required to care for the child there. But leavily aside, Mr. Cunningham will find a home somewhere for the babe. There is a close in the neighborhood as to whence the babe came. It is suggested that some one may have come from a distance by auto with it. The babe was warmly wrapped in second hand underwear, and placed, before daylight at the doorstep as stated above. There was a feeding bottle containing a quantity of patent baby food, warm in the wrappings with it. The finder is proprietor of a public garage at Teeterville and a car stopping there at any time would attract no attention.

CHAPLIN WINS FAME AND FORTUNE AFTER LONG STRUGGLE

Million Dollar Comedian's Early Days Were Fought With Many Hardships; His First Salary $1.50 a Week, He Now Earns $670,000 Per Year

When it comes time to write the autobiography of Charles Chaplin, "king of laughmakers," the world is going to read a romance of real life, the like of which is seldom found among the covers of a novel. Just now Charlie Chaplin is riding on the very crest of public opinion. His name is a byword to millions of men, women and children wherever motion pictures are shown. Today Chaplin is the highest paid actor in the world, the annual salary of $670,000 paid him by the Mutual Film Corporation being without precedent in either theatrical or film history.

But it was only a few short years ago that Chaplin, then a knockabout comedian with a travelling company, was earning the meagre salary of $20 a week. Later, when he came to America, this was increased to $50 a week. However, while on the stage, his salary never ran higher than $100 for seven days' work.

Chaplin's rise to fame and fortune is a striking illustration of the calibre of the man. Adversity, and he has had his share of it, never acted as a detriment in preventing Chaplin from carrying out his ambition of some day getting to the top of the profession. "I determined that I wouldn't reof affluence and social standing have temporarily abandoned positions of ease in order to experiment with the 'other side of life.' But they have always had the knowledge that when the time came they could go back to their riches and comforts without trouble. Naturally these men, in their investigation of the lower strata of life, have been tempered with a degree of cheerfulness throughout that could never exist in a beggar to whom the entire outlook was a stern reality."

Chaplin has been up against it many times. And the prospects were always mighty gloomy for as far as the future was concerned. "When you are dead up against it, and you don't know where your next meal is coming from, that is the time when you know what it is to be fighting the battle of life we so often read about in the newspapers and magazines. A man's period of wealth will always remain before him as in a nightmare. It has always been so with me. And it probably always will be. Even today I still have that eternal feeling of the man who has won a race in which he thought he could do nothing but lose."

"Many of my friends have frequently remarked that while a likeable fellow personally, I am, nevertheless, utterly surprised at my success, such as it is. It is not that I am surprised; it is simply the mark that my terrible early struggles have left upon my mind."

"It is funny," he added, "in perfectly good humor, that whenever a man is in public eye, either in politics, in sports, in theatricals or in the world of art or literature his private life comes in for a lot of criticism, much of it is just, but most of it is unjust."

"Since I first attained some measure of popularity I have been subjected to considerable criticism, the chief objection being that I was considerable of a 'rounder.' Chaplin, as a matter of fact, is one of the cleanest and quietest men in the world. The Mutual comedian, however, lays no claim to being perfection personified, but he believes that some credit is due him for holding a level head above water despite the popularity that is his today."

Swelled Head Unknown
"Lots of fellows I know," he continued, "would have gone off at an awful angle if they had been waiting to fuss over them. But I always keep saying to myself, 'Hold your head, old man; hold your head' and I have never allowed public opinion to run away with me. And I have found it to be an exceptionally good recipe for what is generally termed as a swelled head."

"Nevertheless, no one appreciates more than I do the favor with which the public is daily receiving my efforts to amuse them, small as they are. It would be poor attitude of the public if I were to fritter away the very accomplishments for which they have elected me to my present position. That's why I keep my head on myself, so to speak, and don't let the people's gratitude run away with me."

"My constitution isn't a wonderful one by any means, and if I were to 'break out' once in a while I am quite sure I wouldn't be fit to claim the big salary the Mutual Film Corporation is paying me for my work. It would be much easier on a man, and he doesn't get anywhere in the end."

Speaking of contrast between his present day affairs and the days of his youth, Chaplin declared:

"They were many and not far between. I remember the first job I ever had. My employer hardly paid me a salary. Nevertheless I was glad to do the work because, as my mother would say, I was keeping out

It is scarcely sufficient to warrant the German people in believing that their anticipations are any more likely to be fulfilled. They may continue to worry us, but their aim is as easily met as before by patience and self-denial. Even if they got back to the worst figures of April, they could not interfere with the effective prosecution of the war.

"When the readjustments are made, it will be seen that the losses in the larger classes have increased by weeks. Only twice before has the weeks return shown a heavier figure in ships over 1,600 tons, and that was in the weeks of April 22, and 29, when the figures were 41 and 39."

"In spite of the unsatisfactory character of the present return, there are indications that the menace is being met. Not the least among these is the offensive against the submarine lairs on the Belgian coast. From Zebrugg and Ostend many submarines, especially mine layers, have put out from these ports and these attacks should go a long way toward baffling the enemy. It has been pointed out, however, that in order to tackle these places effectively military co-operation is necessary. It may be fairly claimed that the threat of the victory at Messines was not without influence in clearing the German coast of Ostend."

"The figures published by the French and Italian naval authorities corroborate these figures in regard to the comparatively small number of ships sunk and the larger number which escaped U-boat attacks."

THE COURIER

Published by The Brantford Courier Limited, every afternoon, at Dalhousie Street, Brantford, Canada. Subscription rate: By carrier, $4 a year; by mail to British possessions and the United States, $5 per annum.

Friday, June 15th, 1917.

THE SITUATION

The Germans have commenced another withdrawal, this time in the vicinity of Messines Ridge. They made repeated but unsuccessful attempts to recapture the positions taken, and having failed, Hindenburg has evidently decided that it would be the better plan to fall back rather than suffer from the menace of the domination of said ridge by the Allies.

Some of the London papers are indulging in severe criticism with regard to the fact that hostile airplanes were recently able to get over a part of London in broad daylight without any apparent attempt to distract their progress.

The people of Ontario had a pretty severe experience last year with reference not only to the lack, but also the supply of coal, and matters do not present any much better prospect for next winter.

One of the remedies suggested has been municipal yards, but the Mayor of Toronto, who has just returned from a visit to the States in the matter, reports against that idea.

It is announced that the Allies are about to ask the provisional government of Russia in good set terms for a distinct definition of its position, especially with regard to German intrigues.

In the States, the tremendous "Liberty Loan" for $2,000,000,000 has been over subscribed by probably four hundred million dollars.

Fort Salih has been taken from the Turks by the British. It is situated on the east shore of the Red Sea, and its capture is said to have been made for the purpose of making flanking operations against a Turkish force to the north of Aden.

There can be no mistaking the tenor or the intent of the resolution passed at the Brantford public meeting on behalf of the immediate enforcement of the proposed military enactment.

The speakers and auditors from a political standpoint, were about equally divided, but what do politics amount to in the present great need for Empire backing and Empire service? The continued liberties of all the free peoples of the world are at stake, and the fortunes of this or that politician, or any group of politicians, are as nothing in the balance.

It is safe to affirm that the views so heartily endorsed at the gathering in the Armories, are those of a vast majority of the people of this Dominion outside of those in Quebec.

The intimation comes from certain quarters that they must be placated and handled gently. In the opinion of this paper, there has been far too much of that already. Why should they be cajoled and pussy footed, when the outcome concerns their own great liberty under the British flag just as much as it does the rest of us.

COUNTY COURT.

The jury cases in the county court have now all been disposed of and the members of the jury are back at their various occupations, whereas some, especially farmers, are urgently needed. One case, Elliott v. Keenan, was disposed of yesterday afternoon by His Honor Judge Harris. The plaintiff, who resides in Vanessa, had sold some lumber to the defendant in Owen Sound, and the dispute arose out of the transaction. Judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff. This morning the Bartle v. Morice case received a hearing.

STREET OILING.

Ald. J. W. English, chairman of the Board of Works states that the oiling of the city streets is progressing quite satisfactorily, and that a systematic method is being adopted this year. The supply continues to arrive in steady consignments and the city is being covered district by district in succession, with distributing centers located on the railroads in different parts of the city, to save unnecessary hauling and the consequent expense. He declared this morning that it was quite probable that as regards labor, the expenses this year would be lighter than ever before.

MATTY KILROY WAS ONCE WONDERFUL LITTLE SOUTHPAW

Back in the Eighties, Irish Youth Was Rated as Best Going—Pitched 72 Games in One Season and Was Great Favorite

MATTY KILROY'S COMPLETE RECORD. Table with columns: Year, Club, G., B.H., R., B.B., S.O., W., L., Ave.

Two seasons 357 2940 1752 800 1561 198 149. .571 Played independent ball in 1896-97.

How many of the old-time fans can recall Kilroy—Matty Kilroy, the brilliant little southpaw hurler who radiated in the high circles of baseball during the '80's? Back in the golden, golden days, in the halcyon days of the old National League and American Association, when star players were not so prolific as they are to-day; when there was more romance, more hero worshiping and ball players were more picturesquely than to-day did this Irish youth break into the select circles of baseball and flourished like a green bay tree. In a remarkably short time Kilroy was absorbing more than the usual amount of adulation and limelight and his sensational pitching warranted every bit of it.

Let the young Messrs Schupp, Ruth, Cullop, Koob and Leonard sit up and take notice of this story about a real live southpaw hurler who pitched 72 games of baseball in one season and still lives to tell the tale. It was in 1886, when Matt Kilroy was the star hurler of the Baltimore club of the American Association, that he pitched 630 innings. The above mentioned number of innings pitched in 1877, among the bunch, about one-third more than this lone little Irish lad did. To prove that it was no flash in the pan and he really meant business, Kilroy pitched 69 games of regulation length in the following season under the four-strike rule and foul hits and tips didn't count as strikes either. The pitchers of those days really pitched more balls per game than the hurler of to-day.

REGULAR BEAVER FOR WORK. Matty Kilroy was a regular beaver for work; he never loafed for a moment. When the umpire called "Play Ball!" the little whirlwind was right up on his toes and in the game every minute, for Kilroy, from his toe plate to his cap, was every inch a ballplayer. For a pitcher of the phenomenal type, Matt Kilroy was a rare fielder and watcher of bases. Perhaps no hurler in the history of the game had anything on him when it came to nipping runners who dared to leave their respective bases an inch beyond the safety zone. Joemess Galvin, famous pitcher of the Buffalo and Pittsburg teams, was conceded to be the greatest artist in this respect, and no pitcher has ever supplanted him as a watcher of bases. Kilroy, and the fact that Matty was left-handed gave him the shade over Galvin.

The baseball fans of New York will never forget the great Mathewson. Providence will always remember King Radbourne. The followers of the game in Chicago will retain in their memories, as long as baseball is played, will never forget Matty Kilroy, the fiery little Irish lad who performed such wonderful feats in the pitcher's position for old Baltimore when it was the live member of the American Association and when that body was a major organization.

No such hurler has appeared in baseball since—the game has had only one Gilroy and he was in a class by himself. George Sisler, the wonderful ballplayer and hurler of the St. Louis Browns in many ways resembles Kilroy. The curves that Sisler sends through are not unlike the stuff that Matty Kilroy used years ago, and especially his down-shoot. A host of clever young southpaws to-day are using the same stuff that Kilroy had a quarter of a century ago and therein lies the secret of Matty Kilroy's astonishing success away back when the game was young. Kilroy had nothing but what the left-handers of to-day have, but he had it first. When these deliveries were new for the

The following are the selections made for the season: June 16—Mrs. Heyd, Mrs. Turnbull, Mrs. Mabon, Mrs. Morton Paterson, Mrs. Fred Poppewell, Miss Wisner, Miss A. Burt, Miss J. Burt. June 23—Mrs. Marquis, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. D. S. Large, Mrs. Keene, Miss Large, Miss Oldham, Misses D. and F. Leeming. June 30—Mrs. W. F. Cocksbutt, Mrs. A. D. Duncan, Mrs. G. Palmer, Mrs. Hartley, Miss L. Hartley, Miss E. James. July 14—Mrs. Wade, Mrs. Laing, Mrs. C. C. Fairchild, Miss Shannon, Miss Jones, Miss Scarfe, Miss Hart, Miss Francis Leeming. opposing batsmen were held to four runs or less. Kilroy record of pitching three one-hit games and a hitless game in one season, is the best performance of its kind, even surpassing Grover Alexander's mark in 1915 of hurling four one-hit games. He pitched his Best in 1887. Kilroy pitched his best ball in 1887, when taking it from the viewpoint of games won. With the severe handicap placed on the hurler that season the sensational Kilroy pitched a double-header and was the second hurler in the history of the game to pull off the stunt. It was against the Athletics and took place on October 1, Kilroy won the first game 5 to 4, and the second won out by a score of 8 to 1. It was in 1889 that Kilroy had his last great season; it was his last appearance in the pitching line. With the Brotherhood team of Boston the little whirlwind began to show signs of slipping. The wonderful arm was losing its fire and strength; the baffling curves were gradually losing the deceptive break that had made them famous.

After the collapse of the Players' league the little wonder pitched for various teams and wound up his sensational career with the Chicago Nationals in 1898. In some respects Matty Kilroy was the greatest southpaw of his day. Considering his skill as a pitcher, his endurance, nerve and ability as an all-round player, a combination of sterling qualities not always found in a left-hander. HANDS OFF THE THRONE

By Horatio Bottomley, Editor John Bull. I am neither fawning courtier nor servile sycophant—but I honor the King. To say that I do so because of his personal virtues would be an impertinence. To place him on a pinnacle of individual superiority over and above his fellow men would be time-serving hypocrisy. I loved King Edward because he was just one of ourselves, and I doubt not that King George makes no claim to be, except by heredity, anything more. But I honor my King because he is my King. Just that. Very conventional, you think. Let us see.

What would you put in place of the King? Answer me that. Would you like periodical presidential elections, with all the attendant political chicanery and hunt for office, which would not be France and we are not America. We are an old easy-going people—with a temperament all our own. And we want a symbol, an emblem, a rallying point, an outlet for our latent patriotism—our pride of Empire. We are, in reality, the greatest republic in the world—but we prefer an hereditary President. As I pointed out before, that would be a head—a centre of the social life of the nation—a fountain of honor; and let it be said in justice to his Majesty, that nobody can raise the finger of derision against any of his Honours Lists. Yes, I am for a King. So much for the abstract.

Still, in the upheaval of this war, the Throne has become exposed to an undercurrent of criticism, and even a real danger. We want a restoration of the social life of the nation—a fountain of honor; and let it be said in justice to his Majesty, that nobody can raise the finger of derision against any of his Honours Lists. Yes, I am for a King. So much for the abstract.

But leaving that general proposition aside let me come to the circumstances of the day. I will speak plainly. Better by far to have frank discussion in the open than sly insinuation in the corners. No one denies the patent fact that the Sovereign of the British Empire has German blood in his veins. As a loyal supporter of the Throne, I have no hesitation in setting down this historic circumstance in black and white; and as a British citizen I wish frankly, but respectfully, that I wish it were otherwise. If I were a German subject I should probably have to do so in a more guarded manner. The Kaiser's mother was an English princess; whilst under some republics, I certainly should not be permitted to make free with the pedigree of the President. In I write with a reasonable assurance of eating to-morrow's breakfast in freedom and comfort. Constitutional Kingship has no terrors for free citizens. As the most casual student of history knows it is the bulwark of their liberties—the warrant of their civil rights.

This wretched whispering about the Teutonic pedigree of the House of Brunswick is repugnant to the spirit of honest men. By its means, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The father of King George was the finest type of an English gentleman who ever shot a covert or rode to the hounds—the true King of the whole race, who has suffered an instant of oppression through the action of influence of the Crown; whilst to millions it is the symbol of a benign power that has brought light out of darkness and rekindled the star of hope. Let other nations shape their destiny as they please. Our choice is made. Long live the King.

COLLEGE SHOE BOTH PHONES, 122 COLBORNE

CONSCRIPTION ENDORSED BY MASS MEETING OF CITIZENS

Gathering in Armories Last Evening Called For Compulsory Service to Raise Canada's Forces to Half Million Mark; The Government Memorialized

Whereas the Dominion of Canada has been engaged in war for nearly three years and it is our fixed determination to continue the war until it is brought to a conclusion by victory, and whereas it has been clearly demonstrated that the system of voluntary enlistment is inadequate, besides involving the waste of time and money,

And whereas under our present system of government, our citizens enjoy equal rights and equal privileges, it appears as a logical sequence that the defence of these rights and privileges should be equally borne by all citizens and not devolve upon the willing and self-sacrificing minority,

Therefore, be it resolved that we, the citizens of Brantford, in mass meeting assembled, do respectfully urge that such laws be enacted and enforced without delay as would make available for the conflict the full man-power of the Dominion in order that our Canadian Expeditionary Force be brought up to and maintained at the five hundred thousand men promised.

And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the proper authorities at Ottawa.

Enthusiastic, determined, unflinching, the citizenry of Brantford last evening rallied behind the banners of the Canadian Government in the passing of the above resolution, endorsing the policy of compulsory service to be introduced at once. A representative gathering of large if not tremendous proportions, assembled at the mass meeting in the armories, the motion was passed unanimously and with evident approval from all sources alike, applause being frequent during the evening as one after another of the speakers laid forth powerful arguments in favor of conscription. The only interruption from the audience came at the close of the evening, when Mr. I. S. Armstrong voiced the opinion that on Quebec should be laid the onus of the measure which it had brought upon Canada.

His Worship Mayor Bowby, in opening the meeting, declared himself in whole hearted and absolute sympathy with any measure for the preservation and conservation of the liberty of the world.

Mr. J. H. Spence, Chairman of the Brant Recruiting League, regretted a failure on the part of many to realize the seriousness of the present situation. A spirit of apathy had spread through the Dominion, necessitating some means other than voluntary recruiting to support the men at the front. Expressing hearty approval of the measure, he regretted only that it had not been introduced many months ago.

Magistrate W. C. Livingston declaring himself in whole-hearted sympathy with the motion, introduced the resolution given above. In moving the resolution, Magistrate Livingston did not speak as a father alone, with four sons at the front, one never to return, but rather as a Canadian, a member of the British Empire, whose national existence was threatened. When Britain was at war, Canada was at war; our promise of five hundred thousand men still lacked over one-fifth of that sum to completion.

"All honor to those who have come forward voluntarily," declared the speaker, "as well as to all who have sought to enlist and failed. We are still short a hundred thousand men, and it seems to me that every effort spent in recruiting at the present time is dead. I am glad that Ottawa now sees the problem in its true light, for the issue is one of great gravity. Personally, the speaker favored conscription of everything to win the war; he believed conscription the only thing possible; not an edifying thing, but a necessary, for other parts of Canada had not responded to the call as promptly and in as adequate measure as Brant County."

Capt. A. H. Boddy, President of the Great War Veterans' Association, delivered a few words on behalf of the returned soldier, some 175 of this class being at present in Brantford, and not opposing conscription. These men, with their own experiences at the front, should be the most competent judges of the matter, and unanimously they called for conscription as the only course since the failure of the voluntary system.

Capt. Boddy seconded the resolution introduced by Mr. Livingston. A standing vote showed the resolution carried unanimously, amidst considerable applause.

Capt. J. R. Cornelius, invalidated home from the front, favored conscription, to save the honor of the empire, the honor of the Dominion of Canada, the honor of Brantford, and of the men who have left this city never to return. He challenged the fairness of a system which allowed one young man to make the supreme sacrifice at the front, while another skulked at home. He hoped for the passing of conscription.

G. W. Broomfield, late of the 58th battalion, wished on the present occasion to weave language of shrapnel and high explosives, to jam into the heads of all, the fact that the empire is at war with the most unscrupulous adversary the world had ever known. The perils of militarism he held up to all as a lesson to be learned. What German conquest would mean; the fate of Canada, and the British Empire would be worse than that of Belgium. To pacifists and Socialists, he cited the example of the German Socialists, who had offered their services to the government, but had not been accepted, had long been an opponent of war, militarism and compulsory service, which he regarded as incompatible for any settled democracy. Yet an emergency might arise in the life of a democracy demanding conscription, and to-day he believed such an emergency to have arisen. The situation before us required upon behalf of Canada's democracy, conscription as a reinforcement to the falling volunteer system. Our democracy was in danger at the present moment, the liberty of the world being in the balance, and without the rallying of Canada's men the speaker doubted if the war could be won.

"For my part," he declared, "I prefer the silken bonds of selective draft to the galling iron yoke of German domination. We subscribe to the spirit of conscription in order to sustain the principles of freedom and equality."

He expressed a wish for the workmen of Brantford to endorse conscription, whereby for two years and six months men had been taken, who should have stayed at home, and men should have stayed who should have been taken. Every effort had been put forth in aid of the voluntary system, but the waste involved was tremendous, and could be systematically eliminated by the selective system. With such great issues in the world's life at stake in the war, we should be prepared to sink our spirit of independence sufficiently to give of our manhood to stand for the liberty of the world.

The speaker appealed to all present for co-operation and union in support of the measure, the sinking of individual view points and the fair, equitable and judicious execution of the conscript draft.

Mr. Frank Cockshutt, rose to express his approval of the resolution passed by the meeting, considering the situation sufficiently grave to warrant the enforcement of conscription, in this manner only could the empire be sustained, and to maintain her honor Canada must send forward men to support those of her sons now at the front.

Mr. Cockshutt touched upon the problem of Quebec, whose attitude must cause the government considerable embarrassment. He did not favor any criticism of the attitude of a sister province, appealing for fairness and avoidance of a racial or religious division, in order to maintain harmony at home while the war is being carried through the bitter end with the devotion of our every means and resource.

Mr. W. S. Brewster, K.C., was heartily in favor of conscription, urged that no thought be given the past, but that all support be given the government at the present time. The voluntary system had been unfair, and conscription was essential to Canada's continuance in the war. The speaker considered that those who remained at home were making little or no sacrifices, and should be united in support of those at the front. He did not desire a referendum on the subject of conscription, any more than a referendum had been taken to decide Canada's entry into the war. As a member of the Anglo-Saxon races of the world, with whom rested the winning of the war, it behooved Canada to rally to the call of the government, unanimous for conscription of men, and if necessary of wealth also. The duty of all, as British and Canadian citizens, was to create a favorable sentiment toward conscription and to secure support for it.

Mr. C. Cook recalled the words of Sir Wm. Robertson that the German army at the present time, due to thorough mobilization and organization, was at the moment about a million stronger than at any time previous in the war. Similar organization was essential in Canada, and the speaker, once an opponent of conscription, considered that we should submit to the measure and strive to popularize a system which placed all men upon a basis of equality.

Mr. J. J. Hurley dwelt upon the change of feeling wrought on the subject of conscription by two years of war, during which our democracy was in peril, and an equality of fighting and responsibility was essential. The boys who had gone voluntarily to the front had covered the country with an imperishable glory, and conscription at the present time would cast no stigma upon the Dominion. As we stood for liberty and justice, so we would stand for conscription now that it might in future be banished forever from the earth. The test was to be performed, and we must perform it, must stand by the British Empire, the greatest democracy in the world. The speaker appealed for a sinking of all party issues and individual issues, and for support of the Government in its conscription measure.

Mr. G. Raymond in view of the fact that no opposition to conscription had been voiced at the meeting, there must be little opposition in the city. Having heard the opinions expressed from many points of view, the speaker had been most impressed by the words of the Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, whose change of heart upon the subject of conscription he considered typical of the change of heart of the entire Dominion.

Conscription must be understood in a new meaning; no longer an order from the Throne, but a law of self-defense on the part of our free voluntary services and our conscripts. Our patriots are out nightly but seldom encounter the enemy. Occasionally, when on the southern part of the front they penetrate the German line, they find it very lightly held. More and more the enemy's troops are taking to deep dugouts in the hope of lessening their casualties from our artillery fire. For the safeguarding of their front line they trust largely in their machine gun sections. These are not always located in the concrete emplacements which form a part of all the enemy's defensive system. German machine gunners frequently take up positions behind hedges, in shell holes, in front of or behind trenches and other places difficult to locate. Their regular concrete emplacements are thus unused and sometimes are not located by our observers until brought into use to ward off an attack in force. Almost as much of the unceasing activity of our guns is devoted to harrying the German machine gun positions and suspected locations as to replying to the hostile batteries.

Our aeroplane ascendancy, which was threatened during the early spring, is now fully assured on this sector, and as I understand, all along the front, by the free use of the British battle triplane and the new scout, which is even faster. Aviators tell me the enemy now frequently declines an action, even when in greatly superior numbers. The result of our restored supremacy is a growing inaccuracy of the enemy artillery fire, and a lessening of his bombing incursions, which are now hurried and futile.

The weather is sunny with a cool breeze. The health and spirits of the men are excellent.

ENEMY BURROWS INTO THE GROUND
Canadian Patrols, Out Nightly, Seldom Encounter German Forces
ARE DRIVEN TO COVER
Take Refuge in Deep Dug-out in Rear of Their Lines
By Stewart Lyon.
Canadian Press Correspondent With the Canadian Forces.

Canadian Headquarters in France, June 15.—The centre of interest has shifted to the north. Here the official reports record the situation as normal. Our patrols are out nightly but seldom encounter the enemy. Occasionally, when on the southern part of the front they penetrate the German line, they find it very lightly held. More and more the enemy's troops are taking to deep dugouts in the hope of lessening their casualties from our artillery fire. For the safeguarding of their front line they trust largely in their machine gun sections. These are not always located in the concrete emplacements which form a part of all the enemy's defensive system. Their regular concrete emplacements are thus unused and sometimes are not located by our observers until brought into use to ward off an attack in force. BRITISH CAPTURE FORT ON RED SEA
Fort Saliff Falls to Bombardment of British Warships
London, June 15.—Fort Saliff, on the east shore of the Red Sea, has been captured by British warships. It was officially announced last evening. The announcement says: "The commander-in-chief in the East Indies reports that Tuesday morning his Majesty's ships under his command captured the fort at Saliff after a resistance of three hours. "The fort is situated on the eastern shore of the Red Sea in the Kamaran anchorage, 130 miles north of Perim, between Lohaiya and Hodeida. "Ninety-four prisoners, three machine guns and two mountain guns and military stores, camels and the harbor plant were captured. "One Britisher was killed."
Fort Saliff is on Kamaran Bay, in Yemen province, south-western Arabia. Large rock salt works are located there. The captured fort lies about 175 miles north of the Gulf of Aden. A force of Turks to the north of Aden has been long in the way of the British in attempts they have made to advance from that city. The purpose of the seizure of Fort Saliff may be in facilitation of a movement to work in behind this force and capture or disperse it.

THE CAPTURE OF VIMY RIDGE

As Told by the Canadian War Records Office.

The following vivid story of the capture of Vimy Ridge by the Canadians is issued by the Canadian War Records Office.

Again the Canadians have acquired merit. In the capture of Vimy Ridge on April 9th, as in the lesser action of Courcellette in September of that year, they have shown the same high qualities in victorious advance as they displayed in early days in desperate resistance on many stricken fields.

Preparations for Easter Monday's attack had been extensive and thorough. The actual infantry assault and final deluge of shells were but the logical irresistible conclusion of an offensive which has been maintained against Vimy Ridge for months by the Canadian Corps.

The tactical importance of this position, always great, had increased recently to a marked extent owing to the withdrawal of the enemy before the third army to the South.

Launching the Attack.

At half past five on Monday morning, April 9th, the great attack was launched with terrible fire from our massed artillery and from many field guns in hidden advanced positions. Our "heavies" bombarded the enemy position on and beyond the Ridge; and trenches, dugouts, emplacements and roads which for long had been kept in continual state of disrepair by our fire were now smashed to uselessness. An intense barrage of shrapnel from our field guns, strengthened by the indirect fire of hundreds of machine guns, was laid along the front.

At the same moment the Canadian troops advanced in line, in these waves of attack.

Flurries of snow drifted over the battlefield as the Canadians left their jumping-off trenches behind the rolling barrage. The light was sufficient for manoeuvring purposes and yet obscure enough to obstruct the range of vision and lessen the accuracy of fire of the German riflemen and machine gunners.

The first stage of the advance was made over ground indescribably pitted and tangled with obstacles of all sorts—with great mine craters, many of which were impassable; with thousands of shell-holes which had turned the whole field into a vast puddle of mud; with crumbled trenches and coils of hedges of torn entanglements of barbed wire. But over this difficult ground, over and around craters and clinging tangles, into and under the fire of the enemy, the long lines of heavy-laden infantry moved forward unbroken on the fringe of our rolling curtain of shrapnel fire.

A Strong Opposition

The troops on the extreme left made a start under conditions as favorable as those in the centre and right, but they were soon confronted by a strong and constantly strengthening opposition. The advance of these troops was soon checked between the first and second lines of objectives by heavy fighting, which was more formidable against the flanks. A dip in the ground caused a change of direction, which swung these troops off their central objectives. They reached their goals on the flanks only to find themselves subjected to heavy, close-range fire of machine guns and rifles. To be entangled in the centre, into the north was had enough; but to add to the situation caves of a tunnel in the hostile line over which we had already advanced now disgorged Germans, who promptly re-occupied their old front and opened fire on our rear. The enemy at these points fought with unusual vigor and resolution.

These troops on the extreme left fought all day against the surrounding Hun, and by 10 o'clock at night succeeded in disposing of the enemy in their rear and capturing the major portion of the enemy trenches in their centre. The Pimple in the north still remained to the enemy, but by then snow was falling heavily, and it was wisely decided to consolidate the hard-won gains and prepare for a counter-attack rather than to undertake a further assault that night.

The Pimple would keep for the moment.

Casualties and Prisoners

In the meantime the other troops fought forward to one line after another without serious check, but with many brisk encounters and not without casualties. Most of these were the result of shrapnel fire, only a small percentage were fatal, and the majority of the wounds were of a minor character.

From the fall of the first man hit our battalion stretcher-bearers and every grade of unit of the Canadian Army Medical Corps were on the alert. The work of the officers and men of the "Twining Serpent" was one of the splendid outstanding achievements of this great day. On the German second line the troops drew breath and consolidated their gains. Our barrage was laid before them a steady wall. Fresh troops came up and deployed into position. They waited for the barrage to lift at the ordained minute and lead them on. The enemy's artillery fire—their counter-barrage and bombardment of our gun positions—was not strong as strength in such things is considered to-day.

Prisoners were already hurrying to our rear in hundreds, pathetically and often ludicrously grateful to the fortunes of war that had saved them alive for capture. They surrendered promptly and willingly.

The barrage lifted and the two divisions on the right followed it forward to the German third line. Here again they paused for a time, then advanced again behind the ever-ready and unslackening barrage for a distance of 1,200 yards. This advance included covered and captured several villages, Hill 140, a number of fortified woods and several trenches and belts of wire.

And still the enemy surrendered by hundreds and scattered rearward to safety. Their resistance grew feeble, their hands more eager to relinquish their weapons and ascend high above their heads at each stage of our advance.

At ten o'clock snow fell heavily from black clouds sweeping low across the ridge. Half an hour later the snow ceased, the clouds thinned and the sun shone fitfully over the shattered and clamorous battlefield.

Word was received at the advanced headquarters that the British division on our immediate right was enjoying a degree of success in its operations equal to the Canadian success.

Events continued to develop with rapidity and precision.

By one o'clock every point in the enemy's third line of our objectives had been reached and secured. By this time the troops from the right had consolidated their gains and advanced strong patrols. From their new positions they commanded a wide view of enemy territory to the Eastward. They reported a massing of Germans on a road in the new field of vision, and our heavy guns immediately dealt with the matter.

By noon one of the battalions of a division had received and dealt drastically with three counter-attacks. Its front remained unshaken. Shortly after this the Canadian Corps was able to state that the prisoners already to hand numbered three battalions, commanders, other officers, and more than 2,000 non-coms. and men, with plenty more in sight making for our cages as fast as their legs could carry them.

A New Countryside.

The final stage of the attack of the troops on the front was now made. They passed through the wide belts of enemy wire which fringed the plateau by way of the wide gaps torn by our heavy artillery at fixed intervals. So they issued on the Eastern slopes of Vimy Ridge—the first allied troops to look down upon the level plains of Douai since the German occupation in 1914. They saw the villages of Farbus, Vimy and Petit Vimy at their feet, and beyond those the hamlets of Willerval, Bailloul, Oppy and Mericourt. From that distance the little clusters of houses and gardens showed nothing of the devastation and ruthless occupation they had known so long.

and the wide and quiet fields displayed no scar of battle.

The hearts of the Canadians were lifted by this sight. In this sudden widening of the horizon they felt and saw the fruits of their victory. Something of the fatigue of the long strain of the day's perilous action slips away from them. The sight of a new countryside did them more good than the sight of dead Germans, prisoners and captured guns; but they pressed on to Farbus, wood and forest wood for all that, and possessed themselves of several hostile batteries and much ammunition. By an early hour of the afternoon all our objectives, save those of the left of the attack, were in our possession, and the task of consolidating and strengthening our gains was well in hand. During the afternoon and evening many reports were received from various units of the massing of large forces of the enemy here and there, and the delivery counter-attacks; but, thanks to the alertness of our infantry, the energy of our artillery, and the discretion of the enemy, these counter-attacks did not materialize.

Throughout the day the most courageous and devoted co-operation was rendered to the Canadian Corps by a brigade and a squadron of the Royal Flying Corps.

The night was clear and lit by a full moon, and the work of patrols, carrying parcels, and sorting parties went on without interruption.

The night saw all of Vimy Ridge, with the exception of a few trenches on the Hill 145, secure in Canadian hands.

And so the first day of the greatest of Canadian advances came to a successful and glorious close.

Later Attacks.

Since April 9 the full advantages of the first day's victory have been realized. Much progress has been made, and our line has been advanced along the whole front to an average depth of 4,000 yards, mainly as a result of skilful patrol fighting. Much hard work has been entailed in the consolidation of the captured positions, and a severe strain on our troops. The roads are our chief problem, and it is further proof of the unparalleled triumph of our artillery that it can be found by an inspection of the roads which were once behind the enemy lines.

On April 10 Canadians again attacked on the northern slopes of the ridge. The position was one of great strength, embracing the southwestern outskirts of Givenchy, La Folle wood, and a most intricate system of trenches and bunkers surrounding Hill 145. The conditions were all in favor of the defenders, as continual shelling and heavy rain had turned the ground into a quagmire. Desperate fighting had taken place throughout the whole of the preceding day and night, and though we had made good progress the enemy still retained a strong foothold in the stronghold. The attack was entirely successful, and completed the capture of our final objectives along the whole front of 7,000 yards.

During the afternoon large bodies of Germans were seen in the open, and it became evident that the enemy was concentrating for a counter-attack against the left flank of our new position. The attempt was, however, completely frustrated by our artillery, who, in taking full advantage of the excellent facilities for observing across the Douai plain from our new position, scattered the enemy and inflicted heavy casualties.

On April 11th there were no serious infantry engagements. Our patrols were active throughout the day, pushing forward along the whole front, and gaining ground at practically no cost. Those batteries which the enemy had been able to withdraw were very active, but wide gaps torn by our heavy artillery to direct observation and suffered severely at the hands of our own gunners.

It had now been decided to enlarge the scope of the operations to include the Pimple, a commanding position of great strength on the extreme North of Vimy Ridge, similar in many respects to Hill 145. The attack was carried out at 5 a.m. on April 12th, in the midst of a snow-storm and over most difficult ground in a manner beyond all praise. In this attack the enemy suffered very heavily, leaving many dead on the battlefield, and in addition we took over 200 prisoners, together with numerous machine-guns and trench mortars.

The blow was a severe one for the enemy, as it gained for us the whole ridge from the Souches to the Scarpe and shattered the enemy's last hopes of being able to regain the lost ground by a counter-attack.

The Fruits of Victory

The full fruits of our victory took shape and form on April 13th. It was clear that the enemy's new line at the foot of the Eastern slopes of the ridge would soon become untenable. Our observers had reported fires and explosions in towns behind the enemy lines, and there were indications that a retreat was imminent. This was soon confirmed by our scouts, who acted with considerable skill and determination. Patrols were pushed forward all along the line; in many places the enemy had succeeded in leaving under cover of darkness, in others small, rear-guard units were encountered and destroyed. By night-fall our line had been extended to beyond the Vimy-Arras railway and the villages of Willerval, Farbus, Vimy, Petit Vimy, La Folle wood, and Givenchy were in our hands. Our captures had increased to over 4,000 prisoners, more than forty guns and a large quantity of machine-guns, trench mortars and material of all kinds. This was no prepared withdrawal, but a disorderly retreat. The enemy had no time to remove his guns and to destroy everything of value in the village. Several thousand rounds of am-

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters. Jimmie Hallett, a young American is wandering in a London fog, when a girl running by suddenly thrusts a bundle of papers into his hand and, bidding him run, dashes off; a moment later a man rushes by in pursuit. The bundle proves to contain a number of canceled checks, drawn by one J. E. Greye-Stratton. Hallett goes to the address given, where he is received by a man who says he is a doctor, but who, as soon as Jimmie enters knocks him senseless. When Hallett awakes, he finds himself alone with the body of a murdered man. Though weak, he gets to the phone and calls up Weir Menzies, chief detective-inspector of Scotland Yard, to whom he has an unprinted letter of introduction. Menzies finds that the dead man is Greye-Stratton himself, and that the bundle of checks has been stolen from him. He learns also that Greye-Stratton has a daughter who has lived always abroad, and a stepson, James Errol, a man of shady reputation, on whom suspicion falls. The next day, while at his office, the daughter, Peggy Greye-Stratton, calls on Menzies, but can or will give little information. Hallett, called in, recognizes her at once as the girl who gave him the package, but for a reason not clear to him, pretends she is a stranger to him. Later, when they leave the police-station, Jimmie takes her to lunch. She tells him that her brother, Dick Errol forged the checks; that some one else got hold of them and tried to blackmail her; she snatched the checks and ran. The trail now crosses that of a gang of notorious international crooks, led by a man named Linn and a clever woman criminal, Gwennie Lynn.

Following this lead, Menzies discovers a wedding certificate proving the marriage of Peggy Greye-Stratton to Stewart Reader Linn.

CHAPTER XIV. CINCINNATI RED.

In serene unconsciousness that he occupied any place in the thoughts of Scotland Yard men, Cincinnati Red sat cross-legged sipping a liqueur.

Of late his lines had fallen in pleasant places. He had tasted sufficiently of the hardships of this world to appreciate comfort. The furnished flat which he held in Palace Avenue by grace of a trustful landlord was a luxury which more than pleased him.

Few there were who knew Cincinnati Red's real origin or real name. He was certainly a man of education and address. In the police archives he was registered as a "con" man—which in plain English means that he was a swindler. Moreover, he was a swindler of uncommon resource and daring, who had a knowledge of every trick in the game.

He had been bunco steerer, gold-bribe man, sawdust man, long before these swindles became threadbare. He always managed to keep a head ahead of the ruck, and though he had had one or two bad falls in his time, he was probably, as he would have put it, "ahead in the game."

He might have been anything from forty to sixty. His luxuriant once auburn hair and mustache had grayed, and his ingenious, frank hazel eyes were in themselves, guarantee of integrity. He wore evening dress as though he were accustomed to it, and his manner was that of an easy-going, tolerant man of the world, who had no enemies and thousands of friends.

Now an Anglo-American millionaire with a Bohemian taste for night clubs and a cosy flat where to selected friends of wealth may be invited for no limit games of chance, has small fear of the police. It is unlikely that a man that has dropped a hundred or two over baccarat or poker will squeal to the authorities even though he suspects that something more than luck has favored his charming host.

Publicity does not appeal to him. And for any other than legal contingencies Cincinnati Red was prepared. It caused a bulge in the breast pocket of his otherwise well-fitting dress coat, but that could scarcely be avoided. There are few smaller reliable pistols than the pattern he carried.

So it was with thoughts far removed from the sordid commonplace of crime that he pressed the bell with a white forefinger and summoned his man to help him on with his overcoat. He made his way with dignity down into the street, and stopped for a moment on the curb to light his cigarette.

A couple of men sauntered toward him. The taller of the two halted as they came opposite. "Isn't your name Tomkins?" he asked.

Cincinnati finished lighting his cigarette, dropped the match and ground the light out under his heel before replying, "No, my man," he drawled, "you've made a mistake. My name is Whiffen."

He calmly ignored his questioner and held up a slim cane in his left hand for a taxi-cab. Someone gripped his right wrist, and he wheeled in wrathful surprise. As he did so his other hand was caught. He made no resistance. His attitude was one of dignified and lofty indignation.

"What is the meaning of this? Leave me alone instantly or I will call the police."

"That's all right," observed one of his captors quietly. "We are police officers ourselves. Jump in, Alf. I've got him. Now then. . . . All right driver. Scotland Yard."

It was as though they were handling a bale of goods so neatly and impersonally was the whole thing effected. Cincinnati Red had been for once taken off his guard. He was more staggered than his manner showed.

That the police should know of his presence in London was not astonishing. It was to be expected. That they should know exactly where to lay hands on him was a different thing. He thought he had covered his tracks effectually—that no one could guess that Willfred S. Whiffen, who lived unostentatiously and well at Palace Avenue was Cincinnati Red, whose record occupied a prominent place in the police registers of half-a-dozen countries.

What puzzled him still more was the mere fact that even knowing him the police should trouble to arrest him. Since his arrival in England there was nothing they could hold against him as far as he knew. He was as dead certain as he cared to be about anything that none of his victims had invoked the aid of the law.

The only reasonable supposition was that this was a sort of bluff that was intended to frighten him out of the country. He really believed that such things happened. He resolved to sit tight.

"If you people really are police of fideles," he declared, "this foolishness will cost you your positions. I may tell you I am well known in the best circles here and in New York."

His captors remained unimpressed. Cincinnati Red had been "rubbed down" before, and he recognized the touch of efficient hands. One of the officers thrust a hand into his breast pocket and produced the derringer.

"Handy little thing, Alf," he said.

"Will you answer me, my man?" said Cincinnati, accentuating every word slowly. "Am I under arrest, and if so what for? I insist on being told. You that hear me of this? He was annoyed in reality, and a vague alarm was growing in his breast.

"You keep quiet, old lad," said one of his captors, with more familiarity than was consistent with the status of Willfred S. Whiffen, whatever it might be with Cincinnati Red. "You'll learn all about it soon enough. Nobody's going to hurt you."

"That isn't the point. I insist upon knowing what all this is about. I have an appointment with Lord Windermere and—"

"He will talk," interrupted one of the officers wearily. "Say, sonny, suppose you give it a rest for five minutes. Lord Windermere will have

SIDE TALKS

THE HARDEST LESSON.

"If a string is in a knot. Patience will untie it. The two halted as Patience will do many things, did you ever try it? If I were sold in any shop I should surely buy it. But you and I must buy our own, no other can supply it."

"And when can you hear?" I asked the Lady-who-always-knows something.

She had just told me of a tremendously important letter which she knew by subsequent developments must have been lost in the mails. She had written and asked for a second letter and now she was waiting the results.

"Not for five days at the soonest," she said.

"You must be just crazy!"

"What good would that do?"

The Two Virtues One Learns With the Years.

"My dear," said the Lady-who-always-knows-something with the gentle smile, "as one grows older there are two things one learns—patience and the power to put things out of our mind in those waiting times."

I didn't quite agree with her.

Those are surely two things one ought to learn if one doesn't want to be made miserable by the inevitabilities of life, but alas they are not things "one" always does learn.

I know at least one person who finds them very difficult lessons.

Impatience is Like Hunger

Impatience is almost as primitive an instinct as hunger.

So also is the desire to worry over things when the issue is uncertain. It is only the people who really grow and develop as they grow older who detach themselves to subdue these instincts.

Of course, with age there is a certain blunting of the edge of many things—worry and pain and unhappiness and impatience and all kinds of eagerness.

But the control of an instinct is something more than its enfeeblement by age.

True patience is an active virtue not a mere dull acquiescence.

"They Also Serve."

I often say over to myself when I am trying to teach myself to wait patiently and serenely, that beautiful line from Milton's "Ode On His Blindness"—"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Theodore Parker's, "I know what the trouble is, God isn't in a hurry and I am," also helps, especially when I am impatient about existing evils.

And just the other day in some of Mark Twain's recent letters I came upon a line that both amuses and helps. He had been writing about a puzzling mix-up in some lecture dates. He was pretending to scold about it most irritably and then he ended up with a funny little flash of sunshine:

"Now let's leave this thing to Providence for twenty-four hours, you bet it will come out all right." Good advice, isn't it?

Good Night Stories

NATURE'S ORCHESTRA

Dicky saw something move in the grass. A tiny little fellow disappeared under a stone at Dicky's feet. Dicky pulled the stone away and found a wee little door standing open.

"He must have gone in there," thought Dicky, so he sat down to wait until the little fellow came out. Crowds of tiny people came from every direction and entered the doorway. Dicky wondered what could be inside and wished he was small enough to go in and see.

The crowd grew so thick that they ran over Dicky's feet in their haste to get in. Dicky placed his foot in front of the opening and it almost caused a riot among the tiny folk.

They held a consultation and one fellow ran up Dicky's leg to his ear and asked him kindly to take his foot away from the doorway.

Dicky said he would if they would take him in with them. The tiny fellow ran down and told his friends and they seemed to nod at Dicky. Then Dicky began to grow smaller and smaller until he was no larger than a tumbling bug.

"What is this place?" asked Dicky of the nearest tiny fellow.

"Dear me! Don't you know? This is our theatre," replied the tiny fellow and holding Dicky's hand they entered.

It was a great place filled with pebbles on which thousands of little people sat laughing and chatting happily. At the end a great grey curtain of spider webs hung across the stage. From behind the curtain came the soft tuning of fiddles and the piping of flutes that sounded like the drone of the bees in his mother's garden. A great green frog came forward and struck a gong with a "Turo-om, Turo-om," and the little people became very quiet.

Two black spiders ran to the centre of the stage and pulled back their curtain web. An orchestra, the like of which Dicky had never seen before, thousands and thousands of tiny bugs and insects with their instruments under their arms, took their places on the stage. First a beautiful silver harp stood on either side. These Dicky's companion told him were the harps of the wind. A queer little man-elf took his place in front of the first chair, bowing as the audience of tiny folk cheered. He raised his bow and sweet strains of music filled the air.

A band of funny bugs rushed out on the stage and Dicky laughed when he saw they were tumbling bugs and they surely could tumble around. Next came a crowd of mosquitoes all dressed in soft breeches. They danced while the bees played on their fiddles. Last of all the katy-dids and crickets joined in with the orchestra and the curtain went down amid hearty applause, for the little people enjoyed the show very much. The lights flickered and Dicky saw for the first time that they were just common fire-flies and when the performance was over they flew out the door. Dicky holding the little fellow by the hand went out the door also.

"Every evening we have a concert, but unless you are small you can't understand it," said Dicky's companion and he promised to take Dicky again some time, then he disappeared before Dicky could thank him.

Dicky thought sure he could remember which stone it was, but when he looked the next evening he couldn't find the one that hid the door to the little theatre. So Dicky sat on the porch until bedtime, listening to the chirping of the crickets as nature tuned up her orchestra.
