The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XXV.

"Sarah," says Dulcie, entering her room to dress for dinner, on the third day after the botanical fete, and taking up a bouquet of flowers from the table, "who told you to put these flowers there? Where did you get them from? This is the third bouquet I've found here."

Sarah colors uneasily, and moves about the room out of her mistress's range, and Dulcie, amused at her embarrassment, laughs.

"I suspect this is a bit of self-sacrifice on your part, Sarah. It is very wrong. If John, the footman, makes you present you shouldn't give them away; it isn't fair, you know."

This brings Sarah into the candle-light with an indignant flush.

"No, miss, it's no such thing. John wouldn't do it. They weren't given to me."

"Oh," says Dulcie, a sudden suspicion bringing a flush to her face now. "Then they are meant for me. May I ask where they come from?"

And the Worst is Yet to Come

them in her hand; and regarding them dreamily.

"Poor Sir Archie!" she thinks. "He is wasting more than his money; he is lavishing his time and the attention he lavishes upon a miserable, worthless girl. I wonder what bright young creature I am robbing; there must be some one who loves him as he deserves to be loved, some one whose heart is aching at his absence, and who would give all the world for a bunch of flowers from his hand! While I—"

she stops and lays the flowers down with a sigh, but as they lie on the table mutely imploring, as it were, they haunt her, and she steps now and again with the brush in her hand, and the hood of dark, silken hair flowing over her shoulders, go look at them musingly, and their donor is in her mind.

Try as she will, she cannot but remember how constant he was to her. Ever since that night they met at Rome he has, like a true knight, worn her colors on his shield. People called him fickle and inconstant, but he has not been fickle to her, and no constancy could be deeper than he has shown toward her.

And now how gentle and devoted is the service he pays her.

No word of love has passed his lips, he who used to be so ready with the passionate avowal. But now that she is in trouble, that she is a dependent, his respect for her is too great to permit him to openly declare the passion which every look he gives her proclaims for him. Something like a tear dims her eyes as she recalls the numberless little kindnesses he has done for her since he has been in the house. He has allowed no opportunity of serving her to escape him; and has done his devoir so respectfully, so devotedly that often and often Dulcie has been tempted to cry out with a desperate appeal:

"Leave me! It is only waste of time! You are seeking for a reward which I cannot give! My love has gone, and it will never return to my heart that I may give it again."

And now as she looks at the flowers, a gentle, womanly pity for him takes possession of her, and she sighs for the true knight who, fickle and inconstant to others, has been so true and staunch to her.

This, it may be remembered, has always been considered a dangerous condition for young maidens. "Pity," wrote the poet, "is near akin to love;" and there is a world of pity in Dulcie's eyes as she takes up the bouquet and carries it down with her into the drawing-room.

There has been a difference in her life since Archie's arrival, a difference which they try to conceal, but which Dulcie cannot fail to remark.

Taking her sudden faintness as a reason, Lady Brookley declines to let her undertake even the light tasks which she was wont to do; and it is Archie who reads the paper and conducts the correspondence. Then again Lady Brookley has decided that amusement is what Dulcie requires, that she was getting flippant and bored, and Archie procures tickets for afternoon concerts, and boxes for the theatre, and Lady Brookley insists upon Dulcie accompanying them.

It is in vain that Dulcie remonstrates with a blush that is half one of annoyance.

"Any one would think I was in galloping consumption, and that you were trying to make the best of what remained to me of life," she says, laughing.

"I'm not sure that you're not, my dear," retorts Lady Brookley, looking up at her with eyes in which amusement and admiration twinkle. "Your arms have got ever so much thinner; haven't they, Archie?"

"Yes," says Archie, first glancing at the rounded arms—"Yes, much thinner. You are quite right, aunt—what Miss Dormore wants is plenty of excitement and—and change, don't you know?"

"I don't want anything of the kind," protests Dulcie; "I am getting positively fat. I give you fair warning that in a very short time I shall develop into what is known as the pampered mental."

This provokes a shout of laughter from the earl, who always relishes Dulcie's jokes. "Pampered mental or not, miss," he says, "you'll go with the young people—I mean her ladyship and Archie—to the theater."

"Danger Ahead" is the Warning Which Headache Signals to You

TRUE, an occasional headache may result from conditions that pass away, but "persistent headaches" tell of serious trouble, and demand attention.

Women are more liable to headaches than men. The direct cause may be overwork, worry or mental anxiety, but the real source of trouble is debility of the nerve centres.

The brain is the "central station" of the nervous system, and here is first felt any unusual strain. Headache results, and you are warned of the exhausted condition of the nerve cells.

The first thought is of relief, and too often there is formed the habit of resorting to headache powders or tablets, instead of aiming at the restoration of the nervous system.

Nerve Cells of Brain Cry Aloud for Rich Red Blood

Anæmia or bloodlessness is often an accompaniment of headaches. The blood is thin and watery, the nerves are starved, there are spells of melancholy and discouragement, and you feel in many ways the need of reconstructive treatment such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Fatigue and exertion should be avoided, and you should have exercise in the open air while using this food cure to nourish the starved, depleted nerve cells back to health.

Not only do you cure headache by using this treatment, but you build up the run-down system, and prevent such developments as nervous prostration and paralysis.

And so Dulcie went, and knew all the time that she was looking at the stage that Archie behind her chair was looking at her, with that absorbed look in his blue eyes.

She thinks of all this as she comes down this evening with the bouquet in her hand, and her conscience smites her.

"I am a hard-hearted, selfish girl," she murmurs, "unworthy a thought of such as he is."

And with this on her lips she enters the room, to find him of whom she is not worth a thought standing near the window, humming an opera air and besting time with his fingers on the fern-case.

He moves as she enters with that quick, attentive look on his face, lest she should want anything—a chair, a book, or a footstool—and his glance falls upon the bouquet with a guilty intensity.

"Good-evening," he says, with affected carelessness. "I was just waiting for you. What do you say to a ballad concert to-night—do you feel strong enough for it?"

Dulcie goes up to him and looks on him with a little smile playing about the sweet curves of her lips—a smile that is almost sad; the pity still fills her heart.

"To I look so ill and weak, then?" she says.

"Eh? no," he says—"certainly not," and his eyes venture to scan her face; "but—but you can't be too careful, you know. I don't believe you are strong—not so strong as you might be."

"Sir Archie, that is nonsense," she says, and a laugh proves the retort. "Indeed, it is all nonsense. You are in a conspiracy to persuade me that I am an invalid. Do you want me to sit upon a sofa, and be fed with beef-tee from a spoon?"

He shakes his head and laughs.

"That's just what we want to avoid, you see," he says. "But, seriously, you come?"

"Seriously," she says, "let me ask you a question, Sir Archie; may I?"

"Ask me twenty," he says.

THE SITUATION IN PETROGRAD

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.

We plan to offer an immediate election of three months during which elected representatives from all nations and not diplomats are to settle the question of peace, said Nicolai Lenin, in a speech before the Workers' and Soldiers' Congress to-day. We offer these terms, Lenin added, but we are willing to consider any proposals for peace, no matter from which side. We offer a just, but we do not accept an unjust peace.

The bullet-shattered Winter Palace was the only ocular sign of the remarkable transference of power that has taken place in Petrograd and drew tens of thousands among the populace to the vicinity of the structure to-day. Nowhere else in the whole city, except perhaps at Smolny Institute, where the new Government has established its headquarters, which was the scene of unusual activity for the reason that the Soldiers' and Workers' Congress had assembled there, had the new revolution left its mark. Even the Winter Palace carried no marks of last night's battle, which a coat of paint and new window panes would not hide. Close inspection of the river front facade on the palace quay, but from the nearly palace bridge it could be plainly seen that the heavy guns of the cruiser which bombarded the palace, shaking the town during several hours of the night, unaccountably had done virtually no damage. On the land side, however, facing the canal from which rises the gigantic palace of victory and which is flanked by office staff buildings, there is plain evidence of the work done by machine guns and rifles. The red walls are speckled with white discs marking hits. Scarcely a window pane is without its clean cut bullet hole. On the Nevsky Prospekt where yesterday there were machine guns and armoured cars and infantry behind wooden barricades, to-day were to be seen only the usual throngs of the city and these were no excitement among them. Among the street crowds there was an occasional bedraggled sailor who had been wounded during the night's fights. In an apartment a mile beyond the palace a shell either from a gun of the fortress or the cruiser had gone through the roof apparently spent. It lay on the table in the living room and did not explode. Soldiers were asserting control of the various districts and the fusillades of rifles and scattering of machine guns with the occasional boom of cannon which continued from early last night until the palace had surrendered had been supplanted by laughter and shouts of school boys dismissed and playing in the piazzas. Reuter's correspondents at Petrograd says a telegram from Katish announces that General Anipol, commander of the troops, has been arrested and that military orders with their armoured cars surrendered to the revolutionists.

SECTIONS OF ARMY WITH REVOLUTIONISTS.

PETROGRAD, Thursday.

At Smolny Institute the Associated Press was informed that two detachments of troops headed for Petrograd in response to an early appeal from Krensky, and were met outside the city by Commissioners and persuaded to return to the front.

The correspondent was also informed that the armies on the northern front had elected a revolutionary committee which declared in support of the Congress. A delegation from the army which arrived at Petrograd yesterday has joined the revolutionary expedition. A French officer was wounded during last night's action.

The losses of the Workmen's and Soldiers' organization are said to be one sailor killed and several wounded; the casualties among the defenders of the Winter Palace are about 30 killed and wounded. Rumours reaching Petrograd to-day were to the effect that General Korniloff had made his escape from arrest.

DIPLOMATIC DESPATCHES HELD.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.

Telegrams and cables are holding up all diplomatic despatches, an action certain to draw strong protests.

NEWS AS USUAL.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.

Newspapers appear as usual this morning with the exception of the Bourse Gazette and Russky Avolia. The offices of the latter have been taken over by the Soldiers' and Workers' Delegates to assume publication of their official organ, the Rabotchia Gazette, which was suppressed by Kerensky. The Teatno Flotie, the organ of the Central Committee of the navy is published in the office of the Bourse Gazette. The Municipal Council has established a Committee of Public Safety. The Congress of Peasants' and Workers' Committees also is holding itself at the disposal of the population in the event of excesses being committed. The banks are still closed and many shops have not re-opened.

DISCUSSING SAFETY.

LONDON, Nov. 9.

A meeting of representatives in Petrograd was held at the British Embassy where measures of safety were discussed, says a Reuter's despatch to-day.

CHANGES IN ITALIAN COMMAND.

Italian Army Headquarters, Nov. 9.

The new headquarters of the Italian army have been named. General Diaz has been appointed first in command with General Badoglio second, and General Grandino third. General Foch, Chief of Staff of the French War Ministry, and General Wilson, sub-Chief of the General Staff, will serve on the Inter-Allied Committee, with General Cadorna among the military officers. The decision of the Allies to create a permanent military committee caused great satisfaction. It is accepted as evidence that the Allies have awakened to the necessity for the closest union of the whole strength of the whole western front for the political and military conduct of the war. General Diaz is rated as one of the ablest Italian leaders. For years he was connected with the General Staff. He took part in the Libyan war, serving as a colonel. He was wounded so severely he asked to be wrapped in the flag, feeling death was near. He is from Southern Italy. General Badoglio is a Northerner. In war he has been in command of a brigade of Bersaglieri whose heroic deeds have done much to decrease the gravity of the disaster. General Grandino was a General of the war in the cabinet of Premier Boselli. He was one of the ablest Generals of the second army.

PRISONERS RELEASED.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.

All the Bolsheviks arrested at the time of the July uprising have been freed. The Cossacks, on whom the Provisional Government relied, failed to support it. The reason is said to have been that the Government could find no infantry to aid the cavalry forces.

APPEAL TO SOLDIERS.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.

The General Congress of Soldiers' and Workers' Delegates in its proclamation announcing that it had taken over governmental authority, says we appeal to the soldiers in the trenches to be vigilant and firm. Congress expects the revolutionaries will protect the revolution against all imperialist attempts until the new government has obtained a democratic peace which it will propose directly to all the peoples. The new government will take adequate measures to assure to the army all necessities by

RETREATING BUT FIGHTING.

Italian Army Headquarters, Thursday (By Associated Press).

The Italians continue to retreat in accordance with the plan of the General Staff. Although the plain over which they are fighting offers no natural defences with the exception of hills in the province of Treviso, the Italians are opposing a more determined resistance to the enemy. From the Treviso hills they are pouring down a rain of shells on the Germans and Austrians making them pay a heavy price for the ground gained.

A SKILFUL RETREAT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.

Italian official cablegrams received here to-day from the Italian battlefield say the retreat is being conducted with skill. It is characterized by many brilliant examples of self-sacrifice and personal bravery, and that the new lines which it is hoped will be permanent have been most carefully prepared. The official account says the retirement of the Italian armies to the Isonza was conducted in strict conformity with plans already laid and has been successfully accomplished. While the Tagliamento River, which line was abandoned, formed a considerable obstacle to the enemy's advance, this is true only in time of flood-water. When the rain stopped and the waters of the river receded the river was no longer any considerable natural obstacle to the enemy's advance. The army corps commanded by General Di Giorgio and some parts of the third army corps retreated on the extreme left to the hills above Pizano, and by a wonderful manoeuvre succeeded in greatly retarding the enemy's crossing of the Tagliamento River, presenting a serious menace to the Austro-German right wing and threatening his communications in the direction of Codroipo. Meanwhile the retirement of the main body of the Italian army of the Isonza was greatly aided by the configuration of the ground and streams which delayed the pursuit of the Austro-Germans. The Isonza river is deep and swift with a number of bridges, but the Italian General Staff regards it as only a temporary line capable of halting rearguard actions and delaying the enemy's action while the Italian army is finding a stronger position in the rear. In those rearguard engagements the territorials have given admirable account of themselves in machine gun work. The Bersaglieri and mounted bicycle troops, the third division of cavalry, fourth brigade of Grenadiers and other contingents have distinguished themselves in furious counter attacks, showing high courage. Great valour also was displayed, above all by the army corps under General Di Giorgio, which sustained the heaviest enemy onslaught and succeeded in checking them, giving thereby time to the remainder of the Italian army to strengthen its lines. Most important also were the operations of the army corps of Corsica, which, while retreating, never ceased to counter attack the enemy.

READY FOR GERMAN FLEET.
LONDON, Nov. 9.
The Admiralty replying to the German Secretary of Navy's criticism of a recent speech in the Commons by Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, says: The world knows from the Cattagat events that the Royal Navy is waiting for the high seas fleet which still continues to decline in battle. No German warship larger than a destroyer has shown itself to us 150 miles west of Heligoland from Aug. 1916 to Oct. 7, 1917, when two light cruisers attacked a Scandinavian convoy.

PROGRESS IN PALESTINE.
LONDON, Nov. 9.
The official announcement on operations in Palestine follows: General Allenby reports that on his right the enemy is retiring on Hebron and that our troops hampered his retreat, capturing prisoners and transport. Our mounted troops, advancing through Jemameh and Huj, thirteen and nine miles respectively east of Gaza, reached the south bank of Wadi-Hesin, 11 miles north of the old Turkish position, establishing contact with our forces advancing from Gaza. These latter captured the northern bank of Madi-Hesin and Herbeh, reaching the railway and turning the position prepared by the enemy on the river. The Turkish coastal rail head at Belt Hanun has also been captured and the enemy is being pursued in the direction of Wadi-Hesin. The whole Turkish army is in retreat towards the north. More than 40 guns have been captured. The Royal Navy, assisted by the French Navy have actively operated throughout the operation by bombing the enemy communications near the coast and a further very valuable assistance. Our airplanes are bombing the retreating Turks.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Nov. 9.
Hostile artillery showed considerable activity this morning, northeast of Ypres. Our own artillery carried out the usual counter-battery work on the battlefield. There is nothing further to report.

IN MESOPOTAMIA.

LONDON, Nov. 9.
The official statement issued by the war office this evening concerning operations in Mesopotamia, reads: The clearing of the battlefield at Terkit, on the Tigris, northwest of Bagdad, is continuing. A large amount of war material has been found in addition to that reported, especially guns, small arms and ammunition. The total number of prisoners captured since the action at Dar on Nov. 2nd is 319, including 17 officers. A large number of dead have been buried.

U. S. WILL FILL CONTRACTS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.
Russia's latest upheaval will not change the attitude of the American Government towards measures underway for relief of the economic conditions in that demoralized country. This statement, applying particularly to contracts placed with the money borrowed from us for vast quantities of shoes and clothing for the civilian population of Russia, was the only authorized comment at the State Department to-day upon the overthrow of the Kerensky government at Petrograd. Official advice from the Russian capital still are lacking. Apparently the British and French governments have not heard from their representatives. So it is assumed the revolution is in control.

CUTTING OUT BOOZE.

FORTWORTH, Texas, Nov. 9.
The headquarters of the Canadian and British soldiers have issued orders this morning that no more liquor should be sold to the men. This, it was said, is out of deference to orders of American soldiers.

NOT FOR SALE.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.
Sir Thos. Lipton to-day cabled the owners of the famous yacht America that since it is the intention to preserve the historic craft, he has no further interest. He had expressed a desire to purchase the yacht.

REVOLUTIONARY PROGRAMME.

LONDON, Nov. 9.
Several transports from Krasnodar arrived in Petrograd Wednesday carrying sailors who previously sided with the Provisional Government, says a despatch to the Daily News from Petrograd. The correspondent gives the following extract from Nicolai Lenin's address to the Council of Workers' and Soldiers' Delegates on Wednesday: "The second revolution has been accomplished. We shall offer a peace acceptable to the proletariat of all countries, publish all secret treaties, take our land and establish the control of workmen over industry. The consequence will be the accomplishment of the third social revolution."

QUEBEC'S WELCOME TO LAURIER.

QUEBEC, Nov. 9.
The friends of Sir Wilfred Laurier prepared to-day to give the Opposition Leader one of the greatest demonstrations of sympathy and support of his political career at the great mass meeting at which he will open his election campaign in the Martineau Rink to-night. Last evening Sir Wilfred was given a forerunner of the welcome awaiting him here when a huge crowd filled the railway station upon his arrival from Ottawa, and the statesman had to be extricated almost by main force from the hands of his admirers who gathered around him cheering and anxious to grab his hand. The crowd was estimated at 20,000 people and all traffic in the vicinity of the depot was blocked by the people and countless autos. Sir Wilfred, after vainly trying to make his way out of the main entrance of the station had to be escorted through a side door. Many people called up the Liberal Headquarters to-day to see if he had experienced any ill effect of the crushing he received. The word was given out that Sir Wilfred was in fine fettle.

Recruiting.

Our criticism on Thursday of the attitude of certain members of the Government towards the recruiting problem has excited a protest from the Advocate, which practically represents it as tantamount to a breach of faith upon our part. We cannot confess ourselves guilty of any such offence. We accept, of course, the Advocate's statement of the main facts of the arrangement made between the Premier and the newspapers, particularly as we believe we were largely responsible for having it given practical shape and direction after the Government had its usual unconcern, appeared to have forgotten all about it. The undertaking we then gave we think we have carried out, and we can testify with pleasure to the admirable manner in which the other papers have performed theirs, including the Advocate, whose efforts must have effect among a public where they are peculiarly valuable. But we did not give this undertaking with the understanding, tacit or express, that we should not be at liberty to publish views not inconsistent with it. And we can see nothing inconsistent in what we have written. There is nothing inconsistent in asking certain persons to do their manifest duty and demanding at the same time that they be compelled to do it if they will not. There is nothing inconsistent in the two systems themselves. In the States, for instance, where conscription obtains, white-collar men are drafted just as they did, and to a necessarily smaller extent still do, in England. One of the first advantages of conscription in this country, in our opinion, is the great stimulus it would immediately give to voluntary recruiting, perhaps to a degree making extended compulsion quite unnecessary. But the Advocate speaks as though we had bound ourselves to a definite course of action. It dwells with such emphasis on the "united front" to be displayed by the papers (of which we have no impression beyond that contained in a common effort), that there is a strong suggestion that they were supposed to repress anything in the nature of criticism, an idea which we can easily believe was not absent from the Premier's mind when he approached them. That idea we had not the slightest intention, and have not now, of encouraging. To put the whole matter in a nutshell, our agreement imposed upon us certain duties which we are willing to perform right to the end of the war, if we can help by so doing; it did not take from us the liberty of insisting that the Government perform its own duties, duties much higher and more important and derived from much greater responsibility.

We do not wish to quarrel with the Advocate over this matter, but it is so important that we wish to have it quite clear. Our contemporary, in fact, missed the point of our criticism, which we admit was strong and was purposely made so. It was not aimed at the voluntary system, nor even at the Government, but at certain members of it, whose attitude towards this grave matter has been from the first so disgraceful as to be almost incomprehensible. They admit no responsibility in it whatever. They imagine that because there was a recruiting committee before and there is a Militia department now, it is no business of theirs whether recruits come in or not. We have no hesitation in saying that they are the great stumbling block in the way of the success of the voluntary system. Not only is it their duty, but they have the power and the opportunity, to give the country a lead. By neglecting it they encourage the impression that the matter is not serious, that there is no real need of action. If conscription becomes necessary they will be primarily responsible. The Advocate declares that they will not then shirk their duty. We wish we could think so. They give little earnest of their dutiful intentions in their present conduct. If they intend to support conscription, which is to say the Regiment, they would do all in their power now to prevent the necessity of it. They would go to their districts, where they could do more than any paper or any recruiting party, and tell their constituents plain truths. The performance of this one obvious duty would almost certainly save the whole situation. Finally, we are in complete disagreement with the Advocate on the matter of the procedure agreed upon until a certain date, the end of the year. We may be mistaken, but we do not remember any agreement of any ministerial announcement that voluntary recruiting would be continued in any case for that length of time. We understood the date to be of importance only as fixing the time when a certain number of men MUST be obtained. Plainly it would be the height of folly and might have disastrous consequences to wait until then to find that the number had not been obtained. The proper course is to deduce from the figures on hand the chances of success or failure by that date and to act accordingly. Despite the gratifying but slight improvement in late returns, those already obtained point to the almost certain failure of the effort. The Regiment imperatively needs the men by that date. What will the Government do when it finds they are not forthcoming? Make a great fuss, we suppose, and talk a lot about compulsory service. And how long will it take to prepare and enact such a law? What will happen to the Regiment in the meantime? There is no good in arguing the matter. We must not wait until everything is too late to do anything. We must act NOW, and from the only quarter where it can be effective. It is for the Government, if not to take practical steps towards a change of system, to make a plain, categorical statement of the steps it intends to take, exact and specific as to dates and every other detail. If it will do that, it will have no criticism but the fullest support and encouragement from the Telegram at least.

Road Board Elections.

It appears from letters received by this paper and others that an open contravention of the Act governing this matter and the proclamation issued under it is being contemplated in certain districts of Conception Bay and countenanced by the Government. We may not be cognisant of all the facts, but we cannot see how any facts can explain and justify the holding of any of these elections on another day than the one set by the proclamation, November 15th; nor the interference of a magistrate in a district in which, for this purpose, he has no jurisdiction. If our view is correct, the Government should act at once to prevent the matter straight and enable the holding of a legal election in each district; if it is not, we should be glad to have an explanation.

Police Court.

(Before Judge Morris.)
 This was the busiest day in court for some time. The first case on the dock was between two elderly women of Lima Street, one having the other summoned for slander. After hearing the evidence for both sides His Honor waived severely on the poisonous fangs of the slanderous tongue. He fined the defendant $5 or 14 days with costs. But for her poor circumstances she would likely have been $50. The Judge was determined to put a stop to such conduct.

A married couple of the higher levels, both well over 60 years of age, were charged with keeping a disorderly house. The case was tried in camera. The facts are unfit for publication; suffice it to say that the two defendants were conducting a big money-making immoral business on similar lines to the white slave traffic, in which two sixteen-year-old girls were the victims, one of which was the daughter of the defendant, who were sentenced to three months imprisonment each, as they had guilty of a similar crime before. They deserve to be scourged. Judge Morris has arranged with Supt. Grimes to try and reform the girls.

A married woman of the East End was arrested under warrant last night for assaulting and deserting her husband whom she struck with everything she could lay hands on yesterday in the household. Finally she chased him with a knife and inflicted a nasty cut in his head. To-day she chattered sickness and refused to be removed from her cell at the lock-up. A physician examined her and found her to be in sound condition mentally and physically. According to the police, who have his photograph in their possession, she is deeply in love with another man, whom they say she is anxious to marry. Judge Morris ordered that the woman be temporarily released and appear in court on Monday next.

McMurdo's Store News

SATURDAY, Nov. 10, 1917.
 Towards winter it becomes necessary to give many children something in the way of a tonic or "builder." For this purpose preparations of McMurdo's Cod Liver Oil are often employed. These are suitable preparations as they are palatable, and the Malt Extract enables the child to digest the oil without any trouble. And there is no doubt as to their value, as children nearly always improve rapidly in weight when taking this class of preparations. McMurdo's Cod Liver Oil and Malt Extract is one of the most elegant and most reliable of these mixtures. It is manufactured for us by a famous English firm of Chemists, and the quality is equal to any preparation of its kind on the market. Price $1 a bottle.

St. Margaret's Guild.

The young ladies of St. Margaret's Guild intend holding their annual sale of work and entertainment in Canon Wood Hall, on Wednesday, 21st, and are making great preparations. For some weeks past they have been busy, sewing, knitting and making useful articles and a large quantity of goods will be on hand for sale. At night there will be an entertainment in which several popular articles will participate. The proceeds of the bazaar will be devoted to charitable and patriotic objects and no doubt there will be a large attendance. St. Margaret's Guild is noted for its successful sales and the coming event promises to exceed all former efforts.

TO IMPRISON KORNILOFF.
 PETROGRAD, Nov. 9. The Military Revolutionary Committee has decided to bring General Korniloff, leader of the recent revolt, and his supporters to Petrograd and imprison them in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul. They will be brought to trial before the Military Revolutionary Tribunal.

GERMAN CRITIC ON SUB. ISSUE.
 COPENHAGEN, Nov. 9. Captain Persius, naval critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, notes a growing impatience among the Germans with the results of the submarine campaign registered in the swelling flood of letters demanding an answer to the question, "When shall we have England beaten?" He throws cold water on the optimists and warns them against accepting as reliable figures on destroyed tonnage, including these apparently German and other statistical material. Captain Persius, says with the 1917 harvest and imports of grain the food problem can scarcely become a motive for the next six months at least to make Great Britain inclined to conclude peace. He holds that the submarine question, for the British will be not "Can we continue the war," but "Will it pay?"

NOT AN ACT OF VENGEANCE.
 PETROGRAD, Nov. 9. Leon Tratsky, President of the Executive Committee of the Petrograd Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates explained that the arrest of certain members of the Kerensky Government was not an act of vengeance or political repression.

Cleanses Your Hair Makes It Beautiful, Thick, Glossy, Wavy

Try this! All dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out. Surely try a "Danderrine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderrine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance. Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderrine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderrine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful. You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderrine at any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Just Little Changes.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

I don't mind washing dishes in other people's homes," a dear old lady who has washed in a many dishes in the course of her life said to me the other day, as she insisted on taking her stand by my dish drainer, "why I think that's real fun. All the dishes and pans are different you know, and that makes it so much more interesting. Where I used to have to wash dishes for eight we had some old white dishes and I used to think, now if I could just have some different dishes and not have to look at those same dishes every day, I wouldn't mind half so much!"

There was something infinitely pathetic to me about that last statement.

The Sauciness That Kills.

It was such a perfect and painful expression of the longing for change of some sort, even so slight a one as "different dishes," that eats away the heart and courage of many a woman who is shut into the prison of a dull routine.

Of course routine work has to be done by someone. It is inevitable that dishes shall be washed and rooms swept and lamps filled and beds made over and over again, day in day out. ("If only some of these things would stay done," a resentful housekeeper often sighs to me). But it isn't inevitable that this routine shouldn't be sometimes flavored with the spice of change.

Even Changing a Room About Sometimes Helps.

Changes, even small ones like changing a room about, buying a single new piece of furniture, having some new clothes made, rest the mind that has gotten cramped by the daily routine, as a shift of position rests cramped muscles.

It is wonderful, too, how small material changes and pleasant little interests can help people who are trying to get over some great loss. A woman who lost her only child a few years ago told me how she deliberately thought up such little changes for herself and her husband. At her suggestion they bought complete new furniture for their bedroom, had electric lights installed and went on a visit to a relative who lived some thousand miles away. Of course these were infinitely little things compared to their great loss, but they helped these two people to get a new grip on life.

Sometimes a Change Prolongs People's Lives.

Sometimes large changes, such as a complete change of scenery and surroundings will prolong people's lives for years. I have known middle aged people who made such changes or had them forced upon them, suddenly start to grow young instead of old. Sometimes of course the change kills instead of cures. I suppose that depends upon the stuff the patient is made of.

GOOD-NATURE.

Good-nature is one of the principal products of sunshine, and when well-rooted never fails to produce a bumper crop. When a person has become thoroughly saturated with kind-dried good-nature he is welcome at any social circle, especially around the family hearth at a time when the baby is cutting several shrill-toothed teeth and the apple pie has been thoughtlessly creamed in the oven.

Some people are born good-natured and others acquire it by dint of hard work. It is better to be born with a sunny disposition and a perpetual f by 4 smile than it is to inherit four farms and go through life looking like a human toothache. On the other hand, many a person has started out in childhood without any visible signs of good-nature and after being hit below the belt by adversity has become as mellow as a clungstone peach at the bottom of the basket.

One fine thing about good-nature is that it is as contagious as the red measles, but doesn't have to be quarantined. The minute a cheery, sparkling-eyed woman breaks into a gloomy gathering of the Ladies' Aid Society and begins to get rid of an accumulation of enthusiasm, energy and courage, she will infect the rest of the members to such an extent that it will be decided to re-paper the parsonage without a dissenting vote. No noble project, like buying a couple of non-skid casings for the pastor or removing the hitching posts from Main Street, was ever accomplished by workers suffering from an internal grouch.

The Good Nature, when once durably located in the system, is not affected by sorrow, ill health or misfortune. Some of the best-natured people in the world are those who have no reason to be. The crippled child is the sweetest flower of the flock. The old gentle lady, seated in a bed of pain, makes beautiful the ministry of suffering by her patience and unselfishness. When trouble comes thick-gentleness of spirit blooms at its best. We could all cultivate a little more good-nature without starting any divorce suits.

ARGUMENT.

WALT MASON

I've never found in joint debate much profit or in a c h pleasure, though I have a r g u m e n t s of weight, a n d facts beyond all m e a s u r e. My neighbours s i t around all day and argue you without ceasing; they jabber, in their tireless way, until their lungs need greasing. They say the same thing over and over, a million times they've said it; and in the village not a store will give these bleeks credit. They tell how governments would run if their advice were heeded, and lack the price to buy a ton of coal that's badly needed. Some of their wives are scrubbing floors and others take in washing, while all the day these wise old boxes are arguing and joshing. There are so many useful jobs that people should be doing. I don't admire the windy swabs, their talkfest still pursuing. That man will yet be in a box, will yet be swatted dizzy, who leans against a post and talks while other men are busy.

Household Notes.

To clean brass that has been exposed to the weather, make a paste of salt and common vinegar; rub the brass with the mixture and leave for ten minutes. Then clean in the usual way.

Even when there is cream in the coffee, the stains can be removed from the most delicate silk or woolen fabric by brushing the spots with pure glycerine and rinsing in lukewarm water.

Never close up a finger with court plaster. It involves the possibility of pus and long inflammation. Wash the cut with warm water and turpentine should be applied. Then bandage with linen cloths.

When preserving, sprinkle some ashes on the stove lid beneath the kettle of boiling fruit. This prevents standing over the stove to stir the fruit. It will not burn or stick if this method is followed.

When whipping cream cover the bowl with a piece of paper with a slit in the top the shape of a maltese cross. Insert the egg beater into the slit and the cream may be whipped without danger of spattering.

SERVICE TO THE NATION DEMANDS GOOD HEALTH

War is bringing home to every man, woman and child the fact that service to the nation is not a matter alone for the soldier and sailor and munition worker.

There is work, necessary work, for everyone to do, in the way of thrift and production, and to do this work, health is the first essential. Even the most willing will find progress is slow if the health is bad.

Probably the most common complaint among those doing unaccustomed tasks is backache. Work may cause a tired feeling that will easily pass off but this backache that almost doubles one up is an indication of a condition of the system that needs treatment. The kidneys are giving evidence of their weakness and the sufferer should be thankful for the timely warning given by this pain.

The quickest and surest relief from backache is treatment with Gin Pills. Gin Pills are the best specific for the ailing of the kidneys. Anyone who wishes to perform his or her full duty to the nation in these strenuous times will find relief from backache in Gin Pills.

Our Volunteers.

There was much activity at the C. L. B. Armoury yesterday. Twelve recruits offered, as follows:

- C. White, Catalina.
- B. Ryan, Catalina.
- W. A. Stone, Old Bonaventure, T.B.
- B. L. King, Old Bonaventure, T.B.
- J. Pompling, Spillar's Cove, T. B.
- J. A. Winter, Clarke's Beach, Enlisted at Grand Falls.
- W. G. Oxford, Little Bay Islands.
- R. Grandy, Gargish.
- Chester Hall, St. John's.
- B. H. Shears, St. John's.
- M. F. Hogan, Carbon.

The weekly church parade will be held to-morrow and it is expected that the turnout will include upwards of 300 volunteers.

C. L. B. Anniversary Parade.

The annual church parade for the C. L. B. will take place at 2.15 to-morrow afternoon. Leaving the Armoury the battalion will proceed to St. Mary's Church where the Rev. H. Uphill will deliver a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

The C. L. B. which was instituted in 1882, celebrates this year its 25th birthday.

To-morrow morning at 8 o'clock a celebration of Holy Communion for the members will be held at St. Mary's—though they are not asked to parade in a body.

It is expected that all Old Comrades and ex-members will assist in the parade.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. John Pike, of Harvey Street, while at work on Munn and Co.'s premises this forenoon fell and so injured the cap of his knee that he has to go to St. John's to hospital this afternoon.

Master Geo. Lockyer while playing near Victoria Street School this morning fell and it is feared broke his leg. Mr. Albert Rogers is the delegate appointed to represent Harbor Grace Council, F. P. U., at the Convention to be held at Catalina next week.

The Jumble Sale of the K. E. Brigade is postponed until next week owing to other events coming off. All friends are asked to send along their donations.

Mr. E. Parsons, of St. John's, arrived from St. John's, by Tuesday's train on a visit to his mother, Mrs. Jas. Parsons.

The many friends of Mr. Jordan Sheppard are congratulating him on his appointment to the Customs staff here. To men of Mr. Sheppard's class who have "borne the burden in the heat of the day" to those to whom such positions belong, and not to people who have been on Easy Street all their lives. Mr. Sheppard followed the sea for a number of years; and for years past he has been seeing how promptly he could bring people's freight to and from the Railway Station here, which work he did very satisfactorily. Congratulations again.

Pte. John Merchant, a returned wounded soldier is in town on a short visit. He is a native of Harbour Grace, and as such we are proud of him, and also of his young brother, Thomas, who lately left with a draft for the other side.

CORRESPONDENT.
Harbor Grace, Nov. 8, 1917.

Old Landmark Gone.

An old landmark of the East End, in the person of Mr. James Breen, has passed to the Great Beyond. Deceased, who had reached his four score of years, was a well known and respected citizen. For upwards of about a half century he was a steady and trusted employee of Messrs. W. and G. Rendell. He is survived by four sons, three daughters and several grandchildren.

Case Withdrawn.

The case of Head Constable Noseworthy vs. Capt. Jose Thoma Roca, of the Portuguese schooner Julia II, for importing liquor into the country, which came up for hearing in the Magistrate's Court yesterday morning but was postponed till 3.30 in the afternoon, was withdrawn, as the liquor in question was reported on the ship's manifest.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Is it necessary to provide any sort of an entertainment when one wishes to give a luncheon and what is the proper hour to serve the same?" Inquired Rose.

"It is not necessary to provide special entertainment when giving a luncheon for the guests will not arrive until just before the hour set and will not remain more than an hour after. One o'clock or half after is the hour usually set," instructed her sister.

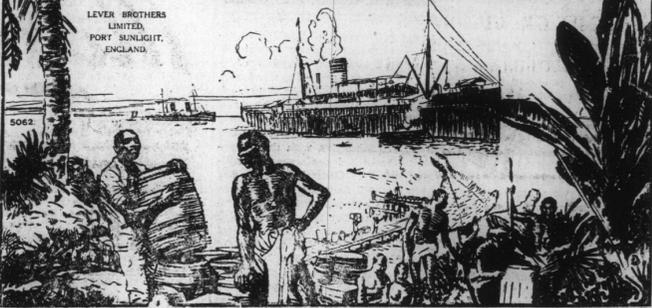

THE Sunlight enterprise and organization for production, manufacture, and distribution were made complete long before the war. But during the war the difficulties and cost of transport have been multiplied. Therefore, Lever Brothers have purchased a fleet of steamships to convey raw materials direct from their plantations to Port Sunlight.

The Housewife is given the full benefit of this enterprise, and thus, in spite of the difficulties caused in England by the war, Sunlight Soap remains the best soap throughout the world, and gives the fullest value for the housewife's money.

Shipping Notes.

Halifax, Nov. 3.—Hardly a day passes but that the sale of a Nova Scotia built schooner to Newfoundland parties is noted in this column. Yesterday, Capt. L. N. Porrier, of D'Escouse, sold the schooner Albert A. Young, which has just unloaded a cargo of dry fish at Silver's wharf, to George M. Barr, of St. John's, Nfld., who has purchased more vessels in Nova Scotia this year than any other Nfld. firm.

The price paid for the Albert A. Young was $12,000, a few thousand more than what Capt. Porrier paid for the vessel the year war broke out and since that time she has netted Capt. Porrier the amount he paid for her several times over. The Young was built at Mahone Bay in 1912, and registers 92 tons. Excluding the cargo, she will take to St. John's, the Albert A. Young when she is ready to sail for her new home-port will represent an expenditure of $14,000, as she is getting a complete suit of new sails besides other fittings which means at present prices an outlay of $2,000.

Captain George Penney and a crew from Newfoundland are here to take the vessel to St. John's.

Another vessel at this port and which was purchased recently by Mr. Barr, as previously mentioned in this column, is the former Lunenburg banker, J. D. Hazen, which sold for $16,000 and she too is receiving a suit of new sails, etc., costing $3,000 more. Capt. James Forward and a Newfoundland crew are here to take the vessel to St. John's with a general cargo.

Another purchase by Mr. Barr is due here from Lunenburg to load four for St. John's, the one-year-old three-masted schooner Admiral Drake, built by Hon. George A. Cox at Shelburne, the sale of this vessel having already been noted in this column.

Salvation Army.

The purchase price was $40,000. Up to the present she has been in command of Capt. William Matthews, of Dartmouth, who will bring the vessel to Halifax and deliver her to Captain Arthur Benson, who is now in Halifax, having been sent here by Mr. Barr to take delivery of the vessel.

Like the other vessels of Mr. Barr's acquired fleet, the Albert A. Young, J. D. Hazen and Admiral Drake are to engage in the fish carrying trade from Newfoundland to the Mediterranean. German submarines have sunk several vessels of Mr. Barr's former fleet of fish carriers.

In tow of the tug Tusale, the tern schooner Asquith, Captain Sarty, arrived here yesterday from Lunenburg and went up to Pier 6, where she loads flour for St. John's, Nfld., and from there will take a cargo of dry fish to Brazil. When the Asquith left there were five other three-masted schooners at Lunenburg getting ready to proceed to Newfoundland to load fish cargoes.

From the wharf of Mayor Williams, where she has been lying ever since she was launched in August, the new tern schooner Phileas, Captain Kendrick, was towed across to old Pier 2 from Dartmouth to load flour for St. John's, Nfld., where she is now owned.

Schooner Centenary has discharged her load of fish at Silver's wharf and yesterday moved down to Parquhar's wharf to load freight for Sydney. At the Cape Breton port she loads coal for Burin, Nfld., from where she brought her cargo of fish to Halifax.

Household Notes.

When baking pies, either fruit or meat, place the pie in a tin with a little cold water. It will save the syrup or gravy from boiling out.

All left-over vegetables should be warmed over for lunch, and then if any are left-put them through the colander and then in the stock pot.

The combination of potatoes with other vegetables to form a salad offers infinite variety and a chance to utilize small amounts of vegetables.

In buying dress materials never forget to allow for the wide-wide stuffs are frequently more economical than narrow because they cut better.

A safe laxative for children is two soaked figs that have remained in a little water over night. These are eaten in the morning before breakfast.

Nothing will clean and sweeten a sink better than a strong solution of washing soda, and the refrigerator likewise should frequently be washed with this.

Sterling sauce is made with ¼ cupful butter and ¼ cupful brown sugar creamed; 2 tablespoonfuls cream and vanilla flavor. Beat before serving.

When baking, the scissors are useful; a snip and the biscuit dough is quickly apportioned; a quick cut and the drop cookie falls into place on the baking tin.

HOW BRITAIN HAS HANDLED THE LABOUR PROBLEM.

NEW YORK, To-Day. Members of the special mission to the U. S. from the British Ministry of Munitions, at a conference here today with manufacturers in the oil, leather and rubber trades, told how Britain had treated the labor problem since the outbreak of the war. The conference today is the first of a series in this city with employers and employees in all lines of industry. Sir Stephenson Kent, head of the Mission, admitted that Britain blundered at the beginning of the war in sending so many skilled workers to the front. The employers' associations and trade unions agreed to the Munitions Act; the unions agreed to abandon all restrictive operations for the period of the war, so that employers can make use of any kind of labor in any kind of employment. Wages are fixed definitely. It was made illegal to strike or demand an increase in pay during the war. All labor disputes must be presented to the Minister of Munitions. It was made unlawful for one employer to entice another from another through the promise of higher pay, thus preventing shifting. The profits of employers were definitely fixed. It was explained that if guns were the need of the moment, then skilled labor was sent to the arsenals and ordnance factories. If ships were the chief need, these same men went to the shipyards, but in no case, Sir Stephenson said, did the Government adopt any system of labor conscription to attempt to compel labor to work anywhere. The British considered it unwise and the Government relied upon public opinion to put the Munitions Act through. He stated that more than 200,000 skilled men made up the munition volunteers. He explained how they travel from plant to plant and accept the wages of the district. An army of 1,000,000 men is also engaged in the work. Women, the Commission declared, will return to their normal occupations, now temporarily non-existent, after the war. A commission of production was created to study the cost of living. It investigates three times a year the cost of the necessities of life, and when it has found a big increase it orders that the laboring men receive a fixed sum to compensate them for the increase. The Government gives this money with the understanding that it is not to be considered a raise in wages but merely to offset the added cost of living.

STRONG ANSWER OF ADMIRALTY TO GERMANY.

LONDON, To-Day. The following comment on the German Secretary of the Navy's criticism was given to the Associated Press today by the Admiralty. It is quite untrue that Sir Eric Geddes excluded the Mediterranean Sea when he summarized the losses of British merchant tonnage. The losses given were those that occurred in all seas and it was only in dealing with the number of enemy submarines that had been destroyed that the First Lord omitted the Mediterranean, owing to the variety of the nationalities operating there. The suggestion that Sir Eric gave the British losses in net tonnage, whereas German calculations are in gross tonnage, is evidently false. Sir Eric Geddes' figures deal with gross tonnage throughout. It is untrue that the statement of the losses of British tonnage leaves out of account ships sailing on Government service. The only tonnage excluded is that of commissioned ships of the Royal Navy. In regard to the Scandinavian convoy, Sir Eric Geddes made it perfectly clear in his statement that since April of this year more than four thousand five hundred vessels have been convoyed over this route. These figures, of course, do not include the escorting vessels or what the German Imperial Secretary calls "the entire guarding fleet of patrol vessels." The figures that Sir Eric gave are irrefutable and are so set out that it is natural for Germany has to rely on sophistry to attempt to disprove or question them. The world knows from recent events why the German Imperial Secretary is waiting in the North Sea (and the Germans) decline the battle. The German Navy is certainly a young organization in the process of forming and reflects no great credit on the chivalry and confidence of German seamen. It is only to be added that no German war vessel larger than a destroyer has ever been 15 miles from Heligoland up to last September and October, when two light cruisers attacked a Scandinavian convoy. Per contra, the mileage steamed by British war vessels per month as given by Sir Eric Geddes speaks loud enough to those desirous of hearing.

AMERICAN SHIP APPARENTLY SUNK.

LONDON, To-Day. Fifty members of the crew of the American steamer Rochester have been landed at Irish ports. The captain was severely injured. The Rochester was attacked by three submarines. A despatch from London on Thursday said the Rochester had been sunk by a torpedo on Nov. 2, and states that four sailors were supposed to have been lost. One boat with the second mate and 13 members of the crew was missing when the despatch was filed.

CANADA LET TROTSKY GO.

NEW YORK, To-Day. According to William G. Sheppard, a returned newspaper man from Petrograd, Leon Trotsky, one of the leaders of the Revolutionary Committee in Russia, was moved from the steamship Kristianstadford at Halifax last spring while the steamer was en route from New York to Bergen. Sheppard was on board the vessel. Trotsky was detained at Halifax for some time, and had the Dominion Government held him for an indefinite period, Sheppard says, the history of Russia might have been different.

LAW AND CURZON SPEAK HOPE FULL.

LONDON, To-Day. The clouds are lowering today but behind and above them the sun is still shining, said Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer at the Lord Mayor's banquet here last night. Dealing with Russia the Chancellor said: "We all rejoice at the prospect of the advent of liberty in the country, a liberty which, as we hoped, would have wisdom and justice as her companion and would leave prosperity and plenty in her train. The future of Russia today is sealed, but we need not despair. The Russians are a great people and no nation has won or preserved (?) to strain every nerve to drive the invader from her soil. What will happen we do not know, but in the meantime the advantage of Russian strength is largely lost. The enemy had secured certain military gains, he said, because the same unity of control did not exist among the Allies that there was among the Central Powers, but he feared the whole front from the British Channel to the Atlantic would be created as one front. No one would underestimate the seriousness of the attack on Italy, but the Chancellor hoped and believed that the Italian Army would be able to hold the enemy until help arrived. He said that the enemy had not always made these thrusts from purely military reasons, but in order to keep up the spirits of his Allies. The Chancellor added, "The Germans say they are going to win. They can win only if they defeat the French and British Armies, which stand athwart them, and they are further from that result today than they ever have been. I cannot hold out any hope of an early end of this war, much as we should like it. There is no such thing as peace. There is only one way to peace, the way over the hard and rugged road to victory." It is a question now of nerve and staying power. All the belligerent nations are staggering beneath the load. It is a question of who is going to fall. I have faith in the courage of our people and I have faith in the justice of our cause. It is a struggle between the free peoples of mankind and the iron despotism of a war lord over the soldiers and nation behind them. Our Allies know they are fighting for what they love; they know their hearts will not fail them.

Mr. Curzon, of the War Cabinet, in offering a toast to the Allies, said that unless the spirit of German militarism and arrogance was destroyed the greatest disaster to the world has ever seen would follow. He declared that the most notable event of the past year had been the entry of the United States into the war, and he added: "Whatever can be accomplished by resources of that vast continent, by the spirit and ardour of the people and the skill of the Government, will be contributed." The speaker looked forward to a Russia resurgent, reorganized and revived.

Sir Eric Geddes, speaking for the Navy, said: "The Naval service has unshaken confidence that when the great day comes when we succeed in forcing the enemy to give battle it will find the Royal Navy equal to the occasion." He said that the submarine losses had been very heavy and that although they had been steadily reduced they were still heavy. The submarine campaign had not been defeated but was being held for the present; in his opinion it would be defeated.

GROWING POWER OF REVOLUTIONARIES.

PETROGRAD, To-Day. The all-Russian Congress of Workmen and Soldiers' Delegates is setting about speedily to reorganize its power over all Russia and bring about an early consultation over its aims. The Congress has already arranged to assume control of the various departments, pending the institution of a permanent Government. The revolutionary committee has arranged a search for Premier Kerensky, with the intention of arresting him, and has taken many other measures to further its control. The delegates are deliberating over the proposal of an immediate three months' armistice and a speedy democratic peace and land and industrial reform. The Congress is reported unofficially to have named a cabinet composed of Bolsheviks and then adjourned. The cabinet is headed by Nikolai Lenin as Premier and Leon Trotsky holds the post of Foreign Minister. The cabinet will serve until the constituent assembly approves it or selects a new one. The cabinet members are all Bolsheviks and are supported by the left and the serial revolutionist party, the other parties having withdrawn from the Workmen and Soldiers' Congress. Rikhsid Kromskoi, a sailor, while Shligalnikoff is a laborer. In reply to a question from a peasant deputy, who protested against the arrest of former Ministers, Trotsky announced that the Socialist members of the Kerensky cabinet would be released from the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul pending investigation. He said the others would be held. The Congress took action to turn over to land committees for distribution the land and established state and church lands. The lands of Cossacks and peasants will not be confiscated. The banks in Petrograd reopened today. The city is quiet.

ITALY'S PERIL AND TASK.

ROME, To-Day. Italy will continue to fight until the end, despite the efforts of German propaganda and the disaster on the Isonzo front, is the opinion of official circles here. The Government must fight the effects of Austrian and German propaganda, as well as do all in its power to drive the enemy from Italian soil. It is felt here that Italy narrowly escaped the fate of Russia, as it is believed that the campaign carried on to destroy the spirit of the army and people reached its height when the Austro-German blow was struck in the Julian Alps. Political hatreds have been healed and in future all parties will work together earnestly with the intention of securing victory.

ANOTHER BRITISH ATTACK.

LONDON, To-Day. The British made another attack this morning on the Flanders front near Passchendaele. The War Office announces that early reports indicate good progress.

Pearls in Cocoanuts.

In 1911 the then Governor of Queensland, Sir William MacGregor, obtained from Sabal Island, Torres Strait, information on the subject of the existence of pearls in cocoanuts. The author says, when describing the various parts of the nut, "Finally a very singular and highly-prized pearl is found, in very rare circumstances, in cocoanuts, and a specimen was added to the museum of the Royal Gardens at Kew in 1892."

Greater EARNING Power

The present High Prices won't decline very much. Materials of all kinds—with one exception—are higher all the way from 10 per cent. to 1,000 per cent. The one exception is MONEY.

To-day you can't buy as much with a five-dollar bill as you could three years ago. Five dollars three years ago would buy a pair of shoes, a new hat, a barrel of flour, or a sack of sugar. To-day all these things cost ten dollars, and your five dollar bill is really worth $2.50.

List EVERYTHING you use and you'll find you are paying double, on an average. Everything has been advanced. Does your bank pay YOU doubled interest? Is that mortgage netting you 12 per cent. instead of 6 per cent.? Are the Bonds you hold returning 10 per cent. instead of 4 per cent. of three years ago? If your money can only buy HALF its value of three years ago, then it should earn TWICE what it earned then.

You MUST be interested whether you wish to be or not. We can offer you 12 per cent. per year, with Guaranteed Safety.
