DUKE HERE TODAY FOR CEREMONIES

Governor-General Will Open New Provincial Museum This Afternoon.

MEMORIAL GATES ALSO

He Will Pay a Visit to the Boy Scouts' Headquarters.

The Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught is in Toronto today, to commemorate the opening of what is to be two more monuments to Toronto's appreciation of public service and recognition of the value of broad education. At 3 o'clock this afternoon he will open the Royal Ontario Museum at Bloor street and Avenue rd., and at 3:30 o'clock he will open the gates given to the city by Westminster (Capt. L.O.D.E., in memory of the late Capt. John G. Howard, who gave High Park to Toronto. The gates are at the eastern entrance.

Spring to the limited seating capacity in the room where the actual ceremony of opening the museum is to take place, admittance will be by ticket only, and all visitors must be seated before 3 o'clock. The gates will be open at 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7:30 in the evening.

The opening of the Royal Ontario Museum marks the fruition of many years of effort on the part of those who have interested themselves in the establishment of a great museum in the province. Some of the purposes of the museum are:

The collection and exhibition of objects of every kind calculated to illustrate the natural history of Ontario, and thereby to aid in a knowledge of what it is to contribute to science and industry.

The collection and exhibition of objects of any kind calculated to illustrate the natural history of the world and the history of man in all ages.

The museum is governed by a board of trustees, being a body corporate consisting of ten members. The minister of lands, forests and mines, the minister of education and the chairman of the board of governors of the University of Toronto are ex-officio members of the board. The other four members are appointed—four by the lieutenant-governor in council and three by the governors of the University of Toronto.

The present members of the board of trustees are:

Ex-officio—Hon. W. H. Hearst, minister of lands, forests and mines; Hon. Dr. A. F. Ryne, minister of education; Sir Edmund Walker, chairman board of governors, University of Toronto; Hon. H. D. Brown, chairman of the board of trustees in council—Sir Edmund Osler, Hon. Frank Cochrane, J. B. O'Brien, and H. D. Warren.

Appointed by the governors of the University of Toronto—Sir William Wilford, President Falconer and Z. A. Lash, K. C.

The cost is shared. The erection of the building and the maintenance thereof is borne in equal amounts by the Province of Ontario and the University of Toronto. The present building, extending to the east of the main building, is about 300 feet long and 60 feet wide, and is erected at a cost of about $100,000.

The large section of the property lying between the present building and the main building is reserved by the board for the extension of the building. The proposed plan shows the building to form a hollow square with a handsome stone front facing Bloor street.

Under section 20 of the Museum Act the board is empowered to establish various departments of the museum which are to be designated "The Royal Ontario Museum of" in accordance with this by-law, the board has already established the royal Ontario museum of archaeology, geology, mineralogy, palaeontology and natural history.

The establishment of this museum jointly by the Province of Ontario and the University of Toronto is due in very large measure to the enthusiasm and leadership of Sir Edmund Walker, the chairman of the board of trustees.

A Worthy Memorial. Westminster Chapter I.O.E.D.E. have for long been striving to erect a suitable monument to the memory of the late Captain Howard, and the new gates show how their success has been.

The gates were wrought in iron by the mills and curb of Credit Valley sandstone, the layout giving a twenty foot roadway to the main building, and a wide opening for pedestrians. In harmony with the great park in its natural state, which the gates form an entrance to, the design is in a simple, unobtrusive style, massiveness rather than extreme refinement being the predominant character of the design.

DRAGGING HUMBER FOR MISSING BOY

Disappearance of Harold Mathers Still Shrouded in Mystery.

Up to a late hour last night the men who have been dragging the Humber River for the body of eight-year-old Harold Mathers, who disappeared last night, have been working hard for the remains.

Nothing has been seen or heard of him since Tuesday night, when in company with some others he was on the way home from an entertainment held in the home of the late Mr. Mathers in the neighborhood. Harold was suddenly missed by his companions and when one of them heard any cries or noise he disappeared. The place where he was last seen was just where Howard's grist mills were located, and as the current is much stronger than usual, his body would have been carried swiftly down the river.

The search party has made the work of being sections of the river bed that they cannot reach at present.

FISHERIES ACT BEFORE HOUSE

Proposal to Extend Powers of Officials Met With Opposition.

MAY BE REVISED

Bill Respecting Merchant Shipping Went Thru as Amended by Hazen.

OTTAWA, March 18.—The house of commons spent an uneventful day in committee of the whole, considering a bill to amend the Fisheries Act, and an amendment to the law respecting merchant shipping in the evening. The estimates of the department of mines and the geological survey were considered.

Hon. J. D. Hazen's bill amending the law respecting merchant shipping was amended and reported. Among other things the bill provides that in case of collision the damages to cargo shall be apportioned in accordance to the degree of fault of each vessel. Government-owned vessels, however, are not liable to claim damages.

Mr. Hazen moved an amendment providing that the provisions of the bill should not apply to any of the vessels in the harbor of Montreal, the St. Lawrence above Montreal, the great lakes or the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers.

Run Into Snags. The minister of marine and fisheries, however, did not favor as well with his bill amending the Fisheries Act, a clause of which provides that the governor in council may appoint fishery officials in the provinces of the peace with jurisdiction over poaching cases and infractions of the Fisheries Act.

Mr. Murphy maintained that such would not be the case. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police had followed similar procedure and no one ever had complained of unfair treatment.

After some further discussion the bill was reported, with the understanding that the objectionable clause would be amended on third reading.

Peat as Fuel. The estimates of the department of mines were then considered. An item of $80,000 for further investigation of the possibilities of peat as fuel effected the criticism of Hon. Charles Murphy and E. W. Nesbitt, the Liberal member for North Oxford.

Mr. Murphy maintained that the investment of $80,000 in the mines had cost the country in the neighborhood of $100,000, and absolutely nothing had resulted while Mr. Nesbitt pointed out that the government had spent a large sum in establishing a peat-testing plant near Alfred, Ontario.

WANT MANAGERS AS PLAY CENSORS

Committee of Forty Appear Before Police Commissioners With Pleas

PRINCESS IS NOT SO BAD

Rev. John Coburn Objected to Only One Play Produced Last Month

A delegation from the committee of 40 asked the police commissioners yesterday to make the theatrical managers censors of the plays which are presented in their theatres. It was held that the new plan would give the police a greater grip upon the theatres, since a double responsibility would be placed upon the managers who would not only be responsible to the police but also to the police officer who happened to be present at the performance.

Rev. John Coburn, who was spokesman and complainant-in-chief, produced a mass of newspaper matter and gave a lively presentation of the "Ziefeld Follies," which appeared in the Princess Theatre during the week of Feb. 18. This was the only really objectionable show which has appeared lately in this playhouse, he said, and for the benefit of O. B. Sheppard, the manager, who was present, he said he wished to compliment the Princess for the general high standing of the productions there, but since it had gained such a reputation, it behooved its management to exercise the most rigorous care with the productions staged there. He then proceeded with his rendering of the "Follies," and objected so much to it that the police officer who happened to be present said that the only part of this show which would appear to be the "Lord's Prayer," which was not in it.

Anxious to Keep Stage Clean.
Mr. Sheppard, the manager, said that he had followed the ruling of the censors in this case and he did not know that any person had objected to the play till after the company had left town. He also said that he was as anxious as anyone to keep the theatre clean and wholesome. He had given Toronto this season the best line of attractions ever given in Canada.

As William Rankin, sr., chief dramatic censure, is the nearest solution of the problem, many varied methods were taken by the contestants to outdo one another. Cautions, penance, check-books and a hundred other forms of fancy answers were sent in from all over Canada, but the prize-winner was Toronto man, W. Rankin. He will receive a $100 Doherty piano, while the other winners will receive prizes varying in value, many in concessions on the purchase price of instruments.

This is one of the most successful competitions that have ever been held in Toronto, and bids fair to rival anything of the kind ever held anywhere. Very little difficulty was experienced by the judges in selecting the first prize, but of the 60,000 answers very many were of such a nature that the selection was no easy task.

The subject of the competition were H. B. McDonald of the Toronto Star, and W. T. Bowman of The Telegram. In addition to the regular prizes, additional awards of free music lessons were made by the company. Ever since the competition the company have been deluged with enquiries of people interested in the wonderful interest that has been taken in the Doherty piano during the last few weeks.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice.
"It is certainly the most anything to be able to do to a few pounds and stay that way. The reason why so many thin men or women, such result is not impossible, despite the fact that many are victims of mis-treatment, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh-producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive process must be scientifically supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the progress and starches into a rich, nourishing food for the tissues and blood, and its rapid effect is remarkably shown in the gain of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month or by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorder, it should not be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

Cautions, penance, check-books and a hundred other forms of fancy answers were sent in from all over Canada, but the prize-winner was Toronto man, W. Rankin. Home Made Money

THE majority of the women in our country spend thousands of their time vibrating between the four walls of their home.

This is supposed to be an economical way of living, to save expense and waste of hired servants by doing the sweeping, ironing and dishwashing for the family and to do the most that a mere woman can do to assist a moderate income to stretch over the greatest amount of comfort.

What is the outcome of this way of living, what does it do to our women? Must they be only household machines with dowered minds and worn bodies because the husband or father is a wage earner instead of a capitalist?

A few women have found the solution to these questions by arranging their work so it does not require all their time; others neglect their work or leave it to be done by growing children.

It would seem that there were enough homeless girls in this country to insure every housekeeper the services of a maid at a wage that even a workingman's wife could pay. More help for housekeepers is the most practical solution.

With a strong, willing girl to attend to the rough work of the house an average woman should be able to think of some way in which she could earn many times the price paid to the maid by wisely employing the time rescued from the broom, wash tub and dishpan.

This is not saying that every wife should be a wage earner, tho all women enjoy having their own income. There are employments that never bring a penny into the house yet keep many a dollar in the pocket.

Kitchen gardens are the best investments for ultimate economies. They take the home woman into the outer world of sunshine, rain and fresh air, and repay her a thousand times in health and in lessons of thrift, order and carefulness, to say nothing of the material things grown therein.

French women are famous the world over for their vivacity, health, fine complexions and cheerful dispositions, and there is no doubt these endowments have been cultivated in the kitchen gardens of their country. You see them on the roofs, in corners of porches and flanking each side of the narrow paths leading to the low doorways of the middle class homes, these tiny gardens.

It is the part of the French housewife to furnish the fresh salad, the small onions, the peas, beans and freshly raised vegetables for the family.

How great a saving a kitchen garden is to an average woman, and how she has tried having one. Then there are bees, poultry, small fruits, and for the woman who has no space for these things, the aviary, wood carving, delicate stenciling, book binding and a thousand other things.

There is no reason why any bright woman should not equal her husband in her business, and there is no reason why she should only bend her efforts toward that end. A business-like way.

Suppose she has children you ask? All the more reason why she should do something more than an animated housekeeping machine.

Thousands of women are proving daily that money can be made at home without interfering with the sacredness of family life, and the writer, who is in touch with many of these successful ones, will gladly answer your question of "How can I make money at home?"

KEEPING AN ALERT EYE ON THE GARDEN NOW

There are several things that may be looked after now as well as the loosening-up process we spoke of yesterday. March winds are ever disastrous, winds and April rains are always a trouble-bearing as well.

Some gardeners think that quite as much damage is done to the garden in March as has been done in even the hardest winter, because of these winds. Limbs are torn off or broken off short, and fall mischievously upon valuable shrubs, doing untold damage. Bulb beds are cluttered up with fallen shingles torn from various roofs by the strong winds, old bricks from old chimneys have fallen into the middle of clumps of precious perennials, loose vines sway to and fro, injuring themselves and others, unless looked after, and all sorts of unexpected things are sure to happen in this same March.

An important thing to look after now is the business of the eavestroughs. The full eavestroughs mean debris running upon grape vines and wisteria vines and other valuable vines, and full eavestroughs mean debris falling upon the roof of the house, and debris falling upon the roof of the house, and debris falling upon the roof of the house.

THE NURSERY

Care of Bottles

The best bottles for a bottle baby are those that are round and cylindrical and have a narrow neck for the attachment of the nipple. The one important requirement is that they have no corners, but are rounded at the bottom and at the top, where the neck begins. A bottle of this shape is cleaned easily and thoroughly. It is best to get as many bottles as there are feedings in 24 hours; and a good thing to have is a wire bottle rack to hold them when the food is made up for the day.

As soon as the baby has finished a meal any food remaining in the bottle should be thrown away, and the bottle rinsed with cold water and perfectly clean. Then it should be filled with cold water, in which has been dissolved borax or soda, and allowed to stand. Just before preparing baby's food for the day all bottles should be thoroughly washed with hot soap and water, and then rinsed with cold water, put over the fire in almost cold water and allowed to boil for twenty minutes. They should then be placed upside down, covered by a clean towel, until the food is ready to be poured into them.

A plain black rubber nipple, with one small hole in the top, is the best and simplest to use. As soon as the meal is finished, the nipple should be held in cold water and the hole should be turned inside out and scrubbed with a brush and hot soapuds, then carefully rinsed and put back in a fresh solution in the covered glass. It is best to have two or three nipples always in use, employing first one and then another.

It is necessary to buy new nipples, but afterwards thorough washing is sufficient. Nipples may be bought with or without holes in them. To make a hole in a blind nipple, heat a needle red hot and burn the hole until just large enough to allow the milk to drop through. If the milk runs in a steady stream it may choke the baby, or come so fast as to cause indigestion. Never

SOCIETY NEWLY FORMED TO PROTECT INDIANS.

The securing of their rights by the native tribes of British Columbia in the present dispute with the provincial government was strongly urged at the meeting of the newly formed society for the protection of native races in McConkey's yesterday. It was said that the title of the Indians to the land in Northern British Columbia was recognized by the Dominion Government at the time that province entered the Dominion. The purpose of the society is to settle in the courts, if the matter of putting legal action into operation can be set going. Ottawa has been urged to act as well as Westminster.

WOMAN ON BENCH IN JUVENILE COURT

New Proposal to Help on Work Will Be Formulated.

Supporters of the juvenile court are now endeavoring to secure the appointment of a woman commissioner for the benefit of the girls. Hitherto the work of this court, it was said yesterday, has scarcely touched young girls whose home surroundings are not wholesome, and the need for this departure will be brought out later, when plans for the extension of the work are more fully studied. The dissatisfaction that has arisen over the appointment of E. W. Boyd has led to the proposal to appoint a woman commissioner. All men would be excluded from her court and she would be expected to probe conditions in the homes of children who come before her. This system was being followed in the United States and produced good results. "Look after the girls," said he, "and the boys will almost look after themselves. If the mothers of these girls are kept pure their sons will not go so far astray."

This court, it is also expected, might reveal some of the bad housing conditions in the city.

KEEPING AN ALERT EYE ON THE GARDEN NOW

There are several things that may be looked after now as well as the loosening-up process we spoke of yesterday. March winds are ever disastrous, winds and April rains are always a trouble-bearing as well.

Some gardeners think that quite as much damage is done to the garden in March as has been done in even the hardest winter, because of these winds. Limbs are torn off or broken off short, and fall mischievously upon valuable shrubs, doing untold damage. Bulb beds are cluttered up with fallen shingles torn from various roofs by the strong winds, old bricks from old chimneys have fallen into the middle of clumps of precious perennials, loose vines sway to and fro, injuring themselves and others, unless looked after, and all sorts of unexpected things are sure to happen in this same March.

An important thing to look after now is the business of the eavestroughs. The full eavestroughs mean debris running upon grape vines and wisteria vines and other valuable vines, and full eavestroughs mean debris falling upon the roof of the house, and debris falling upon the roof of the house.

Hints on Beauty Culture

Old Fashioned Courtesy Beauty's Best Accessory

By MAGGIE TEYTE

Prima Donna Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.

In one of the latest corners of some magazine, I read the other day the answer of a small girl to the question, "What is a gentleman?" Said the child, "It is what you call a man when you don't know him very well."

MAGGIE TEYTE There's food for thought there. It is quite as applicable to either sex. But the thing we want to aim for is to deserve the name when we are well known.

For years there has been a tendency to avoid the term "lady." It has been so abused and misused, it has suffered the same careless treatment that has been accorded "Professor," which is used to designate a barber quite as often as the man of science or the scholar. Still, when we talk of some dear old feminine being, whose manners are a delight, whose courtesy is never-failing and whose greeting is like a blessing, we seek for the highest and most comprehensive term, and we call her a "real lady."

So, after all, the true meaning of the term has not changed. But it is to be doubted if it could be as generally and sincerely used today as in the days when it was the fashion.

"When it became unfashionable to call women ladies," said an old gentleman to me once, "it seems to me it became less fashionable to be a lady."

"Ladyness" Desirable.

When you stop to think of it, our manners leave much to be desired in these very up-to-date days. We don't have the time perhaps for the courtesy and the charm of manner which our ancestors had. And the younger generation appears to have less time for "ladyness" than we have.

Yet, isn't it just as desirable now as ever?

History says the beauty of Mme. Renard was due quite as much to the sweetness of her nature and the courtesy of her conduct as to her loveliness of face.

Watch the women in the shops. I don't dispute the loveliness of some of the saleswomen, but the shoppers are not all models for them to copy. There is no way in which one may judge so justly of a woman's real nature as in her treatment of those who, in the social scale, are her inferiors.

The true lady is always the lady. She has the heart of a lady, as well as the appearance of one. She has kindness and sympathy with the world. She has herself in subjugation.

Should Cultivate Charm.

Being a lady is not always inherited. Some of the most atrocious examples of rudeness and impoliteness I have ever seen have been in the conduct of women who lay their claim to superiority to the fact that their ancestors were persons of consequence. I always feel like saying to women of this kind, when they brag of their blue blood, that it has grown too thin for these days.

There is a delightful description of the lady-type of woman given in one of Oliver Wendell Holmes's essays, which is as true today as when it was written. Says the dear doctor:

"A woman who does not carry about with her wherever she goes a halo of good-feeling and desire to make everyone contented—an atmosphere of grace, mercy and peace, of at least six foot radius, which wraps every human being upon whom she voluntarily bestows her presence, and so flatters him with the comfortable thought that she is rather glad he is alive than otherwise—is worth talking to as a woman; she may be well enough to hold discussions with."

That six-foot radius of which the doctor speaks is something worth working away in a corner of our memory. Imagine what a glorious place this world might be if each and every woman in it spread an area of "grace, and mercy and peace" to all the space of the six-foot radius!

Talk of the possibility of a millennium!

Charm, my dear sisters, charm is what we all want to cultivate while we are trying to get the wrinkles rubbed out of the corners of our eyes and the bloom of youth coaxed back into the cheek which has left youth behind.

Charm is power.

Beauty is success.

New Lenten Fish Dishes

By Jeannette Young Norton

VARIETY is the watchword in the fish diet, and it will repay the cook to acquaint herself with just what the market affords and study the ways and means for the best serving of the products.

There are a few unwritten laws on the fish subject that must be obeyed. It is success in the crown culinary arts. The first is in taking great care in the selection, being sure that the fish is fresh, in season, and suitable for the dish for which it is designed.

Gauge the quantity purchased according to the size of the family, for boiled fish, or, on occasion, baked fish, is all that works over into "left-over" dishes acceptably. Cold, or heated over, fried fish is apt to have a very unwholesome taste, and it is poor economy to fuss with it at all. Fish to boil should always be put on in cold water, otherwise the outside will cook too quickly, leaving the inside underdone, thus making the fish unpalatable. A trifle of salt and vinegar added to the water when the fish is to be boiled gives it firmness.

The Lenten season the choice of fish is quite extensive and among the most popular are fresh cod, haddock, shad, bluefish, Spanish mackerel, halibut, flounder and smelts.

Now that one may serve planked fish in her own kitchen, there is another delight added to the enjoyment of such a dish. A well seasoned plank, tongued and grooved, may be purchased to fit the size of the range oven at a very medium price and, after the first using, it may be thoroughly scrubbed and cleaned; after that it needs only to be carefully scraped and cleaned with a dry corn vegetable brush. The plank has to be heated hot in the oven, then greased with a greased mop before the fish is put on. The fish is laid with the skin side down, after it has been split, and occasionally the backbone is removed.

A new garnish for the planked fish, instead of using the mashed potato border, is to scrub white potatoes and bake them in the plank spaced around the fish, and between each unit a half green pepper filled with vegetable macédoine, highly seasoned, with plenty of butter. When the plank is removed to a heavy tray for serving, take slices of lemon and draw sprays of watercress through the centre of each slice, then lay them about the fish.

There is perhaps no other fish that lends itself to so many different combinations as the fresh cod, for in chowder, creamed, boiled, fried, in chowder, salad, even in Newburg, it is acceptable. The salmon is a close second to the cod and has one advantage over it, for it is delicious served cold with sauce tartare.

So many pretty dishes of fish may be made for special occasions with the aid of brown, cream and mayonnaise sauces and jellies of different colors that they are well worth studying.

SECRET OF STYLE IS STUDY

Mlle. Adoni Fovieri

How to Dress Well on a Small Allowance

By Madge Marvel

THE dress cleverness of French women amounts to genius. They are the envy and despair of their sisters of other nations, who copy their dress to the smallest details, all the time conscious that they are unable to imitate the one elusive thing which makes their style distinctive.

And the maddening part of it all is that French women have a way of looking unutterably and indescribably smart, and chic and all other desirable ways a well dressed woman should look on an absurdly small allowance, compared to the unlimited extravagance of many American women.

When noted French women come to the United States they say all manner of lovely things about American women and their style. "Certainly, certainly, it does. Also it is more elastic, it washes better, it cleans better, it holds firmer. Then it does not cut the fabric, no matter how delicate. It has a way of sinking in out of sight, so that a seam which is finely sewed scarcely looks like a seam at all."

"Moreover, it yields to the figure, and one is sure of having a bodice fit perfectly if it is sewed with silk than if the ugly cotton is used. Cotton, it is but good for the basing, to hold the garment till the silk thread can be stitched in. Even in the little frock of lawn, the blouse, tulle, which all American women wear so beautifully, the seams are better sewed with silk."

"We French women make our costumes last two, three times as long as the American women. We do not spend so much money. But we are more exacting how the gown is made in the first place. We do not have a gown just to have something new. We have a dress because we need for it. Also we know what that need is."

"Then we get the costume which will give us the most service and look always chic. We think much about our costume before we spend our money for it. We are never in a hurry when we have a visit to the modiste. We make sure all is perfect."

"Then we wear it until it is gone. I am told that the American woman frequently throws her costumes away after one season. It is not so with the French woman. She has the tailor or the modiste make it new again. There is where the silk thread helps. It has not ripped or hurt the cloth. It has left no marks."

Through the Eyes of a Mother

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

DAUGHTER'S coming home for the Easter holidays, bringing a friend with her, and mother is worried to death.

I went over to see mother the other day and she told me all about it, though she didn't know she was doing it.

"Mabel"—she tried hard to say May Belle—that's the way the girl spells it now—"will be here at Easter. She's bringing her friend, Clarice, with her and I'm having the bedrooms and dining room done over."

"I did want to get the living room done, but father and the boys made such a fuss I had to give it up."

"What is the reason men are so unsympathetic with the ideas of a young girl? Somehow they don't seem to have any feeling for May Belle at all—just because she likes things to be pretty at home and to have them as the other girls have when she visits them."

"I'm going to have May Belle's room in soft green and the guest room in French pearl. She says that's the latest thing. I wanted blue or rose, but she says they've all gone out. The dining room is to be early English; she sent me some sketches. It looks a little dark and gloomy to me in the sketches, but I suppose I'm old-fashioned."

"I'm taking the old dining room furniture up into the boys' room; they like the table to work on. I shan't let them see till they are here; I know they'll say they are splendid. Mabel says they're perfectly dear, but they look to me a good deal like church pews cut in two."

When "May Belle" was "Mabel"

"Who do you think would be good to make some really smart frocks? Little Mrs. Bronson is dowdy; May Belle says. I wonder if that new French woman charges too much."

And mother's kind, good, little face tied itself into a hard knot of perplexity and anxious care.

Poor little mother, she'll be down sick before the Easter vacation ever arrives, and I hope when she is that there'll be a trained nurse in the house and that May Belle and Clarice will have to sneak down the back stairs and take such meals as they can get off the kitchen table—just for a change.

I saw May Belle when she was home last Easter, and I didn't like her. I didn't like her at all, and that was too bad, because May Belle and I were great friends when she was no Y and only one L in her name.

The last time I saw Mabel—no, I don't spell it with the Y or with the double L—that isn't the way she was christened; I know because I held her

Mother's Colored Spectacles

I'm sorry for Mabel's mother, awfully sorry for her; Mabel's so worried about her mother and so dreadfully ashamed of her. And yet I'm mad, just plain American m-a-d, not grieved, or sorry, or vexed, with Mabel's mother.

She started out, being a good, sensible woman with a big heart and a loyal soul and a clear, practical brain of her own.

She never wrote an ode in her life and she couldn't tell the difference between a sonnet and a limerick. But she was the best housekeeper in town, and when nobody knew what to do about the minister's boy who was beginning to go wrong, poor lad—after his mother was lying flat asleep in the little churchyard on the hill—it was Mabel's mother who got hold of him and brought him round to going right again.

And when the bank cashier shot himself, it was Mabel's mother who had the courage to tell his young wife what had happened. And now Mabel's mother is letting a silly, flighty fool of a girl turn her whole well ordered, sensible, kindly life upside down—just because she is her daughter.

What is it that gets into a woman that makes her such a goose about her children, when they get to the silly age?

Talk about the blindness of love! Why, Cupid sees through a telescope compared to the way a mother who's in love with her children looks at things.

Some day Mabel will come to. There's good blood in her and she can't help it; some day she'll be practical and sensible and kind and generous hearted and worth loving again.

Until her own daughter comes home from boarding school and makes a fool of her all over again, just as she is making a fool of her mother.

That'll do for Mabel until she comes to. There's good blood in her and she can't help it; some day she'll be practical and sensible and kind and generous hearted and worth loving again.

Until her own daughter comes home from boarding school and makes a fool of her all over again, just as she is making a fool of her mother.

That'll do for Mabel until she comes to. There's good blood in her and she can't help it; some day she'll be practical and sensible and kind and generous hearted and worth loving again.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

You Are Love's Target If You Have Curly Hair

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B. M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

THE levator and amorous lads of a few years ago said: "Not because her hair is curly, not because her eyes are blue." That is to say, the swains justified their surrender to the blandishments of the lovely maid by denying that curly hair had affected them.

Yet physiologically, the unusual distinct unconsciousness hidden in your cosmos is intimately associated with curly hair. Even mother-love, the maternal pride in a child, is interwoven with the twist, twirl, spiral ringlets of the child's brow.

Watch a mother stroke the hair of her boy or girl. See how careful and gentle she is to avoid straightening the curls.

Artists, with their intuition of love between youths—A maidens, weave curly locks upon the heads of their DR. HIRSHBERG beautiful creations. Michelangelo unconsciously makes you a slave to his pretty girls and handsome men by depicting graceful, lithe, double circles and circulous, mischievous ringlets.

Even barbers unknowingly fall victims to this devotion to curly tresses. Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, a score of years ago, ordered all of his liege citizens to curl their mustaches, and no American barber pays a patron a more dashing compliment than to curl his mustache!

The humorous thrusts directed at the vanity of European soldiers, due to the pretty women who are always at their heels, is attributed to the curly mustaches and hair.

Barbers hate to cut the curly, blond hair of little boys, even when their schoolboys begin. "It's such a pity to have to cut off Willie's curls," say the women.

Musicians, artists and others with the "artistic temperament," go in for large crops of curly hair, for the same reason that brunettes prefer it.

Swengals could perhaps never have so successfully exerted the masculine, hypnotic power over the masses had he been lacking in those great brunette waves and whorls of curly locks.

There is a tendency in all creatures that live and mate to move in circles and curves. The straight textured animals are always tributary to those with curls. Animals curl up before a fire with glee and comfort, and straight-haired human races are always less happy than curly-haired ones.

The kinky-haired negro is always happy. Curly-haired white children and pretty girls are usually buoyant, care-free and gay.

The Medes and ancient Persians of high rank wore curly hair, just as the modern dignified military officials of Prussia and Russia do today.

"Puckering up the lips for a kiss is at the bottom of the notion hidden away in a girl's thoughts that a man with a curly mustache is 'kissable.' Just as a man feels that his sweetheart is most lovable when her tresses dash about in whorls and wheels before a spool of wire, a woman falls under the spell of a curly mustache."

The outward essence of girlhood and manhood beauty is often apprehended, unaware, through the fluttering spring-like curls of the hair. Moreover, this is fundamentally at the basis of love and sweetness.

Rest, stillness, quiet, age and coldness show themselves in "straight, smooth hair."

Action, movement, change, vivacity, capricious power, mocking strength.

Answers to Health Questions

H. S. E., Germantown, Pa.—Despite all dieting and treatment by several skin specialists, I still suffer as badly as ever with pimples on the cheeks. I wash with a well known soap and have no indigestion. Will you please tell me something to help me?

Stop dieting. Cease using soap of any kind on your face. Touch each pimple and blackhead with an alum pencil every night.

Do not use greases or creams on your face. Cleanse your face with glycerine, benzoin and hydrogen peroxide. Take calcium lactate and lactic acid bacilli internally.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diary of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers who follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

Life with Mother.

XLIV.

"I AM trying very hard to understand why a man's wife and mother are so frequently at swords' points. Why is the relationship so subtly different from that of a man and his mother-in-law? Yet it is and who can gainsay it?"

LEONA DALRYMPLE have no inborn feeling of resentment toward mother's mother. Indeed, when she chooses to be kind and friendly, I'm always glad to meet her half way. But not so Mary. For every advance my mother makes, Mary seems somehow to recede and made the distance between them a little wider.

"Mary, tell me," I said, patiently, one night, "why is it that the two most powerful interests in a man's life—his wife and his mother—so frequently conflict?"

"Why do you bother your head about such things?" inquired Mary, flushing. "I've always read that a man's wife and mother are bound to be hostile."

"I've read it," I admitted, "and I can't see any reason for it."

"It's the fault of the mothers!" said Mary primly. "Any girl will tell you, Peter. There never was a woman yet who wasn't insanely jealous of her son's wife. She's been first so long that she hates the notion of being second."

"But a mother is never second!" I put in hotly. "And besides, the love a woman bears her wife is so essentially different from the love she bears her mother that I can't for the life of me see why there should be comparison of any sort."

"Nevertheless," said Mary, "there is." I asked mother why, in the course of one of our chats, and after a while she told me.

"Mary's right, Peter," said mother. "A woman is jealous of her son, but the chief cause of conflict doesn't spring with her. There is a delicate arrogance—a flaunting sense of proprietorship—in a daughter-in-law which is sometimes a little difficult to bear. Don't misunderstand me, Peter. I'm not speaking of Mary. Let's always be general. The young wife's manner often says as plainly as words, 'Your claim was strong enough to hold him. I've won him away!'"

"Mother," I asked bluntly, "were you jealous of Mary?"

"I think so," Peter admitted. "But the wise mother makes a great struggle at the first and weeds that tiny rattle out of her heart before it has a chance to grow into a flame that burns."

Mother, then, has fought that inherent sense of hostility with the splendid courage I have so frequently admired, but Mary has done nothing to help her. And now mother is in that eternally placatory side of the scale, tentatively offering what Mary ignores. How wisely fathers stand back and watch!

The possessive sense in a woman must be inherently feline. Else why does she hold a velvet paw in readiness to scratch, as Mary does. Vanity, narrowness of viewpoint—these two must make up part of that singular hostility which a mere man can't understand.

The wife of a man indignantly rears a barrier between him and his mother. . . . Why? . . . And isn't the older woman's attitude a recognition of that fact?

I think so. The son-in-law doesn't have the same viewpoint. He couldn't raise a barrier between his wife and her mother if he tried. For one thing they are subtly directed against him in an involuntary spirit of sex antagonism. For another thing I think most men have too much good sense to be jealous of a mother's love.

"There's one consolation," a woman once said to me. "My daughter-in-law has estranged my son from me, but some one will come along in time and do the same for her."

Not a very good spirit, I take it—but typical nevertheless.

Perfectly Transparent.

Claudia—I don't believe that she needs spectacles one bit. She simply wears them because she thinks they make her look distinguished.

Sarepta—To be sure. Why any one could see through the subterfuge.

Improving Her Muscles.

It is understood that Mrs. Bloomer has employed a boxing instructor for her daughters.

Yes, she says that every girl ought to learn something about the womanly art of self-defence.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 19

RUNNING SLACK.

Signs are not wanting that, altho the provincial government continues to do good work, as in the introduction of the compensation bill, there is a gradual slackening of the tone, a relaxation of the high tension which kept all things moving as it were, towards the golden year. Whether it be a loosening of discipline or an accretion of barnacles or the slipshod methods of over-confidence or the contempt that comes with familiarity, all governments seem to tread the same path. It was hoped that the Whitney Government would be different, but there are signs which are evident enough. When a government does things which it would not tolerate for a moment if it were in opposition instead of in power, it is time for it to consider its ways.

It only takes a turnover of a few per cent, two or three in a hundred, to upset the strongest government. It may seem very dreadful that two or three per cent of the voters should hold the government in the hollow of their hands. It seems so incredible that governments pay no attention to them, and gradually come to devote all their consideration to their own professed supporters. Then the incredible thing happens.

There are a lot of people in Ontario wondering why Mr. G. Howard Ferguson is so indispensable to the government that special legislation has to be passed to save his political life. Mr. Ferguson's personal merits are quite aside from the question. Either he should not have been appointed, or he should have resigned his seat when appointed. The other course was to have repealed the law before the appointment, not after the law was violated. The opposition "has it" on the government, and will no doubt make the most of the opportunity. At the best it represents the slackening up of the system. The government would not have so acted in 1908.

People are wondering why the government has gone out of its way to antagonize the Toronto city government in the matter of the juvenile court commissioner. Granted that the attorney-general had a perfect right to do as he pleased, and that the patronage committee worked like a charm, was it worth while to call attention in so glaring a manner to the essential weakness of the system? It indicates possibilities to which, as his majesty's loyal opposition no doubt will remark, there may be no limit. Why not leave it to the loyal opposition to make remarks? But why leave them open to make remarks? This appointment would not have been made in 1908.

The slackness is by no means confined to the provincial government. Toronto itself suffers from something of the same kind. People can get things done for friendship's sake or for politics' sake or for some other sake which should never be done at all. The Woodbine Hotel fire on Tuesday evening is a case in point. A few hours later in the night and the occasion would have been a ghastly tragedy. The fire chief says: "That is a matter between the government and the license department." The architect says "it was open at any time for the license commissioners or the fire chief to have demanded that additions be made." And among them is a ramshackle building, warranted to burn, is passed as all correct and equipped with a license to risk people's lives.

There is no one and no office that will stand up and take the responsibility and declare "I made the protest. I demanded that the right thing be done." Somebody with a put on the thing. It means slackness, fatal looseness lack of efficiency. It may seem very dreadful to say these things, but it is much wiser to say them now and to listen to them, than to do so later on when it will be too late to do anything.

There is a necessity for tuning up in several quarters. For the matter of that the opposition needs it as much as anyone, but those who have power and authority are regarded as the more culpable when things go wrong, and

INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND PEACE.

International trade follows its own lines, not those into which its movement is attempted to be forced. In this it is kin to the development of the British Empire, which has far better been permitted to evolve itself naturally than compelled into a course that may look inevitable at the moment, yet prove unsuitable, inadequate or even harmful at some later date. The dream was once, and may still be, held that no system can be devised which will make any one nation the workshop of the world, importing only raw materials and exporting only its own manufactures and levying tribute in this way on every country with which it deals. That is an impossible condition and the movement and direction of international trade is gradually compelling the conviction that no nation can live to itself alone, but must form part of a comity of nations whose prosperity depends on the prosperity of each of its component members.

At a recent dinner given by the London, England, Chamber of Commerce, the German ambassador, Prince Lichnowsky, was the guest of honor. In responding to the toast of the evening he expressed the view that commerce was to the mutual advantage of both nations and rejoiced in the fact that trade between Britain and Germany was increasing. Indeed, each is the best customer of the other on the continent of Europe, notwithstanding the supposed jealousy and suspicion that divides the two peoples. The truth is that the trouble in Europe is not racial in the case of the greater powers, but is the result of the inherited traditions of the ruling castes. It is no doubt aggravated by the fact that the greater powers are not all on the same democratic plane, nor equally subject to public sentiment. Nevertheless, the growing sense of interdependence in matters of finance and commerce is aiding continuously the cause of peace.

AWARDING NOBEL PRIZES.

Not only remarkable, but suggestive, is the protest that has been made by Leonard Hwass, one of the witnesses to the will of Alfred Nobel, the great Swedish philanthropist, against the way in which it is being interpreted by his trustees. He insists that the bestowal of the world prizes which the ideas which prompted their institution. These were, Herr Hwass maintains, never intended as a reward of achieved success, but as an encouragement to individuals of high social value. Only thru dreamers, Nobel expected to elevate the masses and it was these dreamers, lives that he wished to lighten. And by dreamers he meant "spirits bent on high ideals, poets and inventors, who, impractical and devoid of means, often go to wreck and ruin in the fulness of their mental powers. Into the hampered, struggling lives of such gifted men, lives that threaten to come to a complete standstill, he wished to introduce to a certain extent a financial motor that would facilitate their labor—not to found a capitalist institution for the decoration of famous men."

The point of Herr Hwass' contention is that the Nobel prizes "should never be bestowed as an honorary prize, but as a promotive prize for the encouragement of new and beneficent work." This endeavor to stimulate creative effort does appear to be far more consonant with Nobel's character and, indeed, his expressed convictions, than the bestowal of a money gift on those whose gifts have already been rewarded and whose life work is practically achieved. It was Nobel's earnest desire that his dead riches would become a living source of new and great achievement. "I wish," he quotes his own words, "to devote my possessions to the good of mankind." To fulfill that trust is naturally a far harder task than to select individuals from the goodly company whose reputations have been fixed by general acclaim, even tho the verdict of posterity may not always accord with that of contemporary opinion. But to encourage a great soul striving to develop some new and fertile conception may well be of infinitely greater importance and accord more harmoniously with Nobel's ideals. Having no children of his own flesh and blood he desired the recipients of his prizes to be his spiritual heirs.

Making a will is a reasonable business proceeding. You put your house in order. Why not make doubly sure by naming a strong business organization to manage the estate that you leave behind and to make the most of it? The cost? We will tell you exactly what you will charge and you will be surprised at the reasonableness of it. Write us for details.

THE TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY TORONTO.

The latter's official publication says editorially that the new and reduced rates have turned the tide of business—just as a good many keen prophets of the future predicted. "At the time this is being written," it proceeds, "traffic has begun to increase to a very perceptible degree. The business world has awakened to the commercial opportunities of the new rates. Inquiries are coming to our office by the hundreds each day by mail, by telephone, and in person." But it needed the spur of parcel post rivalry and rate reduction to induce the United States express companies to realize that by providing an efficient and reasonably cheap service they were not only serving the public but benefiting themselves. As monopolists they miserably failed. Brought down to hard facts and compelled to reform, they see a new light.

Precisely the same thing has happened with electric light and power rates in Ontario. But, for the creation, in the very nick of time, of the provincial system, the future of Ontario's industrial expansion and of its agriculture would have been dark enough. Today Ontario feels a new impulse with the prospect that in a few years the farm will offer attractions little, if any, inferior to those of the city. And in the United States Postmaster-General Burleson is constantly improving the parcel post system. His latest order permits a letter to be attached to a package, each bearing its own proper postage. This may seem a small boon, but it often happens that a letter concerning the shipment, and delivered at the same time, facilitates a communication tied to a parcel has not been permitted, and it is believed the new order will considerably enlarge the parcel post service.

SLEEPING CAR RATES.

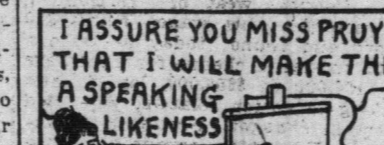

The railroad companies are trying to make one passenger who occupies a section of a sleeper (upper and lower berth), or an apartment (upper and lower berth and closed-in room), or a drawing-room (three berths and lavatory), pay two railway fares in addition to the sleeping car charges. Unoccupied berths, they say, mean lower passenger fare earnings.

We do not see how the railway companies can collect the increase. It would be charging more than three cents a mile.

It is true some companies have made an improvement by putting on apartment cars, divided into little rooms, with an upper and lower berth, as well as toilet appointments. Apparently the railroads counted on at least two people traveling in these two-berth apartments; but as a matter of fact, travelers prefer to have consideration being given to the question, and an effort made to see whether there is not an alternative. If the question of rates is to be up, so must the question of sleeper construction and division be taken up from all points of view.

COOK FOR MINERS FALLS HEIR TO GOOD SHIP FORTUNE.

EDMONTON, Alberta, March 17.—"Jack" Hamber was a cook for 350 miners at a coal camp in the Pocomontas district, west of Edmonton, until yesterday, when he was found to be a millionaire; today he is in a position to sign a cheque for anywhere from $400,000 to $650,000, left to him by long-forgotten relatives, who died recently in Glasgow, Scotland. Hamber is in Edmonton arranging for a trip to the land of the bagpipes and herring, and he is expected to return to Central Alberta next summer. "There's a lassie in Scotland who will be glad to see you," says Hamber, who has a home in the foothills of the Canadian Rockies is about to be realized," he said. "I am going over especially to see the old man, and to see my mother and my wife. More than that I cannot say at this time."

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

A verdict of accidental death was returned last night by Coroner Graham's jury, which enquired into the death of Thomas Wright, who died in St. Michael's hospital as the result of injuries sustained at the Toronto Electric Light Company's power plant on Scott street, while assisting in the removal of a flywheel.

THE PHONOLISZ-VIOLINA

A Marvelous Musical Invention.

Apparently there are no limits to what clever German musical inventors can achieve in the matter of automatic instruments. Ten years ago the first piano-player machines were considered marvelous, but the steady stream of new inventions has already made the early achievements of this kind obsolete. Every year brings new developments in inventions of the kind, all looking toward a higher degree of artistic expression in the wider range of musical achievement. The "last word" in inventions of this class is what is known as the "Phonolisz-Violina," an instrument which gives to the violin a solo with pianoforte accompaniment that if heard in the next room would seem to the uninitiated listener as though some very clever virtuoso were playing a solo with perfect intonation and rhythm, accompanied by a discriminating musician at the pianoforte. The first instrument of the kind to be brought to Canada has been imported by L. Montagnac & Co., general Canadian representatives for Toronto, and will for a short time be open to inspection at the warehouses of the Gerhard Heintzman Piano Company at Queen street, west opposite the city hall.

The "Phonolisz-Violina" is manufactured by the Lindberg-Hupfeld Company of Leipzig, Germany, the largest manufacturers of orchestral and other forms of mechanical musical instruments in Europe. The invention was completed two years ago, and since then the company has been kept so busy supplying the European demand for such machines that it has hitherto been brought to this country. The whole mechanism is enclosed in an ornamental case about eight feet high, and the lower part is in reality an ordinary player-piano, with the contrivances for producing the solo effect enclosed in a case superimposed on it. It is operated on the vacuum system with perforated rolls, keys and levers for regulating the speed and the action of the piano player-piano. The matter of producing an automatic violin solo is, however, a much more complicated problem than that of the piano, presenting a piano solo. In a piano the tone is fixed by the manufacturer and tuned in Europe. The invention of the "Phonolisz-Violina" is an instrument which plays automatically, but which creates its own tone. To go into detail how this effect is accomplished is beyond the scope of this article, but it is sufficient to say that the effect of the solo violin is produced by three violins which are of the novel type, the air pressure of the case. Around these revolves a cylindrical bow, the speed of which is regulated by the air pressure themselves in turn. The function of the left hand is to play the proper intervals at a manner somewhat similar to that of the strings, but which are struck by the wires on the keyboard of a pianoforte. The effect, especially at a short distance, when the thought of mechanism is entirely forgotten, is very beautiful. The writer heard the "Phonolisz-Violina" play a waltz by Kubelik which he played himself, and he has never heard anything so interesting and delicate than the achievements of an ordinary player-piano.

Although the instrument brought to Canada is a three-violin one, the Hupfeld Company makes a similar one with a much larger effect of tone. Ingenious contrivances provide for the rendering of the solo effect without a mass of strings by the mere pressure of buttons.

While this is the introduction of the "Phonolisz-Violina" to Canada, the invention has attracted great attention in Europe. The Kaiser and other members of the royal families of Germany and other royal courts are adorned with them. None have been more enthusiastic in praise of the invention than the famous professional violinists themselves, among them Mischa Elman, well-known to Torontoans, the famous French virtuoso, Henri Marteau, and the noted instructor, Cesar Thomson, and the brilliant interpreter, Efron Zimbert. The tribute of those men are ample proof of the fact that this is an achievement far beyond the ordinary and of true artistic value as well as ingenuity.

The Gerhard Heintzman Piano Company extend a cordial invitation to the public to call at their warehouses and hear the "Phonolisz-Violina" for themselves.

BANK IS ORDERED TO PAY WAGES

Important Decision Given at Vancouver Under Amended Bank Act.

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 18.—Justice MacDonnell this morning in a written decision, gave judgment on the eighty-five employees of the Imperial Timber and Trading Company for $10,500 and costs against the Royal Bank. The amount claimed represented the men's wages for November and December, 1913, up till the time the bank closed its doors in January of this year. The action was of particular interest to the legal fraternity as being the first action brought in Canada under the new amendment to section 88 of the Bank Act making any bank liable for wages of its employees for a month and found; today he found that the judgment which the men had previously obtained against the Imperial Timber and Trading Company was not a bar to obtaining judgment against the bank.

C. H. Thomas is New President of Cubs

CHICAGO, March 18.—Charles H. Thomas today was elected president of the Chicago National League Baseball Club. C. P. Taft, majority stockholder, was present at the election, and declared he would retain his stock at least a year. Thomas was elected to the presidency of the club during the regular club meeting, which was held at the club headquarters at 200 North Dearborn street on Friday evening, at eight o'clock. All intending players and friends will be welcome.

Thomas has been in baseball fourteen years, and has been closely associated with Charles W. Murphy during that time. He was secretary to Andrew Freedman of the New York Nationals when Murphy was with that club, and came to Chicago at Murphy's request in December, 1908, soon after the latter had assumed the presidency of the local club. He was appointed assistant secretary, which position he held until Charles Williams resigned to go with the Chicago Federals, after which Thomas was appointed secretary and treasurer. The change in the organization of the club was the result of a demand made by President Johnson of the American League that someone besides Murphy be put at the head of the Chicago Club. Johnson contended that some of Murphy's unpopular moves were dangerous to organized baseball, with the Federal League threatening destructive war, and demanding of President Taft and the National League that a change be made.

SEE HERE, MR. PRES!

Sporting Editor World: McCaffery should have his both eyes open if he is on the lookout for good recruits for his ball team, also the Toronto Canadian League team. Why doesn't he get after young Clarence Sharpe, late of New Beach? Last season he played for Stratford in the Western League, and won for them the championship pitching freely and losing but two games, each by the odd run.

Stratford are after this sturdy pitcher again this season. McCaffery has signed on players for both teams with less fame and ability than this fast-coming pitcher. This young, but sound, pitcher has a good record for the last two seasons. Anti-Fed.

WEST END Y. ACTIVITIES.

Tonight the seniors interested in athletics will have another handicap event, starting after the regular class exercises. The event will be the fence vault. There is such a hot fight for first-team honors that all the contestants will be on hand for this event.

The senior classes are again taking the floor space. There are on the floor every night over 100 senior members. As Wednesday is one of the biggest nights, we expect a record number tonight.

The members of the Harriers' Club are certainly getting busy, now that the fine weather on Dovercourt road will be the regular track three nights a week.

The university girls will give an exhibition of swimming in the West End tank Saturday night of this week, under the direction of Joe, J. Corsica, their instructor. The reserve seat plan is now open at the office. The opening part of the program will be given by a number of our best swimmers. There will be springboard diving and hoop diving from the tower.

All of the circus members are now busy preparing for the coming annual circus, which will be held the first week in April. This circus we expect to eclipse all others. There will be special stunts never before seen in the city.
