

NO OCCASION FOR MORE MEN

To Come to Dawson Seeking Labor

Misleading Notices Are Said to be Published and Posted in Seattle.

Late arrivals from Seattle say that when they left that city there were notices both published and posted of "2000 MEN WANTED IN DAWSON FOR RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION."

Already a large number of men, lured by misleading reports of scarcity of labor and high wages, have arrived from the outside and are now mingling with the vast army of street walkers for which Dawson is noted.

At no time during the past three or four years has there not been sufficient labor in the Klondike to build a dozen little railroads at one time, and the practice of inducing men from the outside by false representations to come here when there is little show of their ever working suffices to pay their way out of the country is little short of criminal.

The consensus of opinion in Dawson today is that but a small amount of labor will be expended in the construction of any railroad this season and that there are already ten men here for every position that it may be desired to fill.

It is said that Mr. Hawkins will be in Dawson before the end of the present month and it is possible that the work of actual railroad construction may begin at an early date, in which event there are already enough men in and around Dawson to do all the labor required.

Objectionable Matter is Stricken Out

Appointment of Receiver in Carbonneau-Letourneau Case is Confirmed.

The motion to discharge the receiver in the case of Carbonneau vs. Letourneau et al came up for argument before Mr. Justice Craig yesterday afternoon. In support of the motion counsel for defendants read the affidavits of Wilfred Tibbault, Letourneau and Bernier, the last two named being the laymen on the claim involved and the defendants in the action. It was the affidavits of Letourneau and Bernier that contained the sensational charges against C. E. Carbonneau relative to his alleged attempt to induce the affiants to "salt" the dump which was being experted by J. M. Bel, representing a French-Italian syndicate.

Against the motion plaintiffs submitted the affidavits of Baptiste, the receiver, one Nicholson, Corporal Cobb, George Logan, Norman Abbott, Dr. Wills, and Mr. and Mrs. Carbonneau, also moving to strike out from the Letourneau and Bernier affidavits that paragraph having reference to the alleged attempt at "salting."

The findings of his lordship were with the plaintiffs, the motion for the discharge of the receiver being denied. Concerning the objectionable features in the affidavits complained of his lordship said: "I think the material should be expunged from the record as being scandalous and not effecting this application." The receiver is confirmed in his appointment but is required to give security in the extent of $10,000. The court was asked if that sum deposited in the Bank of Commerce in lieu of a bond would be accepted and the reply was returned that it would. The receiver must also pay into court weekly the result of his cleanups with sworn affidavits to accompany the deposit. In case of his failure to do so an application may be made for his removal. At present the court finds no reason for the receiver's removal upon the ground of his inefficiency. Defendants are to be allowed every opportunity to be on the claim and watch the cleanups, but they must not interfere with the working of it. That portion of the record which has been ordered expunged will be so obliterated as to make it illegible.

Love Romance Ended Berlin, May 31.-The betrothal of Earl Beauchamp and Lady Lettice Grosvenor, a sister of the Duke of Westminster, dispices of a pretty romance which for years has hung around this handsome young nobleman's name. It was said that he fell in love when twenty years old with the beautiful daughter of the gatekeeper of his country mansion, Matresfield court, and pledged himself to marry her when she should be educated up to the position to which she was to be called. Since then Beauchamp has been governor of New South Wales, a position to which his inexperience brot a lamentable failure. Now he is chiefly noted for the wonderful collection of snuff boxes he has gathered at immense cost.

Promising Creeks Made More Accessible

Route From Stewart River to Duncan and Clear Creeks Shortened. The recent return of the Prospector brought news that will be welcomed by everyone having or ever expecting to have any interest in the Stewart river district. The miners, aided by the police and the T. & E. Co., have just completed a couple of trails leading from the landings on the Stewart to two of the most promising creeks which will not only greatly expedite the transportation of freight, but saves many weary miles of travel which formerly has been necessary over the old trails.

Has Struck Good Pay - All Creek and Hillside Claims Are Staked. During the past two weeks a stampede has been going on on All Gold creek, and the evidence of it was seen at the recorder's window in the gold commissioner's office this morning. W. O. Walrond, whose strike was the immediate cause of it, was taking out a certificate of work on creek claim No. 5, and expressing the opinion that he did not believe in stampedes, as for the last week or two his claim had been overrun and he could do no work and the stampede had eaten him out of house and home.

Mr. Walrond staked his claim last July 11th, when the first stampede to All Gold was on. All the creek claims were then staked but little prospecting has been done on any of them. He, however, worked on and recently struck good pay. He says bed rock is from 12 feet at the rim to 30 feet, and his deepest shaft is 22 feet, or 6 feet above bed rock. He has made $5.30 with a rocker in half a day, and his best pan is 53 cents. This is on the hill!

Some people got wind of his strike and sampled his dump, even used his rocker, and soon there were 150 to 200 men on the creek. All the claims on pup No. 4 have been staked, and all the hillside, neither of which had a stake on them before.

THE CARBONNEAU AFFIDAVITS

The fact that the affidavits charging Mr. C. E. Carbonneau with attempting to salt a claim on Gold Run creek have been peremptorily thrown out of court, lends further color to the opinion expressed in the Nugget yesterday that the affidavits were not intended to serve the purpose of the case in connection with which they were filed.

Suit has been brought by laymen on No. 12 Gold Run praying for the dismissal of the receiver now in charge of the claim. In support of their plea it has been alleged among other things that the owner attempted to induce the laymen to salt a dump on the claim. It does not require a trained legal intellect to understand that the allegations made in the affidavits are irrelevant to the case, and without bearing upon it.

There is another aspect to the case however, which the Nugget feels bound to consider, in view of the fact that the substance of the affidavits in question was first given publication in the columns of this paper. There is now in negotiation a deal for the flotation of the Chute & Wills properties of Gold Run, in which is also included No. 12. Mr. Carbonneau, owner of the latter claim, is also the representative of the French capitalists who are furnishing the money to finance the transaction.

Obviously a charge of such serious nature as that alleged in the affidavits in question would, if true, injure Mr. Carbonneau irreparably in the sight of the capitalists interested. It is gratifying, therefore, to the Nugget to be able to publish the circumstances relating to the disposition of the affidavits made by the court, and we do this the more willingly by reason of the fact, as noted above, that the allegations of the affidavits were first printed in this paper.

The Nugget is fully alive to the benefits that will accrue to the community generally from a deal of such magnitude as is involved in the flotation of the Chute & Wills properties. It means the investment of tremendous sums of money in mining and other enterprises, and doubtless will be only the first of a number of similar transactions. Whatever may have been the motive that prompted the filing of the affidavits in question, the treatment accorded them by the court effectually disposes of them.

We have dealt with this matter at some length for the reason that simple justice seemed to require it. Prominence was given to the affidavits against Mr. Carbonneau and we regard it as nothing more than what is due that gentleman to give equal prominence to the court's decision in connection with them.

It is desirable that Dawson should have ample fire protection, but it is equally desirable that the expenditures for establishing and maintaining the same be kept down to the minimum. At the present rate of expenditure it seems quite probable that the end of Dawson's first fiscal year as an incorporated city will find a considerable deficit in the city treasury. The tax levy for last year was entirely too high, but from present indications it will be increased during the coming year. The council should scrutinize all expenditures closely and keep the municipality free from debt if such a thing is possible.

Not to Go Far

Washington, May 30. — President Roosevelt has undertaken to make two trips through the country next fall. One will be in the southeast and the other in the northwest. They will be made in redemption of promises more or less specific. By the last of September he will go to Springfield, Ill., stopping en route at some other point, as yet not determined. The latter part of October he will go as far in the southwest as San Antonio.

He has been strongly urged to go on a bear hunt in Mississippi as the guest of the governor of the state, and it is possible he may accept the invitation, for he must visit New Orleans, which is near by on his trip.

A Good Opportunity.

Anyone contemplating the purchase of machinery would find it to their advantage to apply to The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Whitehorse. Besides saws, belting and engineer's supplies, they have for sale:

Smallpox on Belle Isle

St. Johns, Nfld., May 31.—The authorities were advised today that a French-Canadian fishing vessel from Quebec had entered Dradore Harbor, Strait of Belle Isle, yesterday, having smallpox on board. Although that harbor is in Canadian territory, the Newfoundland government will dispatch doctors and nurses to attend the patients on the fishing vessel, fearing that the disease may spread among the colonial fishing fleet which operates on that seaboard every summer, and the vessels of which have 2,000 persons on board.

Placer Protests

Three protest cases were this morning set for hearing in the gold commissioner's court, the first one of which is that of Edgar L. Elwell and Henry Roessel against Edward Chadwick. Plaintiff owns hillside on left limit of 34 below on Hunker and defendant owns lower half of hillside opposite and it is claimed that his survey overlaps that of plaintiff. Set for hearing on August 6th.

Joseph Vaillment against Oscar Christophersen is a protest that plaintiff staked the lower half of creek claim 22 on 60 pup, a tributary of Henderson, right limit, and applied to record at the recorder's office at Stewart the next day. His application was refused on the ground that defendant claimed to have staked the claim on September 6, 1901, and recorded on the 18th, while plaintiff protests that defendant never staked the claim and obtained the ground upon his application. Set for hearing on August 8.

G. C. Killam versus Jerry Ford, A. Wickstrom and C. F. Shoblad in a protest relative to the boundary line of hillside on upper left limit of No. 3 above lower on Dominion. Set for hearing July 17th.

Measles Among Indians

Temple keeps a trading post on Kayak island.—Valdes Prospector.

No Flowers Wanted.

London, May 31.—There will be an innovation in the decoration of the opera-house at the gala coronation performance. The singers petitioned the management against smothering the house, as on former occasions, with flowers, for the perfume affected their voices. Melba is said to be particularly susceptible in this way. The management, being at the mercy of the prima donna, who is as necessary to the performance as royalties themselves, promised to use artificial flowers, but this was objected to by the king. As a compromise only the grand tier will be decorated with real flowers, while the most remote parts of the house will be festooned with artificial ones.

More than one member of the royal family objects to the perfume of flowers. When Princess Victoria enters the royal box she always instantly removes the bouquet placed opposite her chair.

It is reported that both Mr. Tree and Mr. Wyndham are to be knighted at the coronation. No honors will meet with greater public favor, as next to Irving no actor-managers have done more for the English stage today.

Beebohm Tree's production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with Ellen Terry and Mrs. Kendal as Mrs. Page and Mrs. Ford, is awaited with extraordinary interest. It will be the first time in twenty years that either actress has played under a new management. Their personal relations are excellent.

Mr. Tree tried to secure Ada Rehan with Ellen Terry as an ideal couple for the "Merry Wives," but Miss Rehan resists all inducements to reappear on the stage.

George Edwards has abandoned his scheme for raising the price of stalls. Mr. Frohman says that the idea was given out during a conversation with a newspaper man, and there was no intention of having it taken seriously. Edwards sent out the scheme to sound the public, probably, but he never suggested to Frohman that the prices should be raised. Frohman says he thinks the prices of stalls are high enough now.

Toothpicks Tabooed

Whether or not the final course at a meal shall be toothpicks is a mooted question. Many say no, and have good reasons for their decision. A handsome woman and her young daughter entered a swell place one day recently and ordered an elegant luncheon. They were tastefully gowned and money seemed plentiful with them, and the waiter in attendance was unremitting in his attention. Finally he placed a small stand of toothpicks on the table. "Remove these instantly," said the elder woman, "it's a vulgarity I cannot tolerate. I would just as soon clean my teeth at a table as use a toothpick publicly."

"What a crank that woman was," sneered a pretty girl at a table close by. "Maybe she was something like the honest country youth who when offered a finger bowl and napkin replied, 'Thank you, but I done washed befo' I cum.'"—Louisville Times.

Of Vital Importance

The young man looked proudly at the sweet-faced girl beside him. "Dearest," he said, "I would urge you to marry me at once, but for one horrible doubt." "A doubt, Edgar? Why, what can it be?" "I will tell you, my love. You know what my salary is. You know just what our expectations are. With care we could get along nicely." "Yes, Edgar." "We could get along nicely if I could be convinced of one thing." "What is that, Edgar?" "Do you—can you—will you try to get along without beef?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WITH THE THEATRES

Side Splitting Comedy Holds the Boards

At the Auditorium While at the Orpheum Vaudeville Continues the Attraction.

The first real, genuine, mirth provoking, side splitting comedy that has been seen at the Auditorium for these many moons is a "Crazy Idea" which is being produced this week, and there should be inscribed on the bills a legend to the effect that it was constructed for laughter only.

There is not a scene nor an incident that rakes one's emotions save those which tend wholly to the agitation of the risible faculties. Of plot there can be scarcely a semblance, there is an abundance of horse play, but it produces the desired effect so what are the odds whether it be a Shakespearean comedy, one from the facile pen of Sheridan or merely a conglomeration such as Hoyt was wont to turn out every six months or so?

Tom Blane is a young medical student in Chicago who is left in charge of his uncle's handsome residence while he and his family are in the east. He becomes lonesome and concludes to take in lodgers in order to dispell the gloom. There is where his trouble begins. In his collection of curious he gets together a nervous musician who aspires to become an old master; a thoroughbred sport who is being constantly chased by his creditors; and a prima donna in a burlesque company. Last comes John Davis and his family from Kokomo, Indiana, to view the sights of the city. Pater Davis is on the shady side of 40 but still has a weakness for the fair sex; Mater Davis is a strong minded female who rules with a rod of iron and wears the family trousers. Then there is the daughter, Augusta, a wild rose who like Viola "n'er told her love but let concealment like a worm in the bud gnaw at her damask cheek."

Beautiful Gussie, with a Madonna face, a child like innocence and a openness to implicit obedience regulated only by her rotund papa. Tom of course makes love to Augusta, and her father becomes enamored of the prima donna. All sorts of topsy-turvy follow full of ludicrous incidents and most laughable scenes, the whole not being straightened out until the last act.

Mr. Sedley plays the nephew and makes love as easily as he plays the heavy villain, from which one might infer he has had oceans of experience in the real thing. Mr. Bittner is the hen-pecked husband with a predilection for pretty actresses, a part he makes much out of. Mr. Southard plays the servant, though his name seems to have been inadvertently left off the program. Mr. Lewis is the eccentric musician with ambitions, Mr. Breen the man with unpaid bills, and Mr. Layne is Tom's uncle. Miss Lovell is the country flower so deliciously naive. Miss Forrester makes a star part out of the shrewish mother and Mrs. Bittner is the prima donna with a fondness for angels with fat bank accounts.

The play goes with plenty of dash and ginger and was greatly enjoyed by the audience. The melody in the finale of the last act is a little queer, but, then, such plays generally end in a similar manner, only it seems such an incongruity to see some one is accustomed to think of only as in the leading roles of high class plays stand up like a lot of amazons in a performance. The complete cast is as follows: James Stone, Mr. Layne; Beatrice, his young wife; Miss Howard; Eva, his daughter by his first wife; Miss D'Avra; Tom Blane, his nephew (a medical student); Mr. Sedley; Gustave Puders, a composer; Julius Button, who flees from creditors; William Tussell, a comic opera singer; John Davis, from Kokomo; Catherine, his wife; Miss Forrester; Augusta, their daughter; Miss Lovell; Samuel Hicks, Stone's friend from the rural districts; Mr. Thorne; Mrs. Browning, Eva's aunt; Mr. H. Cummings; Mrs. Miller, a widow; Miss Winchell; William, Stone's servant; Mr. Dundon; and Mr. Traub.

THE ORPHEUM

The Orpheum was packed to the doors last night by a jolly crowd intent upon being amused. The opening act was "Comanche," a comedy-drama in one act and three scenes by Arthur Lorraine depicting a realistic picture of border life in the early days of '49. The following was the cast: Long John, a rancher; Arthur Lorraine; Long John's wife, Helen Jewell; Their Daughter, just from school; Lillie Howell; Alkali Ike, Ed. Dolan; Longfoot Ted, Kate Rockwell; Arizona Joe, Cecil Marion; Johnny Behind the Duce; Paula Cordero; Bashful Maggie, Ollie Delmar; Gumboot Kittle, Annie Merrill; Ten Cent Sally, Dollie Mitchell; Puyallup Annie, Florence Broeze; Indians led by Sitting Bull; Sitting Bull, Chas. Moran; Standing Cow, Rube Robinson; Afraid-of-Himself, Bill Roosevelt; Scarfaed Charley, Ike Blivins; Peter Peterson, a servant; John Mulligan.

An excellent olio follows which includes Ollie Delmar, Paula Cordero, Cecil Marion in operatic selections; John Mulligan in his ventriloquial exercises; Dollie Mitchell in song and dance; Beatrice Lorne and Annie Merrill in their ever pleasing duets; Eddie Dolan who is even a greater favorite than he ever was before; Vivian in new songs, and Lorraine & Howell, the new specialty team, in a new act, introducing their marvelously well trained dogs. Manager Pantages states that several new people will arrive from the outside this week and open at his house next Monday.

To Protect Caste London, June 7.—His highness, the Maharajah of Jaipur, and the other high caste Hindus who are coming with him to represent their section of India at the coronation, have taken precious good care that during the considerable time they are to be away home they shall be obliged to break none of the strict rules which Indian custom imposes on persons of rank. The precautions they have taken against even the possibility of doing so must have cost them a pot of money.

The exalted company which, counting in the servants, numbers 125, is coming to England, by way of Marseilles, on the Anchor line steamer Olympia. Before the Hindus would consent to embark on this vessel, however, her owners had to allow the cabins and the other parts of the ship which their guests would use to be fitted up in Indian fashion, and six of the ship's kitchens to be equipped with Hindu cooking utensils. They had to agree, also, that the potentates' food should be prepared only by "caste men," that no member of the crew should enter the apartments of the Indians, and that no beer or veal—both of which are tabooed in Hindu "hupper suckles"—should be brought on board even as food for the sailors.

To partake of either foreign food or water being forbidden by their rules, the Maharajah and his companions are bringing with them not only Hindu provisions to more than supply them during the six months that they will be away, but even enough water from the Ganges to last that length of time. Several sacks of real Hindu sand—to be used in cleansing the noble pots and pans—also are among the baggage. The most important part of the entire paraphernalia, however, is the Maharajah's particular and most esteemed god, which occupies the place of honor on the ship. One of the vessel's kitchens is entirely given up to the preparation of food for the deity's delectation.

Skyscraper in London London, June 7.—That huge American office building, announced some time ago, and afterward declared to be impossible, is not only to be built but work on it is to begin in August, unless there is some further hitch in the negotiations with the London county council, the body from whom the land must be rented. The company wanted 999 years' lease of the land, but it is said the county council would listen to nothing more than ninety-nine years and that the business has been arranged on that basis.

The company is to pay $150,000 a year rent for the land, and at the expiration of the ninety-nine years their $10,000,000 building will become the property of the municipality. On the other hand the site on the Strand at the foot of the broad thoroughfare now being cut through to Holborn is undoubtedly the finest site in London for an office building. It is said that the company expects to have its sixteen-story structure opened ready for occupation eighteen months from the time the ground is broken.

NEW STRIKE OF QUARTZ

Made by Three Experienced Miners

At Mouth of Fifteenmile Creek Twenty Five Miles From Dawson.

The most wonderful quartz discovery in the history of the Klondike or the Yukon territory has been made one hundred and fifty feet from the banks of the Yukon twenty-five miles north of Dawson, or two and one-half miles below Fifteenmile creek on the right limit. The strike was made on the twenty-first day of May, but the same was kept quiet until the discoverers secured and recorded three claims. Seven different tests were made of the rock, the lowest assays giving returns of $83 in silver, $10 in gold and 66 2/3 per cent. lead. A tip was then given to some friends who lost no time in reaching the promised land of gold, silver and lead, and the stampedees were no less persons than Dr. Norquay and W. J. Randall, the city engineer. Ore is a smelting proposition; the lode is about 45 feet wide and the vein crops for a full mile and a half. The owners kept on working and said nothing about the strike until a number of stampedees found their way in and they knew it could no longer be kept from the public. They made a clean open breast of what they found. This morning about 10 a. m. Mr. J. J. O'Neill, the mining expert, walked into the Nugget office with a sack-full of ore and said: "I want to show you some of the best ore ever found in the Yukon territory."

The ore will show for itself, and any one wishing to see it can go to the Home Bakery on Third avenue, where about twenty pounds of the ore will be seen in the window. It is not the intention of the owners to cause any booming or stampede as there are all ready nine claims recorded on the ledge. There is not much work done yet, only eight holes about ten to twelve feet deep, so that the owners are not excited over it as they are miners from childhood, experienced and have worked all over the world in all of the mining camps of any note. They will be pleased to show the merchants and business men of Dawson what they have got at present and would like to tell the companies and storekeepers if they are interested in the future existence of Dawson to come down a little on the price of powder, fuse and caps, so that the miner and prospector may have a chance to open up some of the hidden wealth that lies covered under the moss in this northland. There is no doubt but what there is as big a showing of quartz in this country as can be found anywhere, and the only thing that is needed is capital to open it. This rich ore comes from the Australian Girl, Yukon Beauty and Highland Chief claims. Mr. J. J. O'Neill, P. R. Doherty and John G. Love are the owners. They are not trying to sell or dispose of the property but will open it up themselves and prove its extent and value and they are satisfied that they have the making of a good mine. Mr. O'Neill is not much of a wild cat chaser and never sticks a stake in the ground without putting down a shaft or driving a tunnel, as the case may require.

This ledge is in a lime formation, and the strike is made only 150 feet from the bank of the Yukon, so that it costs nothing for hauling or freighting the ore, but can be loaded in boats without any expense. There is also some heavy timber on the ground. A fine townsite can be had at the mouth of Fifteenmile creek, so that there is every advantage to work the mines cheaply.

Coming Next Fall London, June 7.—There is more than a possibility that the deputation being organized to visit America in the fall will be accompanied by Lord Rosebery, Sir Thomas Lipton and Sir Joseph Dinedale, lord mayor of London. The official delegates will be leading members of the London chamber of commerce, headed by Lord Rosebery.

Although the special object of the excursion is to attend the opening of the new buildings of the New York chamber of commerce, the deputation will visit Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, and probably a number of other cities. They expect to meet the president in New York, and to convey to him friendly greetings from the city of London. It is not known yet how many persons will compose the deputation.

"Apart from the business aspect of the visit," said Kenric B. Murray, the secretary of the London chamber, "we are invited as a sort of quid pro quo for the invitation we extended to the New Yorkers last year when we entertained them, took them to Windsor, introduced them to the king and queen, and gave them a jolly good time. The present time is most opportune for these friendly exchanges, and if we cannot learn anything from American methods of doing things, interchange of views on questions that affect both countries can do no harm. You may take it that when our people are in America this time they will not go about with their eyes shut."

Mr. Murray is not sure that American methods are much superior to those of England. "Why," said he, "some of the largest enterprises in the states are managed and controlled by Englishmen. We Anglicized America and now she is repaying us the debt by trying to Americanize us. All Englishmen admire the public spirit and go-ahead methods of modern America, but I am not a believer in a policy of rush. I prefer the substantial plodding methods of England, and like all successful countries I believe that America will soon reach the zenith of her ambition and then by degrees drop back into her original state before she commenced to revolutionize trade by the formation of huge trusts. I am still of opinion that England can never be successfully Americanized. The conditions of the two people are so different. The present American workman was cradled in an atmosphere of rush and he accepts the situation as if it had been the one that had always obtained."

His Last Bluff

"In days gone by," said the man with the horseshoe pin, "I never traveled by boat or rail without hunting for a fellow passenger to play poker with me. I was gone on the game. I'd go without food and sleep for it. I'd play for pennies, dollars or brick houses. One night, as I left Chicago for St. Louis, I fell in with a chap who thought well of himself, and we had a stiff game. I had bad luck for an hour and lost $100, but then the cards began to come my way. I'd got back half of my losses, when a hand was dealt in which we both held four cards, and I opened the pot on two pairs. The other man might have had the same or be drawing for a flush or straight. I drew my one card and didn't help my hand, but by the grin on his face as he drew his, I judged he had something good.

"Well, we began seeing and raising, and in ten minutes there was $100 in the pot. I had just opened my mouth to raise him $20 when the train struck a curve and our car lurched over and went rolling down an embankment fifteen feet high. It was four days later when I came to my senses and discovered that I was in a hospital. On the next cot, to my right, was my opponent at poker. We had both been badly smashed up. We lay looking at each other for a while, and then he feebly said: "I'll see your $20 and raise you $10."

"And I raise you $10 more," I said. "And $10 more." "And $10 more." "He closed his eyes and appeared to think for a while, and as he opened them again, I knew that he was game."

"I'll see your $10 and raise you $40." "He was either a bluffer or he had a good hand, but I was bound to see it through, and again raised him $10. After two or three minutes the nurse came over and asked what was the matter."

"I raised him $10 and haven't heard from him," I explained. "And you won't, either," she replied. "You have raised him out of the game."

"The poor chap had gone dead," said the man of the horseshoe, "and the pot, wherever it was, was mine. As to whether he was bluffing or had a good hand I can only guess, but as they carried him out I turned over to the wall and made up my mind to return to checkers and stick there. You don't have to bluff a dead man to win that game, you know."

How to Win Her He sat with his head bowed and a sad, far way look in his eyes. "What's the matter, old man?" his friend asked. He sighed, pulled a little slip of paper from his pocket and answered:

A Model Juror

In one of the courtrooms the other day a well dressed man who had been drawn as a juror was being put through an examination. "Suppose that in the case under trial the preponderance of evidence should favor the defendant," said the attorney, "whom would you favor in your verdict, the defendant or the plaintiff?" "The plaintiff," replied the witness. "You would, eh? Well, suppose

"I saw this ad in one of those weekly papers they print down in Maine. Read it." It was read as follows: HOW to win the girl you love—Full directions furnished in plain, sealed envelope. Ten thousand dollars reward for a single failure. Send 50 cents, silver or stamps. Address— "Well, did you send for the formula?" "Yes. Here's the answer. Get a million dollars and let her look at it."

Then he emitted another sad sigh and his head dropped forward again.

The court had to let him go, although it was evident that he had not read the newspapers and would therefore have made an admirable juror—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Girl This Time Antone Nordale, formerly one of the proprietors of the Martony cafe of Dawson, but now of the Remington roadhouse, 5 above upper on Dominion, is now the proud father of a daughter born a few days ago.

On Penance Bent Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brewitt have gone outside for a few weeks to visit friends and relatives in Tacoma and sound cities.

The evidence was just as strong for one side as for the other, so far as you could judge, to whom would you award the verdict?" "In that case I think I'd have to give both of them a new trial."

"What is a plaintiff?" "How's that?" "I say what is a plaintiff?" "A plaintiff? A plaintiff is some one who has committed a crime."

"The court had to let him go, although it was evident that he had not read the newspapers and would therefore have made an admirable juror—Milwaukee Sentinel."

The Treacherous Filipino

S. F. de Malabon, Cavite Province, Philippine Islands.

The fate of Patriarco, one of our most trustworthy secret service men, is now well known. He was bound hand and foot and carried by the insurgents far into the forest and mountains fastnesses of Batangas, where, after suffering by being tied to a tree for several days, was put to death after the fashion of Malay barbarians. His eyes were burned out with lime made from sea shells, and after this torture was administered with due form and ceremony, he was slowly hacked to pieces with bolos. His tormentors and slayers are today unwhipped of justice and his death is not likely to be avenged.

About the middle of January Montilon, the leader of the band which killed Patriarco, sent word to the civil authorities that he wished to surrender and if given thirty days' grace he would do so provided he was promised full pardon for all crimes. He also specified that pending the armistice the military should be enjoined from sending out scouting parties or attacking him at any point within his district, which lies enclosed by garrisons at Dasmariñas, Maragondon, Silong, Indang and San Francisco de Malabon. These conditions were granted and since the middle of January Montilon and his brigands have levied contributions upon industrious pacificos and run at large with no one to molest or make them afraid. These ruffians keep well within the provincial lines of Cavite, for if caught in Batangas province their lives would not be worth a sixpence. Cavite province has "civil law," while Batangas is ruled by Gen. Bell who has made Malvar and his supporters hunt their holes.

The armistice with Montilon does not expire for a fortnight still. Nor happens in no province apart from Cavite do the infelicities of a premature civil government appear so pronounced. It were idle to deny this; it were equally foolish to contend on this account that civil government as a whole is a fiasco. Extremes are likely everywhere to be errors. Some singular events have transpired which will require explanation and it is not clear how they can be explained. For example, on January 22 a detachment of provincial constabulary, in command of an American negro named Thompson, came into Indang and secretly overpowered and disarmed Bautista, native interpreter and scout, and carried him from the place without notifying Lieut. Robinson, Twenty-eighth infantry, who commanded the town with a garrison of 200 men. Some two hours had elapsed before Bautista's disappearance was known to the military authorities, when disclosed detachments from C and K companies, under Lieuts. Grinstead and Leavitt, were quickly dispatched in pursuit.

The barrio of Amadeo was found to harbor the entire party, captive and all.

In the dead hour of night the place was rushed by the Americans. Thompson was found and put under arrest. While Leavitt was busy disarming and interrogating Thompson, Grinstead had found Bautista in an iron cage, bucked and gagged and surrounded by a company of constabulary. These latter offered some resistance, but the soldiers clubbed them with their rifles until they were willing to surrender. Bautista, Thompson was taken to Indang, where, with some of his men, he was promptly lodged in the guardhouse to await an investigation. This transaction is shrouded in mystery. The warrant Thompson served on Bautista was signed by himself. He took from the person of his captive a government revolver and, as Bautista alleges, a gold watch and $150 American money. Thompson denies all knowledge of the watch and money.

Now this negro is an ex-soldier of the Twenty-fifth infantry, and holds a commission under the civil government of Cavite province.

Over against this fact stands the reward of 2,000 pesos offered by Malvar for Bautista, dead or alive.

Was it Thompson's purpose to deliver Bautista to Malvar and claim the reward under cover of civil commissioner? Or did he propose to turn his captive over to Montilon to be sent through death's portals by the same methods applied to luckless Patriarco? Or if this American negro officer believed himself to be in the exercise of proper authority, why permit his prisoners to be tortured while in his hands?

The suspicion is, of course, very strong that Thompson acted through-out by design. He has had years of service in the United States army; he is an educated negro. He knew that Bautista was a valuable man in the service of the military, and one dreaded by the insurgents. He knew that he had no more right to disarm him than he had a right to enter a military post and overpower a sentry.

It is feared that Thompson made a grand effort to play into the hands of the insurgents for cold cash. If so, his mistake was monumental. Some members of the constabulary have manifested much surprise at this bold and, it is believed, unauthorized movement by a duly authorized officer of the provincial force. Skirmishes have been frequent in the vicinity of Imus, and while an armistice is on escorts are fired upon from ambush, and Montilon asks, so it is said, for thirty days' extension of time in order that he may get a good many ready to surrender and take again the oath of allegiance.

The latest attack made upon an escort occurred on February 2, about three miles from Maragondon. Lieut. Leavitt, with an escort of five men of Company M, Twenty-eighth infantry, was en route to Indang, when a shot was fired into the squad. A moment later, a native, with gun in hand, was seen to be running. He was halted and disarmed. A few minutes elapsed, and a volley sprinkled the road, and five men were seen. By this time Leavitt was entering a village at double time, and the firing became vigorous for some seconds.

A general stampede for the jungle was indulged in by the natives.

The clean-up was two dead natives, two wounded amigos and seven prisoners with seven guns and one bolo, which the men of Company M did not have on their hands a quarter of an hour before. Not a bad showing for an escort of five men. Not a soldier was scratched. The entire "catch" was taken to Naje and delivered to the commanding officer there, Leavitt resumed his march to Indang, at which place he arrived without further opposition. The preliminary steps are being taken by a band of ladores looking to a surrender to the military at Dasmariñas. Such steps have been so often taken that we have ceased to regard seriously overtures of this character. It is now reported Montilon and other local chiefs prefer to surrender to the military rather than to the provincial constabulary. It is not clear why they should make such a choice. It would seem to be against their own interests to do so. If these leaders give themselves up to the military it must be done unconditionally, whereas if they surrender to the military authorities they are absolved from many of the most heinous crimes. These men will be given a fair trial should they throw themselves upon the mercy of the military, but if found guilty of the crimes with which the natives themselves charge them they will surely hang. For this reason profuse professions of admiration for the military are taken with several grains of salt.

The provincial constabulary in some districts of Cavite, and, indeed, in much of Laguna, Rizal and Manila, has rendered excellent service. I do not now refer to the city which is in the hands of the metropolitan police, a body of splendid ex-soldiers. But in the region of southwestern Cavite province the constabulary seems to be particularly impotent. Very recently a challenge was sent to a body of constabulary by a leader of ladores to come out and fight, "but don't bring soldiers with you."

Insurgents are called, insurgents in Batangas and ladores in Cavite. They are off the same piece, and came out of the same hole. They are "insurrectos" when martial law is in force; "ladores" when civil law is supposed to obtain.

Bell's policy of concentration of the inhabitants into towns is making war very burdensome to the people, and it is to be hoped that when he has done with them they shall have had all the blood and famine they will wish for a generation. Several armed bands still at large are making their way into Laguna and Cavite provinces, where they can flirt with the civil government and secure concession in the way of pardon, not possible when dealing with the military.

It would be interesting to know how many times these robbers and murderers may take the oath of allegiance only to violate the same and be again forgiven by the civil government. If they live long enough, I do not doubt that they will fill the scriptural number of "seventy times seven."

The civil authorities sin on the side of large leniency and liberality, but this must be so. A harsh policy would not be tolerated at home, even though confidence in the natives were found to have been misplaced a million times. The situation is embarrassing, often discouraging, but I believe that peace and tranquility will come ere long and upon the dull intelligence of the rudest ladore will break the realization that the Americans, though patient and forgiving, are not so because of fear. This is such a hard lesson for a Malay to learn. If you speak kindly to him, even while he is in irons, his hope rises that he may yet overpower you and escape. A blow which feels him like an ox in the shambles he accepts as the only evidence that you are his master.

Time and the school teacher will change all this.

Expect Two Million Visitors

London, May 31.—Signs that the time of the coronation of King Edward VII. is approaching are not wanting in the streets of London these days. Scores of workmen are crawling about the fronts of the large buildings putting up gas pipes in the form of original and, in many cases beautiful designs, which, on the night of the coronation and several succeeding nights, will be blazing lines of fire.

The famous "Old Lady of Threadneedle street" is already crowned on all four sides by a delicate tracery of pipes. The same is the case with the Royal Exchange and a number of large bank buildings in the vicinity.

Workmen are engaged in putting up similar designs on the Madison house. Along the Strand, Fleet street, Piccadilly and other great thoroughfares through which the procession will pass for some time.

But the gas pipe men are not the only ones in evidence. The sound of hammers and the sight of skeleton-like structures of rough white wood are to be met on every hand. On the large space in front of Charing Cross a big stand is in course of erection.

St. Clement Dane's Church, opposite the law courts, is being surrounded with seats that will seat about 3,000 people.

The eastern side of Trafalgar square is also in the possession of stand builders, and the same can be said of almost every open corner along the route of the two processions.

Various estimates have been made as to the number of people who will be able to see the second day's procession, and a conservative estimate puts the figure as considerably over 2,000,000.

Stands erected on the business frontages along the route will seat about one-third of the number provided for in the balconies or windows or 69,366 persons.

The space on the pavements along the route is about 2,906,680 square feet, and allowing two square feet to each person, 1,453,340 persons will be able to find accommodations to see the procession on the pavements.

In addition to this number at least 100,000 must be added for the crowds which will assemble near Buckingham Palace, along the Constitution Hill, and on the elevated ground of Green Park, Hyde Park Corner, Ludgate Circus, London Bridge, St. George's Circus, Parliament Square and the Horse Guards, which brings the total up to 1,553,340 persons.

We now come to the big stands which are being erected at all possible points along the entire route. In this direction the office of works takes first place, as it is erecting room for 40,000 persons. It is estimated that these stands hold 98,250 people.

To this must be added many thousands who will crowd the roofs of buildings.

The main thoroughfares are now bristling with advertisements offering seats for the coronation. Seats are quoted at $2.35 to $10.10 a piece, with higher prices for special positions.

Many invitations to the ceremony at Westminster Abbey have been received by fortunate ones. Among those who will be special guests of the king and queen in their private box are Countess Toby, wife of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia; Lady de Grey, Mrs. George Keppel, Mrs. Leopold Rothschild, Mrs. Arthur Sassoon, Mrs. Willie James, Mrs. George Cornwallis-West and Mrs. Arthur Paget.

Despite all that the various society journals have said about the wish of the queen that dresses worn at the coronation function be made in England, it is believed that the majority of the ladies are having their costumes made in Paris.

Woman's Big Goat Ranch

Mrs. Armour, in Sierra county, N. M., owns a herd of more than 25,000 Angora goats, from which she is making $25,000 profit a year. Her "Columbia Pascha" is the most valuable Angora in America, and worth $1500.

In 1899 she was left a widow, penniless and with nine small children dependent on her for support. The ranchmen and miners took compassion on the destitute family and contributed a small sum for their immediate relief.

Then she pluckily cast about for some means of earning a living, so that she might not be a burden on the generosity of her friends. By chance there drifted into camp a ranchman with a herd of ninety Angora goats for sale. Nobody cared to buy them, for it was thought there was more money in cattle raising. With genuine intuition Mrs. Armour looked at their silken coats and knew that they would be valuable.

But she hadn't any money and didn't want to borrow. So she made a proposition to take a small flock of the goats, tend them and care for them and breed them, and at the end of the year divide the profits with the owner. The proposition was accepted. She took her goats and her children, and went up on the mountain side, 6000 feet above the sea level, where the scrub oaks grow in profusion. Thus she secured the necessary fodder, and as for shelter the goats needed none. She located a claim, built herself a ranch, and settled down to work. At the end of a year her success was such that she had money enough to buy a flock of her own and start out independently.

Since that time each year has added to her prosperity. She now employs twenty goatherds to care for her flocks. The greatest precaution is required to protect the goats from the inroads of the mountain lions, or cougars, which are so numerous that the ranchmen have to organize hunts to get rid of them.

Through her industry and perseverance and pluck, Mrs. Armour has made herself wealthy. She has sent her eldest son to college, where he is now studying law, and her four other children attend school in Kingston, Ex.

Mary and the Meat Trust

Mary had a little lamb,
With mint sauce on the side;
When Mary saw the Meat Trust's bill,
It shocked her so, she cried.

Mary had a little veal—
A cutlet nicely broiled.
Her papa, to pay for that veal,
All morning sorely toiled.

Mary had a little steak—
A porterhouse, quite small,
And when the bill came in, she sighed,
"No dress for me next fall."

Mary had a little roast—
As juicy as could be—
And Mary's papa simply went
Right into bankruptcy.

Mary isn't eating meat;
She has a better plan;
She vows it's ladylike to be
A vegetarian.

Get Off the Earth
It causes me grievous distress
To have to stand up and confess
That golf, as she's played,
I have never assayed.
Though I've heard it discussed more or less.

I never developed much real
For steering an automobile;
I don't think it's fun
To get smashed in a run,
And then stay in bed till I heal.

At ping-pong I never have played,
Nor thought of bridge, whist as a trade—
In fact, when I see
What this earth holds for me,
I wonder just why I was made.

HE GUARDED HARRY TRACY

H. P. Minto of the son Warehouse Co

Was for Several Years Co With Salem, Or. P itentiary.

There is one man in Dawson who is an intimate acquaintance of the desperate convicts who are in Oregon, after killing guards, and for whose capture a reward of $3000 is offered. This man is Harry Tracy, who was in the Salem penitentiary, and who was deputy warden a year ago. He was succeeded as shop guard by the man Ferrall, who was killed by the escaping convict. Adjoining the jail and a part of the Northwest Foundry is a building devoted to the manufacture of stoves. The more of the convicts are working in the foundry, as there they are kept under closer surveillance, the best service obtained from Mr. Minto says that during the time as shop guard and escapee Harry Tracy was warden of the foundry, and was as one of the most desperate prisoners. During Mr. Minto's guard over him there was a plan that he was planning to escape, and he was manacled to the wall with his manacles on the floor. His conduct became so bad that the shackles were taken off. The shop guards are not to be armed. The armed guards are on the outside of the wall, called fence guards. This is a solid brick wall twenty feet high, with a terrace four feet wide, and seven or eight feet deep, with rifles. Inside the wall there is a mark called the "bull's eye," and the fence guards are authorized to shoot any prisoner attempting to cross it without warning.

How the escaped convict obtained and secreted the keys cannot be ascertained. He has been tossed over the wall, and hidden in the guard house. The guard Ferrall and another of the shop guards were shot by the convict. The convict was shot with a rope ladder, and as an easy matter, but one outside there is no shelter for the escaping prisoner. Half a mile, and the reputation of the guards has been heard all over the prison. His knowledge of the escape seems to Mr. Minto marvellous.

The last big outbreak was in 1885, when nearly 100 convicts surrounded the superintendent's building, and held a knife to his throat, and ordered the gates to be opened. They carried the superintendent up to the gates and the superintendent was looking on, did not shoot for fear of hitting the superintendent. But all the convicts were captured with the exception of one, and he was never heard of.

King's Brother to Cor London, May 31.—Lord Robert Cecil is commanding the forces after the coronation. This decision of the king on the duration of the coronation must be added that it is supposed by any efforts of the king to induce him to do so.

Since he returned from his eighteen months' absence, Cecil's tenure of office has been unbroken and happy. Cecil's wish of military policy have been with, and, excepting for the sake of subordinate officials, succeeded either in plan or in result. He has wished to import goods or removing the same, and his administrative success in his committee's scheme of military education and the most important official in the king's army and the king has already succeeded.

It is predicted that Cecil's statement in this regard is to be defended by the Duke of Connaught, ex-lieutenant-in-chief. The duke well thought of. His is

QUARANTINE IS RAISED

Whitehorse Passengers Arrive at Noon

Detained in Camp Sixteen Days—No Signs of Infection Have Appeared.

The embargo placed upon the steamer Whitehorse and passengers two weeks ago Monday evening in consequence of the case of smallpox being discovered aboard, was removed today and when the steamer tied up at her dock shortly before noon it would have been hard to say which were the most gratified, the passengers or the crew. Sixteen days lacking a few hours were they in quarantine, isolated at Dog Island, a few miles down the river.

A careful inspection made by the medical health officer a few days ago failed to reveal any sign of infection and after a thorough fumigation it was decided all danger of the spread of the disease had passed. The passengers crowded along the rail today as the boat pulled alongside her dock, the other steamers in port extending a noisy greeting to their unfortunate rival. Everyone was smiling and cheerful and looked happy and contented. Two weeks imprisonment may be a good joke to an outsider, but to those penned up it becomes a serious matter, which may largely account for the exuberance shown at the landing.

The handsomest and at the same time the most conspicuous object aboard was Dr. A. F. Edwards, medical health officer, who has been located with the suspects at the detention camp. The reason of him being so prominent to view was due to his gorgeous wearing apparel, and thereby hangs a tale. Yesterday when it was decided to raise the quarantine the doctor sent to town to a fellow med. with instructions to send him the best suit of clothes that could be found in his (the doctor's) wardrobe. Taking another med. in his confidence the two jobbed their friend properly, and the apparition seen shortly after the boat landed wending his way up street with a grip in one hand and another on a stick over his shoulder making straight for a sign that read "big ones for 25 cents," was the result of said jobbing. The doctor wore a pair of duck trousers considerably frayed and alleged to have been white at one time, a shirt loud enough to have been heard four blocks, necktie of the freiest, reddest, most brilliant hue, no waistcoat, a coat of the vintage of '97 and a hat that defies description. On one of his feet was a felt shoe and on the other a boot, both ancient and dilapidated. Alas, the victim of the unfathomable love of his friends.

Many friends of those aboard were down to greet them. Dr. Wharton was one of the first to go aboard to see his wife and babe. Mr. and Mrs. Skiff Mitchell came ashore, the former wearing his usual smile of contentment. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boorman called out their greetings to some friends before the boat had tied up. The Whitehorse left at 2 o'clock for Whitehorse carrying nothing but her crew. Upon arriving there she will again be thoroughly fumigated and cleaned from top to bottom, newly furnished and fitted out. It will probably be ten days or two weeks before she is again regularly on the run.

Clothing cleaned, pressed, repaired and made to fit.—R. I. GOLDBERG, at Hershberg's.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Three Skeletons Found. Scranton, Pa., May 25.—District Attorney Lewis was today notified that arbutus hunters had found the skeletons of three persons in the woods near Elmhurst, nine miles from this city. Coroner Dr. Salfry and County Detective Phillips were at once dispatched to the scene. They ascertained that a little girl named Mary Jenkins had stumbled across one of the skeletons while hunting arbutus and had run away in terror and had notified her companions. A party was made up to go to the scene, and when they searched the clump of trees in which the skeleton was found two more were revealed lying near the first one. Dr. Salfry, after an examination of the bones, expressed an opinion that they had laid in the woods for at least twelve years, and probably longer. He thought the skeletons were those of a man, a woman and a child of ten or twelve.

The entire neighborhood is greatly excited and the affair is a complete mystery. No one has disappeared in the neighborhood in years.

Infatuation Leads to Murder. Keosauqua, Iowa, May 31.—Dora Donohue, 18 years old, was killed on the streets of Cantrir, eleven miles south of here, by Albert Hale, aged 21, farm hand, today. Young Hale was employed by Miss Donohue's father some months ago, and had become infatuated with her. He grew insanely jealous when he found that she was accepting the attentions of another and shot her. He then shot himself in the forehead. Physicians say that he will recover.

MARCHBANK STOOD UP

And Pleaded Not Guilty Today

Charge of Keeping Gaming House Will be Heard in Territorial Court.

"John W. Marchbank, stand up," said Inspector Starnes from the bench of the police court this morning. Mr. Marchbank was then formally asked to plead and Mr. Hagel for him said: "I am not guilty."

Inspector Starnes then said that he had looked into the precedents in the matter of gambling and found that different decisions had been given in different courts, one in this province another in that, especially in regard to black jack, and he had therefore decided that the matter had better be settled in the territorial court.

Mr. Hagel said he supposed the defendant's own recognizances would be sufficient.

Mr. Congdon was perfectly satisfied and this ended the matter. The trial of the other cases then came up for discussion and the court was ready to go on but Mr. Congdon pointed out that it would be a waste of time to go into the cases of the players or the onlookers, as those practically depended on the decision in the keeper of gaming house cases. He therefore proposed that the case of Binet be taken up at two o'clock, and that in the meantime the counsel in the case confer with a view to an arrangement for all the other cases. This was agreed to by Mr. Hagel and the court.

At the afternoon session Mr. Congdon said both he and Mr. Hagel had cases in the territorial court for the afternoon, and they therefore asked an adjournment of the case of the King vs. Binet until two o'clock tomorrow. With regard to the other cases he would suggest that they be continued until a week from this afternoon, and that they then be permitted to appear by counsel.

Mr. Hagel spoke in support of this arrangement, as many of the persons charged were desirous of getting away to the creeks. Those connected with the Monte Carlo case, in the event of Mr. Marchbank's conviction, could then be notified; in the event of his discharge they would not be needed. This, said Mr. Congdon, was the arrangement, and the same would apply to the players and onlookers in the Madden house case, as if the case of Binet failed of conviction it would be a waste of time to proceed against them. The court so ordered.

King's Manner Changes

London, May 31.—King Edward in the last few months has acquired a brusqueness of speech and manner which is somewhat disconcerting to those who are brought in contact with him. He has developed, moreover, the knack of putting awkward questions which would be worthy of the late Li Hung Chang. The king's royal language, too, is not always courtly, as for instance witness a little scene at the military tournament in London on Thursday on the occasion of a visit of the king and queen. The royal couple had a long drive in a pouring rain. Neither was in a good humor. Major General

San Francisco, June 3.—Felipe Galicia, Guatemalan consul in this city, has received from his government an explicit denial of the statement that Father Francisco Munoz was expelled from the Central American republic for political reasons, as he alleged after his arrival here in April. Consul Galicia's letter to Guatemala asking for information has brought a reply which specifies the reasons for the young priest's expulsion as entirely personal and having nothing to do with politics or government officials.

London, May 31.—A wealthy woman of the name of Silva, who died recently in Lisbon, Portugal, left her entire property to a rooster. The woman was a firm believer in the transmigration of souls. She imagined that the soul of her dead husband had entered the body of the rooster, therefore she caused a special fowl-house to be built for the bird and ordered the servants to pay particular attention to their master's wants. She was extremely jealous of the hens and whenever one of them was found coquetting with Pedro, as the cock was called, its neck was wrung. The disgust of the relatives when the old lady's will was disclosed was great, and a lawsuit would have followed if one of the heirs had not adopted the simple expedient of having the wealthy fowl killed, and thus becoming the next in succession.

Only One Round

Philadelphia, June 2.—Charley McKeever was practically knocked out by Philadelphia Jack O'Brien tonight in the first round of what was to have been a six-round bout at Industrial Hall. Five seconds before the gong sounded, O'Brien landed a right hook on the point of McKeever's jaw. He still had five seconds to recover, but when the round was called McKeever was unable to respond. Trotter, who was in command of the tournament, on being duly presented, the king, in the full hearing of the crowded press box and the queen and the ladies in attendance, snapped out: "This is fine spring weather you've provided for us, Trotter." He added, reassuringly, "Never mind, though. This is a mighty fine show."

In connection with this same show, however, the king displayed something like a delicate feeling—which was rather surprising to his entourage. His orders, as Gen Trotter told the reporters at the final dress rehearsal, were that the item in the program of a sham fight with much sham bloodshed was to be struck out bodily. The king said: "We have had too much of the real thing for more than two years. Let us have none of this tomfoolery, which must be painful to those who have lost men dear to them in South Africa."

The item was struck out accordingly.
