Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks, And given my treasures and my rights of thee To thick eyed musing and curst melancholy? In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watch'd, 52
And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars, Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed, Or, 'Courage! to the field!' And thou hast talk'd

Of shes and retires, of trenches, tents, 56
Of allsadoes, frontiers, parapets,
Of bawlsks, of cannon, culverin,
Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,
And all the currents of a heady fight. 60
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,
And thus hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep,
That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
Like bubbles in a late-disturbed stream; 64
And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden heat. O! what portents are these?

some heavy business hath my lord in hand, 68
And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho!

Enter Servant.

Is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff? 72

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne,
Well, I will back him straight: O, Esperance!
Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady P. But hear you, my lord,

Hot. What sayst thou, my lady?

Lady P. What is it carries you away? 80

Hot. Why, my horse, my love, my horse.

Lady P. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen

As you are toss'd with. In faith,

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will. 84

I fear my brother Mortimer doth stir

About his title, and hath sent for you

To line his enterprise. But if you go— 88

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love,

Lady P. Come, come, you paraquito, answer me

Directly unto this question that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, 92

An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away,

Away, you trifle! Love! I love thee not,

I care not for thee, Kate; this is no world, 96

To play with mannikins and to tilt with lips:

We must have bloody noses and crack'd crowns,

And pass them current too. God's me, my horse!

What sayst thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have with me? 100

Lady P. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?

Well, do not, then; for since you love me not,

I will not love myself. Do you not love me?

Nay, tell me if you speak in jest or no. 104

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?

And when I am o' horseback, I will swear

I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;

I must not have you henceforth question me 108

Whither I go, nor reason whereabout.

Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,

This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate,

I know you wise; but yet no further wise 112

Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are,

But yet a woman; and for secrecy,

No lady closer; for I well believe

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate. 117

Lady P. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But, hark you, Kate;

Whither I go, thither shall you go too; 120

To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.

Will this content you, Kate?

Lady P. It must, of force. 121

[Exit]

Scene IV.—Eustcheap. A Room in the Bond's Head Tavern.

Enter the PRINCE and POINS.

Prince. Ned, prithee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal? 123

Prince. With three or four loggerheads amongst three or four score hogsheds. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their christen names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy; and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy,—by the Lord, so they call me,—and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eustcheap. They call drinking deep, dyeing scarlet; and when you breathe in your wutering, they cry 'hem!' and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an undersinker, one that never spake other English in his life than—'Eight shillings and sixpence,' and—'You are welcome,' with this shrill addition,—'Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moor,' or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaf come, I prithee do thou stand in some by room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling 'Francis?' that his tale to me may be nothing but 'Anon.' Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent. 37

Poins. Francis!

Prince. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis! [Exit POINS.] 41

Enter FRANCIS.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. Look down into the Pougarnet, Ralph.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord. 44

Prince. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five years—and as much has to—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. 47

Prince. Five years! by 's lady a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it? 53

Fran. O Lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart—

Poins. [Within.] Francis! 56

Fran. Anon, sir.

Prince. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see—about Michaelmas next I shall be— 61

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir. Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

Prince. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me, 'twas a pennyworth, was't not? 66

Fran. O Lord, sir! I would it had been two.

Prince. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon. 72

Prince. Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, o' Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis! 76

Fran. My lord?

Prince. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jerkin crystal-button, knot-pated, agate-ring, puke-stocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,— 81

Fran. O Lord, sir, who do you mean?

Prince. Why then, your brown bastard is your only drink; for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis! 88

Prince. Away, you rogue! Dost thou not hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.]

Enter VINTNER.

Vint. What! standest thou still, and hearest such a calling? Look to the guests within.

[Exit FRANCIS.] My lord, old Sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

Prince. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit VINTNER.] POINS! 9

Re-enter POINS.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

Prince. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the rascals are at the door: shall we be merry? 10

Polins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what's the issue? 104

Prince. I am now of all humours that have show'd themselves humours since the old days of goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [FRANCIS crosses the stage, with wine.] What's o'clock, Francis? 110

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. [Exit.]

Prince. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is up-stairs and down-stairs; his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the North; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, 'Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.' 'O my sweet Harry,' says she, 'how many hast thou killed to-day?' 'Give my roan horse a drench,' says he, and answers, 'Some fourteen,' an hour after, 'a trifle, a trifle.' I prithce call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. 'Rho!' says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow. 127

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, PETO, and FRANCIS.

Polins. Welcome, Jack: where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! Give me a cup of sack, boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks and mend them and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.]

Prince. Didst thou never see Titus kiss a dish of butter—pitiiful-hearted Titus, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun? If thou didst then behold that compound. 138

Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too: there is nothing but rogery to be found in villainous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it, a villainous coward! Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt. If manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

Prince. How now, wool-sack! what mutterest thou? 152

Fal. A King's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hulk on my face more. You Prince of Wales! 157

Prince. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Polins there? 161

Polins. 'Zounds! ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders; you care not who sees your back: call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack; I am a rogue if I drunk to-day. 172

Prince. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunkest last.

Fal. All's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I. 176

Prince. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter? there be four here have ta'en a thousand pound this morning. 1

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prince. What, a hundred, man? 184

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword lucked like a hand-saw: ecce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man; all would not do. A plague of all cowards! Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains and the sons of darkness.

Prince. Speak, sirs; how was it?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen,— 195

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Hebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,— 204

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

Prince. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All! I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature. 212

Prince. Pray God you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two I am sure I have paid, two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward; here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

Prince. What, four? thou saidst but two even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four. 224

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado but took all their seven points in my target, thus. 222

Prince. Seven? why, there were but four even now.

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits. 232

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

Prince. Prithce, let him alone; we shall have more anon. 23f

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

Prince. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram that I told thee of.— 24c

Prince. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken.—

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground; but I followed me close, came in foot and hand and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid.

Prince. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two. 248

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal-green came at my back and let drive at me; for it was so dark. Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand. 252

Prince. These lles are like the father that begets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-ketch,— 257

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? Is not the truth the truth?

Prince. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal-green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this? 263

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? 'Zounds! an I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! If reasons were as plenty as blackberries I would give no man a reason upon compulsion. I. 270

Prince. I'll be no longer gully of this sin: this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh;— 273

Fal. 'Stblood, you starvellug, you elf skln, you dried neat's tongue, you bull's pizzle, you stock-fish! O! for breath to utter what is like thee; you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck;— 279

Prince. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisous, hear me speak but this. 281

Poins. Mark, Jack.

Prince. We two saw you four set on four and you bound them, and were masters of their wealth. Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Then did we two set on you four, and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it; yea, and can show it you here in the house. And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame? 296

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why, hear you, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest I am as vallant as Hercules; but beware instinct; the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter, I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life; I for a vallant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, hds, I am glad you have the money. Hostess, clap to the doors: wateh to-night, pray to-morrow. Gallants, hds, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What! shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore? 313

Prince. Content; and the argument shall be thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of 'hat, Hal, an thou lovest me! 317

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Quick. O Jesu! my lord the prince!

Prince. How now, my lady the hostess! what sayest thou to me? 320

Quick. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you: he says he comes from your father.

Prince. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he? 326

Quick. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Shall I give him his answer?

Prince. Prithce, do, Jack. 330

Fal. Fulth, and I'll send him packing. [Exit.]

Prince. Now, sirs: by'r lady, you fought fair; so did you, Peto; so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you run away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince; no, he!

Bard. Fulth, I ran when I saw others run. 336

Prince. Fulth, tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why he hacked it with his dagger, and said he would swear truth out of England but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and persuaded us to do the like. 342

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed, and then to beslobber our garments with it and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devleas. 348

Prince. O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou rankest away. What instinct hadst thou for it? 348

Bard. [Pointing to his face.] My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations? 357

Prince. I do. 357

Bard. What think you they portend? 357

Prince. Hot livers and cold purses. 360

Bard. Cholera, my lord, if rightly taken. 360

Prince. No, if rightly taken, halter.— 360

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone.— How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee? 366

Fal. My own knee! when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring. A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was Sir John Bracy from your father: you went to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales, that gave Amalmon the bastinado and made Luelfer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook—what a plague call you him? 378

Poins. Owen Glendower. 378

Fal. Owen, Owen, the same; and his son-in-law Mortimer and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular. 378

Prince. He that rides at high speed and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying. 385

Fal. You have hit it. 385

Prince. So did he never the sparrow. 385

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run. 380

Prince. Why, what a rascal art thou then to praise him so for running? 380

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot he will not budge a foot. 393

Prince. Yes, Jack, upon instinct. 393

Fal. I grant ye, upon his'tnet. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolcy away tonight; thy father's beard is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel. 400

Prince. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy muleheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds. 404

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like we shall have good trading that way. But tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it? 412

Prince. Not a whit, I' faith; I lack some of thy instinct. 412

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly child to-morrow when thou comest to thy father: if thou love me, practise an answer. 417

Prince. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life. 417

Fal. Shall I? content: this chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown. 422

Prince. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown! 425

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. Give me a cup of sack to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Canibyses' vein. [Drinks. 422

Prince. Well, here is my leg. [Makes a bow. 422

Fal. And here is my speech. Stand aside, nobility. 434

Quick. O Jesu! This is excellent sport, I' faith! 434

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain. 436

Quick. O, the father! how he holds his countenance. 436

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful queen, 440

For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes. 440

Quick. O Jesu! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see! 440

Fal. Pence, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle-brain! Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the canonike, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point; why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest; for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears, not in pleasure but in passion, not in words only, but in woes also. And yet there is a virtuous man whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

Prince. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Fal. A goodly portly man, I' faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or by'r lady, inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lowly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, perer woorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prince. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father. 483

Fal. Depose me? If thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker or a poultier's hare.

Prince. Well, here I am set. 488

Fal. And here I stand. Judge, my masters.

Prince. Now, Harry! whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

Prince. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous. 493

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false; nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, I' faith.

Prince. Swarest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace; there is a devil haunts thee in the likeness of a fat old man; a tin of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swoln parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning but in craft? wherein crafty but in villainy? wherein villanous but in all things? wherein worthy but in nothing? 512

Fal. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom means your Grace?

Prince. That villanous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know. 517

Prince. I know thou dost.

Fal. But to say I know more harm in him than in myself were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it; but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean k'ne are to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Polns; but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, vallant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more vallant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack, and banish all the world. 535

Prince. I do, I will. [A knocking heard.
] Exit MISTRESS QUICKLY, FRANCIS, and BARDOLPH.

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O! my lord, my lord, the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door.

Fal. Out, ye rogue! Play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Quick. O Jesu! my lord, my lord! 541

Prince. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddle-stick: what's the matter?

Quick. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in? 546

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad without seeming so. 549

Prince. And thou a natural coward without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major. If you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another. 556

Prince. Go, hide thee behind the arras: the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me. 561

[Exit all but the PRINCE and PETO.

Prince. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff, what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hie and cry 564

Hath follow'd certain men into this house.

Prince. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord,

A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter. 568

Prince. The man, I do assure you, is not here, For I myself at this time have employed him.

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, 572

Send him to answer thee, or any man, For anything he shall be charg'd withal: And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen 576

Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

Prince. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men,

He shall be answerable; and so farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord. 580

Prince. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock. [Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.]

Prince. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's.

Go, call him forth. 584

Peto. Falstaff! fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

Prince. Mark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [He searcheth his pockets, and findeth certain papers.] What hast thou found? 590

Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord.

Prince. Let's see what they be: read them.

Peto. Item, A capon . . . . . 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce . . . . . 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons. . . . . 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies and sack after supper . . . . . 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread . . . . . 0h.

Prince. O monstrous! but one half-penny-worth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack! What there is else, keep close; we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning. We must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so good morrow, Peto. 608

Peto. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

Enter HOTSUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,

And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower,

Will you sit down?

And uncle Worcester: a plague upon it! I have forgot the map. 4

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur; For by that name as oft as Lancaster 8
Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale and with A rising sigh he wishes you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of. 12

Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cressets; and at my birth 15
The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kittened, though yourself had never been born. 20

Glend. I say the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind, 24

If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did trouble. 24

Hot. O! then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,

And not fear of your nativity.

Diseas'd nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth 28

Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd

By the imprisoning of unruly wind

Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,

Shakes the old beldam earth, and topples down 33

Steeple and moss-grown towers. At your birth

Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men

I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave 36

To tell you once again that at my birth

The fruit of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds

Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields.

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary; 41

And all the courses of my life do show

I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea 44

That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out that is but woman's son

Can trace me in the tedious ways of art, 48

And hold no pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh.

I'll to dinner.

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy! you will make him mad. 52

- Glend.* I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;
 But will they come when you do call for them?
Glend. Why, I can teach thee, cousin, to command
 The devil. 56
Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil
 By telling truth: tell truth and shame the devil.
 If thou have power to raise him, bring him
 hither, 60
 And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him
 hence.
 O! while you live, tell truth and shame the devil!
Mort. Come, come;
 No more of this unprofitable chat. 64
Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
 Against my power; thrice from the banks of Wye
 And sandy-bottom'd Severn have I sent him
 Bootless home and weather-beaten back. 68
Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!
 How 'scapes he agnes, in the devil's name?
Glend. Come, here's the map: shall we divide our right
 According to our threefold order taken? 72
Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it Into three limits very equally.
 England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,
 By south and east, is to my part assign'd; 76
 And all the fertile land within that bound,
 To Owen Glendower: and, dear coz, to you
 The remnant northward, lying off from Trent. 80
 And our indentures tripartite are drawn,
 Which being sealed interchangeably,
 A business that this night may execute,
 To-morrow, cousin Percy, you and I 84
 And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth
 To meet your father and the Scottish power,
 As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
 My father Glendower is not ready yet, 88
 Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.
 [To GLENDOWER.] Within that space you may have drawn together
 Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentle-
 men.
Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you,
 lords; 92
 And in my conduct shall your ladies come,
 From whom you now must steal and take no
 leave;
 For there will be a world of water shed
 Upon the parting of your wives and you. 96
Hot. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here,
 In quantity equals not one of yours:
 See how this river comes me cranking in,
 And cuts me from the best of all my land 100
 A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out.
- I'll have the current in this place damn'd up,
 And here the smug and silver Trent shall run
 In a new channel, fair and evenly: 104
 It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
 To rob me of so rich a bottom here.
Glent. Not wind! it shall, it must; you see it doth.
Mort. Yea, but 108
 Mark how he bears his course, and runs me up
 With like advantage on the other side;
 Ge'ing the opposed continent as much,
 As on the other side it takes from you. 112
Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him
 here,
 And on this north side win this cape of land;
 And then he runs straight and even.
Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.
Glend. I will not have it alter'd.
Hot. Will not you? 117
Glend. No, nor you shall not.
Hot. Who shall say me nay?
Glend. Why, that will I.
Hot. Let me not understand you then:
 Speak it in Welsh. 120
Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as
 you,
 For I was train'd up in the English court;
 Where, being but young, I fram'd to the harp
 Many an English ditty lovely well, 124
 And gave the tongue an helpful ornament;
 A virtue that was never seen in you.
Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my
 heart.
 I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew 128
 Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers;
 I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd,
 Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
 And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
 Nothing so much as minding poetry: 133
 'Tis like the fore'd gait of a shuffling nag.
Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.
Hot. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much land 136
 To any well-deserving friend;
 But in the way of bargain, mark you me,
 I'll cavil on the nuth part of a hair.
 Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away
 by night: 141
 I'll haste the writer and withal
 Break with your wives of your departure hence:
 I am afraid my daughter will run mad, 144
 So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.
Mort. Fle, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!
Hot. I cannot choose: sometimes he angers
 me
 With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
 Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies, 147
 And of a dragon, and a fleshless fish,
 A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulten raven,

A coughing lion, and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skumble-skumble stuff
As puts me from my faith. I'll tell thee what;
He held me last night at least nine hours
In reckoning up the several devils' names
That were his lackeys: I cried 'hum!' and
'well, go to.'

But mark'd him not a word. O! he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house. I had rather live
With cheese and garlick in a windmill, far,
Than feed on eates and have him talk to me
In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman,
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments, callant as a lion
And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope
When you do cross his humour; faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof:
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilfulblame;
And since your coming hither have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:

Though sometimes it show greatness, courage,
blood,—

And that's the dearest grace it renders you,—
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain:
The least of which haunting a nobleman
Loseth men's hearts and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Begging them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd; good manners be your speed!

Are come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers
me,

My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part
with you:

She'll be a soldier too: she'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy,

Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[GLENDOWER speaks to LADY MORTIMER in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.]

Glend. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry, one that no persuasion can do good upon. [She speaks to MORTIMER in Welsh.]

Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh

Which thou pour'st down from these swelling
heavens

I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley would I answer thee.

[She speaks again.]

I understand thy kisses and thou mine,

And that's a feeling disputation:

But I will never be a truant, love,

Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as dittles highly penn'd,

Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,

With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run
mad.

[She speaks again.]

Mort. O! I am ignorance itself in this.

Glend. She bids you

Upon the wanton rushes lay you down

And rest your gentle head upon her lap.

And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,

And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep,

Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness,

Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep

As is the difference between day and night

The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team

Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit and hear her sing:

By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;

And those musicians that shall play to you

Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence,

And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down: come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose.

[GLENDOWER speaks some Welsh words, and music is heard.]

Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh;

And 'tis no marvel he is so humorous.

By'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, how in Irish.

Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

Lady P. Now, God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.

[A Welsh song sung by LADY MORTIMER.]

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, 'in good sooth!' Heart!
you swear like a comfit-maker's wife! Not you,
'in good sooth;' and, 'as true as I live;' and,
'as God shall mend me;' and, 'as sure as day:'
And giv'st such sarceant surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk'dst further than Finsbury. 256

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath; and leave 'in sooth,'
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens. 260
Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor or red-breast teacher. An the indentures be draw I'll away within these two hours; and so, come in when ye will. [Exit.]

Glend. Come, come, Lord Northwar; ye are as slow

As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go. 268
By this our book is drawn; we will but seal,
And then to horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I

Must have some private conference: but be near at hand,

For we shall presently have need of you.

[Exeunt Lords.]

I know not whether God will have it so, 4

For some displeasing service I have done,

That, in his secret doom, out of my blood

He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;

But thou dost in thy passages of life 8

Make me believe that thou art only mark'd

For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven

To punish my misdreadings. Tell me else,

Could such inordinate and low desires, 12

Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,

Such barren pleasures, rude society,

As thou art match'd withal and grafted to,

Accompany the greatness of thy blood 16

And hold their level with thy princely heart?

Prince. So please your majesty, I would I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse

As well as I am doubtless I can purge 20

Myself of many I am charg'd withal:

Yet such extenuation let me beg,

As, in reproof of many tales devils'd,

Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,

By smiling pleak-thanks and base newsmongers,

I may, for some things true, wherein my youth

Hath faulty wander'd and irregular,

Find pardon on my true submission. 28

K. Hen. God pardon thee! yet let me wonder, Hurry,

At thy affections, which do lead a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.

Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost, 32

Which by thy younger brother is supplied,

And art almost an alien to the hearts

Of all the court and princes of my blood.

The hope and expectation of thy time 36

Is ruin'd, and the soul of every man

Prophetically do forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,

Common-hackney'd in the eyes of men, 40

Stale and cheap to vulgar company,

Whilom, that did help me to the crown,

Had still kept loyal to possession

And left me in reputeless banishment, 44

A fellow of no repute nor likehood,

By being seldom seen, I could not stir,

But like a comet I was wonder'd at;

That men would tell their children, 'This is he;'

Others would say, 'Where? which is Boling-broke?' 48

And then I stole a courtesy from heaven,

And dress'd myself in such humility

That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,

Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,

Even in the presence of the crowned king.

Thus did I keep my person fresh and new;

My presence, like a robe pontifical, 56

Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,

Seldom but sumptuous, showed like a feast,

And won by rareness such solemnity.

The skipping king, he ambled up and down 60

With shallow jesters and rash bawlin wits,

Soon kindled and soon burnt; carded his state,

Mingled his royalty with capering fools,

Had his great name profaned with their scorn,

And gave his countenance, against his name, 65

'To laugh at gibing boys and stand the push

Of every beardless vain comparative;

Grew a companion to the common streets, 68

Enfeoff'd himself to popularity;

That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,

They surfeited with honey and began

To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much. 73

So, when he had occasion to be seen,

He was but as the cuckoo is in June.

Hearl, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes

As, sleek and blunted with community, 77

Afford no extraordinary gaze.

Such as is bent on sun-like majesty

When it shines seldom in admiring eyes; 80

But rather drows'd and hung their eyelids down,

Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect

As cloudy men use to their adversaries,

Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full

And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou; 85

For thou hast lost thy princely privilege

With vile participation: not an eye

But is awery of thy common sight, 38
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more ;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious
lord, 92

Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
As thou art to this hour was Richard then
When I from France set foot at Ravenspurgh ;
And even as I was then is Percy now. 96

Now, by my sceptre and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Than thou the shadow of succession ;

For of no right, nor colour like to right, 100
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm,

Turns head against the lion's armed jaws,
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on 104

To bloody battles and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honour hath he got

Against renowned Douglas! whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions and great name in arms,

Holds from all soldiers chief majority, 109
And military title capital,

Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.

Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes, 112

This infant warrior, in his enterprises
Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him once,

Enlarged him and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up 116

And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumber-

land,

The Archbishop's Grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,

conspire against us and are up. 120

Wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,

Which art my near'st and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough, through vassal fear,

Ease inclination, and the start of spleen, 125
To fight against me under Percy's pay,

To dog his heels, and curtsy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate. 128

Prince. Do not think so; you shall not find
it so:

And God forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!

I will redeem all this on Percy's head, 132
And in the closing of some glorious day

Be bold to tell you 'that I am your son ;
When I will wear a garment all of blood

And stain my favours in a bloody mask, 136
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with

it:

And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,

This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight, 140

And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm,—

Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shames redoubled!—for the time will come

That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.

Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf; 143

And I will call him to so strict account
That he shall render every glory up,

Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart. 152

This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which, if he be pleas'd I shall perform,

I to beseech your majesty may save
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance: 156

If not, the end of life cancels all bands,
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths

Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.
K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in
this: 160

Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust
herein.

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt! thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak of.

Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word 164
That Douglas and the English rebels met,

The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,—

If promises be kept on every hand,— 168
As ever offer'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth
to-day,

With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster ;
For this advertisement is five days old. 172

On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward ;

On Thursday we ourselves will march: our meeting

is Bridgenorth; and Harry, you shall march through Gloucestershire; by which account, 176

Our business valued, so is twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.

Our hands are full of business: let's away ;
Advantage feeds him not while men delay. 180

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Bear's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown; I am withered like an old apple-john. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse; the inside of a church! Company, villanous company, hath been the spoil of me. 12

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it: come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough: swore little; dined not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass. 22

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, out of all reasonable compass, Sir John. 26

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life: thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop, but 'tis in the nose of thee: thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm. 32

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a Death's head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, 'By this fire, that's God's angel:' but thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou rankest up Gads-hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O! thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two-and-thirty years; God reward me for it! 55

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly.

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

How now, Dame Partlet the hen! have you inquired yet who pickled my pocket? 61

Quick. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant

by servant: the tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before. 67

Fal. You lie, hostess: Bardolph was shaved and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn my pocket was pickled. Go to, you are a woman; go.

Quick. Who, I? No; I defy thee: God's light! I was never called so in my own house before. 72

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Quick. No, Sir John; you do not know me, Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back. 78

Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolt-ers of them. 81

Quick. Now, as I am true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four-and-twenty pound. 85

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Quick. He! alas! he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What! will you make a younker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket pickled? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark.

Quick. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper. 97

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup; 'sblood! an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so. 100

Enter the PRINCE and POINS marching. FAL-STAFF meets them, playing on his truncheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, if faith? must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Quick. My lord, I pray you, hear me. 104

Prince. What sayest thou, Mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Quick. Good my lord, hear me. 108

Fal. Prithee, let her alone, and list to me.

Prince. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras and had my pocket pickled: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets. 113

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Will thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's. 117

Prince. A trifle; some eight-penny matter.

Quick. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your Grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said he would cudgel you. 122

Prince. What! he did not?
Quick. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else. 125

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Quick. Say, what thing? what thing?
Fal. What thing! why, a thing to thank God on. 133

Quick. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so. 137

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Quick. Say, what beast, thou knave thou? 140

Fal. What beast! why an otter.

Prince. An otter, Sir John! why, an otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her. 144

Quick. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

Prince. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly. 149

Quick. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound? 153

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Quick. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would edgel you. 157

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea; if he said my ring was copper. 160

Prince. I say 'tis copper: darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art a prince, I fear thee as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp. 165

Prince. And why not as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion: dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break! 170

Prince. O! if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees. But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, or honesty in this bosom of thine; it is all filled up with guts and muddriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor pennyworth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded: if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not ashamed? 183

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocency Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villany? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess then, you picked my pocket? 189

Prince. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest I am pacified. Still! Nay prithee, be gone. [Exit MISTRESS QUICKLY.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad, how is that answered? 197

Prince. O! my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee: the money is paid back again.

Fal. O! I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double labour. 201

Prince. I am good friends with my father and may do anything.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Eard. Do, my lord.

Prince. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot. 208

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O! for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts; I am helonously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

Prince. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord? 216

Prince. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster,

To my brother John; this to my Lord of Westmoreland.

Go, Poins, to horse, to horse! for thou and I have thirty miles to ride ere dinner-time. 220

Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall At two o'clock in the afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive Money and order for their furniture. 224

The land is burning; Percy stands on high; And either we or they must lower lie.

[Exit the PRINCE, POINS, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my breakfast; come!

O! I could wish this tavern were my drum. 228

[Exit.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTESPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLASS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth

In this fine age were not thought flattery,

Such attribution should the Douglas have,
 As not a soldier of this season's stamp 4
 Should go so general current through the world.
 By God, I cannot flatter; Go defy
 The tongues of soothers; but a braver place
 In my heart's love hath no man than yourself. 8
 Nay, task me to my word; approve me, 'ord.
Doug. Thou art the king of honour:
 No man so potent breathes upon the ground
 But I will beard him.
Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. 12

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there? [To DOUGLAS.]
 I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father.

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord: he's grievous sick. 16

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick

in such a justling time? Who leads his power?
 Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my
 lord. 20

Wor. I prithee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;

And at the time of my departure thence
 He was much fear'd by his physicians. 24

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole

Ere he by sickness had been visited:
 His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect 28

The very life-blood of our enterprise;
 'Tis catch'd hither, even to our camp.

He writes me here, that inward sickness—
 And that his friends by deputation could not 32

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet
 To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On any soul remov'd but on his own.
 Yet doth he give us bold advertisement, 36

That with our small conjunction we should on,
 To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no quadding now,
 Because the king is certainly possess'd 40

Of all our purposes. What say you to it?
Wor. Your father's sickness is a malin to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off:
 And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want 44

Seems more than we shall find it. Were it good
 To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast? to set so rich a malin
 On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour? 48

It were not good; for therein should we read
 The very bottom and the soul of hope,

The very list, the very utmost bound
 Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should; 52
 Where now remains a sweet reversion:
 We may boldly spend upon the hope of what
 Is to come in:

A comfort of retirement lives in this. 56
Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
 If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the malnhead of our affairs.
Wor. But yet, I would you, father had been

here. 60

The quality and hair of our attempt
 Brooks no division. It will be thought

By some, that know not why he is away,
 That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike 64

Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence.
 And think how such an apprehension

May turn the tide of fearful faction
 And breed a kind of question in our cause; 68

For well you know we of the offering side
 Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,

And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence
 The eye of reason may pry in upon us: 72

This absence of your father's draws a curtain,
 That shows the ignorant a kind of fear

Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
 I rather of his absence make this use: 76

It lends a lustre and more great opinion,
 A larger dare to our great enterprise,

Than if the earl were here; for men must think,
 If we without his help, can make a head 80

To push against the kingdom, with his help
 We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.

Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.
Doug. As heart can think: there is not such

a word 84
 Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Vern. Pray God my news be worth a welcome,
 lord.

The Earl of Westmorland, seven thousand strong, is marching hitherwards; with him Priuco John.

Hot. No harm: what more?
Vern. And further, I have learn'd,

The king himself in person is set forth,
 Or hitherwards intended speedly, 92

With strong and mighty preparation.
Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his

son,
 The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales,

And his comrades, that daff'd the world aside, 96
 And bid it pass?

Vern. All furnish'd, all in arms,
 All plum'd like eagles that wing the wind,

Bal'd like eagles having lately bath'd,
 Glittering in golden coats, like images, 100

As full of spirit as the month of May,
 And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer,

Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.

 His cushions on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,

 And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
 As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
 To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus 109
 And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more: worse than the sun
 In March

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come;
 They come like sacrifices in their trim, 113
 And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war
 All hot and bleeding will we offer them:

The maled Mars shall on his altar sit 116
 Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire
 To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh
 And yet not ours. Come, let me taste my horse,

Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt 120
 Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales:

Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
 Meet and ne'er part till our drop down a course.
 O! that Glendower were come.

Ver. There is more news: 124
 I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
 He cannot draw his power these fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty
 sound. 128

Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.
Hot. Forty let it be:

My father and Glendower being both away,
 The powers of us may serve so great a day. 132

Come, let us take a muster speedily:
 Doomday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying: I am out of fear
 Of death or death's hand for this one half year.
 [Exit.

Scene II.—A public Road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-Co'-fil' to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain? 4

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end. 10

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soursed gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds.
 I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; Inquire me out contracted bachelors, such had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caller worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as indeed were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons of younger brothers, revolted tapsters and other trade-fallen, the cankers of a calm world;

 long peace; ten times more dishonourable than an old faced ancient: and such have fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draf and husks.

A mad fellow met me on the way and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows.
 I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat: nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyes on; for, indeed I had the most of them out of prison.
 There's but a shirt and a half in all my company: and the half shirt is two napkins tacked together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-rose Inn-keeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge. 53

Enter the Prince and WESTMORELAND.

Prince. How now, blown Jack! how now, quilt!

Fal. What, Hal! How now, mad wag! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all night. 63

Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

Prince. I think to steal cream: indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine. 70

Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly. 76

Fal. Falsh, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learned that of me. 79

Prince. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs bare. But sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long. 84

Fal. Well.

To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast

Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful. 4

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well: You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,— And I dare well maintain it with my life,— 9

If well-respected honour bid me on, I hold as little counsel with weak fear

As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle which of us fears. 13

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much, 16

Being men of such great leading as you are,

That you foresee not what impelments

Drag back our expedition; certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up: 20

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half of himself. 24

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy

In general, journey-bated and brought low:

The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours: For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in. 29

[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God 32

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some

Envy your great deservings and good name,

Because you are not of our quality. 36

But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,

So long as out of limit and true rule

You stand against anointed majesty. 40

But, to my charge. The king hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs, and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace

Such bold host lity, teaching his duteous land 44

Andacious cruelty. If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,—

Which he confesseth to be manifold,—

He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed 48

You shall have your desires with interest,

And pardon absolute for yourself and these

Herein mistak'd by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and well we know the king 52

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.

My father and my uncle and myself

Did give him that same royalty he wears;

And when he was not six-and-twenty strong, 56

Sleek in the world's regard, wretched and low,

A poor unmind'd outlaw sneaking home,

My father gave him welcome to the shore;

And when he heard him swear and vow to God 61

He came but to be Duke of Lancaster,

To sue his livery and beg his peace,

With tears of innocence and terms of zeal,

My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, 64

Swore him assistance and perform'd it too.

Now when the lords and barons of the realm

Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,

The more and less came in with cap and knee: 69

Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,

Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,

Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their 72

Onths,

Gave him their helms as pages, follow'd him

Even at the heels in golden multitudes.

He presently, as greatness knows itself,

Steps me a little higher than his vow

Made to my father, while his blood was poor, 76

Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh;

And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform

Some certain edicts and some strait decrees

That lie too heavy on the commonwealth. 80

Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep

Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,

This seeming brow of justice, did he win 84

The hearts of all that he did angle for;

Proceeded further; cut me off the heads

Of all the favourites that the absent king

In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war. 88

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then to the point.

In short time after, he depos'd the king:
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state:
To make that worse, snuff'd his kinsman:
March— 93

Who is, if every owner were well plac'd.
Indeed his king—to be engag'd in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeit'd: 96

Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence:
Rat'd my uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismis'd my father from the court: 100
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong:
And in conclusion drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and withal to pry
Into his title, the which we find 104
Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile,

Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd 108
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall my uncle
Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love. 112

Hot. And may be so we shall.

Blunt. Pray God, you do!
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—York. A Room in the ARCH-
BISHOP'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK and SIR MICHAEL.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael; bear this sealed brief

With winged haste to the lord marshal;
This to my cousin Scroop, and all the rest
To whom they are directed. If you knew 4
How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir M. My good lord,
I guess their tenour.

Arch. Like enough you do.
To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day 8
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king with mighty and quick-raised power 12
Meets with Lord Harry: and, I fear, Sir Michael,
What with the sleekness of Northumberland,—
Whose power was in the first proportion,—
And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence, 16

Who with them was a rated shew too,

And comes not in, o'er-rul'd by prophecies,—
I fear the power of Percy is too weak

To wage an instant trial with the king. 20

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear:
There is the Douglas and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord
Harry Percy, 24

And there's my Lord of Worcester, and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn

The special head of all the land together: 28

The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and war-like Blunt;
And many more courivalls and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms. 32

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear:
And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed:

For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the king 36
Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,
For he hath heard of our confederacy,

And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against
him:

Therefore make haste. I must go write again 40
To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael.

[Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—The KING'S Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, JOHN OF LAN-CASTER, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and SIR JOHN FALSTAFF.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yon basky hill! the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

Prince. The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes, 4
And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretells a tempest and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then with the losers let it sympatulize,

For nothing can seem foul to those that win. 8
[Trumpet sounds.]

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

How now, my Lord of Worcester! 'tis not well
That you and I should meet upon such terms
As now we meet. You have deceived our trust,
And made us doff our easy robes of peace, 12
To crash our old limbs in argentile steel:
This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it? will you again unknt
This churlish knot of all-abhorred war, 16
And move in that obedient orb again
Where you did give a fair and natural light,

- And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
A prodg'y of fear and a portent 20
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?
Wor. Hear me, my liege.
For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life 24
With quiet hours; for I do protest
I have not sought the day of this dislike.
K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then?
Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prince. Peace, chewet, peace! 29
Wor. It pleased your majesty to turn your looks
Of favour from myself and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord, 32
We were the first and dearest of your friends,
For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time; and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand, 36
When yet you were in place and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home and boldly did outlaure
The dangers of the time. You swore to us, 41
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,
The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster. 45
To this we swore our aid; but, in short space
It rain'd down fortune showering on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you, 48
What with our help, what with the absent king,
What with the injuries of a wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the king 52
So long in his mincey Irish wars,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarm of fair advantages
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd 56
To gripe the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster;
And being fed by us you us'd us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, 60
Useth the sparrow: did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk
That even our love durst not come near your sight
For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing 64
We were enforced, for safety's sake, to fly
Out of your sight and raise this present head;
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself 68
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.
K. Hen. These things indeed, you have articulate, 72
Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings and poor discontents, 76
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to inpaint his cause; 80
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.
Prince. In both our armies there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter, 84
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head, 88
I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-vallant or more vallant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds, 92
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry;
And so I hear he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty— 96
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight, 100
K. Hen. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,
Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love 104
That are misled upon your cousin's part;
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he and they and you, yea, every man
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his, 108
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do; but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone; 112
We will not now be troubled with reply;
We offer fair, take it advisedly.
[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.]
Prince. It will not be accepted, on my life.
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together 116
Are confident against the world in arms.
K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;
For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just! 120
[Exeunt KING HENRY, BLENS, and JOHN
OF LANCASTER.]
Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.
Prince. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.
Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all
well. 126
Prince. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]
Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well,

 'tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on?
 how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound?
 No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No.
 What is honour? a word. What is that word, honour? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it?
 he that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it?
 No. Doth he hear it? No. It is insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it; honour is a mere scutcheon; and so ends my catechism. 143
 [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no! my nephew must not know,
 Sir Richard,
 The liberal kind offer of the king.

Vern. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.
 It is not possible, it cannot be, 4
 The king should keep his word in loving us;
 He will suspect us still, and find a time
 To punish this offence in other faults:
 Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of
 eyes; 8

For treason is but trusted like the fox,
 Who, u'er so tame, so cherish'd and lock'd up,
 Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
 Look how we can, or sad or merrily, 12
 Interpretation will misquote our looks,
 And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
 The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
 My nephew's trespass may be well forgot, 16
 It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood;
 And an adopted name of privilege,
 A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
 All his offences live upon my head 20
 And on his father's: we did train him on;
 And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
 We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
 Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know 24
 In any case the offer of the king.

Vern. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so.
 Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd; deliver up 28
 My Lord of Westmoreland. Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmore-
 land.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so. 32

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly.

[Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, 36
 Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,
 By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
 He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
 With haughty arms this hateful name in us. 40

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have thrown

A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth,
 And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear
 it;

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.
 Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king, 45

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O! would the quarrel lay upon our heads,

And that no man might draw short breath today 48

But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell me,
 How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in contempt?

Vern. No, by my soul; I never in my life
 Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly, 52
 Unless a brother should a brother dare
 To gentle exercise and proof of arms.

He gave you all the duties of a man,
 Trimmi'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
 Spoke your deservings like a chronicle, 57
 Making you ever better than his praise,

By still dispraising praise valu'd with you;
 And, which became him like a prince indeed, 60

He made a blushing brag of himself,
 And chid his truant youth with such a grace
 As if he master'd there a double spirit
 Of teaching and of learning instantly. 64

There did he pause. But let me tell the world,
 If he outlive the envy of this day,
 England did never owe so sweet a hope,
 So much misconstru'd in his wantonness. 68

Hot. Consin, I think thou art enamour'd
 On his follies: never did I hear
 Of any prince so wild a libertine.

But be he as he will, yet once ere night 72
 I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
 That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
 Arm, arm, with speed! And, fellows, soldiers,
 friends.

Better consider what you have to do, 76
 Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
 Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now. 80

O gentlemen! the time of life is short:
 To spend that shortness basely were too long,
 If life did ride upon a dial's point,
 Still ending at the arrival of an hour. 84

As if we live, we live to tread on kings;

If die, brave death, when princes die with us!
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just. 25

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my tale,

For I profess not talking. Only this,—
Let each man do his best; and here draw I 26
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on. 26
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy. 26

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.]

Scene III.—Between the Camps.

Excursions and Parties fighting. Alarum to the Battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and SIR WALTER BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle
thus

Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus 4
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought

Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, King Harry, 3
This sword hath ended him; so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;

And thou shalt find a king that will revenge 12
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and BLUNT is slain.]

Enter HOISPUR.

Hot. O, Douglas! hadst thou fought at Holmesdon thus,
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the king. 16

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas! no; I know this face full
well;

A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; 20
scandalously furnish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!

A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear:

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats. 25

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;

I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away! 28
Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day.

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here; here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt: there's honour for you! here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered:
there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here? 40

Enter the PRINCE.

Prince. What! stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are unreveng'd: prithee, lend
me thy sword. 44

Fal. O Hal! I prithee, give me leave to breathe awhile. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure. 48

Prince. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee. I prithee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou gett'st not my sword; but take my pistol,
if thou wilt. 53

Prince. Give it me. What! is it in the case?
Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot: there's that will sack a city. 56

[The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.]

Prince. What! is't a time to jest and dally
now? [Throws it at him, and exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him.
If he do come in my way, so; if he do not. If I come in his, willingly, let him make a carbado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Field.

*Alarums. Excursions. Enter KING HENRY,
the PRINCE, JOHN OF LANCASTER, and WEST-MORLAND.*

K. Hen. I prithee,

Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much.

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

Lanc. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince. I beseech you, majesty, make up, lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, lay lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help;

And God forbid a shallow scatch should drive
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this, 't
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Lanc. We breathe too long, come, consist Westmoreland,

Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt JOHN OF LANCASTER and WESTMORELAND.]

Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster;

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;

But now, I do respect thee as my sonl.

K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point

With lustler maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O! this boy

Lends mettle to us all. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads:

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those

That wear those colours on them: what art thou,

That counterfeist the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart

So many of his shadows thou hast met

And not the very king. I have two boys

Seek Percy and thyself about the field;

But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,

I will assay thee; so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeist;

And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king;

But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,

And thus I win thee.

[They fight. KING HENRY being in danger, re-enter the PRINCE.]

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like

Never to hold it up again! the spirits

Of vallant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms:

It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,

Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight. DOUGLAS flies.]

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your Grace?

Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,

And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile.

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,

And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life.

In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prince. O God! they did me too much injury

That ever said I hearken'd for your death.

If it were so, I might have let alone

The insulting hand of Douglas over me;

Which would have been as speedy to your end

As all the poisonous potions in the world,

And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make me to Clifton: I'll to Sir

Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.]

Enter HOTSUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prince. Why, then, I see

A very vallant rebel of that name.

I am the Prince of Wales; and think not,

Percy,

To share with me in glory any more:

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double reign,

Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the hour is come

To end the one of us; and would to God

Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

Prince. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee;

And all the budding honours on thy crest

I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter DOUGLAS; he fights with FALSTAFF.

who falls down as if he were dead, and exits.

DOUGLAS. HOTSUR is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth.

I better brook the loss of brittle life

Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword

my flesh:

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's

fool;

And time, that takes survey of all the world,

Must have a stop. O! I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death 84
Lies on my tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust,
And food for— [Dies.]

Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart!

Ill-wear'd ambition, how much art thou shrink!
When that this body did contain a spirit, 89
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now, two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough: this earth, that bears thee
dead, 92

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of zeal;
But let my favours like thy mangled face, 96
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave, 100
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!

[He speaks FALSTAFF on the ground.]

What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!

I could have better spar'd a better man. 104
O! I should have a heavy miss of thee
If I were much in love with vanity.

Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray. 108
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by:

Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. [Rising.] Embowell'd! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Sblood! 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot terragant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit: to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy though he be dead: now, if he should counterfeit too and rise? By my faith I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me: therefore, sirrah [stabbing him], with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me.

[He takes HOTSPUK on his back.]

Re-enter the PRINCE and JOHN OF LANCASTER.

Prince. Come, brother John: full bravely hast thou flesh'd 132
Thy maiden sword.

Lanc. But, soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prince. I did; I saw him dead,

Breathless and bleeding on the ground. 136
Art thou alive? or is it fantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I prithee, speak;
We will not trust our eyes without our ears:
Thou art not what thou seem'st. 140

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy [throwing the body down]:
If your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

Prince. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead. 147

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, lord! how this world is given to lying. I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive and would deny it, 'zounds,
I would make him eat a piece of my sword. 157

Lanc. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

Prince. This is the strangest fellow, brother
John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a file may do thee grace, 161
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead. 165

[Exeunt the PRINCE and JOHN OF LANCASTER.]

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit.]

Scene V.—Another Part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, the PRINCE, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER and VERNON prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-splitted Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary? 4
Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl and many a creature else
Had been alive this hour, 8
If like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me
to;
And I embrace this fortune patiently, 12

Since not to be avoided it falls on me.
K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death; and Vernon too;

Other offenders we will pause upon.
 [ Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON, gu. 11
 How goes the field? 16

Prince. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw

The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
 The noble Percy slain, and all his men
 Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest; 20
 And falling from a hill he was so bruis'd
 That the pursuers took him. At my tent
 The Douglas is, and I beseech your Grace
 I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart. 24

Prince. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to
 you

This honourable bounty shall belong.
 Go to the Douglas, and deliver him

Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free: 23
 His valour shown upon our crests to-day
 Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
 Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

Lanc. I thank your Grace for this high commends; 32

Which I shall give away immediately.

K. Hen. Then this remains, that we divide our power.

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest
 speed, 36

To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,
 Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:

Myself and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
 To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March.

Rebellion in th' land shall lose his sway, 41
 Meeting the check of such another day:

And since this business so fair is done,
 Let us not leave till all our own be won. [ Exeunt

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop

*The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?
 From the orient to the drooping west,*

*Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
 The acts commenced on this ball of earth:*

*Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
 The which in every language I pronounce,*

*Stuffing the ears of men with false reports,
 I speak of peace, while covert enmity*

*Under the smile of safety wounds the world:
 And who? if Rumour, who but only I,*

Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence, 12

*Whilst the big year, scold with some other grief,
 Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,*

*And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
 Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,* 14

*And of so easy and so plain a stop
 That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
 The still-discordant wars, o'g multitude,*

*Can play upon it. But what need I thus
 My well-known body to anatomize* 20

*Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
 I run before King Harry's victory;*

Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury 24

Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,

*Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
 Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I*

To speak so true at first? my office is 22

To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death. 32
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns

Between the royal field of Shrewsbury,
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiring on, 37
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's
tongues

They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

Act I.

Scene I.—Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBER-
LAND'S Castle.

Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!
[The Porter opens the gate.
Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?
L. Bard. Tell thou the earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard: 4
Please it your honour knock but at the gate.
And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

L. Bard. Here comes the earl.
[Exit Porter.]

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now
Should be the father of some stratagem. 5
The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose
And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury. 12

North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish.
The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts 17

Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince
John

And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field.
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir
John,

Is prisoner to your son: O! such a day,
So fought, so follow'd and so fairly won.
Came not till now to dignify the times
Since Cæsar's fortunes. 20

North. How is this deriv'd?

Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?
L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence; 25

A gentleman well bred and of good name,
That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom
I sent 28

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;

And he is furnished with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me. 32

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come
with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me
back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard 36
A gentleman, almost spent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. 40
He told me that rebellion had had luck.

And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold,
With that he gave his able horse the head,
And bending forward struck his armed heels 44
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head, and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again: 4
Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day, 52
I upon mine honour, for a sliken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then such instances of loss?

L. Bard. Who, he? 56
He was some hiding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a tittle-leaf, 60

Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?
Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord:

Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother?

Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. 69
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, 72
And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd;

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it.
This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and
thus; 76

Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, 80
Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.'

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But, for my lord your son,—

North. Why, he is dead.—
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! 84
He that but fears the thing he would not know
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak,
Morton:

Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, 88
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid;
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. 92

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's
dead.

I see a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; 96
The tongue offends not that reports his death:
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
Hath but a losing office, and his words
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead. 104

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen:
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-
breath'd, 108
To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat
down

The never-dimmed Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up.
In few, his death,—whose spirit lent a fire 112
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,—
Being brinded once, took fire and heat away
From the best temper'd courage in his troops:
For from his metal was his party steel'd; 116
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead:
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120

So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear

That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, 124
Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester

Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furlous Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword Had three times slain the appearance of the
king, 128

'Gan vall his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight,

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord, 133
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. 136

In poison there is physick; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
And as the wretch, whose fever-weakn'd joints,
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, 141
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with
grief, 144

Are thine themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quoif!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head 148
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron; and approach
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring

To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland! 152
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die!

And let this world no longer be a stage
To feed contention in a lingering act; 156
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end.

And darkness be the burier of the dead! 160

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong,
my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion must perforce decay. 163

You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And sum'm'd the account of chance, before you
said,

'Let us make head.' It was your presumption 168
That in the dole of blows your son might drop:

You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge,
More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
You were advis'd his flesh was capable 172
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit
Would lift him where most trade of danger
rang'd;

Yet did I say, 'Go forth;' and none of this,
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain 176
The salt-borne action: what hath then befallen,
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
More than that being which was like to be?

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss
Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one;
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd; 184
And since we are o'erset, venture again.
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time; and, my most noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, 188
The gentle Archbishop of York is up,
With well-appointed powers: he is a man
Who with a double surety bluds his followers.

My lord your son had only but the corpse, 192
But shadows and the shows of men to fight;
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls;
And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd,
As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side: but, for their spirits and souls,

This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop 200
Turns insurrection to religion;
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
He's follow'd both with body and with mind,
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood 204
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pontefret stones;

Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause;
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke; 208
And more and less do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,

This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel every man 212
The aptest way for safety and revenge:
Get posts and letters, and make friends with
speed:

Never so few, and never yet more need.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—London, A Street.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you glaut, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good hently water; but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for. 5

Fal. Meu of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whore-son mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now; but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the jewel, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet flogged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stek to say, his face is a face-royal: God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing as if he had wip'd man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dombledon about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? 33

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph; he would not take his bond and yours: he liked not the security. 37

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton! may his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security.
The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked as should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet can not he see, though he have his own lauthor to light him. Where's Bardolph? 54

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived. 60

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him. 74

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Ser. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery? 76

Ser. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going, with some charge to the Lord John
of Lancaster. 72

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back
again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf. 76

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Ser. Sir John! 82

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? Is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me, sir. 90

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldier-ship aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so. 84

Ser. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man. 98

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou get'st my leave of me, hang me: if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter:
hence! avaunt!

Ser. Sir, my lord would speak with you. 104

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with
you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say your lordship was sick:
I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice.
Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the surliness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health. 115

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales. 120

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty. You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whorson apoplexy. 124

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whorson tingling. 129

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you. 137

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening,
the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal. 141

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician. 144

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty;
but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some account of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself. 150

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak
with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come. 156

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less. 160

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 164

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my leg. 168

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gild a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill:
you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet over-posting that action. 173

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so:
wake not a sleeping wolf. 176

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out. 180

Fal. A wassall candle, my lord; all tallow:
if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity. 135

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 138

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings. all the other gifts appert-nent to man, as the mullee of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too. 203

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit slugie, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fle, fie, fie, Sir John! 212

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollaling, and singing of anthems.
To approve my youth further, I will uot: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box of the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young hen repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. 226

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince!
I can not rid my hands of him. 230

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland. 234

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily:
if it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again.
There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever. But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion. 251

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition.

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth? 255

Ch. Just. Not a penny; not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well; commend me to my cousin Westmoreland. 258

[Exit CHER JUSTICE and SERVANT.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle.
A man can no more separate age and covetousness than he can part young limbs and lechery;
but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches
the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy! 264

Page. Sir!

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and twopence. 267

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse; borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is inenarrable.
Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster;
this to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it; you know where to find me. [Exit PAGE.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe.
'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my cousin shall see; the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything; I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

Scene III.—York. A Room in the ARCH-
BISHOP'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, LORD HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:
And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it? 4

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms;
But gladly would be better satisfied

How in our means we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough 8
Upon the power and pussance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file
To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope 12
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question, then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus:

Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland. 17

L. Bard. With him, we may,
L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far. 20
Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids incertain should not be admitted. 24

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for,
Indeed
It was young Hotspur's ease at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who liv'd himself with hope,

Fating the air on promise of supply, 28
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts;
And so, with great imagination
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, 32
And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt

To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.

L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of war,— Indeed the instant action,—a cause on foot, 37
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant as despair 40
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection; 44
Which if we find outweighs ability.

What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at last desist

To build at all? Much more, in this great work,—
Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down 49
And set another up,—should we survey

The plot of situation and the model,
Consent upon a sure foundation, 52
Question surveyors, know our own estate.

How idle such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else,
We fortify in paper, and in figures, 56
Using the names of men instead of men:

Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost 60
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation; 65
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand? 68

Hast. To no more; nay, not so much,
Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French.

And one against Glendower; perforce, a third 72
Must take up us; so is the firm king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together 76

And come against us in full pulsance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels: never fear that. 80

L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces
hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmore-
land;

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth:

But who is substituted 'gainst the French 84
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited. 88

A habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Diddst thou beat heaven with blessing Boling-
broke 92

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be:
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,

'Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up. 96

So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,

And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? 100

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him
dile,

Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that throw'st dust upon his goodly head,

When through proud London he came sighing
on 104

After the admur'd heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, 'O earth! yield us that king again.

And take thou this!' O, thoughts of men accurst!

Past and to come seem best; things present worst. 108

Moubr. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt. 112

Act II.

Scene I.—London. A Street.

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY: FANG, and his Boy, with her; and SNARE following.

Quick. Master Fang, have you entered the prison?

Fang. It is entered.

Quick. Where's your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will a' stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Quick. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.

Quick. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Quick. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth if his weapon be out: he will foyn like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him I care not for his thrust.

Quick. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I hut fist him once; an a' come but within my vice,—

Quick. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinite thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure; good Master Snare, let him not scape. A' comes continually to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he's invited to dinner to the Lubber's Head in Lambert-Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman; I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant main-seynose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, PAGE, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel.

Quick. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastarding rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed, thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Quick. Good people, bring a rescene or two! Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rascalian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your cataphrophe.

Enter the LORNSHIP CHIEF JUSTICE, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Quick. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what! are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York.

Stand from him, fellow: wherefore lang'st upon him?

Quick. O, my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Quick. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Quick. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chauber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it if thou canst. 116

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them. 122

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person. 132

Quick. Yea, in troth, my lord. 132
Ch. Just. Prithee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance. 144

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: If a man will make curtsy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remember'd, I will not be your sutor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs. 144

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman. 158

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.]

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower! what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. 158

Quick. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Quick. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers. 158

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this. 166

Quick. Prithee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: I faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, ha! 172

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Quick. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together? 177

Fal. Will I live? [To BARDOLPH.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Quick. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

[Exeunt MISTRESS QUICKLY, BARDOLPH, Officers, and Page.

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord? 184

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord? 188

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,

Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the klug back from Wales, my noble lord? 193

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently.

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord! 196

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good Sir John. 201

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go. 204

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair. 211

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the PRINCE and POISS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poiss. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

Prince. Falth, it does me, though it discolors the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer? 4

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition. 5

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; us, one for superfluity, and one other for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland; and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruls of thy men shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say th' children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened. 31

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so lily! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is? 32

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins? 36

Poins. Yes, falth, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine. 41

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee,—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,—I could be sad, and sad indeed too. 46

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's look as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. 50

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldest thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite. 61

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me a hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so low and so much engraced to Falstaff. 69

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and these two things I confess I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph. 70

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him a-pe.

Bard. God save your Grace! 80

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bard. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a madly man-at-arms are you become! Is it such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead? 80

Page. A' calls me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince. Hath not the boy profited? 92

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away! 96

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was deliv'ed of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream. 100

Prince. A crow's worth of good interpretation. There it is, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. O! that this good blossom could be kept from cankers. Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee. 105

Bard. An you do not make him be lugged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master? 112

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not. 116

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes. 119

Poins. 'John Falstaff, knight;—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are akin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There is some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.' 123

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:

Poins. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace! 124

Poins. I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity: sure he means brevity in breath, short-winded.—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I love thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell, repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so farewell. 142

Think, by god and no,—which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FALSTAFF, with my familiars; JOHN, with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe.

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it. 149

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister? 152

Poins. God send the which no worse fortune! but I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the dice, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old bear feed in the old frank? 160

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Prince. Sup any women with him? 165

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be? 168

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper? 173

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph; no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence. [Gives money.]

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it. 180

Prince. Fare ye well; go. [Exit BARDOLPH and Page.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road,

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London. 185

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen? 193

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers. 191

Prince. From a god to a bull! a heavy descension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exit.]

Scene III.—Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough desires; Put not you on the vlsage of the times, And be like them to Percy troublesome. 4

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more:

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And, but my going, nothing can redeem it. 8

Lady P. O! yet for God's sake, go not to these wars.

The time was, father, that you broke your word! When you were more embard to it than now; When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry, 12

Threw many a northward look to see his father Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

There were two honours lost, yours and your son's: 16

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it! For his, it stuck upon him as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven; and by his light Did all the chivalry of England move 20

To do brave acts; he was indeed the glass Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:

He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait; And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, 24

Became the accents of the vallant; For those that could speak low and tardly,

Would turn their own perfection to abuse, To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait, 28

In diet, in affections of delight, In military rules, humours of blood,

He was the mark and glass, copy and book, That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him! 32

O miracle of men! him did you leave,—

Second to none, unseconded by you,—

To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible; so you left him.
Never, O! never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice
With others than with him; let them alone.
The marshal and the arch-bishop are strong;
Had my sweet Harry had but half the numbers
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there,
Or it will seek me in another place.
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O! fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of your pulsuance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel.
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your son; 50
He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout us high as heaven, 60
For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still stand, running neither way; 64
In calm would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland; there am I
Till time and vantage crave my company. 68

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Bear's Head Tavern, in Ea theap.

Enter two Drawers.

First Drawer. What the devil hast thou brought here? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john. 5

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayst true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered knights.' It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that. 15

First Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down; and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Despatch; the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight. 25

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Dolts anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it; Bardolph hath brought word.

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old
Doll's; it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

[Exit.]

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEAR-SHEET.

Quick. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperally; your pal-sidge beats us extraordinarily; as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now? 32

Dol. Better than I was; hem!

Quick. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court—Empty the jordan.—[Exit First Drawer.—And was a worthy king. How now, Mistress Doll! 38

Quick. Sleek of a calm; yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm they are sleek. 41

Dol. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll. 44

Dol. I make them! glutony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll; we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that. 50

Dol. Ay, marry; our chains and our jewels.

Fal. Your brooches, pearls, and owches;—
for to serve bravely is to come halting off you know; to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,— 56

Dol. Hang yourself, you tuddly conger, hang yourself!

Quick. By my troth, this is the old fashion;
you two never meet but you fall to some discord;
you are both, in good troth, as hemmatt as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confidentialities. What the good-year! one must bear, at that must be you; you are the weaker vessel;—they say, the emptier vessel. 65

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshend? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack; thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 75

Re-enter First Drawer.

First Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedest rogue in England. 77

Quick. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you. 84

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Quick. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? It is mine ancient. 83

Quick. T'ly-fally, Sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last,—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he;—'Master Dumble, our minister, was by then;—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name;' now, a' said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive; receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers. 103

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, I'faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer. 108

[Exit First Drawer.]

Quick. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you. 113

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Quick. Do I? yes, in very truth, do I, an twere an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Pist. God save you, Sir John! 117

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess. 120

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her. 124

Quick. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure. I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you. 129

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, luek-llnen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy. 134

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy buzz, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, as you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light! with two points on your shoulder? much! 141

Pist. God let me not live. I will murder your ruff for this!

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Quick. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. 143

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawly-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word 'occupy,' which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient. 162

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I; I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph; I could tear her. I'll be revenged of her. 166

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile all o'. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down fates! Have we not Hiren here? 172

Quick. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; it is very late, I'faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack horses, 176

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thir'y miles a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with 180

King Cærius; and let the welkin roar.
Shall we fall foul for toys?

Quick. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. 184

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! Give crowns like poins! Have we not Hiren here? 138

Quick. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think
I would deny her? for God's sake! be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Callpolis.
Come, give's some sack. 193

Sif rturna me tormente, sperato me contento.
Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire:
Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.

Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras
nothing? 197

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif. What! we have seen the seven stars. 200

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs!
I cannot endure such a fastian rascal.

Pist. 'Thrust him down stairs!' know we not falloway nags? 204

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shovegroat shilling: nay, an a' do nothing but speak coothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs. 203

Pist. What! shall we have Incision? Shall we Imbrue? [Snatching up his sword.
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds
Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos.
I say! 212

Quick. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw. 216

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing.

Quick. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping horse, afore I'll be in these thrills and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas!
put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons. [Executing BARDOLPH and PISTOL.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah! you whoreson little valiant villain,
you! 225

Quick. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors? 228

Bard. Yes, sir; the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthless.
Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket. 240

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: art thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir. 244

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fell from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tiddy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and foinking o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven? 252

Enter behind the PRINCE and POINS, disguised like Drawers

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good pantler, a' would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit. 260

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and he plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps upon joint stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bats with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois. 277

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore. 280

Prince. Look, whether the withered elier hath not his poll elawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? 284

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not hisping to his master's old tables,
his note-book, his counsel keeper. 290

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering husses.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love o'er a scurvy young boy of them all. 292

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone. 361

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a weeping, as thou sayst so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end. 365

Fal. Some sack, Friends!

Prince. } [Counting forward.] Anon, anon,

Poins. } sir. 366

Fal. Had a bastard son of the king's? And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 372

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears. 376

Quick. O! the Lord preserve thy good Grace; by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales? 380

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood [pointing to DOLL], thou art welcome.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you. 384

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-nine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Quick. Blessing on your good heart! and so she is, by my troth. 388

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill; you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience. 397

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse. 344

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse! 345

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none; no, faith, boys, none. 355

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us. Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked? 362

Poins. Answer, thou devil, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath prick'd down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast maw-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too. 368

Prince. For the woman?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not. 373

Quick. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Murry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Quick. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a who'e Lent? 381

Prince. You gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within.]

Quick. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news? 388

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster; And there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north: and as I came along, I met and overtook a dozen captains, 392
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame.

So ill to profane the precious time, 396
When tempest of commotion, like the south,
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night. [Exit the PRINCE, POINS, Peto, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must dance and leave it unpleeked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door! 404

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; A dozen captains stay at door for you. 407

Fal. [To the Page]. Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches,

If I be not sent away post, I will see you again
ere I go.

Del. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Pal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.]

Quick. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peaseod-thinc; but an honest, and truer-hearted man.
—well, fare thee well.

Bard. [With] Mistress Tearsheet!

Quick. What matter?

Bard. [With] Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Quick. O! run, Doll, run: run, good Doll.

[Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY in his night gown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;
But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,

And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, lest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfumed chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?

O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common larnn bell?

Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seel up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,

And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging
them

With deafning clamour in the slippery clouds,
That with the hurly death itself awakes?
Ours't thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,

With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!

K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all,
my lords.

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

K. Hen. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it.

War. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd,
Which to his former strength may be restor'd
With good advice and little medicine:

My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

K. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,—

Weary of solid firmness,—melt itself
Into the sea! and, other times, to see

The beachy girdle of the ocean
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O! if this were seen,

The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,

Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
'Tis not ten years gone

Since Richard and Northumberland, great
friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after
Were they at wars: It is but eight years since

This Percy was the man nearest my soul,
Who like a brother to I'd in my affairs

And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard

Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,— [To Warwick.] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember,—

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,

Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which

My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;
Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,

But that necessity so bow'd the state
That I and greatness were compelled to kiss;

'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it,
'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering

head,
shall break into corruption:—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition
And the division of our amity.

War. There is a story in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd;

The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds 84
And weak beginnings lie Intreasured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of
time;

And by the necessary form of this
King Richard might create a perfect guess 88
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities; 93
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the Bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord:
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, 97
The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your Grace
To go to bed: upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth 100
Shall bring this prize in very easily.

To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, 104
And these unseasoned hours perforce must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. 108
[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MORTIMER, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULLCALK and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence? 4

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? 8

Sil. Alas! a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not? 12

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. A' must, then, to the Inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet. 16

Sil. You were called 'tusty Shallow' then,
cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing;
and I would have done any thing indeed too,
and roundly too. There was I, and Little John Delt of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes.

and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the Inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were,
and had the best of them all at commandment.
Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk. 29
Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate when a' was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu!
the mad days that I have spent; and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead! 32

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all: all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there. 44

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped 't the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now? 55

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think. 60

Enter BARDOLPH, and One with him.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the Klug's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure
with me? 66

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you;
my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman,
by heaven, and a most gallant leader. 69

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good bucksword man. How doth the good kn'ght? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. 74

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. 'Better accommodated!'
it is good; yea indeed, is it: good phrases are surely and ever were, very commendable. Ae accommodated! it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase. 80

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase,' call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is, being, whereby, a' may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing. 83

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you look well and bear your years very well; welcome, good Sir John. 94

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surceard, as I think.

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin, Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. 100

Sh. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fle! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provid'd me here half a dozen sufficient men? 104

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so, so: ye marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you. 112

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limb'd fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? 116

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, I' falth! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good. In falth, well said, Sir John; very, well said. 122

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I. 128

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are? For the other, Sir John: let me see. Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier. 136

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir. 140

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow; so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance. 144

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book. 146

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir. 150

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon plns: prick him no more. 158

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor he'd have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 168

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor; well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir. 170

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands; let that suffice, most forcible Feeble. 181

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next? 184

Shal. Peter Bulcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bulcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bulcalf till he roar again. 189

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What! dost thou roar before thou art pricked? 192

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir. 197

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all? 201

Shal. There is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir; and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner. 264

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the wind in la Salut George's bellies?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that. 212

Shal. He! it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never con, I away with me. 216

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not. Hide Master! hallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona robur. Doth she hold her own well? 221

Fal. O! old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago. 227

Shal. He! cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen. Ha! Sir John, say I will?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow. 232

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was, 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come. 237

[Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.]

Bard. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd, sir, as go; and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unfeeling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to live with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much. 245

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend; she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 252

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll never bear a base mind; an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind. 262

Re-enter FALSTAFF, and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. [To FALSTAFF.] Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullealf.

Fal. [Aside to BARDOLPH.] Go to; well. 265

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me. 267

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullealf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bullealf; for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service; and for your part, Bullealf, grow till you come into it. I will none of you. 274

Shal. Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong; they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best. 277

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thives, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: I shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man; he presents no mark to the enemy; the focman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O! give me the spare men, and spare me the rest, once. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. 293

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So; very well; go to; very good; exceeding good. I give me always a little, lean, old, chopp'd, bald shot. Well said, I' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab; hold, there's a tester for thee. 299

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn, — I was then Sir Daggonet in Arthur's show, — there was a little quaver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus; and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in; 'rah, tab, tah' would a' say; 'bounce, would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come: I shall never see such a fellow. 307

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you; I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats. 314

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you! and prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with ye to the court. 317

Fal. Fore God I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you.

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exit SHALLOW and SILENCE.] Oh, Bardolph; lead the man away. [Exit BARDOLPH, ROBERTS, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these juslees: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord! how subject we old men are to this vice of lying. This same starvel Justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-parling; when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked rolish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife; a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: a' was the very genius of foulness; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake; a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and swate they were his fancies or his good nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a spulre, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn a' never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an old skin; the case of a treble hartboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and be fs. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. That well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs.

I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd

New-dated letters from Northumberland;

Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:

He doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality;

The which he could not levy; whereupon

He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,

To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayer

That your attempts may overlive the hazard

And fearful meeting of the opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,

In goodly form comes on the enemy;

And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number

Upon or near the rase of thirty thousand

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them

out.

Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us

here?

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmore-

land.

West. Health and fair greeting from our

general,

The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace.

What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord,

Unto your Grace do I in chief address

The substance of my speech. If that rebellion

Came like itself, in base and abject routs,

Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

And countenanc'd by boys and beggary;

I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,

In his true, native, and most proper shape,

You, reverend father, and these noble lords

Had not been here, to dress the ugly form

Of base and bloody Insurrection

With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,

Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,

Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,

Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd,

Whose white Investment's figure Innocence,

The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,

Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself

Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace

Into the harsh and bolsterous tougue of war;

Turning your books to greaves, your lark to

blood.

Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine

To a loud trumpet and a point of war.

Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.
 Briefly to this end; we are all diseas'd;
 And, with our surfeiting and wanton hours
 Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, 50
 And we must bleed for it: of which disease
 Our late king, Richard, being infected, diel.
 But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
 I take not on me here as a physician, 55
 Nor do I as an enemy to peace
 Troop in the throngs of military men;
 But rather show a while like fearful war,
 To diet rank minds sick of happiness 64
 And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
 Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly:
 I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
 What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we 68 suffer,
 And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
 We see which way the stream of time doth run
 And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
 By the rough torrent of occasion; 72
 And have the summary of all our griefs,
 When time shall serve, to show in articles,
 Which long ere this we offer'd to the king,
 And might by no suit gain our audience. 76
 When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,
 We are denied access unto his person
 Even by those men that most have done us
 wrong.
 The dangers of the days but newly gone,— 80
 Whose memory is written on the earth
 With yet appearing blood,—and the examples
 Of every minute's instance, present now,
 Have put us in these ill besecming arms; 84
 Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
 But to establish here a peace indeed,
 Concurring both in name and quality.
West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?
 Wherein have you been galled by the king? 90
 What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
 That you should seal this lawless bloody book
 Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, 92
 And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?
Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,
 To brother born an household cruelty,
 I make my quarrel in particular. 96
West. There is no need of any such redress;
 Or if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all
 That feel the bruises of the days before, 100
 And suffer the condition of these times
 To lay a heavy and unequal hand
 Upon our honours?
West. O! my good Lord Mowbray,
 Construe the times to their necessities, 104
 And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
 And not the king, that doth you injuries.
 Yet, for your part, it not appears to me

either from the king or in the present time 108
 That you should have an lach of any ground
 To build a grief on: were you not restor'd
 To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
 Your noble and right well-remember'd father's?
Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father
 lost, 113
 That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
 The king that lov'd him as the state stood then,
 Was force perforce compelled to banish him:
 And then that Harry Bolingbroke and he, 117
 Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
 Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
 Their arm'd staves in charge, their beavers down,
 Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel, 121
 And the loud trumpet blowing them together,
 Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd
 My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, 124
 O! when the king did throw his warder down,
 His own life hung upon the staff he threw;
 Then threw he down himself and all their lives
 That by indictment and by dint of sword 128
 Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.
West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what.
 The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
 In England the most valiant gentleman: 132
 Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?
 But if your father had been victor there,
 He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
 For all the country in a general voice 136
 Cried late upon him; and all their prayers and
 love
 Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
 And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the
 king.
 But this is mere digression from my purpose. 140
 Here come I from our princely general
 To know your griefs; to tell you from his Grace
 That he will give you audience; and wherein
 It shall appear that your demands are just, 144
 You shall enjoy them; every thing set off
 That might so much as think you enemies.
Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
 And it proceeds from policy, not love. 148
West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so.
 This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
 For, lo! within a ken our army lies
 Upon mine honour, all too confident 152
 To give admittance to a thought of fear.
 Our battle is more full of names than yours,
 Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
 Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
 Then reason will our hearts should be as good:
 Say you not then our offer is compell'd.
Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence: 160

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the good John a full commission,

In very ample charge of his father,
To hear and allegate to determine: 164
Of what condition we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name.
I muse you make us light of his question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule, 168

For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action, 172
Acquitted by a true substantial form
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again 176
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace, which God so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords 181
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand. 184
Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon.
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yes, but our valuation shall be such
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
Shall to the king taste of this action; 192

That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
And good from bad find no partition. 196

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary

Of dainty and such plecting grievances:
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life; 200

And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss

To new remembrance; for full well he knows
He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdeeds' present occasion: 205

His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy, 208
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.

So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,

As he is striking, holds his infant up 212
And bangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack 216
The very instruments of chastisement;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well, 221
Our piece will, like a broken limb unled,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
Here is returned my Lord of Westmoreland. 224

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,
To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his Grace: my lord, we come. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and Others; from the other side, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers, and Attendants.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray:

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.

My Lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence 4

Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man, 8

Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death.

That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, 12

Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischief might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord

bishop,

It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken 16
How deep you were within the books of God?

To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;

The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O! who shall believe

But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, 24

As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up

Under the counterfeit'd zeal of God,
The subjects of his subst tute, my father; 28
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here upsworn'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland, 32
The time disorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,— 36
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,—

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep

With grant of our most just and right desires, 40
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd.
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down, 44
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, thirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And help from help shall hold this quarrel up 48
Whiles England shall have generation.

Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly 52

How far forth you do like their articles.

Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them
well;

And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook, 56
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please
you, 60

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours; and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love and amity. 65

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my
word;

And thereupon I drink unto your Grace. 68

Hast. [To an Officer.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army

This news of peace: let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them: Hie thee, captain.

[Exit Officer.]
Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmore-
land. 72

West. I pledge your Grace: and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you
Shall show itself more openly hereafter, 76

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.
Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season:

For I am, on the sudden, something ill. 80
Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
serves to say thus, some good thing comes to morrow. 84

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mowb. So much the worse if your own rule be true. [Shouts within.]

Lanc. The word of peace is render'd: hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory. 88
Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.

Lanc. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too. 92
[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings, 96
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit HASTINGS.]
Lanc. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night to gether.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?
West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, 100

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Lanc. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses 104

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke
up,

Each hurries toward his home and sporting
place.

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the while

I do suspect thee, traitor, of high treason: 108
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray.

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

Hest. Is your assembly so? 112
Arch. Will you thus break your faith?
Lanc. I pawn'd thee none.
 I promis'd you redress of these same grievances
 Whereof you did complain; which, by mine
 honour,
 I will perform with a most Christian care. 116
 But for you, rebels, look to taste the due
 Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours.
 Most shallowly did you these arms commence.
 Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.
 Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd strays:
 God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.
 Some guard these traitors to the block of death;
 Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath. 124

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums, Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale. 4

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale; Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff? 11

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, who'er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my morey. 17

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were sluply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb indoes me. Here comes our general. 26

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and Others.

Lanc. The heat is past, follow no further now.
 Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? 29

When everything is ended, then you come: These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back. 32

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lanc. It was more of his courtesy than your deservings. 45

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech you Grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Coleville kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt pences to me, and I in the clear sky of mine o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cluders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount. 61

Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine. 64

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord. 68

Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are. That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me 72
 You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a klud fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee. 77

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lanc. Have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd

Lanc. Send Coleville with his confederates To York, to present execution. 80

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure. [Exit BLUNT and Others with

COLEVILLE, guarded.]

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:

I hear, the king my father is sore sick; Our news shall go before us to his majesty, 84
 Which, cousin [addressing WESTMORELAND], you shall bear, to comfort him;

And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go,

Through Gloucestershire, and when you come to court 28

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition, shall better speak of you than you deserve. 31

[Exeunt all but FALSTAFF.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your drink-stom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meats, that they fall into a kind of made green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too hot for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forcive, full of nimble fiery and delectable shapes; which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the bird, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inward to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puff'd up with this retinne, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning a mere board of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, mann'd, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human prin'ple I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to afflict themselves to sack. 136

[Enter BARDOLPH.]

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth bestow on to higher fields
And draw no swords but what are sanctified. 4

Our navy is address'd, our power collect'd;
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government. 5

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother? 13

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother Thomas of Clarence with him? 16

Glo. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cl. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him.
Thomas;

Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead, 24

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace 28

By seeming cold or careless of his will;
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:

He hath a tear for pity and a hand
Open as day for melting charity; 32

Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day.

His temper therefore must be well observ'd: 36

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;

But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40

Confound themselves with working. Learn this,
Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood, 44

Mingled with venom of suggestion—
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As acornium or rash gunpowder. 48

Cl. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cl. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

R. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that? 52

Cl. With Poins and other his continual followers

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;

And he, the noble image of my youth
Is overspread with them: therefore my grief 50

Stretches itself beyond the hour of death:
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon 50

When I am sleeping with my ancestors,
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,

When rage and hot blood are his counselors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,

O! with what wings shall his affections fly 65
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay.

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:

The prince but studies his companions 68
Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most innocent word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd; which once attain'd,

Your highness knows, comes to no further use 72
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory

Shall as a pattern or a measure live, 76
By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb

In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here? Westmoreland! 80

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness

Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's hand:

Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all 84
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.

The manner how this action hath been borne 82

Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

K. Hen. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings 82
The lifting up of day.

Enter HARCOURT.

Look! here's more news.

Harc. From enemies heaven keep your un-
jesty;

And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of! 96

The Earl Northumberland, and the Lord Bar-dolph,

With a great power of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrow'n.

The manner and true order of the fight 100
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will Fortune never come with both hands full
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?

She either gives a stomach and no food; 105
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,

That have abundance and enjoy it not. 108

I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.

O me! come near me, now I am much ill.
Glo. Comfort, your majesty!

Cl. O my royal father! 112
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself;
look up!

Harc. Be patient, princes; you do know these fits

Are with his highness very ordinary;
Stand from him, give him air; he'll strait be

well. 116
Cl. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs;

The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the cure that should confine

it in
So thin, that life looks through and will break

out. 120
Glo. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs and leathly births of nature;

The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over. 124

Cl. The river hath three flow'd, no abb between;

And the old folk, time's dotting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grand sire, Edward, sick'd and died. 128

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Glo. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

Scene V.—Another Chamber.

KING HENRY lying on a bed: CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others in attendance.

K. Hen. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.
K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cl. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter the PRINCE.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Cl. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.
Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?
Glo. Exceeding ill.
Prince. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

Glo. He niter'd much upon the hearing it.
Prince. If he be sick with joy, he will recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cl. Let us withdraw into the other room.
War. Will't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.
[Exit all but the PRINCE.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden ear!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet

As he whose brow with homely biggin bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
Did he suspire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move. My gracious lord!

My father!
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
Shall, O dear father! pay thee piteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown.

Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits,
[Putting it on his head]
Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit]
K. Hen. [Waking.] Warwick! Gloucester!
Clarence!

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

Cl. Both the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares your Grace?

K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Cl. We left the prince my brother here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

K. Hen. The Prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him!

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
Glo. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence; go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?

Flud him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him hither.
[Exit WARWICK.]

This part of his conjoints with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!

How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!

For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleeps with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry;

For this they have engrossed and plid up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises:

When, I, like the bee, culling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,

We bring it to the hive, and like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bliter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
With such a deep demour in great sorrow
That tyranny, which never quaff'd hut blood, 84
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Go, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry.
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone. 89

[Exeunt WARWICK, and the rest.]

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again.

K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee, 92
Hast thou so hunger for my empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee. 96

Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours 100

Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it. 104

Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast sticket on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life,
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself, 109

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head: 113

Only compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at fools. 117

Hurry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
hence!

And to the English court assemble now, 120
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit 124
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England shall double gild his treble guilt.
England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curb'd hence plucks

The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.

O my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows, 132
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants. 136

Prince. O! pardon me, my liege; but for my tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And he that wears the crown in mortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, 144
Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
Which my most true and inward dutious spirit
Tencheth,—this prostrate and exterior bending.
God witness with me, when I here came in, 148
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! If I do felgn,
O! let me live in my present wildness die
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed. 153
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown as having sense, 159
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending
Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold;
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious. 163
Preserving life in medicine potable:
But thou most fine, most honour'd, most re-
nown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal
liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head,
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy, 168
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it, 172
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

K. Hen. O my son!

God put it in thy mind to take it hence, 176
That thou mightst win the more thy father's
love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed; 180
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well 184

How troublesome it sat upon my head:
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet
 Better ophion, better confirmation;
 For all the soul of the achievement goes 185
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
 But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
 And I had many living to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances; 190
 Which dally grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
 Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
 Thou seest with peril I have answered;
 For all my reign hath been out as a scene 196
 Acting that argument; and now my death
 Changes the mode: for what in me was pur-
 chas'd,

Falls upon thee in a more falser sort:
 So thou the garment wear'st successively. 200
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
 Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
 And all my friends, which thou must make thy
 friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
 By whose fell working I was first advanc'd, 205
 And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
 To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
 I cut them off; and had a purpose now 208
 To lead out many to the Holy Land,
 Lost rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
 Be it thy course to busy ploddy minds 212
 With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
 out,

May waste the memory of the former days.
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
 That strength of speech is utterly denied me. 216
 How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
 And grant it may with thee in true peace live.

Prince. My gracious liege,
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me; 220
 Then plain and right must my possession be:
 Which I with more than with a common pain
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster. 224
Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;
 But health, alas, with youthful wings is flown
 From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight
 My worldly business makes a period. 226
 Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

Re-enter WARWICK and Others.

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
 Unto the lodging where I first did swoond? 230
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

K. Hen. Land be to God! even there my life must end.
 It hath been prophesied to me many years
 I should not die but in Jerusalem, 236
 Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land.
 But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
 In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt]

Act V.

Scene I.—Gloucestershire. A Hall in SHALLOW'S HOUSE.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow. 4

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy! 8

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see,
 Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused. 13

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat? 16

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons? 19

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons. 20

Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had: and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair? 26

Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tny kickshaws, tell William cook. 30

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night,
 sir? 32

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend in the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite. 36

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well coucelted, Davy: about thy business, Davy. 40

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance
 William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes
 of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy,

on my knowledge. 46

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave shou'd have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is like honest Aeneas, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced. 57

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong.
Look about, Davy. [Exit DAVY.] Where are you,
Sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots.
Give me your hand, Master Bardolph. 61

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.
Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph:—[To the Page,] and welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John. 65

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit SHALLOW.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] If I were sawed into quantiles, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable cohorence of his men's spirits and his:
they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justles; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a sult to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master:
if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants.
It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which is four terms, or two actions,—and a shall laugh without intervallums. O! it is such that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up! 94

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!
Fal. I come, Master Shallow: I come, Master
Shallow. [Exit.]

Scene II. —Westminster. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice: whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature; and
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me
with him:

The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries. 6

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm
myself,

To welcome the condition of the time;
Which cannot look more hideously upon me:
Thau I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WEST
MORELAND and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of death
Harry:

O! that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen. 10
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be overturn'd.

Lanc. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good
morrow. 20

Glo. } Good morrow, cousin.
Cla. }

Lanc. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument is all too heavy to admit much talk. 24

Lanc. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glo. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend
indeed;

And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own. 25

Lanc. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise. 30

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair,

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in
honour,

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; 31
And never shall you see that I will beg
A rugged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocency fall me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead, 40

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God gave you
majesty!

K. Hen. V. This new and gorgeous garment,
majesty, 44
Sits not so easy on me as you think.
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Anurath an Amurath succeeds, 47
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on 52
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, 56
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:
Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives that shall convert those tears 60
By number into hours of happiness.

Lanc., &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

K. Hen. V. You all look strangely on me: [To the Chief Justice.] and you most;

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not. 64

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

K. Hen. V. Not

How my prince of my great hopes forget
So gently signifies you laid upon me?
What I rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten? 72

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your
father;

The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth, 76
Your highness pleas'd to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I present'd,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment; 80

Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland, 84

To have a son set your decrees at nought,
To pluck down justice from your awful bench,
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person:

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image 88
And mock your workings in a second body,
Question your royal thoughts, make the ease
yours;

Be now the father and propose a son, 92

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;

And then imagine me taking your part, 96

And in your power soft silencing your son:
After this cold consideration, sentence me;

And, as you are a king, speak in your state

What I have done that misbecame my place, 100
My person, or my liege's sov'reignty.

K. Hen. V. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
And I do wish your honours may increase 104

Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:
'Happy am I, that have a man so bold 108

That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so

Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand 112

The unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;
With this remembrance, that you use the same

With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit 116
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand:
You shall be as a father to my youth;

My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop and humble my intents 120

To your well-practis'd wise directions.
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;

My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections; 124

And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down 128

After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:

Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods 132

And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament;

And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go 136

In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us;

In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will acclite, 140

As I before remember'd, all our state:
And, God consigning to my good intents,
No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day. 144

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Gloucestershire. The Garden of SHALLOW'S HOUSE.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth; come, consh Silence; and then to bed.

Fal. Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich. 6

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all,

Beggars all, Sir John: marry, good sir. Spread, Davy; spread Davy: well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down. Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, slrrah! 'quoth a', we shall

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer
And praise God for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear
And lusty lub-rooms here and there.

So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon: most sweet sir, sit, Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat we'll have in drink: but you must bear: the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;

For women are shrews, both short and tall;

'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,

And welcome merry Shroton thide.

Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. There's a dish of leather coats for you.

[Setting them before BARBOLPH.]

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight.

A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. A cup of wine that's brisk and fine

And drink into the human nine;

And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wantest anything and wilt not call, besrew thy heart.

[To the Page.] Welcome, my little tiny thief; and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph and to all the cavaleroes about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy.

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together: ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's fingers, I thank thee. The knife will stick by thee, I can assure thee that it will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing, be merry. [Knocking within.] Look who's at door there. Ho! who knocks?

Fal. [To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right.

Sil. Do me right,

And dub me knight

Samizdo.

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. Au't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in.

Enter Pistol.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.

Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think a' be, but goodman Puff of Barston.

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most reverent toward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend.

And helter-skelter have I rode to thee,

And tidings do I bring and lucky joys

And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A fountra for the world and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicous?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir; if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways; either to utter them, or to conceal them.

I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die. 119

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A contra for thine office!

sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;

Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth:

When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like 121
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just. 124

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse,
Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities. 128

Bard. O joyful day!

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news. 131

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph!

[Exit BARDOLPH.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me: and, withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends, and woe unto my lord chief justice! 143

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!
'Where is the life that late I led?' say they:
Why, here it is: welcome these pleasant days!
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—London. A Street.

Enter BRADLES, dragging in MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Quick. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God I might die that I might have thee hanged;
thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

First Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her. 7

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on;
I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-face! 'tis plain. 12

Quick. O thou art! that Sir John were come;
he would make this a bloody day to somebody.
But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now.
Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat among you.

Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swunged for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy finished correctioner! If you be not swunged, I'll forswear half-kirtles. 24

First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Quick. O, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come: bring me to a justice. 29

Quick. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death! goodman bones!

Quick. Thou atamy, thou! 32

Dol. Come you thin thing; come, you rascal!

First Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes.
Sec. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice. 3

First Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch.
[Exeunt.]

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace. I will leer upon him, as a' comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me. 9

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.
O! if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him. 16

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me. 24

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est:

'Tis all in every part. 32

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage.
 Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, 40
 Is in base churrance and contagious prison;
 H-d-d' thother
 By most mechanical and dlrty hand:
 Brouse up revenge from ebon den with fell
 Alecto's snake, 40
 For Doll is in; Pist. ol speaks nought but truth.
Fal. I will deliver her.
 [Shouts within and trumpets sound.
Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH and his Train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal! 45
Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal lup of fame!
Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy! 45
K. Hen. V. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.
Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what
 'tis you speak?
Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my
 heart!
K. Hen. V. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers; 52

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
 I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
 So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
 But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream.
 Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
 Leave gormandising; know the grave doth gape
 For thee thrice wider than for other men.
 Reply not to me with a fool-born jest; 60
 Presume not that I am the thing I was;
 For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,
 That I have turn'd away my former self;
 So will I those that kept me company. 64
 When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
 Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
 The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
 Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, 68
 As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
 Not to come near our person by ten mile.
 For competence of life I will allow you,
 That lack of means enforce you not to evil: 72
 And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
 We will, according to your strength and qualities,
 Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my
 lord,
 To see perform'd the tenour of our word. 76
Set on. [Exeunt KING HENRY V. and his Train.
Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. 80
Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. 85

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. 89
Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.
Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir
 John. 93
Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner.
 Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph;
 I shall be sent for soon at night. 96

Re-enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE; Officers with them.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;
 Take all his company along with him.
Fal. My lord, my lord!
Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon. 100
Fal. I am away.
Ch. Just. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero contenta.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL,
 BARDOLPH, PAGE, and Officers.
Lane. I like this fair proceeding of the king's.
 He hath licent his wonted followers 104
 Shall all be very well provided for;
 But all are banish'd till their conversations
 Appear more wise and modest to the world.
Ch. Just. And so they are. 108
Lane. The king hath call'd his parliament,
 my lord.
Ch. Just. He hath.
Lane. I will lay odds, that ere this year expire,
 We bear our civil swords and native fire 112
 As far as France. I heard a bird so sing,
 Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.
 Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.

EPilogue.

Spoken by a Dancer.

First, my fear; then, my curtesy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure, my curtesy, my duty, and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you wudo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this; which,

if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely. 18

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewoman, which was never seen before in such an assembly. 27

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary: when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen 35

Chorus.

Scene.—England; afterwards France

Enter Chorus.

Chor. O! for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention;
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the war-like Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword,
and fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The fat unrais'd spirits that hath dar'd
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
So great an object: can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure must
Attest in little place a million;

And let us, ciphers to this great account,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder:
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts.
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance;
Think when we talk of horses that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs 't' the receiving earth;
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our
kings,
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times,
Turning the accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass: for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history;
Who prologue-like your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play. [Exit.

Act I.

Scene I.—London. An Antechamber in the KING'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you; that self bill is urg'd,
Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign

Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd.
But that the scuffling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,

We lose the better half of our possession;
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the church

Would they strip from us; being valued thus:
As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,
Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights, 1,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;

And, to relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil, 10
A hundred almshouses right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it
not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body
But that his wildness mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment
Consideration like an angel came, 20

And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits:
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady entrance, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat and all at once
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish

You would desire the king were made a prelate.

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs, 40

You would say it hath been all in all his study;

Hst his discourse of war, and you shall hear

A fearful battle render'd you in music; 44

Turn him to any cause of policy,

The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still, 4
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences;
So that the art and practice part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoretic; 5
Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean
it.

Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study, 57
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle, 6

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality;

And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt, 64
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crescent in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd;
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord, 69

How now for mitigation of this bill Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent, 70
Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us;

For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation, 74
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large.

As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet 80
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my
lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
save that there was not time enough to hear.—
As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,—
The severals and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And generally to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great grandfather. 84

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that inslant

Cray'd audience; and the hour I think is come
To give him hearing; is it four o'clock? 90

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in to know his embassy;
Which I could with a ready guess declare 94
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it
[Exeunt

Scene II.—The Same. The Presence Chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and ATTENDANTS.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin; we would be resolv'd.

Before we hear him, of some things of weight That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you. My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,

And justly and religiously unfold Why the law Salique that they have in France

Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim. And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,

That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul With opening titles miscreant, whose right

Suits not in native colours with the truth; For God doth know how many now in health

Shall drop their blood in approbation Of what your reverence shall incite us to.

Therefore take heed how you impawn our person, How you awake the sleeping sword of war:

We charge you in the name of God, take heed; For never two such kingdoms did contend

Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,

Galust him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords

That make such waste in brief mortality. Under this conjuration speak, my lord,

And we will hear, note, and believe in heart, That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services To this imperial throne. There is no bar

To make against your highness' claim to France; but this, which they produce from Pharamond,

In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant, 'No woman shall succeed in Salique land:'

Which Salique land the French unjustly glow To be the realm of France, and Pharamond

The founder of this law and female bar,

Yet their own authors faithfully affirm That the land Salique is in Germany,

Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe: Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons, There left behind and settled certain French;

Who, holding in disdain the German women, For some dishonest manners of their life,

Establish'd then this law; to wit, no female Should be inheritrix in Salique land:

Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala, Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear the Salique law Was not devised for the realm of France;

Nor did the French possess the Salique land Until four hundred one-and-twenty years

After defunction of King Pharamond, fully suppos'd the founder of this law;

Who died within the year of our redemption Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did send the French

Rey to the river Sala, in the year Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,

King Pepin, which deposed Childeric, Did, as heir general, being descended

Of Birthild, which was daughter to King Clothair, Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great, To find his title with some shows of truth.—

Though in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,—

Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Lingare, Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son

To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth, Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,

Could not keep quiet in his conscience, Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied

That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother, Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the aforesaid Duke of Lorraine;

By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great

Was re-mitted to the crown of France. So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,

King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim, King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear

To hold in right and title of the female; So do the kings of France unto this day;

Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law To bar your highness claiming from the female,

And rather choose to hide them in a net Than amply to imbar their crooked titles

Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
For in the book of Numbers is it writ:
'When the son dies, let the inheritance
Descend into the daughter.' Gracious lord, 100
Stand for your own; maintain your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grand-sire's
tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his war-like
spirit, 104
And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill 108
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forge in blood of French nobility.
O noble English! that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by, 112
All out of work, and cold for action.

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant
dead,

And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne,
The blood and courage that renowned them
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant leg
Is in the very May-morn of his youth, 120
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Eze. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood. 114

West. They know your Grace hath cause and means and might;

So hath your highness; never King of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England 128

And be pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O! let their bodies follow, my dear
liege,
With blood and sword and fire to win your
right;

In aid whereof we of the spirituality 132
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French, 136

But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, 140

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend!
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the courting snatchers only,

But fear the main intentment of the Scot 144
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us,

For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach, 148
With ample and brim fullness of his force,
Calling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Grinding with grievous siege castles and towers;
That England, being empty of defence, 152
Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbour hood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;

For hear her but exemplified by herself: 150
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defeated,
But taken and impounded as a stray 160
The King of Scots; whom she did send to
France,

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,
And make your chronicle as rich with praise
As is the owse and bottom of the sea 164
With sunken wrack and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying very old and true;

*If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin:* 168

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, 172
To tear and have more than she can eat.

Eze. It follows then the cat must stay at
home:

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity;

Since we have locks to safeguard necessities 176
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.

While that the armed hand doth fight abroad
The advised head defends itself at home:

For government, though high and low and lower, 180

Put into parts, doth keep in one course,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions, 184

Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,

Obedience: for so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach 188

The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king and officers of sorts;

Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,

Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings, 192
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;

Which pillage they with merry march bring
home

To the tent-royal of their emperor:
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys

The singing maos building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,

The poor mechanic porters crowding in
 Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate, 200
 The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
 Delivering o'er to executors pale
 The lazy yawning drone. I this infer, 204
 That many things, having full reference
 To one consent, may work contrariously ;
 As many arrows, loosed several ways,
 Fly to one mark ; as many ways meet in one town ; 208
 As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea ;
 As many lines close in the dial's centre ;
 So many a thousand actions, once afoot,
 End in one purpose, and be all well borne 212
 Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.
 Divide your happy England into four ;
 Whereof take you one quarter into France,
 And you withal shall make all Gallia shake. 216
 If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
 Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
 Let us be worried and our nation lose
 The name of hardiness and polley. 220
K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exit an Attendant.]
 Now are we well resolv'd ; and by God's help,
 And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
 France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe 224
 Or break it all to pieces ; or there we'll sit,
 Ruling in large and ample empery
 O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
 Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn, 228
 Tombless, with no remembrance over them ;
 Either our history shall with full mouth
 Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
 Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless
 mouth, 232
 Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.
 Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
 Of our fair cousin Dauphin ; for we hear
 Your greeting is from him, not from the king.
First Amb. May't please your majesty to give us leave 237
 Freely to render what we have in charge ;
 Or shall we sparingly show you far off
 The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy ? 240
K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian
 king ;
 Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
 As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons ;
 Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plain-
 ness 244
 Tell us the Dauphin's mind.
First Amb. Thus then, in few.
 Your highness, lately sending into France,
 Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
 Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third. 248
 In answer of which claim, the prince our master
 Says that you savour too much of your youth,

And bids you be advi'd there's nought in
 France
 That can be with a nimble galliard won ; 252
 You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
 He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
 This tun of treasure ; and, in lieu of this,
 Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim 256
 Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.
K. Hen. What treasure, uncle ?
Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege.
K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleassant with us :
 His present and your pains we thank you for :
 When we have match'd our rackets to these balls, 261
 We will in France, by God's grace, play a set
 Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
 Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler 264
 That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
 With chaces. And we understand him well,
 How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
 Not measuring what use we made of them. 268
 We never valu'd this poor seat of England ;
 And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
 To barbarous licence ; as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from
 home. 272
 But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
 Be like a king and show my sail of greatness
 When I do rouse me in my throne of France :
 For that I have laid by my majesty 276
 And plodded like a man for working-days,
 But I will rise there with so full a glory
 That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
 Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. 280
 And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones ; and his soul Shall stand sore-charg'd for the wasteful vengeance
 That shall fly with them : for many a thousand widows 284
 Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands ;
 Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
 down ;
 And some are yet ungotten and unborn
 That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn. 288
 But this lies all within the will of God,
 To whom I do appeal ; and in whose name
 Tell you the Dauphin I am coming on,
 To vengeance as I may and to put forth 292
 My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
 So get you hence in peace ; and tell the Dauphin
 His jest will savour but of shallow wit
 When thousands weep more than did laugh at
 it. 296
 Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well.
 [Exeunt Ambassadors.]
Exe. This was a merry message.
 8

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour 300
That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these wars 304
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings: for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door. 308
Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought.
[Exeunt. Flourish.]

Act II.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,
And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies;
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man: 4
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,
Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.
For now sits Expectation in the air 8
And hides a sword from hilts unto the point
With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets,
Promis'd to Harry and his followers.
The French, advis'd by good intelligence 12
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear, and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England! model to thy inward greatness, 16
Like little body with a mighty heart,
What might'st thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see thy fault! France hath in thee found
out 20
A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted
men,
One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,
Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,
Have, for the gilt of France,—O guilt, indeed!
Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;
And by their hands this grace of kings must die,— 28
If hell and treason hold their promises,— Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton,
Linger your patience on; and well digest
The abuse of distance while we force a play. 32
The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;
The king is set from London; and the scene
Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton:
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit:
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,

And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you joyful passage; for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play. 40
But, till the king come forth and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.
[Exit.]

Scene I.—London. Eastcheap.

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.
Nym. Good morning, Lieutenant Bardolph.
Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and your friends yet? 4
Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little;
but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles;
but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight;
but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? It will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will: and there's an end. 11
Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good Corporal Nym.
Nym. Falth, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it. 18
Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and, certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her. 21
Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod.
There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good corporal, be patient here. How now, mistress Host Pistol!

Pist. Base like, call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term; 32
Nor shall you Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentle-women that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdyhouse straight. [Nym and Pistol draw.] O well-n-day, lady! if he be not drawn now: we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. 40

Bard. Good lieutenant! good corporal! offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, lechud dog! thou prick-eared cur of Iceland! 44

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus. [Sheathing his sword.]

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile!
The solus in thy most mervallous face;
The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy;
And, which is worse, with'n thy nasty mouth! 53
I do retort the solus in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow. 56

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot con-jure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol,
I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and dauned furious
wight! 64
The grave doth gape, and doting death is near;
Therefore exhale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hills, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give;
Thy spirits are most tall. 72

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other,
in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge!
That is the word. I thee defy again. 76
O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?

No; to the spital go,
And from the powdering-tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, 80
Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse:
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough.
Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess: he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets and do the office of a warning-pan. Faith, he's very ill. 88

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pukking one of these days. The king has killed his heart. Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy.]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends?
We must to France together. Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's
throats? 96

Pist. Let floods o'erwhelm, and floods for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won
of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays. 100

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound; push home. [They draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will. 105

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then, be enemies with me too. Prithce, put up. 109

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I wou
of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;
And liquor likewise will I give to thee. 113

And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood:
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.

Is not this just? for I shall sutler be 116
Uto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid. [Paying him.]

Nym. Well then, that's the humour of it. 121

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaked of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to
him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it. 128

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;
His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers. 135

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lamb-kins, we will live. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Southampton. A Council-chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. Fore God, his Grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty. 4

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious
favours, 9

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard. 12

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kins Lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts:
Think you not that the powers we bear with us
Will cut their passage through the force of France,

doing the execution and the act
For which we have in heed assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well persuaded

We carry not a heart with us from hence
That grows not in a fair consent with ours;
Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish
Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd

Thou is your majesty: there's not, I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve
you

With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness,

And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quitance of desert and merit
According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeld sinews toil,

And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your Grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge us less. Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday

That rail'd against our person: we consider
It was excess of wine that set him on;

And on his more advice we pardon him.
Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security:

Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O! let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir,
You show great mercy, if you give him life
After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas! your too much love and care of me

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch.
If little faults, proceeding on distemper, shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested,

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their
dear care,

And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our

French causes:
Who are the late commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord:
Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir
knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours: be Read them; and know, I know your worthiness.

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,
We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen!

What see you in those papers that you lose
So much complexion? Look ye, how they change!

Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you
there,

That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood
Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault,

And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey. To which we all appeal.

K. Hen. The mercy that was cleft in us but late

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd: &
You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy

For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.

See you, my princes and my noble peers,
These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge
here,

You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents

Belonging to his honour; and this man
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,

And sworn unto the practices of France,
To kill us here in Hampton: to the which

This knight, no less for bounty bound to us
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O!

What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou cruel,

Ingrateful, savage and inhuman creature!
Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels

That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,
That almost mightst have coil'd me into gold

Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use?
May it be possible that foreign hire

Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange

That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.

Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,

Working so grossly in a natural cause
That adulation did not whoop at them:

But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder:
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously 112
Hath got the voice in hell for excellence:
And other devils that suggest by treasons
Do botch and bungle up damnation
With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch'd 116

From glistening semblances of plety;
But he that tempered thee bade thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,

Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. 120
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus
Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back,
And tell the legions, 'I can never win 124
A soul so easy as that Englishman's.'

O! how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance. Show men dutiful?
Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learn'd? 128

Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family?
Why, so didst thou: seem they religious?

Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet,
Free from gross passion or of nirth or anger, 132
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood,
Garmish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye without the ear,
And but in purged judgment trusting nother?

Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem: 137
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
To mark the full-fraught man and best indued
With some suspelson. I will weep for thee; 140
For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like

Another fall of man. Their faults are open:
Arrest them to the answer of the law;
And God acquit them of their practices! 144

Ere. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of
Henry Lord Scroop of Maaham. 148

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath dis-
cover'd,

And I repent my fault more than my death: 152
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce,

Although I did admit it as a motive 156
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God he thanked for prevention:

When I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
Beseeching God and you to pardon me. 160

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason

Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise. 164

My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.
K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person.
John'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers 168

Recelv'd the golden earnest of our death;
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,

His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt, 172
And his whole kingdom into desolation.

Touching our person seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
The taste whereof, God of his mercy give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance 180
Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.

[Exeunt CAMBRIDGE, SCROOP, and GREY, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France! the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky war. 174

Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way

To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way. 188

Then forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.

Cheerly to sea! the signs of war advance: 192
No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—London. Before a Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me
bring thee to Stalnea.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins: 4

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead.

And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er
he is, either in heaven or in hell! 3

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom. If ever man went to Arthur's bosom. A' made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child; a' parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' bahled of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I:

'what man! be of good cheer.' So a' cried out
'God, God, God!' three or four times: now
I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God, I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone. 28

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that a' did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that a' did not. 32

Boy. Yes, that a' did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. A' could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked. 36

Boy. A' said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon. 41

Boy. Do you not remember a' saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire? 44

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be gone
from Southampton. 49

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.

Look to my chattels and my moveables:

Let senses rule, the word is, 'Pitch and pay;'
Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-
cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:

Therefore, caveo be thy counsellor. 56

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,

Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my boys,

To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they
say. 61

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it;
but, adieu. 65

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—France. An Apartment in the FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING, attended;
the DAUPHIN, the DUKES OF BERRI and BAI-
TAIN, the CONSTABLE, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.
Therefore the Dukes of Berri and Britaine,
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,
And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant;

For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.
It fits us then to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom.—
Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,—

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintained, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say 'tis meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France:

And let us do it with no show of fear;

No, with no more than if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance:

For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne

By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,

That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin

You are too much mistaken in this king.

Question your Grace the late ambassadors.

With what great state he heard their embassy,

How well supplied with noble counsellors,

How modest in exception, and, withal

How terrible in constant resolution,

And you shall find his vanities forespent

Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,

Covering discretion with a coat of folly;

As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots

That shall first spring and be most delicate. 4

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;

But though we think it so, it is no matter:

In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh

The enemy more mighty than he seems:

So the proportions of defence are fill'd;

Which of a weak and nigardly projection

Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scantling

A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong; 45

And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.

The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon

us,

And he is bred out of that bloody strain

That haunted us in our familiar past:

Witness our too much memorable shame

When Cressy battle fatally was struck

And all our princes captiv'd by the hand
 Of that black name, Edward Black Prince of Wales; 56
 Whiles that his mounting sire, on mountain
 standing,
 Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
 Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him
 Mangle the work of nature, and deface 60
 The patterns that by God and by French fathers
 Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
 Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
 The native mightiness and fate of him. 64

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
 Do crave admittance to your majesty.
Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
 Go, and bring them.
 [Exit Messenger and certain Lords.
Dau. You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends. 68
Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs
 Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten
 Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
 Take up the English short, and let them know
 Of what a monarchy you are the head: 73
 Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
 As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England?
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your
 majesty. 76
 He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
 That you divest yourself, and lay apart
 The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
 By law of nature and of nations long 80
 To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown
 And all wide-stretched honours that pertain
 By custom and the ordinance of times
 Into the crown of France. That you may know
 'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim,
 Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd 85
 days,
 Nor from the dust of our old fable,
 He sends you this most honorable line, 88
 [Gives a pedigree.
 In every branch truly demonstrative;
 Willing you overlook this pedigree;
 And when you find him evenly deriv'd
 From his most fam'd of famous ancestors, 92
 Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
 Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
 From him the native and true challenger.
Fr. King. Or else what follows? 96
Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown
 Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:

Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
 In thunder and in earthquake like a Jove, 100
 That, if requiring fall, he will compel;
 And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
 Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
 On the poor souls for whom this hungry war 104
 Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
 Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
 The dead men's blood, the plining maidens'
 groans,
 For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers, 108
 That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
 This is his claim, his threatning, and my message;
 Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
 To whom expressly, I bring greeting too. 112
Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:
 To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
 Back to our brother England.
Dau. For the Dauphin,
 I stand here for him: what to him from England? 116
Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
 And anything that may not misbecome
 The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
 Thus says my king: an if your father's high-
 ness 120
 Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
 Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty.
 He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
 That eaves and wombly vaultages of France 124
 Shall chide your trespass and return your mock
 In second accent of his ordinance.
Dau. Say, if my father render fall return,
 It is against my will; for I desire 128
 Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
 As matching to his youth and vanity,
 I had present him with the Perls balls.
Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake 132
 for it,
 Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe:
 And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference—
 As we his subjects have in wonder found—
 Between the promise of his greener days 136
 And these he masters now. Now he weighs
 time
 Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read
 In your own losses, if he stay in France.
Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. 140
Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our
 king
 Come here himself to question our delay;
 For he is footed in this land already.
Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions: 144
 A night is but small breath and little pause
 To answer matters of this consequence.
 [Flourish. Exit.

Act III.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies
 In motion of uncessant day
 Than that of flight; suppose that you have

The well-appointed signet Hampton pier
 Embark his royal city; and his brave fleet
 With silken streamers the young Phoebus fanning;

Play with you, and accend them behold
 Upon the hemlock-tacks; ship-boys elin bang;
 Hear the shrill trumpet, both organs pipe,
 To sounds confounding; hear the thrumming sails,
 Burne with the mercurial and creeping wind,
 Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,

Breasting the lofty surge; O! but their
 You stand upon the verge and behold
 A city on the inconstant billows dance
 For so appears this fleet majestical
 Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow
 Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy;
 And leave your England, as about midnight

Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old men,

Either past or not arriv'd to both and prize-saun

For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
 With one appearing hair, that will not poison
 Those cull'd and choice-driven cavaliers
 France?

Work, work your thoughts, and there a siege;

Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
 With fatal mouths gaping on girdled Harfleur;
 Suppose the ambassador from the French
 back;

Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
 Katharine his daughter; and with her dowry,

Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms;
 The offer likes not; and the mind-gunner
 With tinstock now the devilish cannon touches,
 [Alarum; and chambers go off

And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
 And take out our performance with your mind.
 Exit

Scene I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BED-FORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;

or close the wall up with English dead!
 In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
 As modest stillness and humility;
 But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
 Then imitate the action of the tiger;
 Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
 Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage;
 Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
 Let it pry through the portulac of the head
 Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm
 it

As fearfully as with a galled roe
 O'erhang and jutty his confounding frowns
 Swild with the wild and wasteful ocean.
 Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
 Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
 To his full height; for on you noblest English
 Whose blood is from fathers of war-proof;
 Fathers that like so many Alexander,
 Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
 And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.

Dishonour not your mothers; now attest
 That those whom you call'd fathers did beget
 you

Be not a coward of grosser blood,
 And teach them how to war. And you, good women

Whose limbs were made in England show
 here

The staff of your pasture; let us swear
 That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not;

For there is none of you so mean and base
 That hath not noble lustre in your eyes;
 I see you stand like greyhounds in the traps,
 I see you stand like greyhounds in the traps,
 Straining upon the start. The game's afoot;
 Follow your spirit; and, upon this charge
 Cry 'God for Harry! England and Saint George!

Exeunt. Alarum and chambers go yards under the countermine; by Cheshu, I think, a' w' plow up all if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the mine is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, I' faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world:
I will verify as much in his poard: he has no more directions than the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance.

Gow. Here comes the Scots captain,
Captain Jamy, with him

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the primitive wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say gud day Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captalun
James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the ploners given o'er?

Mac. By Cheshu, I will give: the work ish give over, the town is to be retret. By my hand, I swear, I will give the work ish ill done; it is a' done, la! I would have blowed up the town, so I would have hour: O! tish ill done, la! done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

Jamy. It shall be vary gud, gud felth, gud capcalun bath: [Aside.] and I sail quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sail I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and be Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there is nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

Jamy. By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, alle do gud service,

FLUEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines: the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke it is not so good to come to the mines. For look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' adversary—you may discuss unto the duke, look you—is digt himself four or aile lig I the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sal I snerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I thilk, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation— 134

Mac. Of my nation? What ish my nation?
ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation? 138

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other partcularities. 145

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your
head. 148

Gov. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jany. A! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded.]

Gov. The town sounds a parley. 152

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of wars; and there is an end [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

*The Governor and some Citizens on the walls;
the English forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train.*

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parle we will admit:
Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves;
Or like to men proud of destruction 4

Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier,—
A name that in my thoughts, becomes me best,—
If I begin the battery once again,

I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur 8
Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloody hand shall range 12

With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass
Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.

What is it then to me, if lupulous war,
Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends, 16

Do, with his smilsh'd complexion, all feil feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause,
If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20

Of hot and forcing violation?
What rein can hold licentious wickedness
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil 25

As send precepts to the leviathan
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town and of your people, 28
Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of heady murder, spoil, and villany. 32

If not, why, in a moment, look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand

Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards, 36
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes,
Whiles the mad mothers with their howls con-fus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen. 41

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end.
The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated, 45

Returns us that his powers are yet not ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.
Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours; 49

For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates! Come, uncle
Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain, 52
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French:

Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on and sickness growing

Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais. 56
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;

To-morrow for the march are we adrest.
[Flourish. KING HENRY and his Train enter the town.]

Scene IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigne; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez vous la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foy, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendray. Les doigts je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres; ouy, d' fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, d' fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon escolier.

J'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vistement.
Comment appelez vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles! nous les appellons, de nails.
Kath. De nails, Escoutez; dites moy, si je parle bien: de hands, de fingres, et de nails.
Alice. C'est bien dict, madame; il est fort bon Anglois. 21
Kath. Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras.
Alice. De arm, madame.
Kath. Et le coude? 24
Alice. De elbow.
Kath. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent. 28
Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.
Kath. Excusez moy, Alice; escoutez: de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arma, de billow. 32
Alice. De elbow, madame.
Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; de elbow. Comment appelez vous le col?
Alice. De nick, madame. 36
Kath. De nick. Et le menton?
Alice. De chin.
Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick: le menton, de sin. 40
Alice. Voy. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité vous prononcez les mots aussi droict que les natifs d'Angleterre.
Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps. 45
Alice. N'avez vous déjà oublié ce que je vous ay enseignée?
Kath. Non, je reciteray à vous promptement. De hand, de fingre, de mails,— 49
Alice. De nails, madame.
Kath. De nails, de arme, de llbow.
Alice. Sauf votre honneur, d'elbow. 52
Kath. Ainsi dis je; d'elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez vous le pied et la robe?
Alice. De foot, madame; et le coun. 55
Kath. De foot, et le coun? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user. Je ne voudrois prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Foh! le foot, et le coun. Néantmoins je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arm, d'elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, le coun. 64
Alice. Excellent, madame!
Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons nous à diner. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.
Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BOURBON, the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and Others.
Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme.
Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord, let us not live in France; let us quit all,

And give our vineyards to a barbarous people. 4
Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us, The emptying of our fathers' luxury, Our scions, put in wild and savage stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds, 8
 And overlook their grafters?
Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!
Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, 12
 To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm
 In that nook-shotten Isle of Albion.
Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?
 Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull, 16
 On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
 Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,
 A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth, Decoet their cold blood to such valliant heat? 20
 And shall our quiek blood, spirited with wine,
 Seem frosty? O! for honour of our land,
 Let us not hang like roping lecleles
 Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people 24
 Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields;
 Poor we may call them in their native lordis.
Dau. By faith and honour,
 Our madams mock at us, and plainly say 28
 Our mettle is bred out; and they will give
 Their bodies to the lust of English youth
 To new-store France with bastard warriors.
Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools, 32
 And teach la voltas high and swift corantos;
 Saying our grace is only in our heels,
 And that we are most lofty runaways.
Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald?
 speed him hence: 36
 Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.
 Up, princes! and, with sprit of honour edg'd
 More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:
 Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France; 40
 You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and Berri,
 Alcnçon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
 Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
 Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
 Folx, Lestralc, Bouciqualt, and Charolois; 45
 High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,
 For your great seats now quit you of great shames.
 Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land 48
 With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur:
 Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
 Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
 The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: 52
 Go down upon him, you have power enough,
 And in a captive chariot into Roan
 Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.
 Sorry am I his numbers are so few, 56
 His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march.
 For I am sure when he shall see our army
 He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
 And for achievement offer us his ransom. 60
Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy,
 And let him say to England that we send
 To know what willing ransom he will give.
 Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Roan.
Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. 65
Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.
 Now forth, lord constable and princes all.
 And quickly bring us word of England's fall. 68

[Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLEELLEN.

Gow. How now, Captain Fleellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge. 4

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my utter-most power; he is not—God be praised and blessed!—any hurt in the world; but keeps the pride most valiantly, with excellent discipline.
 There is an ancient lieutenant there at the bridge, I think, in my very conscience, he is as valliant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do us gallant service. 17

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called Anuchleut Pistol. 20

Gow. I know him not. 20

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me
 favours:

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited
 some love at his hands. 25

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of
 heart,

And of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate
 And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel, 28
 That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restlesse stone.

Flu. By your patience, Anuchleut Pistol.
 Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning,
 and inconstant, and mutability, and variation:

and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls: in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral. 40

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns
 on him;

For he hath stoln a pax, and hanged must a
 be,

A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free 44

And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.

But Exeter hath given the doom of death

For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak; the duke will hear thy voice; 48

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut

With edge of penny cord and vile reproach:

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee
 requite.

Flu. Anuchleut Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning. 53

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, anuchleut, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for, if, look you, he were my brother,
 I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd; and figo for thy friendship! 60

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit.]

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal: I remember him now; a lawd, a cut purse. 66

Flu. I'll assure you a' utter'd as prave words at the bridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve. 71

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on;
 and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tun'd oaths: and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among forming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such scoundrels of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook. 88

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is; if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.]

Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the bridge.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

Flu. God bless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! can'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter hath very gallantly maintained the bridge: the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most pravo passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the bridge, out ho is enforced to rethe, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the bridge. I can tell your majesty the duke is a prave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perillion of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church; one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all hubukkes, and wheiks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes pluo and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbradded or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gaurester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king: say thou to Harry of England: Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admit our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the blood we have digested; which, in weight to answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master, so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,

And tell thy king I do not seek him now.

But could be willing to march on to Calais

Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth,—

Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much

Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,—

My people are with sickness much enfeebled,

My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French:

Who, when they were in health, I tell thee,

herald,

I thought upon one pair of English legs

Did march three Frenchmen. Yes, forgive me,

God,

That I do brag thus! this your air of France

Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.

Go therefore, tell thy master here I am:

My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,

My army but a weak and sickly guard;

Yet, God before, tell him we will come on,

Though Franco himself and such another neighbour

Stand in our way. There's for thy labour,

Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself:

If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd,

We shall your tawny ground with your red blood

Discolour: and so, Montjoy, fare you well.

The sum of all our answer is but this:

We would not seek a battle as we are;

Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it;

So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness.

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us

now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward

night:

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves,

And on to-morrow bid them march away.

[Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBUREN, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, and Others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour—

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. ça, ha! He bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs: le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 20

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus; he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse; and all other jakes you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse. 28

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin. 32

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lark, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world—familiar to us, and unknown—to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus: 'Wonder of nature!'

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress. 44

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress. 49

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress. 53

Con. Ma foi, methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours. 56

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O! then belike she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French horse off and in your straight strouers. 60

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress. 65

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair. 68

Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au boubrier: thou makest use of any thing. 73

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress: or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose. 76

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord. 80

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shali not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away. 86

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted. 89

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces. 93

Con. I will not say so for fear I should be faced out of my way. But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English. 97

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them. 101

Dau. 'Tis midnight: I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English. 104

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath. 109

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing. 113

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still. 116

Orl. I know him to be vallant.

Con. I was told that hy one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he? 120

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him. 124

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour;

and when it appears, it will late.

Orl. 'Ill will never said well.' 128

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship.'

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.' 132

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb, with 'A pox of the devil.'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.' 137

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. 141

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valliant and most expert gentleman.
Would it were day! Alas! poor Harry of England, he longs not for the dawning as we do. 146

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension,
they would run away. 151

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ran. That island of England breeds very valliant creatures: their mastiffs are of unmatch-able courage. 157

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say that's a valliant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. 162

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. 168

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm; come, shall we about it? 173

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see,
by ten
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exit.]

Act IV.

Enter Chorus.

*Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark*

Fills the wide vessel of the universe.

*From camp to camp, through the foul womb of
night,*

The hum of either army stilly sounds,

That the fix'd sentinels almost receive

The secret whispers of each other's watch:

Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face:

*Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
 neighs*

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers, accomplishing the knights,

With busy hammers closing rivets up,

Give dreadful note of preparation.

The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,

And the third hour of drowsy morning name.

Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,

The confident and over-lusty French

Do the low-rated English play at dice;

And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night

*Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,*

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires

Sit patiently, and inly ruminate

The morning's danger, and their gesture sad

Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats

Presenteth them unto the gazing moon

So many horrid ghosts. O! now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band

*Walking from watch to watch, from tent to
tent,*

Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'

For forth he goes and visits all his host,

Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,

*And calls them brothers, friends, and country-
men.*

Upon his royal face there is no note

How dread an army hath enrounded him; 36

*Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watched night:*

But freshly looks and overbears attaint

With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty;

That every wretch, pining and pale before,

Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.

A largess universal, like the sun

His liberal eye doth give to every one,

*Thawing cold fear. Then mean and gentle
all,*

*Behold, as may unworthiness despise,
A little touch of Harry in the night.*

And so our scene must to the battle fly;

*Where,—O for pity,—we shall much disgrace,
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right 'ill dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see;*

*Minding true things by what their mockeries
be.*

[Exit.]

Scene I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;

The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil, 4
Would men observingly distill it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry:
Besides, they are our outward consciences, 7 3
And preachers to us all; admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself. 12

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better, 16

Since I may say, 'Now lie I like a king.'

K. Hen. 'Tis good for me to love their present palus

Upon example; so the spirit is eas'd:
And when the mind is quieten'd, out of doubt, 20
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.
Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both,
Commend me to the princes in our camp; 25
Do my good unorrow to them; and anon
Desire them all to my pavillon.

Glo. We shall, my liege. 28
[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BEDFORD.]

Erp. Shall I attend your Grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight:
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company. 32

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry!

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully. [Exit.]

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là!

K. Hen. A friend. 35

Pist. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?
Or art thou base, common and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Traill'st thou the puissant pike? 40

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold, 44

A lad of life, an Imp of fame:

Of parents good, of fist most valliant:

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-string
I love the lovely bully. What's thy name? 48

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen? 52

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate

Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours. 57

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee thou! 60

K. Hen. I thank you. God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.]

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness. [Retires.]

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen! 64

Flu. So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiracion in the universal world, when the true and auncient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept. If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise. 76

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you heard him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxecomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxecomb, in your own conscience now?

Gow. I will speak lower. 83

Flu. I pray you and peseech you that you will.

[Exeunt GOWER and FLUELLEN.]

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion,

There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder? 89

Bates. I think it be; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you? 96

K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate? 100

K. Hen. Even as men wracked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king? 104

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are; yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army. 118

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck, and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here. 123

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved. 129

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know. 136

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us. 140

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make; when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all, 'We died at such a place;' some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon their debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection. 155

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcilable iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the king is not answer the particular endings of his; he father of his son, nor the master of his art; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his bundle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death they have borne life away, and where they would be safe they perish. Then, if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained: and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare. 199

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head: the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed. 206

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after. 211

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch. You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fawning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after I come, 'tis a foolish saying. 218

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round;

I should be angry with you if the time were convenient. 221

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it. 224

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine. 230

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it. 237

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company. 240

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon. 244

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper. 249

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives,
Our children, and our sins lay on the king! 252
We must bear all. O hard condition!

Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath
Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel
But his own wringing. What infinite heart's ease
Must kings neglect that private men enjoy! 257
And what have kings that privates have not too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?
And what art thou, thou idle ceremony? 260

What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?
What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in?
O ceremony! show me but thy worth: 264

What is thy soul of adoration?
Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd, 268
Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou off, instead of homage sweet,
But poison'd flattery? O! be sick, great greatness,

And bid thy ceremony give thee cure. 272
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low-bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's
knee, 276

Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,

That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;
I am a king that find thee; and I know
'Tis not the balm, the sceptre and the ball, 280

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,
The farced title running 'fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp, 284

That beats upon the high shore of this world,
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
'Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave, 288

Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread:
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell, 292

But, like a lackey, from the rise to set
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse, 296

And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil and nights with
sleep, 300

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots
What watch the king keeps to maintain the
peace. 304

Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Re-enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent:
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers'
hearts; 309
Possess them not with fear; take from them
now

The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to-day, O
Lord! 312

O! not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown.
I Richard's body have interr'd anew,
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears 316
Than from it issu'd for drops of blood.

Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built 320

Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests
Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
Though all that I can do is nothing worth,
Since that my penitence comes after all, 324
Imploring pardon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. My liege!
K. Hen. My brother Gloucester's voice! Ay;
 I know thy errand, I will go with thee: 3-3
 The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.
 [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The French Camp.

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES,
 and Others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour: up, my lords!
Dau. Montez à cheval! My horse! varlet! laquais! ha!
Orl. O brave spirit!
Dau. Via! les eaux et la terre! 4
Orl. Rien puis! l'air et le feu.
Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my lord constable!
Con. Hark how our steeds for present service
 neigh! 8
Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,
 That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
 And dout them with superfluous courage: ha!
Ram. What! will you have them weep our horses' blood? 12
 How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattail'd, you French peers.
Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!
 Do but behold yon poor and starved band, 16
 And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
 Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
 There is not work enough for all our hands;
 Scarce blood enough in all their sleeky veins 20
 To give each naked curtal-axe a stain,
 That our French gallants shall to-day draw out.
 And sneath for lack of sport: let us but blow on
 them,
 The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them. 24
 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
 That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,
 Who in unnecessary action swarm
 About our squares of battle, were enow 28
 To purge this field of such a hilding foe,
 Though we upon this mountain's basis by
 Took stand for idle speculation:
 But that our honours must not. What's to say?
 A very little little let us do, 33
 And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound
 The tucket sonance and the note to mount:
 For our approach shall so much dare the field,
 That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?
 Yon island carrions desperate of their bones,
 Ill-favour'dly become the morning field: 4
 Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
 And our air shakes them passing scornfully:
 Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
 And faintly through a rusty heaver peeps: 44
 The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
 With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor
 jades
 Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
 The gum down-roping from their pale-dead
 eyes, 48
 And in their pale dull mouths the gimmel bit
 Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless;
 And their executors, the knavish crows,
 Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hoore. 52
 Description cannot suit itself in words
 To demonstrate the life of such a battle
 In life so lifeless as it shows itself.
Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. 56
Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,
 And give their fasting horses provender,
 And after fight with them?
Con. I stay hut for my guard: on, to the
 field! 60
 I will the banner from a trumpet take,
 And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!
 The sun is high, and we outwear the day.
 [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English host; GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the king?
Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle,
West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.
Eze. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh. 4
Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.
 God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:
 If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
 Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford, 8
 My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord
 Exeter,
 And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu!
Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!
Eze. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly today: 12
 And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,

For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;
Princely in both.

Enter KING HENRY.

West. O! that we now had here 16
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work to-day.

K. Hen. What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow 20
To do our country loss; and if to live,

The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, 24
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;

It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires:
But if it be a sin to covet honour, 28
I am the most offending soul alive.

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more, methinks, would share from
me, 32

For the best hope I have. O! do not wish one
more;

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made, 36
And crowns for convoy put into his purse;

We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home, 40
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age, 44
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,

And say, 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian.'
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars, 48
And say, 'These wounds I had on Crispian's day.'

Old men forget: yet all shall be forgot, 49
But he'll remember with advantages
What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,

Familiar in his mouth as household words, 52
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,

Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered.
This story shall the good man teach his son; 56
And Crispian Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,

But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers; 60
For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile
This day shall gentle his condition:
And gentlemen in England, now a bed 64

Shall think themselves accursed they were not
here,

And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks

That fought with us upon Saint Crispian's day.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed: 68

The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now! 72

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I
alone,

Without more help, could fight this royal battle!
K. Hen. Why, now thou hast wish'd five thousand men; 76

Which likes me better than to wish us one.
You know your places: God be with you all!

Fu-ket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee,
King Harry.

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, 80
Before thy most assured overthrow;

For certainly thou art so near the gulf Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy,

The constable desires thee thou wilt mind 84
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire

From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies

Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now? 88
Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer
back:

Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
Good God! why should they mock poor fellows
thus? 92

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting
him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust, 96
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;

And those that leave their valliant bones in
France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dung-hills,

They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them, 100

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your climate,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark then abounding valour in our English,
That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing, 105
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.
Let me speak proudly: tell the constable, 106
We are but warriors for the working-day;
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;
There's not a piece of feather in our host— 112
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—
And time hath worn us into slovenry:
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night 116
They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'
heads,

And turn them out of service. If they do this,—
As, if God please, they shall,—my ransom then Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour; 121
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints;

Which if they have as I will leave 'em then, 124
Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so, fare thee well;

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.
K. Hen. I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom. 128

Enter YORK

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg

The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away:

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier,
PISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur!

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality? Calen O custure me! Art thou a gentleman?

What is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O Signieur Dew should be a gentle-
man:—

Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew and mark: O
Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox
Except, O signieur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitié de moy! 13

Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys;

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood. 16

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, 20
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moy!

Pist. Sayst thou me so? Is that a ton of moys?
Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French

What is his name. 25

Boy. Escoutez; comment estes vous appellé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer. 28

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and fir him, and ferret him. Discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fir. 33

Pist. Blt him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande d vous dire que vous faites vous prest; car ce soldat icy est dispos
tout d cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Ouy, euppelle gorge, permafoy, l'ensant, unless thou give me crowns, brave
crowns; 40

Or mangled shall thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O! je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous don-neray deux cents ecus. 45

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom
he will give you two hundred crowns. 47

Pist. Tell him, my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il? 52

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier; neant-moins, pour les ecus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchise-
ment. 57

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciemens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy. 63

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one—as he thinks—the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England. 68

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.—

Follow me!

[Exeunt Pistol and French Soldier

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine. I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Burdolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil of the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hanged; and so would this be if he durst steal anything adventurously. I must stay with the keys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit.]

Scene V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, BOURBON, CONSTABLE, RAMBURES, and Others.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur! le jour est perdu! tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach and everlasting shame

Sit mocking in our plumes. O meschante fortune!

Do not run away. [A short alarum.]

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O pesturable shame! let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let's die in honour! once more back again; And he that will not follow Bourbon now,

Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand, Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough yet living in the field To smother up the English in our throgs,

If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the throng;

Let life be short, else shame will be too long. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY and Forces; EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-vallant countrymen:

But all's not doue; yet keep the French the field.

Eze. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour

I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting; From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Eze. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie,

Lanling the plain; and by his bloody side,—

Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,—

The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died: and York, all haggled over,

Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteept,

And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes

That bloodily did yawn upon his face;

And cries aloud, 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!

My soul shall thine keep company to heaven; 16

Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast,

As in this glorious and well-foughten field,

We kept together in our chivalry!

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up:

He smil'd me in the face, rought me his hand,

And with a feeble gripe says, 'Dear my lord,

Commend my service to my sovereign.'

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck

He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;

And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd

A testament of noble-ending love.

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd

Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;

But I had not so much of man in me,

And all my mother came into mine eyes

And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not; 32

For, hearing this, I must perforce compound

With mistful eyes, or they will issue too. [Alarum.]

But hark! what new alarum is this came?

The French have reinforce'd their scatter'd men:

Then every soldier kill his prisoners!

Give the word through. [Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the boys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer'd: in your conscience now, is it not? 4

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king most worthily hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O! 'tis a gallant king. 11

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great. 15

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge,

th, Captain

or the huge,

or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings,
save the phrase is a little variations. 17

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon: his father was called Phillip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander,—God knows, and you know,—in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his choirs, and his moods, and his dis-pleasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Cleitus. 42

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his moods; also Harry Monmouth, being in his rages, and in his good judgments, turned away the blows with the great belly-doublet: he was a jest, and gipes, and knaveries, and
I have forgot his name. 42

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you, there is good men born at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty. 58

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, with a part of the English Forces; WARWICK, GLOUCESTER,
EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to
France

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald; 60
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill:

They will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field; they do offend our sight.

If they'll do neither, we will come to them, 64
And make them skirr away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.

Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
And not a man of them that we shall take 68
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Eac. Here comes the herald of the French,
my liege,

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to
be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald?
know'st thou not 72

That I have find'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king.

I come to thee for charitable licence,

That we may wander o'er this bloody field 76

To book our dead, and then to bury them;

To sort our nobles from our common men;

For many of our princes—woe the while!—

Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood; 80

So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs

In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds

Fret fetlock-deep in gore, and with wild rage

Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,

Killing them twice. O! give us leave, great king,

To view the field in safety and dispose

Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,

I know not if the day be ours or no; 88

For yet a many of your horsemen peer

And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praise be God, and not our strength,
for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt. 93

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agin-court.

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory,

Can't please your majesty, and your great-uncle

Edward the Black Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most brave battle

here in France. 100

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty say very true. If your majesties is remembered on us, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which,

your majesty know, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon

Saint Tavy's day. 109

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour;

For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your body, I can tell you that: Got pleas it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman. 116

Flu. By Jesu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man. 121

K. Hen. God keep me so! Our heralds go

with him:

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.
(Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY
and Others.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap? 127

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if a'live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap,—which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear if alive,—I will strike it out soundly. 137

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen?
Is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't
please your majesty, in my conscience. 141

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Bezebut himself, it is necessary, look your Grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la! 151

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege. 156

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege. [Exit

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person: if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love. 167

Flu. Your Grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see. 173

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an't please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent. 177

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother
Gloucester,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels 178

The glove which I have given him for a favour,
May haply purchase him a box o' the ear;
It is the soldier's; I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick:
If that the soldier strike him,—as, I judge 185
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,—
Some sudden mischief may arise of it;
For I do know Fluellen vaillant, 188
And touch'd with cholera, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury:
Follow and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—Before KING HENRY'S Pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, captain, I peseech you now come apace to the king: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of. 5

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove? I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. 6 [Strikes him.

Flu. 'Shlood! an arrant traitor as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn? 12

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him; he is a friend of the Duke Alençon's. 13

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?
Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is,—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter? 24
Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your Grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my
word. 33

Flu. Your majesty hear now,—saying your majesty's mirthhood,—what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is. I hope your majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me; in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it. 41

Flu. Was I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An't please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction? 43

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse. 52

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fault and not mine: for had you been as I took you for I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me. 60

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, all this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow; And wear it for an honour in thy cap

Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns: 64 And, captain you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prails, and prabbles, and quarrels, and discensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money. 72

Flu. It is with a good will; I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pushful? your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good shilling, I warrant you, or I will change it. 77

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French. 80

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle? 80

Exc. Charles Duke of Orleans; nephew to the king;

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouelquait; Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men. 84

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French

That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number,

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty-six; added to these, 88

Of knights, squires, and gallant gentlemen,

Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights: So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, 92 There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries; The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality.

The names of those their nobles that lie dead: 96

Charles Delabreth, Illeg Constable of France;

Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France;

The master of the cross-bows, Lord Ramboires;

Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guischaud Dauphin; 100

John Duke of Alençon; Antony Duke of Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy,

And Edward Duke of Bar: of lusty earls,

Grandpré and Roussil, Fauconberg and Folx, 104

Beaumont and Marle, Vandemont and Lestruc.

Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper.

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,

Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire: 108

None else of name: and of all other men

But five and twenty. O God! thy arm was here; 112

And not to us, but to thy arm alone,

Ascribe we all. When, without stratagem,

But in plain shock and even play of battle,

Was ever known so great and little loss

On one part and on the other? Take it, God,

For it is none but thine!

Exc. 'Tis wonderful! 116

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village:

And be it death proclaimed through our host

To boast of this or take the praise from God: 120

Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknowledgment, 124

That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites:

Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum; 128

The dead with charity enclosed in clay,

We'll then to Calais; and to England then,

Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. [Exeunt. 132

Act V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them: and of such as have,

I humbly pray them to admit the excuse

Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,

Which cannot in their huge and proper life 5
Be here presented. Now we bear the King Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts 8
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-
mouth'd sea,

Which, like a mighty whistler 'fore the king, 12
Seems to prepare his way: so let him land
And solemnly see him set on to London.

So swift a pace hath thought that even now 16
You may imagine him upon Blackheath;
Where that his lords desire him to have born
His bruised helmet and his bended sword

Before him through the city: he forbids it,
Being free from vainness and a glorious pride: 21
Giving full trophy, signal and ostent,
Quite from himself, to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens. 24

The mayor and all his brethren in best sort,
Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
With the plebeians encarming at their heels,
Go forth and fetch their conquering Caesar in:

As, by a lover but loving likelihood, 29
Were now the general of our gracious empress,—

As in good time he may,—from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword, 32
How many would the peaceful city quit
To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,

Did they this Harry. Now in London place
him;

As yet the lamentation of the French 36
Invites the King of England's stay at home,—
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them;—and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, 40

Till Harry's back return again to France:
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd

The interim, by remembering you 'tis past.
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.]

Scene I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter FLEELLEN and GOWER

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Fle. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, asse my friend, Captain Gower. The rascally, scald, beggary, lousy, prugging knave, Pistol,—which you and yourself and all the 'orld know to be no better than a fellow,—look you now, of no merits,

he is come to me and brings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not preed no contention with him: but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock. 16

Enter PISTOL.

Fle. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God bless you, Aunchient Pistol!
you scurry, lousy knave, God bless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Troyan, 2

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am quaimish at the smell of leek.

Fle. I peseech you heartily, scurry lousy knave, at my desires and my requests and my petitions to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestions does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it. 23

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.

Fle. [Strikes him.] There is one goat for you.
Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it? 23

Pist. Base Troyan, thou shalt die. 32

Fle. You say very true, scald knave, when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time and eat your victuals; come, there is sauce for it. [Strikes him again.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished
him. 41

Fle. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will pent his pate four days. Bite
I pray you; it is good for your green wound and your ploody coxeomb. 45

Pist. Must I bite?

Fle. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and unambiguities. 48

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge
I eat and eat, I swear—

Fle. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more smee to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by. 5

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel: thou dost see I eat.

Fle. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is good for your broken coxeomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all. 6

Pist. Good.

Fle. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat?

Fle. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat. 6

Pist. I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this. 72

Gou. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel; you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? 85

News have I that my Nell is dead! the spital of malady of France:
And there my rendezvous is quite out off 88
Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs
Honour is endgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn,
And something lean to outpurse of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal: 92
And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,
And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.

Scene II.—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter, from one side, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords; from the other side, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHARINE, ALICE and other Ladies; the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Into our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day; joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;
And, as a branch and member of this royalty, 5
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy;
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all! 8

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England; fairly met:
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day and of this gracious meeting, 13
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks; 17
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day

Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love, 20

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great Kings of France and England! That I have labour'd 24
With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours,

To bring your most Imperial majesties
Unto this bar and roys' interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since then my office hath so far prevail'd 29
That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have congreeted, let it not disgrace me
If I demand before this royal view, 32
What rub or what impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births,
Should not in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? 35
Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility, 4

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas 44
The darnel, henlock and rank fumitory
Both root upon, while that the coulter rusts
That should deracinate such savagery;

The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idleness, and nothing teenis 51
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kocksles, burrs,
Losing both beauty and utility;

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,
Even so our houses and ourselves and children
Have lost, or do not learn for want of time, 57
The sciences that should become our country,
But grow like savages,—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,— 61
To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire,
And every thing that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favour
You are assembled; and my speech entreats 64
That I may know the let why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace, 68

Whose want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects 74
You have, enshel'd brickbats, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which as yet,

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer. 70

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'erglanc'd the articles: pleaseth your Grace
To sit with us once more, with better heed 80
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester, 84

Warwick and Huntingdon, go with the king;
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity, 88
Anything in or out of our demands,
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with
them. 92

Haply a woman's voice may do some good
When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here
with us:

She is our capital demand, compris'd 96
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[*Exeunt all except KING HENRY,
KATHARINE, and ALICE.*]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms, 100
Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine! If you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate? 107

Kath. Parlonnez moy, I cannot tell what is like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges! 113

Alice. Ouy, vrayment, sans vostre grace, ainsi dit.

K. Hen. I said so, fair Katharine: and I must not blush to affirm it. 117

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines des tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one: that the tongues of men are full of deceits? 121

Alice. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better English speaker: I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no other English; for if thou couldst, thou wouldst seek me such a plain king that thou wouldst sell me and sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways so nice it in love, but directly to say 'I love you': then, if you urge me further than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer: I' faith do: and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. Sans vostre honneur, me unde sans adveill.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you would me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure, and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength.
If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my humour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken,
I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might luffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my cloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation;
only downright oaths, which I never use till urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me:
if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncollected constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow, but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon:
for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible int I could love de enemy of France? 127

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine; and,
Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 135

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hurly to be shook off. Je quand sur le posses- sion de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moy,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—une vostre est France, et vous estes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me. 197

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, le Francois que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle. 200

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate, but thy speaking of my tongue and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English: Canst thou love me? 205

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night when you come into your closet you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather gentle princess because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate,—as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt.—I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair tower-de-luce? 224

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate; you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon tres cher et divine deesse! 221

Kath. Your majesty are fausse French enough to deceive de mess cage demouelle dat is ca France. 224

K. Hen. Now, lie upon my false French! By mine honour, la true English I love thee, Kate; by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill buyer up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face, thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me. Put of your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine;' which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine;' who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English: wilt thou have me? 265

Kath. Dat is as it sail please de roy mon père.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate. 268

Kath. Den it sail also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma foy, je ne veux point que vous abaissez votre grandeur, en baisant la main d'une vostre indigne serviteure: excusez moy, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur. 276

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, et demoiselles, pour estre baisées devant leur nocen, il n'est pas la coutume de France. 280

K. Hen. Madam my Interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France.—I cannot tell what is baiser in English. 284

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moy.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say? 289

Alice. Ouy, vrayment.

K. Hen. O Kate! nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion; we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouths of all find-faunts, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding (Kissing her), you have witchcraft in your lips, Kate; there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French conuell; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father. 304

Re-enter the KING and QUEEN, BURGUNDY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORLAND, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! My royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English. 309

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness. 315

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up Love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consent to. 325

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do. 329

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for mudds, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on. 337

K. Hen. This moral lies me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too. 341

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way. 346

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them respectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you. 352

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will. 356

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter first, and then in sequel all. 361
According to their firm proposed natures.

Eze. Only he hath not yet subscribed this: Where your majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French, Notre très cher Alz Henry roy d'Angleterre, Héritier de France;

and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus Miis nos-ter Henricus, Rex Angliæ, et Hæres Franciæ.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,

But your request shall make me let it pass. 372

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest;

And thereupon give me your daughter.

Fr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up 376

Issue to me; that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale

With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction Plaut neighbourhood and Christian-like accord in their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

All. Amen! 384

K. Hen. Now, welcome, Kate: and bear me witness all,

That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

[Flourish.]

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one! As man and wife, being two, are one in love, 389 So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles off the bed of blessed marriage, Thrust in between the pacton of these kingdoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league; That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other! God speak this Amen! 396

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage: on which day,

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers', for surety of our leagues. 400
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me; And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!
[Sennet. Exeunt.]

Enter Chorus.

Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,
Our bending author hath pursued the story;
In little room confining mighty men, 405
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time, but in that small most greatly liv'd
This star of England: Fortune made his sword,
By which the world's best garden he achiev'd, 409
And of it left his son imperial lord.
Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this kings succeed;
Whose state so many had the managing, 413
That they lost France and made his England bleed:
Which oft our stage hath shown, and, for their sake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take. 416

Act I.

Scene I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the Funeral of KING HENRY THE FIFTH attended on by the DUKES OF BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER; the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Heralds, &c.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
 Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
 And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
 That have consented unto Henry's death!

King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!
 England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time.
 Virtue he had, deserving to command:
 His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
 His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
 More dazzled and drove back his enemies
 Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
 He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exc. We mourn in black; why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.

Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
 And death's dishonourable victory
 We with our stately presence glorify,
 Like captives bound to a triumphant car,
 What! shall we curse the planets of mishap
 That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
 Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
 Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
 By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.

Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
 So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
 The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought;
 The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd;
 None do you like but an effeminate prince,
 Whom like a school-boy you may over-awe.

Win. Gloucester, what'er we like thou art protector,

And lookest to command the prince and realm.
 Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
 More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh,

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st.

Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar: heralds, wait on us:
 Instead of gold we'll offer up our arms.
 Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead,
 Posterity, await for wretched years,

When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,

Our Isle be made a marsh of salt tears,
 And none but women left to wall the dead.
 Henry the Fifth! thy ghost I invoke:

Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
 Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
 A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
 Than Julius Caesar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
 Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
 Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
 Cotenue, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
 Paris, Guyors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What mayst thou, man, before dead
 Henry's corpse?

Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
 Will make him burst his lead and rise from
 death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up?
 If Henry were recall'd to life again
 These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.

Among the soldiers this is muttered,
 That here you maintain several factions;
 And, whilst a field should be dispatch'd and
 fought,

You are disputing of your generals.
 One would have lingering wars with little cost;

Another would fly swift, but wauteth wings;
 A third thinks, without expense at all,

By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
 Awake, awake, English nobility!

Let not sloth dim your honours new-begot;
 Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
 Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral
 These tidings would call forth their flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; Regent I am of France.

Give me my steeled coat: I'll fight for France.
 Away with these disgraceful walling robes!
 Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
 To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance.

France is revolted from the English quite,
 Except some petty towns of no import:
 The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
 Reigrier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
 The Duke of Alençon fieth to his side.

Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly
 to him!

O! whither shall we fly from this reproach?
Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies'
 throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness?

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
 Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,
 I must inform you of a dismal fight

Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.
Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? Is't

so?

Third Mess. O, no! wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown:

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
 The tenth of August last this dreadful lord,
 Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
 Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,

By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.
No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers; 116 Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued; 120
Where vallant Talbot above human thought
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundred's he sent to hell, and none durst stand
him;

Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he flew:
The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms; 125
All the whole army stood amaz'd on him.
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out amain, 130
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,
If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward.
He, being in the vaward,—plac'd behind, 132
With purpose to relieve and follow them,—
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the general wrack and massacre;

Enclosed were they with their enemies. 135
A base Wallon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled
strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face. 140

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself,
For living killy here in pomp and ease
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd. 144

Third Mess. O no! he lives; but is took prisoner.

And Lord Scyles with him, and Lord Hungerford:

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay: 145

I'll haid the Dauphin headlong from his throne;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;

Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.
Farewell, my masters; to my task will I; 152

Bonties in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal:

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe
quake. 156

d Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is
besieg'd;

The English army is grown weak and faint;
The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny. 160

Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.
Eza. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke. 164

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my
leave,

To go about my preparation. [Exit.

Glo. I'll to the Tower with all the haste
I can,

To view the artillery and munition; 168
And then I will proclaim young Henry king.

[Exit.
Exc. To Eltham will I, where the young king is,

Being ordain'd his special governor;
And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit.

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend. 173

I am left out; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office.

The king from Eltham I intend to steal, 176
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. [Exit.

Scene II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces: ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens

So in the earth, to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side;

Now we are victors; upon us he smiles. 4

What towns of any moment but we have?
At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;

Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,

Faintly besiege us one hour in a month. 9
Alen. They want their porridge and their fat
bull-beeves;

Either they must be dleted like mules
And have their provender tied to their mouths,

Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice. 12
Reig. Let's raise the siege; why live we idly
here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury,

And he may well in fretting spend his gall; 16
Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarm! we will rush on
them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
Him I forgive my death that killeth me 20

When he sees me go back one foot or fly.
[Exit.

Alarums; Excursions; afterwards a retreat.
Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!

Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled

But that they left me 'midst my enemies. 24

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life;

The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Frolsart, a country man of ours, records,

England all Olivers and Howlands breed
During the time Edward the Third did reign
More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons and Gollases,
It sendeth forth to skirlish. One to ten!
Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose
They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hare-brain'd slaves,

And hunger will enforce them to be more eager
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth
The walls they'll tear down than forsake the slege.

Reig. I think, by some odd gimmals or device,

Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on;
Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.
By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS.

Bast. Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome
to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer
unquill'd:

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a vision sent to her from heaven
Orlained is to raise this tedious slege,
And drive the English forth the bounds of
France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome;
What's past and what's to come she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
For they are certain and unfaillible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit BASTARD.] But first, to try her skill,

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place:
Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern;
By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires.]

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE and Others.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?

Joan. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me: 63
In private will I talk with thee apart.

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a while.
Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Joan. Dauphin, I am I with a shepherd's
daughter,

My wit untrun'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate:

Let whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
God's mother deign'd to appear to me
And in a vision full of majesty

Will'd me to leave my base vocation
And free my country from calamity.
Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success;
In complete glory she revealed herself;

And, whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,
That beauty am I bless'd with which you see,

Ask me what question thou canst possible
And I will answer unpremeditated:
My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.

Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate
If thou receive me for thy war-like mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me,
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true; 96
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Joan. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd
sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard,

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Joan. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a
man.

[They fight, and JOAN LA PUELLE overcomes.
Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Anuzon,

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Joan. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, tis thou that must help me:

Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant and not sovereign be;

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus. 112
Joan. I must not yield to any titles of love.

For my professer's sacred from above;
When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Therewith I think upon a recompense. 116
Cha. Meantime look gracious on thy prestrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean? 124

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on? 124

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Joan. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm: we'll fight it out. 128

Joan. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars. 132

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.

With Henry's death the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included. 137

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then. 141

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet Saint Phillip's daughters were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays and let us raise the siege. 146

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans and be immortal'd.

Char. Presently we'll try. Come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust if she prove false. 150

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter at the Gates the Duke of Gloucester, with his Serving men, in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day;

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance.

Where be these warlers that they wait not here?

Open the gates! 'Tis Gloucester that calls. 4

[Servants knock.]

First Ward. [Within.] Who's there that knocks so imperiously?

First Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.

Sec. Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

First Serv. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector? 8

First Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him: so we answer him:

We do not otherwise than we are will'd.

Glo. Who will'd you? or whose will stand, but mine?

There's none protector of the realm but I. 12

Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize:

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[Gloucester's Men rush at the Tower gates, and Woodville the Lieutenant speaks within.]

Wood. What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear? Open the gates: here's Gloucester that would enter. 17

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble Duke; I may not open:

The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:

From him I have express commandment. 20

That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him before me?

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate,

Whom Henry, our late sovereign, we'er could brook? 24

Thou art no friend to God or to the king:

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

First Serv. Open the gates unto the Lord Protector; or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly. 23

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by Serving men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this?

Glo. Peev'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping proflitor,

And not protector, of the king or realm. 32

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator,

Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead lord;

Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin:

I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat. 36

If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge an foot:

This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,

To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. 40

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back:

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing cloth

I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I'll beard thee to thy face. 41

Glo. What! am I dar'd and bearded to my face?—

Draw, men, for all this privileged place;

Blue coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard; [Gloucester and his men attack the Cardinal.]

I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly. 43

Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat,
 In spite of pope or dignities of church,
 Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.
Win. Gloucester, thou'lt answer this before the pope. 52
Glo. Winchester goose! I cry a rope! a rope!
 Now beat them hence; why do you let them
 stay?
 Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.
 Out, tawny coats! out, scarlet hypocrite! 56

Here Gloucester's Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.

May. Fle, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,
 Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glo. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:
 Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor King,
 Hath here distraint'd the Tower to his use. 61
Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens;
 One that still motions war and never peace,
 O'ercharging your free purses with large fines, 64
 That seeks to overthrow religion
 Because he is protector of the realm,
 And would have armour here out of the Tower,
 To crown himself king and suppress the prince.
Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.]
May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife
 But to make open proclamation.
 Come, officer: as loud as e'er thou canst; 72
 Cry.
Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace and the king's,
 we charge and command you, in his highness'
 name, to repair to your several dwelling-places;
 and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of
 death. 80
Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;
 But we shall meet and break our minds at large.
Win. Gloucester, we will meet; to thy cost,
 be sure:
 Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.
May. I'll call for clubs if you will not away.
 This cardinal's more haughty than the devil. 86
Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost hut what thou mayst.
Win. Abominable Gloucester! guard thy head;
 For I intend to have it ere long.
 [Exeunt, severally, Gloucester and Winchester, with their Serving-men.]
May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart. 90
 Good God! these nobles should such stomachs
 bear:
 I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,
 And how the English have the suburbs won.
Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at
 them,
 Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim. 4
M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
 Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
 Something I must do to procure me grace.
 The prince's espials have informed me 8
 How the English, in the suburbs close entrench'd,
 Wont through a secret gate of iron bars
 In yonder tower to overpeer the city,
 And thence discover how with most advantage
 They may vex us with shot or with assault. 13
 To intercept this inconvenience,
 A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
 And fully even these three days have I watch'd
 If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch,
 For I can stay no longer.
 If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;
 And thou shalt find me at the Governor's. [Exit.]
Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care; 21
 I'll never trouble you if I may spy them. [Exit.]

Enter, on the turrets, the Lords Salisbury and Talbot; Sir William Glansdale, Sir Thomas Garoave, and Others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return'd!
 How wert thou handled being prisoner? 24
 Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd,
 Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner
 Called the brave Lord Ponton de Santrallles; 28
 For him I was exchang'd and ransomed,
 But with a baser man at arms by far
 Once in contempt they would have barter'd me:
 Which I disdainful scorn'd, and craved death 32
 Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.
 In fine, releas'd I was as I desir'd.
 But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my
 heart:
 Whom with my bare fists I would execute 36
 If I now had him brought into my power.
Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.
Tal. With scoffs and scorns and contume-lious taunts.
 In open market-place produc'd they me, 40
 To be a public spectacle to all:
 Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
 The scarecrow that affrights our children so.
 Then broke I from the officers that led me, 44
 And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground
 To hurl at the beholders of my shame.

My grisly countenance made others fly.
None durst come near for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure; 49
So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant: 52
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
That walk'd about me every minute-while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart. 56

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endure;

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.
Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
Here, through this grate, I count each one, 60
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:
Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions 64
Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think at the North gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd, 68

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Here they shoot. SALISBURY and SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE fall.]

Sal. O Lord! have mercy on us, wretched sinners.

Gar. O Lord! have mercy on me, woeful man.

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us? 72

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak:
How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?

One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!
Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand 76

That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;

Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck up, 80

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fall,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. 84

Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands!

Bear hence his body; I will help to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life? 88

Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.

Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou shalt not die, whiles—

He beckons with his hand and smiles on me, 92
As who should say, 'When I am dead and gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French.'
Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero,
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn: 96
Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[It thunders and lightens. An alarum.]
What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarum and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd head: 100

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,
A false prophetess new risen up
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[Here SALISBURY lifteth himself up and groans.]

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan! 104

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you:

Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels

And make a quagmire of your mingled brains. 109
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,

And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.]

Scene V. The Same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. Enter TALBOT, pursuing the DAUPHIN; drives him in, and exit: then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them. Then re-enter TALBOT.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee:
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee: 5

Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Joan. Come, come; 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [They fight.]

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail? 9

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,

But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. 12
[They fight again.]

Joan. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

[A short alarum; then enter the town with Soldiers.]

Overtake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men; 16

Help Salisbury to make his testament:

This day is ours, as many more shall be. [Exit.]

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

I know not where I am, nor what I do: 20

A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal, Drives hack our troops and conquers as she llsts;

So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome
stench,

Are from their hives and houses driven away. 24

They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarum.]

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat; 28

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,

Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves. 32

[Alarum. Another skirmish.]

It will not be: retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,

For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is entered into Orleans 36

In spite of us or aught that we could do.

O! would I were to die with Salisbury.

The shame hereof will make me hide my head.
[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt TALBOT and his Forces, &c.]

Scene VI.—The Same.

Flourish. Enter, on the walls, JOAN LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Joan. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English:

Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astrea's daughter, 4
How shall I honour thee for this success?

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophets! 8
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires 12
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,

When they shall hear how we have played the
men. 16

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;

For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise. 20
A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear

Than Rhodope's or Memphis ever was:

In memory of her when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious 24

Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals

Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry, 28

But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.

Come in, and let us banquet royally,

After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Before Orleans.

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.
If any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign

Let us have knowledge at the court of guard. 4

First Sent. Sergeant, you shall.

[Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors—
When others sleep upon their quiet beds—
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces with scaling-ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy, 8
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,

This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted: 12

Embrace we then this opportunity,

As fitting best to quiltance their deceit

Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame, 16

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,

To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur. Traitors have never other company.

But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid, and be so martial! 21

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long;

If underneath the standard of the French

She carry armour, as she hath begun. 24

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits;

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow
thee. 28

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,

That we do make our entrance several ways,

That if it chance the one of us do fail,

The other yet may rise against their force. 32

Bed. Agreed. I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right Of English Henry, shall this night appear 36 How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying, 'Saint George!' 'A Talbot!' and all enter the town.

First Sent. Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the Walls in their shirts.

Enter, several ways, BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what! all unready so?

Bast. Unready! Ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarms at our chamber-doors.

Alen. Of nil exploits since first I follow'd arms,

Ne'er heard I of a war-like enterprise 44 More venturous or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how he sped. 48

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter CHARLES and JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal, Make us partakers of a little gain, 52

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Joan. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike? Sleeping or waking must I still prevail, 56

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me? Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fallen.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default, That, being captain of the watch to-night, 61

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been so safely kept

As that whereof I had the government, 64 We had not been thus shrewdly surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct 65 I was employ'd in passing to and fro, relieving of the sentinels:

Alençon! for which way should they first break in? question, my lords, no further of the

How or which way: 'tis sure they found some place 72

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made. And now there rests no other shift but this;

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd, And lay new platforms to enlamage them. 77

Alarm. Enter an English Soldier, crying, 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword; For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80 Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit

Scene II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURUNDY, a Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veild the earth. Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

[Retreat sounded.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury, 4 And here advance it in the market-place, The middle centre of this cursed town.

Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;

For every drop of blood was drawn from him 8 There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,

Within their chiefest temple I'll erect 12 A tomb wherein his corse shall be interr'd;

Upon the which, that every one may read, Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,

The treacherous manner of his mournful death, And what a terror he had been to France. 17

But, lords, in all our bloody massacre, I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc, Nor any of his false confederates. 21

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds, They did amongst the troops of armed men 24

Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself—as far as I could well discern For smoke and dusky vapours of the night—

Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull, 28 When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves That could not live asunder day or night.

After that things are set in order here, 32
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the war-like Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France? 36

Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe 40

To visit her poor castle where she lies,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars
Will turn into a peaceful comic sport, 45
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men 48

Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ru'd:
And therefore tell her I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her. 52

Will not your honours bear me company?
Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will;
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone. 56

Tal. Well then, alone,—since there's no remedy,—

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain. [Whispers.] You perceive my mind.

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. 60
{Exit.}

Scene III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;

And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Count. The plot is laid: If all things fall out right, 4

I shall as famous be by this exploit
As Seythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account: 8
Pain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd, 12

By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What I is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad, 16
That with his name the mothers still their babes?

I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect, 20
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies. 24

Tal. Madam, I have been hold to trouble you;

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes. 28

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify he Talbot's here. 32

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I trau'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me, 36

For in my gallery thy picture hangs;
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny, these many years 40
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan. 44

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am, indeed. 48

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see is but the smallest part 52
And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it. 56

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;

He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently. 60

He winds a horn. Drums strike up; a peal of ordnance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks, 64
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,

And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;

For I am sorry that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art. 72

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor miscon-
ster

The mind of Talbot as you did mistake

The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me; 76

Nor other satisfaction do I crave,

Eat only, with your patience, that we may

Taste of your wive and see what eates you have;

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured 81

To feast so great a warrior in my house.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the EARLS of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and a Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud;
The garden here is more convenient. 4

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth,

Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,

And never yet could frame my will to it; 8

And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper; 13

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye;

I have perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment; 16

but in these nice sharp quilllets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbearance:

The truth appears so naked on my side, 20
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak, 25

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:

Let him that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth, 30

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

Front off this brier-pineck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth, 32

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours, and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery

I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet. 36

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somers-set:

And say withal I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no
more,

Till you conclude that he, upon whose side 40

The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:

If I have rest I subscribe in silence. 44

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,

Giving my verdict on the white rose side. 48

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,

Lest bleeding you do paint the white rose red,

And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed, 52

Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,

And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: who else?

Law. [To SOMERSET.] Unless my study and my books be false, 56

The argument you held was wrong in you,

In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here, in my scabbard; mectitating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red. 61

Plan. Meantime, your checks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing

The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet, 64

'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheeks

Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,

And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

- Plan.* Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet? 69
- Plan.* Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;
 Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.
Som. Well, I'll fud friends to wear my bleeding roses, 72
 That shall maintain what I have said is true,
 Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.
- Plan.* N. by this maiden blossom in my lawn,
 I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy. 76
Suf. Turn not thy scorn this way, Plantagenet.
Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.
Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away! good Willian de la Pole: We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.
War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset: 82
 His grandfather was Lionel, Duke of Clarence,
 Third son to the third Edward, King of England.
 Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?
- Plan.* He bears him on the place's privilege,
 Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.
Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words 88
 On any plot of ground in Christendom.
 Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
 For treason executed in our late king's days?
 By his treason stand'st not thou attainted,
 Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
 His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood; 94
 And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.
- Plan.* My father was attached, not attainted;
 Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
 And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
 Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.
 For your partaker Pole and you yourself, 100
 I'll note you in my book of memory.
 To scourge you for this apprehension:
 Look to it well and say you are well warn'd.
Som. Ah, thou shalt find us restor'd, 106
 Still,
 And know us by these colours for ever.
 For these my friends in spite of thee shall live.
Plan. And, by my soul, this pale is an angry rose,
 As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, 108
 Will I for ever and my faction wear,
 Until it wither with me to my grave
 Or flourish to the height of my degree.
- Suf.* Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition: 112
 And so farewell until I meet thee next. [Exit.]
Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.]
Plan. How I am brav'd and must perforce endure it!
- War.* This blot that they object against your house
 Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,
 Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;
 And if thou be not then created York,
 I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120
 Meantime in signal of my love to thee,
 Against proud Somerset and William Pole,
 Will I upon thy party wear this rose.
 And here I prophecy: this brawl to-day, 124
 Grown to this faction in the Temple garden,
 Shall send between the red rose and the white
 A thousand souls to death and deadly night.
Plant. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you, 128
 That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.
Vern. In your behalf still would I wear the same.
Law. And so will I.
Plant. Thanks, gentle sir. 132
 Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
 This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.]
- Scene V.—London. A Room in the Tower.
- Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair by two Gaiers.*
- Mor.* Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
 Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
 Even like a man new haled from the rack,
 So fare my limbs with long imprisonment; 4
 And these gray locks, the pursulvants of death,
 Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
 Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
 These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent, 8
 Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
 Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief,
 And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
 That droops his sapless branches to the ground:
 Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb, 13
 Unable to support this lump of clay,
 Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
 As witting I no other comfort have. 16
 But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?
First Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come:
 We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber.
 And answer was return'd that he will come. 20
Mor. Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied.
 Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
 Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
 Before whose glory I was great in arms, 24
 This loathsome sequestration have I had;
 And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd,
 Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.
 But now the arbitrator of despairs, 28
 Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,

With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence :
I would his troubles likewise were explor'd,
That so he might recover what was lost. 32

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

First Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he
come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despis'd Richard, comes. 36

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp :
O! tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. 40

And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis'd?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;

And in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease. 44

This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and
me;

Among which terms he us'd a lavish tongue
And did upbraid me with my father's death : 48

Which obloquy set hairs before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet, 52

And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd
me,

And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth 56

Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pene,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. 60

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son, 64

The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent :

Durling whose reign the Percees of the North,
Finding his usurpation most unjust, 68

Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this

Was, for that—young King Richard thus re-
mov'd,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body— 72

I was the next by birth and parentage ;
For by my mother I deriv'd am

From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son
To King Edward the Third ; whereas he 76

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark : as, in this haughty great attempt
They labour'd to plant the rightful heir, 80

I lost my liberty, and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the Fifth
Succeeding his father Bollinghroke, did reign, 84

Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,

Marrying my sister that thy mother was,
Again in pity of my hard distress

Levied an army, weening to redeem 88

And have install'd me in the gladem ;
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,

And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppressed. 92

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True ; and thou seest that I no issue
have,

And that my fainting words do warrant death :
Thou art my heir ; the rest I wish thee gather : 96

But yet be wary in thy studious care.
Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with
me.

But yet methinks my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. 100

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic :
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,

And like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is removing hence, 104

As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle ! would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age. 108

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me,—as the slaughterer doth,

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill.—
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good ;

Only give order for my funeral : 112

And so farewell ; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war !

[Dies.
Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul !

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage, 116

And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast ;

And what I do imagine let that rest.
Keepers, convey him hence ; and I myself 120

Will see his hurlal better than his life.
[Excunt Keepers, bearing out the body of MORTIMER.

Here dies the dusky toreh of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort :

And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries, 124

Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress ;

And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood, 128

Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit.

Act III.

Scene I.—London. The Parliament House.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others. GLOUCESTER offers to put up a bill; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge, 4

Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I, with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience 8

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,

That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able 12

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride. 16

Thou art a most pernicious usurer,
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;

Lascivious, wanton, more than well becomes
A man of thy profession and degree; 20

And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life

As well at London Bridge as at the Tower.
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted, 24

The king, thy sov'reign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thine swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply. 28

If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor?

Or how haps it I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling? 32

And for dissension, who preferreth peace
More than I do, except I be provok'd?

No, my good lords, it is not that offends;
It is not that that hath incens'd the duke: 36

It is, because no one should sway but he;
No one but he should be about the king;

And that engenders thunder in his breast,
And makes him roar these accusations forth. 40

But he shall know I am as good—
Glo. As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!
Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne? 44

Glo. Am I not protector, saucy priest?
Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,

And useth it to patronage his theft. 43

Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo. Thou art reverent,

Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious,

And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler; 56

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy, or what shal'd, what of that?

Is not his Grace protector to the king? 60

Plan. [Aside.] Plantagenet, I see, must hold

his tongue,

Lest it be said 'Speak, sirrah, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?' 64

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal,

I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity. 68

O! what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye should jar.

Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell

Civil dissension is a viperous worm, 72

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

[A noise within: 'Down with the tawny coats!'

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,

Begun through malice of the bishop's men.

[A noise again within: 'Stones! Stones!'

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,

Pity the city of London, pity us! 77

The bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men,

Forbidden late to carry any weapon,

Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones, 80

And banding themselves in contrary parts

Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,

That many have their giddy brains knock'd out:

Our windows are broke down in every street, 84

And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Serving-men of GLOUCESTER and WINCHESTER, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves,

To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the peace.—

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife. 83

First Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

Sec. Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again.]

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish
broll, 92
And set this unacustom'd fight aside.

Third Serv. My lord, we know your Grace to be a man

Just and upright, and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty; 96

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,

To be disgraced by an Inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight; 100

And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.
First Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

[Skirmish again.

Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do, 104
Let me persuade you to forbear a while.

K. Hen. O! how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent? 108

Who should be pitiful if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace

If holy churchmen take delight in broils?
War. Yield, my Lord Protector; yield, Winchester; 112

Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sov'reign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity: 116

Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.
Win. He shall submit or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me
stoop;

Or I would see his heart out ere the priest 120
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear: 124

Why look you still so stern and tragical?
Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,

That malice was a great and grievous sin; 128
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king! the bishop hath a kind gird.

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent! 132
What! shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.
Glo. [Aside.] Ay; but I fear me, with a hollow heart. 136

See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce,
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers.

So help me God, as I dissemble not! 140

Win. [Aside.] So help me God, as I intend it
not!

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more; 144

But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
First Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.

Sec. Serv. And so will I.

Third Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Mayor, Serving-men, &c.

War. Accept, my Lord, most gracious sovereign, 148

Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for,
sweet prince,

An if your Grace mark every circumstance, 152
You have great reason to do Richard right;

Especially for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force: 156

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd. 160

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,

But all the whole inheritance I give
That doth belong unto the house of York, 164

From whence you spring by lineal descent.
Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then and set your knee against my foot; 168

And, in requerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the vallant sword of York:

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York. 172

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!

And as thy duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty

All. Welcome high prince, the mighty Duke of York 176

Som. [Aside.] O base prince, ignoble
Duke of York!

Glo. Now will it avail your majesty
To cross the sea to the crown'd France.

The presence of the king's tender
Amongst his subjects shall be a hindrance, 180

As it disanimates the valiant bands,
K. Hen. When the king says the word,

King Henry shall be the word,
For friendly counsel shall be my foes. 184

Glo. Your ships are ready in readiness.
[Flourish. Exeunt all except EXETER.

Ere. Ay, we may march in England or in France,
 Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
 This late dissension grown betwixt the peers 188
 Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,
 And will at last break out into a flame:
 As fester'd members rot but by degree,
 Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away, 192
 So will this base and envious discord breed.
 And now I fear that fatal prophecy
 Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fifth,
 Was in the mouth of every suckling babe; 196
 That Henry born at Monmouth should win
 all;
 And Henry born at Windsor should lose all:
 Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
 His days may finish ere that hapless time. 200
 [Exit.

Scene II.—France. Before Roan.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, disguised, and Soldiers dressed like countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Joan. These are the city gates, the gates of Roan,

Through which our policy must make a breach:
 Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
 Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men 4
 That come to gather money for their corn.
 If we have entrance,—as I hope we shall,—
 And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
 I'll by a sign give notice to our friends, 8
 That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

First Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,
 And we be lords and rulers over Roan;
 Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là? 13

Joan. Paisans, pauvres gens de France:
 Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn.

Guard. [Opening the gates.] Enter, go in;
 the market-bell is rung. 16

Joan. Now, Roan, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[JOAN LA PUCELLE, &c., enter the city.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Roan.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle and her practisants; 20

Now she is there how will she specify

Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower;

Which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning is, 24

No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE on a battlement, holding out a torch burning.

Joan. Behold! this is the happy wedding torch

That joineth Roan unto her countrymen,

But burning fatal to the Talbotites! 28

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend,

The burning torch in yonder turret stand!

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,

A prophet to the fall of all our foes! 32

Alen. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends;

Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' presently,

And then do execution on the watch.

[They enter the town.

Alarum. Enter TALBOT in an Excursion.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears, 36

If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle that witch, that damned sorceress,

Hath wrought this heinous mischief unawares,

That hardly we escap'd the pride of France. 40

[Exit.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter from the town, BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY, and the English Forces. Then, enter on the walls, JOAN LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Others.

Joan. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast

Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'Twas full of darnel; do you like the taste? 44

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtizan!

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own,

And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your Grace may starve perhaps, before that time. 48

Bed. O! let no words, but deeds! revenge this treason.

Joan. What will you do, good grey-beard? break a lance,

And run a tilt at death within a chair?

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, 52

Encompass'd with thy lustful parasites!

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age

And twit with cowardice a man half dead?

Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again, 56

Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Joan. Are you so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[TALBOT and the rest consult together.

Good speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?

Joan. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate, 64
but unto thee, Alençon, and the rest;
Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang! base muleters of 66
France!

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,
And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Joan. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls;

For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks. 72
God be wif you, my lord! we came but to tell you

That we are here.

[Exeunt PUCELLE, &c., to the Walls.]

Tal. And there will I stand, ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbot's best fame! 76
Vow, Burgundy, by honour of my house,—

Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,—
Either to get the town again, or die;

And I, as sure as English Henry lives, 80
And as his father here was conqueror,

As sure as in this late-betrayed town
Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was hurled,

So sure I swear to get the town or die. 84

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The vallant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,

We will bestow you in some better place, 88
Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
Here will I sit before the walls of Roan,

And will be partner of your weal or woe. 92

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade
you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I
read,

That stout Pendragon in his litter, sick,
Came to the field and vanquished his foes: 96

Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!
Then be it so: heavens keep old Bedford safe!

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, 101
But gather we our forces out of hand,

And set upon our boasting enemy.
[Exeunt all but BEDFORD and Attendants.]

Alarum: Excursions; in one of which, enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste? 104

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight;
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay,
All the Talbots in the world, to save my life. 108

[Exit.]

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.]

*Retreat: Excursions. Re-enter, from the town,
and exeunt, flying.*

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when Heaven
please,

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?

They, that of late were daring with their scoffs
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.]

Alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and Others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy: 116

Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy
Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects
Thy noble deeds as valour's monument. 120

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pu-celle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep.
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What! all amot? Roan hangs her head for
grief, 124

That such a vallant company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers,
And then depart to Paris to the king; 128

For there young Henry with his nobles lie.

Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble Duke of Bedford late deceas'd, 132

But see his exequies fulfill'd in Roan:
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings and mightlest potentates must die, 136

For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Plains near Roan.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Joan. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantle Talbot triumph for a while. 4

And like a peacock sweep along his tail ;
We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd. 8

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy enning had no dissidence ;
One sudden foll shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the
world. 13

Alon. We'll set thy statue in some holy place
And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint :

Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good. 16

Joan. Then thus it must be ; this doth Joan devise :

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy

To leave the Talbot and to follow us. 20

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting. If we could do
that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors ;

Nor should that nation boast it so with us,

But be extirp'd from our provinces. 24

Alon. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,

And not have title of an earldom here.

Joan. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end. 28

[Drums heard afar off.]

Hark ! by the sound of drum you may perceive

Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him. 32

A French march. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and his Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and
his :

Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.

Summon a parley ; we will talk with him.

[A parley.]

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy !

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy ? 37

Joan. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What sayst thou, Charles ? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. 40

Joan. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France !

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on ; but be not over-tedious.

Joan. Look on thy country, look on fertile
France, 44

And see the cities and the towns defac'd

By wasting ruin of the cruel foe,

As looks the mother on her lowly babe

When death doth close his tender dying eyes, 48

See, see the pining malady of France ;

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,

Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast.

O ! turn thy edged sword another way ; 52

Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore :

Return thee therefore, with a flood of tears, 56

And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her
words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Joan. Besides, all French and France exclaim on thee, 60

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation

That will not trust thee but for profit's sake ?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France, 64

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,

Who then but English Henry will be lord,

And thou be thrust out like a fugitive ?

Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof, 68

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe,

And was he not in England prisoner ?

But when they heard he was thine enemy,

They set him free, without his ransom paid, 72

In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.

See then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen !

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-

men.

Come, come, return ; return thou wand'ring

lord ; 76

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquish'd ; these haughty words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,

And made me almost yield upon my knees. 80

Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen !

And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace :

My forces and my power of men are yours.

So, farewell, Talbot ; I'll no longer trust thee. 84

Joan. Done like a Frenchman : turn, and turn again !

Char. Welcome, brave duke ! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alon. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part
in this, 88

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers :

And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER; VERNON, BASSET, and Others. To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers,

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have a while given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign: 4
In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,— 8
Lets fall his sword before your highness' feet,

[Kneels.

And with submissive loyalty of heart,
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your Grace. 12

K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,

That hath so long been resident in France?

Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord! 16

When I was young,—as yet I am not old,—
I do remember how my father said,
A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth, 20
Your faithful service and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been requerdon'd with so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face: 24
Therefore, stand up; and for these good deserts,
We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of these colours that I wear 29
In honour of my noble Lord of York,
Darest thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir: as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your sauey tongue 33
Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as
York. 36

Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that. [Strikes him.

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such

That, whoso draws a sword, 'tis present death,
Or else this blow should breach thy dearest
blood. 40

But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong;
When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as
you;

And, after, meet you sooner than you would. 44

[Exeunt.

Act IV.

Scene I.—Paris. A Room of State.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and Others

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name the sixth.

Glo. Now, Governor of Paris, take your oath,— [Governor kneels.

That you elect no other king but him, 4

Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,

And none your foes but such as shall pretend

Malignous practices against his state:

This shall ye do, so help you righteous God! 8

[Exeunt Governor and his Train.

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,

To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,

Writ to your Grace from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and
thee! 13

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,

To tear the garter from thy craven's leg;

[Plucking it off.

Which I have done, because unworthily 16

Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:

This dastard, at the battle of Patay, 20

When but in all I was six thousand strong,

And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met or that a stroke was given,

Like to a trusty squire did run away:

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;

Myself, and divers gentlemen beside, 25

Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.

Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;

Or whether that such cowards ought to wear 28

This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous

And ill besecming any common man,

Much more a knight, a captain and a leader. 32

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my
lords,

Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,

Such as were grown to credit by the wars; 36

Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.

He then that is not furnish'd in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight, 40
Profaning this most honourable order;
And should—if I were worthy to be judge—
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood. 44
K. Hen. Stahn to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom.

Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.

[Exit FASTOLFE.]

And now, my Lord Protector, vlew the letter 48
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. [Viewing superscription.] What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?
No more, but plain and bluntly, To the King!

Hath he forgot he is his sovereign? 52

Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's hers? I have, upon especial cause,

Mov'd with compassion of my country's wrack,

Together with the pitiful complaints 57

Of such as your oppression feeds upon,

Forsaken your pernicious faction,

And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of

France. 60

O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so,

That in alliance, amity, and oaths,

There should be found such false dissembling
guile?

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt? 64

Glo. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.

K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

K. Hen. Why then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him, 68

And give him chastisement for this abuse.

How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege! Yes: but that I am prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd, 72

K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,

And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still 76
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!

Bas. And me, my lord; grant me the combat
too!

York. This is my servant: hear him, noble
prince! 80

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favour
him!

K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom? 84

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done
me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me
wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you. 88

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into
France,

This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear;

Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves 92

Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,

When stubbornly he did repugn the truth

About a certain question in the law

Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him; 96

With other vile and ignominious terms:

In confutation of which rude reproach,

And in defence of my lord's worthiness,

I crave the benefit of law of arms. 100

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:

For though he seem with forged quaint conceit,

To set a gloss upon his bold intent,

Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him; 104

And he first took exceptions at this badge,

Pronouncing, that the paleness of this flower

Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this mallee, Somerset, be left? 108

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,

Though he'er so cunningly you smother it.

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-slek men,

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause, 112

Such factious emulations shall arise!

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,

Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight, 116

And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us
alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it, then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somers-
set. 120

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strife!

And perish ye, with your audacious prate! 124
Presumptuous vassals! are you not ashamed,
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?—

And you, my lords, methinks you do not well 128
To bear with their perverse objections;
Much less to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves:
Let me persuade you take a better course. 132
Exe. It grieves his highness: good my lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be coubatants.

Henceforth I chargo you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause. 136
And you, my lords, remember where we are;
In France, amongst a fickle wav'ring nation.

If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree, 140
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel!

Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified 144

That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers and chief nobility Destroyed themselves, and lost the realm of France!

O! think upon the conquest of my father, 148
My tender years, and let us not forego
That for a trife that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.

I see no reason, if I wear this rose, 152
[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade
Than I am able to instruct or teach:

And therefore, as we hither came in peace, 160
So let us still continue peace and love.
Cousin of York, we institute your Grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:

And, good my Lord of Somerset, unlo 164
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot;
And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together and digest
Your angry cholour on your enemies. 168

Ourselves, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some respite will return to Calais;
From thence to England; where I hope ere
long

To be presented by your victories, 172
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.
[*Flourish. Exeunt all but YORK, WARWICK,
EXETER and VERNON.*]

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset. 177

War. Tush! that was but his fancy, blam'd him not;

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no
harm.

York. An if I wist he did,—But let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed. 181

[Exeunt YORK, WARWICK, and VERNON.]

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;

For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there 184
More rancorous spite, more furious raging hrolls,
Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.

But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility, 188

This shouldering of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.

'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands;
But more, when envy breeds unkind division:
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.]

Scene II.—Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter;
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry King of England; 4

And thus he would: Open your city gates,
Be humble to us, call my sov'reign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,

And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power; 8
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;

Who in a moment even with the earth 12
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge! 16

The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;

For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight: 20

If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:

On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight; 24

And no way canst thou turn thee for redress
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.

Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery 29

Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing vallant
man,

Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit: 32
This is the latest glory of thy praise,

That I, thy enemy, 'due thee withal ;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run.
Finish the process of his sandy hour, 56
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.]

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,

Slings heavy music to thy timorous soul : 40
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c., from the Walls.]

Tal. He fables not ; I hear the enemy :
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O! negligent and heedless discipline ; 44
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale.

A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs !

If we be English deer, be then, in blood ; 48
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,

But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel.

And make the cowards stand aloof at bay : 52
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,

And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
right,

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight! 56
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter YORK, with Forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,

That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord ; and give
it out,

That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along. 5

By your espials were discovered
Two night-her troops than that the Dauphin led,

Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux. 8

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply

Of horsemen that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid, 12

And I am louted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevallier.

God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France. 16

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English
strength,

Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20

And hemm'd about with grim destruction.

To Bourdeaux, war-like duke! To Bourdeaux,
York!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's
honour.

York. O God! that Somerset, who in proud
heart 24

Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a vallant gentleman

By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury, make me weep 28

That thus we die, while remiss traitors slep.
Lucy. O! send some succour to the distress'd
lord.

York. He dies, we lose; I break my war-like
word;

We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;
All long of this vile traitor Somerset. 33

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's
soul;

And on his son young John, whom two hours
since

I met in travel toward his war-like father. 36
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;

And now they meet where both their lives are
done.

York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot
have,

To bid his young son welcome to his grave? 40
Away! vexation almost stops my breath

That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of
death.

Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man. 44

Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away,
'Elong all of Somerset and his delay.

[Exit, with his Soldiers.]
Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition

Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglecton doth betray to loss 48

The conquest of our scarce cold conqueror,
That ever living man of memory,

Henry the Fifth: Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all hurry to loss. 53

[Exit.]

Scene IV.—Other Plains in Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his Army; a Captain of TALBOT'S with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot

Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town 4

Be buekled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour

By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame, 8

That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent? 12

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Lord Talbot;

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whiles the honourable captain there 17
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's
honour, 20

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation,
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman, 24
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reigner, compeers him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default. 28

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York set upon your Grace excelsians;

Swearing that you withhold his levied host
Collected for this expedition. 32

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:

I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of
France, 36

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he wear his life,
But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen
straight: 40

Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is taken or slain,

For fly he could not if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might. 44

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame to you. [Exeunt. 48

Scene V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his SON.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for
thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of war
That Talbot's name might be in 48

When sapless age, and weak manhood
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair. 4

But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,

A terrible and unavoided danger: 8

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight: come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your
son? 12

And shall I fly? O! if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me:
The world will say he is not Talbot's blood 16
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return
again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly: 21

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.

Upon my death the French can little boast; 24
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;

But mine it will that no exploit have done:
You fled for vantage everyone will swear; 28

But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.

There is no hope that ever I will stay
If the first hour I shrink and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality, 32
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one
tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in
thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in
me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor e'erst not lose it. 40

John. Yes, your renowned name: shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly. 44

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side 48
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide.

Stay go, do what you will, the like do I;
For five I will not if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair
son, 52

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.

Come, side by side together live and die,
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

Scene VI.—A Field of Battie.

Alarm: Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath.

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death.
John. O! twice my father, twice am I thy
son:

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done,
Till with thy war-like sword, despite of fate, 8
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It wak'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, 12
Quicken'd with youthful spleen and war-like rage,
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.

The ireful bastard Orleans,—that drew blood 16
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight,—I soon encountered
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace, 20
Bespoke him thus, 'Contaminated, base,
And murther-begotten blood I spill of thine, Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of
mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave
boy:' 24

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care,
Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, 28
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?

Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead;
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O! too much folly is it, well I wot, 32
To hazard all our lives in one small boat.
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with unkle age:

By me they nothing gain an if I stay; 36
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day.

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay; 40
All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;
These words of yours draw life-blood from my
heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame, 44
To save a paltry life and slay bright fame,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me full and die!

And like me to the peasant boys of France, 43
To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son:
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot; 52
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side, 56
And, commendable provid, 'et's ch in side.

Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarm: Excursions. Enter Old TALBOT, wounded, led by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone:—

O! where's young Talbot? where is valliant
John?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee,

His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
And like a hungry flon did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience; 8

But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tendering my ruin and assall'd of none,
Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart

Suddenly made him from my side to start 12
into the clust'ring battle of the French;

And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His overmounting sprit; and there died

My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride. 16

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of Young TALBOT.

Serr. O, my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!

Tal. Thou antic, death, which laugh'st us
here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, 20

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall scape mortality.

O! thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd
death,

Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath; 24
Brave death by speaking whe'r he will or
no;

Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should
say,

Had death been French, then death had died
to-day, 28

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms:
My sprit can no longer bear these hurms.

Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

[Dies.]

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BÉROUNDO, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in

We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood,

Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Joan. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said:

'Thou maiden youth, be vanquished by a maid:'

But with a proud majestic high scorn,

He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not born

To be the pillage of a giglot wench.'

So, rushing in the bowels of the French,

He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble

knight;

See, where he lies inhersed in the arms

Of the most bloody nurser of his harms.

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones

asunder.

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O no! forbear; for that which we have fed

During the life, let us not wreathe and lead.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended: a French

Herald preceding

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's

tent,

To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. O what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere

French word;

We English warriors wot not what it means.

I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en,

And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? heil our prison is.

But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. Where is the great Alcides of the field,

Valliant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury?

Created, for his rare success in arms,

Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Val-

lence;

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,

Lord Strige of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of

Alton,

Lord Cronwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,

The three-victorious Lord of Falconbridge;

Knight of the noble order of Saint George,

Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleeces;

Great marshal to Henry the Sixth

Of all his wars within the realm of France?

Joan. Here is a silly stately style in deed!

The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,

Writes not so tedious a style as this.

Him that thou magnifest with all these titles.

Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?

O! were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,

That I in rage might shoot them at your faces!

O! that I could but call these dead to life!

It were enough to fright the realm of France.

Were but his picture left among you here

It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies, that I may bear them

hence,

And give them burial as beseems their worth.

Joan. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.

For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them

here

They would but stink and putrefy the air.

Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence

But from their ashes shall be rear'd

A phoenix that shall make all France afraid.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein:

All will be ours now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,

The emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac?

Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:

They humbly sue unto your excellence

To have a godly peace concluded of

Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means

To stop effusion of our Christian blood,

And stailsh quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural

That such inhumanity and bloody strife

Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect

And surer hind this knot of anity,

The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,

A man of great authority in France,

Proffers his only daughter to your Grace

In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are young, 21
And fitter is my study and my books
Than wauon dalliance with a paramour.
Yet call the ambassadors; and, as you please, 24
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice
Teuds to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with WINCHESTER, now CARDINAL BEAUFORT, and habited accordingly.

Exe. [Aside.] What! is my Lord of Winchester install'd, 28
And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then, I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,—
'If once he come to be a cardinal, 32
He'll uake his cap co-equal with the crown.'

K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits
Have been consider'd, and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reason-able; 36
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France. 40
Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his highness so at large,
As,—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower,— 44
He doth intend she shall be England's queen.

K. Hen. [To the Ambassador.] In argument and proof of which contract,
Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection. 48
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover; where inshipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt KING HENRY and Train; GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Ambassadors.]

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive
The sum of money which I promised 52
Should be deliver'd to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. [Aside.] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow, 56

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive
That neither in birth or for authority
The bishop will be overborne by thee: 60
I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lord, may cheer our drooping spirits;

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt,
And turn again unto the war-like French.

Alen. Then, march to Paris, royal Charles of France, 4

And keep not back your powers in dalliance,

Joan. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;

Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valliant general, 8
And happness to his accomplices!

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one, 12
And means to give you hattle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is:

But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear. 17

Joan. Of all these passions, fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine;

Let Henry fret and all the world repine, 20

Char. Then ou, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—France. Before Angiers.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Joan. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts;
And ye choice spirits that admonish me
And give me signs of future accidents: 4

[Thunder.]

You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprize!

Enter Flems.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof 8
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are eull'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,

Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They walk, and speak not.]

O! hold me not with silence over-long, 13
Where I was wout to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off and give it you,

In earnest of a further benefit, 16
So you do coudescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice 20
Entreat you to your wouted furtherance?

Then take my soul; no body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foll.

[They depart.]

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come, 24
That France must veil her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with: 28
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.]

Alarum. Enter French and English fighting:
JOAN LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand: JOAN LA PUCELLE is taken. The French
fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast:

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty. 32
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!
See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
As if with Circe she would change my shape.

Joan. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be. 36

York. O! Charles the Dauphin is a proper
man:

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Joan. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd 40
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Joan. I prithee, give me leave to curse a while.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET
in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
[Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty! do not fear nor fly,
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, 48
And lay them gently on thy tender side.

What art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a
king.

The King of Naples, whosoe'er thou art. 52

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk; am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle,

Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:

So doth the swan her downy eynets save, 56

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings.

Yet if this servile usage once offend,

Go and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.]

O stay! I have no power to let her pass; 60

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,

Twinkling another counterfelted beam.

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. 64
Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:
I'll call for pen and ink and write my mind.
Fie, De la Pole! disable not thyself;
Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner? 68

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?
Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be
so,— 72

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For I perceive, I am thy prisoner

Suf. [Aside.] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit.

Before thou make a trial of her love? 76

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. [Aside.] She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd,

She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea or no?

Suf. [Aside.] Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife; 81

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. [Aside.] There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card. 84

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. [Aside.] And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer
me.

Suf. [Aside.] I'll win this Lady Margaret.
For whom? 88

Why, for my king; tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. [Overhearing him.] He talks of wood:
it is some carpenter.

Suf. [Aside.] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these realms. 92

But there remains a scruple in that too;

For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match. 96

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. [Aside.] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er
so much:

Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.

Madam, I have a secret to reveal. 100

Mar. [Aside.] What though I be enthral'd?
he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. [Aside.] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French; 104

And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush, women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so? 108

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose

Your bondage happy to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile
Than is a slave in base servility; 113

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto
me? 116

Suf. I'll undertake to make once Henry's queen,
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love. 120

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife

And have no portion in the choice myself. 124

How say you, madam, are you so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.
Suf. Then call our captains and our colours
forth!

And, madam, at your father's castle walls 128
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.]

A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the Walls.

Suf. See, Reignier, see thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier, and unapt to weep, 132
Or to exclaim on Fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent, and for thy honour, give consent,

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king, 136
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment
Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows 140
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend
To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit f. on the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming. 144

Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories:

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a
child,

Fit to be made companion with a king. 148
What answer makes your Grace unto my suit?

Reig. Shice thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord,
Upon condition I may quietly 152

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's if he please.

Suf. That be her ransom; I deliver her; 156
And those two counties I will undertake

Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king, 160

Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly
thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king:
[Aside.] And yet, methinks, I could be well content 164

To be mine own attorney in this case.

I'll over then, to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.

So farewell, Reignier: set this diamond safe, 168
In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers 172

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! but hark you,
Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, say to him. 177

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But madam, I must trouble you again,
No loving token to his majesty? 180

Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unspotted
heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.
Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.]

Mar. That for thyself! I will not so presume,
To send such peevish tokens to a king. 185

[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.]

Suf. O! wert thou for myself. But Suffolk,
stay;

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk. 188

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount

And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas, 192

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder.

[Exit.]

Scene IV.—Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

YORK. Bring forth that sorceress, condemned to burn.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, guarded; and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright.

Have I sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
Ah, Joan! sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee.

Joan. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood:
Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.

Shep. Out, out! My lords, an' please you, 'tis not so;

I did beget her all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been:

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fle, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!
God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh;
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan.

Joan. Peasant, avaunt! You have suborn'd this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her mother.
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
Wilt thou not stoop? Now curs'd be the time
Of thy nativity! I would the milk

Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast,

Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!

Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!

Dost thou deny thy father, curs'd drab?
O! burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,

To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Joan. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings;

Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,

To work exceeding miracles on earth,
I never had to do with wicked spirits;

But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,

Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,

You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders but by help of devils.

No misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been

A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay: away with her to execution!

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,

Spare for no tagots, let there be enow:
Place barrels of pitch upon the fat stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Joan. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity;

That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.
I am with child, ye bloody homicides:

Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now, heaven forefend! the holy maid with child!

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought!

Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York. She and the dauphin have been juggling;

I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to; we will have no bastard live;

Especially since Charles must father it.

Joan. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his:

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!
It dies as if it had a thousand lives.

Joan. O! give me leave, I have decid'd ye
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd
But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man: that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knoweth not well,

There were so many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and loose.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure:
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat.

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.
Joan. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflex his beams
Upon the country where you make abode

But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you, till mischief and despair

Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves!

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accurs'd minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,

Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implor'd a general peace 90
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;
And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter. 101

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, 104
That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns, 108
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered?
O! Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France. 112
War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a
peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENÇON, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed, 116

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be inform'd by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choleric chokes 120

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is exacted thus:
That, in regard King Henry gives consent, 124
Of mere compassion and of lenity,

To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,
You shall become true liegemen to his crown:
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity. 132

Alen. Must he be then, as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man? 136
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king: 140
Shall I, for lucre or the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep 144
That which I have than covet for more,
Be cast from possession of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret
means

Us'd intercession to obtain a league, 148
And now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king 152
And not of any challenge of desert.

Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.
Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract: 156
If once it be neglected, ten to one,

We shall not find like opportunity.
Alen. [Aside to CHARLES.] To say the truth,
It is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre 160
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves,
War. How sayst thou, Charles? shall our condition stand? 165

Char. It shall;
Only reserv'd you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison. 168

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.

[CHARLES, &c., give tokens of fealty.
So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK; GLOUCESTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart: 4
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive 8
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good lord, this superficial tale

Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely dame— 12
Had I sufficient skill to utter them—
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine, 16
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents, 20
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England's royal queen. 24
Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.

You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem;
How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach? 29

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths;
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists 32
By reason of his adversary's odds.
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? 36

Her father is no better than an earl
Although in glorious titles he excei.

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem; 40
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earl of Arniagnac may do, 44
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Ecc. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower,
Where Reigner sooner will receive than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your
king, 48

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth and not for perfect love,
Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich: 52
So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship: 56

Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed;
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most
It most of all these reasons bindeth us, 60
In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?

Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, 64
And is a pateru of celestial peace.

Why should we match with Henry, being a
king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, 68

Approves her fit for none but for a king:
Her vallant courage and undamnted spirit—
More than in women commonly is seen—
Will answer our hopes in issue of a king; 72
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve
As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love. 76
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with
me

That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that 80
My tender youth was never yet attain'd
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissenstion in my breast, 84

Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with the king of my thoughts.

Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to
France;

Agree to any covenants, and procure 88
That Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the sea to England and be crown'd
King's faithful and anointed queen;

And with sufficient charge, 92
And the people gather up a tent.
Be it as I say; for till you do return
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.

And you, good uncle, banish all offence: 96
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.

And so, conduct me, where, from company 100
I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EXETER.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes, 104

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece;
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. 108

[Exit.

Scene.—In various parts of England.

Act I.

Scene I.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then hautboys. Enter, on one side, KING HENRY, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT; on the other, QUEEN MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty
 I had in charge at my depart for France,
 As procurator to your excellence,
 To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace; 4
 So, 'n the famous ancient city, Tours,
 In presence of the Kings of France and Stell.

The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Britaine, and Alençon,
 Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops, 8

I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
 And humbly now upon my bended knee,
 In sight of England and her lordly peers,
 Deltver up my title in the queen 12
 To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent;
 The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
 The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd. 16
K. Hen. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen
 Margaret:

I can express no kinder sign of love
 Than this kiss. O Lord! that lends me
 life,

Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness; 20
 For thou hast given me in this beautiful face
 A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
 If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great King of England and my gracious lord, 24

The mutual conference that my mind hath had
 By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams,
 In courtly company, or at my beads,
 With you, mine alderliest sovereign, 28
 Makes me the bolder to salute my king
 With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
 And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish, but her grace
 In speech, 32

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
 Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys;
 Such is the fulness of my heart's content.

Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.
All. Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness! 37

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.]

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your Grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace 40
 Between our sovereign and the French King Charles,

For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. Imprints, *It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William De la Pole,
 Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father.—* [Lets the paper fall.]

K. Hen. Uncle, how now!

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
 Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart
 And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
 further. 56

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.
Cur. Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.

K. Hen. They please us well. Lord Marquess, kneel down: 64

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
 And girt thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
 We here discharge your Grace from being regent

Of the parts of France, till term of eighteen months 68

Be full exclud'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,

Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favour done, 72
 In entertainment to my princely queen.
 Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
 To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.]

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, 76

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
 Your grief, the common grief of all the land.

What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
 His valour, coin, and people, in the wars? 80

Did he so often lodge in open field,
 In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,

To conquer France, his true inheritance?
 And did my brother Bedford toll his wits, 84

To keep by policy what Henry got?
 Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,

Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
 Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy? 89

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself,
 With all the learned council of the realm,

Studied so long, sat in the council-house
 Early and late, debating to and fro 92

How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?

And hath his highness in his infancy
 Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?

And shall these labours and these honours die?
 Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance, 97

Your deeds of war and all our counsel die?
 O peers of England! shameful is this league,

Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, 100
 Blotting your names from books of memory.

Razing the characters of your renown,
 Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,

Undoing all, as all had never been. 104
Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?
 For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle; we will keep it, if we cau;
 But now it is impossible we should. 109

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
 Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine

Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
 Agrees not with the leanness of his purse. 113

Sal. Now, by the death of him who died for
 all,

These countie were the keys of Normandy. 115
 But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valliant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery:
 For, were there hope to conquer them again,

My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes
 no tears. 119

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
 Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the titles, that I got with wounds,
 Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu!
York. For Suffolk's dukedom may he be suffocate, 124

That dims the honour of this war-like Isle!
 France should have torn and rent my very heart
 Before I would have yielded to this league. 128
 I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;
 And our King Henry gives away his own,
 To match with her that brings no vantages. 132

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
 That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
 For costs and charges in transporting her!
 She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France, 136

Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now you grow too hot:

It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind: 140

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
 But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
 Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy face
 I see thy fury. If I longer stay 144

We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
 Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
 I prophesied France will be lost ere long. [Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
 'Tis known to you he is mine enemy, 149

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
 And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
 Consider lords, he is the next of blood. 152

And he's apparent to the English crown:
 Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
 And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
 There's reason he should be displeas'd at it. 156
 Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
 Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.
 What though the common people favour him,
 Calling him, 'Humphrey, the good Duke of
 Gloucester;' 160

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice,
 'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'
 With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
 I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, 164
 He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,

He being of age to govern of himself?
 Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, 168
 And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk, We'll quickly holso Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride 173

And greatness of his place be grief to us,
 Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal:
 His insolence is more intolerable 176
 Than all the princes in the land beside:
 If Gloucester be a King'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector,

Desp'to Duke Humphrey or the cardinal. 180

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.]

Sal. Prie went before, ambition follows him.
 While these do labour for their own preferment,
 Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester,
 Did bear him like a noble gentleman. 185

Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal
 More like a soldier than a man o' the church,

As stout and proud as he were lord of all, 188
 Swear like a ruffian and demean himself
 Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
 Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

Have won the greatest favour of the commons,
 Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey:

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
 In bringing them to civil discipline, 196

Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
 When thou wert regent for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people.

Join we together for the public good, 200
 In what we can to bridle and suppress

The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,
 With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;

And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's
 deeds, 204

While they do tend the profit of the land.
War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the

land,
 And common profit of his country!

York. [Aside.] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause. 208

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the malin.

War. Unto the main! O father, Malin is lost!

That Malin which by main force Warwick did win,

And would have kept so long as breath did last:
 Malin chance, father, you meant; but I meant

Malin, 213

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.
 [Exeunt WARWICK and SALISBURY.]

York. Anjou and Malin are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy 216
 Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles,
 The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair
 daughter. 220

I cannot blame them all: what is't to them?
 'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtezans,
 Still revelling like lords till all be gone; 225

While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shar'd and all is borne away, 229
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own:
So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue
While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.
Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland 233

Fear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althaea burn'd
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. 236
Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!
Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come when York shall claim his own;
And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts: 241
And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit. 244
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:
Watch thou and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state;
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, 252
With his new bride and England's dear-bought
queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd, 256

And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the
crown,

Whose bookish rule hath puff'd fair England down. [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke OF GLOUCESTER'S House.

Enter GLOUCESTER and his DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn

Hanging the head at Ceres' piteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world? 4

Why are thine eyes fixed to the sulen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?

What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem
Beneath'd with all the honours of the world? 8

If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be cireled with the same,

Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:
What! is't too short? I'll lengthen it with
mine; 12

And having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground. 16
Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy
lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world. 21
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it
With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream. 24
Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge
in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand 28
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset,

And William De la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk.
This was my dream: what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. Tut! this was nothing but an argument 32

That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.

But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought I sat in seat of majesty 36

In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are
crown'd;

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to
me,

And on my head did set the diadem. 40
Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out-
right:

Presumptuous dame! ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,

And the protector's wife, belov'd of him? 44
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?

And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband and thyself, 48

From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you 80
choleric

With Eleanor, for telling but her dream? 52
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his highness'
pleasure 56

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's,
Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently. 60

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Messenger.]

Follow I must; I cannot go before,
While Gloucester bears this base and humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks
And smooth my way upon their headless necks;
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortune's pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not,
man, 60

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What sayst thou? majesty! I am but Grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice, 72

Your Grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What sayst thou, man? hast thou as yet conforr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer? 76

Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions. 80

Duch. It is enough: I'll think upon the questions.

When from Salut Alban's we do make return
We'll see these things effected to the full. 84

Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;

Marry and shall. But how now, Sir John Hume! 88

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum:
The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil. 92

Yet have I gold flies from another coast:
I dare not say from the rich cardinal

And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;

Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain, 96

They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the duchess
And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say, 'A crafty knave does need no broker;'
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker. 101

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last 104

Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wrack,
And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall.
Sort how it will I shall have gold for all. [Exit.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Armourer's man, being one.

First Pet. My masters, let's stand close: my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill. 4

Sec. Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET.

First Pet. Here n' comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure. 6

Sec. Pet. Come back, fool! this is the Duke of Suffolk and not my Lord Protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst anything with me? 12

First Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me: I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Q. Mar. [Glancing at the Superscriptions.]

To my Lord Protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?

First Pet. Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, my wife and all, from me. 21

Suf. Thy wife too! that is some wrong indeed. What's yours? What's here?

Duch. of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford! How now, sir knave! 25

Sec. Pet. Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our sole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What sayst thou? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown? 32

Pet. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said that he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? 36

Enter Servants.

Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exeunt Servants with PETER.]

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected! 40

Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions.]

Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go.
All. Come, let's be gone. 44

[Exeunt Petitioners.]

Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion of the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's Isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king? 48

What! shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke? 52

I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought King Henry had resembled thee 56

In courage, courtship, and proportion;

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads;

His champions are the prophets and apostles;

His weapons holy saws of sacred writ; 61

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints,

I would the collegio of the cardinals 64

Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head;

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient; as I was cause 68

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your Grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, leave we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Bucking- 72

ham, and grumbling York; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all 76 cannot do more in England than the Nevils; 76

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife:

She sweeps it through the court with troops of 80

ladies, More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife,

Strangers in court do take her for the queen:

She bears a duke's revenues on her back, 84

And in her heart she scorns our poverty;

Shall I not live to be avenged on her?

Contemptuous base-born callet as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her millions t'other day 88

The very train of her worst wearing gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter. 92

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds 96

That she will light to listen to the lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;

For I am bold to counsel you in this. 96

Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late complaint 100
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a sennet. Enter KING HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET; DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKING-HAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which; 104

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in
France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent; I will yield to him. 109

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or
no,

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy better
speak. 112

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy better,
Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sal. Peace, son! and show some reason,
Buckingham. 116

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have
it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no women's matters. 120

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
And at his pleasure will resign my place. 124

Suf. Resign it then and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert king,—as who is king but thou?—
The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack;

The Dauphin hath prevailed beyond the seas;
And all the peers and nobles of the realm 129

Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions. 132

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution
Upon offenders hath exceeded law 136

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOUCESTER. The QUEEN drops her fan.

Give me my fan: what, minion! can ye not?

[Giving the DUCHESS a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, madam, was it you?

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-woman:

Could I come near your beauty with my nails

I'd set my ten commandments in your face. 145

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to't in time;

She'll hamper thee and dandle thee like a baby:
Though in this place most master wear no breeches, 149

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveng'd.
[Exit.

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:
She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs,
She'll gallop far enough to her destruction.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown
With walking once about the quadrangle, 156
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law:

But God in mercy so deal with my soul 160
As I in duty love my king and country!

But to the matter that we have in hand,
I say, my sov'reign, York is meekest man
To be your regent in the realm of France. 164

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave
To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet: 168

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride;
Next, if I be appointed for the place,
My Lord of Somerset will keep me here,
Without discharge, money, or furniture, 172

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.
Last time I dane'd attendance on his will Till Paris was besieged, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact
Did never traitor in the land commit. 177

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter SERVANTS of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNOR and PETER.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason: 180

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his master of high treason. 183
His words were these: that Richard, Duke of York,

Was rightful heir unto the English crown,
And that your majesty was a usurper. 183

K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain. 192

Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical,
I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.

I do beseech your royal majesty 198
Let him have all the rigour of the law.

Hor. Alas! my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this; therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge. 208
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in conventicle place; 212
For he hath witness of his servant's malice.
This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

K. Hen. Then be it so. My Lord of Somerset,
We make your Grace lord regent o'er the French. 216

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas! my lord, I cannot fight: for God's sake, pity my case! the spite of man prevailleth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd. 224

K. Hen. Away with them to prison; and the day

Of combat shall be the last of the next month.
Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Exit.

Scene IV.—The Same. The DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S Garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided. Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms? 5

Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter DUCHESS aloft, HUME following.

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all. 16

To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire; 20
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,

And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,

That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge. 25

[Here they perform the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; BOLINGBROKE, or SOUTHWELL reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adam.

M. Jourd. Asmath!

By the eternal God, whose name and power 28
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!

Boling. First, of the king: what shall of him become? 32

Spir. The Duke yet lives that Henry shall depose,

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, SOUTHWELL writes the answers.

Boling. What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset? 37

Spir. Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand. 40

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!

False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.

Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their Guards, and Others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash. 44

Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an Inch.
What! madam, are you there? the king and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My Lord Protector w'il, I doubt it not, 48
See you well guarden'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king.

Injurious duke, that threat'st where is no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this? [Showing her the papers.

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close 53
And kept asunder. You, madam, shall with us:

Stafford, take her to thee.—

[Exeunt above, DUCHESS and HUME guarded.

We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming. 56
All, away!

[Exeunt SOUTHWELL, BOLINGBROKE, &c., guarded.

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well:

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ. 60

What have we here?
The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose:

But him outlive, and die a violent death.
Why this is just, 64

Ato te, Acacia, Romanos vincere posse.
Well, to the rest:

Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die and take his end. 68

What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun castles:

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand. 72

Come, come, my lords; these oracles
Are hardly attain'd, and hardly understood.

The king is now in progress towards Salt
Alban's;

With him, the husband of this lovely lady: 76
Thither go these news as fast as horse can carry them,

A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward. 80

York. At your pleasure, my good lord. Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Serving-man.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to-morrow night. Away!

[Flourish. Exeunt.

Act II.

Scene I.—St. Alban's.

Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers, hollaing.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day :

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high,

And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out. 4

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,

And what a pitch she flew above the rest !

To see how God in all his creatures works !

Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high. 8

Suf. No marvel, as it like your majesty,

My Lord Protector's lawks do tower so well ;

They know their master loves to be aloft,

And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base I noble mind. 13

That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much ; he'd be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my Lord Cardinal ; how think you by that ? 16

Were it not good your Grace could fly to heaven ?

K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy.

Car. Thy heaven is on earth ; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart ; 20

Perilous protector, dangerous peer,

That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal !

Glo. What ! cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory ?

Tantræ animis celestibus ire ? 24

Churchmen so hot ? good uncle, bide such malice ;

With such holiness can you do it ?

Suf. No malice, sir ; no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer. 28

Glo. As who, my lord ?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord,

Am't like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

K. Hen. I prithee, peace, 32

Good queen, and whet not on these furious peers ;

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make

Against this proud protector with my sword ! 36

Glo. [Aside to the CARDINAL.] Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that !

Car. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Marry, when thou dar'st.

Glo. [Aside to the CARDINAL.] Make up no factious numbers for the matter ;

In thine own person answer thy abuse. 40

Car. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] Ay, where thou

dar'st not peep : an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove.

K. Hen. How now, my lords !

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,

Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,

We had had more sport. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.]

Come with thy two-hand sword. 45

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are you advis'd ? [Aside to GLOUCESTER.]

Come to the east side of the grove.

Glo. [Aside to the CARDINAL.] Cardinal, I am

with you. 48

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester !

Glo. Talking of hawking ; nothing else, my

lord.—

[Aside to the CARDINAL.] Now, by God's mother,

I'll shave your crown

For thou shalt my fence shall fall. 52

Car. To GLOUCESTER.] Medice te ipsum ;

Protector, see to't well, protect yourself.

K. Hen. The winds grow high ; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart ! 56

When such strings jar, what hope of harmony ?

I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter One, crying, 'A Miracle !'

Glo. What means this noise ?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim ? 60

One. A miracle ! a miracle !

Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,

Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight ; 64

A man that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd, that to believing

souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair !

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and his

Brethren, and Sirrcox, borne between two persons in a chair ; his Wife and a great multitude following.

Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession,

To present your highness with the man. 69

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,

Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters ; bring him near

the king : 72

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What ! hast thou been long blind, and now

restor'd ? 76

Simp. Born blind, an't please your Grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship. 80

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee: 84

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine? 88

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

A hundred times and oft'ner in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban; who said, 'Simpcox, come;

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.'

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft 93

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What! art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How can'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree. 96

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O! born so, master.

Glo. What! and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear. 100

Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas! master, my wife desir'd some damsons,

And made me climb with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.

Let me see thine eyes: wink now; now open them: 105

In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Sayst thou me so? What colour is this cloak of? 108

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of? 112

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns before this day a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name? 116

Simp. Alas! master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his? 120

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lyingest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Slight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think that cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O, master, that you could! 133

Glo. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beadies in your town, and things called whips? 125

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.

Simp. Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone: 144

You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah, beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool. 148

Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand. 152

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away: and the people follow and cry, 'A miracle!']

K. Hen. O God! seest thou this, and bear'st so long?

Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas! sir, we did it for pure need. 156

Glo. Let them be whipp'd through every market town

Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came. [Exit Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away. 160

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I; You made in a day, my lord, whole . . . to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold. 164

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout, 168
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches and with conjurers;
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from underground,
Demanding of King Henry's life and death, 173
And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Car. And so, my Lord Protector, by this means
Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. 177
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict
my heart: 180

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers;
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom.

K. Hen. O God! what mischiefs work the wicked ones, 184

Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby.

Q. Mar. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest;

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal.
How I have lov'd my king and commonweal; 186

And, for my wife, I know not how it stands.

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard:

Noble she is, but if she have forgot 192

Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such

As, like to pitch, defile nobility,

I banish her away and company,

And give her, as a prey, to law and shame, 196

That hath dishonour'd Gloucester's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night we will repose us
here:

To-morrow toward London back again,

To look into this business thoroughly. 200

And call these foul offenders to their answers;

And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,

Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

Scene II.—London. The DUKE OF YORK'S Garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave,

In this close walk to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title, 4

Which is infallible to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command. 6

York. Then thus:

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons:

The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,

Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom 13

Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;

The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York;

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of
Gloucester; 16

William of Windsor was the seventh and last.

Edward the Black Prince died before his father,

And left behind him Richard, his only son,

Who after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as
king; 20

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,

The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,

Selz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king. 24

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,

And him to Pomfret; where as all you know,

Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;

Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown. 28

York. Which now they hold by force and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,

The issue of the next son should have reign'd. 32

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue, Philippe a daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March:

Edmund had issue Roger, Earl of March: 37

Roger had issue Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Boling-
broke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown; 40

And but for Owen Glendower, had been king,

Who kept him in captivity till he died.

But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,

My mother, being heir unto the crown, 44

Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge, who was
son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth
son.

By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir

To Roger, Earl of March; who was the son 48

Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe,

Sole daughter unto Lionel, Duke of Clarence:

So, if the issue of the eldest son

Succeed before the younger, I am king. 52

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?
 Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
 The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
 Till Lionel's issue falls, his should not reign: 50
 It falls not yet, but it enriches in thee,
 And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.
 Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together,
 And in this private plot be we the first 60
 That shall salute our rightful sovereign
 With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!
Yo. We thank you, lords! But I am not your king 64

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd
 With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
 And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
 But with advice and silent secrecy. 68
 Do you as I do in these dangerous days,
 Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,
 At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
 At Buckingham and all the crew of them, 72
 Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
 That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey:
 'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy. 76

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, 80
 Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
 The greatest man in England but the king.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGROKE, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
 Receive the sentence of the law for this
 Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. 4
 You four, from hence to prison back again;
 From thence, unto the place of execution:
 The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
 And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.
 You, madam, for you are more nobly born, 9
 Deprived of your honour in your life,
 Shall, after three days' open penance done,
 Live in your country here, in banishment, 12
 With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, tho' law, thou seest, hath judged thee:

I cannot justify whom the law condemns.— 16
 [Exeunt the Duchess, and the other Prisoners, guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
 Ah, Humphrey! this dishonour in thine age
 Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.
 I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go; 20
 Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester: ere thou go,
 Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself
 Protector be; and God shall be my hope, 24
 My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet.
 And go in peace, Humphrey; no less below'd
 Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years 28

Should be to be protected like a child,
 God and King Henry govern England's helm!
 Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff! here, noble Henry, is my staff: 32

As willingly do I the same resign
 As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;
 And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it
 As others would ambitiously receive it. 36
 Farewell, good king! when I am dead and gone,
 May honourable peace attend thy throne.

[Exit.]

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;
 And Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, scarce himself, 40
 That bears so shrewd a maim: two pulls at once;

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
 This staff of honour raught: there let it stand,
 Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand. 44

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays;
 Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go. Please it your majesty

This is the day appointed for the combat; 48
 And ready are the appellant and defendant,
 The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
 So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore 52

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them end it; and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, 56
 Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
 The servant of this armourer, my lord.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his steak with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: on the other side, PETER, with a drum and a sand-bag; and Prentices drinking to him.

First Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack: and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 61

Sec. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter! 62

First Prent. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

Sec. Prent. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices. 72

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already. 80

Sal. Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more? 84

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen; and therefore, Peter, leave at thee with a downright blow! 94

York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarm to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and PETER strikes down his Master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way. 100

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight; 104

For by his death we do perceive his guilt:
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,

Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. 103

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Sound a flourish. Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter GLOUCESTER and Serving-men, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. 4
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
Unearth may she endure the filthy streets, 8
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The sly people, gazing on thy face
With envious looks still laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels; 13
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries. 16

Enter the DUCHESS of GLOUCESTER, with papers pinned upon her back, in a white sheet, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look! how they gaze. 20

See! how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks,

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame; 24
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine!

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ay, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself;

For whilst I think I am thy wedded wife, 26
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Maid'd up in shame, with papers on my back,
And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice 32
To see my tears and hear my deep-set groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh,
And bid me be advised how I tread. 36

Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this shameful yoke?

Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?
No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;
No link upon my pomp shall be my hell. 41
Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife;
And he a prince and ruler of the land:
Yet so he rul'd and such a prince he was 44
As he stood by winst I, his forlorn duchess,
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.
But be thou mild and blush not at my shame;
Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death 49
Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will;
For Suffolk, he that can do all in all
With her that hateth thee, and hates us all, 52
And York, and luptious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all I'm'd bushes to betray thy wings;
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle
thee:
But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd, 56
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.
Glo. Ah, Nell! forbear: thou'lt miss all awry;
I must offend before I be attainted;
And had I twenty times so many foes, 60
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scath,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach? 64
Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience; 68
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month. 72

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein
before!

This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.

(Exit Herald.)

My Nell, I take my leave: and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission. 76

Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays;

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady
here? 80

S'tan. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray you use her well. The world may laugh again;
And I may live to do you kindness if 84
You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell.

Duch. What! gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

Glo. Witness my tears I cannot stay to speak.
(Exit Gloucester and serving-men.)

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee! 88

For none abides with me: my joy is death;
Death, at whose name I oft have been afar'd.
Because I wish'd this world's eterniky.
Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence; 92
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of
Man;

There to be us'd according to your state. 96

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's body:

According to that state you shall be used. 100

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon
me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is dis-charg'd. 104

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off
this sheet,

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet: 108

No; it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way: I long to see my prison.

(Exit.)

Act III.

Scene I.—The Abbey at Bury St. Edmund's.

*Sound a sennet. Enter to the Parliament, KING
HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAU-FORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others.*

K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come:

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will ye not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? 4

With what a majesty he bears himself,

How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself? 8

We know the time since he was mild and affable,

As if we did but glance a far-off look,

Immediately he was upon his knee,

That all the court admir'd him for submission:

But meet him now, and, be it in the morn, 13

When everyone will give the time of day,
 He knits his brow and shows an angry eye,
 And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, 10
 Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
 Small eurs are not regarded when they grin,
 But great men tremble when the lion roars;
 And Humphrey is no little man in England. 20
 First note that he is near you in descent,
 And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
 Me seemeth then it is no policy,
 Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, 24
 And his advantage following your decease,
 That he should come about your royal person
 Or be admitted to your highness' council.
 By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts, 28
 And when he please to make commotion,
 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

 Suffer them now and they'll o'ergrow the garden, 32

 And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
 The reverent care I bear unto my lord
 Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
 If it be fond, call it a woman's fear; 36
 Whence fear if better reasons can supplant,
 I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke.
 My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
 Reprove my allegation if you can 40
 Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this
 duke;

And had I first been put to speak my mind,
 I think I should have told your Grace's tale. 44
 The duchess, by his subornation,
 Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
 Or if he were not privy to those faults,
 Yet, by repute of his high descent, 48
 As, next the king he was successive heir,
 And such high vaunts of his nobility,
 Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
 By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall. 52
 Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
 And in his simple show he hid our treason.
 The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb:

No, no, my sov'reign; Gloucester is a man 56
 Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
 Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
 Levy great sums of money through the realm
 For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
 By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown. 61

Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: the care you have of us,

To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,

Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience, 68

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
 From meaning treason to our royal person,
 As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove.
 The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given 72
 To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
 For he's disposed to the hateful raven: 76

Is he a lamb? his sake is easily lent him,
 For he's inclin'd to us is the ravenous wolf.

Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
 Take heed, for he's the welfare of us all 80
 Hangs on the cutting short that raudful man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
 Is utterly bereft you; all is lost. 85

K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done!

York. [Aside.] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France, 88

As firmly as I hope for fertile England,
 Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,

And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
 But I will remedy this gear ere long,
 Or sell my title for a glorious grave. 92

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
 Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon, 96

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
 I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk's duke, thou shalt not see me blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
 A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 100

The purest spring is not so free from mud
 As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?
York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France, 104

And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
 By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay, 108
 Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,
 Ay, night by night, in study'ng good for England,

That doth that e'er I wrested from the king, 112
 Or any great I hoarded to my use,

Be brought against me at my trial-day!
 No; many a pound of mine own proper store,

Because I would not tax the needy commons,
I have I disburs'd to the garrisons, 117
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God! 120

York. In your protectorship you did devise strange tortures for offenders, never heard of, That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was protector, 124

Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should weep at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer, 128
Or foul felonious thief that fleeced poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon or what trespass else. 132

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd:

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name; 136
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspect: 140
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah! gracious lord, these days are dangerous.

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand; 144
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil'd your highness' hand.

I know their complot is to have my life;
And if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny, 149
I would expend it with all willingness;

But mine is made the prologue to their play;
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy. 153

Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The grievous load that lies upon his heart; 157
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,

Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accense doth level at my life; 160

And you, my sov'reign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head.

And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My life'st foe to be mine enemy. 164

Ay, all of you have laid your heads together;
Myself had notice of your conventicles;
And all to make away my guiltless life.

I shall not want false witness to condemn me.

Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt; 166
The ancient proverb will be well effected:
'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.'

Car. My loge, his railing is intolerable. 172

If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitor's rage
Be thus upbraided, chid'd, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech, 176
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sov'reign lady
'here

With ignominious words, though clerklly couch'd,
As if she had suborned some to swear 180
False allegations to overthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to childe.

Glo. Far truer spoke than meant: I lose indeed:

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false:
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day.

Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure. 188

Glo. Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body:
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first. 192

Ah! that my fear were false, ah! that it were;
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants with Gloucester.]

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best

Do or undo, as if ourself were here. 196

Q. Mar. What! will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
My body round engirt with misery, 200
For what's more miserable than discontent?

Ah! uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come
That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.

What low'ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life? 208
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house, 212
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence;

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wall her darling's loss;

Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case,
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good ;
So mighty are his vowed enemies. 220

His fortunes I will weep ; and, 'twixt each groan, Say ' Who's a traitor, Gloucester he is none.'

[Exit.

Q. Mar. Fair lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs, 224
Too full of foolish pity ; and Gloucester's show

Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snags as relenting passengers ;

Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank, 228

With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a chill

That for the beauty thinks it excellent.

Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,—

And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,— 232

This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,

To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy polley ;

And yet we want a colour for his death. 236

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But in my mind that were no polley :

The king will labour still to save his life ;

The commons haply rise to save his life ; 240

And yet we have but trivial argument,

More than mistrust, that shows him worthy

death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah ! York, no man alive so fair as I. 244

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.

But my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of

Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,

Were't not all one an empty eagle were set 248

To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,

As place Duke Humphrey for the king's projector ?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true : and were't not madness, then, 252

To make the fox surveyor of the fold ?

Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer,

His guilt should be but idly posted over

Because his purpose is not executed. 256

No ; let him die, in that he is a fox,

By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,

Before his claps be stain'd with crimson blood,

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege.

And do not stand on quilllets how to slay him :

Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,

Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,

So he be dead ; for that is good deceit. 264

Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done,

For things are often spoke and seldom meant ;

But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,

Seeing the deed is meritorious,

And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,

Say but the word and I will be his priest. 272

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest :

Say you consent and censure well the deed,

And I'll provide his executioner ; 276

I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here 's my hand the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I : and now we three have spoke

it. 280

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

[Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come

amain,

To signify that rebels there are up,

And put the Englishmen unto the sword. 284

Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,

Before the wound do grow uncurable ;

For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop !

What counsel give you in this weighty cause ?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither.

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd ;

Witness the fortune he hath had in France. 292

Som. If York, with all his far-fet polley,

Had been the regent there instead of me,

He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast

done : 296

I rather would have lost my life betimes

Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

By staying there so long till all were lost.

Show me one scar character'd on thy skin : 300

Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.

No more, good York ; sweet Somerset, be still :

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What ! worse than nought ? nay, then a shame take all.

Som. And in the number thee, that wisest

shame. 308

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune

is.

The unwell kerns of Ireland are in arms

And temper clay with blood of Englishmen :

To Ireland will you lead a band of men, 312

Collected chotely, from each county some,

And try your hap against the Irishmen ?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.
Suf. Why, our authority is his consent, 316
And what we do establish he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.
York. I am content: provide me soldiers,
lords,
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. 320
Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.
But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.
Cur. No more of him; for I will deal with him
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more. 324
And so break off; the day is almost spent.
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days
At Bristol I expect my soldiers; 328
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.
[Exeunt all except York.
York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful
thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution: 332
Be that thou'st op'nt to be, or what thou art
Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoying.
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born
man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart. 336
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,
And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. 340
Well, nobles, well; 'tis p'ollitely done,
To send me packing with a host of men:
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your
hearts. 344
Twas men I laek'd, and you will give them me:
I take it kindly; yet be well assur'd
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, 348
I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell;
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head, 352
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman, 356
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade 360
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine:
And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen 364
Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.

Full often, like a shag-haired crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy, 368
And undiscover'd come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanies.
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, 372
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble;
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortur'd, 376
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms.
Say that he thrive,—as 'tis great like he will,— Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength, 380
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.

Scene II.—Bury St. Edmund's. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

First Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know
We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded.
Sec. Mur. What it were to do. What have we done?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent? 4

Enter SUFFOLK.

First Mur. Here comes my lord.
Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing?
First Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.
Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house; 8
I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the bed? is all things well,
According as I gave directions? 12
First Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.
Suf. Away! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers.

Sound trumpets. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN
MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET,
Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence
straight;
Say, we intend to try his Grace to-day, 16
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.
Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord.
[Exit.
K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pry you all,
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester
Than from true evidence, of good esteem, 21
He be approv'd in practice culpable.
Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should provail
That faultless may condemn a nobleman! 24

Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forfend!

Car. God's secret judgment: I did dream to-night

The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The King awakes.]

Q. Mar. How fares my lord? Help, lords! he king is dead.

Son. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help! O Henry, open thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again. Madam, be patient.

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, comfort!

K. Hen. What! doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note, Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers.

And thinks he that the chirping of a wren, By crying comfort from a hollow breast,

Can chase away the first-conceiv'd sound? Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words:

Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say: Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.

Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight! Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny

Sits in grim unajesty to fright the world. Look not upon me, for thine eyes are woundlug: Yet do not go away; come, basilisk,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight; For in the shade of death I shall find joy,

In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?

Although the duke was enemy to him, Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death:

And for myself, foe as he was to me, Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans

Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life, I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,

Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,

And all to have the noble duke alive, What know I how the world may deem of me?

For it is known we were but hollow friends:

It may be judg'd I made the duke away:

So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach, This get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy!

To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah! woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man.

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What! dost thou turn away and hide thy face? I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf? Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb? Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:

Erect thy statue and worship it, And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this nigh wrack'd upon the sea, And twice by awkward wind from England's bank Drove back again into my native clime?

What boded this, but well forewarning wind Did seem to say, 'Seek not a scorp'ion's nest,

Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?' What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts

And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore.

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock? Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee: The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,

Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:

The spitting rocks cower'd in the sinking sands, And would not dash me with their ragged sides

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they, Might in thy palace perish Margaret.

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs, When from thy shore the tempest beat uback,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm, And when the dusky sky began to rob

My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view, I took a costly jewel from my neck,

A heart it was, bound in with diamonds, And threw it towards thy land: the sea receiv'd

it.

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart: And even with this I lost fair England's view,

And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart, And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles

For losing ken of Almon's wished coast. How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue—

The agent of thy foul inconstancy— To sit and witch me, as Aescanius did

When he to madd'ning Dido would unfold

His father's acts, commene'd in burning Troy!
Am I not witch'liko her? or thou not false like him?

Ay me! I can no more. Die, Margaret!
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.
The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey trait'rously is murder'd

By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true;

But how he died God knows, not Henry.
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,

With the rude multitude till I return.

[WARWICK goes into an inner chamber.
SALISBURY retires.

K. Hen. O! Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts,

My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life.

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
For judgment only doth belong to thee.

Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain

Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
To tell my love unto his deaf dumb trunk,

And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling;
But all in vain are these mean obseques,

And to survey his dead and earthly image
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Re-enter WARWICK and Others bearing GLOUCESTER'S body on a bed.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made;

For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
For seeing him I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him

To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid

Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.
Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn

tongue!
What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.

Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ushy scumblaffe, meagre, pale, and bloodless,

Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,

Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er

returneth
To blush and beautify the cheek again.

But see, his face is black and full of blood,
His eyeballs further out than when he liv'd,

Staring full ghastly like a strangled man;
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretched with struggling;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd

And tugg'd for life and was by strength seldu'd.
Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugg'd,

Like to the summer-corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here;

The least of all these signs were probable.
Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection;

And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.
War. But both of you were vow'd Duke

Humphrey's foes,
And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep;

'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noble-men
As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding
fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the peacock's nest,
But may imagine how the hawk was dead,

Although the kite soar with unblooded beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping
men;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart

That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,

That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death, [Excunt CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET,

and Others.
War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious
spirit,

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf 208
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed 212
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou
art,

And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers
thee, 216

And I should rob the deathsmán of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sov'reign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech, 221
And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st;
That thou thyself wast born in bastardy:

And after all this fearful homage done, 224
Give thee thy life, and send thy soul to hell,
Perilous blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy
blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee
hence: 229

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK.]

K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted! 232

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

Q. Mar. What noise is this? [1 noise within.]

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, bow now, lords! your wrathful
weapons drawn 237

Here in our presence! dare you be so bold?

Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury, 240

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Noise of a crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. [Speaking to those within.] Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me.
Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories, 245

They will by violence tear him from your palace
And torture him with grievous lingering death.

They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died;
They say, in him they fear your highness' death:

And mere instinct of love and loyalty,
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,

As being thought to contradict your liking, 252

Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest 250

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That silly glided towards your majesty, 250

It were but necessary you were wak'd,
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, wh'er you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;

With whose enveloped and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth, 262

They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
my Lord of Salisbury!

Suf. 'Tis like the common, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign; 272
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how qualm an orator you are:

But all the honour Salisbury hath won
Is that he was the lord ambassador, 276

Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
or we will all break in!

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from
me,

I thank them for their tender loving care; 280
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do eatreat;

For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means:

And therefore, by his majesty I swear, 285
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air

But three days longer, on the pain of death, 288

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Q. Mar. O Henry! let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle
Suffolk!

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. 292

Had I but said, I would have kept my word,
But when I swear, it is irrevocable.

[To SUFFOLK.] If after three days' space thou here be'st found

On any ground that I am ruler of, 296
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.

Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with
me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.
[Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!

299
Heart's discontent and sour affliction

Be playfellows to keep you company!

There's two of you; the devil make a third,
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!
Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fle, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy? 308
Suf. A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear, 312
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest
words; 316

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my hurden'd heart would break
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!
Gall, worse than gall, the deadliest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks! 324
Their softest touch as smart as lizard's stings!
Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,
And hoding screech-owls make the eoucert full!
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell— 328

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st
thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an over-charged gun, recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself. 332

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me
leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top, 336
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O! let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears; 340
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments,
O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

[Kisses his hand.]

That thou mightst think upon these by the seal, Throu' h whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee. 345

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
Tis but surruls'd whiles thou art standing by;
As one that surruls't thinking on a want. 348

I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself;
And banished I am, if but from thee.

Go; speak not to me; even now he gone. 352
O! go not yet. Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet uow farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banish'd.
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;
A wilderness is populous enough, 360
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not, desolation. 374
I can no more: live thou to joy thy life;
Myself to joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I prithee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty 382
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp and stare, and catch the
air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul: 376
And I am sent to tell his majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go tell this heavy message to the king. [Exit VAUX.]

Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my son's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears,
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows? 385
Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming;

If thou be found by me thou art but dead.
Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live; 388

And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle babe, 392

Dying with mother's dug between its lips;
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,

To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul, 397

Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee, were but to die in jest; 400
From thee to die were torture more than death.

O! let me stay, befall what may befall!

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful
course,

It is apply'd to a deathful wound. 404
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;

For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,

I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee. 458

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask
That ever d.d contain a thing of worth.

Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:

This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. 412
[Exeunt severally.]

Scene III.—London CARDINAL BEAUFORT'S
Bed-chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Others. The CARDINAL in bed; Attendants
with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain. 4

K. Hen. Ah! what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible.

War. Beaufort, it is thy sov'reign speaks to
thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you
will. 8

Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

Can I make men live whe'r they will or no?

O! torture me no more, I will confess.

Alive again? then show me where he is: 12

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands up-
right,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul. 16

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary

Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens!

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch; 20

O! beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul.

And from his bosom purge this black despair.

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin! 24

Sal. Disturb him not! let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord Cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope. 28

He dies, and makes no sign. O God, forgive
him!

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners
all.

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close; 32
And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Kent. The Seashore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a boat,
a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and Others; with them SUFFOLK disguised, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and rancorousful
day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea,
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragical melancholy night; 4
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize, 8
For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs
Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.

Master, this prisoner freely give I thee: 12

And thou that art his mate make boot of this;
The other [Pointing to SUFFOLK], Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

First Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.

Mat. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head. 16

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes
yours.

Cap. What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen?
Cut both the villains' throats! for die you shall:

The lives of those which we have lost in fight 21
Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum!

First Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

Sec. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight. 24

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize
aboard,

[To SUFFOLK] And therefore to revenge it shalt thou die;

And so should these if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash: take ransom; let him
live. 28

Suf. Look on my George; I am a gentleman:
Rate me not what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now! why start'st thou? what! doth death affright? 32

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water I should die:

Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded; 36
Thy name is—Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is I care not;
Never yet did base dishonour blur our name
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot: 40
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Lays hold on SUFFOLK.

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince, 44
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:

Jove sometimes went (disguis'd), and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be. 49

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood,

The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom. 52

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup, 56
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?

Remember it and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride. 60

How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood
And duly waited for my coming forth?

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain? 65

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side 68

Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Pole.

Suf. Pole!

Cap. Pool! Sir Pool! lord!
Ay, kennel, puddle, sluk; whose filth and dirt

Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth 73

For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground;

And thou, that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death, 76

Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again;

And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
For daring to affy a mighty lord! 80

Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd 84

With goblets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,

The false revolting Normans through thee
Diadalm to call us lord, and Plearily 38

Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain, 92

As hating thee, are rising up in arms:

And now the house of York, thrust from the crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny, 96

Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-faced sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ Invictus nubilus.

The commons here in Kent are up in arms; 100
And to conclude, reproach and beggary

Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O! that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder 104

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges.
Small things make base men proud; this villain

here,
Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more

Than Banguis the strong Illyrian pirate. 108

Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob beehives.

It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage, and not remorse in me:
I go of message from the queen to France; 113

I charge thee, waft me safely cross the Channel.

Cap. Walter!

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death. 116

Suf. Goludus timor occupat artus: 'tis thee I fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.

What! are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?
First Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair. 120

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit: no, rather let my head 124
Stoop to the block than these knees how to any

Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom. 128
True nobility is exempt from fear:

More can I bear than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot. 133

Great men oft die by vile bezoniains.

A Roman sworder and banditto slave

Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand 136

Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders

Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit with SUFFOLK, WHITMORE and Others.]

Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have set,

It is our pleasure one of them depart: 140

Therefore come you with us and let him go.

[Exeunt all but first Gentleman.]

Re-enter WHITMORE, with SUFFOLK'S body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,

Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.]

First Gent. O barbarous and bloody specta- 144

cle!

His body will I bear unto the king;

If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;

So will the queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit with the body.]

Scene II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath: they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now
then. 5

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it. 8

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.
Well, I say it was never merry world in England
since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicrafts men. 13

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay, more; the king's council are no good workmen. 17

John. True; and yet it is said, 'Labour in thy vocation:' which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates. 21

Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham,— 25

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's-leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,— 28

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver,—

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun. 32

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH
the Weaver and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. [Aside.] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings. 37

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, Inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence. 40

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. [Aside.] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. 44

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. [Aside.] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,— 48

Dick. [Aside.] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside.] But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes backs here at home. 53

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable
house.

Dick. [Aside.] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Vallant I am. 60

Smith. [Aside.] A' must needs, for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside.] No question of that, for I have seen him whipped three market-days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside.] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof. 65

Dick. [Aside.] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt 't the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And when I am king,—as king I will be,—

All. God save your majesty! 80

Cade. I thank you, good people; there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship
me their lord. 85

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings; but I say, 'tis the bee's wax, for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there? 95

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain! 100

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand. 105

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, of rime honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee. What is thy name? 109

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters. 'Twill go hard with you. 112

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name. 117

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him! I say; hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck. 121

[Exit some with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces. 126

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is a'?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him. 133

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and William his Brother, with drum and Forces.

Staff. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,

Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down; Home to your cottages, forsake this groom: 136
The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staff. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not: 140

It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom, in time to come I hope to reign;
For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staff. Villain! thy father was a plasterer;
And thou thyself a shearmen, art thou not? 145

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staff. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, 148

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

Staff. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staff. That's false. 152

Cade. Ay, there's the question: but I say, 'tis true:

The elder of them, being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away;
And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, 156
Became a bricklayer when he came to age:
His son am I; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day; I testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staff. And will you credit this base drudge's words,

That speaks he knows not what? 164

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staff. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside.] He lies, for I invented it myself. Go to, sirrah; tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him. 172

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England mated, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it a emuch; and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor. 181

Staff. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can; the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to then, I ask but this, can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staff. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, 188

Assail them with the army of the king.

Staff. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
That those which fly before the battle ends 192
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors:
And you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces.]

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me. 195

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:
Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon,
For they are thrifty honest men, and such 200
As would, but that they dare not take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march! 204
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one. 3

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; [Puts on SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD'S armour.] and the bodles shall be dragged at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the Mayor's sword borne before us. 14

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the goals and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come; let's march towards London. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, reading a Supplication; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and LORD SAY with him: at a distance, QUEEN MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK'S head.

Q. Mar. O! have I heard that grief softens the mind,

And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep and look on this? 4
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication? 3

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
For God forbid so many simple souls
Should perish by the sword! And I myself,

Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, 12
Will parley with Jack Cade their general.

But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me, 16
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have his. 20

K. Hen. How now, madam!
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?
I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee. 25

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, 28
Descended from the Duke of Clarence's house,
And calls your Grace usurper openly,
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.

His army's a ragged multitude 32
Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed.

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, 36
They call false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth,

Until a power be rais'd to put them down. 40

Q. Mar. Ah! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Killingworth. 44

Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may. 48

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London bridge;

The citizens fly and forsake their houses;
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear 52
To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away! take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is de-ceas'd. 56
K. Hen. [To LORD SAY.] Farewell, my lord: trust not the Kentish rebels.
Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence, and therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—The Same. The Tower.

*Enter LORD SCALPEL and Others, on the Walls.
Then enter certain Citizens, below.*

Scalpel. How now! is Jack Cade slain?
First Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain;
for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scalpel. Such aid as I can spare you shall command;
But I am troubled here with them myself; 8
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe:
Fight for your king, your country, and your lives;
And so, farewell, for I must hence again. 12
[Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—London. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE, and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissingconduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade! 8
Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him.]
Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning. 12

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then let's go fight with them.
But first, go and set London-bridge on fire, and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

*Alarums. Enter, on one side, CADE and his company; on the other, Citizens, and the KING'S Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOFFE.
They fight; the Citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOFFE is slain.*

Cade. So, sirs:—Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court: down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship. 4

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth. 8

John. [Aside.] Mass, 'twill be sore law then;
for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear,
and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside.] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. 14

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so.
Away! burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. [Aside.] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common. 21

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. 25

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah! thou say, thou sorge, nay, thou buckram lord; now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Monsieur Basimecn, the Danphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school; and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the klug, his crown, and dignity, thou hast hullt a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when indeed only for that cause they have been most worthy to live.
Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that? 53

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 56

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—
Dick. What say you of Kent? 65
Say. Nothing but this: 'tis bona terra, mala gens.
Cade. Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin.
Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will. 64
 Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ,
 Is term'd the civil st place of all this isle:
 Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
 The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy; 63
 Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
 I sold not Malne, I lost not Normandy;
 Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
 Justice with favour have I always done; 72
 Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.
 When have I aught exacted at your hands,
 But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
 Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, 76
 Because my book prefer'd me to the king,
 And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
 Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
 Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, 80
 You cannot but forbear to murder me:
 This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
 For your behoof.—
Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field? 84
Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck
 Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks! 88
Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.
Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.
Say. Long sitting, to determine poor men's causes, 92
 Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen candle then, and the help of hatchet.
Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man? 96
Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.
Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you: I'll see if his head will stand steadler on a pole, or no. Take him away and behead him. 101
Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honour? speak.
 Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? 104
 Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
 Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
 These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,
 This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts. 108
 O! let me live.
Cade. [Aside.] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, and it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither. 113

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
 God shall be so obdurate as yourselves,
 How shall it fare with your departed souls?
 And therefore yet relent, and save my life. 123

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some, with LORD SAY.] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it; men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell. 132

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O! brave! 136

Re-enter Rebels, with the heralds of LORD SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss. Away! 144
 [Recount.]

Scene VIII.—The Same. Southwark.

Warren. Enter CADE and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down St. Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! [A parley sounded, then a retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and Old CLIFFORD, with Forces.

Back. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.
 Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king 3

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
 And here pronounce free pardon to them all
 That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent. 12

And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you, or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
 Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon, Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his
 majesty!' 16

Who hateth him, and honour, not his father,
 Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What! Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility.
 Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one, and so, God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade! 36

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth,
 That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?
 Will he conduct you through the heart of
 France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
 Alas! he hath no home, no place to fly to; 41
 Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
 Unless by robbing of your friends and us.
 Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at Jar,
 The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
 Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish
 you?

Methinks already in this civil broil
 I see them lording it in London streets, 48
 Crying Villains! into all they meet.

Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
 Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's
 mercy.

To France, to France! and get what you have lost; 52

stare England, for it is your native coast,
 Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
 God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford. 57

Cade. [Aside.] Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to a hundred mis-chiefs, and makes thoo! leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me.
 My sword make way for me, for here is no staying.
 In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treason, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.]

Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow him;
 And he that brings his head unto the king
 Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.]
 Follow me, soldiers: we devise a mean 72
 To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exunt.]

Scene IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN
 MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the terrace.

K. Hen. Was ever king that y'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?
 No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
 But I was made a king at nine months old: 4
 Was never subject long'd to be a king
 As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor
 Cade surpris'd? 3
 Or is he but retr'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of CADE's followers, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
 Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death. 12

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set open thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! I
 Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
 And show'd how well you love your prince and
 country: 16

Continue still in this so good a mind,
 And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
 Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:

And so, with thanks and pardon to you all, 20
 I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Pleased it your Grace to be advertised,
 The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland;
 And with a puissant and a mighty power 25
 Of Gallowglasses, and stout kerns,

Is marching hitherward in proud array;
 And still proclaimeth, as he comes along, 28
 His arms are only to remove from thee

The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.
K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship, that, having scap'd a tempest, 32
 Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate.
 But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd;
 And now is York in arms to second him.

I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him, 36

And ask him what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him. 40

Som. My lord,
I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms; 44
For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal

As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better; 48

For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt.]

Scene X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fle on ambition! fle on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
These five days hare I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now I am so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in: and now the word 'sallet' must serve me to feed on. 17

Enter IDEN with Servants behind.

Iden. Lord! who would live turmoiled in the
court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
This small inheritance my father left me 20
Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning.
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy;
Sufficeth that I have maintains my state, 24
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. [Aside.] Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain! thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part. 30

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou
be,

I know thee not; why then should I betray thee?
Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds. 36

Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was bronched, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days;
yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nall, I pray
God I may never eat grass more. 44

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while Eng land stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine, 48

See if thou enst out-face me with thy looks;

Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;

Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;

Thy leg a stiek compared with this truncheon;

My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast; 53

And if mine arm be heaved in the air

Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.

As for more words, whose greatness answers
words, 56

Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chimes of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees, thou mayst be turned to hobnalls. [They fight; CADE falls.] O, I am slain! Famine and no other hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'll defy them all. With'er, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled. 60

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,

And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,

But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, 74

To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best inn, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge. 81

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare
thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,

So wish I might thrust thy soul to hell.

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels 85

Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave,

And there cut off thy most ungracious head;

Which I will bear in triumph to the king, 88

Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit, with Servants, dragging out the body.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Kent. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's camp on one side. On the other, enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head :
Ring, bells, aloud ; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king. 4
Ah sancta majestas, who would not buy thee dear ?

Let them obey that know not how to rule ;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold :
I cannot give due action to my words, 8
Except a sword, or sceptre balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BECKINGHAM.

Whom have we here ? Buckingham, to disturb me ? 12

The king hath sent him, sure : I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure ? 16
Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace ;
Or why thou,—being a subject as I am,—
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, 20
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarcely can I speak, my choler is so great :

O ! I could hew up rocks and fight with flint, 24
I am so angry at these abject terms ;

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.

I am far better born than is the king, 28
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts ;
But I must make fair weather yet awhile,

Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.
[Aloud.] Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me, 32

That I have given no answer all this while ;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

The cause why I have brought this army hither
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king, 36
Seditious to his Grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part :

But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand : 40
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he a prisoner ?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is a prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers. 44

Soldiers, I thank you all ; disperse yourselves ;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,

You shall have pay, and everything you wish,
And let my sov'reign, virtuous Henry, 48

Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love ;

I'll send them all as willful as I live :
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have

Is his to use, so Somerset may die. 52
Buck. York, I commend this kind submission :

We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter KING HENRY, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend to harm to us, 56

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm ?
York. In all submission and humility

York doth present himself unto your highness.
K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring ? 60

York. To heav's the traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,

Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition 64

May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo ! I present your Grace a traitor's head,

The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.
K. Hen. The head of Cade ! Great God, how just art thou ! 68

O ! let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.

Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him ?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty. 72

K. Hen. How art thou call'd, and what is thy degree ?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name ;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss 76

He were created knight for his good service.
K. Hen. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks ;
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us. 80

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege !

K. Hen. See ! Buckingham ! Somerset comes with the queen :
Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke. 84

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

But boldly stand und front him to his face.

York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd
thoughts 83

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse? 92

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,

Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff, 97

And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of
mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,

Is able with the change to kill and cure. 101

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler. 105

Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee,
York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.

Obeys, and helious traitor; kneel for grace. 108

York. Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of these

If they can brook I bow a knee to man.

Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail!

[Exit an Attendant.]

I know ere they will have me go to ward. 112

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchise-
ment.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come anahn,

To say if that the bastard boys of York

Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

[Exit BRUCKINGHAM.]

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

Shall be their father's be'; and bane to those

That for my surety will fuse the boys! 121

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forests at one side; at the other, with Forces also, Old CLIFFORD and his Son.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

Clif. [Kneeling.] Health and all happiness to my lord the king! 124

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news
with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:

We are thy sov'reign, Clifford, kneel again;

For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee. 128

Clif. Tis is my king, York, I do no. mistake;

But thou mistak'st me much to think I do.

To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and amblitious humour 132

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,

And chop away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey: 136

His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Educ. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. 140

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we
here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so:

I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.

Call hither to the stake my two brave bears, 144

That with the very shaking of their chains

They may astonish these fell-lurking curs:

Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death, 148

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,

If thou dar'st bring them to the baling-place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur

Run back and bite, because he was withheld;

Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw, 153

Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cried:

And such a piece of service will you do,

If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump. 157

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly
anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. 160

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,

Thou mad misleader of thy brain-siek son!

What! wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian, 164

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

O! where is faith? O, where is loyalty?

If it be banish'd from the frosty head,

Where shall it find a harbour in the earth? 168

Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,

And shame thine honourable age with blood?

Why art thou old, and want'st experience?

Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? 172

For shame! In duty bend thy knee to me,

That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke; 176
And in my conscience do repent his Grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. 180

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow 184

To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To rieve the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong 189
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. 192

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again, 196

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, 200
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Neville's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the rugged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,— 204

As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,—

Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear, 208

And tread it underfoot with all contempt,
Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

F. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their compliers. 212

Rich. Fie! charity! for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

F. Clif. Foul stigmatie, that's more than thou can'st tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.

Scene II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls;

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,

Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, 4
Clifford, I say, come forth, and fight with me!
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what! all afoot? 8

York. The deadly handed Clifford slew my steed;

But match to unmatch I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows

Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well. 14

Enter Old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st. 16

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love, 20

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword
As I in justice and true right express it. 25

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! address thee instantly.

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. 28

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls and dies.

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will! [Exit.

Enter Young CLIFFORD.

F. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds 32
Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part

Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly: 36
He that is truly dedicate to war

Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,

The name of valour. [Seeing his father's body.

O! let the vile world end, 40

And the promised flames of the last day
Knit heaven and earth together;

Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds 44

To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days thus
To lie in ruffian battle? Even at this slight 49
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine
It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal 52
Shall be as fire even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclains,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity: 50
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame. 60
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:
[Taking up the body.]
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load, 64
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET, fighting;
SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset 68
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.]

Alarum: Excursions. Enter KING HENRY,
QUEEN MARGARET, and Others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow: for shame, away! 72

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay.

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor flight nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us 76
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]
If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect, 80
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
And where this breach now in our fortunes made
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mis-chance set, 84

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must: incurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live 88
To see their day and them our fortune give.
Away, my lord, away! [Exit.]

Scene III.—Field near Saint Alban's.

Alarum. Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, 4
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse, 8
Three times bestrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house, 12
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought
to-day;
By the mass, so did we all. I thank you,
Richard: 16
God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to-
day

You have defended me from imminent death.
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled, 21
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London, 24
To call a present court of parliament:
Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth:—
What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?

War. After them! nay, before them, if we can. 28

Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.
Sound, drums and trumpets, and to London all:
And more such days as these to us befall! 33
[Exit.]

Scene.—During part of the Third Act, in France; during the rest of the Play, in England.

Act I.

Scene I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of York's party break in. Then, enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the King escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursued the horse-men of the north,

He slyly stole away and left his men:
 Whence the great Lord of Northumberland,
 Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
 Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,

Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking in

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.
Educ. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain or wounded dangerously;
 I cleft his beaver with a downright blow:
 That this is true father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.]

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,
[To York, showing him.]
 Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.
[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.]

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons. 17

But, is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norfol. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head. 20

War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York, Before I see thee seated in that throne

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close. 24

This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs!

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will; 28

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norfol. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me, my lords;

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night. 32

War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.
[The Soldiers retire.]

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament,
But little thinks we shall be of her council: 36

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, 40
And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then hear me not, my lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right. 44

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares. 48
Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[WARWICK LEADS YORK TO THE THRONE, WHO SEATS HIMSELF.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! belike he means — Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king. 53
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father,

And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

Cliff. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn
In steel.

West. What! shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it. 60

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmore-
land.

Cliff. Patience is for poltroons, such as he;
He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament 64
Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be
it so.

K. Hen. Ah! know you not the city favours
them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?
Exe. But when the duke is slain they'll quickly fly. 69

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats, 72
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.

[They advance to the Duke.]

Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;

I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine. 76

Exe. For shame! come down: he made thee
Duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom
was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.
War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown in following this usurping Henry. 81

Cliff. Whom should he follow but his natural
king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard,
Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne? 84

York. It must and shall be so: content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster: let him be king.
West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster;
And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain. 88

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March'd through the city to the palace gates. 92

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my
grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives 96

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that instead of words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger
As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats.

York. Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? 104

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March;
I am the son of Henry the Fifth,

Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. 109

War. Talk not of France, sth thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:
When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose. 113

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Elec. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. [To York.] Good brother, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms, 116

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak. 120

War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, 124

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?
No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,
And now in England to our heart's great sorrow,

Shall be my winding-sheet. Why salute you, lords?
My title's good, and better far than his.

War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown. 132

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. [Aside.] I know not what to say; my title's weak.

[Aloud.] Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then? 136

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;
For Richard, in the view of many lords,

Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown? 144

Eze. No; for he could not so resign his crown

But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Eze. His is the right, and therefore pardon me. 148

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Eze. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

K. Hen. [Aside.] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, 152

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, 156

Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence: 160

May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revolve my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.
What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York;

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits, 168

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:—

Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs, 172

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the princee your son! 176

War. What good is this to Englaud and himself!

West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles. 180

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides. 184

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome;

Or live in peace abandon'd and despid!
[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah! Exeter.

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son.

Whom I unnaturally shall disinheret.

But be it as it may; I here entall
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign;

And neither by treason nor hostility

To seek to put me down and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.

War. Long live King Henry! Plantageuet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes!

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

York. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I to the sea from whence I came.
[Exeunt YORK and his Sons, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.

Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks betray her anger;

It steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes? Ah! wretched man; would I had died a maid.

And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast provid' so unnatural a father.

Wath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,
Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood
there,

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,

And disinheret thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinheret me;

If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son;

The Earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforce'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforce'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah! timorous wretch;

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;

And given unto the house of York such head
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.

To entall him and his heirs unto the crown,
What is it but to make thy sepulchre,

And creep into it far before thy time?
Warwick is chancellor and the Lord of Calais;

Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The duke is made protector of the realm;

And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb environed with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have tossed me on their pikes

Before I would have granted to that act;
But thou preferrest thy life before thine honour;

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd
Whereby my son is disinheret.

The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,

And utter ruin of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away;

Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prince. When I return with victory from the field

I'll see your Grace; till then, I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Let your son away; we may not linger thus.
[Exeunt QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.

K. Hen. Peer queen! how love to me and to her son,

Hadst made her break out into terms of rage.

Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle 268
Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torments my heart:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair.
Come, cousin; you shall be the messenger. 272
Exe. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edu. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife? 4

What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edu. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us; 8

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life or death.

Edu. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now: 12

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edu. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken: 16

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your Grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak. 20

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate
That hath authority over him that swears: 24

Henry had none, but did usurp the place;

Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,

Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.

Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think 28

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,

Within whose circuit is Elysiun,

And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.

Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest 32

Until the white rose that I wear be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough, I will be king, or die.

Brother, thou shalt to London 36

And whet on Warwick to this.

Thou, Richard, shalt unto 40

And tell him privily of our

You, Edward, shall unto 44

With whom the Kentish

In them I trust; for the Witty, courteous, liberal, full of

While you are thus employ'd; what resteth

more, 44

But that I seek occasion how to rise,

And yet the king not privy to my drift,

Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay: what news? why com'st thou in such post? 48

Mess. The queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besedge you in your castle.

She is hard by with twenty thousand men,

And therefore fortify your hold, my lord. 52

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;

My brother Montague shall post to London: 56

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,

Whom we have left protectors of the klug,

With powerful policy strengthen themselves,

And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not: 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave.

[Exit.]

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles!

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besedge us. 64

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

York. What! with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need:

A woman's general; what should we fear? 68

[A march afar off.]

Edu. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight.

York. Five men to twenty! though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory. 72

Many a battie have I won in France,

When as the enemy hath been ten to one:

Why should I not now have the like success?

[Alarm. Exeunt.]

With downright payment show'd unto my father.

Now Phœnix hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth

A bird that will revenge upon you all;

And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Swearing whate'er you can afflict me with.

Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?
Alas! So cowards fight when they can fly no

further;

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out insectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford! but bethink thee once
again,

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
And when thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And see thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere
this.

Cliff. I will not bandy with thee word for
word.

But buck! thee blows, twice two for one.

[Draws.
Q. Mar. Hold, vallant Clifford! for a thousand causes

I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.

Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much

To prick thy finger, though it wound his heart.
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,

For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might smite him with his foot away?

It is warlike to take all vantages,
And to have no impeach of valour.

Cliff. My hands on YORK, who struggles.
Cliff. strikes the woodcock with the North. he cony struggle in the net.

[YORK is taken prisoner.
Cliff. strikes thieves upon their conquerors

So true men fight with robbers so o'er-match'd.

North. What would your Grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught at mountains with outstretched

arms,

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's

king?
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preaching of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now?

The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that vallant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice 76
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the
blood!

That vallant Clifford with his rapier's point 80
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.

Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly, 84
I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee grave, to make me merry, York.
What! hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine
entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death? 88
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be
mad;

And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.

Thou wouldst be fce'd, I see, to make me sport:
York cannot speak unless he wear a crown. 93
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him:
Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.
Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king! 96
Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair;
and this is he was his adopted heir.
But how is it that great Plantagenot
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king 101
Till our King Henry had shook hands with
death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem, 104
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O! 'tis a fault too unpardonable.
Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his
head;

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
dead. 106

Cliff. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,
Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's
tooth! 112

How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian troll,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging, 116
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to thee, wert thou not shameless. 117

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman,
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud
queen, 125

Unless the rage must be verified,
That beggars mounted run their horse to death,
'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;
But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue that doth make them most adul'd;
The contrary doth make thee womer'd at:
'Tis government that makes them seem divine:
The want thereof makes thee abominable. 133

Thou art as opposite to every good
As the Antipoles are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion, 136
O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hild!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the
child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to hear a woman's face? 140
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless, Blidd'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:

Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast
thy will; 144

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins,
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies,
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French woman. 149

North. Bestrew me, but his passion moves me so

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.
York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood; 153

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,—
O! ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears: 156
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet
boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this;
[Giving back the handkerchief.]

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, 160
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say, 'Alas! it was a piteous deed!'
There, take the crown, and, with the crown my curse, 164

And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin, 169
I should not for my life but weep with him,

To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What! weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland? 172

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And t' it will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Cl. Here's for my oath; here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.]

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.]

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious
God! 177

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies.]

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York
gates;

So York may overlook the town of York. 180
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

Act II.

Scene I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father
'scap'd,

Or whether he be 'scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.
Had he been ta'en we should have heard the
news; 4

Had he been slain we should have heard the
news;

Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.
How fares my brother? why is he so sad? 8

Rich. I cannot joy until I be resolv'd
Where our right vallant father is become.

I saw him in the battle range about,
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.

Methought he bore him in the thickest troop 13
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,

The rest stand all aloof and bark at him. 17

So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my war-like father:

Methinks, 't is prize enough to be his son. 20

See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun;

How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Triumphant like a younker prancing to his love. 24

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect
sun;

Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. 28

See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,

As if they vow'd some league inviolable :

Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun,
In this the heaven figures some event. 32

Educ. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field ;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our needs, 36
Should notwithstanding join our lights together,

And over-shine the earth, as this the world.
What'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair-shining suns. 40

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it,

You love the broader better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue? 44

Mess. Ah! one that was a woeful looker-on,
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Educ. O! speak no more, for I have heard too
much. 48

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd
Troy. 52

But Hercules himself must yield to odds ;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest timber'd oak.
By many hands your father was sulkn'd ; 56

But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite ;

Laugh'd in his face ; and when with grief he wept, 60

The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford shut :

And after many scorns, many foul taunts, 64
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same ; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Educ. Sweet Duke of York! our prop to lean upon, 68

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay!
O Clifford! hoist'rous Clifford! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry ;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him, 72
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd
thee,

Now my son's palace is become a prison ;
Ah! would she break from hence, that this my body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest, 76
For never henceforth shall I joy again,

Never, O! never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart: 80

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden ;

For self-same wind, that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench. 84

To weep is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears then, for babes ; blows and revenge for
me!

Richard, I bear thy name ; I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it. 88

Educ. His name that vallant duke hath left
with thee ;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun : 92
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say ;

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick and the MARQUESS OF MONTAGUE, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare?
what news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount 96
Our hateful news, and at each word's deliv'r-
ance

Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O vallant lord! the Duke of York is slain. 100

Educ. O Warwick! Warwick! that Planta-genet

Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,

Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in
tears, 104

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.

After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, 108

Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.

I, then in London, keeper of the King,
Must'rd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,

And very well appointed, as I thought, 113 March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the
queen,

Bearing the king in my behalf along :

For by my scouts I was advertised 116
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,

Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.

Short tale to make, we at Salnt Alban's met, 120
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought;
But whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his war-like queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success; 125
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth, 128
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers—like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thresher with a flail—
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause, 133
With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day; 136
So that we fled: the king unto the queen,
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here we heard you were, 140
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers; 144

And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, bellike, when vallant Warwick fled; 148

Of't have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine 152

Can pluck the diadem from falnt Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,

Were he as famous, and as bold in war
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not; 157

'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak,
But, in this troublous time what's to be done?

Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, 160
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Nunn'ring our Ave-Maries with our heads?

Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms? 164

If for the last, say 'Av,' and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick come to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague,
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen

With Clifford and the haught Northumb's
And of their feather many more proud are: 168

Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession, 172

His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,

To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster. 176

Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong;
Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,

With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,

Why, 'Vain!' to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,

And once again cry, 'Charge upon our foes!' 184
But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries 'Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay. 188

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;

And when thou fall'st—as God forbid the hour!—
Must Edward fall, which perill heaven forfend!

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York; 192

The next degree is England's royal throne;
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd

In every borough as we pass along;
And he that throws not up his cap for joy 196

Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head,
King Edward, vallant Richard, Montague,

Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task. 200

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,—

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,—
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums! God, and Saint George for us! 204

Enter a Messenger.

War. He now! what news?

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,

The queen is coming with a pissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts; brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Before York,

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drums and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown;

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord? 214

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them : at fear their wrack :

To see this slight, it lirks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my
fault,

Nor wittingly have I ring'd my vow. 8

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den. 12

Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.

Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back. 16

The smallest worm will turn being trodden on,
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown;
Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows : 20

He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue like a loving sire ;

Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to dishonour him, 24

Which argu'd thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young ;

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones, 28

Who hath not seen them, even with those wings

Which sometime they have us'd with fearful
flight,

Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?

For shame, my liege! make them your precedent.
Were it not pity that this goodly boy

Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child, 36

'What my great grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away?'

Ah! what a shame were this. Look on the boy ;
And let his mimic face, which promiseth 40

successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own and leave thine own with
him,

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force. 44

But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
That things ill got had ever bad success?

And happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his honouring went to hell? 48

I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind ;
And would my father had left me no more!

For all the rest is held at such a rate
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep 52

Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
Ah! constrain York, would thy best friends did
know

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!
Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirit : our foes are nigh, 56

And this soft courage makes your followers faint

You promis'd knighthood to our forward son :
Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently.

Edward, kneel down. 60

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight ;
And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly
leave,

I'll draw it as apparet to the crown, 64
And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Roy al commanders, be in readiness :
For with a band of thirty thousand men 68

Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York ;
And in the towns, as they do march along,

Proclaims him king, and many fly to him :
Dorralign your battle, for they are at hand. 72

Clif. I would your highness would depart the
field :

The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too ; therefore I'll stay. 76

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.
Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble
lords,

And hearten those that fight in your defence :
Unsheathe your sword, good father : cry, 'Saint George!' 80

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WAR-WICK, NORFOLK, MONTAIGNE, and Soldiers.

Educ. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head ;
Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting
boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms
Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king? 84

Educ. I am his king, and he should bow his
knee;

I was adopted heir by his consent : 88
Since when, his oath is broke ; for, as I hear,

You, that are king, though he do wear the
crown,

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in. 92

Clif. And reason too:
Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher? O! I cannot
speak.

Clif. Ay, crook-back ; here I stand to answer
thee, 96

Or any he the proudest of thy sort.
Rich. 'Twas you that killed young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

- Rich.* For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. 100
- War.* What sayst thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?
- Q. Mar.* Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! dare you speak?
- When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,
Your legs did better service than your hands. 104
- War.* Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.
- Clif.* You said so much before, and yet you fled.
- War.* 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.
- North.* No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay. 108
- Rich.* Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.
Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain
The execution of my big-swoth heart
Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer. 112
- Clif.* I slew thy father: callst thou him a child?
- Rich.* Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward.
As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;
But ere sun-set I'll make thee nurse the deed.
- K. Hen.* Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak. 117
- Q. Mar.* Defy them, then, or else hold close thy lips.
- K. Hen.* I prithee, give no faults to my tongue:
- I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. 120
- Clif.* My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.
- Rich.* Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword,
By him that made us all, I am resolv'd 124
That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.
- Educ.* Say, Henry, shall I have my right or no?
A thousand men have broke their fists to-day,
That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown. 128
- War.* If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;
For York in justice puts his armour on.
Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right,
There is no wrong, but everything is right. 132
- Rich.* Whoever got thee, there thy mother stambs;
For well I wot thou hast thy mother's tongue.
- Q. Mar.* But thou art neither like thy sire nor dau,
But like a foul misshapen stigmatic, 136
Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,
As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.
- Rich.* I, son of Naples hid with English gilt, Whose father bears the title of a king,— 140
As if a channel should be call'd the sea
- Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art
extraight,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?
Educ. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns. 144
- To make this shameless callet know herself,
Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,
Although thy husband may be Menelaus;
And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
By that false woman as this king by thee. 147
- His father revell'd in the heart of France,
And tam'd the king, and made the Dauphin stoop:
And had he match'd according to his state, 152
He might have kept that glory to this day;
But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day,
Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him. 155
- That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home,
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?
Hadst thou been meek our title still had slept,
And we, in pity of the gentle king, 159
Had slipp'd our claim until another age.
- Geo.* But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
And that thy summer bred us no increase, 164
We set the axe to thy usurping root;
And though the edge hath something hit our selves
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or buta'd thy growing with our heated bloods.
- Educ.* And in this resolution I defy thee;
Not willing any longer conference,
Since thou deny'st the gentle king to speak. 172
- Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colours wave!
And either victory, or else a grave.
- Q. Mar.* Stay, Edward.
- Educ.* No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay: 176
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.
[Exeunt.]
- Scene III.—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.
- Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.*
- War.* Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength, 180
And spite of spite needs must I rest a while.
- Enter Edward, running.*
- Educ.* Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, urgent death!

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good? 3

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair, our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us. What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Edu. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings; 12
And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah! Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Bronch'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;
And in the very pang of death he cried, 17
Like to a dismal clangor heard from fur,

Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!
So, underneath the belly of their steeds, 20
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smothering blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood;

I'll kill my horse because I will not fly. 24

Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wallowing our losses, while the foe doth rage;

And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors? 25

Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still

I'll either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge. 32

Edu. O Warwick! I do bend my knee with thine;

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine.

And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold
face,

I throw my moods, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings, 37

Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
That to my foes this body must be prey,

Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may open, 40
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!

Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle
Warwick, 44

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms;

I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,
farewell. 45

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay,
And call them pillars that will stand to us;

And if we thrive, promise them such rewards 52
As victors wear at the Olympian games.

This may plant courage in their quivering breasts;

For yet is hope of life and victory.

For slow no longer; make we hence again. 56
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.
Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall. 4

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.
This is the hand that stab'd thy father York,
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart that triumphs in their death;
And elsewhere these hands that slew thy sire and
brother, 5

To execute the like upon thyself;

And so, live at thee!

[They fight. WARWICK enters; CLIFFORD flies.]

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase; 72

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarm. Enter KING HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his pails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night. 4

Now aways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;

Now aways it that way, like the self-same sea
Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind;

Sometimes the flood prevails; and then the wind;

Now one the better, then another best;

Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered: 12

So is the equal poise of this fell war.

Here on this molehill will I sit me down,
To whom God will, there be the victory!

For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have child me from the battle; swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am thence.

Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;

For what is in this world but grief and woe? 20

O God! methinks it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;

To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point, 24

Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;

How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year; 30

How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:

So many hours must I tend my flock;

So many hours must I take my rest; 34

So many hours must I contemplate;
 So many hours must I sport myself;
 So many days my eyes have been with young;
 So many weeks ere the poor boys will can;
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece;
 So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs into a quiet grave;
 Ah! what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

Lives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
 To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?
 O, yes! it doth; a thousand fold it doth,
 And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
 Is far beyond a princely's delicates,
 His vands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Albano. Enter a Son that hath killed his Father, with the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
 This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 May be possessed with some store of crowns;
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 May yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
 Who's this? O God! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.
 O heavy times! begetting such events!
 From London by the king was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereav'd him.
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O pitious spectacle! O bloody times!
 Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity,
 Weep, wretched man, I'll add thee tear for tear;
 And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with
 grief.

Enter a Father that hath killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold,
 For I have bought it with a hundred blows.
 But let me see: is this our foeman's face?
 Ah! no, no, no, it is mine only son.
 Ah! boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye: see, see! what showers aris'

Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart.
 O! pity, God, this miserable age,
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, malicious, and unnatural,
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
 O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O! that my death would stay these ruthless deeds,
 O! pity, pity; gentle heaven, pity,
 The red rose and the white are on his face,
 The fatal colours of our striving houses;
 The one his purple blood right well resembles;
 The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth
 With one rose, and let the other flourish!
 If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother for a father's death
 Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my
 son

Shed tears and ne'er be satisfied!

K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances

Misthink the king and not be satisfied!

Son. Was ever son so riel'd a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep
 my fill. [Exit with the body.]

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet:

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;
 My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
 And so obsequious will thy father be,
 Even for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valliant sons,
 I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
 For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

[Exit with the body.]

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgown with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are.

*Alarum. Excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGARET,
 PRINCE OF WALES, and ENTER.*

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull,
 Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord, towards Berwick post again.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
 Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
 With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
 And bloody steel grasp'd in their treful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence again.

Rich. Away! for vengeance comes alone with them.

Nay stay not to expose him, make speed, or else come after: I'll away!

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:

Nay that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whither the queen intends. Forward! away!
[Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—The Same.

A loud alarm. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns the noble ont; ay, here it dies
Which, while I live, shall love King Henry light.

O Lancaster! I have overthrown
More than my life, my being with my soul.

My love and fear do many friends to thee;
And now I fall, thy tough conmixtures melt,

Impairing Henry, strengthening misprout York:
The common people swarm like summer flies;

And whether fly the gnats but to the sun?
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?

O Phobus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phethon should check thy fiery steeds;

Thy burning car never had scor'd the earth;
And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should

do,
Or as thy father and his father did,

Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;

I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death,

And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace,
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?

And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootsless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds;
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight;

The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
For at their hands I have deserved no pity.

The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.

Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest,
I stab'd your fathers' bosoms, spilt my breast.

[He faints.]

Vacuum and Retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and SOLIKERS.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune
bids us pause,

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful
looks.

Some troops pursue the bloody-mind'd queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,

As doth a gull, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave;

And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[CLIFFORD groans and dies.]

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.

Edw. See who it is: and now the battle's ended.

If friend or foe let him be gently us'd.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,

But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly
spring,

I mean our princely father, Duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down
the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;
Instead whereof let this supply the room:

Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening
sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
[Attendants bring the body forward.]

War. I think his understanding is bereft.

Speak, Clifford; dost thou know who speaks to
thee?

Dark cloudy death o'er shades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O! would he did; and so perhaps he doth;

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager
words.

Rich. Clifford! ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootsless penitence.

War. Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pittiest Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you
now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What! not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard!

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath,
I know by that he's dead; and, by my soul,

If this right hand would buy two hours' life
That I in all despite might rull at him,
This hand should chop it off, and with the lashing
blood

Stille the villain whose unstanch'd thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy. 84

War. Ay, but he's dead; off with the traitor's
head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands,
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crown'd England's royal king: 88
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to
France,

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen.
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread 92

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears.
First will I see the coronation; 96

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.
Edu. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For on thy shoulder do I build my seat, 100
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester;
And George, of Clarence; Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do and make as him pleaseth best. 105

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester,
For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut! that's a foolish observation: 108
Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to London,
To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—A Chase in the North of England.

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

First Keeper. Under this thick grown brake
we'll shroud ourselves;

For through this laund anon the deer will come;
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer. 4

Sec. Keeper. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

First Keeper. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best: 5
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day

In this self place where now we mean to stand.
Sec. Keeper. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past. 12

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,
Thy balm washed off wherewith thou wast
anointed: 17

No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee; 20
For how can I help them, and not myself?

First Keeper. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,
For wise men say it is the wisest course. 25

Sec. Keeper. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

First Keeper. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid; 28

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost; 32
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving
words.

By this account then Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much: 36
Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild whilst she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To hear and see her plights, her brinish tears. 40

Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
She on his left side craving aid for Henry;

He on his right asking a wife for Edward. 44
She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more:

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the
wrong, 48

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
O Margaret! thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou wert'st forlorn.

Sec. Keeper. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to: 56

A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

Sec. Keeper. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough. 60

Sec. Keeper. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Nor deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content; 64
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

Sec. Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown content and you must be contented
To go along with us; for, as we think, 68
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath? 72

Sec. Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?

Sec. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old; 76

My father and my grandfather were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me;
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

First Keep. No; 80
For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?

Ah! simple men, you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face, 84

And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust; 88
Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings: command, and I'll obey. 93

First Keep. We are true subjects to the king, King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is. 96

First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, leave; your king's name be obey'd!

And what God will, that let your king perform;
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Alban's field

This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slai-
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:

Her suit is now, to repossess those lands; 4
Which we in justice cannot well deny,

Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life

Glo. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit; 8

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Yea; is it so?
I see the lady hath a thing to grant 12

Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind!

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Silence!

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit, 16

And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:

May it please your highness to resolve me now,
And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me. 20

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall pleasure you,
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] I fear her rot, unless she chance to fall. 24

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Nay, whip me, then; he'll rather give her two. 28

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

K. Edw. Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then. 32

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch. [Retiring with CLARENCE.]

K. Edw. Now, tell me, madam, do you love your children? 36

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good. 40

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them? 44

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask. 45

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] He plies her hard, and much valu wears the marble.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] As red as fire 'may, then her wax must melt.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task? 52

K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks. 56

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy.

K. Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. What love think'st thou I sue so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers:

That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love. 64

L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive Your highness wishes at, if I am aright. 66

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dowry; 72

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightly.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination 76

Accords not with the sadness of my suit: Please you dismiss me, either with 'ay,' or 'no.'

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request.

No, if thou dost say 'no' to my demand. 80

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] He is the blindest woeer in Christendom.

K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty; 84

Her words do show her wit incomparable; All her perfections challenge sovereignty; One way or other, she is for a king; And she shall be my love, or else my queen. 88

Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:

I am a subject fit to jest withal, But far unfit to be a sovereign. 92

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,

I speak no more than what my soul intends; And that 's to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto. 96

I know I am too mean to be your queen, And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You caviel, widow: I did mean, my queen.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your viceroy my sons should call you father. 100

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children:

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor, Have other some; why, 'tis a happy thing 104

To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glo. [Aside to CLARENCE.] The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.

Clar. [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shrift. 108

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least. 112

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both 116

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,

And brought as prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Hen. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower.

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.

Well, go you along. Lords, to her honourably. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Glouc. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may
spring.

To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul's desire and me—
The lustful Edward's, the buried,—

Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,

To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!

Why then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a promontory,

And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;

And chides the sea that suanders him from thence.

Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way;
So do I wish the crown, being so far off,

And so I chide the means that keep me from it,
And so I say I'll cut the causes off,

Flattering me with impossibilities.
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erween's too much,

Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;

What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,

And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks,

O miserable thought! and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns.

Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb;
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,

She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe,
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;

To make an envious mountain on my back;
Where sits deformity to mock my body;

To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,

Like to a chinos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.

And am I then a man to be belov'd?
O monstrous fault! to harbour such a thought.

Then, since this earth a world's no joy to me,
But by command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,

I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown;
And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,

Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head

Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For many lives stand between me and home;
And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns and is rent with the thorns.

Seeking a way and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But tolling desperately to find it out,
Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.

Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile,
And cry, 'Content,' to that which grieves my
heart.

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.

I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
Deceive more sily than Ulysses could,

And, like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can add colours to the chameleon,
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,
And set the murderous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut! were it further off, I'll pluck it down.

[Exit.]

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,

Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewidoth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now
Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days;

But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to a humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in care.

K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like
thyself,

And sit thee by our side. [Seats her by him.]
Yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue thy sorrows leave to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is of a king become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn
While proud and lous Edward Duke of York
Usurps the regal title and the seat

Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled,
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,

And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour
thee.

Q. Mar. O! but impatience waiteth on true
sorrow:

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Dissevering from his state, Q. MARGARET

MARGARET

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Ardon,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;

And then to crave a league of amity;
And lastly to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant

That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is gone.

War. [To Bona.] And, gracious madam, in our King's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,

Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me
speak,

Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest
love,

But from deceit bred by necessity;

For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,
That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,

Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's
son,

Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour;
For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,

Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth
wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!
Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art prince than she is queen

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,

Who by his prowess conquer'd all France;
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth
discourse,

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?

Methinks these peers of France should smile at
that.

But for the rest, yet all a pedegree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time

To make prescription for a king's sole worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyedst thirty years ago?
And not bewray thy treason with thy tongue?

War. Can Oxford, that did swear to me the
right,

Now buckler falsehood with a perjure?
For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Oxf. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death? and more than so, my

father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this woman,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.
K. Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford

Vouchsafe of our request to stand aside,

While I use further conference with Warwick.

[They stand aloof.]

Q. Mar. Heaven grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not! 112

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy consideration

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath to link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon is drawn my credit and mine
honour. 116

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Lew. Then further, all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120
I into our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may besecm a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant, 124

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain, 128
I bless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be
mine:

To Warwick.] Yet I confess that often ere this
day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire. 133

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd.
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English
king. 140

Q. Mar. Decentful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make good my suit:

Before thy coming hither was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still I friend to him and Margaret! 144

But if you wish to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,

Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised. 148

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease,
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose. 152

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,

And better 'twere you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace! impudent and shameless
Warwick, peace; 156

Proud setter up and puller down of kings;

I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love; 160
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn windeth within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or
thee.

Enter a Post.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you

Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague: 164
These from our king unto your majesty;

[To MARGARET.] And, madam, these for you,
from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters.]

Orf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at
his. 168

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:

I hope all's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys. 172

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? 176

Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. 180

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;

No more my king, for he dishonours me; 184
But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? 188
Did I impale him with the royal crown?

Did I put Henry from his native right?
And am I question'd at the last with shame?

Shame on himself! for my desert is honour: 192
And, to repair my honour, lost for him,

I here renounce him and return to Henry.
My noble queen, let former grudges pass.

And henceforth I am thy true servant. 196
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200
And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeign'd friend,
That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers, 204
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:
And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, 208
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton lust than honour,
Or than for strength and safety of our country.
Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be re-veng'd, 212
But by thy help to this distressed queen?
Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor
Henry live,
Unless thou rescue him from foul despair:
Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one. 216
War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with
yours.
K. Lew. And mine with hers, and Bona and Margaret's.
Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd
You shall have aid. 220
Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.
K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return
in post,
And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over usquers,
To reveal it with him and his new bride. 224
Thou seest what's past; go fear thy king withal.
Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. 228
Q. Mar. Tell him, why mourning weeds are bid aside,
And I am ready to put armour on.
War. Tell him from me, that he hath done
me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 't be long.
There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Messenger.
K. Lew. But, Warwick, 233
Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle;
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen 236
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.
Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt:
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?
War. This shall us be my constant loyalty:
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.
Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion. 244
Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick:
And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it; 249
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.
[He gives his hand to WARWICK.
K. Lew. Why stay we now? Those soldiers shall be levied,
And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral, 252
Shall waite them over with our royal fleet.
I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.
[Exeunt all except WARWICK.
War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe: 257
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pity Henry's misery, 264
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.

Act IV.

Scene I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET,
MONTAGUE, and Others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Bath not our brother made a worthy choice?
Clar. Alas! you know, 'tis far from hence to
France; 4
How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes
the king.
Glo. And his well-chosen bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think. 8
Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended,
LADY GREY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD,
HASTINGS, and Others.
K. Edw. Now, brother Clarence, how like you
our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half discontent?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl
of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage and in judgment
That they'll take no offence at our abuse. 13
K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Lewis and Warwick: I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my
will. 16
Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king:
Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo. Not I: 20

No, God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd
Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and 'twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside, 24

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey
Should not become my wife and England's queen:

And you too, Somerset and Montague,

Speak freely what you think. 28

Clar. Then this is mine opinion: that King

Lewis

Becomes your enemy for mocking him

About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge, 32

Is now dishonour'd by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance 36

Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of Itself

England is safe, if true within itself? 40

Mont. Yes; but the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting
France:

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable, 44

And with their helps only defend ourselves:
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford. 48

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? It was my will and grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law.

Glo. And yet methinks your Grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales 52

Unto the brother of your loving bride:
She better would have fitted me or Clarence:

But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd
the heir 56

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence, is it for a wife that thou art discontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment. 61

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker on mine own behalf;

And to that end I shortly mind to leave you. 64

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be
king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen, 68

Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent;

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine, 72

So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee, 76

So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?

Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands; 80

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. [Aside.] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news 84

From France?

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few
words;

But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate. 88

K. Edw. Go to, we parlou thee: therefore, in brief,

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
them.

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart these were his very
words: 92

'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over musquers,

To revel it with him and his new bride.'

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry. 96

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:

'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.' 100

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;

She had the wrong. But what said Henry's
queen?

For I have heard that she was there in place.

Mess. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning weeds are done, 104

And I am ready to put armour on.'

K. Edw. Belike she needs to play the Amazon.

But what saith Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty Than all the rest, discharged me with these
words: 109

'Tell him from me that he hath done me
wrong.

And therefore I'll overcome him ere't be long.'

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words? 112

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship. 116

That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's
daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast.
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.

You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET, follows.

Glo. [Aside.] Not I. 124

My thoughts aim at a further matter; I stay not for love of Edward, but the crown

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen,
And haste is needful in this desperate case. 129

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war:
They are already, or quickly will be huddled: 132

Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Enter PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.

But ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance:
Tell me if you love Warwick more than me? 137

If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends;
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow. 141

That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause! 144

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand
you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exit.

Scene II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French and other Forces.War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes
well;

The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence come!

Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends? 4

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick;

And welcome Somerset: I hold it cowardlike,

To rest mistrustful where a noble heart 8

Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;

Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's
brother

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:

But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine. 12

And now what rests, but in night's coverture,

Thy brother being carelessly unarm'd,

His soldiers lurking in the towns about,

And hut attended by a simple guard, 16

We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?

Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede,

With sleight and manhood stole to Rheus tents, 20And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds;So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's guard

And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him, 24

For I intend but only to surprise him.

You, that will follow me to this attempt,

Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry, 'Henry!']

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort. 28

For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exit]

Scene III.—EDWARD'S Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen to guard the KING'S tent.First Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;

The King, by this, is set him down to sleep.

Sec. Watch. What, will he not to bed?First Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow 4

Never to lie and take his natural rest

Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

Sec. Watch. To-morrow then belike shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report. 8

Third Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman
Is that

That with the King here resteth in his tent?

First Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

Third Watch. O! Is it so? But why commands the king

That his chief followers lodge in towns about
him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field?

See, Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because the more dangerous.

Third Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness;

Is he it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

First Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage,

See, it's a. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

But to defend his person from night foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and FLECK.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never!
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

First Watch. Who goes there?

See, Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[WARWICK and the rest cry all, 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard; who fly crying, 'Arm! Arm!'
WARWICK and the rest following
them.]

*Drums beating, and Trumpets sounding, re-enter WARWICK and the rest bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair,
GLOUCESTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage.*

Son. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings; let them go;
here's the duke.

K. Edw. The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted last,

Thou call'dst me king!

War. Ay, but the case is altered

When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

Then I degrad'd you from being king.

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Was't how should you govern any kingdom.

That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife,

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the people's welfare,

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?

N. Then, I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself, and all thy complies,
Edward will always bear himself as king:

Though Fortune's malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king:

[Takes off his crown.
But Henry now shall wear the English crown, and
And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow.

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,

See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd

Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.

When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer

Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him;

Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit, led out; SOMERSET with him.

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to
do,

But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment,

And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard
Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares;

And, as I further have to understand,

Is now committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of
grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:

Warwick my loss, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb

This is it that makes me bridle passion

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs.

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English
crown. 24

Ric. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,

To set the crown once more on Henry's head;
Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down. 25

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,—
For trust not him that hath once broken faith,—
I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary.

To save at least the — of Edward's right: 26
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come, therefore; let us fly while we may fly:
If Warwick take us we are sure to die. Exeunt

Scene V. A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others.

Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William
Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefest thickets of the park
Thus stands the case. You know, our king, my brother, 4

Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself. 2
I have advertis'd him by secret means,

That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends, with horse and men
To set him free from his captivity. 1

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest, 17

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?

Glo. Brother, the time and ease requireth
haste.

Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hunt. To Lynn, my lord; and thence from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forward-
ness.

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'Tis no time to talk. 21

K. Edw. Huntsman, what sayst thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be long'd.

Glo. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell; shield thee from Warwick's frown,

And pray that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt]

Scene VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMER-SET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE,
Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And terr'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows into joys, 4
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if a humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty. 5

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using
me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;

As such a pleasure as enaged birds 1
Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts

At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty.

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free, 17
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer Fortune's spite

By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me, 2
And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars, Warwick, although my head still wear the
crown,

I here resign my government to thee. 24
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your Grace hath still been fann'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and availing Fortune's malice; 27

For few men rightly temper with the stars;
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,

For choosing me when Clarence is in place,
Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity
Adjudg'd an olive branch and laurel crown,

As likely to be blest in peace, and war,
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands;

Now join your hands, and with your hands your
hearts.

That no dissension hinder government :
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To shew rebuke and my Creator's praise. 44

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent,

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content : 45

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place ;
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease. 50

And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd. 56

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, for I command no more,
That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed :
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed. 64

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope! [Lays his hand on his head.] If secret powers suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.

His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown, 70

His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend? 77

Post. That Edward is escap'd from your brother,

And is, as he hears since, to Brittany.

War. Unroury news! but how made he escape? 81

Post. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester,

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side,

And from the bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him :
For hunting was his daily exercise.

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide. 88

[Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, Lieutenant, and Attendant.]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's;

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars before 't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy 92
Did glad my heart with hope of this young

Richmond,

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him to his harm and ours :

Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst, 96
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of evil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown,
'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall

down. 101

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.
Come, therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—Before York.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Force.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends,
And says, that once more I shall interchange

My waned state for Henry's regal crown. 4
Well have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy :

What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurch haven before the gates of

York, 8

But that we enter, as into our dukedom?
Glo. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not

this ;

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within. 12

K. Edw. Tush, man! abolements must not now affright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them. 16

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarn'd of your coming,

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves ;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your king, 20

Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York.
May. True, my good lord, I know you for no less,

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone. 24

Glo. [Aside.] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are King Henry's friends. 28

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be opened. [Exit, with Aldermen, above.]

Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded.

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 'twere not 'long of him; but being enter'd, 32

I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade

Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and two Aldermen.

K. Edw. So, Master Mayor: these gates must not be shut

But in the night, or in the time of war. 36

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; [Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town and thee,

And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Enter MONTGOMERY and Forces.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery, our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. 41

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! but why come you in arms?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do. 44

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim

Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again. 48

I came to serve a king and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begun.]

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile; and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? In few words, 53

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,

I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone

To keep them back that come to succour you.

Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title? 57

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger then we'll make our claim;

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning. 60

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand; The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right. 65

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion. 68

Hast. Sound trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd;

Come, fellow soldier, make thou proclamation.

[Gives him a paper. Flourish.]

Sold. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c. 73

Mont. And whoso'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight.

[Throws down his gauntlet.]

All. Long live Edward the Fourth! 76

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery;—and thanks unto you all:

If Fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;

And when the morning sun shall raise his ear

Above the border of this horizon, 81

We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Ah, froward Clarence, how evil it becoms thee

To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother! 85

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day;

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.]

Scene VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march again to London; 4

And many glibly people flock to him.

Oxf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench. 8

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted

friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war:

Those will I muster up; and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent, 12

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

th thee:

aft And

Men will inell'n'd to hear what thou command'st:
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well beloved
In Oxfordshire, shalt muster up thy friends.
My sovereign, with the loving citizens,
Like to his Island girl in with the ocean, 20
Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,
Shall rest in London till we come to him.
Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply
Farewell, my sovereign. 24

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clare. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness'
hand.

K. Hen. Well minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so, I take my
leave. 25

Oxf. [Kissing Henry's hand.] And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords: let's meet at Coventry. 32

[Exeunt all but KING HENRY and EXETER.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

methinks the power that Edward hath in field
Should not be able to encounter mine. 37

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my need hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays; 41

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My milkiness hath allay'd their swelling griefs.

My mercy dried their water flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth; 44

Nor much oppressed them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge though they much cr'd.

Then why should they love Edward more than
me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace; 47
And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shout within 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!]

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry!
Hear him hence! 52

And once again pro-him us King of England.
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow;

Now stop thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry
And swell so much the higher by their ebb. 57

Hence with him to the Tower! let him not speak. [Exeunt some with KING HENRY

and, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains;

The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay, 60
Cold biting winter nears our hop'd-for day.

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares:

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.
[Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I. Coventry.

Enter, upon the Walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

First Mess. By this at Dunstons, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague? 4

Where is the post that came from Montague?

Sec. Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving
son?

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now? 8

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces.

And do expect him here some two hours hence.
[Drum heard.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam
lies: 12

The drum your honour hears marcheth from
Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly
know.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle. 16

Glo. See how the smily Warwick mans the wall.

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward
come? 20

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair? 26

K. Edw. No, Warwick, wilt thou open the city gates,

Speak gentle words and humbly bend thy knee? —
Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy? 31

And he shall pardon thee these outrages. 34

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces
hence,

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down? —
Call Warwick patron, and be penitent;

And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the king;

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give:

I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;

And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner;

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,

What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whilst he thought to steal the single ten,

The king was silly fingered from the deck.

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,

And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so: yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down;

Say, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,

Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee.

K. Edw. Shall how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend;

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

Shall, whilst thy head is warm and new cut off,

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood:

'Wind changing Warwick now can change no more.'

Enter OXFORD, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edw. So other foes may see upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt

Will issue out again and bid us battle

If not, the city being but of small defence,

We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

War. O! welcome, Oxford! for we wait thy help.

Enter MONTAGNE, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

Mont. Montagne, Montagne, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. Thou art thy brother both shall buy this treason

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with Soldiers, drum, and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York;

And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with Forces, drum, and colours.

War. And lo! where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle;

With whom an upright zeal to right prevails

More than the nature of a brother's love.

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking the red rose out of his hat.]

Look here, I throw my infancy at thee:

I will not rinate my father's house,

Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,

And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou,

Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,

To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother and his lawful king?

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath were more impety

Than Jephthah's, when he sacrificed his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made

That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;

With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee—

As I will meet thee if thou stir abroad—

To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,

And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;

And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,

For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more beloved,

That, if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate,

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother

like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas! I am not escap'd here for defence:

I will away towards Barnet presently,

And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.

Lords, to the field: Salute George and victory!

[March. Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Murmurs and Excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK, wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there; die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwlek was a long that fear'd us all.
Now Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwlek's bones may keep thine company.

[Exit.]
War. Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe, 5

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwlek?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows, 3

That I must yield my body to the earth,
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the rambling lion slept, 3
Whose top branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil, 16

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
To search the secret treasons of the world;

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were liken'd oft to klugly sepulchres; 20

For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwlek bent his brow?

Lo! now my glory smear'd in dust and blood;
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had, 24

Even now forsake me; and, of all my lands
Is nothing left me but my body's length.

Why, what is pomp, rite, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must. 28

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah! Warwlek, Warwlek, wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again.

The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;

Even now we heard the news. Ah! couldst thou fly, 32

War. Why then, I would not fly. Alas! Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile.

Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congeal'd blood

That gries my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah! Warwlek, Montague hath breathed his last; 40

And to the latest gasp, erieh out for Warwlek,
And said, 'Commend me to my valiant brother.'
And more he would have said; and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a clamour in a vault, 44
That might not be disting'ish'd; but at last
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,
'O! farewell, Warwlek!'

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves; 48

For Warwlek bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven. [Dies.]

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power.

[Exeunt, bearing off WARWICK'S body.]

Scene III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But in the midst of this bright-shining day,

I spy a black, suspelous, threatening cloud, 4
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easeful western bed:

I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
Hath rais'd in Galloway, have arriv'd our coast, 8

And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud.

And blow it to the source from whence it came;
Thy very eyes will see those vapours up, 12

For every cloud ere it rises not a storm.

Glo. The queen's is valid thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd 16

Her factien will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury.

We, having now the best at Barnet field, 20
Will thither straight, for willingness bids way;

And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.

Strike up the drum! cry 'Courage!' and away.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,

The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost, 4
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?

Yet lives our pilot still: is't meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad
With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
And give more strength to that which hath too
much;

Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
Ah! what a shame! ah, what a fault were this.
Say, Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our top-mast; what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of the

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset, another goodly mast?
The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
And, though miskeful why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skillful pilot's charge?
We will not from the helm, to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind say
no.

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair,
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a rag'd fatal rock?
All those the enemies to our poor bark,
Say you can swim; alas! 'tis but a while;
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink;
Bostride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you famish; that's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you would fly from us,
That there is no hope for mercy with the brood.

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks.

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided
Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant
spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these
words,

Infuse his breast with manly valour,
And make him, naked, fall a man at arms.
I speak not this, as doubting any here,
For did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another.
And make him of like spirit to himself,
If any such be here, as God forbid!
Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a repute,
And warriors faint! why, twere perpetua
shame.

O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee; long mayst thou live
To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,

Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
if he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at
hand,

Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his polley

To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart to see your forwardness.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle, hence we will not budge.

*March. Enter, at a distance, KING EDWARD,
CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces.*

K. Edw. Brave followers, under stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your
strength,

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire,

For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out;

Give signal to the flight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say

My tears gath'ring; for every word I speak,

Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.

Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your
sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,

His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;

And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.

You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both armies.]

Scene V. — Another Part of the Same.

Alarums. Excursions; and afterwards a retreat. Then enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces, with QUEEN MAR-GARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Haines Castle straight;

For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, hear them hence; I will not hear them speak
words.

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. 8

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward shall have a high reward, and he his life?

Glo. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant: let us hear him speak. 12

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to? 16

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth:

Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee, 20

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah! that thy father had been so resolute.

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster. 24

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;

His enrrish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men. 28

Glo. For God's sake, take away that scolding scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clare. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all un-lutful; 33

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjur'd George,

And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all, I am your better, traitors as ye are; 36

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this raller here. [Stabs him.]

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.]

Clare. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.]

Q. Mar. O, kill me too! 41

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much.

Clare. Why should she live, to fill the world with words? 44

K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king, my brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious matter;

Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news. 48

Clare. What? what?

Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers! 52

They that stabb'd Cesar shed no blood at all,

Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,

If this foul deed were by, to equal it:

He was a man; this, in respect, a child; 56

And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?

No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak:

And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. 60

Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untrimely crop'd!

You have no children, butchers! If you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse: 64

But if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off

As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her! go, bear her hence perforce. 68

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here:

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death.

What! wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clare. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease. 72

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clare. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou us'est to forswear thyself:

'Twas sh before, but now 'tis charity. 76

What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher.

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here: murder is thy aim-deed;

Pettioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back. 80

K. Edw. Away, I say! I charge ye, bear her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly.]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clare. To London, all his post; and, as I guess, 84

To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London
And see our gentle queen how well she fares; so
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exit.

Scene VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending.
Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Good day, my lord. What! at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;

'Tis sin to flatter, 'good' was little better;
'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were alike, 4
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'good
lord.'

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves; we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. 9
What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty
mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer. 12

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye 16
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl!
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

K. Hen. I, Diomedus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun, that scard the wings of my sweet boy.
Thy brother Edward, and thyself the sea, 24
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words.
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
Than can my ears that tragic history. 28

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;
If murdering innocents be executing, 32

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou dar'dst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine. 36

And thus I prophesy; that many a thousand,
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,
And many an old man's sigh, and many a
widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye, 40
Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',

And orphans for their parents' timeless death,
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign; 44
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees!

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discords sung. 48
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's
hope;

To wit an indigent deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. 52
Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast
born,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world;
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou cam'st— 56

Glo. I'll hear no more: die, prophet, in thy speech! [Stabs him.

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd,
K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.

Glo. What! will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sluk in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's
death!

O! may such purple tears be always shed 64
From those that wish the downfall of our
house.

If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither, [Stabs him again.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear. 68

Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say

I came into the world with my legs forward. 72

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd, and the women cried
'O! Jesu bless us, he is born with teeth.'

And so I was; which plainly signified 76
That I should snarl and bite and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body
so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother; 80

And this word 'love,' which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like ome another
And not in me! I am no brother.

Clarence, beware; thou art a traitor from the blat! 84

But I will sort a pitchy 88
For I will buzz abroad

That Edward shall be 92
And then, to purge his feverish death, 96
King Henry and the prince are gone;

Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest,
 Counting myself but bad till I be best.
 I'll throw thy body in another room, 92
 And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.
 [Exit with the body.]

Scene VII.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne: QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
 Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies,
 What vallant foemen like to autumn's corn,
 Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride!
 Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd;
 For hardy and undoubted champions;
 Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
 And two Northumberlands: two braver men
 Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's
 sound;
 With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,
 That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
 And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
 Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat, 13
 And made our footstool of security.
 Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy,
 Young Ned, for thee thine uncles and myself 16
 Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
 Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
 That thou might'st repossess the crown in
 peace;
 And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. 20
Glo. [Aside.] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;

For yet I durst not look'd on in the world.
 This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;
 And heave it shall some weight, or break my
 back. 24

Work thou the way, and thou shalt execute.
K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen;
 And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your
 majesty, 28

I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
 Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit. 32

[Aside.] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
 And cried 'hail!' when as he meant all
 harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul desires lights,

Having my country, peace and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your Grace have done with Margaret? 37

Regular, her father, to the King of France hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
 And hither have they sent it for her ransom. 40

K. Edw. Away with her, and waite her hence to France.

And now what rests but that we spend the
 time

With stately triumphs, mirthful come shows,
 Such as befit the pleasure of the court? 44
 Sound, drums and trumpets! farewell, sour annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
 [Exeunt.]

Act I.

Scene I.—London. A Street.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried. 4
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;

Our stern alarms changed to merry meetings;
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures. 8
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber edw. III.
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
majesty 16
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;

has his page 11

I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
 Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
 Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time 20
 Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
 And that so lamely and unfashionable
 That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;
 Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace, 24
 Have no delight to pass away the time,
 Unless to see my shadow in the sun
 And desertion mine own deformity: or my own
 And therefore, since I cannot prove a lever, 28
 To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
 I am determin'd to prove a villain,
 And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
 Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous, 32
 By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
 To set my brother Clarence and the king
 In deadly hate the one against the other: page 16
 And if King Edward be as true and just 36
 As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
 This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
 About a prophecy, which says, that G
 Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. 40 Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day: what means this armed
 guard

That waits upon your Grace?

Clar. His majesty,
 Tending my person's safety, hath appointed 44
 This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.
Glo. Alack! my lord, that fault is none of
 yours;

He should, for that, commit your godfathers. 48

O! belike his majesty hath some intent

That you should be new-christen'd in the Tower.

But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest 52

As yet I do not: but, as I can learn,

He hearkens after prophecies and dreams;

And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,

And says a wizard told him that by G 56

His issue disinherited should be;

And, for my name of George begins with G,

It follows in his thought that I am he.

These, as I learn, and such like toys as these, 60

Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:

'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;

My Lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she 64

That tempers him to this extremity.

Was it not she and that good man of worship,

Antony Woodville, her brother there,

That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower, 68

From whence this present day he is deliver'd?

We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man secure

But the queen's kindred and night-walking heralds 72

That trudge betwixt the king and Mistress Shore.

Hear! you not what a humble suppliant

Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her delity 76
 Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what; I think it is our way,

If we will keep in favour with the king,

To be her men and wear her livery: 80

The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself,

Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
 women,

Are mighty gossips in our monarchy.

Brak. I beseech you. Graces both to pardon
 me; 84

His majesty hath straitly given in charge

That no man shall have private conference,

Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glo. Even so; an please your worship, Brakenbury, 88

You may partake of anything we say:

We speak no treason, man; we say the king

Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen

Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous; 92

We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,

A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing
 tongue;

And that the queen's kindred are made gentle-folks.

How say you, sir? can you deny all this? 96

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought
 to do.

Glo. Naught to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,

Were best to do it secretly, alone. 100

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave. Wouldst thou betray me?

Brak. I beseech your Grace to pardon me;
 and withal

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey. 105

Glo. We are the queen's subjects, and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;

And whatsoever you will employ me in, 108

Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,

I will perform it to enfranchise you.

Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood

Touches me deeper than you can imagine. 112

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be
 long;

I will deliver you, or else lie for you :
Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce : farewell.
[Exit CLARENCE, BRAKENBURY, and Guard.

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er
return, 117

Simple, plain Clarence ! I do love thee so
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands. 120
But who comes here ? the new-deliver'd Hastings !

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious
lord !

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain !

Well are you welcome to this open air. 124
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment ?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must :

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment. 128

Glo. No doubt, no doubt ; and so shall Clarence too ;

For they that were your enemies are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagles should be new'd, 132

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad ?

Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at
home ;

The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, 136
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now by Saint Paul, this news is bad
indeed.

O ! he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his royal person : 140
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed ?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

He cannot live, I hope ; and must not die 144 Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With less well steel'd with weighty arguments ;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent, 143

Clarence hath not another day to live :
Which done, God take King Edward to his
mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in !
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter. 152

What though I kill'd her husband and her
father,

The readiest way to make the wench amend
Is to become her husband and her father :

The which will I ; not all so much for love 156
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market :
Clarence still breathes ; Edward still lives and reigns ; 160
When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

Scene II.—London. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in an open coffin ; Gentlemen bearing halberds to guard it ; and LADY ANNE, as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I a while obscquously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Laneaster. 4

Poor key-cold figure of a holy king !

Pale ashes of the house of Laneaster !
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood !

Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost, 8
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,

Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these
wounds !

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life, 12
I pour the helpless halm of my poor eyes.

O ! curs'd be the hand that made these holes ;
Curs'd the heart that had the heart to do it !

Curs'd the blood that let this blood from
hence ! 16

More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,

Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives ! 20

If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,

Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view ; 24

And that be heir to his unhappiness !
If ever he have wife, let her be made

More miserable by the death of him
Than I am made by my young lord and thee ! 28

Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy
load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there ;
And still, as you are weary of the weight,

Rest you, whilst I lament King Henry's corpse. 32
[The Bearers take up the corpse and advance.]

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Stay, you that bear the corpse, and set it
down.

Anne. What black magiellan conjures up this fiend,

To stop devoted charitable deeds ?

Glo. Villains ! set down the corpse ; or, by Saint Paul, 36

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

First Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.]

Anne. What! do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas! I blame you not; for you are mortal, 44
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avaunt! thou dreadful minister of hell,
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have: therefore, be gone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake hence, and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims. 52

If thou delight to view thy helinous deeds,

Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O! gentlemen; see, see! dead Henry's wounds

Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh.

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity, 57

For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells:

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, 60

Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God! which this blood mad'st, revenge his death;

O earth! which this blood drink'st, revenge his death;

Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer dead, 64

Or earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,

As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,

Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity, 68

Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man:

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast. 72

Anne. O! wonderful, when devils tell the truth.

Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave, 76

By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,

By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. 80

Glo. Falser than tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself. 84

Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.

Anne. And by despairing shouldst thou stand excus'd!

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,

Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others. 88

Glo. Say that I slew them not.

Anne. Then say they were not slain; But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand. 92

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Queen Margaret saw

Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point. 96

Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

That never dreamt on aught but butcheries. 100

Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo. I grant ye.

Anne. First grant me, hedge-hog? Then, God grant me too

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!

O! he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. 105

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven, that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me, that helped to send him thither; 108

For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber. 112

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Anne. I hope so.

Glo. I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits, 116

And fall somewhat into a slower method,

Is not the cause of the timeless deaths

Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,

As blameful as the executioner? 120

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;

Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep

To undertake the death of all the world, 124

So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,

These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wrack; 128

You should not blemish it if I stood by:

As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; It is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life! 132

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. 136

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,

To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband. 140

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he could.

Anne. Name him.

Glo. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was he.

Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature. 144

Anne. Where is he?

Glo. Here. [She spitteth at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?

Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler tongue.

Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes. 149

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!

Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once; 152

For now they kill me with a living death.

Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops;

These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear;

No, when my father York and Edward wept 157

To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made

When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him;

Nor when thy war-like father like a child, 160

Told the sad story of my father's death,

And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,

That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,

Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,

My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear; 165

And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,

Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.

I never suet to friend, nor enemy; 168

My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words;

But, now thy beauty is propos'd my foe,

My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lip such scorn, for it was made 172

For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,

Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,

And let the soul forth that adareth thee, 177

I lay it open to the deadly stroke,

And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open: she offers at it with his sword.]

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry;

But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. 181

Nay, now dispatch; 'twas I that stab'd young

Edward; [She again offers at his breast.]

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.

[She lets fall the sword.]

Take up the sword again, or take up me. 184

Anne. Arise, dissembler; though I wish thy death,

I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage:

Speak it again, and, even with the word, 189

This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;

To both their deaths shalt thou be necessary. 192

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false.

Glo. Then never man was true. 196

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope? 200

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take is not to give.

[She puts on the ring.]

Glo. Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger, 204

Even so thy breast enclareth my poor heart;

Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted servant may

But beg one favour at thy gracious hand, 208

Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to Crosby-place; 213

Where, after I have solemnly interr'd

At Chertsey monastery this noble king,

And wet his grave with my repentant tears, 216

I will with all expedient duty see you:

For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you.

Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too 220

To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you, 224
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt LADY ANNE, TRESSSEL, and BERKELEY.]

Glo. Sirs, take up the corpse.

Gent. Toward Chertsey, noble lord?

Glo. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming. [Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.]

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd? 229

Was ever woman in this humour won?

I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.

What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,

To take her in her heart's extreme hate; 233

With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,

The bleeding witness of her hatred by;

Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me, 236

And nothing I to back my suit withal
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!

Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman, 244

Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,

Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,

The spacious world cannot again afford:

And will she yet abase her eyes on me, 248

That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet
prince,

And made her widow to a woeful bed?

On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?

On me, that halt and am misshapen thus? 252

My dukedom to a beggarly denier

I do mistake my person all this while;

Up to my life, she finds, although I cannot,

Myself to be a marvellous proper man. 256

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,

And entertain a score or two of tailors,

To study fashions to adorn my body:

Since I am crept in favour with myself, 260

I will maintain it with some little cost.

But first I'll turn you fellow in his grave,

And then return lamenting to my love.

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass, 264

That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

Scene III.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him
worse:

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry
words. 4

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide ou me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms. 8

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah! he is young; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloucester, 12

A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded
yet:

But so it must be if the king miscarry. 16

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal
Grace!

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley, 20

To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.

Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,

And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd

I hate not you for her proud arrogance. 24

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe

The envious slanders of her false accusers;

Or, if she be accus'd on true report,

Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds

From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham
and I,

Are come from visiting his majesty. 32

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment,
lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atone-
ment. 36

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my lord chamberlain;

And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! But that will never be. 40

I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Y 8

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:

Who are they that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not? 44
By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
Because I cannot flatter and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog, 48
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd 52
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your Grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong? 56

Or thee? or thee? or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal person,—
Whom God preserve better than you would wish!
'Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while, 60
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else, 64
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather

The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it. 69

Glo. I cannot tell; the world is grown so bad

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch:

Since every Jack became a gentleman 72
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester;

You envy my advancement and my friends'.
God grant we never may have need of you! 76

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions 80
Are daily given to ennoble those
That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, 84
I never did license his majesty

Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury, 88
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean
Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—

Glo. She may, Lord Rivers. Why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein, 96
And lay those honours on your high deserts.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she! marry with a king, 100 bachelor, a handsome stripling too.

your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs;
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty 105

Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.

I had rather be a country servantmaid

Than a great queen, with this condition, 108

To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at:
Small joy have I in England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apart.] And lessen'd be that small,
God, I beseech him!

Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me. 112

Glo. What I threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower. 116

'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. [Apart.] Out, devil! I remember them too well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. 120

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs,
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends; 124

To royalize his blood I spill mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.

Glo. In all which time you and your husband Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster; 128

And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere now, and what you are;
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick,

Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;
And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's; 140

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is. 144

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy
days

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,

We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king;

So should we you, if you should be our king. 148

Glo. If I should be! I had rather be a peddlar.

Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king.

As little joy you may suppose in me 153

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. As little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless. 156

I can no longer hold me patient. [Advancing.]

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from
me!

Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects, 161

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?

Ah! gentle villain, do not turn away.

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight? 164

But repetition of what thou hast
said;

I make before I let thee go.

Wert thou not banished on pain of
death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment 168

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou ow'st to me;

And thou, a kingdom; all of you, allegiance:

This sorrow that I have by right is yours, 172

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his war-like brows with paper,

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his
eyes; 176

And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Deuoune'd against thee, are all fallen upon
thee; 180

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. 185

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for '—

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all before
I came, 188

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with
heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment, 193

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?

Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?

Why then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick
curses! 196

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,

For Edward, my son, which was Prince of Wales,

Die in his youth by like untimely violence! 201

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!

Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss, 204

And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief, 208

Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!

Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—

And so wast thou, Lord Hastings,—when my son

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
him, 212

That none of you may live your natural age,

But by some unlook'd accident cut off.

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me. 216

If heaven have any grievous plague in store

Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O! let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,

And then hurl down their indignation 220

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace.

The worm of conscience! It begnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for t'—ors while thou liv'st

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, 225

Unless it be while some tormenting dream

Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog! 228

Thou that wast scard in thy nativity

The slave of nature and the son of hell!

Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!

Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins! 232

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret!
Q. Mar. Richard!
Glo. Ha!
Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy then, for I did think
 That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply. 237
 O! let me inake the period to my curse.
Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in 'Margaret.'
Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. 240
Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!
 Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
 Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
 Fool, fool! thou waiet'st a knife to kill thyself.
 The day will come that thou shalt wish for me
 To help thee curse this pols'nous bunch-back'd toad.
Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic
 curse,
 Lest to thy harm thou move our patience. 248
Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have ill mov'd mine.
Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
 Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects: 252
 O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.
Dor. Dispute not with her, she is innate.
Q. Mar. Peace! Master marquess, you are malap'rt:
 Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current. 256
 O! that your young nobility could judge
 What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!
 They that stand high have many blasts to shake
 them,
 And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.
Glo. Good counsel, marry: learn it, learn it,
 marquess. 261
Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
Glo. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high,
 Our aery bulldeth in the cedar's top, 264
 And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.
Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; alas!
 alas!
 Witness my son, now in the shade of death:
 Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy
 wrath 268
 Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
 Your aery bulldeth in our aery's nest:
 O God! that seest it, do not suffer it;
 As it was won with blood, lost be it so!
 272
Buck. Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to
 me:
 Unecharitably with me have you dealt,
 And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.
 My charity is outrage, life my shame; 277
 And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!
Buck. Have done, have done,
Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham! I'll kiss thy hand, 280
 In sign of league and aunity with thee:
 Now fair befall thee and thy noble house!
 Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
 Nor thou within the compass of my curse. 284
Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
 The lips of those that breathe them in the air.
Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,
 And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
 O Buckingham! take heed of yonder dog: 289 Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites
 His venom tooth will rankle to the death:
 Have not to do with him, beware of him; 292
 Sin, death and hell have set their marks on
 him,
 And all their ministers attend on him.
Glo. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious
 lord. 295
Q. Mar. What! dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,
 And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
 O! but remember this another day,
 When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,
 And say poor Margaret was a prophetess. 301
 Live each of you the subject to his hate,
 And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit.
Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her
 curses. 304
Riv. And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty.
Glo. I cannot blame her: by God's holy mother,
 She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
 My part thereof that I have done to her. 308
Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her
 wrong.
 I was too hot to do somebody good,
 That is too cold in thinking of it now. 312
 Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
 He is frank'd up to fattening for his palms:
 God pardon them that are the cause thereof!
Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion, 316
 To pray for them that have done scath to us.
Glo. So do I ever [Aside], being well-advise'd;
 For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you;
And for your Grace; and you, my noble lords, 321
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go
with me?

Riv. We wait upon your Grace.

[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.]

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begi<sup>n</sup>: to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad 325
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence, whom I indeed, have cast in dark-
ness,

I do beweepe to many simple gulls; 328
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now they believe it; and withal whet me 332
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy 336
With odd odd ends stol'n forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft! here come my executioners.
How now, my hardy, stout resolv'd mates! 340
Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

First Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitt'd where he is.

Glo. Well thou'it upon; I have it here about me: [Gives the warrant.]

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place. 345
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps 348
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

First Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;

Talkers are no good doers: be assur'd

We go to use our hands and not our tongues. 352

Glo. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools'

eyes fall tears:

I like you, lads; about your business straight;
Go, go, dispatch.

First Mur. We will, my noble lord.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your Grace so heavily today?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man, 4
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me. 3

Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
And in my company my brother Gloucester
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk 12
Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster,
That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along 16
Upon the glid'g footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main. 20
Lord, Lord! methought what pain it was to drown:

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wracks; 24
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea. 28

Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep, 32
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of
death

To gaze upon those secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive 36

To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood
Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk, 40
Which almost burst to belych it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after
life;

O! then began the tempest to my soul. 44
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cried aloud, 'What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?'
And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by 52
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,
'Clarence is come,—false, fleeing, perjurd Clarence,

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;— 56
Seize on him! Furies, take him unto torment.'
With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears

Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
you; 64

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O Brakenbury! I have done these things

That now give evidence against my soul,
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me.
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:
O! spare my guiltless wife and my poor children.
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me; 73
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord. God give your Grace good rest! [CLARENCE sleeps. 76

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide night.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations, 80
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles and low names,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. Ho! who's here? 84

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

First Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What! so brief? 88

Sec. Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.—

Let him see our commission, and talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to BRAKENBURY, who reads it. 149

Brak. I, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands: 92
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys.
I'll to the king; and signify to him 96
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

First Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom: fare you well.

[Exit BRAKENBURY.

Sec. Murd. What! shall we stab him as he sleeps? 101

First Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

Sec. Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake till the judgment-day. 105

First Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabbed him sleeping.

Sec. Murd. The urging of that word 'judgment' hath bred a kind of remorse in
me. 110

First Murd. What! art thou afraid?

Sec. Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

First Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute. 116

Sec. Murd. So I am, to let him live.

First Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester, and tell him so.

Sec. Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little: I hope my holy humour will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself
now? 124

Sec. Murd. Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward when the deed's done. 128

Sec. Murd. 'Zounds! he dies: I had forgot the reward.

First Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

Sec. Murd. In the Duke of Gloucester's purse.

First Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

Sec. Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go: there's few or none will entertain it. 136

First Murd. What if it come to thee again?

Sec. Murd. I'll not meddle with it; it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles; it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found; it beggars any man that keeps it; it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well, endeavours to trust to himself and live without it. 149

First Murd. 'Zounds! it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

Sec. Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee
but to make thee sigh.

First Murd. Tut, I am strong-framed; he cannot prevail with me. 156

Sec. Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we to this gear?

First Murd. Take him over the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

Sec. Murd. O, excellent device! make a sop of him. 164

First Murd. Soft! he wakes.

Sec. Murd. Strike!

First Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine. 169

First Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou? 172

First Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal. By the grace of God

First Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble. 176

First Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both Murd. To to, to— 181

Clar. To murder me?

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarce, have the hearts to tell me so, 184

And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

First Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again. 188

Sec. Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men

To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that doth accuse me? 192

What lawful quest have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Before I be convict by course of law, 196

To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope to have redemption

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart and lay no hands on me; 200

The deed you undertake is damnable.

First Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

Sec. Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King's kings

Hath in the table of his law commanded

That thou shalt do no murder: will you, then,

Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,

To hurl upon their heads that break his law. 209

Sec. Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing and for murder too:

Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight 212

In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

First Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

Didst break that vow, and, with thy treacherous blade

Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son. 216

Sec. Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

First Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us,

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed? 220

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:

He sends you not to murder me for this;

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed, 224

O! know you yet, he doth it publicly:

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;

He needs no indirect or lawless course

To cut off those that have offended him. 228

First Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet, That princely novice, was struck dead by thee.

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage. 232

First Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well. 236

If you are hir'd for need, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,

Who shall reward you better for my life.

Than Edward will for tidings of my death. 240

Sec. Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloucester hates you.

Clar. O, no! he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,

And charg'd us from our soul to love each other,

He little thought of this divided friendship:

But Gloucester think on this, and he will weep.

First Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to— 249

Clar. O! do not slander him, for he is kind.

First Murd. Right;

As snow in harvest. Thou deceiv'st thyself: 252

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,

That he would labour my delivery. 256

First Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

Sec. Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul, 260

To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,

That thou wilt war with God by murdering me?

O! sirs, consider, he that set you on 264

To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

Sec. Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent and save your souls.

First Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish, 268

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent from liberty, as I am now,
If two such murd'ers as yourselves came to you,
Would not entreat for life? 272

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;

O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,

As you would beg, were you in my distress: 276

A begging prince what beggar pities not?

Sec. Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

First Murd. [Stabs him.] Take that, and that:

If all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. 280

[Exit with the body.]

Sec. Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd!

How false, like Pilate, would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous murder.

Re-enter first Murderer.

First Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? 284

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you

have been.

Sec. Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;

For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.]

First Murd. So do not I: go, coward as thou

art. 289

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,

Till that the duke give order for his burial:

And when I have my need, I will away; 292

For this will out, and here I must not stay.

[Exit.]

Act II.

Scene I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others.

K. Edu. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work.

You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence; 4

And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love. 8

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edu. Take heed, you dally not before your king; 12

Lest he that is the supreme King of kings

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award

Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edu. Madam, yourself are not exempt

in this,

Nor you, son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you;

You have been factious one against the other. 20

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more

remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine! 24

K. Edu. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,

Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [They embrace.]

K. Edu. Now, princely Buckingham, seal

thou this league 29

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,

And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. [To the QUEEN.] Whenever Buckingham

doth turn his hate 32

Upon your Grace, but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me

With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend, 36

And most assured that he is a friend,

Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,

Be he unto me! This do I beg of God,

When I am cold in love to you or yours. 40

[They embrace.]

K. Edu. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sleekly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here

To make the blessed period of this peace. 44

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king and

queen;

And princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edu. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the

day. 48

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity:

Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,

Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign

lord. 52

Among this princely heap, if any here,

By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage, 56

Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace :
This death to me to be at enmity ; 60
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.
First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous service ;
Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham, 64
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us ;
Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey, of you,
That all without desert have frown'd on me ;
Of you, Lord Woodville, and Lord Seales, of you ;
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen ; indeed, of all. 69
I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds.
More than the infant that is born to-night : 72
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter :
I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
My sov'reign lord, I do beseech your highness 76
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this
To be so flouted in this royal presence ?
Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead ? 80

[They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corse.
K. Edu. Who knows not he is dead ! who knows he is ?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is
this !

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the
rest ? 84

Dor. Ay, my good lord ; and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.
K. Edu. Is Clarence dead ? the order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order
died, 88

And that a winged Mercury did bear ;
Some tardy cripple bore the countermind,
That came too lag to see him buried.
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal, 92
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sov'reign, for my service
done ! 96

K. Edu. I pr'ithec, peace : my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edu. Thou say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's
life ; 100
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman

Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

K. Edu. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's
death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave ?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought ;
And yet his punishment was bitter death.
Who sued to me for him ? who, in my wrath,
Kneel'd at my feet, and bad me be advis'd ? 103
Who spoke of brotherhood ? who spoke of love ?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me ?
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury, 112
When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,
And said, ' Dear brother, live, and be a king ?'
Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me 116
Even in his garments ; and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb cold night ?
All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you 120
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.

But when your carters or your waiting-vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer, 124
You straight are on your knees for pardon,
pardon ;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you ;
But for my brother not a man would speak,
Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself 123
For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all
Have been beholding to him in his life,
Yet none of you would once beg for his life,
O God ! I fear, thy justice will take hold 132
On me and you and mine and yours for this.
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O ! poor
Clarence !

[Ezeunt KING EDWARD, QUEEN, HASTINGS, RIVERS, DORSET, and GREY.]

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness. Mark'd you
not

How that the guilty kindred of the queen 136
Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence's
death ?

O ! they did urge it still unto the king :
God will revenge it. Come, lords ; will you go
To comfort Edward with our company ? 140

Buck. We wait upon your Grace. [Ezeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE.

Boy. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead ?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you wring your hands, and beat your breast,

And cry—' O Clarence, my unhappy son ?' 4

Boy. Why do you look on us, and shake your
head,

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,
if that our noble father be alive ?

- Duch.* My pretty cousins, you mistake me much; 8
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death;
It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.
Boy. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead. 12
The king mine uncle is to blame for it:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.
Daugh. And so will I. 16
Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.
Boy. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle Gloucester 20
Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pit'ed me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek; 24
Hale me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.
Duch. Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle shape,
And with a virtuous vizard hide deep vice. 28
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dings he drew not this deceit.
Boy. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?
Duch. Ay, boy. 32
Boy. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?
- Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, distractedly; RIVERS and DORSET following her.*
- Q. Eliz.* Oh! who shall hinder me to wail and weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul, 36
And to myself become an enemy.
Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?
Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragick violence:
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead! 40
Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
If you will live, lament: If die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him 45
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.
Duch. Ah! so much interest have I in thy sorrow
As I had title in thy noble husband. 48
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his images;
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death, 52
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
- And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms, 57
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs,
Clarence and Edward. O! what cause have I—
Thine being but a moiety of my grief— 60
To overgo thy plights, and drown thy cries?
Boy. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's death;
How can we aid you with our kindred tears?
Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd; 64
Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept.
Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon, 69
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world!
Ah! for my husband, for my dear Lord Edward
Chil. Ah! for our father, for our dear Lord Clarence! 72
Duch. Alas! for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!
Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.
Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.
Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone. 76
Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.
Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.
Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.
Alas! I am the mother of these griefs: 80
Their woes are parcel'd, nine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, and so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I; 84
I for an Edward weep, and so doth not they:
Alas! you three on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears; I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentation. 88
Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd
That you take with unthankfulness his doing.
In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt 92
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposite with heav'n,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.
Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother, 96
Of the young princee your son: send straight for him;
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives.
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.
- Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and Others.*
- Glo.* Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause

To wall the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing
them.

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy; 104
I did not see your Grace: humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee! and put meekness in thy mind,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty. 108

Glo. Amen; [Aside.] and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers, 112

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son. 116

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hearts,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train, Northwith from Ludlow the young prince be
fetch'd 121

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break
out; 125

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green and yet un-
govern'd;

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself, 129
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of
us; 132

And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach, 136

Which haply by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I. 140

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you my mother, will you go
To give your censures in this business? 144

[*Exeunt all except BUCKINGHAM and
GLOUCESTER.*]

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home:
For by the way I'll sort occasion,
As I need to the story we late talk'd of, 148
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistency,
My oracle, my prophet! My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction. 152
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

First Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: whither away so fast?

Sec. Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

First Cit. Ay; that the king is dead.

Sec. Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better: 4

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter a third Citizen.

Third Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

First Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

Third Cit. Doth the news hold of good King
Edward's death?

Sec. Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help the while! 8

Third Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

First Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

Third Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd
by a child!

Sec. Cit. In him there is a hope of government, 12

That in his nonage council under him,
And in his full and ripen'd years himself,
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well.

First Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth 16

Was crown'd at Paris but at nine months old.

Third Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends, God wot;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel; then the king 20
Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace.

First Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

Third Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,

Or by his father there were none at all; 24
For emulation, who shall now be nearest,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O! full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester!

And the queen's sons and brothers haught and proud; 28

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before.

First Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

Third Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks; 32

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand ;
 When the sun sets, who doth not look for night ?
 Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.
 All may be well ; but, if God sort it so, 36
 'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

Sec. Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear :

You cannot reason almost with a man
 That looks not heavily and full of dread. 40

Third Cit. Before the days of change, still is
 it so :

By a divino instinct men's minds mistrust
 Ensuing danger ; as, by proof, we see
 The waters swell before a boisterous storm. 44
 But leave it all to God. Whither away ?

Sec. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

Third Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the BISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Northampton ;

At Stony-Stratford they do rest to-night :
 To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with a' my heart to see the
 prince. 4

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no ; they say my son of York

Hath almost overta'en him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin, it is good to grow. 9

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
 More than my brother: 'Ay,' quoth my uncle
 Gloucester, 12

'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow
 apace :'

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make
 haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold 16

In him that did object the same to thee :
 He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
 So long a-growing, and so leisurely,
 That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious
 madam. 21

Duch. I hope he is ; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout, 24
 To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd
 mine.

Duch. How, my young York ? I prithee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast,
 That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old : 28
 'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee
 this ?

York. Grandam, his nurse. 32

Duch. His nurse ! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told
 me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy : go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the
 child. 36

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news ?
Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince ?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news ? 41

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them ?

Mess. The mighty dukes, 44
 Gloucester and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence ?

Mess. The sum of all I can I have disclos'd :

Why or for what the nobles were committed is all unknown to me, my gracious lord. 48

Q. Eliz. Ah me ! I see the ruin of my house !

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind ;

Insulting tyranny begins to jet

Upon the innocent and aweless throne : 52

Welcome, destruction, death, and massacre !

I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accurs'd and unquiet wrangling days,

How many of you have mine eyes beheld ! 56

My husband lost his life to get the crown,

And often up and down my sons were toss'd,

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss :

And being seated, and domestic broils 60

Clean over-blown, themselves, tho' conquerors,

Make war upon themselves ; brother to brother,

Blood to blood, self against self : O ! preposterous

And frantick outrage, and thy damnd spleen ; 64

Or let me die, to look on death no more.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy ; we will to sanctuary,

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.
Arch. [To the QUEEN.] My gracious lady, go ;
 And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
 For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace
 The seal I keep : and so betide to me
 As well I tender you and all of yours ! 72
 Come ; I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.

Act III.

Scene I.—The Same. A Street.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, CARDINAL BOURCHIER, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign ;

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle ; but our crosses on the way 4

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy :
 I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untalnted virtue of your years

Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit : 8
 No more can you distinguish of a man
 Than of his outward show ; which, God he knows,

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles which you want were dangerous ;
 Your Grace attended to their sugar'd words, 13
 But look'd not on the polson of their hearts :

God keep you from them, and from such false friends !

Prince. God keep me from false friends ! but they were none. 16

Glo. My lord, the Mayor of Loudon comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your Grace with health and happy days !

Prince. I thank you, good my lord ; and thank you all.

I thought my mother and my brother York 20
 Would long ere this have met us on the way :
 Flew what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not
 To tell us whether they will come or no.

Enter HASTINGS.

Buck. And in good time here comes the sweating lord. 24

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come ?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,

The queen your mother, and your brother York,

Have taken sanctuary : the tender prince 28
 Would fain have come with me to meet your Grace,

but by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Flew what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers ! Lord Cardinal, will your Grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York
 Unto his princely brother presently ?

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him,
 And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory 37

Can from his mother win the Duke of York,
 Anon expect him here ; but if she be accurate
 To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid 40

We should infringe the holy privilege
 Of blessed sanctuary ! not for all this land
 Would I be guilty of so great a sin :

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord, 44

Too ceremonious and traditional :

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
 You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted 48

To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place
 And those who have the wit to claim the place :
 This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it ;

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it :
 Then, taking him from thence that is not thers,
 You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men,
 But sanctuary children ne'er till now. 56

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me ?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. 60

[Exeunt CARDINAL BOURCHIER and HASTINGS.

Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,
 Where shall we sojourn till our coronation ?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two 64
 Your highness shall repose you at the Tower :

Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place :
 Did Jullus Ciesar build that place, my lord ? 69

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place,

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported 72
 Successively from age to age, he built it ?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd,

Methinks the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, 77
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. [Aside.] So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle? 80
Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

[Aside.] Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Cesar was a famous man;
With what his valour did enrich his wit, 85
His wit set down to make his valour live:

Death makes no conquest of this conqueror,
For now he lives in fame, though not in life. 88

I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,—
Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again, 92
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. [Aside.] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and CARDINAL
BOURCHIER.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother? 96

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is
yours:

Too late he died that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty. 100

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said that idle weeds are fast in growth:

The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle? 105

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you than I.

Glo. He may command me as my sovereign;
But you have power in me as in a man. 109

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother? 112

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it.

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts;

in weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your Grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier. 121

Glo. What! would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you, as you call me.

Glo. How? 124

York. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear
with me: 128

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me.

Because that I am little, like an ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp provided wit he reasons! 132

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himself:

So cunning and so young is wonderful.

Glo. My lord, will't please you pass along?
Myself and my good cousin Buckingham 137

Will to your mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.

York. What! will you go unto the Tower, my
lord? 140

Prince. My Lord Protector needs will have
it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what would you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost:
My grandam told me he was murder'd there. 145

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear. 148

But come, my lord; and, with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[*Sennet. Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER,
BUCKINGHAM, and CATESBY.*]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating
York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother 152
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O! 'tis a pious
boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable:
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe. 156

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby; thou art sworn

As deeply to effect what we intend
As closely to conceal what we impart.

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way:
What think'st thou? Is it not an easy matter

To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle? 164
Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley?
what will he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby, 16
And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings.
How he doth stand affected to our purpose.
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower.
To sit about the coronation.
If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling, 176
Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,
And give us notice of his inclination;
For we to-morrow hold divided counsels,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. 180
Glo. Commend me to Lord William: tell him,
Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle;
And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, 184
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.
Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep? 188

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both. [Exit CATESBY.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head; something we will determine: 193

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables
Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your Grace's hand. 197

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form. 200

[Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. Before LORD HASTINGS' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. [Knocking.] My lord! my lord!

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock? 4

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.

First, he commends him to your noble self. 8

Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this night

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm:
Besides, he says there are two councils held; 12
And that may be determin'd at the one
Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,

If you will presently take horse with him, 16
And with all speed post with him towards the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;
Bid him not fear the separated counsels: 20

His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us
Whereof I shall not have intelligence. 24

Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance:
And for his dreams, I won't let he's so fond

To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers,
To fly the boar before the boar pursues,

Were to incense the boar to follow us
And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
And we will both together to the Tower, 32

Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring. 36

What news, what news, in this our tottering state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
And I believe will never stand upright

Till Richard wear the garland of the realm. 40

Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd. 44

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof:
And thereupon he sends you this good news, 48

That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,

Because they have been still my adversaries; 52

But that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind! 56

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence.

That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,

When men are unprepar'd and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls
it out 64

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill do
With some men else, who think themselves as safe

As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard and to Buckingham. 68

Cate. The princes both make high account of
you;

[Aside.] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear,
man? 72

Fear you the boar, and go so unprov'd?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow
Catesby:

You may jest on, but by the holy rood,
I do not like these several counsels, I. 76

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours;

And never, in my days, I do protest,
Was it so preelous to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure, 80
I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rodo from London,

Were jocund and suppos'd their state was sure,

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust; 84
But yet you see how soon the day o'ercast.

This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;
Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!

What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent. 88

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear
their heads,

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats. 92

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exeunt STANLEY and CATESBY.]

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask. 96

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now
Than when I met thee last where now we meet:
Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies; 100
But now, I tell thee,—keep it to thyself,—
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it to your honour's good content! 104

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: there, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse.]

Purs. God save your lordship. [Exit.]

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all
my heart. 108

I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content
you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord
chamberlain?

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest:
Your honour hath no shriving work in hand. 113

Hast. 'Good faith, and when I met this holy
man,

The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower? 116

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I shall not
stay:

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner
there.

Buck. [Aside.] And supper too, although thou know'st it not. 120

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter RATCLIFF, with halberds, carrying RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to death.

Riv. Sir Richard Rateliff, let me tell thee
this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack of you! 4

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.
Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison! 8

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the gully closure of thy walls
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death;

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, 12
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd
she Buckingham, 17

Then curs'd she Hastings: O! remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us;

And for my sister and her princely sons, 20
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spill'd.

Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan; let us
here embrace: 24

And take our leave until we meet in heaven.
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—London. The Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVELL, and Others, sitting at a table. Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. My lords, at once: the cause why we are met

Is to determine of the coronation:
In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for that royal
time? 4

Stan. It is; and wants but nomination.
Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector's mind
herein?

Who is most inward with the noble duke? 8

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces; for our
hearts,

He knows no more of mine than I of yours;
Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine. 12

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me
well;

But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd 16

His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lords, may name the time;

And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part. 20

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke
himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins all, good morning.

I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design, 24

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come up on your ene, my
lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,

I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king. 28
Glo. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder:

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,

I saw good strawberries in your garden there; 32
I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.]

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
[Takes him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,
And finds the testy gentleman so hot, 37

That he will lose his head ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,

Shall lose the royalty of England's throne. 40
Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with
you.

[Exit GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.]
Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided 44

As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord, the Duke of Gloucester?

I have sent for these strawberries.
Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth
this morning: 48

There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with such
spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his hate or love than he; 52

For by his face straight shall you know his
heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceived you in his face

By any livelihood he show'd to-day?
Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended; 56

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve
That do conspire my death with devilish plots

Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd 60
Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my
lord,

Makes me most forward in this princely presence
To doom th' offenders, whose'er they be: 64

I say, my lord, they have deserved death.
Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
Is like a blasted sapling, wither'd up: 65
And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch
Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this thing my noble
lord,— 72

Glo. If! thou protector of this damned
strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs? Thou art a traitor:

Off with his head! now, by Saint Paul, I swear,
I will not dine until I see the same. 76

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done;
The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exeunt all but HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and LOVEL.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;

For I, too fond, might have prevented this. 80
Stanley did dream the bear did raze his helm;
And I did scorn it, and disdain'd to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,

And startled when he looked upon the Tower. 84
As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O! now I need the priest that spake to me:
I now repent I told the pursuivant,

As too triumphing, how mine enemies 88
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd!

And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret! now thy heavy curse

Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head. 92
Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shrift, he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal man,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of
God! 96

Who builds his hope in air of you, I look,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;

Ready with every nod to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep. 100

Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England!

I prophesy the fearfullest time to thee

That ever wretched age hath looked upon. 104
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head;
They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—London. The Tower Walls.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word.
And then again begin, and stop again,

As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut! I can counterfeit the deep tragedian.

Speak and look back, and pry on every side.
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,

Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;

And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.

But what! is Catesby gone? 11
Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord Mayor,—
Glo. Look to the drawbridge there!

Buck. Hark! a drum.
Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls. 17

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee; here are enemies.

Buck. God and our Innocency defend and guard us!

*Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS'
head.*

Glo. Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel. 2

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor.
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest harmless creature 24

That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded

The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue, 28

That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shore's wife,

He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor 32

That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,— Were't not that by great preservation

We live to tell it, that the subtle traitor 36
This day had plotted, in the council-house,
To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester?

May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks or infidels? 4

Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,

But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our person's safety. 44

Enforced us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his
death;

And your Graces both have well proceeded,
To warn false traitors from the like attempts. 43
I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should die,

Until your lordship came to see his end; 52
Which now in the loving haste of these our friends,
Something against our meaning, hath prevented:

Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confess 56
The manner and the purpose of his treason;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconster us in him, and wall his death. 60

May. But, my good lord, your Grace's word shall serve,

As well as I had seen and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens 64
With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,

To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our intent, 68

Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.]

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hires him in all post: 72

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying he would make his son 76
Heir to the crown; meaning indeed his house,
Which by the sign thereof was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust; 80

Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
wives,

Even where his raging eye or savage heart
Without control lusted to make a prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person: 84

Tell them, when that my mother went with child

Of that insatiate Edward, noble York
My princely father then had wars in France; 88

And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father.

Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off; 92

Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden fee for which I plead
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu. 96

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock 100

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

[Exit.]

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw,

[To CATESBY.] Go thou to Friar Penker; bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.
[Exeunt LOVEL and CATESBY.]

Now will I go, to take some privy order 105

To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice that no manner person

Have any time recourse unto the princes. [Exit.]

Scene VI.—The Same. A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings;

Which in a set hand fairly is engras'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's:

And mark how well the sequel hangs together. 4
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me.

The precedent was full as long a-doing;
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, 3

Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross

That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold but says he sees it not? 12

Bad is the world; and all will come to naught,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.]

Scene VII.—The Same. The Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children? 4

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France;
The insatiate greediness of his desires,

And his enforcement of the city wives; 8
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy.

As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the duke:

Withal I did infer your lineaments, 12
Being the right idea of your father,

Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,

- Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, 16
 Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
 Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
 Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse;
 And when my oratory drew toward end, 20
 I bade them that did love their country's good Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal king!'
Glo. And did they so?
Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a
 word; 24
- But, like dum' statues or breathing stones,
 Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale,
 Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
 And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence; 28
- His answer was, the people were not wont
 To be spoke to but by the recorder,
 Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again:
 'Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferr'd;' 32
- But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
 When he had done, some followers of mine own,
 At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
 And some ten voices cried, 'God save King
 Richard!' 36
- And thus I took the vantage of those few,
 'Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I;
 'This general applause and cheerful shout Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard.'
 And even here brake off, and came away. 41
- Glo.* What tongueless blocks were they! would they not speak?
 Will not the mayor then and his brethren come?
Buck. The mayor is here; at hand. Intend some fear; 44
- Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit;
 And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
 And stand between two churchmen, good my
 lord; 48
- For on that ground I'll make a holy descent: 48
 And be not easily won to our requests;
 Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take
 it.
- Glo.* I go; and if you plead as well for them
 As I can say nay to thee for myself, 52
 No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.
- Buck.* Go, go, up to the leads! the Lord Mayor knocks. [Exit GLOUCESTER.]
- Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.*
 Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
 I think the duke will not be spoke withal. 56
- Enter, from the Castle, CATESBY.*
 Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?
Cate. He doth entreat your Grace, my noble
 lord,
 To visit him to-morrow or next day.
 He is within, with two right reverend fathers, 60
 Divinely bent to meditation;
- And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
 To draw him from his holy exercise.
Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
 duke: 64
- Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
 In deep designs in matter of great moment,
 No less importing than our general good,
 Are come to have some conference with his
 Grace. 68
Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.
 [Exit.]
- Buck.* Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!
 He is not loling on a low day-bed,
 But on his knees at meditation; 72
 Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
 But meditating with two deep divines;
 Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
 But praying, to enrich his watchful soul, 76
 Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
 Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof:
 But sore, I fear, we shall not win him to it.
- May.* Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay! 80
Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes
 again.
- Re-enter CATESBY.*
 Now, Catesby, what says his Grace?
Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled
 Such troops of citizens to come to him, 84
 His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
 My lord, he fears you mean no good to him.
Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me that I mean no good to him. 88
 By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
 And so once more return, and tell his Grace.
 [Exit CATESBY.]
- When holy and devout religious men
 Are at their beads, tis much to draw them
 thence; 92
 So sweet is zealous contemplation.
- Enter GLOUCESTER, in a gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.*
May. See, where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen!
Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
 prince,
 To stay him from the fall of vaulty; 96
 And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
 True ornament to know a holy man.
 Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
 Lend favourable ear to our requests, 100
 And pardon us the interruption
 Of thy devotion, and right Christian zeal.
Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
 I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, 104
 Who, earnest in the service of my God,
 Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your Grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, 108

And all good men of this ungovern'd Isle.

Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence That seems disgraceful in the city's eye;

And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; would it might please your Grace, 113

On our entreaties to amend your fault.

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

Buck. Know thou, it is your fault that you resign 116

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,

The sceptred office of your ancestors,

Your state of fortune and your due of birth,

The lineal glory of your royal house, 120

To the corruption of a bluish'd stock;

Whiles, in the midstness of your sleepy thoughts,—

Which here we waken to our country's good,—

This noble Isle doth want her proper limbs; 124

Her face defac'd with scars of Infamy,

Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,

And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf

Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. 128

Which to recure we heartily solicit

Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land;

Not as protector, steward, substitute, 132

Or lowly factor for another's gain;

But as successively from blood to blood,

Your right of birth, your empery, your own.

For this, consorted with the citizens, 136

Your very worshipful and loving friends,

And by their vehement instigation,

In this just cause come I to move your Grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence 140

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,

Best fitteth my degree or your condition:

If not to answer, you might haply think

Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded 144

To bear the golden yoke of sov'reignty,

Which fondly you would here impose on me;

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,

So seasoned with your faithful love to me, 148

Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.

Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,

And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,

Definitively thus I answer you. 152

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert

Unmeritable shuns your high request.

First, if all obstacles were cut away,

And that my path were even to the crown, 156

As the ripe revenue and due of birth,

Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,

So mighty and so many my defects,

That I would rather hide me from my greatness,

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea, 161

Than in my greatness covet to be hid,

And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.

But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me; 164

And much I need to help you, were there need;

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,

Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,

Will well become the seat of majesty, 168

And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.

On him I lay that you would lay on me,

The right and fortune of his happy stars;

Which God defend that I should wring from

him! 172

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your Grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,

All circumstances well considered.

You say that Edward is your brother's son: 176

So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;

For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,

Your mother lives a witness to his vow,

And afterward by substitute betroth'd 180

To Bona, sister to the King of France.

These both put by, a poor petitioner,

A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 184

Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,

Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree

To base dejection and loath'd bigamy: 188

By her, in his unlawful bed, he got

This Edward, whom our manners call the prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate,

Save that, for reverence to some alive, 192

I give a sparing fluit to my tongue.

Then, good my lord, take to your royal self

This proffer'd benefit of dignity;

If not to bless us and the land withal, 196

Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry

From the corruption of using thines,

Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you, 200

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O! make them joyful: graut their lawful suit:

Glo. Alas! why would you heap those cares on me?

I am unfit for state and majesty: 204

I do beseech you, take it not amiss,

I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it, as, in love and zeal,

Loath to depose the child, your brother's son; 208

As well we know your tenderness of heart

And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,

Which we have noted in you to your kindred.

At d'egally, indeed, to all estates, 212

Yet whether you accept our suit or no,

Your brother's son shall never reign our king;

But we will plant some other in the throne,

To the disgrace and downfall of your house: 216

And in this resolution here we leave you.

Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and Citizens.]

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince; accept their suit:

If you deny them, all the land will rue it. 220

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Call them again: I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreats.

[Exit CATESBY.]

Albeit against my conscience and my soul. 224

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my hack,
To bear her hurden, whe'r I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load: 228
But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God doth know, and you may partly see, 233
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your Grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title:
Long live King Richard, England's worthy king!

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be
crown'd? 240

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have
it so.

Buck. To-morrow then we will attend your Grace:

And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Glo. [To the Bishops.] Come, let us to our holy work again. 244
Farewell, my cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.

[Exit.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUESS OF DORSET; on the other, ANNE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young daughter.

Duch. Who needs us here? my niece Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince's Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your Graces both 5
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.
Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together:—

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes. 12
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them:— 16
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean the Lord Protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see
them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their
mother:

Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy hame, 24

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so:
I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

[Exit.]

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour
hence, 28

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother,
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.

[To the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.] Come, madam,
you must straight to Westminster,

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen. 32

Q. Eliz. Ah! cut my lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despightful tidings! O! unpleasing
news. 37

Dor. Be of good cheer: mother, how fares
your Grace?

Q. Eliz. O, Dorset! speak not to me, get thee
gone;

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels:
Thy mother's name is ominous to children. 40

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell:

Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou increase the number of the dead, 44

And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel,
madam.

[To DORSET.] Take all the swift advantage of the hours; 48

You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way :
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery !
O ! my accursed womb, the bed of death,
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavolded eye is murderous !

Stan. Come, madam, come ; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.
O ! would to God that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel to sear me to the brain.

Anointed let me be with deadly venom ;
And die, ere men can say ' God save the queen !'
Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory ;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No ! why ? When he, that is my husband Came to me, as I followed Henry's corse ;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his
hands,

Which issu'd from my other angel husband,
And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd ;

O ! when I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish, ' Be thou,' quoth I, ' accurs'd,
For making me so young, so old a widow !'
And, when thou wedd'st, let sorrow haunt thy
bed ;

And be thy wife—if any be so mad—
More miserable by the life of thee
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's
death !

Lo ! ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own son's curse :
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest ;
For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick,
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu ! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Q. Eliz. Farewell ! thou woeful welcomer of glory !

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it !

Duch. [To DORSET.] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee !

[To ANNE.] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee !

[To Q. ELIZABETH.] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee !

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me !
Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wrack'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet, look back with me unto the Tower.

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls,
Rough cradle for such little prynces !
Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
For tender prynces, use my babes well,
So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Scenet. RICHARD, in pomp, crowned : BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and Others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham.

Buck. My gracious sovereign !
K. Rich. Give me thy hand. [He ascends the throne.] Thus high, by thy advice,

And thy assistance, is King Richard seated :
But shall we wear these glories for a day ?
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them ?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them
last !

K. Rich. Ah ! Buckingham, how do I play the touch,

To try if thou be current gold indeed :
Young Edward lives : think now what I would
speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned
liege.

K. Rich. Ha ! am I king ? 'Tis so : but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live ! 'True, noble
prince !'

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull :
Shall I be plain ? I wish the bastards dead ;
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What sayst thou now ? speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut ! thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes :

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die ?
Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause,
dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this :
I will resolve you herein presently.

[Exit. Cate. [Aside to another.] The king is angry :
see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. [Descends from his throne.] I will converse with iron-witted fools

And unrespective boys : none are for me
That look into me with considerate eyes.
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy!

Page. My lord!K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman, 36
Whose humble means match not his laughty spirit:Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.K. Rich. What is his name?Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrell.K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither. *[Exit Page.]*The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsel.Hath he so long held out with me untir'd, 44
And stops he now for breath? well, be it so.Enter STANLEY.

How now, Lord Stanley! what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The Marquess Dorset, as I hear, is fled, 48
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,That Anne my wife is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close. 52Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman, Whom I will marry straight to Clarence'
daughter:The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give out 56That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage
me. *[Exit CATESBY.]*I must be married to my brother's daughter, 60
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.Murder her brothers, and then marry her:
Uncertain way of gain! But I am inSo far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin: 64
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.Re-enter Page, with TYRRELL

Is thy name Tyrrell?

Tyr. James Tyrrell, and your most obedient subject.K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord. 68*K. Rich.* Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it: two deep enemies,Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon. 73
Tyrrell, I mean those bastards in the Tower.Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them. 76*K. Rich.* Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrell:

Go, by this token: rise, and lend thine ear.

*[Whispers.]*There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it. 80*Tyr.* I will dispatch it straight. [Exit.]Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond. 84*Buck.* I hear the news, my lord.K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well, look to it.Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by proulsey,
For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; 88The earldom of Hereford and the moveables Which you have promised I shall possess.K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. 92

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?K. Rich. I do remember me, Henry the SixthDid prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy. 96

A king! perhaps—

Buck. My lord!K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that timeHave told me, I being by, that I should kill him? 100*Buck.* My lord, your promise for the earldom,—K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter,The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rougemont: at which name I started. 104

Because a bard of Ireland told me once

I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord!K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock? 108*Buck.* I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what is't o'clock?Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.K. Rich. Well, let it strike.Buck. Why let it strike? 112*K. Rich.* Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me wher' you will, or no. 116

K. Rich. Thou troublest me: I am not in the vein. [Exeunt KING RICHARD and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? rejoys he my deep service

With such contempt? made I him king for this?

O, let me thin' on Hastings, and be gone 120
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on.

[Exit.]

Scene III.—The Same.

Enter TYRRELL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done; The most arch deed of piteous massacre That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn 4
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like to children in their death's sad story.

'Oh! thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay the gentle babes:' 9

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms:
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, 12

Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.

A look of prayers on their pillow lay;
Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost chang'd

my mind;

But, O, the devil!—there the villain stopp'd; 16

When Dighton thus told on: 'We singhred
The most replenished sweet work of nature,
That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.'

Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse; 20

They could not speak; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king:
And here he comes.

Enter KING RICHARD.

All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrell, am I happy in thy news? 24

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Begot your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrell?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them; 29

But how or in what place I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrell, soon at afternoon,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.

Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close; 36

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid the world good night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims 40
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,

And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My lord!

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Cate. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Richmond;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth. 48

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-level'd strength.
Come; I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay: 52
Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary:

Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king.

Go, muster men; my counsel is my shield; 56
We must be brief when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines ally have I lurk'd
To watch the waning of mine enemies. 4

A dire indiction am I witness to,
And will to France, hoping the consequence

Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here? 8

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah! my poor princes! ah, my tender babes,

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets,
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, 12
Hover about me with your airy wings,

And hear your mother's lamentation.

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night. 16
Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.
 Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet;
 Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. 21

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle lambs,

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?

When didst thou sleep when such a deed was
 done? 24

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life
 usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days, 28
 Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!

Q. Eliz. Ah! that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat; 32
 Then would I hide my bones, not rest them
 here.

Ah! who hath any cause to mourn but I?

[Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverend,
 Give mine the benefit of seniory, 36

And let my griefs frown on th' upper hand,
 If sorrow can admit society

[Sitting down with them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; 40

I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him; 44

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death: 48

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,

To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood,

That foul defacer of God's handiwork,

That excellent grand-tyrant of the earth, 52

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,

Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.

O! upright, just, and true-disposing God,

How do I thank thee that this carnal cur 56

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,

And makes her pew-fellow with others' mourn.

Duch. O! Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes:

God witness with me, I have wept for thine. 60

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward; 64

Young York he is but boot, because both thy

Match not the high perfection of my loss:

Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my

Edward;

And the beholders of this tragic play, 68

The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,

Grey,

Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves,

Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,

Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls 72

And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence. 76

Cancel his bond of life, dear God! I pray,

That I may live to say, The dog is dead.

Q. Eliz. O! thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse 80

That bottled spider, that foul blackback'd
 toad.

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of
 my fortune;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;

The presentation of hut what I was; 84

The flattering index of a direful pageant;

One heav'd a-high to be hurl'd down below;

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;

A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble,

A sign of dignity, a garish flag, 89

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? 92

Where are thy children? wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues and kneels and cries God save the

queen?

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?

Where be the thronging troops that follow'd
 thee? 96

Decline all this, and see what now thou art:

For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

For joyful mother, one that walls the name;

For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues; 100

For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care;

For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;

For one commanding all, obey'd of none. 104

Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,

And left thee but a very prey to time;

Having no more but thought of what thou wert,

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? 110

Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;

From which even here, I slip my wearied head,

And leave the burden of it all on thee. 113

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance;

These English woes shall make me smile in France.

Q. Eliz. O thou, well skill'd in curses, stay awhile, 116
And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,
And he that slew them fouler than he is: 121
Bettering thy loss makes the bad causer worse:
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O! quicken them with thine! 124

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit.]

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,
Airy succeders of intestate joys, 123
Poor breathing orators of miseries!

Let them have scope: though what they do impart

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, thou be not tongue-tied: go with me, 132

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother My damned sou, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

[A trumpet heard.]
The trumpet sound. be copious in exclamations.

Enter KING RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? 136

Duch. O! she that might have intercepted thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hild'st thou that forehead with a golden crown, 140

Where should be branded, if that right were right,

The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children? 144

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings? 148

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rattle on th' Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!

[Flourish. Alarums.]

Either be patient, and entreat me fair, 152
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself. 156

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.
Duch. O, let me speak!

K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear. 160

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony. 164

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well,

Thou can'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me; 168
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;

Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild and furious;

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous;

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, 172

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred:
What comfortable hour canst thou name

That ever grac'd me in thy company?
K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour,

that call'd your Grace 176

To breakfast once forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.
Strike up the drum!

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak. 180

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word;
For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So!

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance, 184

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish

And never look upon thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most grievous curse,

Which, in the day of battle, thrice thee more 189
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies 193
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend.

[Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse 197
Abides in me: I say amen her. [Going.

K. R. Stay, madam; I must talk a word
with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal
blood 200

For thee to slaughter: for my daughters,
Richard,

They shall be praying unns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, 204

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O! let her live,

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slauder myself as false to Edward's bed; 208

Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is of royal
blood. 212

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo! at their births good stars were opposite! 216

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoidd grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a falser death, 220
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life:

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle
cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life. 224
Whose hands soever laud'd their tender hearts.

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart, 228
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate lay of death, 233

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rest,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise
And dangerous success of bloody wars, 237

As I intend more good to you and yours

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd.

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of
heaven, 240

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of fortune, 244

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:
Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,

Canst thou demise to any child of mine? 248

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and
all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry soul

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those
wrongs 252

Which thou supposet I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. 256

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul:

So from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers; 260

And from my heart's love I do thank thee for
it.

K. Rich. Be not too hasty to confound my meaning;

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king? 265

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who else should be?

Q. Eliz. What! thou?

K. Rich. Even so: what think you of it? 268

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her
brothers, 272

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave
Edward and York; then haply will she weep:

Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood, 276

A handkerchief, which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal,
If this inducement move her not to love, 280

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake,
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Aunc. 284

K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not the way
To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way
Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard that hath done all this. 288

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her?

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but hate thee.

Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended: 292

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after hours give leisure to repent.
If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends I'll give it to your daughter.

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb, 297
To quicken your increase, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter:

A grandam's name is little less in love 300
Than is the doting title of a mother;

They are as children but one step below,
Even of your mettle, of your very blood;

Of all one pain, save for a night of groans 304
Endur'd of her for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth,
But mine shall be a comfort to your age.

The loss you have is but a son being king, 308
And by that loss your daughter is made queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindness as I can.

Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul 312
Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity:
The king that calls your beauteous daughter

wife, 316
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;

Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times

Repair'd with double riches of content. 320
What! we have many goodly days to see:

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed
Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl,

Advantaging their loan with interest 324
Of ten times double gain of happiness.

Go then, my mother; to thy daughter go:
Make bold her bashful years with your experience;

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale; 328
Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame

Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess
With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys:

And when this arm of mine hath chastised 332
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with triumphant garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;

To whom I will retail my conquest won, 336
And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle?
Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles?

Under what title shall I woo for thee, 341
That God, the law, my honour, and her love
Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance. 344

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.

K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the king's King forbids.

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty
queen. 343

Q. Eliz. To wail the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title 'ever'
last?

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's
end. 352

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

K. Rich. As long as heaven and nature lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of
it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject
low. 356

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then plainly to her tell my loving tale. 360

Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O, no! my reasons are too deep and
dead;

Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.
K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam;
that is past. 365

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heartstrings break.

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—

Q. Eliz. Profaned, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd. 368

K. Rich. I swear,—
Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath.

Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour;
Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue;

Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.
If something thou wouldst swear to be believ'd, Swear, then, by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now, by the world,—
Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.
K. Rich. My father's death,—
Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.
K. Rich. Then, by myself,—
Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misus'd.
K. Rich. Why, then, by God,—
Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The unity the king my husband made 380
 Had not been broken, nor my brothers died :
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
 Had grac'd the tender temples of my child, 384
 And both the princes had been breathing here,
 Which now, too tender bed-fellows for dust,
 Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
 What canst thou swear by now ?
K. Rich. The time to come. 388
Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast ;
 For I myself have many tears to wash
 Hereafter time for time past wrong'd by thee.
 The children live, whose parents thou hast
 slaughter'd, 392
 Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age :
 The parents live, whose children thou hast
 butcher'd,
 Old barren plants, to wail it with their age.
 Swear not by time to come ; for that thou hast
 Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast. 397
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent,
 So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
 Of hostile arms ! myself myself confound ! 400
 Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours !
 Day, yield me not thy light ; nor, night, thy rest !
 Be opposite all planets of good luck
 To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love, 404
 Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
 I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter !
 In her consists my happiness and thine ;
 Without her, follows to myself, and thee, 408
 Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
 Death, desolation, ruin, and decay :
 It cannot be avoided but by this ;
 It will not be avoided but by this. 412
 Therefore, dear mother,—I must call you so,—
 Be the attorney of my love to her :
 Plead what I will be, not what I have been ;
 Not my deserts, but what I will deserve : 416
 Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish-fond in great designs.
Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus ?
K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good. 420
Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself ?
K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.
Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.
K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury
 them : 424

Where, in that nest of spleery, they shall breed
 Seives of themselves, to your recomforture.
Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will ?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly, 429
 And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss ; and so
 farewell.

[Kissing her. Exit QUEEN ELIZABETH.
 Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman !

Enter RATCLIFF ; CATESBY following.

How now ! what news ? 433
Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy ; to the shores
 Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
 Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back. 437
 'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral ;
 And there they hull, expecting but the aid
 Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore. 440

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk ;

Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby ; where is he ?
Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.
Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient
 haste. 444

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury :

When thou com'st thither,—[To CATESBY.] Dull,
 unmindful villain,

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke ?
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure, 448

What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.
K. Rich. O ! true, good Catesby : bid him levy
 straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,
 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury, 452

Cate. I go. [Exit.
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury ?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go ?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post
 before. 456

Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd. Stanley, what news with you ?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing ;

Nor none so bad but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Hoyday, a riddle ! neither good nor bad ! 460

What need'st thou run so many miles about,
 When thou mayst tell thy tale the nearest way ?
 Once more, what news ?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him! 464
White-liver'd runagate! what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton, 468

He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? Is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?
What heir of York is there alive but we? 472

And who is England's g but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what r upon the seas?
Stan. Unless for y liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your
liege, 476

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman
comes.

Thou wilt revolt and fly to him I fear.

Stan. No, my good lord; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then to beat him back? 480

Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north. 484

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north.

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty
king:

Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave, 488
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where and what time your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:

But I'll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign, 492
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful.

I never was nor never will be false.

K. Rich. Go then and muster men: but leave behind

Your son, George Stanley: look your heart be firm, 496

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you. [Exit.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,

As I by friends am well advertised, 500
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,

Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,
With many moe confederates are in arms.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms; 504
And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but song of death? [He strikes him.]

There, take thou that, till thou bring better
news.

Third Mess. The news I have to tell your
majesty

Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;

And he himself wander'd away alone, 513
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy:
There is my purse, to cure that blow of thine.

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd 516
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Third Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

Fourth Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and Lord
Marquess Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms: 520
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,
The Breton navy is dispers'd by tempest.

Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore to ask those on the banks 524

If they were his assistants, yea or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham

Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,
Hols'd sail, and made away for Brittany. 528

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms;

If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken. 532

That is the best news: that the Earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here, 536

A royal battle might be won and lost.
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—*The Same. A Room in Lord
STANLEY'S House.*

Enter STANLEY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:

That in the sty of this most bloody boar
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold:
If I revolt, off goes young George's head; 4
The fear of that holds off my present aid.
So, get thee gone: commend me to thy lord.
Withal, say that the queen hath heartily consented

He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter. 8
But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harford-west, in Wales.

Stan. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier, 12

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a vallant crew;
And many other of great name and worth: 16
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withal.

Stan. Well, hie thee to thy lord; I kiss his
hand:

My letter will resolve him of my mind. 20
Farewell. [Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak
with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey and Rivers,

Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward, 4
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice.
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction! 9
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday. 12

This is the day that, in King Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall 16
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.

That high All-Seer which I dallied with 20
Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters' 24
bosoms:

Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck:
'When he,' quoth she, 'shall split thy heart with
sorrow.

Remember Margaret was a prophetess,
Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame: 28 Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Plain near Tamworth.

Enter with drum and colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD,
SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and
Others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving
friends,

Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment: 4
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.

The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful
vines, 8

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
Is now even in the centre of this Isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn: 12

From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war. 16

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand
men,

To fight against this guilty homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn
to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear, 20

Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage: then, in God's name, march:

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD and Forces; the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, and Others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege. 4

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha! must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie to-night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.

Blunt: where to-morrow? Well, all's one for that. 8

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength, Which they upon the adverse faction want. 13

Up with the tent! Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground;

Call for some men of sound direction: 16

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter on the other side of the field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Officers. Some of the Soldiers pitch RICHMOND'S tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And, by the bright track of his fiery chariot, 20

Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent:

I'll draw the form and model of our battle, 24

Limit each leader to his several charge,

And part in just proportion our small power.

My Lord of Oxford, you, Sir William Brandon,

And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me. 28

The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him,

And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent. 32

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me;

Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,—

Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done.— 36

His regiment lies half a mile at least

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to

him, 40

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake

it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good-night, good Captain Blunt.

Come, gentlemen, 44

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;

In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;

It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night. 43

Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver casier than it was,

And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness. 52

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, bid thee to thy charge; Use careful watch; choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk. 56

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms

To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power

Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall 61

Into the blind cave of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. 64

Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord Northumberland? 68

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop

Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl

of wine: 72

I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord. 76

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent

And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.

[KING RICHARD retires into his tent.

Exeunt RATCLIFF and CATESBY.

RICHMOND'S tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford 81

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother, 84

Who prays continually for Richmond's good:

So much for that. The silent hours steal on,

And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
 In brief, for so the season bids us be, 88
 Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
 And put thy fortune to the arbitrement
 Of bloody strokes and mortal-starting war,
 I, as I may,—that which I would I cannot,— 92
 With best advantage will deceive the time,
 And add thee in this doubtful shock of arms:
 But on thy side I may not be too forward,
 Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George, 96
 Be executed in his father's sight.
 Farewell: the leisure and the fearful time
 Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love
 And ample interchange of sweet discourse, 100
 Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell
 upon:

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
 Once more, adieu: be valiant, and speed well!
Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regl-
 ment. 104

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap,

Lest leaden slumber pelse me down to-morrow,
 When I should mount with wings of victory—
 Once more, good-night, kind lords and gentlemen. [Exeunt all but Richmond.]

O! thou, whose captain I account myself, 109
 Look on my forehead with a gracious eye;
 Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
 That they may crush down with a heavy fall 112
 The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
 Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
 That we may praise thee in thy victory!
 To thee I do commend my watchful soul, 116
 Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:
 Sleeping and waking, O! defend me still!

[Sleeps.]

The Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, Son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy
 on thy soul to-morrow!
 Think how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth 120

At Tewkesbury: despair, therefore, and die!
 Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
 Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
 King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of KING HENRY THE SIXTH rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] When I was mortal, my anointed body 125
 By thee was punched full of deadly holes:
 Think on the Tower and me; despair and die!
 Henry the Sixth bids thee despair and die. 128
 [To RICHMOND.] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be the
 king,
 Doth comfort thee in thy sleep: live thou and flourish!

The Ghost of CLARENCE rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy
 on thy soul to-morrow! 132
 I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
 Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
 To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
 [To RICHMOND.] Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster, 137

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee:
 Good angels guard thy battle! live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN rise.

Ghost of RIVERS. [To KING RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! 140

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! despair, and die!
Ghost of GREY. [To KING RICHARD.] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair.

Ghost of VAUGHAN. [To KING RICHARD.] Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear
 Let fall thy pointless lance: despair, and die!—

All Three. [To RICHMOND.] Awake! and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom! 145
 Will conquer him: awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of HASTINGS rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake;

And in a bloody battle end thy days! 148
 Think on Lord Hastings, so despair, and die!— [To RICHMOND.] Quiet, untroubled soul, awake, awake!

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young PRINCES rise.

Ghosts. [To KING RICHARD.] Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower: 152

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
 An . weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
 Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die!

[To RICHMOND.] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy; 156
 Good angels guard thee from the hoar's annoy!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
 Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of LADY ANNE rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife, 160

That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
 Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
 To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!

[To RICHMOND.] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep; 167

Dream of success and happy victory!
 Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises.

Ghost. [To KING RICHARD.] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown; 168

The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O! in the battle think on Buckingham!
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
Fainting, despair; desp'ring, yield thy breath!
[To Richmond.] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid: 174
But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismayed:
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. KING RICHARD starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse! blind up my
wounds! 178

Have mercy, Jesu! Soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What! do I fear myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I. 184
Is there a murderer here? No. Yes, I am:
Then fly: what! from myself? Great reason why:

Least I revenge. What! myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore? for any good
That I myself have done unto myself? 189
O! no: alas! I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain. Yet I lie; I am not. 192
Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter
ter.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain. 196
Perjury, perjury, in the highest degree:
Murder, stern murder, in the dirt's degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all, 'Guilty! guilty!'
I shall despair. There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul will pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself? 204
Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent, and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord! 208

K. Rich. 'Zounds! who's there?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I have dream'd a fearful dream. 213

What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all
true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear,—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. 216

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows tonight

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; 221
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt.]

RICHMOND wakes. Enter OXFORD and Others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond! 224

Richm. Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentle-
men,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, the fairest-boding dreams 228

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,

Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Came to my tent and cried on victory: 232

I promise you, my heart is very joyful

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four. 236

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his Soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on; yet remember this, 240
God and our good cause fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our
faces;

Richard except, those whom we fight against 244

Had rather have us win than him they follow.

For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,

A bloody tyrant and a homicide;

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;

One that made means to come by what he hath, 249

And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foll

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set; 252

One that hath ever been God's enemy.

Then, if you fight against God's enemy,

God will in justice, ward you as his soldiers;

If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, 256

You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;

If you do fight against your country's foes,

Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives, 260

Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword,

Your children's children quit it in your age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights,

Eden

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords. 265

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt 263
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;

God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!
[Exeunt.]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond? 272

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd, and said, 'The better for our purpose.'

K. Rich. He was 't the right; and so, indeed.
It is. [Clock strikes.]

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar. 277
Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago: 280
A black day will it be to somebody.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lower upon our army.
I would these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me
More than to Richmond? for the self-same
heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him. 288

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; equipage my horse.

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain, 292
And thus my battle shall be ordered:

My forward shall be drawn out all in length
Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst: 296

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we will follow
In the main battle, whose puissance on either side 300

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot! What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, war-like sovereign.
This found I on my tent this morning. 304

[Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,
For Dickon thy master is bought and sold,
A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen; every man to his charge: 308

Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls;

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,

Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe:

Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our
law. 312

March on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his Army.

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal: 316

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,

A scum of Bretons and base lackey peasants,

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth

To desperate adventures and assur'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest; 321

You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous
wives,

They would restrain the one, distain the other.

And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow, 324

Long kept in Britaine at our mother's cost?

A milksey, one that never in his life

Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the sea again;

Lash hence these overweening rags of France,

These fanish'd beggars, weary of their lives;

Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,

For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves: 332

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,

And not these bastard Bretons; whom our fathers

Have in their own land beaten, bobbd, and thump'd,

And, on record, left them the helms of shame. 336

Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?

Ravish our daughters? [Drum afar off.]

Hark! I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head! 340

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;

Annaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come. 344

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh:
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom; 348

Advance our standards! set upon our foes!

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!

Upon them! Victory sits upon our helms. 352

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter NORFOLK and Forces; to the drum.

Cate. Rescue, my lord, of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more cruelties than a lion,
Daring an opposite and every danger:
His horse is slain, and he himself he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the thicket of death.
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die;
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him.—
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter from opposite sides KING RICHARD and RICHMOND, and exeunt fighting. Retreat and flourish. Then re-enter RICHMOND, STANLEY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo! here, this long-usurped royalty
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal:
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say amen to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town;

Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us:
Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.
Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births:

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled
That in submissiō will return to us;
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red;
Smile, heaven, upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!
What traitor hears me, and says not amen?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:
All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided in their dire division,
O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together;
And let their heirs—God, if thy will be so,—
Enlarge the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!
Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,
That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again:
That she may long live here, God say amen!

[Exeunt.]

PROLOGUE.

*I come no more to make you laugh: things
 now,
 That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
 Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
 Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
 We now present. Those that can pity, here 4
 May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
 The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe, 8*

*May here find truth too. Those that come to see
 Only a show or two, and so agree
 The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
 I'll undertake may see away their shilling 12
 Richly in two short hours. Only they
 That come to hear a merry, bawdy play.
 A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
 In a long motley coat guarded with yellow, 16
 Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know,
 To rank our chosen truth with such a show
 As fool and fight is, besides forfeiting
 Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,*

To make that only true we now intend, 21
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town, 24
Be sad, as we would wish ye: thin ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and
sweet 28

Of thousand friends; then, in a moment see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding day. 32

Act I.

Scene I.—London. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter at one door the DUKE OF NORFOLK; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERDEVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague 4
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the valley of Andren.

Nor. What Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute our horse-
back; 8

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?
Buck. All the whole time 12
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time, pomp was single, but now married
To one above itself. Each following day 16

Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders its. To-day the French
All cunctant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain India: every man that stood 21

Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt: the madams, too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear 24

The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting. Now this masque
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings, 28

Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,

Still him in praise; and, being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one; and no discernor Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these
suns— 33

For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd

The noble spirits to arms, they did perform;
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story, 36

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O! you go far.
Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of every thing 40
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did 44
Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One certes, that promises no element 48
In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor. All this was ordered by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.
Buck. The devil speed him! no man's plea is freed 52

From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
That such a keech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays of the beneficial sun, 56
And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these
ends;

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace
Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon 60
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way; 64
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some graver
eye

Pierce into that; but I can see his pride 68
Peep through each part of him: whence has he
that?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil, 72
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privy o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry; for the most part such 76

To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,—
The honourable board of council out,—
Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber. I do know 80
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O! many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em 84

For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values 88

The cost that did conclude it.
Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy: That this tempest, 92
Daunting the garment of this peace, aboiled
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore 96
The ambassafor is silenc'd?

Nor. Marry, is't.
Aber. A proper title of a peace; and pur-
chas'd

At a superfluous rate!
Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace, 100
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,—
And take it from a heart that wishes towards you
Honour and plenteous safety,—that you read 104
The cardinal's malle and his potency Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengful; and I know his sword 109
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and't may be said,
It reaches far; and where'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, 112 You'll find it wholesome. Lo where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY,—the Purse borne before him,—certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of dis- dain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, hm?
Where's his examination?

First Sec. Here, so please you. 116
Wol. Is he in person ready?

First Sec. Ay, please your Grace.
Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.
[Exeunt WOLSEY, and Train.]

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd,
and I 120
Have not the power to puzzle him; therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What! are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only 124

Which your disease requires.
Buck. I read in's looks

Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the
king; 128

I'll follow, and out-stare him.
Nor. Stay, my lord,

And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like 132

A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king; 136
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot 140
That it do singe yourself. We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by overrunning. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till it run o'er, 144
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench, 148
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but 152
From sincere motions,—by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel,—I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, 'treasonous' 156
Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief 160
As able to perform't his mind and place

Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,
Only to show his pomp as well in Franco
As here at home, suggests the king our master 164
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray give me favour, sir. This cunning
cardinal 163

The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified
As he cried, 'Thus let be,' to us much end
As give a crutch to the dead. But our count-
cardinal 172

Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy

To the old dam, treason, Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,— 177
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation:

His fears were, that the interview betwixt 180
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league

Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily
Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow, 184

Which I do well; for, I am sure the emperor Paid ere he promised; whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was asked; but when the way was made,
And pay'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd:

That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king
know—

As soon he shall by me—that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, 192
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry

To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape 196
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant-at-Arms before him.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,

My Lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I 200

Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under devils and practice.

Bran. I am sorry 204
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure

You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence, for that dyo is on me

Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heaven 209

Be done in this and all things! I obey.

O! my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. [To ABERGAVENNY.] The king 212

Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure

By me obey'd!

Bran. Here is a warrant from 216
The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies

Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o' the plot: no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O! Nicholas Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great
cardinal

Hath show'd him gold. My life is spann'd already:

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, 224
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By darkening my clear sun. My lord, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Council Chamber.

*Enter the KING, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder, the Lords of the Council, SIR
THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants.
The CARDINAL places himself under the KING'S feet on the right side.*

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the level

Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before us 4

That gentleman of Buckingham's; in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify;

And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate. 3

A noise within, crying, 'Room for the Queen!'

*Enter QUEEN KATHARINE, ushered by the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels.
The KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.*

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a sultor,

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: half your suit

Never name to us; you have half our power:
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given; 12

Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.

- That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition. 16
- K. Hen.* Lady mine, proceed.
- Q. Kath.* I am sollicit'd, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions 20
Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the
heart
Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on 24
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,— Whose honour heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not
Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears 28
In loud rebellion.
- Nor.* Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off 32
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
During the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, 36
And danger serves among them.
- K. Hen.* Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?
- Wol.* Please you, sir, 40
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.
- Q. Kath.* No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome 45
To those which would not know them, and yet
must
Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
They are devised by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.
- K. Hen.* Still exaction! 52
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?
- Q. Kath.* I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects'
grief 56
Comes through commissions, which compel from each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and to sentence for this
- Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths: 60
Tongues split their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,
This tractable obedience is a slave 64
To each incensed will. I would your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.
- K. Hen.* By my life,
This is against our pleasure.
- Wol.* And for me, 68
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice, and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither
know 72
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint 76
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further 80
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick Interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up 84
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.
- K. Hen.* Things done well, 88
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any. 92
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber; 96
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied 100
The force of this commission. Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.
- Wol.* [To the Secretary.] A word with you,
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons 104
Hardly conceive of me; let it be nob'd
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham 109 is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker,

To nature none more bound; his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt, 116

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,

Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find 120
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besmeur'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear— 124

This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much. 128

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king 133
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, 136
Lord Abergavenny, to whom, by oath he ma-nae'd

Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches 141
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd Lord Cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown 144
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard
him

At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute 149
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,

The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poutney, did of me demand 153
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke 157
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,' says he, 160
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal 164
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd: neither the king nor's heirs— 168

Tell you the duke—shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke
Shall govern England.'

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office 172
On the complaint o' the tenants: take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on. 176
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do. He answer'd, 'Tush!
It can do me no damage;' adding further,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd, 184
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

H. Ken. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprovd the duke 189
About Sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time; being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his. But on; what
hence? 192

Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon

The usurper Rlehard; who, being at Salisbury, Made suit to come in's presence; which if
granted,

As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live
in freedom,

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee? what sayst?

Surv. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,'

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour

Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance

Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period;

To sheathe his knife in us. He is attack'd;

Call him to prescut trial: if he may

Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,

Let him not seek 't of us: by day and night!

He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and LORD SANDS.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,

Nay, let 'em be humanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English

Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear
directly

Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pephin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones: one would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin

Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.
Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've woru out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov. Falth, my lord,

I hear of none, but the new proclamation

That's elapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either—
For so run the condition—leave those remnants

Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honouraole points of ignorance

Pertaining thereunto,—as fights and fireworks;

Abusing better men than they can be,

Out of a forekn wisdom;—renounelng clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stoekings, Short bilster'd breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men;

Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away

The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.
Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physhe, their discases

Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry.
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whore-
sons

Have got a speedng triek to lay down ladies; 40
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going:

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now

An honest cuntry lord, as I am, beaten

A long thue out of play, may bring his plain-song

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord; 45
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's:
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O! 'tis true;
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,

To many lords and ladies; there will be

The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.
Lov. That churchmau bears a bounceous mind indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us; 50
His dewes fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord; he has wherewithal:
in him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine: 6c

Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir
Thomas, 64

We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be controllers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Presence-chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for CAR-DINAL WOLSEY, a longer table for the guests.
*Enter, at one door, ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests;
at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.*

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her 4
One care abroad; he would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome

Can make good people.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O, my lord! you're tardy:
The very thought of this fair company 8
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em: by my life, 13
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O! that your lordship were but now confessor

To one or two of these!

Sands. I would I were; 16
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy?
Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford
it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,

Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this;
His Grace is entering. Nay you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking;

Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith, 24

And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies: [*Sits himself between ANNE BUL-
LEN and another Lady.*]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?

Sands. O: very mad, exceeding mad; in love
too: 23

But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]

Cham. Well said, my lord.
So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies 32
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,

Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, 36
Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]

Sands. Your Grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sands, 40
I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then, we shall have 'em 44
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing,—

Anne. You cannot show me. 48

Sands. I told your Grace they would talk anon. [*Drum and trumpets within;
chambers discharged.*]

Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.

[Exit a Servant.]

Wol. What war-like voice, Aud to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear
not;
By all the laws of war you're privileg'd. 52

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now, what is 't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they've left their barge and landed;

And hither unake, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good Lord Chamberlain, 56

Go, give 'em welcome ; you can speak the French tongue ;

And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.

[Exit the Lord Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.]

You have now a broken banquet ; but we'll mend it. 61

A good digestion to you all ; and once more I shower a welcome on ye ; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the KING, and Others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company ! what are their pleasures ? 64
Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your Grace : that, having heard by fame Of this so noble and so fair assembly This night to meet here, they could do no less, Out of the great respect they bear to beauty, 69
But leave their flocks ; and, under your fair conduct,

Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, Lord Chamberlain, They have a poor house grace ; for which I pay 'em 73

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.

[They choose Ladies for the dance. The KING chooses ANNE BULLEN.]

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd ! O beauty,

Till now I never knew thee ! [Music. Dance.]

Wol. My lord.

Cham. Your Grace ?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me : There should be one amongst 'em, by his person, More worthy this place than myself ; to whom, If I but knew him, with my love and duty 80 I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[Whispers the Masquers.]

Wol. What say they ?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess, There is, indeed ; which they would have your Grace

Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see then. 84

[Comes from his state.]

By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll make

My royal choice.

K. Hen. [Unmasking.] You have found him, cardinal.

You hold a fair assembly ; you do well, lord :

You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,

I should judge now unhappily.

Wol.

I am glad

Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen.

My Lord Chamberlain,

Prithee, come hither. What fair lady's that ?

Cham.

An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas

Bullen's daughter,

The Viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women. 92

K. Hen.

By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly to take you out,

And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen ! 96

Let it go round.

Wol.

Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready 'I the privy chamber ?

Lot.

Yes, my lord.

Wol.

Your Grace,

I fear, with dancing is a little heated. 100

K. Hen.

I fear, too much.

Wol.

There's fresher air, my lord, In the next chamber.

K. Hen.

Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry : 104
Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure To lead 'em once again ; and then let's dream Who's best in favour. Let the music knock it.

[Exeunt with trumpets.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Westminster. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gent. Whither away so fast ?

Sec. Gent.

O ! God save ye.

'E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become

Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

First Gent.

I'll save you

That labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony 4

Of bringing back the prisoner.

Sec. Gent.

Were you there ?

First Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

Sec. Gent.

Pray speak what has happen'd.

First Gent.

You may guess quickly what.

Sec. Gent.

Is he found guilty ?

First Gent.

Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't. 3

Sec. Gent.

I am sorry for't.

First Gent.

So are a number more.

Sec. Gent.

But, pray, how pass'd it ?

First Gent.

I'll tell you in a little. The great duke

Came to the bar ; where, to his accusations 12

He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd

Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The king's attorney on the contrary
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses, which the duke desir'd 17
To have brought, viâ voce, to his face:
At which appear'd against him his s<sup>r</sup>veyor;
Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk, 21
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

Sec. Gent. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?

First Gent. The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not: 25

And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all 28
Was either pittied in him or forgotten.

Sec. Gent. After all this how did he bear himself?

First Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely, 33
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience. 36

Sec. Gent. I do not think he fears death.

First Gent. Sure, he does not;
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.

Sec. Gent. Certainly
The cardinal is the end of this.

First Gent. 'Tis likely 40
By all conjectures: first, Kildarc's attainder,
Then deputy of Ireland; who, remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.

Sec. Gent. That trick of state 44
Was a deep envious one.

First Gent. At his return,
No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally, whoever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment, 48
And far enough from court too.

Sec. Gent. All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much
They love and dote on; call him bounteous
Buckingham, 52

The mirror of all courtesy:—

First Gent. Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruler'd man you speak of.

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment:
Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: with him SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX,
SIR WILLIAM SANDS, and common people.

Sec. Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me, 56
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear
witness,

And if I have a conscience, let it sluk me, 60
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no mallice for my death,
'T has done upon the premises but justice;
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians: 64

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em.
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against
'em. 68

For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham, 72
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me, 76
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any mallice in your heart 80
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive
you

As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences 84
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with: no
black envy

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his
Grace;

And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers 88

Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be! 92
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your
Grace;

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there! 97
The duke is coming: see the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable,
And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:

Yet I am richer than my base accusers, 104
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it;

And with that blood will make them one day
groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Bunister, 109
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!

Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying 112
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all 116
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes
me

A little happier than my wretched father: 120
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes; both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain: 125
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels Be sure you be not loose; for those you make
friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive 128

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye: the last hour 132

Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:

And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell. I have done; and God forgive me! [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Train.

First Gent. O! this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.

Sec. Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inkling 140
Of an ensuing evil, if't fall,
Greater than this.

First Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith,
sir?

Sec. Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill requiere 144

A strong faith to conceit: Let me have it;
First Gent. I do not talk much.

Sec. Gent. I am confident:
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation 148

Between the king and Katharine?
First Gent. Yes, but it held not;

For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues 152
That durst disperse it.

Sec. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice 157
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her: to confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately; 160
As all think, for this business.

First Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

Sec. Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but is't not cruel 165
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall
First Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this; 168
Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord, The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me;
with this reason: His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think. 12

Enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your Graces.

Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife 17

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No; his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so:

This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune, Turns what he list. The king will know him one
day. 22

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league 25

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, 28
Fears, and despairs; and all these for his marriage:

And out of all these, to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years 32
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
'Tis most true

These news are every where; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for 't. All that dare
Look into these affairs, see this main end, 41
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, 45

And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages. All men's honours 48
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.
As I am made without him, so I'll stand, 52
If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king 57
From these sad thoughts, that work too much
upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;

The king hath sent me elsewhere; besides, 60
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The KING is discovered sitting and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who is there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves 65

Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences 68

Mullee ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way
Is business of estate; in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold.
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business: 72

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPELUS.

Who's there? my good Lord Cardinal? O! my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To CAMPELUS.]

You're welcome, 76

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us, and let. [To WOLSEY.] My good lord,
have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would your Grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. [To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.] We are busy; go. 81

Nor. [Aside to SUFFOLK.] This priest has no pride in him!

Suf. [Aside to NORFOLK.] Not to speak of;

I would not be so sick though for his place:

But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to SUFFOLK.] If it do, 84

I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to NORFOLK.] I another.

[Exit NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely

Your scruple to the voice of Christendom. 88

Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?

The Spaniard, tled by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerks, 92

I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms

Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgment,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent

One general tongue unto us, this good man, 96

This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campelus;

Whom once more I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And once more in my arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their loves;

They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for. 101

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your highness' hand

I tender my commission, by whose virtue,— 104

The court of Rome commanding.—you, my Lord Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant.

In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner? 108

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her

So dear in heart, not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law, 112
Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my favour

To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal,

Prithee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary: I find him a fit fellow. [Exit WOLSEY.]

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to GARDINER.] Give me your hand; much joy and favour to you; You are the king's now.

Gard. [Aside to WOLSEY.] But to be commanded

For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me. 120

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They converse apart.]

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace

In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely. 124

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him,

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him 129

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!

That's Christian care enough: for living murderers

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool, 132
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,

If I command him, follows my appointment: I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons. 136

K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen. [Exit GARDINER.]

The most convenient place that I can think of For such receipt of learning, is Black-Friars; There ye shall meet about this weighty business.

My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my lord! 141
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a befellow? But, conscience, con- science!

O! 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. 144
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—An Antechamber in the QUEEN'S Apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang that pinches:

His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life, 4

She never knew harm-doing; O! now, after So many courses of the sun enthron'd,

Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than 8

'Tis sweet at first to acquire, after this process To give her the avault! it is a pity

Would move a monster.

Old Lady. Hearts of most hard temper Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O! God's will; much better 12
She ne'er had known pomp: though't be tem- peral,

Yet, if that quarrel, Fortune, do divorce It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging

As soul and body's severing.

Old Lady. Alas! poor lady, 16
She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more Must pity drop upon her. Verily,

I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born, And range with humble livers in content. 20

Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief And wear a golden sorrow.

Old Lady. Our content Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead I would not be a queen.

Old Lady. Beshrew me, I would, 24
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you,

For all this spice of your hypocrisy. You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,

Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet 23
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:

Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts—

Saving your minelng—the capacity Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth. 33
Old Lady. Yes, troth, and troth; you would not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old Lady. 'Tis strange: a three-pence how'd would hire me, 36

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that loss of title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old Lady. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a little: 40

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to: if your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk! 44

I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old Lady. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes
here? 49

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were 't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,

Not your demand; it values not your asking: 52
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming

The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen! 56

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note 's
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion of you, and 61
Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support, 64
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know

What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing, nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes 68
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Arc all I can return. Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing maid, to his highness,
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady, 73

I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you. [Aside.] I have perus'd her well;

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled 76
That they have caught the king; and who knows
yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle? [To her.] I'll to the
king,

And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord. 80

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Old Lady. Why, this it is; see, see!

I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late 84

For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here,—fie, fie, upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd
up

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me. 88

Old Lady. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.

There was a lady once,—'tis an old story,—
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt: have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old Lady. With your theme I could O'er mount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life 96

That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess: say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, 100

Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows. 104

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.

Old Lady. What do you think me?

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Ver-gers, with short silver wands; next them, two Seribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, alone; after him, the BISHOPS OF LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, at some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the KING and QUEEN, and their Trains. The KING takes place under the cloth of state; the two CARDINALS sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place at some distance from the KING. The BISHOPS place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the BISHOPS. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,

Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,

And on all sides the authority allow'd; 4

You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so. Proceed.

Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry King of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here. 3

Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

[The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;

And to bestow your pity on me; for 12

I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,

Born out of your dominions; having here

No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance

Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir,

In what have I offended you? what cause 17

Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,

That thus you should proceed to put me off

And take your good grace from me? Heaven 20

witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife,

At all times to your will conformable;

Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,

Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry

As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour 25

I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your 28

friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew

He were mine enemy? what friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I

Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice

He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to 31

mind

That I have been your wife, in this obedience

Upward of twenty years, and have been blest

With many children by you: if, in the course

And process of this time, you can report, 36

And prove it too, against mine honour aught,

My bond to wellock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name
Turn ine away; and let the foul'st contempt 40

Shut door upon me, and so give me up

To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,

The king, your father, was reputed for

A prince most prudent, of an excellent 44

And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand,

My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one

The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before: it is not to be question'd 48

That they had gather'd a wise council to them

Of every realm, that did debate this business,

Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may 52

Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel

I will implore: If not, I the name of God,

Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,—

And of your choice,—these reverend fathers;—

men

Of singular integrity and learning, 56

Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled

To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court, as well 60

For your own quiet, as to rectify

What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His Grace

Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam,

It's fit this royal session do proceed, 64

And that, without delay, their arguments

Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal,

To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath. Sir,

I am about to weep; but, thinking that 68

We are a queen,—or long have dream'd so,— certain

The daughter of a king, my drops of tears

I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, 72

before,

Or God will punish me. I do believe,

Induc'd by potent circumstances, that

You are mine enemy; and make my challenge

You shall not be my judge; for it is you 76

Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,

Which God's dew queneth! Therefore I say

again,

I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul

Refuse you for my judge, whom, yet once more,

I hold my most malicious foe, and think not 81

At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess

You speak not like yourself; who ever yet

Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom 85
O'ertopping woman's power, Madam, you do me
wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you or any: how far I have proceeded, 88
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge
me

That I have blown this coal: I do deny it. 92
The king is present: If it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know 96
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which before 100

His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak 104
To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted

Where powers are your retainers, and your
words,

Domesticks to you, serve your will as't please 112 Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
you,

You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here, 116
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause fore his holiness,
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.]

Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and 120
Disdainful to be tried by't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.
Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court. 124

Grif. Madam, you are called back.
Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you,
keep your way:

When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord
help!

They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass
on: 128

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more

Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt QUEEN, and her Attendants.]

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man I' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted, 133
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,—
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts 137
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,—
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble born;
And, like her true nobility, she has 140
Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound 144

There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied,—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might 148
Induce you the question on't? or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word that might.

Be to the prejudice of her present state, 152
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not 156
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You're excus'd:
But will you be more justified? you ever 160
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd,
oft,

The passages made toward it. On my honour,
I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point, 164
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,

I will be bold with time and your attention;
Then mark the inducement. Thus it came; give heed to't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, 168
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French au-bassador,

Who had been hither sent on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and 172
Our daughter Mary. I' the progress of this business,

Ere a determinate resolution, he—
I mean, the bishop—did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise 176
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, 180
 Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
 The region of my breast; which forc'd such way,
 That many maz'd considerings did throng,
 And press'd in with this caution. First, me-
 thought 184

I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
 If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should
 Do us more offices of life to't than 188
 The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
 Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought

This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,
 Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should
 not 193

Be gladdened in't by me. Then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
 By this my issue's fall; and that gave to me 196
 Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
 The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say, 200
 I meant to rectify my conscience, which
 I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
 By all the rev'rend fathers of the land
 And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
 With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
 How under my oppression I did reek,
 When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd yourself to say 208

How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,

The question did at first so stagger me,
 Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
 And consequence of dread, that I committed 212
 The darlings't counsel that I had to doubt;
 And did entreat your highness to this course
 Which you are running here.

K. Hen. Then I mov'd you,
 My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave 216
 To make this present summons. Unsolicited
 I left no reverend person in this court;
 But by particular consent proceeded
 Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
 For no dislike I' the world against the person
 Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
 Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.

Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life 224
 And kingly dignity, we are contented
 To wear our mortal state to come with her,
 Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
 That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness, 228
 The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
 That we adjourn this court till further day.
 Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
 Made to the queen, to call back her appeal 232

She intends unto his holiness.

[They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. [Aside.] I may perceive
 These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
 This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
 My learn'd and well-beloved servant Cranmer,
 Prithee, return: with thy approach, I know, 237
 My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
 I say, set on.

[Exeunt, in manner as they entered.]

Act III.

Scene I.—The Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the QUEEN'S Apartment.

The QUEEN and her Women at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
 Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
 And the mountain tops that freeze, 4
 Bow themselves, when he did sing:
 To his music plants and flowers
 Ever sprung; as sun and showers
 There had made a lasting spring. 8
 Every thing that heard him play,
 Even the billows of the sea,
 Hung their heads, and then lay by.
 In sweet music is such art, 12
 Killing care and grief of heart
 Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!

Gent. An't please your Grace, the two great cardinals 16

wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They wou'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their Graces

To come near. [Exit Gentleman.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?
 I do not like their coming, now I think on't. 21
 They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMERON.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife, 24

I would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you 28

The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,

Deserves a corner: will all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do! 32

My lords, I care not—so much I am happy
Above a number—if my actions

Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em, 36

I know my life so even. If your business

Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. *Tanta esi erga te mentis integritas,
regina serenissima.*— 40

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;

I am not such a truant since my coming

As not to know the language I have liv'd in:

A strange tongue makes my cause more strange,
suspicious; 44

'Pr.-, speak in English: here are some will thank
you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake:
Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord

Cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed 48
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,

I am sorry my integrity should breed,—

And servile to his majesty and you,—

So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant. 52

We come not by the way of accusation,

To taint that honour every good tongue hesses,

Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,

You have too much, good lady; but to know 56

How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the king and you; and to deliver,

Like free and honest men, our just opinions

And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam, 60

My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,

Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace,

Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure

Both of his truth and him,—which was too far,—

Offers, as I do, in sign of peace, 65

His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside.] To betray me.

My lords, I thank you both for your good wills;

Ye speak like honest men,—pray God, ye prove

so!— 68

But how to make ye suddenly an answer,

In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,—

More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit,

And to such men of gravity and learning, 72

In truth, I know not. I was set at work

Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking

Either for such men or such business.

For her sake that I have been,—for I feel 76

The last fit of my greatness,—good your Graces

Let me have time and counsel for my cause:

Alas! I am a woman, fricndless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears: 80

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England

But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,

That any Englishman dare give me counsel?

Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,— 84

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,—

And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,

They that must weigh out my afflictions, 87

They that my trust must grow to, live not here:

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence

In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your Grace

Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection; 92

He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much

Both for your honour better and your cause;

For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,

You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly. 96

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both;

my ruin.

Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!

Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge

That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us. 100

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;

But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.

Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort? 104

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,

A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd

I will not wish ye half my miseries,

I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye: 108

Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at

once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;

You turn the good we offer into envy. 112

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon

ye,

And all such false professors! Would ye have

me,—

If ye have any justice, any pity;

If ye be anything but churchmen's habits,— 116

Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas! he has banished me his bed already,

His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords,

And all the fellowship I hold now with him 120

Is only my obedience. What can happen

To me above this wretchedness? all your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak myself, 124

Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?
 A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
 Never yet branded with suspicion?
 Have I with all my full affections 128
 Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven?
 obey'd him?

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
 Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
 And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords. 132
 Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
 One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure,
 And to that woman, when she has done most,
 Yet will I add an honour, a great patience. 136
Hol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so gully,

To give up willingly that noble title
 Your master wed me to: nothing but death 140
 Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Hol. Pray hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English
 earth,

Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
 Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your
 hearts. 144

What will become of me now, wretched lady?
 I am the most unhappy woman living.
 [To her women.] Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity, 148
 No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
 Almost no grave allow'd me. Like the lily,
 That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
 I'll hang my head and perish.

Hol. If your Grace 152
 Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,

You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,

Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
 The way of our profession is against it: 156
 We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them.

For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
 How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage. 160

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
 So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
 They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.

I know you have a gentle, noble temper, 164
 A soul as even as a calm: pray think us
 Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues

With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
 As yours was put into you, ever casts 169
 Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;

Beware you lose it not: for us, if you please

To trust as in your business, we are ready 172
 To use our utmost remedies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what you will, my lords: and pray, forgive me

If I have us'd myself unmannerly.
 You know I am a woman, lacking wit 176

To make a securely answer to such persons.
 Pray do my service to his majesty:

He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers
 While I shall have my life. Come, reverend 180

fathers,
 Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs

That little thought, when she set footing here,
 She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Antechamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,

And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
 Cannot stand under them: If you omit

The offer of this time, I cannot promise 4
 But that you shall sustain more new disgraces

With these you bear already.

Sar. I am joyful 1
 To meet the least occasion that may give me
 Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, 8

To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
 Have uncontentm'd gone by him, or at least

Strangely neglected? when did he regard
 The stamp of nobleness in any person, 12

Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
 What he deserves of you and me, I know;

What we can do to him,—though now the time
 Gives way to us,—I much fear. If you cannot 16

Bar his access to the king, never attempt
 Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
 Over the king in's tongue.

Nor. O! fear him not;
 His spell in that is out: the king hath found 20

Matter against him that for ever mars
 The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
 Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sar. Sir, 18
 I should be glad to hear such news as this 24

Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true:
 In the divorce his contrary proceedings
 Are all unfolded; wherein he appears

As I would wish mine enemy. 28

Sar. How came 28
 His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.
Sar. O! how! how!

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
And came to the eye o' the king; wherein was
read,
That the cardinal did entreat his holiness 32
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.' 36
Sur. Has the king this
Suf. Believe it.
Sur. Will this work?
Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts
And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already 41
Hath married the fair lady.
Sur. Would he had!
Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my
lord!
For I profess, you have it.
Sur. Now all my joy 44
Trace the conjunction!
Suf. My amen to't!
Nor. All men's.
Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords, 48
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.
Sur. But will the king 52
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
The Lord forbid!
Nor. Marry, ayeen!
Suf. No, no;
There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal
Campelus 56
Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you 60
The king cried Ha! at this.
Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry Ha! louder.
Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which 64
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and 68
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,
And widow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This saue Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain 72
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.
Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.
The cardinal!
Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.
Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, 76
Gave't you the king?
Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently
He did unseal them; and the first he view'd, 80
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.
Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?
Crom. I think, by this he is. 84
Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit CROMWELL.
[Aside.] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French King's sister; he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
There's more in't than fair visage. Bulleu! 88
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke;
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough, 93
Lord, for thy justice!
Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's
daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
Then, out it goes. What though I know her virtuous
And well deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to 100
Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up
A heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king, 104
And is his oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on's heart!
Enter the KING, reading a schedule; and LOVELL.
Suf. The king, the king!
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated 108
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rake this together? Now, my lords,
A a

Saw you the cardinal ?

Nor. My lord, we have 112
Stood here observing him ; some strange commotion

Is in his brain : he bites his lip, and starts ;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple ; straight 116
Springs out into fast gait ; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard ; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon : in most strange postures

We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be : 120
There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd ; and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly ? 124
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing ;
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs and ornaments of household, which
I find at such a proud rate that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will : 129
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think 132
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings : but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers

LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY.

Wol. Heaven forgive me ! 136

Ever God bless your highness !

K. Hen. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind, the which You were now running o'er : you have scarce
time 140

To steal from spirital leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly audit : sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir, 144

For holy offices I have a time ; a time
To think upon the part of business which I bear 't the state ; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce 148
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well 152
With my well saying !

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again ;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well :
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd
you :

He said he did ; and with his deed did crown 156
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart ; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come
home,

But par'd my present havings, to bestow 160
My bounties upon you.

Wol. [Aside.] What should this mean ?

Sir. [Aside.] The Lord increase this business !

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state ? I pray you, tell
me

If what I now pronounce you have found true ;
And if you may confess it, say withal, 165
If you are bound to us or no. What say you ?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, Shower'd on me dally, have been more than
could 168

My studied purposes requite ; which went
Beyond all man's endeavours : my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet flid with my abilities. Mine own ends 172
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces

Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I 176
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd ; 180

A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated ; the honour of it
Does pay the act of it, as, 't the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume 184
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
more

On you than any ; so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd 192
More than mine own ; that am, have, and will
be.

Though all the world should crack their duty to
you,
And throw it from their soul ; though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make 'em,
and 196

Appear in forms more horrid, yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken. 200
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open 't. Read o'er this ;
[Giving him papers.]
And after, this : and then to breakfast with

What appetite you have.

[Exit KING, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY; the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.]

Wol. What should this mean? 204
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him;
Then unakes him nothing. I must read this paper; 209

I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so;
This paper has undone me! 'Tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And see my friends in Rome. O uegligence!
Fitt for a fool to fall by: what cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet 216
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune 220
Will bring me off again. What's this?—'To the Pope!

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to 's hollness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness; 224
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more. 228

Re-enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK,
the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's, 232
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay,
Where's your commission, lord? words canuot carry Authority so weighty.

Stef. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it, 237

I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy: 240
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin
Follow your envious courses, men of malice; 244
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no
doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king—

Mine and your master—with his own hand gave
me; 248

Bade me enjoy it with the place and honours
During my life; and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents: now who'll take it?

Sur. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then. 252

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tougue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,

Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land 256
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:

The heads of all thy brother cardinals—

With thee and all thy best parts bound together—

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy! 260

You sent me deputy for Ireland,

Far from his succour, from the king, from all

That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity, 264
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This and all else

This talking lord can lay upon my credit,

I answer is most false. The duke by law

Found his deserts: how innocent I was 268

From any private malice in his end,

His noble jury and foul cause can witness.

If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,

You have as little honesty as honour, 272

That in the way of loyalty and truth

Toward the king, my ever royal master,

Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,

And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul, 276

Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel

My sword if 'the life-blood of thee else. My lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?

Aud from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, 281

Farewell nobility; let his Grace go forward,

And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness

Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness 284

Of gleancing all the land's wealth into one,

Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;

The goodness of your intercepted packets,

You writ to the pope against the king; your goodness, 288

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,

As you respect the common good, the state

Of our despis'd nobility, our issues, 292

Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,

Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles

Collected from his life; I'll startle you

Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown
wench 296

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it!

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's
hand; 300

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember 304

Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry 'guilty,' cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections; if I blush, 308
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head.
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,

You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You malm'd the jurisdiction of all bishops. 313

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else

To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Suf. Then, that without the knowledge 317
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal. 320

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara. 324

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,—

By what means got I leave to your own conscience,— 328

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious, 332
I will not talat my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord!
Press not a fallug man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
him 336

So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,

Because all those things you have done of late,

By your power legatine, withlu this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire, 341

That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be 344
Out of the king's protection. This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us, 343
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.
[Exeunt all except WOLSEY.]

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear
me.

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth 353

The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost; 356
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,

And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory, 361
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me,

Weary and old with service, to the mercy 364
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:

I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,

More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, 372
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What! amaz'd!

At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, as you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace?

Wol. Why, well; 377
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.

I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities, 380

A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd
me,

I humbly thank his Grace; and from these
shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour: 384

O! 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,—
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,— 339
To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him! 393

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen

Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue 396

Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,

When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more? 401

Crom. That Crannier is return'd with welcome, Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen, 405
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell! 408

The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited 412
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Crom-
well;

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: seek the king;—
That sun, I pray, may never set!—I have told
him 416

What, and how true thou art; he will advance
thee;

Some little memory of me will stir him—
I know his noble nature—not to let Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord!
Must I then, leave you?—I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master? 424

Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The king shall have my service; but my
prayers

For ever and for ever, shall be yours. 428

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear

In all my miseries; but thou hast fore'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me,
Cromwell; 432

And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught
thee,

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of
honour, 437

Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master mis'd
it.

Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. 440
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:

By that sin fell the angels; how can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee; 444

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear
not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O
Cromwell!

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king; 449
And,—prithee, lead me in:

There take an inventory of all I have, 452
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven is all

I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Crom-
well!

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal 456
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.

Wol. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.

Act IV.

Scene I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gen. You're well met once again.
Sec. Gen. So are you.

First Gen. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?
Sec. Gen. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial. 4
First Gen. 'Tis very true: but that time

offer'd sorrow;
This, general joy.

Sec. Gen. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds,
As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever

forward, 9

In celebration of this day with shows,

Pageants, and suits of honour.

First Gen. Never greater;

Nor, I'll assure you, be taken, sir. 12

Sec. Gen. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

First Gen. Yes; 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day

By custom of the coronation. 16

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims

To be high-steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,

He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.

Sec. Gen. I thank you, sir; have I not known those customs, 20

I should have been bold to bring to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what business hath your business.

First Gen. That I have told you too, The Archbishop 4

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles

From Ampthill, where the princess lay, to which

She was often cited by them, but appear'd not

And, to be short, for not appearance and

The king's late scruple, by the main assent

Of all these learned men she was divorc'd. 32

And the late marriage made of none effect:

Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,

Where she remains now sick.

Sec. Gen. Alas! good lady!

[Trumpets

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming. [Hautboys

6. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.

of gold, wrought with flowers bearing the QUEEN'S train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

They pass over the stage in order and so.

Sec. Gen. A royal train, believe me. These I know; 37

Who's that that bears the sceptre?

First Gen. The Countess Dorset;

And that the Earl of Surrey with the rod

Sec. Gen. A bold brave gentleman that should be 40

The Duke of Suffolk?

First Gen. 'Tis the same, high-steward

Sec. Gen. And that the Duke of Norfolk?

First Gen. Yes.

Sec. Gen. [Looking to the QUEEN.] Heaven bless thee!

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.

She as I have a soul, she is an angel; 44

Our king has all the Indies in his arms,

And more and richer, when he strains that lady;

I cannot blame his conscience.

First Gen. They that bear

The lot of honour over her, are four barons 48

Of the Cinque-ports.

Sec. Gen. Those men are happy; and 40 are all are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk. 52

First Gen. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

Sec. Gen. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;

and something falling ones.

First Gen. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Save you, sir. When shall we see the where a finger

Sec. Gen. You saw

The ceremony?

Third Gen. That I did.

First Gen. How well it?

Third Gen. Well worth the seeing.

Sec. Gen. Good sir, thank it to us.

Third Gen. As well as I am able. The rich

return

Of lord and lady have brought the queen

To a parish church in the choir bell off 64

A distance from the while her train sat down

To receive some half an hour's

 Third Gen. Thomas Cromwell:
 A man in much esteem with the king, and truly

A worthy friend. The king
 Has made him master of the jewel house,
 And one, alre
 Sec. Gen. I will deserve more.
 Third Gen. Yes, without all doubt.

Come, gentlemen, we shall go my way, which is to the court, and they shall be my guests:
 Something I can command. As I walk thither,
 I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. 117
 [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick: led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grif. How does your Grace?
 Kath. O Griffith! sick to death!
 My legs, like loaden branches bow to the earth,
 Will not leave their burden. Reach a chair:
 So, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Dis you not tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd'st
 That great child of honour, Cardinal
 Wolsey,

Was dead?
 Grif. Yes, madam; but I think your Grace,
 Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Prithce, good Griffith, tell me how he
 died:
 If well, he stepp'd before me happily,
 For my example.

Grif. Your voice goes, madam:
 For after the stout Arrested him at forward,

As a man sorely tainted
 He fell sick suddenly, and
 He could not sit his mule

Kath. For man.
 Grif. At last, with ease
 Leicester;

Lodg'd in the aboye, where the reverend abbot,
 With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him:
 To whom he gave these words: 'O! father abbot,

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
 's come to lay his weary bones among ye;
 Give him a little earth for charity.'

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness
 Pursu'd him still; and three nights after this,
 About the hour of eight,—which he himself
 Foretold should be his last,—full of repentance,
 Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
 He gave his honours to the world again,
 His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on
 him!
 Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
 him,
 And yet with charity. Ho was a man

Of an unbonded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdom; simony was fair play; 36
His own opinion was his law; 't the presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful;
His promises were, as he then was, mighty; 40
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam, 44
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal, 48
Though from a humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading; 52
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,—
Which was a sin,—yet in bestowing, madam, 56
He was most princely. Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; 60

The other, though unfinished, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him; 64
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little;
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
To keep mine honour from corruption, 72
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower: 76
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I mus'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to. 80

[Sad and solemn music.]
Grif. She is asleep; good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend curtsies: then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order, at which,—as it were by inspiration,—she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for: 85
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces 88
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?

They promis'd me eternal happiness.

And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall assuredly,

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams

Possess your fancy. 93

Kath. Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.]

Pat. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks, 97

And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes!

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her! 100

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your Grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use so rude behaviour; go to, kneel. 104

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness'
pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow 108

Let me ne'er see again.
[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger.]

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCHIN.
If my sight fail not,

You should be lord ambassador from the emperor.

My royal nephew, and your name Capuehus.

Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.

Kath. O my lord! 112

The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me since first you knew me. But, I pray
you,

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your Grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you; 117
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort. 120

Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late;

'Tis like a pardon after execution:
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here but prayers.
How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health. 125

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor
name

Banish'd the kingdom. Patience, is that letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam. 129
[Giving it to KATHARINE.]

Kath. Sir, I most lamely pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness 132

The model of our chaste loves, his young
daughter:

The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on
her!

Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding,—
She is young, and of a noble modest nature, 136

I hope she will deserve well,—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him, Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition

Is, that his noble Grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long 141

Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,—

And now I should not lie,—but will deserve, 144
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,

A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have
'em. 148

The last is, for my men: they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw 'em from me;

That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by: 152

If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer
life

And able means, we had not parted thus.

These are the whole contents: and, good my
lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world, 156
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the
king

To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man! 160

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember
me

In all humility unto his highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing

Out of this world; tell him, in death I bless'd
him, 164

For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,

You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
Call in more women. When I am dead, good
wench, 168

Let me be us'd with honour: strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may
know

I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet
like 172

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.

I can no more. [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE.]

Act V.

Scene 1.—London. A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS
LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us 4

To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir
Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero

With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too, 8
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business; affairs, that walk— 13

As they say spirits do—at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you, 16
A a 8

And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,

They say, in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with so
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live; but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says :4
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas: you're a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well, :29
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two :32
The most remark'd in the kingdom. As for Cromwell,

Beside that of the jewel-house, is made master
Of the rolls, and the king's secretary; further, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of woe preferences,
With which the time will load him. The archbishop

Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare
speak

One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,
Sir,—I may tell it you,—I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council that he is—
For so I know he is, they know he is— :44
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they mov'd

Have broken with the king; who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint,—of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons told before him,—hath command'd
To-morrow morning to the council-board :51
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good-night, Sir Thomas!

Lov. Many good-nights, my lord. I rest your servant. [Exeunt GARDINER and Page.]

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more tonight; :56

My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me,
Suf. Sir, I shall never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play. :60
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her

What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks :64
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What sayst thou, ha?
To pray for her? what! is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made :68

Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas! good lady.

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladdening of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles; :72
Prithee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness :76
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good-night.
[Exit SUFFOLK.]

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, Sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop, :80

As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true. where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.
[Exit DENNY.]

Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the bishop spake : :84
I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

[LOVELL seems to stay.]

Ha! I have said. Begone.

What!— [Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY.]

Cran. I am fearful. Wherefore frowns he
thus? :88

'Tis his aspect of terror: all's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to know

Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. :91

Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: come, come, give me your hand.

Ah! my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, :96
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late

Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you; which, being con-
sider'd, 100

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges 104
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: you a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness 103
Would come against you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] I humbly thank your high-
ness;

And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder; for I know 112
There's none stands under more calumnious
tongues

Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury:
Thy truth and thy integrity is root'd
In us, thy friend: give me thy hand, stand up;
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holidame, 117
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together 120

Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard
you,

Without indurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:
If they shall fall, I, with mine enemies, 124
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh
not,

Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world? 128

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it. At what case 132
Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
as great size. When you of better luck, 136
Than an in perjur'd witness, than your master,
Some minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger, 140
And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and your majesty Protect mine innocence! or I fall into

The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;

They shall no more prevail than we give way
to. 144

Keep comfort to you; and this morning see You do appear before them. If they shall chance,

In charging you with matters, to consult you,
The best persuasions to the contrary 148

Enil not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: If entreaties

Will render you no remedy, this ring
Dellver them, and your appeal to us 152

There make before them. Look! the good man weeps;

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest
mother!

I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom. Get you gone, 156

And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRANMER.] He has strangled

His language in his tears.

Enter an Old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back: what mean you?
Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I
bring 160

Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen dellver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege; 165
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen 168
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell!

Re-enter Lovell.

Lov. Sir!
K. Hen. Give her a hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit.]

Old L. A hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more. 173

An ordinary groom is for such payment:
I will have more, or scold it out of him,
Said I for this the girl was like to him? 176
I will have more, or else unsay't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Pursuivants, Pages, &c., attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the gentleman,

That was sent to me from the council, pray'd
To make great haste. All fast? what means this?
Ho!
Who waits there?

Enter KEEPER.

Sure, you know me?

Keep. Yes, my lord;

But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS.

Cran. So,
Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad

I came this way so happily: the king
Shall understand it presently.

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,
The king's physician. As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace! For certain,

This is of purpose bid by some that hate me,—
God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,—

To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me

Wait else at door, a fellow-counselor,
'Mong boys, groom, and lackeys. But their pleasures

Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter, at a window above, the KING and BUTTS.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think your highness saw this munny a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord,
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury;

Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,

Pages, and foothoys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed:
Is this the honour they do one another?

'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em,—
At least, good manners,—as not thus to suffer

A man of his place, and so near our favour,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,

And at the door too, like a post with packets.
O holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:

Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon.

[Exeunt above.]

Scene III.—The Council-Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the DUKK OF SUFFOLK, the DUKK OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROMWELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at the lower end as secretary. Keeper at the door.

Chan. Speak to the business, Master secretary:

Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours,

The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

Keep. My lord archbishop:
And has done half-an-hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

Keep. Your Grace may enter now.
[CRANMER enters and approaches the council-table.]

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I'm very sorry

To sit here at this present and behold
That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdeemean'd yourself, and not a little,
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,—

For so we are informed,—with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer—
Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man's honour—this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physick: and what follows then?

Commotions, uproars, with a general talut
Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the progress

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,

And with no little study, that my teaching
 And the strong course of my authority
 Might go one way, and safely; and the end 36
 Was ever, to do well: nor is there living,—
 I speak it with a single heart, my lords,—
 A man that more detests, more stirs against,
 Both in his private conscience and his place, 40
 Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
 Pray heaven the king may never find a heart
 With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked unallice nourishment 44
 Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships
 That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
 Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
 And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord, 48
 That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
 And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
 We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness'
 pleasure, 52

And our consent, for better trial of you,
 From hence you be committed to the Tower;
 Where, being but a private man again,
 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly, 56
 More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah! my good Lord of Winchester, I
 thank you;

You are always my good friend: if your will pass,
 I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
 You are so merciful. I see your end; 61
 'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,
 Become a churchman better than ambition:
 Win scrawling souls with modesty again, 64
 Cast t'one away. That I shall clear myself,
 Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
 I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
 In doing dally wrongs. I could say more, 68
 But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;
 That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,
 To men that understand you, words and weakness. 72

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,
 By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
 However faulty, yet should find respect
 For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty 76
 To load a falling man.

Gar. Good Master secretary,
 I cry your honour mercy, you may, worst
 Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer 80
 Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest!
 Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do, 84

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much;
 Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands
 agreed.

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith 88

You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner:

There to remain till the king's further pleasure
 Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
 But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other 93
 Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some of the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?

Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him, 96

And see him safe to the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords;

I have a little yet to say. Look there, my
 lords;

By virtue of that ring I take my cause

Out of the gripe of cruel men, and give it 100

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Suf. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye
 all,

When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,

'T would fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords, 105

The king will suffer but the little finger

Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain:

How much more is his life in value with him?

Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me, 109

In seeking tales and informations

Against this man—whose honesty the devil

And his disciples only envy at— 112

Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye!

Enter the KING, frowning on them: he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In dally thanks, that gave us such a prince;

Not only good and wise, but most religious: 116

One that in all obedience makes the Church

The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,

His royal self in judgment comes to hear 120

The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations, Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence;
They are too thin and bare to hide offences. 125
To me you cannot reach; you play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win
me;
But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure 128
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.
[To CRANMER.] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest

He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:
Ily all that's holy, he had better starve 132
Than but once think this place becomes thee not.
Sir. May it please your Grace—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me.
I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council; but I find none. 136
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man,—few of you deserve that title,—
This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy
At chamber-door? and one as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission 141

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see, 144
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chan. Thus far,
My most dread sovereign, may it like your
Grace 148
To let my tongue excuse all. What was pur-pos'd

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather—
If there be faith in men—meant for his trial
And fair purgation to the world, than malice, 152
I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a prince
May be beholding to a subject, I 156
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me; 160
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour: how may I deserve it, 164
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons: you shall have two noble partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess Dorset: will these please you? 169

Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge
you,

Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart

And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven 172

Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man! those joyful tears show thy true heart:

The common voice, I see, is verified

Of thee, which says thus, 'Do my Lord of Canterbury 176

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.'

Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long

To have this young one made a Christian.

As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; 180

So grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Palace-Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals.
Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within.] Good Master porter, I belong to the barler. 5

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones:
these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings! Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? 12

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons—
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep

On May-day morning; which will never be. 16

We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in?

As much as one sound cudgel of four foot— 20

You see the poor remainder—could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old, 25

He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,

Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again;

And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

[Within.] Do you hear, Master porter? 29

Port. I shall be with you presently, good

Master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do? 32

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together. 40

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in his nose: all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her plaked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff to me; I defied 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em I think, surely. 64

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beads, that is to come. 72

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still too, from all parts they are coming. As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves? Ye have made a fine hand, fellows: 76

There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies. When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour, 80
We are but men; and what so many may do, Not being torn a-pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all 84
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads

Clap round fines for neglect: ye're lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when

Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound; 88

They're come already from the christening. Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. 92

Port. Make way there for't
Man. eat fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make y
Port. You f' the canlet, go, my I'll plck you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt. 92

Scene V.—The Palace.

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SURFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-benches for the christening gifts; then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child, richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS OF DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stags, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth! 4

Flourish. Enter KING and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal Grace, and the good queen,
My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy, 8
May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop:
What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.
K. Hen. Stand up, lord.
[The KING kisses the Child.

With this kiss take my blessing; God protect thee!

Into whose hand I give thy life.
Cran. Amen. 12

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:

I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter 16

Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.

This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this laud a thousand thousand blessings

Which time shall bring to ripeness: she shall be—

But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never 24
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good, 28
Shall still be doubled on her; truth shall nurse
her;

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her;
She shall be lov'd and fear'd; her own shall bless
her;

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, 32
And hung their heads with sorrow; good grows with her.

In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants; and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.
God shall be truly known; and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
And by those claim their greatness, not by
blood.

Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maked phoenix, 41
Her ashes new-create another heir
As great in admiration as herself,

So shall she leave her blessedness to one,— 44
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,—

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, 48
terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name 52
Shall be, and make new nations; he shall flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him; our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.
Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, 57

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her, yet a virgin;
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop! 64
Thou hast made me now a man: never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,
That when I am in heaven, I shall desire 68
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholding;
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
lords: 73

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank
ye;
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
He has business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We've frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear
They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry, 'That's witty!'
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear 8
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while 12
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

*The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made*

To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures 8

*The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.*

*To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their war-like freightage: now on Dardanian plains* 13

*The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilios, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples* 17

And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,

Sperr up the sons of Troy.

Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits, 20

On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,

Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come

A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence

Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited 24

In like conditions as our argument,

To tell you, fair beholders, that our play

Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,

Beginning in the middle; starting thence away

To what may be digested in a play. 29

Like or find fault; do as your pleasures are:

Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

Act I.

Scene I.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again:

Why should I war without the walls of Troy,

That find such cruel battle here within?

Each Trojan that is master of his heart, 4

Let him to field; Troilus, alas! has none.
Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?
Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
 Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant; 2
 But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
 Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
 Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
 And skilless as unpractis'd infancy. 12
Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this;
 for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further.
 He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding. 16
Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, tho' grinding; but you must tarry
 the bolting 20
Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.
Tro. Still have I tarried.
Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the unking of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips. 28
Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she
 be,
 Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.
 At Priam's royal table do I sit;
 And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,— So, traitor! 'when she comes!'—When is she thence? 33
Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.
Tro. I was about to tell thee: when my heart,
 As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, 37
 Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
 I have—as when the sun doth light a storm—
 Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile; 40
 But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming glad-
 ness,
 Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.
Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's,—well, go to,—there were no more comparison between the women: but, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her; but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but— 49
Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
 When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,
 Reply not in how many fathoms deep 52
 They lie drown'd. I tell thee I am mad
 In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair;
 Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
 Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
 Handlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand, 57
 In whose comparison all whites are ink,
 Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense Harsh as the palm of ploughman: this thou tell'st me, 61

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;
 But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
 Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given
 me 64

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: If she be fair, 'tis the better for her;
 an she be not she has the mends in her own
 hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus? 72

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail;
 Ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you;
 gone between, and between, but small thanks for my labour. 76

Tro. What! art thou angry, Pandarus? what!
 with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say; she is not fair? 83

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no.
 She's a fool to stay behind her father: let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more of the matter. 88

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me! I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. 93

[Exit PANDARUS. An alarm.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
 When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
 I cannot fight upon this argument;
 It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
 But Pandarus,—O gods! how do you plague me.
 I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar; 100
 And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo
 As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
 Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
 What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we? 104
 Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl;
 Between our illums and where she resides
 Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;
 Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar
 Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark. 109

Alarm. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there; this woman's answer sorts,

For womanish it is to be from thence. 112

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Trollus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gord' with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town
to-day! 118

Tro. Better at home, if 'woud I might' were
'may.

But to the sport abroad: are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A Street

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patheuce 4

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mor'd:

He ehh'd Andromache, and struck his armourer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, 8

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks 12

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se and stands alone. 16

Cres. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as villiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whose nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain'd but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and querry against the hair; he hath the joints of every thing, but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use;
or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight. 31

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking. 37

Cres. Who comes here?

Enter PANDARUS.

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man. 40

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander.

How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilum?

Cres. This morning, uncle. 47

Pan. What were you talking of when I came?

Was Hector armed and gougere ye came to Ilum? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. Even so: Hector was stirring early. 52

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too:
he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that:

and there's Trollus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Trollus, I can tell them that too. 60

Cres. What! is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Trollus? Trollus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison. 64

Pan. What! not between Trollus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew
him. 68

Pan. Well, I say Trollus is Trollus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Trollus in some degrees. 73

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Trollus, I would he were. 76

Cres. So he is.

Pan. Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself. Would n' were himself: well, the gods are above;

time must friend or eud: well, Trollus, well, I would my heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a better man than Trollus. 84

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale when the other's come to't.

Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities. 92

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him: his own's
better. 96

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour,—for so 'tis I must confess,—not brown neither,—

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compassed window, and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,—

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a officer?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,—

Cres. Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O! he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O! yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to, then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens if the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin: indeed, she has a marvell's white hand, I must needs confess,—

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white-hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas! poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing: Queen Hecuba laughed that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With millstones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, 'Here's but one-and-fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'One-and-fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he; 'pluck't out, and give it him.' But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true: he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [A retreat sounded.]

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Illium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here; here's an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes over the stage.

Pan. That's Æneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

ANTENOR passes over.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one of the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon. If he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that;

there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! Is't not a brave man? 216

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is a' not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there; there's no jesting; there's laying on, take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks! 222

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not; and the devil come to him, all one: by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris. 227

PARIS crosses over.

Look ye yonder, niece: is't not a gailant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha'! Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon. 233

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus. 237

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no, yet, he'll fight indifferently well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry, 'Troilus'! Helenus is a priest. 242

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes that?

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Troilus. 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece! He's Troilus! Troilus! the prince of chivalry! 246

Cres. Peace! for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him: O brave Troilus! look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helmet more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three-and-twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot. 259

Cres. Here come more.

Soldiers pass over.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after neat! I could live and die for the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone: crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece. 265

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel. 261

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and salt that season a man? 276

Cres. Ay, a minced man; and then to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie. 281

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches. 288

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching. 293

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would lustantly speak with you. 296

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.] I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, anon, by and by.

Cres. To bring news. 304

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice
He offers in another's enterprise; 308
But more in Troilus thousand-fold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing:
That she belov'd knows nought that knows not
this: 313

Me prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet, that ever knew

Love got so sweet as when desire did sue: 316
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach:

Achivement is command; ungain'd, beseech:
Then though my heart's content firm love doth
bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Grecian Camp. Before AGAMEMNON'S Tent.

Sounds. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and Others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designs begin on earth below 4 Falls in the proud's largeness: cheeks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
As Frota, by the conflux of meeting sup,
Infect the sound pine and divert his grain 8
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far
That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls
stand; 12

Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Hlas and thwart, not answering the aim, 16
And that unbolled figure of the thought That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks dash'd behold our works,
And call them shames? which are indeed nought
else

But the protractive trials of great Jove, 20
To find persistive constancy in men:
The fitness of which metal is not found
In Fortuna's love; for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread, 24
The hard and soft, seem all afflu'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away; 28
And what hath mass or matter, by itself
Lies rich in virtue and numbering'd.

Nest. With due observance of thy god-like
sent,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply 2
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth,

How many shallow bubble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way 30
With those of nobler hulk!

But let the ruffian Horans once engage
The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
The strong-ribb'd bark through light mountains cut, 40

Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Persens' horse: where's then the stuncy boat

Whose weak nutmber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled, 44
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Both valour's show and valour's worth divide
In storms of fortune; for in her ray and brightness

The heri hath more annoyance by the breeze 48
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting whid
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why then the thing of courage,

As round with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in self-same key, 53
Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon, Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only sprit, 56
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation
The which, [To AGAMEMNON.] most mighty for thy place and sway, 60
[To NESTOR.] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,

I give to both your speeches, which were such
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again 64
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air, strong as the axletree
On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish ears

To his experienc'd tongue, yet let it please both,
Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak. 68

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips, than we are confident, 72
When rank Therites opens his mastick jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been
down,

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master, 76

But for these instances,
The specialty of rule hath been neglected:

And look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive 81
To whom the foragers shall all repair,

What honey is expected? Degree being abated,
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask 84
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre

Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order: 88

And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other; whose measurable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil, 92
And posts, like the commandment of a king, Suns check, to good and bad; but when the planets

In evil mixture do disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents, what mutiny,
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth, 97

Commotion in the winds, frights, changes,
horrors,

Dilvert and crack, rend and demelinate

The unity and married calm of states 100

Quite from their fixure! O! when degree is shak'd,

Which is the ladder to all high designs,

The enterprise is sick. How could communities,

Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,

Peaceful commerce from dividable shores, 105

The primogenitive and due of birth,

Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,

But by degree, stand in authentic place? 108

Take but degree away, untune that string,

And, hark! what discord follows; each thing
meets

In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters

Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,

And make a sop of all this solid globe: 113

Strength should be lord of Inbecillity,

And the rude son should strike his father dead:

Force should be right; or rather, right and
wrong— 116

Between whose endless jar justice resides—

Should lose their names, and so should justice
too,

Then every thing includes itself in power,

Power into will, will into appetite; 120

And appetite, a universal wolf,

So doubly seconded with will and power,

Must make perforce a universal prey,

And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,

This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125

Follows the choking.

And this neglect of degree it is

That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose

It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd 129

By him one step below, he by the next,

That next by him beneath; so every step,

Example'd by the first pace that is sick 132

Of his superior, grows to an envious fever

Of pale and bloodless emulation:

And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,

Not her own shew. To end a tale of length,

Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-
cover'd

The fever wherof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
Ulysses, 140

What is the remedy?

Ulys. The great Achilles, whom opinion
crowns

The shew and the forband of our host,

Having his ear full of his airy fame, 144

Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent

Lies mocking our designs. With him Patroclus

Upon a lazy bed the livelong day

Breaks scurril jests, 148

And with ridiculous and awkward action—

Which, slanderer, he imitation calls—

He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on 152

And, like a strutting player, whose conceit

Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich

To hear the wooden dialogue and sound

'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,—

Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wreathed seeming 157

He acts thy greatness in:—and when he speaks,

'Tis like a chime a-measuring; with terms un-spar'd,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
dropp'd, 160

Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed loling,

From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries, 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just. 164

Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard,
As he being drest to some oration.'

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends

Of parallels, like as Vulcan and his wife:— 168

Yet good Achilles still cries, 'Excellent!

'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus,

Arming to answer in a night alarm.'

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age 172

Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,

And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,

Shake in and out the rivet: and at this sport

Sir Valour dies; cries, 'O! enough, Patroclus;

Or give me ribs of steel; I shall split all 177

In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,

All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,

Severals and generals of grace exact, 180

Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,

Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,

Success or loss, what is or is not, serves

As stuff for these two to make paradoxes. 184

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain—

Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns

With an imperial voice—many are infect.

Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head 188

In such a re'n, in full as proud a place

As brawd Achilles; keeps his tent like him;

Makes factious feats; rails on our state of war,

Bold as an oracle, and sets Therites— 192

A slave whose gall colts slanders like a mint—

To match us in comparison with dirt;

To weaken and discredit our exposure,

How rank so'er rounded in with danger. 196

Ulys. They tax our polley, and call it
cowardice;

Count wisdom as no member of the war;

Foretell prescience, and esteem no act

But that of hand: the still and mental parts, 200

That do contrive how many hands shall strike,

When fitness calls them on, and know by measure

Of their observant toll the enemies' weight,—

Why, this hath not a finger's dignity. 204

They call this bed work, mappery, closet-war;

so that the ram that batters down the wall,

For the great seeing and rudeness of his poise,

They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls 209
By reason gild his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse Makes many Thetis' sons. [A trumpet.]

Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus. 213
Men. From Troy.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you fore our tent?

Æne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray
you? 216

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm 220

'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one
voice

Call Agamemnon head and general

Æne. Fair leave and large security How
may 214

A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals? 214

Agam. How!

Æne. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush 223

Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus:

Which is that god in office, gilding men?

Which is the huge and mighty Agamemnon? 232

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonaire, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, 237

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas!

Peace, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips! 240

The worthiness of praise distains his worth.

If that the praised himself bring the praise forth;

But what the repling enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure,
transcends. 244

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
Æneas?

Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy. 247

Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
him:

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear.

To set his sense on the attentive bent.

And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind:

It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour.
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake.
He tells thee so himself.

Æne. Trumpet, blow aloud, 250
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;
And every Greek of mettle, let him know
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon here in Troy, 250

A prince called Hector,—Priam is his father,—
Who in this dull and long-continued truce

Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak: kings, princes, lords'

If there be one among the fair set of Greece 265
That holds his honour higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour, and knows not his fear,
That loves his mistress more than in confession,

With truant vows to her own lips he loves,

And dare avow her beauty and her worth

In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, 270
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.

He hath a lady else, fairer, truer,

Than ever Greek did compass in his arms; 275
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,

Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy.

To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:

If any come, Hector shall honour him, 280

If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,

The Grecian dunes are sunburnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord
Æneas; 284

If none of them have soul in such a kind,

We left them all at home: but we are soldiers;

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,

That means not, hath not, or is not in love! 288

If then one is, or hath, or means to be,

That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd; he is old now;

But if there be not in our Grecian host 295

One noble man that hath one spark of fire

To answer for his love, tell him from me,

I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, 298

And in my vantage put this wither'd brow:

And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady

Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste

As may be in the world; his youth in flood, 300

I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood.

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand; 304

To our pavilion shall I lead you first

Achilles shall have word of this intent,

So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent:

Yourself shall feast with us before you go. 308
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.]

Ulyss. Nestor?

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain;

Be you my thine to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis:

Blunt wedges riv'd hard knots: the seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up 317

In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,

Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbunk us all.

Nest. Well, and how? 320

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,

Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even in substance 324

Whose grossness little characters sum up:

And, in the publication, make no strain,

But that Achilles, were his brain as barren

As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows, 328

'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose

Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you? 332

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring those honours off,

If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,

Yet in the trial much opinion dwells; 336

For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute

With their fin'st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd

In this wild action; for the success, 340

Although particular, shall give a scathing

Of good or bad unto the general;

And in such indexes, although small pricks

To their subsequent volumes, there is seen 344

The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd

He that meets Hector issues from our choice;

And choice, being mutual act of all our souls, 348

Makes merit her election, and doth tell,

As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd

Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,

What heart receives from hence the conquering
part, 352

To steal a strong opinion to themselves?

Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,

In no less working than are swords and bows

Directly by the limbs, 356

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:

Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector

Let us like men, hands show our foulest wars,

And think perchance they'll sell; if not, 360

The lustre of the better yet to show shall show the better. Do not consent

That ever Hector and Achilles meet;

For both our honour and our shame in this 364

Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should share with him;
But he already is too insolent; 369

And we were better patch in Afric sun

Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,

Should he scape Hector fair: if he were foil'd,

Why then we did our main opinion crush 373

In taunt of our best man. No; make a lottery;

And by device let blockish Ajax draw

The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves

Give him allowance as the worthier man, 377

For that will physick the great Myrrillon

Who broils in loud applause; and make him
fall

His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends, 380

If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,

We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,

Yet go we under our opinion still

That we have better men. But, hit or miss, 384

Our project's life this shape of sense assumes:

Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes,

Nest. Ulysses,

Now I begin to relish thy advice;

And I will give a taste of it forthwith, 388

To Agamemnon: go we to him straight,

Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone

Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exeunt.]

Act II.

Scene I.—A Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had boils? foll,
all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. And those boils did run? Say so, did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then would come some matter from him: I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, dost thou not hear?

Feel, then. [Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vinegar-sour leaven speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness. 36

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and boldness; but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks! 21

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.
Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus? 24

Ajax. The proclamation!

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not: my fingers itch. 25

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsome'st scab of Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strik'st as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!

Ther. Thou grumblest and rail'st every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou should'st strike him. 40

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur. [Beating him.]

Ther. Do, do. 45

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou soulden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assnego may tutor thee; thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog.

Ther. You scurvy lord! 50

Ajax. You cur! [Beating him.]

Ther. Mars his idiot! do rudeness; do, curiel! do, do.

Exit Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why how now, Ajax! wherefore do you thus? 60

How now Thersites—what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, say upon him. 65

Achil. So I do; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well? why, so I do.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him, for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax. 70

Achil. I know that fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. I would I were there. 72

Ther. I would do, what medicines of wit he utters! his vapours have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pit mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him. 80

Achil. What?

Ther. I say this Ajax,— [Ajax offers to strike him.]

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit— 84

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool! 88

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall— 92

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites. 96

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation: and he rails upon me. 100

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress. 107

Ther. Even so; a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there he liars. Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains: a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel. 112

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandaurs had nails on their toes: yoke you like draught-oxen, and make you plough up the wars. 117

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to, Ajax! to! 120

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace! 124

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hang'd, like clotpoles ere I come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools. [Exit] 132

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this air is proclaimed through all our host;

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy
To-morrow morning call some knight to arms
That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare

Maintain I know not what: 'tis trash. Fare
well.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not: It is put to lottery; otherwise,

He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you. I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S PALACE.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches
spent.

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

'Deliver Helen, and all damage else,
As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

In hot digestion of this cormorant war,
Shall be struck off? Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,

As far as toucheth my particular,

Yet, dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'

Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every title soul, 'mongst many thousand dimes,
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fle, fie! my brother,
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king
So great as our dread father in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past proportion of his infinite?
And buckle in a waist most fathomless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at
reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our
father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons

Because your speech hath none that tells him
so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;

You know a sword employ'd is perious;

And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,

And fly like childeu Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep: manhood and
honour

Should have hare-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale, and lusthlood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught but as 'tis valued?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity

As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry

To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes that is ineliable

To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,

The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench from this and to stand firm by honour.

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have sold them, nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sink
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:

Your breath of full consent befell his sails;
The seas and winds—old wranglers—took a truce
And did him service: he touch'd the ports
desir'd,

And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl.

Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went, — 84
As you must needs, for you all criest 'Go, go, —
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize, —
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your
hands,

And cry'd 'Inestimable!' — why do you now 88
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did,

Beggar the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O! theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep! 93
But thieves unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace
We fear to warrant in our native place. 96

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra. 100

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand
eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace!

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid age and wrinkled
eld, 104

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand; 109
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe!

Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.]

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains 113

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason, 116
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qually the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it, 120
Nor once defect the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd 124
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst
us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain. 129

Par. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings as your counsels;
But I attest the gods, your foil consent 132
Gave wings to my propulsion and cut off

All fears attending on so dire a project:
For what, alas! can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valour, 136
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will, 140
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor falst in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall; 144
So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasure such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape 148
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.

What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up, 152

On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?

There's not the meanest spirit on our party 156
Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
When Helen is defended, nor none so noble
Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say, 160
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said
well;

And on the cause and question now in hand 164
Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
I fust to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conduce 168
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood
Than to make up a free determination
Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves 173
All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband? if this law 176
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence

To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation 180
To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws 184
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion 186

Is this, in way of truth; yet worthless.

My spritely brethren, I propend to you
 In resolution to keep Helen still;
 For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
 Upon our joint and several dignities. 193

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:

Were it not glory that we more affected
 Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
 I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood 197

Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
 She is a theme of honour and renown,

A spur to vallant and magnanimous deeds, 200
 Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
 And fame in time to come canonize us;

For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
 So rich advantage of a promis'd glory 204

As smiles upon the forehead of this action
 For the wide world's revenue.

Heet. I am yours,
 You vallant offspring of great Priamus.

I have a roisting challenge sent amongst 208
 The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
 Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.

I was advertis'd their great general slept
 Whilst emulation in the army crept: 212

This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—*The Grecian Camp. Before
 Achilles' Tent.*

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I fall at him;

O worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise;
 that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me.

'Foot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations.

Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O! thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods, and Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caducens, if ye take not that little little less than little w't from them that they have; which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their mossy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache for that methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil Envy say Amen.

 What ho! my Lord Achilles! 24

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites. Good! Ther-sites, come in and rattle.

Ther. If I should have remembered a gilt miterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles? 37

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me! 40

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?
Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles? 45

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me,
 Patroclus, what art thou? 50

Patr. Thou mayst tell that knowest.
Achil. O! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Aga-memnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!
Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done. 60

Achil. He is a privileged man. Proceed,
 Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid,
 Patroclus is a fool. 65

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool? 72

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes
 here?

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.
 Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpico on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Agam. Where is Achilles? 84

Patr. Within his tent; but ill dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we hay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him: 88
Let him be told so; lest perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him.

[Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent: 92
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why? let him show us a cause. A word, my lord. [Takes AGAMEMNON aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?
Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him. 101

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument. 105

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction: but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not folly may easily unte. Here comes Patroclus. 112

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure. 116

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry if any thing more than your sport and pleasure did move your greatness and this noble state To call upon him; he hopes it is no other 120
But, for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus:

We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wim'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions. 125

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues, Not virtuously on his own part beheld, 128
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss.

Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot un tasted. Go and tell him,
We come to speak with him; and you shall not sh 132

If you do say we think him over proud
And under honest, in self assumption greater Than in the note of judgment; and worthlier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeuess he puts on.
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch 140
His pettish tunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add,
That if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report: 145
'Bring action hither, this cannot go to war.'
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant: tell him so. 148

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit.]

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;
We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you. [Exit ULYSSES.]

Ajax. What is he more than another? 152

Ajax. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question. 156

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valliant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable. 161

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud cats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise. 169

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. [Aside.] Yet he loves himself: is't not strange? 173

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none,
But carries on the stream of his dispose 176
Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not upon our fair request

Untent his person and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only, 181

He makes important; possess'd he is with greatness,

And speaks not to himself but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swom and hot discourse, 184

That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages
And batters down himself: what should I say?
He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens
of it 189

Cry 'No recovery.'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear lord, go you and meet him in his tent:
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led 192
At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon! let it not be so.

We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: shall the proud
lord 196

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam,
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself, shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he? 201

No, this three-worthy and right vallant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit, 204
As amply titled as Achilles is,

By going to Achilles:

That were to enlard his fat-already pride,
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hypertion. 209
This lord go to him! Jnplter forbid,
And say in thunder, 'Achilles go to him.'

Nest. [Aside.] O! this is well; he rubs the vein of him. 213

Dio. [Aside.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist 216
I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no! you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride.

Let me go to him. 220

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. [Aside.] How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be soeble? 224

Ulyss. [Aside.] The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. [Aside.] He will be the physician that should be the patient. 228

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. [Aside.] Wt would be out of fashion.

Ajax. A' should not bear it so, a' should cut s' first: shall pride carry it? 232

Dio. [Aside.] An't would, you'd carry half.

Ulyss. [Aside.] A' would have ten shares.

Ajax. I will knead him; I will make him supple.

Nest. [Aside.] He's not yet through warm: force him with praises: pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. 238

Ulyss. [To AGAMEMNON.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so. 240

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so? 244
He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us! Would he were a Trojan! 248

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now,—

Ulyss. If he were proud,—

Dio. Or covetous of praise,—

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne,— 252

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected!

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;

Praise him that got thee, her that gave thee
suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature 256
Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition:

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half: and, for thy vigour, 260

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To snevy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor

Instructed by the antiquary times, 265

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him, 269

But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Ulyss. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is noarrying here; the hart

Achilles 272

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general

To call together all his state of war;

Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to

west, 277

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks

draw deep. [Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Troy. PRIAM'S PALACE.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word; do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

- Serv.* Ay, sir, when he goes before me.
- Pan.* You depend upon him, I mean? 1
- Serv.* Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.
- Pan.* You depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.
- Serv.* The Lord be praised! 6
- Pan.* You know me, do you not?
- Serv.* Faith, sir, superficially.
- Pan.* Friend, know me better. I am the Lord Pandarus. 12
- Serv.* I hope I shall know your honour better.
- Pan.* I do desire it.
- Serv.* You are in the state of grace. 16
- Pan.* Grace! not so friend; honour and lordship are my titles. [Music within.] What music is this?
- Serv.* I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts. 21
- Pan.* Know you the musicians?
- Serv.* Wholly, sir.
- Pan.* Who play they to? 24
- Serv.* To the hearers, sir.
- Pan.* At whose pleasure, friend?
- Serv.* At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
- Pan.* Command, I mean, friend. 28
- Serv.* Who shall I command, sir?
- Pan.* Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play? 32
- Serv.* That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul. 36
- Pan.* Who, my cousin Cressida?
- Serv.* No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?
- Pan.* It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes. 44
- Serv.* Sudden business: there's a stewed phrase, indeed!
- Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.*
- Pan.* Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measures, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow! 51
- Helen.* Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
- Pan.* You speak your fair pleasure sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.
- Par.* You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. Well, he is full of harmony. 57
- Pan.* Truly, lady, no.
- Helen.* O, sir!
- Par.* Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude. 61
- Par.* Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits.
- Pan.* I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word? 65
- Helen.* Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.
- Pan.* Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord. My dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—
- Helen.* My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord— 71
- Pan.* Go to, sweet queen, go to; commend himself most affectionately to you.
- Helen.* You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!
- Pan.* Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a sweet queen, I faith. 81
- Helen.* And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.
- Pan.* Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words; no, no. And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
- Helen.* My Lord Pandarus. 85
- Pan.* What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?
- Par.* What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night? 92
- Helen.* Nay, but my lord,—
- Pan.* What says my sweet queen! My cousin will fall out with you. You must know where he sups. 97
- Par.* I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.
- Pan.* No, no, no such matter; you are wide. Come, your disposer is sick. 100
- Par.* Well, I'll make excuse.
- Pan.* Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
- Par.* I spy.
- Pan.* You spy! what do you spy? Come give me an instrument. Now, sweet queen.
- Helen.* Why, this is kindly done.
- Pan.* My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen. 105
- Helen.* She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.
- Pan.* He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain. 111
- Helen.* Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.
- Pan.* Come, come, I'll hear no more of this: I'll sing you a song now. 117
- Helen.* Ay, ay, please now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
- Pan.* Ay you may, you may. 123
- Helen.* Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I' faith.
Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love. 125
Pan. In good troth, it begins so:
[Sings.]
 Love, love, nothing but love, still more
 For, oh! love's bow 128
 Shoots buck and doe,
 The shaft confounds,
 Not that it wounds,
 But tickles still the sore. 132
 These lovers cry O! O! they die!
 Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
 Both turn O! O! to ha! ha! he!
 So dying love lives still; 136
 O! O! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
 O! O! greins out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!
Helen. In love, I' faith, to the very tip of the nose. 141

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love. 145

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood? hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day? 149

Par. Hector, Delphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not? 153

Helen. He hangs the lip at something: you know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen. 160

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

[Exit. A retreat sounded.]

Par. They're come from field; let us to Priam's hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you 164

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,
 With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,
 Shall more obey than to the edge of steel

Or force of Greekish shrews; you shall do more 168
 Than all the Island kings,—disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant,
 Paris;

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
 Gives us more pain in beauty than we have, 172
 Ven, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and TROILUS' Boy, meeting.

Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither. 4

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O! here he comes. How now, how now!

Tro. Stirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.]

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door, like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks staying for waftage. O! be thou my Charon, and give me swift transporance to those fields where I may wallow in the lily-beds 12
 Propos'd for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus! From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings, and fly with me to Cressid.

Pan. Walk here I' the orchard. I'll bring her straight. [Exit.]

Tro. I am gliddy, expectation whirls me round! The imaginary relish is so sweet

That it enchants my sense. What will it be when that the watery palate tastes indeed Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me, Swounding destruction, or some joy too fine, Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness For the capacity of my ruder powers: 24
 I fear it much; and I do fear besides That I shall lose distinction in my joys; As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps The enemy flying. 28

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready: she'll come straight; you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain; she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom;

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse; 36
 And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
 Like vassalage at unawares encountering
 The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby. Here she is now; swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me. What! are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills. Why do you not speak to her? Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend day-light! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks! the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; but she'll bereave you of the deeds too if she call your activity in question. What! billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire. [Exit.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida! how often have I wished me thus! 64

Cres. Wished, my lord! The gods grant,—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abrupton? What too curlons dreg esples my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly. 73

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worse. 77

Tro. O! let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither? 80

Tro. Nothing but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstronity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit. 88

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters? 95

Tro. Are there such? such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. 105

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What! blushing still? have you not done talking yet? 108

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he flinch, chide me for it. 113

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they are woo'd, they are constant being won: they are burrs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown. 120

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win? 124

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord.

With the first glance that ever—pardon me—
If I confess much you will play the tyrant.

I love you now; but, till now, not so much. 125
But I might master it: in faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us 132
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But, though I loved you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,

Or that we women had men's privilege. 136
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see! your silence,
Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth. 141

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, l' falth.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss: 145
I am ashamed: O heavens! what have I done?

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid? 148

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company. 152

Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave, 155
To be another's fool. I would be gone;

Where is my wit? I speak I know not what.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love: 160

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise,

Or else you love not, for to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O! that I thought it could be in a
woman—

As if it can I will presume in you—
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth, 163
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays:
Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,
That my integrity and truth to you 172
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas!
I am as true as truth's simplicity, 176
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you,

Tro. O virtuous fight!
When right with right wars who shall be most
right.

True swains in love shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rimes, 181

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want smiles, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, 184
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited, 188
'As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself, 192
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing, yet let memory, 196
From false to false, among false maids in love Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said 'as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, 200
Pard to the hind, or steplame to her son;'
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of false-
hood,

'As false as Cressid.'

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal it;
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name; call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, Amen. 212

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away!

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! 220
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter ACHILLES, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done
you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That through the sight I bear in things to come,
I have abandoned Troy, left my possession, 5
Incur'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, have become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste, 13
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf. 16
Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore— 20

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied; but this Antenor
I know is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack, 24
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence 23

Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us, Good Diomed, 32
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden 36
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands in the entrance of his
tent:

- Please It our general to pass strangely by him,
 As if he were forgot; and, princes all, 40
 Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
 I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
 Why such unplausible eyes are bent on him:
 If so, I have derision med'nable 44
 To use between your strangeness and his pride,
 Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
 It may do good: pride hath no other glass
 To show itself but pride, for supple knees 48
 Feel arrogance and are the poor man's fees.
Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put
 on
 A form of strangeness as we pass along:
 So do each lord, and either greet him not, 52
 Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.
Achil. What! comes the general to speak with
 me?
 You know my mind; I'll fight no more 'gainst
 Troy. 56
Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught
 with us?
Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?
Achil. No.
Nest. Nothing, my lord. 60
Agam. The better.
 [Enter AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.]
Achil. Good day, good day.
Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit.]
Achil. What! does the cuckold scorn me? 64
Ajax. How now, Patroclus?
Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.
Ajax. Ha?
Achil. Good morrow. 68
Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]
Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?
Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,
 To send their smiles before them to Achilles; 72
 To come as humbly as they us'd to creep
 To holy altars.
Achil. What! am I poor of late?
 'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,
 Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd is
 He shall as soon read in the eyes of others 77
 As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies,
 Show not their mealy wings but to the summer,
 And not a man, for being simply man, 80
 Hath any honour, but honour for those honours
 That are without him, as places, riches, and favour,
 Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
 Which when they fall, as being slippery stand-ers, 84
 The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
 Do one pluck down another, and together
 Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
- Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy 88
 At ample point all that I did possess,
 Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find
 out
 Something not worth in me such rich beholding
 As they have often given. Here is Ulysses: 92
 I'll interrupt his reading.
 How now, Ulysses!
Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!
Achil. What are you reading?
Ulyss. A strange fellow here
 Writes me,
*That man, how dearly ever parted,
 How much in having, or without or in, 97
 Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
 Nor feels not what he owes but by reflection;
 As when his virtues shining upon others 100
 Heat them, and they retort that heat again
 To the first giver.*
Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses!
 The beauty that is borne here in the face
 The bearer knows not, but commends itself 104
 To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself—
 That most pure spirit of sense—behold itself,
 Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
 Salutes each other with each other's form; 108
 For speculation turns not to itself
 Till it hath travell'd and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.
Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, 112
 It is familiar, but at the author's drift;
 Who in his circumstance expressly proves
 That no man is the lord of any thing—
 Though in and of him there be much consisting—
 Till he communicate his parts to others: 117
 Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
 Till he behold them form'd in the applause
 Where they're extended: who, like an arch, reverberates 120
 The voice again, or, like a gate of steel
 Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
 this;
 And apprehended here immediately 124
 The unknown Ajax.
 Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse,
 That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
 Most abject in regard, and dear in use! 128
 What things again most dear in the esteem
 And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow,
 An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
 Ajax renown'd. O heavens! what some men
 do; 132
 While some men leave to do.
 How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
 While others play the illots in her eyes!
 How one man eats into another's pride, 136
 While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords! why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast, 140
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me
Good word or look: what! are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Thine hath, my lord, a wallet at his
back, 145

Wherein he puts aims for oblivion,
A great siz'd monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds' past; which are devour'd 148

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty nail 152
In monumental mockery. Take the instant
way;

For honour travels in a strait so narrow Where one but goes abreast: keep, then, the path;

For emulation hath a thousand sons 156
That one by one pursue: if you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by
And leave you hindmost; 160

Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'errun and trampled on: then what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
yours; 164

For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the corner: welcome ever smiles, 168
And farewell goes out sighing. O! let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service, 172
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born
gawds, 176

Though they are made and moulded of things past,

And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object: 180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on
thee, 184

And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And ease thy reputation in thy tent;

Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves, 183

And drive great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic. 192
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known!

Ulyss. Is that a wonder? 196
The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold,
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps, Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods, 200

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery—with whom relation
Durst never meddle—in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine 204

Than breath or pen can give expression to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much 208

To throw down Hector than Polyxena;
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump,

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win, 213
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.'

Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break [Exit.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd
you. 217

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this:
They think my little stomach to the war 221
And your great love to me restrains you thus.
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane, 225
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and perhaps receive much honour
by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake; 228
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O! then, beware;
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves:

Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger; 232
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-clus:

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him 236
 To invite the Trojan lords after the combat
 To see us here marined. I have a woman's longing,
 An appetite that I am sick withal,
 To see great Hector in his weeds of peace; 240
 To talk with him and to behold his visage,
 Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What? 244

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroleal cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride and a stand; ruminates like a hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a polite regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out;' and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck in the combat, he'll break't himself in val-glory. He knows not me: I said, 'Good morrow, Ajax;' and he replies, 'Thanks, Agamemnon.'
 What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. 269

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him,
 Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars;
 he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. 276

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him, I humbly desire the vallant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarm'd to my tent; and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious, six-or-sevent-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cætera. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax! 284

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,— 289

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon. 292

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't? 296

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me. 301

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. 309

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him
 straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse, for that's the more capable creature. 313

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain
 stir'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it!
 I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a vallant ignorance. [Exit.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, on one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant with a torch; on the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTE-NOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long

As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business 4

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow,
 Lord Æneas.

Par. A vallant Greek, Æneas; take his hand:
 Witness the process of your speech, wherein 8
 You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
 Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, vallant sir,
 During all question of the gentie truce;
 But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance 12
 As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.
 Our bloods are now in calm, and, so long, health! 16
 But when contention and occasion meet,
 By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life
 With all my force, pursuit, and polley.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
 With his face backward. In humane gentleness,

Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, 21
Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love in such a sort

The thing he means to kill more excellently. 24

Dio. We sympathize, Jove, let Æneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But, in mine emulous honour, let him die, 28
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well.
Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most spiteful gentle greeting, 32

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.
What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why,
I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring this Greek 36

To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfrèd Antenor, the fair Cressid.

Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us. I constantly do think— 40

Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge—

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,

With the whole quality wherefore: I fear 44
We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time 48

Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit.]
Par. And tell me, noble Dioned; falth, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, 52
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best—Myself or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:
He merits well to have her that doth seek her—

Not making any scruple of her sullure— 56

With such a hell of pain and world of charge,
And you as well to keep her that defend her—

Not palating the taste of her dishonour—
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends: 60

He, like a pulling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed pleece;

You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors: 64

Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor
more;

But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-
woman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me,
Paris: 68

For every false drop in her bawdy veins

A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight

A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could
speak, 72

She hath not given so many good words breath
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy; 76

But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

Here lies our way, [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Court before
PANDARUS' HOUSE.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn' is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down:

He shall unbolt the gates.
Tro. Trouble him not;

To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes, 4
And give as soft attachment to thy senses
As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow then.

Tro. I prithee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aweary of me?
Tro. O Cressida! hut that the busy day, 8

Wak'd by the lark, hath roused the rebald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,

I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath been too brief,

Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous weights she stays 12

As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love
With wings more momentary-swift than thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Prithee, tarry:
You men will never tarry. 16

O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark!

there's one up.

Pan. [Within.] What! are all the doors open
here?

Tro. It is your uncle. 20

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking: I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS.

1. en. How now, how now! how go maiden-heads?

Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid? 24

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do—and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what: what have I brought you to do? 28

Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart!
you'll ne'er be good,

Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor eapocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you? 'would he were knock'd o' the head! [Knocking within. Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see. 36 My lord, come you again into my chamber: You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, na!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. [Knocking within. How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in: I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.]

Pan. [Going to the door.] Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now! what's the matter? 45

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my Lord Æneas! By my troth,

I know you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here? 49

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord: do not deny him: it doth import him much to speak with me. 53

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn: for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? 56

Æne. Who! nay, then; come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you're 'ware. You'll be so true to him, to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go. 60

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash: there is at hand Paris your brother, and Delphobus, 64

The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor

Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,

Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,

We must give up to Diomedes' hand 68

The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of

Troy;

They are at hand and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me! 72

I will go meet them: and, my Lord Æneas,

We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature

Have not more gift in taciturnity. 76

[Exeunt TROILUS and ÆNEAS.]

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad: a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck! 80

Enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! What is the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah! ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above! 83

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan. Prithce, get thee in: would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death. O poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor! 93

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor. Thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it. 100

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity; 104

No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me

As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine!

Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can; 109

But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very centre of the earth.

Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep,—

Pan. Do, do. 113

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my prais'd cheeks,

Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. 114

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. Before PANDARUS' House.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DELPHOBUS, ANTEGOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek

Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,

Tell you the lady what she is to do, 4

And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house:

I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;

And to his hand when I deliver her,

Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus 8
 A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.]
Par. I know what 'tis to love;
 And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
 Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in PANDARUS' House.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
 The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
 And violenteth in a sense as strong 4
 As that which causeth it: how can I moderate
 it?
 If I could temporize with my affection,
 Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
 The like allayment could I give my grief: 8
 My love admits no qualifying dross;
 No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah! sweet cheeks.
Cres. [Embracing him.] O Troilus! Troilus!
Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying
 is,—
 O heart, heavy heart, 16
 Why sigh'st thou without breaking?
 when he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart
 By friendship nor by speaking. 20

There was never a . . . let us cast away nothing, for we ma . . . need of such a verse: we see it, w . . . now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I . . . so strain'd a purity, 24
 That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
 More bright in zeal than the devoutish which Cold lips blow to their delities, take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?
Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.
Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.
Cres. What! and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.
Cres. Is it possible? 32

Tro. And suddenly; where Injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
 All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
 Of all rejoindre, forcibly prevents 36
 Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows
 Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.
 We two, that with so many thousand sighs
 E'd buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
 With the rude brevity and discharge of one. 41

Injurious time now with a robber's haste
 Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how:
 As many farewells as be stars in heaven, 44
 With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
 them,

He fumbles up into a loose adieu,
 And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
 Distasted with the salt of broken tears. 48

Enc. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?
Tro. Hark! you are call'd; some say the Genius so

Cries 'Come!' to him that instantly must die.
 Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root!
 [Exit.]

Cres. I must thou to the Grecians?
Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst tho merry Greeks! 56

When shall we see again?
Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of
 heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
 For it is parting from us: 61

I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing thee,
 For I will throw my glove to Death himself,
 That there's no maculation in thy heart; 64

But, 'be thou true,' say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation; be thou true,
 And I will see thee.

Cres. O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers 68

As infinite as imminent; but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see
 you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, 72
 To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens! 'be true' again!
Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:

The Grecian youths are full of quality; 76 They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature,

Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise:
 How novelty may move, and parts with person,
 Alas! a kind of godly jealousy,— 80

Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,—
 Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.
Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question 84
 So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,
 Nor heel the high levolt, nor sweeten talk,
 Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
 To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant: 88

But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discursive devil
That tempts most cunningly. But he uot tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will? 92
Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will not :
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers.
Presuming on their changeful potency. 97

Anc. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—
Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!
Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Aeneas and the Grecian with you. 100

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity; 104
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper
crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is plain, and true; there's all the reach of it.

Enter AENEAS, PARIS, ANTEHOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady 109
Which for Antenor we deliver you:

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is. 112

Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Iliou.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, 116
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously, 121

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises 124
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.

I charge thee use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O! be not mov'd, Prince Troilus:
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message

To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust; and know you, lord, 132

I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say 'be't so,'
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'uo.'

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Diomed, This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
head. 137

Lady, give me your hand, and, as you walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt TROILUS, CRESSIDA, and DIOMEDES. Trumpet sounded.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Anc. How have we spent this morning!

The prince must think me tardy and remiss, 141
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to fight
with him.

Del. Let us make ready straight. 143

Anc. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity.
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:

The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and Others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with standing courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,

Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air 149
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou trumpet, there's my purse.
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:

Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek 153
Outswell the collar of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood;

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days. 152

Agam. Is not yond Diomed with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his

In aspiration lifts him from the earth. 155

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks,
sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; 156
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips.
fair lady: 157

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's uo argument for kissing
now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment, 158
And parted thus you and our argument.

Ulyss. O, deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this, wine: 32

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O! this is trim.

Patr. Paris and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll nave my kiss, sir. Lady, by your
leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive? 35

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one. 40

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady! every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know tis
true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you. 44

Men. You flip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg, then. 48

Ulyss. Why, then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor; claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of
you. 52

Dio. Lady, a word; I'll bring you to your father. [DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip.

Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look
out 56

At every joint and motive of her body.

O! these encounterers, so glib of tongue,

That give a coaxing welcome ere it comes,

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts

To every tickling reader, set them down 61

For sluttish spoils of opportunity

And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.]

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop. 64

Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done

To him that victory commands? or do you
purpose

A victor shall be known? will you the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity 68

Pursue each other, or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions. 72

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely
done.

A little proudly, and great deal misprising

The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing. 76

Æne. Therefore Achilles; but, whate'er, know this:

In the extremity of great and little,

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;

The one almost as infinite as all, 80

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,

And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:

In love whereof half Hector stays at home; 84

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek

This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achil. A sudden battle, then? O! I perceive
you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle
knight, 88

Stand by our Ajax; as you and Lord Æneas

Consent upon the order of their fight,

So be it; either to the uttermost,

Or else a breath; the combatants being kin 92

Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.]

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true
knight: 96

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word,
Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue;

Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon
calm'd:

His heart and hand both open and both free;

For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows;

Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impure thought with breath.

Mainly as Hector, but more dangerous; 104

For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes

To tender objects; but he in heat of action

Is more vindicative than jealous love.

They call him Troilus, and on him erect 108

A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth

Even to his inches, and with private soul

Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me. 112

[Alarm. HECTOR and AJAX fight.]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st; awake thee!
Agam. His blows are well dispos'd; there,
 Ajax!

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]
Ene. Princes, enough, so please you. 116
Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.
Dio. As Hector pleases.
Hect. Why, then will I no more:
 Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
 A cousin-german to great Priam's seed; 120
 The obligation of our blood forbids
 A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.
 Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so
 That thou couldst say, 'This hand is Grecian all,
 And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg 125
 All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood
 Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
 Bounds in my father's,' by Jove multipotent, 128
 Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member
 Wherein my sword had not impressure made
 Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay
 That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
 My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword 133
 Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax;
 By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
 Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
 Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
 Thou art too gentle and too free a man:
 I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
 A great addition earned in thy death. 140
Hect. Not Neoptolennus so mirable,
 On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st
 eyes
 Cries, 'This is he!' could promise to himself
 A thought of addel honour torn from Hector.
Ene. There is expectation here from both the sides, 145
 What further you will do.
Hect. We'll answer it;
 The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,—
 As well I have the chance,—I would desire 149
 My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.
Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great
 Achilles
 Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.
Hect. Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me,
 And signify this loving interview
 To the expecters of our Trojan part; Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin; 156
 I will go eat with thee and see your knights.
Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us
 here.
Hect. The worthlest of them tell me name
 by name;
 But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes 160
 Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
 That would be rid of such an enemy;
 But that's no welcome; understand more clear,
 What's past and what's to come is strew'd with links 165
 And formless ruin of oblivion;
 But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
 Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, 168
 Bid thee, with most divine integrity,
 From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.
Hect. I thank thee, most Imperious Agamem-non.
Agam. [To TROILUS.] My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you. 172
Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
 You brace of war-like brothers, welcome hither.
Hect. Whom must we answer?
Ene. The noble Menelaus.
Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet,
 thanks! 176
 Mock not that I affect the untraded oath;
 Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
 She's well, but bade me not commend her to
 you.
Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme. 180
Hec. O pardon; I offend.
Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee
 oft,
 Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee, 184
 As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
 Despising many forfeits and subduements,
 When thou hast hung thy advanced sword in th'
 air,
 Not letting it decline on the declin'd; 188
 That I have said to some my standers-by,
 'Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!'
 And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,
 When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee
 in, 192
 Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
 But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
 I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
 And once fought with him: he was a soldier
 good; 196
 But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
 Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
 And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.
Ene. 'Tis the old Nestor. 200
Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle, That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with
 time:
 Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention, 204
 As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha!
 By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow. 208
 Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time.—
Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
 When we have here her base and pillar by us.
Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well,
 Ah! sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
 Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
 In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.
Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue: 216
 My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
 For yonder walls, that partly front your town, Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
 Must kiss their own feet.
Hect. I must not believe you: 220
 There they stand yet, and modestly I think,
 The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
 A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,
 And that old common arbitrator, Time, 224
 Will one day end it.
Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
 Most gentle and most vallant Hector, welcome.
 After the general, I beseech you next
 To feast with me and see me at my tent. 228
Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou!
 Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
 I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
 And quoted joint by joint.
Hect. Is this Achilles? 232
Achil. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee; let me look on
 thee.
Achil. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second
 time, 236
 As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hect. O! like a book of sport thou'lt read me
 o'er;
 But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
 Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body 241
 Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or
 there?
 That I may give the local wound a name,
 And make distinct the very breach whereout 244
 Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!
Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods,
 proud man,
 To answer such a question. Stand again:
 Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly 248
 As to prenominate in nice conjecture
 Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achil. I tell thee, yea.
Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,

I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well,
 For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
 But, by the forge that stilled Mars his helm,
 I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.
 You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag; 250
 His insolence draws folly from my lips;
 But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
 Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:
 And you, Achilles, let these threats alone. 250
 Till accident or purpose bring you to't;
 You may have every day enough of Hector.

If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
 Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him. 254
Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field;
 We have had pelting wars since you refus'd
 The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
 To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death; 258
 To bid all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.
Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convolve we afterwards,
 As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall 272
 Concur together, severally entreat him.
 Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
 That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt all except TROILUS and ULYSSES.
Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
 In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely
 Troilus:

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
 Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth
 But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
 On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to thee
 much,
 After we part from Agamemnon's tent, 284
 To bring me thither?

Ulyss. I shall come to see me, sir.
 As gentle tell me, what honour was
 This Cressida in Troy: Had she no lover there
 That walls her absence? 288

Tro. O, sir! to such as boasting show their scars
 A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
 She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
 But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.

[Exeunt.

Act V.

Scene I.—*The Grecian Camp. Before
 Achilles' Tent.*

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine
 to-night,
 Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.

Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy! 4
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee. 8

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound. 13

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prithee, be silent, boy: I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet. 18

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's thy?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries! 28

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt, you whore-son iudistinguishable cur, no. 33

Ther. No! why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, diminutives of nature. 40

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite from my great purpose in to-morrow's battle. Here is a letter from Queen Heenba, 44

A token from her daughter, my fair love, Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it: Fall Greeks; fall fame; honour or go or stay; My major vow lies here, this I'll obey. 49

Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent; This night in banquetting must all be spent. Away, Patroclus! 52

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transmutation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckold; a thrifty shoe-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg, to what form but that he is should wit larded with mallee and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox; to an ox, were nothing: he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites, for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! spirits and fires! 74

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you. 76

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good-night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you. 80

Hect. Thanks and good-night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good-night, my lord.

Hect. Good-night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet, quoth a!' sweet sink, sweet sewer. 85

Achil. Good-night and welcome both at once, to those

That go or tarry.

Agam. Good-night. 88

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS.]

Achil. Old Nestor carries; and you too, Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business,

The tide whereof is now. Good-night, great Hector. 92

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to TROILUS.] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent.

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good-night. 96

[Exit DIOMEDES; ULYSSES and

TROILUS following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exit ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabber the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change: the sun horrors of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets. [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho! speak.
Cal. [Within.] Who calls?
Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?
Cal. [Within.] She comes to you. 4

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them THEASITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.
Dio. How now, my charge!
Cres. Now, my sweet guarilan! Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.]
Tro. Yea, so familiar! 8
Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.
Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her elf; she's noted.
Dio. Will you remember? 12
Cres. Remember! yea.
Dio. Nay, but do, then;
And let your mind be coupled with your words.
Tro. What should she remember? 16
Ulyss. List!
Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!
Dio. Nay, then,—
Cres. I'll tell you what,— 20
Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin: you are forsworn.
Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?
Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.
Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me? 24
Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath;
Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.
Dio. Good-night.
Tro. Hold, patience! 28
Ulyss. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,—

Dio. No, no, good-night; I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear. 32

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous; 36 The time right deadly. I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off: You flow to great distraction; come, my lord.

Tro. I pray thee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come. 40

Tro. I pray you, stay. By hell, and all hell's torments,

I will not speak a word!

Dio. And so, good-night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord!

Tro. By Jove, 44

I will be patient.

Cres. Guarilan!—why, Greek!

Dio. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something: will you go? 48

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:

There is between my will and all offences

A guard of patience: stay a little while. 52

Ther. How the devil Luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together! Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you, then? 56

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.

Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.]

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord; 60

I will not be myself, nor have cognition

Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge! now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. 64

Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?

Ulyss. My lord,—

Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it well.

He loved me—O false wench!—Give't to me again. 68

Dio. Whose was't?
Cres. It is no matter, now I have't again.
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
 I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.
Ther. Now she sharpens: well said, whetstone! 72
Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. Ay, that.
Cres. O! all you gods, O pretty, pretty pledge!
 Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
 Of thee and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, 77
 As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me;
 He that takes that doth take my heart withal.
Dio. I had your heart before; this follows it.
Tro. I did swear patience. 81
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith
 you shall not;
 I'll give you something else.
Dio. I will have this. Whose was it?
Cres. 'Tis no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was. 85
Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.
 But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond, 88
 And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge
 it.
Tro. Wert thou the devil, and worst it on thy horn, 92
 It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past: and yet it is not:
 I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then, farewell;
 Thou never shalt mock Diomed again. 96
Cres. You shall not go: one cannot speak a
 word,
 But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not me
 Pleases me best. 100
Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?
Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—
 Do come:—I shall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewell till then.
Cres. Good-night: I prithee, come.—
 [Exit DIOMEDES.]
 Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee, 104
 But with my heart the other eye doth see.
 Ah! poor our sex; this fault in us I find,
 The error of our eye directs our mind.
 What error leads must err. O! then conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude. 109
 [Exit.]

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,
 Unless she said, 'My mind is now turn'd whore.'
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.
Tro. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we, then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul 113
 Of every syllable that here was spoke.
 But if I tell how these two did co-act,
 Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? 116
 Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
 An esperance so obstinately strong,
 That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears,
 As if those organs had deceptions functions,
 Created only to calumniate. 124
 Was Cressid here?
Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Tro. She was not, sure.
Ulyss. Most sure she was.
Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness. 124
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here
 but now.
Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!
 Think we had mothers; do not give advantage
 To stubborn cristles, apt, without a theme, 128
 For deprivation, to square the general sex
 By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.
Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?
Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own
 eyes? 133
Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida.
 If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
 If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony, 136
 If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
 If there be rule in unity itself,
 This is not she. O madness of discourse,
 That cause sets up with and against itself; 140
 Bl-fold authority! where reason can revolt
 Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
 Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.
 Within my soul there doth conduce a fight 144
 Of this strange nature that a thing inseparate
 Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
 And yet the spacious breadth of this division
 Admits no orifice for a point as subtle 148
 As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.
 Instance, O Instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
 Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
 Instance, O Instance! strong as heaven itself;
 The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd; 153
 And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
 The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
 The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy
 reliques 156
 Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.
Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
 With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well 160

In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus; never did young man fancy

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love, 164

So much by weight hate I her Diomed;

That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm;

Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,

My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout

Which shipmen do the hurricano call, 169

Constru'd in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear

In his descent than shall my prompted sword

Falling on Diomed, 173

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false,

false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, 176

And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O! contain yourself;

Your passion draws ears liker.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.

Hector, by this, is arm'd him in Troy: 180

Ajax your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince, My courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair! and Diomed,

Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head! 184

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exit TROILUS, ÆNEAS, and ULYSSES.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed!

I would croak like a raven; I would bode,

I would bode. Patroclus would give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery;

still wars and lechery: nothing else holds fashion.

A burning devil take them! [Exit.]

Scene III.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in: 4

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent. 3

Consort with me in loud and dear petition;
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter. 12

Cas. O! 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

Hect. Be gone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows: 15

They are polluted offerings, more abhorred
Than spotted lives in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful, 20

For we would give much, to use violent thefts,

And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;

But vows to every purpose must not hold, 24
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:

Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious dear than life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day? 29

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit CASSANDRA.]

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry: 32

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,

And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy.

I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy. 36

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in
you,

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecian falls, 40

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O! 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods, 44

Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers,

And when we have our armours buckled on,

The venom'd vengeance ride us on our swords,

Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth. 48

Hect. Fle, savage, fle!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.
Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.
Tro. Who should withhold me?
 Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars 52
 Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
 Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
 Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
 Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn, 56
 Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
 But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:
 He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay, 60
 Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
 Fall all together.
Pri. Come, Hector, come; go back:
 Thy wife hath dreamed; thy mother hath had visions;
 Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself 64
 Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
 To tell thee that this day is ominous:
 Therefore, come back.
Hect. Eneas is a-field;
 And I do stand engaged to many Greeks, 68
 Even in the faith of valour, to appear
 This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.
Hect. I must not break my faith.
 You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir, 72
 Let me not shame respect, but give me leave
 To take that course by your consent and voice,
 Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam! yield not to him.
And. Do not, dear father, 76
Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
 Upon the love you bear me, get you in

[Exit ANDROMACHE.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
 Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell! dear Hector, 80
 Look! how thou diest; look! how thy eye turns pale;
 Look! how thy wounds do bleed at many vents:

Hark! how Troy roars: how Hecuba cries out!
 How poor Andromache shrieks her dolours forth!
 Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement, 85
 Like witless antieks, one another meet,
 And all cry Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away! Away! 88
Cas. Farewell. Yet, soft! Hector, I take my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

[Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in and cheer the town: we'll forth and fight;
 Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at night. 93

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR.]

Alaruns.

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,

I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve. 96

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read. 100

Pan. A whoreson tisluck, a whoreson rascally tisluck so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there? 108

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

The effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.]

Go blind to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds,
 But suffers another with her deeds. 113

[Exeunt severally.]

Scene IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alaruns. Lxcursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy dotting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry: they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t' other. 120

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude. 24
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian! now for thy whore, Trojan! now the sleeve, now the sleeve!
[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match? 28
Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No, no, I am a rascal; a scurvy ralling knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee: live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues?
I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle; yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

Scene V.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus'
horse;

Present the fair steed to my Lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty:
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, 4
And I am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas
Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon 8
Hath Doreus prisoner,
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed corpses of the kings
Eplstrophus and Cedius; Polixenes is slain;
Amphimaehus, and Thoas, deadly hurt; 12
Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised; the dreadful Sagittary
Appals our numbers: haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all. 16

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;
And bid the small-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathea his horse, 20
And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot,
And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:

Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes,
Dexterity so obeying appetite
That what he will he does; and does so much
That proof is called impossibility. 29

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O! courage, courage, princes; great
Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons, 33
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come
to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it,
Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day 37
Mad and fantastic execution,
Engaging and redeeming of himself
With such a careless force and forceless care 40
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]
Dio. Ay, there, there.
Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face; 45
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy
head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?
Ajax. What wouldst thou?
Dio. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office 4
Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! what,
Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! Turn thy false face, thou traitor!
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Dio. Ha! art thou there? 8

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone; stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon.

Tro. Come, both you cogging Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother! 11

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now I do see thee. Ha! have at thee,
Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.

Be happy that my arms are out of use: 16

My rest and negligence befriend thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear of me again;

Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well:—
I would have been much more a fresher man, 20
Had I expected thee. How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be?
No, by the fame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him: I'll be ta'en too, 24
Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say!
I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

Enter One in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark.

No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well; 28
I'll frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why then, fly ou, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Ezeunt.

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myr-midons;
Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in
breath;

And when I have the bloody Hector found, 4
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fellest manner execute your aims.

Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed, Hector the great must die. 8
[Ezeunt.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then THESESITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris,
'loo! now, my double-henned sparrow! 'loo,
Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game: 'ware horns, ho! [Ezeunt PARIS and MENELAUS.

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. 16

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard

in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: If the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment.
Farewell, bastard. [Exit.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exit.

Scene VIII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done; I'll take good
breath:

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death. [Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set; 5

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:

Even with the fall and darking of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector's life is done. 8

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man
I seek. [HECTOR falls.

So, Ilium, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down!
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone. 12
On! Myrmidons, and cry you all amain,
'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.'—
[A retreat sounded.

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like,
my lori. 16

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads
the earth,

And, stickler-like, the armies separates.

My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have
fed,

Pleas'd with t' 's dainty bait, thus goes to bed.—
[Sheathes his sword.

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; 21
Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Ezeunt.

Scene IX.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and Others marching. Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?
Nest. Peace, drums!

[Within.] Achilles!

Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; 4
Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along. Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.
 If in his death the gods have us befriended, 8
 Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.
 [Exeunt marching.]

Scene X.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ÆNEAS and Trojans.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.
 Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.
 All. Hector! the gods forbid!
 Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail, 4
 In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful
 field.
 Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with
 speed!
 Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smite at Troy!
 I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy, 8
 And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not that tell me
 so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death; 12
 But dare all luminence that gods and men
 Address their dangers in. Hector is gone:
 Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?
 Let him that will a screech-owl eye be call'd 16
 Go in to Troy, and say there Hector's dead:
 There is a word will Priam turn to stoue,
 Make wells and Nibes of the maids and wives,
 Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word, 20
 Scare Troy out of itself. But march away:
 Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
 Stay yet. You vie abominable tents,
 Thus proudly plight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare, 25
 I'll through and through you! And, thou great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall under our two hates:
 I'll haunt thee like a coked conscience still, 28
 Till I mould thee gobias swift as frenzy's thoughts.
 Strike a free march to Troy! with comfort go:
 Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt ÆNEAS and Trojan Forces.]

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! 32

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and
 shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones!
 O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised. O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me see!— 41

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
 Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
 And being once subdu'd in armed tail, 44
 Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall, 48
 Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
 Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
 Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
 Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade, 52
 Some two months hence my will shall here be made:
 It should be now, but that my fear is this,
 Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.
 Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases; 56
 And at that time bequeath you my diseases. [Exit.]

Act I.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to faulsh? 5

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people. 8

All. We know't, we know't.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't: let it be done. Away, away! 13

Sec. Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularise their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge. 26

Sec. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius? 26

First Cit. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

Sec. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country? 32

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously. 36

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue. 42

Sec. Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous. 45

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

First Cit. Soft! who comes here? 52

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

Sec. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

First Cit. He's one honest enough; would all the rest were so! 56

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know we have strong arms too. 64

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit. We cannot, sir; we are undone already. 58

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them Against the Roman state, whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder than can ever Appear in your impediment. For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it, and 77
Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Ahuck! You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you; and you slander 80
The helms of the state, who care for you like fathers,

When you curse them as enemies.

First Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet: suffer us to famish, and their storerooms crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must 92
Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale't a little more. 97

First Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale; but, au't please you, deliver, 100

Men. There was a time when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:
That only like a gulf it did remain
I' the midst of the body, idle and unactive, 104
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing

Like labour with the rest, where the other instruments

Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister 103
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

First Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly? 112

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus—

For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak—it tauntingly replied 116
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts

That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

First Cit. Your belly's answer? What!
The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye, 121
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps 124
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks! what then? what then?

First Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd.

Who is the sink of the body,—

Men. Well, what then? 128

First Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,

What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;
If you'll bestow a small, of what you have little,
Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

First Cit. You're long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend; 133

Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
'That I receive the general food at first, 137

Which you do live upon; and fit it is,
Because I am the store house and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood, 141
Even to the court, the heart, to the seat of the brain;

And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency 145
Whereby they live. And though that all at once,
You, my good friends,—this says the belly, mark me,—

First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. 'Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each, 149
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,

And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't?

First Cit. It was an answer: how apply you this? 153

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,

And you the mutinous members; for, examine Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly 156

Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find No public benefit which you receive

But it proceeds or comes from them to you, And no way from yourselves. What do you think, 160

You, the great toe of this assembly?

First Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest,

Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost: Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, 165

Lead'st first to win some vantage. But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs: Rome and her rats are at the point of battle; The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcius!

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dis-sentious rogues,

That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs?

First Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter 173

Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs,

That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you,

The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, 176

Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,

Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is, 180

To make him worthy whose offence subdues him, And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness

Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sleek man's appetite, who desires most that 184

Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?

With every minute you do change a mind, 188

And call him noble that was now your hate, Him vile that was your gurrand. What's the matter,

That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, 192

Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else

Would feed on one another? What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof they say

The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say! 196

They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise,

Who thrives, and who decays; side factions, and give out

Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, And feeling such as stand not in their liking,

Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth, 203

And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high

As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;

For though abundantly they lack discretion, 208

Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,

What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolv'd: hang 'em! They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs: That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat; 212

That meat was made for mouths; that the gods sent not corn for the rich men only. With these shreds They vented their complainings; which being answer'd,

And a petition granted them, a strange one,— To break the heart of generosity, 217

And make bold power look pale,—they threw their caps:

As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,

Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms, 221

Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—'stealth!

The rabble should have first unroof'd the city, Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time 225

Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go; get you home, you fragments! 228

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here; what's the matter?

Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscians are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on't; then we shall ha' means to vent Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders. 232

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators; JUNIUS BRUTUS and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

First Sen. Marcus, 'tis true that you have lately told us;
The Volscies are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader, Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't. I sh'n in envying his nobility, *236
And were I anything but what I am, I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.
Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make 240
Only my wars with him: he is a lion That I am proud to hunt.

First Sen. Then, worthy Marcus, Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.
Mar. Sir, it is; 244

And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face. What! art thou still? stand'st out?

Tit. No, Calus Mareus; I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t'other, Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O! true-bred. 249
First Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where I know

Our greatest friends attend us.
Tit. [To COMINIUS.] Lead you on:

[To MARCIUS.] Follow Cominius; we must follow you; 252

Right worthy you priority.
Com. Noble Marcus!

First Sen. [To the Citizens.] Hence! to your homes! be gone.

Mar. Nay, let them follow: The Volscies have much corn; take these rats thither

To know their garners. Worshipful mutiners, Your valour puts well forth; pray, follow. 257

[Exit Senators, COMINIUS, MARCIUS, TITUS, and MENENIUS. Citizens steal away.]

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcus?

Bru. He has no equal.
Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,— 260

Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?
Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Bemoek the modest moon.
Bru. The present wars devour him; he is grown 264

Too proud to be so vallant.
Sic. Such a nature,

Tickled with good success, disdals the shadow

Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder His insolence can brook to be commended 265
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims, In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot Better be held nor more attain'd than by A place below the first; for what misearles 272
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure Will then cry out of Marcus 'O! if he Had borne the business.'

Sic. Besides, if things go well, 276
Opinion, that so steaks on Marcus, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come! Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcus, Though Marcus earn'd them not; and all his faults 280

To Marcus shall be honours, though indeed In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence and hear How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion More than his singularity, he goes 284
Upon this present action.

Bru. Let's along. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Corioli. The Senate-house.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS and Senators.

First Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours? What ever have been thought on in this state. 4
That could be brought to boldly act ere Rome Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone Since I heard thence; these are the words; I think

I have the letter here; yes, here it is. 8
They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west: the dearth is great; The people mutinous; and it is rumour'd, Cominius, Marcus, your old enemy,— 12

Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,— And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three led on this preparation Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you: 16
Consider of it.

First Sen. Our army's in the field; We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly To keep your great pretences veil'd till when 20
They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was To take in many towns ere almost Rome 24
Should know we were afoot.

Sec. Sen. Noble Aufidius, Take your commission; lie you to your bands;

Let us alone to guard Corioll:
If they set down before's, for the remove 28
Bring up your army; but, I think you'll find They've not prepared for us.

Auf. O! doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more;
Some parcels of their power are forth already, 32
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Calus Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you! 36
Auf. And keep your honours safe!

First Sen.

Farewell.

Sec. Sen.

Farewell.

All. Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—*Rome. A Room in MARCIUS'S
House.*

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA: they set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I would freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him: from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man. 19

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam;
how then?

Vol. Then, his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfet out of action. 28

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gen. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire
myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not. 32

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum,
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair,
As children from a bear, the Volscies shunning
him:

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus:
'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome.' His bloody brow

With his maul'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvestman that's task'd to mow 40
Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter! no blood.

Vol. Away, you fool: it more becomes a man
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba 44
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian sworls, contemning. Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. 48

[Exit Gentlewoman.]

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!
Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you. 52

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little
son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good
madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum than look upon his schoolmaster. 61

Val. O' my word, the father's son; I'll swear
'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together:
he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again;
and over and over he comes, and up again;
caught it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O! I warrant, how he maunlocked it!

Vol. One on's father's moods. 72

Val. Indeed, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. 77

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall. 80

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Vol. Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us. 97

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 101

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night. 104

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: The Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us. 113

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Her alone, lady: as she is now she will but disease our better mirth. 117

Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well then. Come, good sweet lady, Prithce, Virgilla, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us. 121

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: a wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet. 4

Lart. So the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him; lend you him I will

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half. 8

Mar. Then shall we hear their alarm, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence,

To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast.

A Parley sounded. Enter, on the Walls, two Senators, and Others.

Tullius Aufidius, is he within your walls? 13

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he.

That's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums

[Drums afar off.

Are bringing forth our youth: we'll break our

walls, 16

Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but plin'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off!

[Alarum afar off.

There is Aufidius: list, what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O! they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter, and pass over the stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city. Now put your shields before your hearts, and

fight 24

With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on,

my fellows:

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsc, 28

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beaten back to their trenches. Re-ente MARCIUS.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,

You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd 32

Further than seen, and one infect another

Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run

From slaves that eyes would beat! Pluto and hell!

All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale

With flight and agued fear! Mend and charge home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe

And make my wars on you; look to't: come on;

If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives, 41

As they us to our trenches follow'd.

Another alarum. The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volsces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are open: now prove good seconds:

'Tis for the followers Fortune widens them, 44
Not for the fliers; mark me and do the like.

[He enters the gates.]

First Sol. Foolhardiness! not I.

Sec. Sol.

Nor I.

[MARCUS is shut in.]

Third Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

[Alarum continues.]

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcus?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless, 48

First Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,

With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,
Clapp'd to their gates; he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow! 52

Who, sensibly, outdares his senseless sword.

And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left,
Marcus:

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible 57
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the
world 60

Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

First Sol. Look, sir!

Lart. O! 'tis Marcus!

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight and all enter the city.]

Scene V.—Corioli. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

Sec. Rom. And I this.

Third Rom. A mirraln on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continue: still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS, with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours 4

At a crack'd drachmè] Cushions, leaden spoons,
Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with
them! 8

And hark, what noise the general makes! To
him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans: then, vallant Titus,
take

Convenient numbers to make good the city. 12
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste

To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not; 16
My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you well:
The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, 20
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she places highest! So, farewell. 24

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcus!—

[Exit MARCIUS.]

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away! 28
[Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought;
we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whilst we have struck, 4

By intermus and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods!
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering, 8

May give you thankful sacrifice.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have Issu'd,
And given to Lartius and to Marcus battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven, 12
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums: 16
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volsces
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, 20
Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder,

That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within.] Come I too late? 24

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

Enter MARCIUS.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others, 28

But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me elip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors. 32
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the
other; 36

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? 40

Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen,
The common file—a plague! tribunes for
them!—

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge 44

From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so? 48

Com. Marcius, we have at disadvantage
fought,

And did retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battie? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius, 52
Their bands l' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought, 56
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but, 60
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts,

We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never 64
Deny your asking: take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear 69
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself; 72
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their swords;
take him up in their arms, and cast
up their caps.

O! me alone? Make you a sword of me? 76

If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscies? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, 80
Though thanks to ail, must I select from all:
the rest

Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows: 85
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon CORIOLI, going with drum and trumpet towards COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So; let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch

Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field, 4
We cannot keep the town.

Lien. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.
Our guilder, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

ALARUM. Enter from opposite sides MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Flx thy foot. 4
Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!
Auf. If I fly, Marcius.
Halloo me like a hare.
Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus, 6
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls.
And made what work I pleas'd; 'tis not my
blood
Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge
Wrench up thy power to the highest.
Auf. Wert thou the Hector 12
That was the whip of your brag'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not scape me here.—
[They fight, and certain Volsees come to the aid of AUFIDIUS.]
Officious, and not vallant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. 16
[Exeunt fighting, all driven in by MARCIUS.]

Scene IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter from one side, COMINIUS and Romans; from the other side, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou'lt not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend and shrug, 4
P' the end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull
Tribunes,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts, 8
'We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!'
Yet canst thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before,

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison: 12
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me. I have done
As you have done; that's what I can; [induc'd]
As you have been; that's for my country: 17
He that has but effected his good will Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know

The value of her own: 'twere a concealment 21
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech
you,— 25

In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,—before our army hear
me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they swart 28
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,

Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store, of
all 32

The treasure, in this field achlev'd and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general; 36
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing. 40

[A long flourish. They all cry 'Marcius! Marcius!' cast up their caps and lances: COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare.]

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall

If the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities
be

Made all of false-face'd soothing! 44
When steel grows soft as is the parasite's silk,
Let him be made a coverture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bleed, or foil'd some debile wretch,
Which, without note, here's many else have
done, 49

You shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I lov'd my little shoud' be dieted 52
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More erud to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly. By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you,
Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles, 57
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war's garland; in token of the which,
My noble steed known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this
time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear 65
The addition nobly ever!

All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.

Cor. I will go wash; 68
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition 72
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome 76
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg 80
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it; 'tis yours. What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house: he us'd me kindly:
He eried to me; I saw him prisoner; 84
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O! well begg'd!

Were he the butcher of my son, he should 88
Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter! forgot.
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent: 92
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.

Scene X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!

First Sol. 'Twill be delivered back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot, 4
Being a Volsee, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat 8
me,

And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat. By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: mine emulation 12
Hath not that honour in't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force—

True sword to sword—I'll patch at him some way
Or wrath or craft may get him.

First Sol. He's the devil. 16
Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My a-lour's poison'd!

With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol, 20
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarcements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to the city;

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must 25

Be hostages for Rome.

First Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you—

'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it 32
I may spur on my journey.

First Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

Act II.

Scene I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius. 5

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their
friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love? 3
Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear. 13

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you. 16

Sic. } Well, sir.
Bru. }

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all. 21

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you? 26

Both. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Beth. Well, well, sir; well. 30

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir. 37

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O! that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an Interior survey of your good selves. O! that you could. 45

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates—alias fools—as any in Rome. 49

Sic. Meneuius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying, Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my mallee in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are,—I cannot call you Lyeurguses,—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worshipps have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your blisson consequuties glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too? 73

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejoin the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be plinched with the colle, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing; all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones. 90

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. 93

Men. Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worshipps; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be hold to take my leave of you. [BRUTUS and SICINIUS go aside.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast? 111

Vol. Honourable Meneuius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Jumo, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcus coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Meneuius; and with most prosperous approbation. 116

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee! Ho! Marcus coming home!

Vir. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him, the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night. A letter for me! 124

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricute, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded. 133

Vir. O! no, no, no.

Vol. O! he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much. Brings a' victory in his pocket? The wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows, Meneuius; he comes the third time home with the oaken garland. 140

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off. 143

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stay'd by him I would not have been so fillused for all the chests in Corioli,

You are a sessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes; the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war. He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth there's wondrous things spoke
of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.
Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes.] God save your good worships! Marcus is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. [To VOLUMNIA.] Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' the shoulder, and I' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the reputation of Tarquin seven hurts I' the body.

Men. One I' the neck, and two I' the thigh, there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now, it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.] Hark!
the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcus: before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves
tears:
Death, that dark spirit, in's nery arm doth lie;
Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then mendie.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLA-NUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcus did
fight

Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcus; these
In honour follows Coriolanus.

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
[Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O!

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcus, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,—
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?

But O! thy wife!

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd
home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet? [To VALERIA.] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn: O! welcome
home;

And welcome, general; and ye're welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,

And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy.
Welcome.

A curse begnaw at very root on's heart
That is not glad to see thee! You are three That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of
men,

We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet, welcome, warriors!

We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on!

Cor. [To VOLUMNIA and VALERIA.] Your hand, and yours:

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have liv'd

To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but

Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,

I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol!

[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights

Are spectacled to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him: the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck,

Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, hulks,
windows,

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridg' hors'd
With variable complexions, all agreeing

In earnestness to see him: sell-shown dainties
Do press among the popular throngz, and puff

To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in

Their nicely-gawdied cheeks to the wanton spoil
Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a pother

As if that whatsoever god who leads him

Were silly erept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden 240

I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours

From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort. 245

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they upon their ancient malice will Forget with the least cause these his new honours, 243

Which that he'll give them, make I as little question

As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,

Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put 252
The napless vesture of humility ;

Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word. O! he would miss it rather 256

Than carry it but by the suit o' the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better

Than have him hold that purpose and to put it
In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will. 260

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills,

A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out

To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred 264

He still hath held them; that to his power he would

Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders,
and

Disproportioned their freedoms; holding them,
In human action and capacity, 268

Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in the war, who have their provand

Only for bearing burthens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested 272
At some time when his soaring insolence

Shall teach the people—which time shall not want,

If he be put upon't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire 276

To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought

That Marcius shall be consul. 280

I have seen the dumb men throng to see him, and The blind to hear him speak: matrons hung gloves,

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers
Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended, 284

As to Jove's statue, and the commons made A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts:

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time, 288
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers to lay cushions.

First Off. Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?

Sec. Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it. 4

First Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

Sec. Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't. 17

First Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waded indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love. 26

Sec. Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report; but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of in-grateful injury; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard
it.

First Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man; make way, they are coming. 41

A Sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them, COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, many other Senators, SICINIUS and BAUTUS. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volsces, and To send for Titus Lartius, it remains, As the main point of this our after-ueeting, 44 To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country: therefore, please you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire The present consul, and last general 48 In our well-found successes, to report A little of that worthy work perform'd By Caius Marcius Coriolanus, whom We meet here both to thank and to remember With honours like himself.

First Sen. Speak, good Cominius: 53 Leave nothing out for length, and make us think Rather our state's defective for requital, Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes.]

Masters o' the people, 56 We do request your kindest ears, and, after, Your loving motion toward the common body, To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convented Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts 60 Inclinable to honour and advance The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember 64 A kinder value of the people than He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off; I would you rather had been silent. Please you To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly; 68 But yet my caution was more pertinent Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people; But let him not to be their bedfellow. Worthy Cominius, speak.

[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away. Nay, keep your place.

First Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear 72 What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon: I had rather have my wounds to heal again Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft, 76 When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.

You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your people,

I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head Than 80 I the sun

When the alarm were struck than idly sit To hear my nothings monster'd. [Exit.]

Men. Masters of the people, Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,— That's thousand to one good one,—when you 84 now see

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour Than one on's ears to hear it. Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus

Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held 88 That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the haver; if it be,

The man I speak of cannot in the world Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years, 92

When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought Beyond the mark of others; our then dictator,

Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight, When with his Amazouian chin he drove 96

The bristled lips before him. He bestrid An o'er-press'd Roman, and I the consul's view

Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met, And struck him on his knee: in that day's feat,

When he might act the woman in the scute, 100 He prov'd best man I the field, and for his meed Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age

Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea, 104 And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,

Before and in Corioli, let me say, I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fliers,

And by his rare example made the coward 108 Turn terror into sport: as weeds before A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,

Aud fell below his stem: his sword, death's 112 stamp,

Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot He was a thing of blood, whose every motion

Was tim'd with dying cries: alone he enter'd The mortal gate of the city, which he painted

With shunless destiuy; aidless came off, 117 And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Corioli like a planet. Now all's his:

When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce 120 His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigate,

And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 124

'Twere a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd Both field and city ours, he never stood

To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man! First Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours 128 Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at, And look'd upon things precious as they were

The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards 132
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:
Let him be called for.

First Sen. Call Coriolanus.
Off. He doth appear. 136

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot 141
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you,

That I may pass this doing.
Sic. Sir, the people 144
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have, 148
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. [Aside to SICINIUS.] Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide, 153

As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Exeunt all but SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the
people. 160

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will require them,

As if he did condemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come; we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices,
we ought not to deny him.

Sec. Cit. We may, sir, if we will. 3

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members. 14

First Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us
the many-headed multitude. 18

Third Cit. We have been called so of many;
not that our heads are some brown, some black,
some abran, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

Sec. Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly? 28

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward. 32

Sec. Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife. 37

Sec. Cit. You are never without your tricks:
you may, you may.

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man. 43

Re-enter CORIOLANUS, in a gown of humility, and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in a gown of humility:
mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Citizens.

Men. O, sir, you are not right: have you not known 53
The worthiest men have done't?

Cor. What must I say?
'I pray, sir,—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, my
wounds! 56

I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd and ran

From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me! the gods!

You must not speak of that: you must desire them 60

To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em!

I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all: I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you, 64

In wholesome manner.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces And keep their teeth clean. [Exit MENENIUS]

So, here comes a bra

Re-enter two Citizens.

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here?

First Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to't. 69

Cor. Mine own desert.

Sec. Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire. 72

First Cit. How! not your own desire?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

First Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you. 77

Cor. Well, then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

First Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly. 80

Cor. Kindly! sir, I pray, let me ha't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir; what say you?

Sec. Cit. You shall ha't, worthy sir. 84

Cor. A match, sir. There is in all two worthy voices begged. I have your alms: adieu.

First Cit. But this is something odd!

Sec. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter. [Exit the two Citizens.]

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown. 92

Third Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved woobly.

Cor. Your enigma? 95

Third Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul. 110

Fourth Cit. We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily.

Third Cit. You have received many wounds for your country. 114

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further. 117

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exit.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!

Better it is to die, better to starve, 120 than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this woolvish toge should I stand here, beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,

Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't: What custom wills, in all things should we do't,

The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And inmountainous error be too highly heapt

For truth to o'er-peer. Rather than food it so, Let the high office and the honour go 129

To one that would do thus. I am half through; The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Here come more voices. 132

Re-enter three other Citizens.

Your voices: for your voices I have fought; Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more; your voices: 137

Indeed, I would be consul.

Fifth Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice. 140

Sixth Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen. 144 God save thee, noble consul! [Exit Citizens.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BAUCUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: remains That, in the official marks invested, you 148 Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged:

The people do admit you, and are summon'd To meet anon, upon your approbation. 152

Cor. Where? at the senate house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again, 156

Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks, 160
'Tis warm at's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose
this man?

First Cit. He has our voices, sir. 164

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your
love.

Sec. Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

Third Cit. Certainly, 168
He flouted us downright.

First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech; he did not mock us.

Sec. Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says

He used us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for's
country. 172

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

Third Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,

'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom, 176

But by your voices, will not so permit me;

Your voices therefore!' when we granted that,

Here was, 'I thank you for your voices, thank
you,

Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices 180

I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see't,
Or, sceling it, of such childish friendliness

To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power, 185

But was a petty servant to the state,

He was your enemy, ever spake against

Your liberties and the charters that you bear

I' the body of the weat; and now, arriving 189

A place of potency and sway o' the state,

If he should maliciously remain

Fast foe to the plebeil, your voices might 192

Be curses to yourselves? You should have said

That as his worthy deeds did claim no less

Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature

Would think upon you for your voices and 196

Translate his malice towards you into love,

Standing your friendly lord.

Sic.

Thus to have said,

As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his splrit

And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd 200

Either his gracious promise, which you might,

As cause had called you up, have held him to;

Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,

Which easily endures not article 204

Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,

You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,

And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive

He did sollicit you in free contempt 208

When he did need your loves, and do you think

That his contempt shall not be bruising to you

When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies

No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry

Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you 213

Ere now denied the asker? and now again

Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow

Your sued-for tongues? 215

Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

Sec. Cit. And will deny him:

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

First Cit. Ay, twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em. 220

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those
friends,

They have chose a consul that will from them
take

Their liberties; make them of no more voice

Than dogs that are as often beat for barking 224

As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;

And, on a safer judgment, all revoke

Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,

And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not

With what contempt he wore the humble weed;

How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,

Thinking upon his services, took from you

The apprehension of his present portance, 232

Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion

After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay

A fault on us, your tr'ounes; that we labour'd,—

No impediment between,—but that you must

Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him 237

More after our commandment than as guided

By your own true affections; and that, your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do 240

Than what you should, made you against the grain

To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures
to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country, 244

How long continu'd, and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o' the Marcians, from whence came
That Ancus Marelius, Numa's daughter's son.
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king; 248
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, that was so surnamed,—
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,— 252
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath, beside, well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Sealing his present bearing with his past, 257
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say you ne'er had done't—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on; 260
And presently, when you have drawn your number,

Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so; almost all Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard 264
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol, come: 268
We'll be there before the stream o' the
people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own.
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, CO-MINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, SENATORS, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new
head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volscies stand but as at first.
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road 5

Up-on's again.

Com. They are worn, lord cousin, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again—

Cor. Saw you Aufidius? 8

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me; and did
curse
Against the Volscies, for they had so vilely

Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what? 12

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to
sword;

That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most, that he would pawn his fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might 16
Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home. 20

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth; I do despise
them;

For they do prank them in authority
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further. 24

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no fourth.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the cor? 28

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

First Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop,

Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd? 32

Must these have voices, that can yield them now,
And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm. 36

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule
Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot: 40

The people cry you mock'd them, and of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you replu'd:

Scandall'd the suppliants for the people, call'd
them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness. 44

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence?

Bru. How! I inform them!

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Bru. Not unlike,

Each way, to better yours. 43

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yond clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir; if you will pass 52
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way.

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm. 56

Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This paltering;

Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn! 60
This was my speech, and I will speak 't again,—

Men. Not now, not now. —

First Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons: 64

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, 69
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;
Who lack'd not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more. 73

First Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs 76
Coin words till they decay against those measles,
Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o' the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not 80
A man of their infirmity.

Sic. 'Twere well

We let the people know't.

Men. What, what? his cholera?

Cor. Cholera!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, 84
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!

Sic. It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark
you 88

His absolute 'shall'?

Com. 'Twas from the canon.

Cor. 'Shall!'

O good but most unwise patriarians! why,

You grave but reckless senators, have you thus Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but
The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants no
spirit

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power
Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake
Your dangerous levity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians

If they be senators; and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,

And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,'
His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself
It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well, on to the market-place
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,—

Men. Well, well; no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,

I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons
More worthy than their voices. They know the corn

Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for't. Being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service

Did not deserve corn gratis. Being I' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?

How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words: 'We did request
it;

We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands.' Thus we delude
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears; which will in time break ope

The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure.
Cor. No, take more—
 What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
 Seal what I end withal! This double worship, 141 Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
 Insult without all reason; where gentry, title,
 wisdom,
 Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no 144
 Of general ignorance,—it must omit
 Real necessities, and give way the while
 To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows
 Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
 you,— 148
 You that will be less fearful than discreet,
 That love the fundamental part of state
 More than you doubt the change on't, that prefer
 A noble life before a long, and wish 152
 To jump a body with a dangerous physic
 That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
 The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
 The sweet which is their poison. Your dis-
 honour 156
 Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
 Of that integrity which should become it,
 Not having the power to do the good it would,
 For the ill which doth control't.
Bru. He has said enough. 160
Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
 As traitors do.
Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!
 What should the people do with these bald
 tribunes? 164
 On whom depending, their obedience fails
 To the greater bench. In a rebellion, When what's not meet, but what must be, was
 law,
 Then were they chosen: In a better hour, 168
 Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
 And throw their power i' the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason!
Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The ædiles, ho! Let him be apprehended. 172

Enter an Ædile.

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Ædile] in whose name, myself
 Attach thee as a trait'rous innovator,
 A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,
 And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat! 176
Sen. We'll surely him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones
 Out of thy garments.
Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter Ædiles, with Others, and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect. 180
Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him, Ædiles!
Citizens. Down with him!—down with him!—
Sen. Weapons!—weapons!—weapons!— 184
 [They all bustle about CORIOLANUS, crying
 Tribunes!—patricians!—citizens!—What ho!—
 Sleinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!
 Peace!—Peace!—Peace!—Stay!—Hold!—Peace!
Men. What is about to be?—I am out of
 breath; 188
 Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tribunes
 To the people! Coriolanus, patience!
 Speak, good Sleinius.
Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
Citizens. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace!—
 Speak, speak, speak. 192
Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
 Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,
 Whom late you have nam'd for consul.
Men. Fle, fle, fle!
 This is the way to kindle, not to quench. 196
First Sen. To unbuild the city and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city but the people?
Citizens. True,
 The people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were established
 The people's magistrates.
Citizens. You so remain. 201
Men. And so are like to do.
Com. That is the way to lay the city flat;
 To bring the roof to the foundation, 204
 And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
 In heaps and piles of ruin.
Sic. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
 Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce, 208
 Upon the part o' the people, in whose power
 We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
 Of present death.
Sic. Therefore lay hold of him;
 Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
 Into destruction cast him.
Bru. Ædiles, seize him! 213
Citizens. Yield, Marcius, yield!
Men. Hear me one word;
 Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.
Æd. Peace, peace! 216
Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's
 friends,
 And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.
Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
 That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon
 him, 221

And bear him to the rock.
Cor. No, I'll die here.
[Drawing his sword.]
 There's some among you have beheld me fighting:
 Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen
 me. 224
Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.
Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Marcius, help,
 You that be noble; help him, young and old!
Citizens. Down with him!—down with him!
[In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People are beat in.]
Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away! 229
 All will be naught else.
Sec. Sen. Get you gone.
Cor. Stand fast;
 We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
First Sen. The gods forbid!
 I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house; 233
 Leave us to cure this cause.
Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,
 You cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech you.
Com. Come, sir, along with us. 236
Cor. I would they were barbarians,—as they
 are,
 Though in Rome letter'd,—not Romans,—as they are not,
 Though call'd 't the porch o' the Capitol,—
Men. Be gone;
 Put not your worthy rage into your tongue; 240
 One time will owe another.
Cor. On fair ground
 I could beat forty of them.
Men. I could myself
 Take up a brace o' the best of them; yea, tho'
 two tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
 And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands 245
 Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,
 Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
 Like interrupted waters and o'erbear 248
 What they are us'd to bear.
Men. Pray you, be gone.
 I'll try whether my old wit be in request
 With those that have but little: this must be patch'd
 With cloth of any colour.
Com. Nay, come away. 252
[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and Others.]
First Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.
Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
 Ho would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
 Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth: 256
 What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
 And, being angry, does forget that ever

He heard the name of death. [A noise within.]
 Here's goodly work!
Sec. Pat. I would they were a-bed!
Men. I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance! 261
 Could he not speak 'em fair?
Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rabble.
Sic. Where is this viper
 That would depopulate the city and
 Be every man himself?
Men. You worthy tribunes,— Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpelan
 rock 265
 With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,
 And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
 Than the severity of the public power, 268
 Which he so sets at nought.
First Cit. He shall well know
 The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
 And we their hands.
Citizens. He shall, sure on't.
Men. Sir, sir,—
Sic. Peace! 272
Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt
 With modest warrant.
Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you
 Have help to make this rescue?
Men. Hear me speak:
 As I do know the consul's worthiness, 276
 So can I name his faults.
Sic. Consul! what consul?
Men. The Consul Coriolanus.
Bru. He consul!
Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.
Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours,
 good people, 280
 I may be heard, I would crave a word or two,
 The which shall turn you to no further harm
 Than so much loss of time.
Sic. Speak briefly then;
 For we are peremptory to dispatch 283
 This viperous traitor. To eject him hence
 Were but one danger, and to keep him here
 Our certain death; therefore it is decreed
 He dies to-night.
Men. Now the good gods forbid! 288
 That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
 Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
 In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dau-should now eat up her own! 292
Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.
Men. O! he's a limb that has but a disease;
 Mortal to cut it off; to cure it easy.
 What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?
 Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost,—
 Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath By many an ounce,—he dropped it for his country;

noise within.

Were to us all, that do't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end o' the world.

Sic. This is clean kam.

Bru. Merely awry : when he did love his country

It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot 304
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more.
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection, being of eatching nature, 308
Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unseann'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by process ; 312

Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If 'twere so,—

Sic. What do ye talk ?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience ? 316
Our adities smote ? ourselves resisted ? Come !

Men. Consider this : he has been bred 't the wars

Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In bolted language ; meal and bran together 320
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer by a lawful form,—
In peace,—to his utmost peril.

First Sen. Noble tribunes, 324

It is the humane way : the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Meneclus,
Be you then as the people's officer. 328
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home,
Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there :

Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way. 332

Men. I'll bring him to you.
[To the Senators.] Let me desire your company.

He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

First Sen. Pray you, let's to him.
[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in CORIOLANUS'S
House.

Enter CORIOLANUS and Patrieians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears ; present me

Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels ;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpelan rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch 4

Below the beam of sight ; yet will I still
Be thus to them.

First Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I nurse my mother
Does not my prove me further, who was wout 8
To call them w' men vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads
In congregation, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up 12
To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you :

Why did you wish me milder ? Would you have
me

False to my nature ? Rather say I play
The man I am.

Vol. O ! sir, sir, sir, 16

I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are

With striving less to be so : lesser had been 20
The thwarting of your dispositions if

You had not show'd them how you were dis-
pos'd,

Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too. 24

Enter MENENIUS and Senators.

Men. Come, come ; you have been too rough,
something too rough ;

You must return and mend it.

First Sen. There's no remedy ;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be councill'd. 28
I have a heart of mettle apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman !
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but
that 32

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do ?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then ? what thou ? 36

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them I cannot do it to the gods ;
Must I then do't to them ?

Vol. You are too absolute ;

Though therein you can never be too noble, 40
But when extremities speak, I have heard you
say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I' the war do grow together : grant that, and tell
me,

In peace what each of them by th' other lose, 44
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!
Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not,—which, for your best
ends,
You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace 49
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?
Vol. Because that now it lies you on to
speak 52
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts
you,
But with such words that are but rooted in
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth. 57
Now, this no more dishonours you at all
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune and
The hazard of much blood. 61
I would dissemble with my nature where
My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this, 64
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general louts
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard 68
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!
Come, go with us; speak fair; you may save so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I prithee now, my son, 72
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretched it,—here be with
them,
Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant 76
More learned than the ears,—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling: or say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far 85
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done, Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were
yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free 88
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prithee now,

Go, and be ruled; although I know thou hadst
rather
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been in the market-place; and,
sir, 'tis fit 93
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve if he go
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.
Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?
Must I with my base to igne give to my noble
heart 100
A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcins, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the wind. To the marketplace! 104
You have put me now to such a part which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast
said 108
My praise made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe 113
Small as a eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lull asleep! The smiles of knaves Tent in my cheeks, and school-boys' tears take up 116
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms! I will not do't, 120
Lest I surease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee it is my more dishonour 124
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With us big heart as thou. Do as thou list, 128 Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from
me,
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;

Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, <sup>132</sup>
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
belov'd
Call the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do <sup>136</sup>
I' the way of flattery further.
Vol. Do your will. [Exit.]
Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you:
arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong <sup>140</sup>
Than are upon you yet.
Men. The word is 'mildly.'
Cor. Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.
Men. Ay, but mildly. <sup>144</sup>
Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. The Forum.Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannical power: If he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antlates <sup>4</sup>
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?
Æd. He's coming.
Bru. How accompanied?
Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.
Sic. Have you a catalogue <sup>8</sup>
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?
Æd. I have; 'tis ready.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Æd. I have.
Sic. Assemble presently the people hither; <sup>12</sup>
And when they hear me say, 'It shall be so,
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' he it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
them,
If I say, fine, cry 'fine,'—if death, cry 'death,' <sup>16</sup>
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power I' the truth o' the cause.
Æd. I shall inform them.
Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd <sup>20</sup>
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.
Æd. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.
Bru. Go about it. <sup>24</sup>
[Exit Ædile.]
I'll bring him to order straight. He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks What's in his heart; and that is there which looks <sup>29</sup>
With us to break his neck.
Sic. Well, here he comes.
Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SENATORS, and PATRIEANS.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece <sup>32</sup>
Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthy men! plant love among
us!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace, <sup>36</sup>
And not our streets with war!
First Sen. Amen, amen.
Men. A noble wish.
Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.
Sic. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes; audience; peace!
I say.
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho! <sup>40</sup>
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?
Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content <sup>44</sup>
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo! citizens, he says he is content:
The war-like service he has done, consider;
think <sup>48</sup>
Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves I' the holy churchyard.
Cor. Scratches with briars,
Scars to move laughter only.
Men. Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen, <sup>52</sup>
You find him like a soldier: do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well; no more. <sup>56</sup>
Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice

- I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
You take it off again?
- Sic.* Answer to us. 60
- Cor.* Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.
- Sic.* We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical; 64
For which you are a traitor to the people.
- Cor.* How! Traitor!
- Men.* Nay, temperately; your promise.
- Cor.* The fires of the lowest hell fold in the people!
Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say
'Thou liest' into thee with a voice as free 72
As I do pray the gods.
- Sic.* Mark you this, people?
- Citizens.* To the rock!—to the rock with him!
- Sic.* Peace!
- We need not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seen him do, and heard him
speak, 76
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him; even
this,
So criminal and in such capital kind, 80
Deserves the extremest death.
- Bru.* But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome,—
- Cor.* What do you prate of service?
- Bru.* I talk of that, that know it.
- Cor.* You!
- Men.* Is this the promise that you made your mother?
- Com.* Know, I pray you,— 84
- Cor.* I'll know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flogging, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy 88
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have't with saying 'Good morrow.'
- Sic.* For that he has,—
As much as in him lies,—from time to time 92
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power, as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers 96
That do distribute it; in the name of the people,
And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation 100
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates: if the people's name,
I say, it shall be so.
- Citizens.* It shall be so,—It shall be so,—Let him away.— 104
- He's banish'd, and it shall be so.
- Com.* Hear me, my masters, and my common
friends,—
Sic. He's sentenc'd; no more hearing.
- Com.* Let me speak:
I have been consul, and can show for Rome 108
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,
And treasure of my loins; then if I would 112
Speak that—
Sic. We know your drift: speak what?
- Bru.* There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,
As enemy to the people and his country: 116
It shall be so.
- Citizens.* It shall be so,—It shall be so.
- Cor.* You common cry of curs! whose breath
I hate
As reek of the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcases of unburied men 120
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumpour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with flogging of their plumes, 124
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till at length
Your ignorance,—which finds not, till it feels,— Making but reservation of yourselves,— 128
Still your own foes,—deliver you as most Abated captives to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back: 132
There is a world elsewhere.
- [Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS,
Senators, and Patricians.]
- Ed.* The people's enemy is gone, is gone!
Citizens. Our enemy is banish'd!—he is gone!—Hoo! hoo!
[They all shout and throw up their caps.]
- Sic.* Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite; 137
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard Attend us through the city.
- Citizens.* Come, come,—let us see him out at gates! come! 140
- The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come!
[Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Rome. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell:
the beast

With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother, be so,—Let 104

y common

ing.
me speak :

arewell:

mother,

Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say extremity was the trier of spirits; 4
That common chances common men could bear;
That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
craves 8

A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that could't them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades
In Rome, 13

And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!

I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules, 17

Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius, Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife! my
mother! 20

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime
general,

I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sa-
men 25

'Tis fond to wall inevitable strokes
As 'tis to laugh at them. My mother, you wot
well

My hazards still have been your solace; and 28
Believe't not lightly,—though I go alone
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen,—your
son

Will or exceed the common or be caught 32
With cautelous baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,

Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: determine on some course,
More than a wild exposure to each chance 36

That starts l' the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods!

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with
thee

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of
us,

And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth 40
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well: 44

Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full

Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruin'd: bring me but out at gate.

Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and 48

My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught 52
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand: 57
Come. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.
The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have slid
In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done 4
Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home;
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her,
Bru. Why?

Sic. They say she's mad. 9

Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.

Vol. O! you're well met. The hoarded plague
o' the gods

Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace! be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should
hear,— 13

Nay, and you shall hear some. [To BRUTUS.] Will you be gone?

Vir. [To SICINIUS.] You shall stay too. I would I had the power

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind? 16

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this fool

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wis'd
words; 21

And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what; yet go:

Nay, but thou shalt stay too; I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, 24

His good sword in his hand.

Sic.

What then?

Vir.

What then!

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come; peace!

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country

As he began, and not unknit himself

The noble knot he made.

Bru.

I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incens'd the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth

As I can of those mysteries which heaven

Will not have earth to know.

Bru.

Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:

As far as doth the Capitol exceed

The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,—

This lady's husband here, this, do you see,—

Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic.

Why stay we to be baited

With one that wants her wits?

Vol.

Take my prayers with you.

[Exeunt Tribunes.]

I would the gods had nothing else to do

But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em

But once a day, it would unclog my heart

Of what lies heavy to't.

Men.

You have told them home,

And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol.

Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,

And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let's go.

Leave this faint pulling and lament as I do,

In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men.

Fie, fie, fie!

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volscian, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name I think is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em: know you me yet?

Vols. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vols. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange li-surrections: the people against the senators patricians, and nobles.

Vols. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most war-like preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vols. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullius Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vols. A most royal one; the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together.

Scene IV.—Antium. Before Aufidius' House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City, 'Tis I that made thy widows; many an heir Of these fair edifices fore my wars Have I heard groan and drop: then, know me not,

Least that thy wives with spits and boys with stones In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, heeseech you?

Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir. Farewell.

[Exit Citizen.

O world! thy slippery turns. Friends now fast
sworn, 12

Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour, 16

On a dissension of a doit, break out
To hittest enmity: so, fellest foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance, 20
Some triek not worth an egg, shall grow dear
friends

And interjoin their issues. So with me:
My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon
This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me, 24
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. [Exit.

Scene V.—The Same. A Hall in Aufidius' House.

Music within. Enter a Servingman.

First Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.

Enter a Second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls for him. Cotus! [Exit.

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well;
but I 5
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the First Servingman.

First Serv. What would you have, friend?
Whence are you? Here's no place for you:
pray, go to the door. [Exit.

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertain-
ment,
In being Coriolanus. 11

Re-enter Second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

Sec. Serv. 'Away!' Get you away. 16

Cor. Now, thou art troublesome.

Sec. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a Third Servingman. Re-enter the First.

Third Serv. What fellow's this? 20

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow?
Pray you, avoid the house. 25

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you? 28

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you;
pray you, avoid: come. 34

Cor. Follow your function; go, and batten on cold hits. [Pushes him away.

Third Serv. What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

Sec. Serv. And I shall. [Exit.

Third Serv. Where dwell'st thou? 40

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. 'Under the canopy!'

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that? 44

Cor. 'I' the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. 'I' the city of kites and crows!'
What an ass 't is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too? 48

Cor. No; I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress. 53

Thou prat'st, and prat'st: serve with thy trrencher. Hence. [Beats him away.

Enter Aufidius and First Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

Sec. Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within. 57

Auf. Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man: what's thy
name?

Cor. [Unmuffling.] If, Tullius, 60
Not yett thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost
not

Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

[Servants retire.

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name? 65

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet? 69

Ans. I know thee not. Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volsees, 72 Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requir'd 76
But with that surname; a good memory,
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people, 80
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be

Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity 84
Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope.
Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had feared death, of all the men I the world
I would have 'volded thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers, 89

Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs and stop those malms 92

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee
straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it.
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee, for I will fight 96
Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more
fortunes

Thou art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am 100
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool.
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, 104
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Ans. O Marcius, Marcius!

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from
my heart 108

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, 'Tis true, I'd not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against 112
My grain'd ash a hundred times hath broke,
And scar'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest 116
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man 120

Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell
thee, 124

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or lose mine arm for't. Thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since 128
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
I'n buckling helms, fistng each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius, 132

I had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, 136
Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O! come; go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories, 140
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Ans. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down,
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness, thine own ways;

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote, 148
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in;
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy; 152
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand: most welcome!

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

First Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

Sec. Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of
him. 159

First Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

Sec. Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it. 165

First Serv. He had so; looking as it were,— would I were hanged but I thought there was more in him than I could think. 168

Sec. Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he is simply the rarest man I the world.

First Serv. I think he is; but a greater soldier than he you wot on. 172

Sec. Serv. Who? my master?

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

 him to be the greater soldier. 177
Sec. Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town our general is excellent. 180
First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter Third Servinman.

Third Serv. O slaves! I can tell you news:
 news, you rascals.
First Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.
Sec. Serv. )
Third Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief be a condemned man. 186
First Serv. )
Sec. Serv. ) Wherefore? wherefore?
Third Serv. Why here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Marcius.
First Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our
 general?' 191

Third Serv. I do not say, 'thwack our general;' but he was always good enough for him.
Sec. Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends:
 he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself. 196
First Serv. He was too hard for him,—directly to say the truth on't: before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.
Sec. Serv. An he had been cannibally given,
 he might have broiled and eaten him too. 201
First Serv. But, more of thy news.
Third Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and hut one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled. 216
Sec. Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man
 I can imagine.

Third Serv. Do't! he will do't; for—look you, sir—he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir—as it were—durst not—look you, sir—show themselves—as we term it—his friends, whilst he's in directitude.
First Serv. Directitude! what's that? 224
Sec. Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him. 228
First Serv. But when goes this forward?
Third Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently.
 You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon; 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips. 233

Sec. Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust
 Iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.
First Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spartely, waking, audible, and full of vent.
 Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; muffled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men. 242
Sec. Serv. 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.
First Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another. 247
Third Serv. Reason: because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volsclans.
 They are rising, they are rising. 251
All. In, in, in, in! [Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter SICINIUS and BAUCUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;
 His remedies are tame i' the present peace
 And quietness o' the people, which before Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his
 friends
 Blush that the world goes well, who rather had,
 Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold
 Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see
 Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going
 About their functions friendly. 9

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O! he is grown most kind
 Of late. Hall, sir!
Men. Hall to you both! 12
Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much mis'd
 But with his friends: the commonwealth doth
 stand,
 And so would do, were he more angry at it.
Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if
 He could have temporiz'd.
Sic. Where is he, hear you?
Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife
 Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both!
Sic. Good den, our neighbours. 20
Bru. Good den to you all, good den to you all.
First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children,
 on our knees,

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive!
Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours; we wish'd Coriolanus 24

Had lov'd you as we did.
Citizens. Now the gods keep you!

Sic. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt Citizens.
Bru.]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time
Than when these fellows ran about the streets
Crying confusion.

Bru. Calus Marcius was 29
A worthy officer in the war; but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,—

Self-loving,—
Sic. And affecting one sole throne, 32
Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and
Rome 36
Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Æd. Worthy citizens, 37
There is a slave, whom we have put in Reports, the Volscs with two several powers
Are enter'd in the Roman territories, 40
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world; 44
Which were insculpt'd when Marcius stood for Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you of Marcius?

Bru. To see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be 48
The Volscs dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can,
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow, 52
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me: 56
I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate-house; some news is come,
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave.— 60
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes; his raising;

Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful? 61

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths—
How probable I do not know—that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome
And vows revenge as spacious as between 64
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely
Bru. Rals'd only, that the weaker sort may wish

Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on 't.

Men. This is unlikely: 7
He and Aufidius can no more atone,
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Calus Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages 7
Upon our territories; and have already O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took What lay before them. 8

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O! you have made good work!
Men. What news? what news?
Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and

To melt the elty leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—

Men. What's the news? what's the news? 8
Com. Your temples burn'd in their cement
and

Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?— 8
You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—
Com. If

He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature, 9
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us 'rats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer hutterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work, 9
You, and your apron-men; you that stood so
much

Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules 100
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist 104
Are mock'd for vallant ignorance,
And perish constaut fools. Who is't can blame
him?
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.
Men. We are all undone unless 108
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they 112
Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they charg'd him even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand 116
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease.'—You have made fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought
A tremblug upon Rome, such as was never 120
So incapable of help.

Sic. }
Bru. } Say not we brought it.
Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but,
like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your elusters,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fear 124
They'll roar him in again. Titus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence, 128
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the elusters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at 132
Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip: as many ex-combs

As you three caps up will he tumble down, 136
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.
First Cit. For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity. 141
Sec. Cit. And so did I.

Third Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did we did for the best; and though we willingly consent to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You're goodly things, you voices!
Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol? 144

Com. O! ay; what else?
[Exeunt COMINIUS and MENEIUS.
Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dis-may'd:

These are a side that would be glad to have 152
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

First Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' the wrong when we banished him. 157

Sec. Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.
[Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.
Sic. Nor I. 160

Bru. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray let us go. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—A Camp at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?
Lieut. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but

Your soldiers use him as the grace fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end: 164
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now,
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He hears himself more prouddier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would 168
When first I did embrace him; yet his nature
In that's no chawngelling, and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lieut. Yet, I wish, sir,— 172
I mean for your partcular,—you had not Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely. 176

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou
sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows
not

What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent 180
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volsclan
state,

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone 24
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine,

When'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Ant. All places yield to him ere he sits down; And the nobility of Rome are his: 29
The senators and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty 32
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was
A noble servant to them, but he could not 36
Carry his honours even; whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fall in the disposing of those chances 40
Which he was lord of, or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace

Even with the same austerity and garb 44
As he controll'd the war; but one of these,
As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd; but he has a merit 48
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair 52
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths
do fall.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS,
and Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him; 4
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear? 8

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my
name,

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to; forbid all names; 12
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire

Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so: you have made good work
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap: a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon

When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a stato
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well.
Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For's private friends: his answer to me was, 2
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two! 2
I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grain:
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
Above the moon. We must be burnt for you. 3

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse you aid

In this so-never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good
tongue, 5

More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do? 4

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well; and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,

Unheard; what then? 44

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot

With his unkindness? say't be so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure

As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it: 48

I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip,

And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.

He was not taken well; he had not (dr'd):

The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then 52

We pout upon the morning, are unapt

To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd

These pipes and these conveyances of our blood

With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls 56

Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore, I'll watch him

Till he be dieted to my request,

And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kindness, 60

And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

of my success. Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.
Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise;' dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand; what he would do
He sent in writing after me; what he would
not,

Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain
Unless his noble mother and his wife,
Who, as I hear, mean to sollicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Volscian Camp before Rome.
The Guards at their stations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

First Guard. Stay! whence are you?
Sec. Guard. Stand! and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well; but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

First Guard. From whence?
Men. From Rome.

First Guard. You may not pass; you must return: our general

Will no more hear from thence.
Sec. Guard. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before

You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks
My name hath touch'd your ears: It is Menenius.

First Guard. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read

His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified;
For I have ever glorified my friends—
Of whom he's chief—with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise
Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therefore,
fellow,

I must have leave to pass.

First Guard. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithce, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factious on the party of your general.

Sec. Guard. Howsoever you have been his har—as you say you have—I am one that, telling true under hint, must say you cannot pass.
Therefore go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

First Guard. You are a Roman, are you?
Men. I am as thy general is.

First Guard. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be?
Can you think to blow out the fire that your city is ready to flame in with such a breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here,
he would use me with estimation.

Sec. Guard. Come, my captain knows you not.
Men. I mean, thy general.

First Guard. My general cares not for you.
Back, I say; go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood; back, that's the utmost of your having;
back.

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?
Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot offend me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not 'l the state of hanging,
or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoond for what's to come upon thee. [To CORIOLANUS.] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us: look thee, here's water to quench it.
I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs;
and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath dented

my access to thee. 85

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs 83

Are servanted to others: though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volsclan breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather 92
Than pity note how much. Therefore, be gone:
Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd
thee,

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, 96

[Gives a paper.]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius,
Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st!

Auf. You keep a constant temper. 100

Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

First Guard. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

Sec. Guard. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power. You know the way home again.

First Guard. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back? 105

Sec. Guard. What cause, do you think, I have to s wound?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another.
Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away!

[Exit.]

First Guard. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

Sec. Guard. The worthy fellow is our general:
he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow

Set down our host. My partner in this action,
You must report to the Volsclan lords, how plainly

I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends 4
You have respected; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper; no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, 8
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father;
Nay, godded me indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him; for whose old love I have, 12

Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only
That thought he could do more. A very little 16
I have yielded to; fresh embassies and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. [Shout within.] Ha! what shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow 20
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLU-MIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould

Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection! 24

All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.

What is that curtsy worth? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not 28

Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows,

As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod; and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which 32
Great nature cries, 'Deny not.' Let the Volsces Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand
As if a man were author of himself 36
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, 40
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,

Forgive my tyranny; but do not say
For that, 'Forgive our Romans.' O! a kiss 44

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!

Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip

Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world 47

Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, to the earth;
[Kneels.]

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O! stand up bless'd; 52
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee, and unproperly

Show duty, as mistaken all this while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]

Cor. What is this? 56
Your knees to me! to your corrected son!

Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun, 60
Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Pubbleola, 64
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle
That's curnea by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours, 68
[Pointing to the Child.

Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove 72

To shame invulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy! 76

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,

Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:

Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The things I have forsworn to grant may never be held by you denials. Do not bid me 81
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not 84
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O! no more, no more;
You have said you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask but that 88
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fall in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear
us.

Cor. Affidus, and you Volsees, mark; for
we'll 92
Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our ralliment

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself
How more unfortunate than all living women 97
Are we come hither: since that thy slight, which should

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and
sorrow; 100

Making the mother, wife, and child to see
The son, the husband, and the father tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we

Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us 104
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray, Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory, 108

Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose

The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had 112
Our wish, which side should win; for either
thou

Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin, 116
And bear the pain for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on Fortune till

These wars determine: if I cannot persuade
thee 120

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to treat—Trust to't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb, 124

That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name

Living to time.

Boy. A' shall not tread on me:
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be, 129
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus,
if it were so, that our request did tend 132
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volsees whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsees
May say, 'This mercy we have show'd;' the Romans, 137

'This we receiv'd;' and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, 'Be bless'd!
For making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son, 140

The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses; 144 Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man was noble,

But with his last attempt he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhorr'd.' Speak to me,
son! 148

Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;

To tear with thunder the wilde cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt 152
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not
speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak
you:

He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou,
boy: 156

Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world

More bound to's mother; yet here he lets me
prate

Like one o' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy
life 160

Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she—poor hen! fond of no second brood—
Has eluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,
And spurn me back; but if it be not so, 165
Thou art not honest and the gods will plague
thee,

That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs. He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
This is the last: so we will home to Rome, 172
And die among our neighbours. Nay, behold!
us.

This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength 176
Than thou hast to deny't. Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioll, and his child
Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch:
I am hush'd until our city be a-fire, 181
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. [Holding VOLUMNIA by the hand, silent.]
O, mother, mother!

What have you done? Behold! the heavens
do ope,

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother! mother! O! 185
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But, for your son, believe it, O! believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come. 189
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidus,

Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius? 193

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing to make

Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir, What peace you'll make, advise me: for my
part, 197

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!

Auf. [Aside.] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune.

[The ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS.]

Cor. Ay, by and by;

But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we, 204
On like conditions, would have counter-seal'd.

Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms, 208
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond colgn o' the Capitol, yond corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that? 3

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in't. Our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution. 9

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly. 16

Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading; he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly. 28

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him:
there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you. 33

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your
house:

and pray you,

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, 40
 And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
 The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
 They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?
 Sec. Mess. Good news, good news! the ladies have prevail'd, 44
 The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone.
 A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
 No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
 Art thou certain this is true? Is it most certain? 48

Sec. Mess. As certain as I know the sun is
 fire:

Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt
 of it?

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,

As the recomforted through the gates. Why,
 hark you! 52

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,
 Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
 Make the sun dance. Hark you! [A shout within.

Men. This is good news:
 I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia 56 is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
 A city full; of tribunes, such as you,

A sea and land full. You have pray'd well
 to-day:

This morning for ten thousand of your throats
 I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Music still and shouts.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,

Accept my thankfulness.

Sec. Mess. Sir, we have all
 Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city? 64

Sec. Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
 And help the joy. [Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the stage.

First Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, 68
 And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius;
 Repeat him with the welcome of his mother;
 Cry, 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All. Welcome, ladies, 72
 Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Corioli. A Public Place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here:
 Deliver them this paper: having read it,
 Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
 Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, 4
 Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
 The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
 To purge himself with words: dispatch. 8

[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of AUFIDIUS' faction.

Most welcome!

First Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so

As with a man by his own alms empolson'd,
 And with his charity slain.

Sec. Con. Most noble sir, 12
 If you do hold the same intent wherein
 You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
 Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:
 We must proceed as we do find the people. 16

Third Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either

Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it;
 And my pretext to strike at him admits 20
 A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd,

He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
 Seducing so my friends; and, to this end, 24
 He bow'd his nature, never known before
 But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

Third Con. Sir, his stoutness
 When he did stand for consul, which he lost 28
 By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of:
 Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
 Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
 Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way
 In all his own desires; nay, let him choose 33
 Out of my fles, his projects to accomplish,
 My best and freshest men; serv'd his design-ments

In mine own person; help to reap the fame 36
 Which he did end all his; and took some pride
 To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
 I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
 He wag'd me with his countenance, as if 40
 I had been mercenary.

First Con. So he did, my lord:
 The army marvel'd at it; and, in the last,
 When we had carried Rome, and that we look'd

For no less spoil than glory,—
Auf. There was it; 44
 For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
 him.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
 As cheap as flies, he sold the blood and labour
 Of our great action: therefore shall he die, 48
 And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.]

First Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,

And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
 Splitting the air with noise.

Sec. Con. And patient fools, 52
 Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
 tear

With giving him glory.
Third Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
 Ere he express himself, or move the people
 With what he would say, let him feel your sword, 56

Which we will second. When he lies along,
 After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
 His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more: 60
 Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
 But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
 What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

First Lord. And grieve to hear't.
 What faults he made before the last, I think 64
 Might have found easy fines; but there to end
 Where he was to begin, and give away
 The benefit of our levies, answering us
 With our own charge, making a treaty where 68
 There was a yielding, this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter CORIOLANUS, with drums and colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
 No more infected with my country's love 72
 Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
 Under your great command. You are to know,
 That prosperously I have attempted and
 With bloody passage led your wars even to 76
 The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home

Do more than counterpoise a full third part
 The charges of the action. We have made
 peace

With no less honour to the Antlates 80
 Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,

Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
 Together with the seal o' the senate, what

We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords; 8
 But tell the traitor in the highest degree
 He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcus 8
Cor. Marcus

Auf. Ay, Marcus, Caius Marcus. Dost thou
 think 8

I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'
 name

Coriolanus in Corioil?

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
 He has betray'd your business, and given up, 9

For certain drops of salt, your elty Rome,
 I say 'your city,' to his wife and motner;

Breaking his oath and resolution like
 A twist of rotten silk, never admitting 9

Counsel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears
 He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,

That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
 Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars? 100
Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.

Cor. No more. 100
Auf. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my
 heart

Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!
 Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever 103

I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave
 lords,

Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion—
 Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him, 108

that
 Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join
 To thrust the lie unto him.

First Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volscies; men and lads, 112

Stain all your edges on me. Boy! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
 That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I

Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioil: 116
 Alone I did it. Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
 Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,

Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
 'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators. Let him die for't. 120

All the People. Tear him to pieces.—Do it presently.—He killed my son.—My daughter.—

He killed my cousin Marcus.—He killed my
 father. 124

Sec. Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace!
 The man is noble and his fame folds in

This orb o' the earth His last offences to us
 Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Auditors,

And trouble not the peace.
Cor. That I had him, 129

With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

[*ARRIDIUS and the Conspirators draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls: AU-
RIDIVS stands on his body.*]

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold! 132

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

First Lord. O Tullus! 136

Sec. Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

Third Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all, be quiet.

Put up your swords. 136

Auf. My lords, when you shall know,—as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot,—the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours

To call me to your senate, I'll deliver 141
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heavest censure.

First Lord. Bear from hence his body;
And mourn you for him! Let him be regarded As the most noble corpse that ever herald 145
Did follow to his urn.

Sec. Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone, 148
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up:

Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully;
Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, 153
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.
Assist.

[*Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLANUS.
A dead march sounded.*]

Act I.

Scene I.—Rome.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing. The Tribunes and Senators aloft; and then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patrielans, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords: 4
I am his first-born son that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity. 8

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol, 12
And suffer not dishonour to approach

The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine, 16
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by
friends

Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we
stand 20

A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Plus,

For many good and great deserts to Rome: 24

A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:

He by the senate is elected home

From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;

That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, 28

Hath yok'd a nation, strong, train'd up in arms.

Ten years are spent since first he undertook

This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms 32

Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;

And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, 36
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.

Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed, 40
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should, 44
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity, 48
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament, 52
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in
my right, 56
I thank you all and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
As I am confident and klud to thee.
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.
[Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.]

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way! the good Andronicus, 64
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword, 68
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Drums and trumpets sounded, and then enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS; after them two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS. After them TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and people following. The bearers set down the coffin, and TITUS speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

Lo! as the bark, that hath discharg'd her freight,
Returns with precious lading to the bay 72
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome. 76

Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home-
With burial among their ancestors: 84
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword.

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx? 88
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys, 92
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, 96

That wo may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror, 104

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son;
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,

O! think my son to be as dear to me. 108

Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;

But must my sons be slaughtered in the streets
For vallant delings in their country's cause? 112
O! if to fight for king and commonweal
Were pety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood: 116
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?

Draw near them then in being merciful;
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:

Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son. 120

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.

These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld

Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice: 124

To this your son is mark'd, and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are
gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood, 128
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious plety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive 133

To tremble under Titus' threatening look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal

The self-same gods, that arm'd the Queen of

Troy 136

With opportunity of sharp revenge

Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,

May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths—

When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was

queen— 140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, 144

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,

And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus 148

Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in
rest,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! 152

Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,

Here grow no damned grudges, here are no storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! 156

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus
long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!

Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render for my brethren's obsequies; 160

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy

Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.

O! bless me here with thy victorious hand,

Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly re-serv'd

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart! 165

Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise! 168

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes; re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others.

Mar. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved

brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother
MARCUS.

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful
wars,

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your sword

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,

And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 1

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,

This pallament of white and spotless hue;

And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons: 1

Be candidatus then, and put it on,

And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits

Than his that shakes for age and feebleness. 12

What should I don this robe, and trouble you?

Be chosen with proclamations to-day,

To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,

And set abroad new business for you all? 15

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,

And led my country's strength successfully,

And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,

Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms, 15

In right and service of their noble country.

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world:

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 20

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the emperey.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them
not 20

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.

Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good 20

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to
thee 20

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, 21

But honour thee, and will do till I die:

My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,

I will most thankful be: and thanks to men

Of noble minds is honourable need. 216

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages:

Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus, 220

And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
 The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,
 That you create your emperor's eldest son, 224
 Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
 Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
 And ripen justice in this commonweal:
 Then, if you will elect by my advice, 228
 Crown him, and say, 'Long live our emperor!'
Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,
 Patrietians and plebeians, we create
 Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor, 232
 And say, 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'
 [A long flourish.
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
 To us in our election this day,
 I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, 236
 And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
 And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
 Thy name and honourable family,
 Lavinia will I make my empress, 240
 Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
 And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.
 Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
 thee?
Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match 244
 I hold me highly honour'd of your Grace:
 And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
 King and commander of our commonweal,
 The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate 248
 My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
 Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord:
 Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
 Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet. 252
Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
 How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
 Rome shall record, and, when I do forget
 The least of these unspeakable deserts, 256
 Romans, forget your fealty to me.
Tit. [To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
 To him that, for your honour and your state,
 Will use you nobly and your followers. 260
Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
 That I would choose, were I to choose anew.
 Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
 Though chance of war hath wrought this change
 of cheer, 264
 Thou canst not to be made a scorn in Rome;
 Princely shall be thy usage every way.
 Rest on my word, and let not discontent
 Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
 Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
 Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?
Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
 Warrants these words in princely courtesy. 272
Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us
 go;
 Reasonless here we set our prisoners free:

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum. [Flourish. SATURNINUS courts
 TAMORA in dumb show.
Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing LAVINIA.
Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my
 lord? 277
Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal
 To do myself this reason and this right.
Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice: 280
 This prince in justice seizeth but his own.
Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius
 live.
Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?
 Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surpris'd. 284
Sat. Surpris'd! By whom?
Bas. By him that justly may Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.
 [Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS with LAVINIA.
Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence
 away,
 And with my sword I'll keep this door safe. 288
 [Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.
Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her
 back.
Mut. My lord, you pass not here.
Tit. What! villain boy;
 Barr'st me my way in Rome? [Stabs MUTIUS.
Mut. Help, Lucius, help! [Dies.
 Re-enter LUCIUS.
Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so, 292
 In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.
Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;
 My sons would never so dishonour me.
 Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor. 296
Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife
 That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.
Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
 Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
 I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;
 Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
 Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
 Was none in Rome to make a stale 304
 But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, Agreed these deeds with that proud brag of
 thine,
 That saidst I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reprobulous words
 are these! 308
Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece
 To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.
 A vallant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;
 One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons, 312
 To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.
Tit. These words are razors to my wounded
 heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,
That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs,
Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome, 317
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee Empress of Rome. 320
Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
Sixth priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and every thing 324
In readiness for Hymenæus stand,
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome.
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me. 326
Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth. 332

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany
Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered: 336
There shall we consummate our spousal rights.

[Exeunt all but Titus.]

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs? 340

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Mar. O, Titus, see, O! see what thou hast done;
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed 344
That hath dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;
Give Mutlus burial with our brethren. 348

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors 352
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can; he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you.
My nephew Mutlus' deeds do plead for him; 356
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. } Aud shall, or him we will accompany.
Mart. }

Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake that word?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. 360

Tit. What! would you bury him in my despite?

Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee

To pardon Mutlus, as 't to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, 364

And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded:

My foes I do repute you every one;
So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself; let us with draw. 368

Quin. Not I, till Mutlus' bones be buried.
[MARCUS and the sons of TITUS kneel.]

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed. 372

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul.—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all.—

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, 376

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son 380

Did graciously plead for his funerals.
Let not young Mutlus then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.

The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw, 384
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.
[MUTIUS is put into the tomb.]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutlus, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb. 388

All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble Mutlus;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.
Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths 392
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is,
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.

Is she not, then, beholding to the man 396
That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Mar. Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, on one side, SATURNINUS attended; TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and

AARON: on the other side, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, and others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride. 400

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape. 404
Bas. Rape call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Meanwhile, I am possess'd of that is mine. 408
Sat. 'Tis good, sir; you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.
Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must and shall do with my life. 412
Only thus much I give your Grace to know:
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave; 420
Receive him then to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.
Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds: 424
'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me.
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!
Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora 428
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then be we speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.
Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge? 433
Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome
forfend
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake 436
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose, 440
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.
[Aside to SATURNINUS.] My lord, be rul'd by me,
be won at last;
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne; 444
Lest then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for Ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin, 448
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons, 452
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.
[Aloud.] Come, come, sweet emperor; come,
Andronicus; 456

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.
Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd.
Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good. 464
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd 468
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia,
By my advice, all humbled on your knees, 472
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.
Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to his highness,
That what we did was mildly, as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour and our own. 476
Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.
Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.
Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace; 480
I will not be denied: sweet heart, look back.
Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults: 484
Stand up.
Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest. 488
Come; if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.
Tit. To-morrow, as it please your majesty 492
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace
bon jour.
Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.
[Trumpets. Etcant.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympos' top,
Safe out of Fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash,
Advancing above pale envy's threat'ning reach. 4
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills; 8
So Tamora,

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait
 And virtue stoops and troubles at her brow.
 Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
 To mount aloft with thy Imperial mistress,
 And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph
 long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
 And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
 Than is Promethens tied to Caucasus.
 Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
 I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
 To wait upon this new-made empress,
 To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
 This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
 This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturninus,
 And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's
 Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,
 And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all
 And so in this, to bear me down with braves.

'Tis not the difference of a year or two
 Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
 I am as able and as fit as thou

To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
 And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
 And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, un-advis'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
 Are you so desperate grown, to threat your
 friends?

Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath
 Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I
 have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw.]

Aar. Why, how now, lords! 45
 So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
 And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge: 48
 I would not for a million of gold
 The cause were known to them it most concerns;

Nor would your noble mother for much more
 Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome. 52

For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
 My rapier in his bosom, and withal

Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here. 56

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd, Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
 tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!

Aar. Away, I say!

Now, by the gods that war like Goths adore,
 This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
 It is to jet upon a prince's right?

What 'tis Lavinia then become so loose,
 Or Bassianus so degenerate,

That for her love such quarrels may be breach'd
 Without controlment, justice, or revenge?

Young lords, beware! an should the empress-
 know

This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I knew she and all the world:
 I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Lavinia. Younglings, learn thou to make some wiser choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not in Rome

How furious and impatient they be,
 And cannot brook competitors in love?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
 By this device.

Chi. I care not, a thousand deaths
 Would I propose to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
 She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
 She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

What, man! more water glideth by the mill
 Than wots the miller of, and easy it is

Of a stout loaf to steal a slice, we know
 Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, 68

Better than he have worn Vulcan's forge.

Aar. [Aside.] And as good as Saturninus
 may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality? 72
 What! hast thou not been often struck a dore
 And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snat-or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd, 76
Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit

Aar. Would you had hit it too!
 Then should not we be tir'd with this art.

Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
 To square for this? Would it offend you then, too
 That both should speak?

Chi. I care not, I care not, I care not.

Dem. Nor me, so I were of Aar. For shame, be friends, and judge the you jar:

'Tis policy and stratagem in
 That you affect; and so must I reserve,
 That what you cannot as yet achieve by his

You must perforce accomplish what you may.
 Take this of me, Lucrece was more chaste
 Than this Lavinia. Bassianus live,
 A better course than linger in languishment.
 Must we pursue, and I have found the path?
 My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand,
 There will the lovely Roman ladies troop
 The forest walks are wide and spacious,
 And many unfrequented plots there are Fit for the kind for rape and villany:
 Sooner will I rather than this duty doe,
 And rather home than here, not by word,
 Than by deed, for not at all, and you know
 Come, come, our empress with her ladies
 To villany and vengeance serve.
 Will we acquaint with all that we shall see;
 And she shall fill our engines with arrows,
 That will not suffer you to spare yourselves,
 But to your wishes height advance you both.
 The emperor's court is like the house of Fame,
 The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears,
 The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf as death,
 There speak, and strike, but none will take
 Your turns;
 There serve your lusts, glow with women's
 eye,
 And revel in Lavinia's story.
 O! Thy counsel, lady, kills me.
 Dem. Sit fast, but nefas, till I find the way
 To cool his heat, to harm to none these days,
 Per Staga, per me, chor. [Exeunt.]

Scene II. The Forest.

Hunters cry, hounds bark, Enter
 ANTONIUS, A HUNTER, and M
 LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.
 Titus. The hunt is up, the morn is
 The woods are fragrant and the woods
 Let us go, a bay
 and his lovely ride,
 and ring the hunter's bell,
 on the echo of the noise,
 As we are, our's ours,
 They sleep carefully:
 They sleep, they sleep, this night,
 They sleep, they sleep, that hath inspir'd and as winded
 in a part
 Enter SATURUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS,
 DEMETRIUS, CHRISON, and ATTENDANTS.
 My good morrows to your majesty,
 Tamara, to you as many and as good;
 I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.
 Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord;
 Some that were newly for new-married ladies.
 Bass. How say you?
 I say, no;
 I am broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,
 My lords, your sport.—[To TAMORA.] Madam, how do you like the hunting?
 Tam. I have dogs, my lord,
 to chase the proudest panther in the chase,
 And climb the highest promontory top.
 Sat. And I have horse will follow where the gazelle
 I have will run like swallows o'er the plain.
 Dem. [To CHRISON.] Hunt not, we, with
 But I will speak a word to you to ground.
 [Exeunt.]

Sat. Part of the Forest.
 Aaron. A bay, gold.
 I should think that I had bury the gold, for a time never to see it.
 on the banks of me so abject that gold must coin a stratagem, which, cunningly effected, will beget
 very excellent piece of villany:
 and so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest that have their aims out of the empress' chest.
 [Hides the gold.]

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,
 When every thing doth make a glee-ful boast?
 The birds chant melody on every bush,
 The lake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
 The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
 And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.
 And their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit
 And whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
 Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
 As if a double hunt were heard at once,
 Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise;
 And after conflict, such as was suppos'd
 The wandering prince and I to once enjoy'd,
 When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
 And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
 We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
 Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
 Whilst hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
 Be unto us as is a nurse's song
 Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.
 Aaron. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
 Saturn is dominator over mine:
 What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
 My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
 My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls

Even as an adder when she doth murell
To do some fatal execution? 36
No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in
thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
Hills Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity, 44
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more; we are espied; 48
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah! my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life.

Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus
comes: 52

Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoever they be. [Exit.]

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop? 56
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had, 61
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art! 65

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horn-lug;

And to be doubted that your Moor and you 68
Are singled forth to try experiments,
Jove shielded your husband from his hounds
to-day!

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Chlumerian 72

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goolly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, 77
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport, 80
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For rashness. I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well. 84

Bas. The king my brother shall have note of
this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted
long:

Good king, to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all
this? 88

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have'tle'd me hither to this place: 92

A barren detested vale, you see, it is;

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,

Overcome with moss and baleful mistletoe:

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven: 97

And when they showed me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body hearing it

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale, 105

But straight they told me they would blind me
here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death: 108

And then they called me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect;

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come, 112

This vengeance on me had they executed.

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son. 116

[Stabs BASSIANUS.]

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show
my strength.

[Also stabs BASSIANUS, who dies.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, may, barbarous
Tamora;

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys, 120

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her:

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.

This minion stood upon her chastity, 124

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,

And with that painted hope she braves your mightiness:

And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole, 129

And make his dead trunk pillow to our list.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting. 132
Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lar. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,— 136

Tam. I will not hear her speak: away with her!

Lar. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory

To see her tears; but be your heart to them 140
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lar. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble; 144

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:

[To Cimros.] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard? 148

Lar. 'Tis true! the raven doth not hatch a lark;

Yet have I heard, O! could I find it now,
The lion moved with pity did endure

To have his princely paws par'd all away. 152
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,

The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,

Nothing so kind, but something pitiful. 156
Tam. I know not what it means; away with her!

Lar. O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,

That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. 160
Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain

To save your brother from the sacrifice; 164
But fierce Andronicus would not relent:

Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will:

The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.
Lar. O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen, 168
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;

For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go. 172

Lar. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,

And tumble me into some loathsome pit, 176
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. 180
Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lar. No grace! no womanhood! Ah, beastly creature,

The blot and enemy to our general name.
Confusion fall— 184

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband:

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.
[DEMETRIUS throws the body of BASSIANUS into the pit; then exeunt DEMETRIUS and CIMROS, dragging off LAVINIA.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed 188
Till all the Andronel be made away.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower. 192

[Exit.

Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.
Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before: 192

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whatever it be.

Mart. And mine, I promise you: were't not for shame, 196

Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.
[Falls into the pit.

Quin. What! art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rinde-growing brlers,

Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother! with the dismall'st object hurt 204

That ever eye with slight made heart lament.
Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,

That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother. 208

[Exit.
Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out 209

From this unhallow'd and blood-stain'd hole?

Quin. I am surpris'd with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o'erruns my trembling joints:

My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death. 216

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.

O! tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what. 220

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb.

In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit. 224

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument, 223
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:

So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother! help me with thy fainting hand, 233
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As hateful as 'Ceytus' misty month. 236

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave, 240
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose
again.

Till thou art here aloft, or I below, 244
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee.

[Falls in.

Re-enter AARON with SATURNINUS.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is
here,

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend 243

Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead. 252

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;

'Tis not an hour since I left him there. 256

Mart. We know not where you left him all alive;

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief. 25

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murder'd.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ (Giving a letter.

The complot of this timeless tragedy; 265
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. And if we miss to meet him hand-somerly, 263

*Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:*

Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

*Among the nettles at the elder-tree 272
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit*

*Where we decreed to bury Bassianus:
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.*

O Tamora! was ever heard the like? 275

This is the pit, and this the elder-tree,
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out

That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. 280

Sat. [To TITUS.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs
of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:

There let them bide until we have devis'd 284
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What! are they in this pit? O wonderdrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee 283
I beg this boon with tears not lightly shed;

That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accurs'd, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent. 292

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;

For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow 295
They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou
follow me.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers: 300

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than
death,

That end upon them should be executed.
Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:

Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough. 305
Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exit severally

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravish'd; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak, Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so; An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this? my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; where is your husband? If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down, That I may slumber in eternal sleep!

Speak, gentle ulece, what stern ungentle hands Have lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?

Alas! a crimson river of warm blood, Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind, Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,

Coming and going with thy honey breath. But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,

And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame; And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,

As from a conduit with three leaping spouts, Yet do thy cheeks look red as roses' face

Blushing to be encounter'd with the cloud. Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?

O! that I knew thy heart; I knew the beast, That I might rail at him to ease my mind.

Sorrow concealed, like to an oven stopp'd, Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue, And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;

A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal. And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,

That could have better sew'd than Philomel. O! had the monster seen those illy hands

Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute, And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,

He would not, then, have touch'd them for his life;

Or had he heard the heavenly harmony Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep, As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.

Come, let us go, and make thy father blind; For such a sight will blind a father's eye:

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads; What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee: O! could our mourning ease thy misery.

[Exeunt.

Act III.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution; TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;

For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed; For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;

And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons, Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.

For two and twenty sons I never wept, Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write [He throws himself on the ground.

My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite; My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c., with the Prisoners.

O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain, That shall distill from these two aneulet urns,

Than youthful April shall with all his showers; In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;

In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow, And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,

So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn. O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!

Unbhid my sons, reverse the doom of death 24
 And let me say, that never swept before,
 My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, yet lament in vain:
 The tribunes hear you not, no man is by; 28
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah! Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.
 Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—
Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you
 speak. 32

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: If they did
 hear,
 They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
 They would not pity me, yet plead I must,
 All bootless unto them. 36
 Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
 Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
 Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. 40
 When I do weep, they humbly sit my feet
 Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
 And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
 Rome could afford no tribune like to these. 44
 A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;
 A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
 And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon
 drawn? 48

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their
 death;
 For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
 My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended
 thee. 52

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
 That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
 Thiers must prey; and Rome affords no prey
 But me and mine: how happy art thou then, 56
 From these devourers to be banished!
 But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;
 Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break: 60
 I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is. 64

Luc. Ay me! this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon
 her.
 Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
 Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
 What fool hath added water to the sea, 68
 Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
 My grief was at the height before thou came'st;
 And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. 72

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
 For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
 And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
 In bootless prayer have they been held up, 76
 And they have serv'd me to effectless use:
 Now all the service I require of them
 Is that the one will help to cut the other.
 'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands, 80
 For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
 thee?

Mar. O! that delightful engine of her thoughts,
 That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, 84
 Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
 Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
 Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear.

Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done
 this deed? 88

Mar. O! thus I found her straying in the park,
 seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
 That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my dear; and he that wounded
 her 92
 Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me
 dead!

For now I stand as one upon a rock
 Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
 Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
 Expecting ever when some envious surge 97
 Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
 This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
 Here stands my other son, a banished man, 100
 And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
 But that which gives my soul the greatest
 spirit,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
 Had I but seen thy picture in this plight 104
 It would have maid me: what shall I do
 Now I behold thy lively body so?
 Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
 Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
 Thy husband he is dead, and for his death 109
 Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
 Look! Marcus; ah! son Lucius, look on her:
 When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
 Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew 113
 Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;
 Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful, 117
 Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.
 No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
 Witness the sorrow that their sister makes. 120
 Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
 Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.
 Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain.

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks 124

How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry,

With miry slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long 128

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows 132

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?

What shall we do? let us, that have our

tongues,

Plot some device of further misery,

To make us wonder'd at in time to come. 136

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah! Marcus, Marcus, brother; well I

wot 140

The napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,

For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah! my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her

signs: 144

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say

That to her brother which I said to thee:

His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,

Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks. 148

O! what a sympathy of woe is this;

As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor

Sends thee this word: that, if thou love thy

sons, 152

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,

Or any one of you, chop off your hand,

And send it to the king: he for the same

Will send thee hither both thy sons alive; 156

And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!

Did ever raven sing so like a lark,

That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? 160

With all my heart, I'll send the emperor my

hand:

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble haud of

thine, 164

That hath thrown down so many enemies,

Shall not be sent; my hand will serve the turn:

My youth can better spare my blood than you;

And therefore mine shall save my brothers'

lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended

Rome, 168

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,

Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?

O! none of both but are of high desert:

My hand hath been but idle; let it serve 172

To ransom my two nephews from their death;

Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,

For fear they die before their pardon come. 176

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!

Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy

son, 180

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And for our father's sake, and mother's care,

Now let us show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my

hand. 184

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them

both:

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, 188

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:

But I'll deceive you in another sort,

And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[Cuts off TITUS' hand.]

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be in

dispatch'd? 192

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:

Tell him it was a hand that ward'd him

From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;

More hath it merited; that let it have. 196

As for my sons, say I account of them

As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;

And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand,

Look by and by to have thy sons with thee. 200

[Aside.] Their heads, I mean. O! how this villany

Doth fit me with the very thoughts of it.

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,

Aaron will have his soul black like his face. 205

[Exit.]

Tit. O! here I lift this one haud up to heaven.

And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:

If any power pities wretched tears, 208

To that I call! [To LAVINIA.] What! wilt thou kneel with me?

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our

prayers,

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom? 216

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes. 220
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth overflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? 224

I am the sea; hark! how her sighs do blow;
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth;

Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; 229

For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.

Then give me leave, for losers will have leave 232
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid

For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons, 236

And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
back:

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd;
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily, 241
And be my heart an ever burning hell!

These miseries are more than may be borne,
To weep with them that weep doth ease some
deal, 244

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah! that this slight should make so deep a wound,

And yet detested life not shrink thereat,
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe.

[LAVINIA kisses TITUS.

Mar. Alas! poor heart; that kiss is comfort-less

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end? 252

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andro-nicus;

Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons'
heads,

Thy war-like hand, thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear slight 256

Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.
Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs.
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand 260
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal
sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! 264

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,

And would usurp upon my watery eyes, 268
And make them blind with tributary tears:

Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss 272

Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed
them.

Come, let me see what task I have to do.
You heavy people, circle me about, 276

That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs

The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear. 280

Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in these things:
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay: 284

Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And if you love me, as I think you do,

Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome: 288

Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister; 292
O! would thou wert as thou tofore hast been;

But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs, 296
And make proud Saturnine and his empress

Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. 300

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in TITUS' House. A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit; and look you eat no

As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.

Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our ten-fold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; 8
And when my heart, all mad with ulsery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
[To LAVINIA.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs! 12
When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth, 16
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run lute that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 20
Mar. Fle, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.
Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I. 24
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of bands;
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable? 28
O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.
Fie, fie! how frantly I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands, 32
If Marcus did not name the word of hands.
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs: 36
She says she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks.
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to
heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet, 44
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.
Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep lamentations:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.
Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness. 48
Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears.
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.
[MARCUS strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?
Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a
fly. 52
Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent, 56
Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.
Mar. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.
Tit. But how if that fly had a father and a
mother? 60
How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And buzz lamenting dolings in the air!
Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody, 64
Came here to make us merry! and thou hast kill'd him.
Mar. Pardon me, sir; it was a black illfavour'd fly,
Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd
him.
Tit. O, O, O! 68
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him:
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor 72
Come hither purposely to poison me.
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.
Ah! sirrah.
Yet I think we are not brought so low, 76
But that between us we can kill a fly
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.
Mar. Alas! poor man; grief has so wrought
on him,
He takes false shadows for true substances. 80
Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.
Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begins to dazzle.
[Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Rome. Titus' Garden.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.
Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why:
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes:
Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean. 4
Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.
Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee
harm.
Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did!
Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs? 8
Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.
See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee;
Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

- An! boy; Cornelia never with more care 12
Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee
Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.
- Mar.* Canst thou not guess wherefore she piles thee thus?
- Boy.* My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her; 17
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 20
Ran mad through sorrow; that made me to fear,
Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt
Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth; 24
Which made me down to throw my books and
fly,
Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt;
And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship. 28
- Mar.* Lucius, I will.
- [LAVINIA turns over the books which Lucius had let fall.]
- Tit.* How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means
this?
- Some book there is that she desires to see,
Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy. 32
But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed. 36
Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?
- Mar.* I think she means that there was more than one
Confederate in the fact: ay, more there was;
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.
- Tit.* Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?
- Boy.* Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;
My mother gave it me.
- Mar.* For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps, she eull'd it from among the rest. 44
- Tit.* Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves!
- [Helping her.
What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape; 48
And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.
- Mar.* See, brother, see! note how she quotes
the leaves.
- Tit.* Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,
Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was, 52
For'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?
See, see!
Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,—
O! had we never, never hunted there,— 56
Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes.
- Mar.* O! why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the gods delight in tragedies? 60
- Tit.* Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none
but friends,
- What Roman lord it was durst do the deed;
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece's bed? 64
- Mar.* Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down
by me.
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!
My lord, look here; look here, Lavinia: 68
This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
This after me.
[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with his feet and mouth.
I have writ my name
Without the help of any hand at all.
Curs'd be that heart that fore'd us to this shift!
Write thou, good niece, and here display at last
What God will have discover'd for revenge.
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors and the truth!]
[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.
Tit. O! do you read, my lord, what she hath writ?
Stupruum, Chiron, Demetrius.
Mar. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora Performers of this helinous, bloody deed? 80
- Tit.* Magni dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?
Mar. O! calm thee, gentle lord; although I
know
There is enough written upon this earth 84
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts
And arm the minds of infants to exclama.
My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;
And swear with me, as, with the woeful fere 89
And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus swear for Lucrece' rape,
That we will prosecute by good advice 92
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.
- Tit.* 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how;
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:
The dam will wake, an if she wind you once: 97
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And hurls him whilst slayeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list. 100
You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words.
And lay it by: the angry northern wind 104
Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad,
And where's your lesson then? Boy, what say
you?
- Boy.* I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome. 109
- Mar.* Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full
oft
For his ungrateful country done the like.
Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live. 112

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury:
 Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal my boy
 Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
 Presents that I intend to send them both: 116
 Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou
 not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another
 course.
 Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my horse; 120
 Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:
 Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.

[Exeunt TITUS, LAVINIA, and Boy.]

Mar. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
 And not relent or not compassion him? 124
 Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,
 That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
 Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;
 But yet so just that he will not revenge. 128
 Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter, from one side, AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON; from the other young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Luelus;
 He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I
 may, 4
 I greet your honours from Andronicus;

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Luelus: what's the
 news?

Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decepher'd, that's the news, 8
 For villains mark'd with rape. [Aloud.] May it
 please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
 The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
 To gratify your honourable youth, 12
 The hope of Rome, for so he bade me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present
 Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
 You may be armed and appolinted well. 16
 And so I leave you both: [Aside.] like bloody villains. [Exeunt Boy and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:—
 [Reads.] 'Integer vitæ, seelerisque purus, 20
 Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.

Chi. O! 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it
 well:

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay just, a verse in Horace; right, you have it. 24

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
 Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick;
 But were our witty empress well affront, 28
 She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:

But let her rest in her unrest awhile.
 [To them.] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star 32

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
 Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good before the palace gate
 To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing: 36

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a
 lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.
Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
 Did you not use his daughter very friendly? 40

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.
Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say
 amen. 44

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand
 more.

Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods
 For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over. [Trumpets sound.]

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
 thus? 49

Chi. Belke, for joy the emperor hath a son.
Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child.
Nur. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, did you see 52

Aaron the Moor?
Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
 Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron! we are all undone. 56
 Now help, or we betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?
Nur. O! that which I would hide from heaven's eye, 60

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace!
 She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?
Nur. I mean, she's brought a-bed.

Aar. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her? 64

Nur. A devil.
Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam: a Joyful issue.

- Nur.* A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful Issue.
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad 68
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.
Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! Is black so base a hue? 72
Sweet blowse, you are a besauteous blossom, sure.
Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?
Aar. That which thou canst not undo.
Chi. Thou hast undone our mother. 76
Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.
Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed
choice!
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend! 80
Chi. It shall not live.
Aar. It shall not die.
Nur. Aaron, it must, the mother wills it so.
Aar. What! must it, nurse? thou let no man
but I 84
Do execution on my flesh and blood.
Dem. I'll bronch the tadpole on my rapier's point:
Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch
it.
Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up. 88
Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draves.
Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your
brother?
Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point 92
That touches this my first-born son and heir.
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 96
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lin'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!
Coal-black is better than another hue; 100
In that it scorns to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood. 104
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.
Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress
thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself;
The vigour, and the picture of my youth: 109
This before all the world do I prefer;
This manure all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome. 112
Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed.
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.
- Nur.* The emperor in his rage will doom her
death.
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. 114
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.
Fie, traitorous hue! that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart:
Here's a young lad frau'd of another leer: 122
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father
As who should say, 'Old lad, I am thine own.'
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self blood that first gave life to you; 124
And from that womb where you imprison'd were
He is enfranchis'd and come to light:
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face. 128
Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe. 132
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult,
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety.
[They sit.]
Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join to league, 137
I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain Houess,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms. 141
But say, again, how many saw the child?
Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else but the delliver'd empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the thir'd's away.
Go to the empress; tell her this I said:
[Stabbing her.]
'Weke, weke!'
So cries a pig prepar'd to the spit. 143
Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours.
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no.
And now be it known to you my full intent. 153
Not far, one Mull lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed.
His child is like to her, fair as you are: 156
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
And be receiv'd for the emperor's heir, 159
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; you see, I have given her physic,
[Pointing to the Nurse.]
And ye must needs bestow her funeral; 165
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooma.

 But send the midwife presently to me. 168
 The midwife and the nurse well made away,
 Then let the ladies tattle what they please.
Chil. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
 With secrets.
Dem. For this care of Tamora, 172
 Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
 [Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON,
 bearing off the Nurse's body.
Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;
 There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
 And secretly to greet the empress' friends. 176
 Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you
 hence;
 For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
 I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
 And feed on curls and whey, and suck the goat,
 And cabin in a cave, and bring you up 181
 To be a warrior, and command a camp.
 [Exit with the Child.

Scene III.—The Same. A Public Place.

*Enter TITUS, bearing arrows, with letters on the ends of them; with him MARCUS, young LU-CIUS, PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, CAIUS, and other
 Gentlemen, with bows.*
Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.
Sir boy, now let me see your archery:
 Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there
 straight.
T was Astraea reliquit: 4
 Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
 Happily you may find her in the sea; 8
 Yet there's as little justice as at land.
 No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
 'Tis you must dig with wattock and with spade,
 And pierce the inmost centre of the earth: 12
 Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
 I pray you, deliver him this petition;
 Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,
 And that it comes from old Andronicus, 16
 Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
 Ah! Rome. Well, well; I made thee miserable
 What time I threw the people's suffrages
 On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. 20
 Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
 And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd:
 This wicked emperor may have ship'd her
 hence;
 And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.
Mar. O Publius! Is not this a heavy case, 25
 To see thy noble uncle thus distract?
Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns

By day and night to attend him carefully, 23
 And feed his humour kindly as we may,
 Till time beget some careful remedy.
Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
 Join with the Goths, and with revengeful war 32
 Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
 And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.
Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters!
 What! have you met with her? 36
Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
 word,
 If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:
 Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
 He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere
 else, 40
 So that perforce you must needs stay a time.
Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.
 I'll dive into the burning lake below,
 And pull her out of Acheron by the heels. 44
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;
 No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
 But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
 Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs
 can bear: 48
 And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
 We will solicit heaven and move the gods
 To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.
 Come, to this gear. You are a good archer,
Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.
Ad Joven, that's for you; here, ad Apollinem:
Ad Martem, that's for myself:
 Here, boy, to Pallas; here, to Mercury:
 To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine; 56
 You were as good to shoot against the wind.
 To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.
 Of my word, I have written to effect;
 There's not a god left unsolicited. 60
Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the
 court:
 We will afflict the emperor in his pride.
Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O!
 well said, Lucius!
 Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas. 64
Mar. My lord, I am a mile beyond the moon;
 Your letter is with Jopiter by this.
Tit. Ha! Poblus, Publius, what hast thou
 done?
 See, see! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.
Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot, 69
 The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court;
 And who should find them but the empress'
 villain? 72
 She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose
 But give them to his master for a present.
Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post come. 70

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters? Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clow. O! the gab-bet-maker? He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week. 81

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clow. Alas! sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life. 84

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clow. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clow. From heaven! alas! sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men. 93

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you. 96

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clow. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life. 100

Tit. Sirrah, come hither; make no more ado, but give your pigeons to the emperor;

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. Hold, hold; meanwhile, here's money for thy charges. 104

Give me pen and ink.

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clow. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clow. I warrant you, sir; let me alone. 113

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; for thou hast made it like a humble suppliant; and when thou hast given it to the emperor, knock at my door, and I tell me what he says. 117

Clow. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, Lords, and Others: SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that Titus shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these! Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne, Tumbled, confronted thus; and, for the extent of equal justice, us'd in such contempt?

My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods, How ever these disturbers of our peace Huzz in the people's ears,—there nought has pass'd,

But even with law, against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks, His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?

And now he writes to heaven for his redress; See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury; This to Apollo; this to the god of war; Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! What's this but libelling against the senate, And blazoning our injustice every where?

A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were, But if I live, his fateful eastles

Shall be no shelter to these outrages;

But he and his shall know that justice lives

In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,

He'll so awake, as she in fury shall

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturninus

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,

Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,

The effects of sorrow for his vallant sons,

Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight

Than prosecute the meanest or the best

For these contempts.—[Aside.] Why, thus I shall become High-wit'd Tamora to gloze with all;

But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,

Thy life-blood out: If Aaron now be wise,

Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Clow. Yea, forsooth, an your mistresship be imperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clow. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den.

I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[SATURNINUS reads the letter.]

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clow. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.

Clow. Hanged! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit, guarded.]

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs! Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?

I know from whence this same device proceeds:
 May this be borne? As if his traitorous sons, 52
 That died by law for murder of our brother,
 Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!
 Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
 Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege. 56
 For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughterman;
 Sly frantic wretch, that help'st to make me great,
 In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius? 60 Æmil. Alas, my lord! Rome never had more cause.

The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power
 Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
 They hither march amain, under conduct 64
 Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
 Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
 As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is war-like Lucius general of the Goths?
 These tidings nip me, and I hang the end 69
 As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:
 'Tis he the common people love so much; 72
 Myself hath often heard them say,
 When I have walk'd like a private man,
 That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
 And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor. 76

Tam. Why should you fear? Is not your city
 strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
 And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name. 80

Is the sun dimm'd, that grays do fly in it?
 The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
 And is not careful what they mean thereby,
 Knowing that with the shadow of his wings 84
 He can at pleasure stint their melody;

Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
 Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
 I will enchant the old Andronicus 88
 With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
 Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep,
 Whence the one is wounded with the bait,
 The other rotted with delicious feed. 92

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him then he will:
 For I can smooth and fill his aged ear
 With golden promises, that were his heart 96
 Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf.

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue
 [To ÆMILIUS.] Go thou before, be our ambassador:

Say that the emperor requests a parley 100
 Of war-like Lucius, and appoint the meeting.
 Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:

And if he stand on hostage for his safety, 104
 Bid him demand what pledge will please him
 best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.
 [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
 And temper him with all the art I have, 108
 To pluck proud Lucius from the war-like Goths.
 And now, sweet emperor, be bold again,
 And bury all thy fear in my device.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him.
 [Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Plains near Rome.

Flourish. Enter LUCIUS, and an army of Goths, with drums and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful
 friends,

I have received letters from great Rome,
 Which signify what hate they bear their
 emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are. 4
 Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
 Imperious and impatient of your wrongs;
 And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
 Let him make treble satisfaction. 8

First Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus

Whose name was once our terror, now our
 comfort;

Whose high exploits and noble deeds
 Ingrateful Rome, with scornful contempt,
 Be bold in us; well we know thou lead'st,
 Like stinging bees in the summer's day
 Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
 And be aveng'd on curs'd Tamora. 16

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you
 all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading ANTONIO with his child in his arms.

Sec. Goth. Renowned Lucius from our troops
 I stray'd,

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
 And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
 Upon the wasted building, suddenly
 I heard a child cry underneath a wall. 24

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
 The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:

'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam'
 Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art, 28

Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
 Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor;

But where the bull and cow are both milk-white

They never do beget a coal-black calf, 32
Peace, villain, peace!'—even thus he rates the babe,—
'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress'
babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.' 36
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon
him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, it is the incarnate
devil 40

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.
Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou
convey 44

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? not a word?

A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy. 48

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal
blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal. 52
Get me a ladder. [A ladder brought, which AARON is made to ascend.

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear: 56
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'

Luc. Say on; and if it please us which thou
speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure thee,
Lucius, 61

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds, 64

Complots of mischief, treason, villainies
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:
An' this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live. 68

Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st
no god:

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious,

And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies, 76
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath; for that I know

An idiot holds his hauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears
To that I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt vote
By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on t
empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman!
Aar. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed
charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;
They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou this trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thy self?

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct
them.

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set; 10

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me
As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole 10

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the queen and her two sons:

An' what not done, that thou hast cause to rue
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
And, when I had it, drew myself apart, 112

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads:

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily, 116

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She swoonded almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tilings gave me twenty kisses. 12

First Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand
more, 124

Even now I curse the day, and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse,
Wherein I did not some notorious ill;

As kill a man, or else devise his death; 125

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;
 Accuse some Innocent, and forswear myself;
 Set deadly enmity between two friends;
 Make poor men's cattle break their necks; 132
 Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
 And bid the owners quench them with their
 tears,
 Off have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
 And set them upright at their dear friends'
 doors, 136
 Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
 And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
 Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
 'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.' 140
 Tut! I have done a thousand dreadful things
 As willingly as one would kill a fly,
 And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
 But that I cannot do ten thousand more. 144
Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die
 So sweet a death as hanging presently.
Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
 To live and burn in everlasting fire, 148
 So I might have your company in hell,
 But to torment you with my bitter tongue!
Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak
 no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from
 Rome 152
 Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.

Enter EMILIUS.

Welcome, Emilius! what's the news from
 Rome?
Emil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths, 156
 The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
 And, for he understands you are in arms,
 He craves a parley at your father's house,
 Willing you to demand your hostages, 160
 And they shall be immediately deliver'd.
First Goth. What says our general?
Luc. Emilius, let the emperor give his pledges
 Unto my father and my uncle Marcus, 164
 And we will come. March away. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Rome. Before TITUS' House.

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON,
disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habit-
 ment,
 I will encounter with Andronicus,
 And say I am Revenge, sent from below
 To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
 Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps, 5
 To ruininate strange plots of dire revenge;

Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
 And work confusion on his enemies. 3
 [They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
 Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
 That so my sad decrees may fly away,
 And all my study be to no effect? 12
 You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do,
 See here, in bloody lines I have set down;
 And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee. 16

Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my
 talk,

Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me. 20

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
 Witness this wretched stump, witness these
 cri-son lines;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night; 24

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora,

Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not
 Tamora; 28

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:

I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom,

To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes. 32

Come down, and welcome me to this world's flight;

Confer with me of murder and of death.

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale, 36

Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can eouch for fear, but I will find them out;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,

Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to
 me, 41

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;

Now give some surance that thou art Revenge;

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels,

And then I'll come and be thy waggour, 45

And whirl along with thee about the globe.

Provide two proper palfreys, black as jet,

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,

And find out murderers in their guilty caves; 52

And when thy car is lowen with their heads,

I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel

Trot like a servile footman all day long,

Even from Hyperion's rising in the east 56

Until his very downfall in the sea:

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so.

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are,

And you the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;

And if one arm's embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;

And, being credulous in this mad thought,

I'll make him send for Luchus his son;

And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,

I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,

Or, at the least, make them his enemies.

See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme. So

Enter Titus.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.

How like the empress and her sons you are!

Well are you fitted had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?

For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;

And would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil.

But welcome as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll dent with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer;

Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find an other that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher,
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court

There is a queen attended by a Moor;
Well must thou know her by thy own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee:
I pray thee, do on them some violent death; for
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Luchus, thy thrice-vallant son,

Who leads towards Rome a band of war-like Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.

What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Luchus;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths:

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too

Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them:
This do thou for my love; and so let him,

As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;

Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Luchus.

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys?
Will you abide with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they suppose me mad;

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices;
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam.

Dem. [Aside to TAMORA.] Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes

To lay a complot to betray thy foes. [Exit TAMORA.]

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell.

Chi. Tell us, old nun, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. 'Tis I have work enough for you to do.
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius and Others.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The empress' sons,
 I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.
Tit. Fle, Publius, fle! thou art too much deceiv'd; 156
 The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;
 And therefore blind them, gentle Publius;
 Caius and Valentinus, lay hands on them;
 Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour, 160
 And now I find it: therefore blind them sure,
 And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit. PUBLIUS, &c., seize CHIRON
 and DEMETRIUS.]

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the empress'
 sons.
Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded, 164
 Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a
 word.

Is he sure bound? look that you blind them fast.

[Re-enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a basin, and he a knife.]

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,
 But let them hear what fearful words I utter. 169
 O Villains, Chiron and Demetrius!
 Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd. 172
 You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault
 Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
 My hand cut off and made a merry jest:
 Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more
 dear 176

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
 Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
 What would you say if I should let you speak?
 Villains! for shame you could not beg for grace.
 Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you. 181
 This one hand yet is left to cut your throats.
 Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold
 The basin that receives your guilty blood. 184

You know your mother means to feast with me,
 And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.
 Hark, Villains, I will grind your bones to dust,
 And with your blood and it I'll make a paste; 188
 And of the paste a coffin I will rear,

And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
 And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
 Like to the earth swallow her own increase. 192
 This is the feast that I have bid her to,
 And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
 For worse than Philoniel you us'd my daughter,
 And worse than Procne I will be reveng'd. 196
 And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come.

[He cuts their throats.]

Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,
 Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
 And with this intestine liquor temper it; 200

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
 Come, come, be every one obsequious
 To make this banquet, which I wish may prove
 More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
 So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
 And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
 [Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

Scene III.—The Same. Court of Titus'
 House. A banquet set out.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS and Goths, with AARON
 prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's
 mind
 That I repair to Rome, I am content.

First Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous
 Moor, 4

This ravenous tiger this accursed devil,
 Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
 Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
 For testimony of her foul proceedings: 3
 And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
 I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whispers curses in mine ear,
 And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
 The venomous malle of my swelling heart! 13

Luc. Away, Inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!
 Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.

[Exeunt Goths, with AARON. Trumpets
sound.]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand. 16

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Senators, Tribunes, and Others.

Sat. What! hath the firmament more suns
 than one?

Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?

Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20

The feast is ready which the careful Titus
 Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
 For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome;
 Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places. 24

Sat. Marcus, we will. [Hautboys sound.]

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome,
 dread queen;

Welcome, ye war-like Goths; welcome, Lucius;
 And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor,
 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. 29

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well

To entertain your highness, and your empress. 32

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Was it well done of rash Virginius 36

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforced, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord? 40

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, 44

For me most wretched, to perform the like.

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die!

[Kills LAVINIA.]

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind? 48

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginius was,

And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage: and it is now done. 52

Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius: 56

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue:

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie; 60

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

[Kills TAMORA.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed!

[Kills TITUS.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?

There's need for need, death for a dew'd deed.

[Kills SATURNINUS. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their partizans, go up into the balcony.]

Mar. You sad-faced men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd like a flight of fowl 68

Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts—

O! set me teach you how to knit again

This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body, 72

That nature her self be hate unto herself,

And the heaven bright with kind and holy stars.

Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,

Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,

[To LUCIUS.] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear

The story of that baleful burning night

When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam

Troy;

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel,

Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,

And break my very utterance, even in the time

When it should move you to attend me most,

Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him

speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to

you,

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius

Were they that murdered our emperor's brother

And they it was that ravish'd our sister.

For their fell faults our brothers were beleagu'd

Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd

Of that true band that fought Rome's quarrel

out,

And sent her enemies unto the grave;

Lastly, myself unkindly banish'd,

The gates shut on me, and turned weeping out,

To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drow'd their enmity in my true tears,

And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend;

And I am the turn'd forth, be it known to you,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in Titus' adventurous body.

Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I;

My scars can witness, dumb although they are,

That my report is just and full of truth.

But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, 76

Citing my worthless praise: O! pardon me;

For when no friends are by, men praise them selves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this

child;

Of this was Tamora delivered,

The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes,

The villain is alive in Titus' house,

Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.

Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge

These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience, or more than any living man could bear.

Now you have heard the truth, what say you
Romans? 128

Have we done nought amiss, show us wherein,
And, from the place where you beheld us now,
The poor remainder of Andronic
Will haud, and, all headlong cast us down,
And on the rugged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak! and if you say we shall,
I'll hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall. 136
Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of
Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140
Romans. Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal
emperor!

Marc. [To Attendants] Go go into old Titus' sorrowful house,

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life. 145
[Exeunt Attendants.]

LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the Others descend.

Romans. Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; may I govern
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me alm awhile, 149
For nature puts me to a heavy task.
stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk. 152
O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses Titus.]
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
face,
The last true duties of thy noble son?

Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips: 157
O! were the sum of these that I should pay countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come, hither, boy: come, come, and learn of us 160
To melt in showers; thy grandsire lov'd thee
well:

Mute a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;

Many a matter hath he told to thee, 164
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so: 168
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe,
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all
my heart 172

Would I were dead, so you did live again.
O Lord! I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants, with AARON.

First Rom. You sad Andronic! have done with woe: 176

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and faulsh
him;

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food;
If any one relieves or pities him, 181
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb? 184

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will: 188
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave. 192
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.

As for that helious tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds, 197
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey.
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;

And, being so, shall have like want of pity. 202
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning;
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne'er it ruitate. [Exeunt

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. *Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffick of our stage; 12
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.* [Exit.]

Act I.

Scene I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, of my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague move
me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand; therefore, if thou art moved, thou runnest away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall;
therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:
when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their m maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh. 34

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; If thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues. 37

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run? 40

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin. 44

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it. 49

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? 52

Sam. [Aside to GREGORY.] Is the law of our side if I say ay?

Gre. [Aside to SAMPSON.] No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you,
sir; but I bite my thumb, sir. 57

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you. 61

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. [Aside to SAMPSON.] Say, 'better,' here comes one of my master's kinsmen. 65

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. Part, fools!
Put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds? 71
Furn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword,
Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What! drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word. 75

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.
Have at thee, coward! [They fight.]

Enter several persons of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs and partisans.

Citizens. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike!
beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues! 80

Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

Lady Cap. A crutch, a crutch! Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come,
And flourishes his blade in spite of me. 84

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet! Hold me not;
let me go.

Lady Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,— 85
Will they not hear? What ho! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands 88

Throw your mis-temper'd weapons to the ground,
And hear the sentence of your moved prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, 92

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave besecming ornaments,
To wield old partisans, in hands as old, 95

Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate.
If ever you disturb our streets again

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away; 100

You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
And, Montague, come you this afternoon

To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart 105
[Exeunt all but MONTAGUE, LADY MON-TAGUE, and BENVOLIO.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new a broach.

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary
And yours close fighting ere I did approach; 110

I drew to part them; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd,

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, 115

He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal hiss'd him in scorn.

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,

Till the prince came, who parted either part. 120

Lady Mon. O where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side, 128
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own, 132
That most are busied when they're most alone,
Pursu'd my humour not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.
Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen, 136
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw 140
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night. 145
Black and portentous must this humour prove Unless good counsel may the cause remove.
Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?
Mon. Both by myself and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor, 152
Is to himself, I will not say how true,
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm, 156
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows
grow,
We would as willingly give cure as know. 160
Ben. See where he comes: so please you, step
aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.
Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy
stay,
To hear true shrift. Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt MONTAQUE and LADY.]

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.
Rom. Is the day so young? 165
Ben. But new struck nine.
Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast?
Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours? 168
Rom. Not having that, which having, makes them short.
Ben. In love?
Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?
Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.
Ben. Alas! that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.
Rom. Alas! that love, whose view is muffled
still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will.
Where shall we dine? O me! What fray
here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more
love:
Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing! of nothing first create.
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mishapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire,
health!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?
Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.
Rom. Good heart, at what?
Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.
Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate to have it press'd
With more of thine: this love that thou shown
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears.
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet. [Go
Farewell, my coz. Ben. Soft, I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.
Rom. Tut! I have lost myself; I am
here:
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.
Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love?
Rom. What? shall I groan and tell thee?
Ben. Groan! why,
But sadly tell me who.
Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make
will;
Ah! woe ill urg'd to one that is so ill.
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.
Ben. I should so near when I supposed
lovd.
Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's
I love.
Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soon hit.
Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll be hit
With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's wit;
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives harm'd.

ere I am in love,
 He in his view,
 High in proof,
 His view is muffled
 To his will.
 What fray was

and it all,
 but more with loving hate!
 Hate,
 cold fire, sick
 that it is!
 In this.

 I suppos'd you
 ! And she's fair

 well arm'd,
 she lives un-

she will not stay the slege of loving terms,
 Nor hide the encounter of assailing eyes,
 Nor ope her lap to saint-reducing gold:
 O! she is rich in beauty; only poor
 That, when she dyes, with beauty dyes her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
 Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
 To merit bliss by making me despair!

She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
 Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me; forget to think of her.

Rom. O! teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes:
 Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way
 To call hers exquisite, in question more.

These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows
 Being black put us in mind they hide the fair;

He, that is stricken blind cannot forget
 The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:

Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
 What doth her beauty serve but as a note

Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and SERVANT.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
 In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
 For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
 And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said be fore:

My child is yet a stranger in the world,
 She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;

Let two more summers wither in their pride
 Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers
 made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early
 made.

Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
 She is the hopeful lady of my earth;

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
 My will to her consent is but a part;

An she agree, within her scope of choice
 Lies my consent and fair according voice.

This night I hold an old accustomed feast,
 Whereto I have invited many a guest

Such as I love; and you, among the store,
 One more, most welcome, makes my number
 more.

At my poor house look to behold this night
 Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven
 light:

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
 When well-apparell'd April on the heel

Of limping winter treads, even such delight
 Among fresh female buds shall you this night

Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
 And like her most whose merit most shall be;

Which on more view, of many mine being one
 May stand in number, though in reckoning
 none.

Come, go with me. [To Servant, giving him a paper.] Go, sirrah, trudge about

Through fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there, and to them
 say,

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned, in good
 time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut! man, one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;

Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;

One desperate grief cures with another's languish:

Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
 And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for
 that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is;

Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
 Whipp'd and tormented, and—Good den, good
 fellow.

Serv. God gi' good den. I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book; but, I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom. Ay, if I knew the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly; rest you merry!
 [Offering to go.]

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.
Signior Martino and his wife and daughters; County Anselme and his beautiful sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valerio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.

A fair assembly: whither should they come?

Serv. Up. 76

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's. 80

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

[Exit.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's, Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lovest, 88
 With all the admired beauties of Verona:

Go thither; and, with unattainted eye
 Compare her face with some that I shall show,
 And I will make thee think thy swan a crow. 92

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Misgives such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these, who often drown'd could never die,
 Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars! 96
 One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
 Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd with herself in either eye; 100
 But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
 Your lady's love against some other maid
 That I will show you shining at this feast,
 And she shall scant show well that now shows
 best. 104

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,

But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

[Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S
 House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and NURSE.

Lady Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my mad-headed, at twelve year old,—

I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-bird!
 God forbid! where's this girl? what, Juliet! 4

Enter JULIET.

Lady Cap. How now! who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

Lady Cap. This is the matter. Nurse, go leave awhile.

We must talk in secret; nurse, come back
 again;

I have remember'd me, thou'st hear our counsel.
 Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Lady Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth—
 And yet to my teen be it spoken I have but four—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now

To Lammas-tide?

Lady Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year
 Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—
 Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God;

She was too good for me. But, as I said,
 On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen

That shall she, marry; I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;

And she was wean'd, I never shall forget it,

Of all the days of the year, upon that day;

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;

My lord and you were then at Mantua.

Nay, I do bear a brain;—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool!

To see it tetchy and fall out with the dug.

'Stake,' quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need

I trow.

To bid me trudge;

And since that time it is eleven years;

For then she could stand high lone; nay, by the root,

She could have run and waddled all about;

For even the day before she broke her brow;

And then my husband—God be with his soul!

A' was a merry man—took up the child;

'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?'

Then wilt fall backward, when thou hast more

wit;

Wilt thou not 'tule?' and, by my hidion,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said 'Ay!'

To see now how a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Juliet?'

quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.'

Lady Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, let thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh.

To think it should leave crying, and say 'Ay!'

And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow 52

A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;

A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly:

'Yet, quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou com'st to age:' 55

Wilt thou not, Jule?' It stinted and said 'Ay.'

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

First wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed;
An I might live to see thee married once, 61
I have my wish.

Lady Cap. Marry, that 'marry' is the very theme

I come to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet, 64
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat. 68

Lady Cap. Well, think of marriage now;
younger than you,

How in Verona, ladies of esteem,

My uncle already mothers; by my count,

I was your mother much upon these years 72

That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief,
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man
As all the world—why, he's a man of wax. 76

Lady Cap. Verona's summer bath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

Lady Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast; 80

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face

And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;

Examine every married linement,

And see how one another lends content; 84

And what obscured in this fair volume lies

Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beautify him, only lacks a cover: 88

The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride

For fair without the fair within to hide:

That book in many eyes doth share the glory,

That in gold clasps locks in the golden story; 92

So shall you share all that he doth possess,

By having him making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! nay, bigger; women grow by
men.

Lady Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love? 96

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move;
But no more deep will I endart mine eye

Than your consent gives strength to make it
fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight. 104

Lady Cap. We follow thee, Juliet, the country stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Masquers, Torch-Bearers, and Others.

Rom. What! shall this speech be spoke for our excuse,

Or shall we ou without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity:

We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf, 4
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,

Searing the ladies like a crow-keeper;

Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance: 3

But, let them measure us by what they will,

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch: I am not for this ambbling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light. 12

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you
dance

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes

With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead

So stakes me to the ground I cannot move. 16

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore pierc'd with his shaft

To soar with his light feathers; and so bound 20
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe;

Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden
love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing. 24

Rom. Is love a tender thing? It is too rough, Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with
love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
down. 28

Give me a cause to put my visage in:

[Putting on a masque.

A visor for a visor! what cure I,

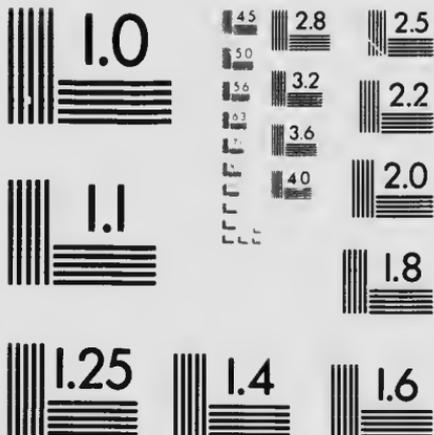

What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me. 32

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner
in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me; let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels, 36
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase;
I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.
Mer. Tut! dnn's the mouse, the constable's own word: 40
If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire,
Of—save your reverence—love, wherein thou stlekest
Up to th' ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!
Rom. Nay, that's not so.
Mer. I mean, sir, in delay 44
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits
Five times in that ere once in our five wits.
Rom. And we mean well in going to this masque; 48
But 'tis no wit to go.
Mer. Why, may one ask?
Rom. I dream'd a dream to-night.
Mer. And so did I.
Rom. Well, what was yours?
Mer. That dreamers often lie.
Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true. 52
Mer. O! then, I see, Queen Mab hath been with you.
Ben. Queen Mab! What's she?
Mer. She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone 56
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long splinters' legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; 61
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;
Her whip, of ericket's bone; the lash, of film; 64
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut, 68
Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,
Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.
And in this state she gallops night by night Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of
love; 72
O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies
straight;
O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;
O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted
are. 77
Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit;
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as a' lies asleep, 81
Then dreams he of another benefice;

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes
And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which once untangled much misfortune bode
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs
That presses them and learns them first to bear
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace! Mercutio, peace!
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air,
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear too early; for my mind gives

Some consequence yet hanging in the stars
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life closed in my breast
By some vile forfeit of untimely death.
But he, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exit

Scene V.—The Same. A Hall in CAPULET
House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servingmen.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he kiel not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scratches
a trencher!

Sec. Serv. When good manners shall lie all one or two men's hands, and they unwashed to
'tis a foul thing.

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grind stone and Nell. Antony! and Potpan!

Sec. Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for in the great chamber.

Third Serv. We cannot be here and there
too.

Sec. Serv. Cheerly, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind

Enter CAPULET and JULIET and Others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! Ladies that have their toes

Unplagued with corns will walk a bout with you.

Ah ha! my mistresses, which of you all

Will now deign to dance? she that makes dainty,

I'll swear, hath corns: am I come near ye now?

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day

That I have worn a visor, and could tell

A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear

Such as would please; 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone.

You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play.

A hail! a hail! give room, and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance.]

More light, ye knaves! and turn the tables up,

And quench the fire, the room has grown too hot.

Ah! sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well,

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet,

For you and I are past our dancing days;

How long is't now since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

See. Cap. By'r Lady, thirty years.

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,

Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

See. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more; his son is elder,

sir,

His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady is that which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight?

See. I know not, sir.

Rom. O! she doth teach the torches to burn bright.

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear;

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.

The measure done, I'll watch her place of staid,

And, touching hers, make blissed my rude hand.

Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!

For I us'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What! dares the

slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,

To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,

To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;

A villain that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone;

He bears him like a portly gentleman;

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him

To ho a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.

I would not for the wealth of all this town

Here in my house do him disparagement;

Therefore be patient, take no note of him:

It is my will; tho' which if thou respect,

Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,

An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest:

I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd:

What! Goodman boy; I say, he shall go to;

Am I the master here, or you? go to.

You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!

You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to;

You are a saucy boy—is't so indeed?—

This trick may chance to scathe you.—I know what:

You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time.

Well said, my hearts! You are a prince; go;

Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For

shame!

I'll make you quiet. What! cheerly, my hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler

meeting

Makes my flesh tremble in their different

greeting.

I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall

Now seeming sweet convert to bitter gall. [Exit.]

Rom. [To JULIET.] If I profane with my un-

worthiest hand

This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this;

My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand

To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which nunnery devotion shows in this;

For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do

touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers

too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;

They pray, grant thou, best faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayers' effect I take.

Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.

[Kissing her.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!

Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,

And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:

I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;

I tell you he that can lay hold of her

Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.

Is it e'en so? Why then, I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good-night.

More torches here! Come on then, let's to bed.

Ah! sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest. [Exeunt all except JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruccio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name.—If he be married, My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague; The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too late! Prodigious birth of love! It is to me,

That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this, what's this?

Jul. A rime I learn'd even now Of one I dan'd withal.

[One calls within, 'JULIET!'

Nurse. Anon, anon!— Come, let's away; the strangers are all gone.

[Exeunt.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir;
That fair for which love groan'd for and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers used to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-belov'd any where:
But passion lends them power, time means, to meet,
Tempering extremity with extreme sweet.

[Exit.

Act II.

Scene I.—Verona. A Lane by the wall of CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?

Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
[He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise. And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too. Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh:
Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfied;

Cry but 'Ay me!' couple but 'love' and 'dove';

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word.
One nickname for her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.

He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not,
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.
Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit In his mistress' circle 24
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
That were some spite: my invocation
Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name 28
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be consorted with the humorous night:
Blind is his love and best befits the dark. 32

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
O Romeo! that she were, O! that she were 37
An open et cætera, thou a poperin pear.
Romeo, good night: I'll to my truckle-bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep: 40
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. CAPULET'S ORCHARD.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.

[JULIET appears above at a window.
But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, 4
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but sick and green, 8
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.
It is my lady; O! it is my love:
O! that she knew she were.

She speaks, yet she says nothing; what of that?
Her eye discourses; I will answer it. 13

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes 16
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars

As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven 20
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing and think it were not
night.

See! how she leans her cheek upon her hand:
O! that I were a glove upon that hand, 24
That I might touch that cheek.

Jul. Ay me!
Rom. She speaks;

O! speak again, bright angel; for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven 28
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air. 32

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father, and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet. 36

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.
What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot, 40
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O! be some other name:
What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet; 44
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name;
And for that name, which is no part of thee, 48
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word.
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd
In night,
So stumblest on my counsel? 52

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee: 56
Had I it written, I would tear the world.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred
words
Of that tongue's uttering, yet I know the
sound:
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague? 60

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.
Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore? 64
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here. 68

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch
these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me. 72

Jul. If they do see thee they will murder
thee.
Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine
eye
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but
sweet, 76
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;

And but thou love me, let them find me here;
My life were better ended by their hate, 77
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By Love, that first did prompt me to inquire; 80

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise. 84

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny 88
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say
'Ay;'

And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou ma'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries, 92
They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo!

If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,

I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay, 96
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my haviour light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange. 101

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was 'ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love, 105
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O! swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon, 109

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, 113
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—
Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in thee, 116

I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good-night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,

May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.
Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast! 124

Rom. O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it; 128

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have: 132

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu! 136

Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit above.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afraid,
Being in night, all this is but a dream, 140
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good-night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow.

By one that I'll procure to come to thee, 145
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam! 149

Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st not well,

I do beseech thee,—
Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. By and by; I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief: 154
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good-night!

[Exit above.
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books; 158

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hst! Romeo, hst! O! for a falconer's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again.
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud; 162

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,

eak aloud, re-
cho lies,

And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine.

With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name:
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear!

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine. 168

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till
then.

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there, 172

Remembering how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still
forget,

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee
gone; 176

And yet no further than a wanton's hand,
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again, 180
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good-night, good-night! parting is such sweet
sorrow 184

That I shall say good-night till it be morrow.

[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell, 188
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell.

[Exit.

Scene III.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S
Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, with a basket.

Fri. L. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,
Chequ'ing the eastern clouds with streaks of
light,

And fleck'd darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels: 4
Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osler cage of ours
With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers. 8
The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;
What is her burying grave that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find, 12

Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O! mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live 17
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use
Revoits from true birth, stumbling on abuse: 20
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
And vice sometimes by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this weak flower
Poison hath residence and medicine power: 24
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each
part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will; 28
And where the worsor is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. L. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me? 32

Young son, it argues a distemper'd head

So soon to hid good morrow to thy bed:

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,

And where care lodges, sleep will never lie; 36

But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure

Thou art up-rousd by some distemperature; 40

Or if not so, then here I hit it right,

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was

mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with

Rosaline? 44

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again. 48

I have been feasting with mine enemy,

Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,

That's by me wounded: both our remedies

Withn thy help and holy physic lies: 52

I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo!

My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift. 56

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: when and where and how 61

We met we woo'd and made exchange of vow,

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day. 64

Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here;

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes. 68

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline;
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste! 72

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo! here upon thy cheek the sun doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd yet. 76

If e'er thou wast thyself as I do woes thine,
Thou and these woes were one for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then:

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
men. 80

Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosa-line.

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have. 84

Rom. I pray thee, chide not; sic, whom I love now

Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. L. O! she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell. 88
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love. 92

Rom. O! let us hence; I stand on sudden
haste.

Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his
man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, 4

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life. 8

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master,
how he dares, being dared. 12

Mer. Alas! poor Romeo, he is already dead;
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you.
O! he is the courageous captain of compliments.
He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his mind rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom; the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist, a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah! the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, ilsping, affecting fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!
'By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!
—a very good whore.'—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on their new form that they cannot sit at ease on an old bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in: Laura to his lady was but a kitchen-wench; marry, she had a better love to be-rime her; Dido dowdy; Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and Her-kildings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bonjour! there's a French salutation to your Frenchslop. You gave us the countess's name tonight.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. Pray you, counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case
as yours constrains a man to bow in the hands.

Rom. Meaning—to curtsy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then, is my pump well flowered?

Mer. Well said; follow me this jest now to thou hast worn out the pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest! solely singular for the singleness.

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wit fain'ts.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match. 76

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done, for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose? 81

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not here for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not. 85

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not then well served in to a sweet goose? 89

Mer. O! here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad;' which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose. 94

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole. 100

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large. 105

Mer. O! thou art deceived; I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer. 109

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock. 112

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face. 117

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den? 120

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar. 125

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; 'for himself to mar,' quotha?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse. 132

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea! is the worst well? very well too, I' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you. 137

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found? 140

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a luten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent. [Sings.

An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar, 144

Is very good meat in Lent:

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither. 149

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell,

Lady, lady, lady. 152

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.

Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month. 153

Nurse. An a' speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurry knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates. [To PETER.] And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure! 165

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side. 170

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurry knave! Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bid me say I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of 'chavolour, as they say: for the gentleman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal do with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing. 182

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, I' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman. 187

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer. 192

Rom. Bid her devise
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;
And there she shall at Friar Laurence's cell,
Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny. 197

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be
there. 200

Rom. And stay, good nurse; behind the abbey wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy 204
Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell! Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.
Farewell! Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! I mark you, sir. 208

Rom. What sayst thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee my man's as true as
steel. 212

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O! there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as ray clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with an R. 224

Nurse. Ah! mocker; that's the dog's name.
R is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter; and she had the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it. 229

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit ROMEO.] Peter! 232

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Before, and apace. [Exit.]

Scene V.—The Same. CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return.

P perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so.
O! she is lame: love's heralds should be
thoughts, 4

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's
beams,

Driving back shadows over lowering hills:

Therefore do nimble-pu'nd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill . 9
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood, 1-
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love.
And his to me:
But old folks, many feign as they were dead; 16
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God! she comes. O honey nurse! what
news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit PETER.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse; O Lord! why look'st thou sad? 21

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;

If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face. 24

Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave awhile:
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunce have
I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy
news.

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good nurse,
speak. 28

Nurse. Jesu! what haste? can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath? 32

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance: 36

Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;
you know not how to choose a man: Romeo I no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare.
He is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What! have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no; but all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord! how my head aches; what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o' t'other side; O! my back, my
back!

Beshrew your heart for sending me about, 52

To catch my death with jauncing up and down.

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not
well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my
love?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is within;
Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest:

'Your love says, like an honest gentleman, Where is your mother?'

Nurse. O! God's lady dear Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poulitice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Laurence's cell,

There stays a husband to unake you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news;
Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark;
I am the drudge and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go; I'll to dinner: hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heaven upon this holy act,
That after hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Auen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:

Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare;
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die, like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss consume: the sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite:

Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady: O! so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamer

That idles in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him; else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah! Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,

Braggs of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their
worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that when he enters the confines of a tavern claps me his sword upon the table and says, 'God send me no need of thee!' and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer,
when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other.
Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling! 33

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, every man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter. 36

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT, and Others

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den! a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow. 44

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving? 46

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! What! dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds! consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw unto some private place, 56
Or reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;
I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. 60

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;
Your worship in that sense may call him 'man.'

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford
No better term than this,—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage 68
To such a greeting; villain am I none,
Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw. 72

Rom. I do protest I never injured thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet, which name I tender 76
As dearly as my own, be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Alla stoccata carries it away. [Draws.]

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk? 80

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good kins of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. [Drawing.] I am for you. 88

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage! 92

Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt! good Mercutio!

[Exit TYBALT and his Partisans.]

Mer. I am hurt.

A plague o' both your houses! I am sped. 96
Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What! art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Exit PAGE.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much. 100

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague o' both your houses! 'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm, 109

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
Or I shall faint. A plague o' both your houses!
They have made worms' meat of me: I have it, 113

And soundly too:—your houses!

[Exit MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,
My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt 116
In my behalf; my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my kinsman. O sweet Juliet!
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, 120
And in my temper soften'd valour's steel!

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo! brave Mercutio's
dead;

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,
Which too unthimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend; 125

This but begins the woe others must end.

[Draws.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back
again.

Rom. Alive! In triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective lenity, 129

And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!
Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again

That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads 133

Staving for thine to keep him company:
EITHER thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Ab. Thou wretched boy, that didst consort him here, 136

Shalt with him hence.
Rom. This shall determine that.

Ben. ROMEO, away! be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.

Stand not amaz'd: the prince will doom thee
death 140

If thou art taken: hence! be gone! away!
Rom. O! I am Fortune's fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay?
[Exit ROMEO.

Enter Citizens, &c.

First Cit. Which way ran he that killed Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he? 144

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

First Cit. Up, sir, go with me.
I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter PRINCE, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince! I can discover
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo
That slew thy kinsman, brother Mercutio.

Lady Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's
child! 152

O prince! O cousin! husband! O! the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman. Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin! 156

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay:

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal 160

Your high displeasure: all this, uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly
bow'd,

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts 164

With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast.
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,

And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends 168

It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,

'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and, swifter than
his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points, 172
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life

Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo, 170

Who had but newly entertained vengeance,
And to't they go like lightning; he so fast I

Could draw to part them; but Tybalt slain,
And, as he fell, did Romeo's sword fly. 180

This is the truth, or let Benvenuto
Lady Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague;

Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife

And all those twenty could but kill one life. 185
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend,

His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence 192
Immediately we do exile him hence:

I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine 196
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.

You are to be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses;

Therefore use none; let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last. 201

Bear hence this body and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' lodging; such a waggoner

As Phaethon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately. 4

Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That runaway's eyes may wink, and Romeo

Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseent!
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites 8

By their own beauties; or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil night,

Thou sober-sulted matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match, 12

Play'd for a pair of stalesn maidenhoods:
Hide my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks,

With thy black mantle; till strange love grown bold,

Think true love acted simple modesty. 16
 Come, night! come, Romeo! come, thou day in
 night!
 For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
 Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.
 Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd
 night, 20
 Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
 Take him and cut him out in little stars,
 And he will make the face of heaven so fine
 That all the world will be in love with night, 24
 And pay no worship to the garish sun.
 O! I have bought the mansion of a love,
 But not possess'd it, and, though I am sold,
 Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day 28
 As is the night before some festival
 To an impatient child that hath new robes
 And may not wear them. O! here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks 32
 But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.
 Now nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
 the cords
 That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.
[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ah rue! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands? 36

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!
 Aback the day! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can, 40
 Though heaven cannot. O! Romeo, Romeo;
 Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell. 44
 Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou 'hut 'I,'
 And that bare vowel, 'I,' shall poison more
 Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
 I am not I, if there be such an 'I'; 48
 Or those eyes shut that make thee answer 'I,'
 If he be slain, say 'I'; or if not 'no':
 Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
 eyes, 52

God save the mark! here on his manly breast:
 A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
 Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
 All in gore blood; I swoounded at the sight. 56

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
 Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
 And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! 60

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had:

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentlemen!
 That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary? 64

Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
 My dearest cousin, and my dearer lord?
 Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
 For who is living if those two are gone? 68

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
 Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
 blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! It did. 72
Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering
 face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
 Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
 Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravensing lamb!
 Despised substance of divinest show! 77

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st;
 A damned saint, an honourable villain!

O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell 80
 When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend!
 In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?

Was ever book containing such vile matter
 So fairly bound? O! that deceit should dwell
 In such a gorgeous palace.

Nurse. There's no trust, 85

No faith, no honesty in men; all naught,
 All perjured, all dissemblers, all forsworn.

Ah! where's my man? give me some *aqua
 vite*: 88

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue
 For such a wish! he was not born to shame;

Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit; 92
 For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
 Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O! what a beast was I to chide at him.
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin? 96

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah! poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
 thy name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?
 But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my
 cousin? 100

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
 Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy. 104
 My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
 And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:

All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
 Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's
 death, 108

That murder'd me : I would forget it fain ;
 But O ! it presses to my memory,
 Like damned gully deeds to sinners' minds,
 'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished !' 112
 That 'banished,' that one word 'banished,' Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's
 death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there ;
 Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship, 116
 And needily will be rank'd with other griefs,
 Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,'
 Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
 Which modern lamentation might have mov'd ?
 But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
 'Romeo is banished !' to speak that word
 Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
 All slain, all dead : 'Romeo is banished !' 124
 There is no end, no limit, measure, bound
 In that word's death ; no words can that woe
 sound.—

Where is my father and my mother, nurse ?
Nurse. Weeping and walling over Tybalt's corse : 128

Will you go to them ? I will bring you thither.
Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears : mine shall be spent.

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
 Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguill'd, 132

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd :
 He made you for a highway to my bed,
 But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
 Come, cords ; come, nurse ; I'll to my wedding
 bed ; 136

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead !
Nurse. Hie to your chamber ; I'll find Romeo

To comfort you : I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here to-night : 140
 I'll to him ; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O ! find him ; give this ring to my true
 knight,
 And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S
 Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth ; come forth, thou fearful man :
 Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
 And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news ? what is the prince's doom ? 4
 What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
 That I yet know not ?

Fri. L. Too familiar
 Is my dear son with such sour company :

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom. 8
Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince's doom ?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,
 Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha ! banishment ! be merciful, say
 'death ;' 12
 For exile hath more terror in his look,
 Much more than death : do not say 'banish-
 ment.'

Fri. L. Hence from Verona art thou banished.
 Be patient, for the world is broad and wide. 16

Rom. There is no world without Verona
 walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
 Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
 And world's exile is death ; then 'banished,' 20
 Is death mis-term'd. Calling death 'banished,'
 Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
 And snill'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. L. O deadly sin ! O rude unthankfulness !
 Thy fault our law calls death ; but the kind
 prince, 25

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
 And turn'd that black word death to banish-
 ment :

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not. 28

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy : heaven is
 here,

Where Juliet lives ; and every cat and dog
 And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
 Live here in heaven and may look on her ; 32
 But Romeo may not : more valldly,

More honourable state, more courtship lives
 In carrion flies than Romeo : they may selve
 On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand, 36
 And steal immortal blessing from her lips,

Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
 Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin ;
 Flies may do this, but I from this must fly : 40
 They are free men, but I am banished.

And sayst thou yet that exile is not death ?
 Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground
 knife,

No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
 But 'banished' to kill me ? 'Banished !' 45
 O friar ! the damned use that word in hell ;
 Howlings attend it : how hast thou the heart,

Being a divine, a ghostly confessor, 48
 A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
 To mangle me with that word 'banished ?'

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O ! thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that
 word ; 53

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
 To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet 'banished !' Hang up philosophy !
 Unless philosophy can make a Juliet, 57

Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no more.

Fri. L. O! then I see that madmen have no ears. 60

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 64

An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear
thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now, 68
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

[Knocking within.

Fri. L. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick
groans,
Mist-like, unfold me from the search of eyes. 72

[Knocking.

Fri. L. Hark! how they knock. Who's there? Romeo arise;

Thou wilt be taken. Stay awhile! Stand up;
[Knocking.

Run to my study. By and by! God's will!
What wilfulness is this! I come, I come! 76

[Knocking.

Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand:

I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. L. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord? where's Romeo? 81

Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O! he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. L. O woeful sympathy! 84

Piteous predicament! Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering.
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O? 89

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir! Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with
her? 92

Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says 96

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O! she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries, 100
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman. O! tell me, friar, tell
me, 104

In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.

Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand:

Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman in a seeming man;
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both! 112

Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives, 116

By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst
lose. 120

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy
wit.

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed

Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy
wit. 124

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man;

Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish; 128

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mishapen in the conduct of them both,

Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
To set a-fire by thine own ignorance, 132

And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What! rouse thee, man; thy Juliet is alive,

For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy
too: 137

The law that threaten'd death becomes thy
friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings light upon thy back; 140

Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,

Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable. 144

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,

Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her ;
 But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
 For then thou canst not pass to Mantua ; 148
 Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
 To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
 Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
 With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
 Than thou went'st forth in lamentation. 153
 Go before, nurse : commend me to thy lady ;
 And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
 Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto : 156
 Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord ! I could have stay'd here all the night
 To hear good counsel : O ! what learning is.
 My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come. 160

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,
 sir,
 Hee you, make haste, for it grows very late.

[Exit.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by
 this ! 164

Fri. L. Go hence ; good-night ; and here stands all your state :

Either be gone before the watch be set,
 Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence :
 Sojourn in Mantua ; I'll find out your man, 168
 And he shall signify from time to time
 Every good hap to you that chances here.
 Give me thy hand ; 'tis late : farewell ; good-
 night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
 It were a grief so brief to part with thee : 173
 Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—*The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S
 House.*

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,
 That we have had no time to move our
 daughter :

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
 And so did I : well, we were born to die. 4
 'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night :
 I promise you, but for your company,
 I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to
 woo. 8

Madam, good-night : commend me to your
 daughter.

Lady Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow ;
 To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make desperate tender 12

Of my child's love : I think she will be dub'd
 In all respects by me ; nay, more, I doubt it not.
 Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed ;

Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love ; 16
 And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday
 next—

But, soft ! what day is this ?
Par. Monday, my lord !

Cap. Monday ! ha, ha ! Well, Wednesday 's too soon ;

O' Thursday let it be : o' Thursday, tell her, 20
 She shall be married to this noble earl.

Will you be ready ? do you like this haste ?
 We'll keep no great ado ; a friend or two ;

For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, 24
 It may be thought we held him carelessly,
 Being our kinsman, if we revel much.

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
 And there an end. But what say you to Thurs-
 day ? 28

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were
 to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone : o' Thursday be it
 then.

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
 Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day. 32

Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho !
 Afore me ! It is so very very late,
 That we may call it early by and by.

Good-night. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone ? It is not yet near
 day :

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
 That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear ;

Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree : 4
 Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
 No nightingale : look, love, what envious streaks
 Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east : 3

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
 Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops :

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. You light it not daylight, I know it, I :
 It is some meteor that the sun exhales, 13

To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
 And light thee on thy way to Mantua :

Therefore stay yet ; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to
 death ; 7

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
 I'll say you grey is not the morning's eye,
 'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow ; 20

Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
 The vaulty heaven so high above our heads :

I have more care to stay than will to go :
 Come, death, and welcome ! Juliet wills it so. 24

How is't, my soul ? let's talk ; it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is ; hie hence, be gone, away !
 It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
 Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

Some say the lark makes sweet division; 29
 This doth not so, for she divideth us:
 Some say the lark and loathed toad change
 eyes;
 O! now I would they had chang'd voices too, 30
 Since arm from arm that vuices doth us affray,
 Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day,
 O! now be gone; more light and light 't grows.
Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes. 36

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!
Jul. Nurse!
Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber;
 The day is broke; be wary, look about. [Exit.
Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [Descends.
Jul. Art thou gone so? my lord, my love, my
 friend!
 I must hear from thee every day in the hour, 44
 For in a minute there are many days;
 O! by this count I shall be much in years
 Ere I again behold my Romeo.
Rom. Farewell! 48
 I will omit no opportunity
 That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.
Jul. O! think'st thou we shall ever meet
 again?
Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve 52
 For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul:
 Methinks I see thee, now thou art so low,
 As one dead in the bottom of a tomb; 56
 Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.
Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:
 Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit.

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee
 fickle: 60
 If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
 That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
 For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
 But send him back. 64
Lady Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you
 up?
Jul. Who is't that calls? Is it my lady
 mother?
 Is she not down so late, or up so early?
 What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!
Jul. Madam, I am not well. 69
Lady Cap. Evermore weeping for your coun-sin's death?
 What! wilt thou wash him from his grave with
 tears?

And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him
 live; 72
 Therefore, have done: some grief shows much of
 love;
 But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
Lady Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend 76

Which you weep for.
Jul. Feeling so the loss,
 I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.
Lady Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
 As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?
Lady Cap. That same villain, Romeo.
Jul. [Aside.] Villain and he be many miles
 asunder.
 God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
 And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart. 84

Lady Cap. That is because the traitor mur-derer lives, 85
Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my
 hands.
 Would none but I might venge my cousin's
 death!
Lady Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not: 88
 Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,

Where that same banished runagate doth live.
 Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram
 That he shall soon keep Tybalt company: 92
 And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.
Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied }
 With Romeo, till I behold him—dead— }
 Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd: 96
 Madam, if you could find out but a man
 To bear a poison, I would temper it,
 That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
 Soon sleep in quiet. O! how my heart abhors
 To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
 To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
 Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him.

Lady Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man. 104
 But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy
 time:

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
Lady Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child; 108
 One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
 Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy
 That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
Jul. Madam, in happy time what day is that?
Lady Cap. Marry my child, early next Thursday morn 113

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
 The County Paris, at Saint Peter's church,
 Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride. 116

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
Ere he that should be husband comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris. These are news indeed! 124

Lady Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself.
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle
dew;

But for the sunset of my brother's son 125
It rains downright.
How now! a conduit, girl? what! still in tears?
Eremore showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeilst a bark, a sea, a wind; 130
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;
Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them,
Without a sudden calm, will overset 137
Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

Lady Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks. 140

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How! will she none? doth she not give us
thanks?

Is she not proud? doth she not count her blessing
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought 144
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:

Proud can I never be of what I hate; 148
But thankful even for hate, that meant love.

Cap. How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this?

'Proud,' and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you
not;'

And yet 'not proud;' mistress minion, you, 152
Think me no thankings, nor proud me no
prouds,

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. 156

Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!

You tallow face!

Lady Cap. Fle, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word. 160

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient
wretch!

I tell thee what, get thee to church o' Thursday,

Or never after look me in the face.

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; 164
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us
bless'd

That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her. 168
Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your
tongue,

Good prudence; smother with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no reason.

Cap. O! God ye good den.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool;
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl;

For here we need it not.

Lady Cap. You are too hot. 176

Cap. God's bread! It makes me mad.

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,

Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd; and having now provided

A gentleman of noble parentage, 181

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts.

Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man;

And then to have a wretched pulling fool, 185

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,

To answer 'I'll not wed,' 'I cannot love,'

'I am too young,' 'I pray you, pardon me;' 188

But, as you will nee wed, I'll pardon you:

Grave where you will, you shall not house with
me:

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise. 192

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good. 196

Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.]

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of grief?

O! sweet my mother, cast me not away; 200

Delay this marriage for a month, or two;

Or, if you do not, make the bridegroom
bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak
a word. 204

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.]

Jul. O God! O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;

How shall that faith return again to earth, 208

Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth? comfort me, counsel me.

Alack, alack! that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself! 212
 What sayst thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
 Some comfort, nurse?

Nurse. Faith, here it is. Romeo
 Is banished; and all the world to nothing
 That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
 Or, if he do, it needs must be my stealth. 217
 Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
 I think it best you married with the county.

O! he's a lovely gentleman; 220
 Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle, madam,
 Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
 As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
 I think you are happy in this second match, 224
 For it excels your first: or if it did not,
 Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
 As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nurse. And from my soul too; 228
 Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!
Nurse. What!
Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous
 much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
 Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
 To make confession and to be absolv'd. 233

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.
 [Exit.]

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked
 fiend!

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn, 236
 Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
 Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
 So many thousand times? Go, counsellor;
 Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
 I'll to the friar, to know his remedy: 241
 If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Venice. FRIAR LAURENCE'S CELL.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
 And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's
 mind; 4

Uneven is the course, I like it not.
Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
 death,

And therefore have I little talked of love;
 For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. 8

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous
 That she doth give her sorrow so much sway,
 And in his wisdom hastes our marriage 12
 To stop the foundation of her tears;
 Which, too much minded by herself alone,

May be put from her by society.
 Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. 16

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife!

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next. 20

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. L. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this
 father?

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him. 25

Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price, Being spoke behind your back, than to your
 face. 28

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;
 For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report. 32

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;
 And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own. 36
 Are you at leisure, holy father, now;

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now: 40

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.
Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
 Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.]

Jul. O! shut the door! and when thou hast done so, 44

Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past
 help!

Fri. L. Ah! Juliet, I already know thy grief;
 It strains me past the compass of my wits:

I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
 On Thursday next be married to this county. 49

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of
 this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
 If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help, 52

Do thou but call my resolution wise,
 And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our
 hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd, 56
 Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
 Turn to another, this shall slay them both.

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, 60
Give me some present counsel; or behold,
Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire, - cutting that
Which thy commission of thy years and art 64
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. F. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope, 68

Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself, 72
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from it;
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy. 76

Jul. O! bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
bears; 80

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave 84
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love. 88
Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow:
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed, 93
And this distilled liquor drink thou off;
When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease; 96
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall, 100
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death;
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours, 105
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.

Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then—as the manner of our country is— 109
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. 112
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come; and he and I

Will watch thy waking, and that very night 116
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame;
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it. 120

Jul. Give me, give me! O! tell me not of fear!

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord. 124

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford,

Farewell, dear father! [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S
House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.
[Exit Servant.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

Sec. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers. 4

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

Sec. Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me. 8

Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit Second Servant.]
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

What! is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth. 12

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look. 16

Enter JULIET.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd 20

By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,

And beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you!

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of
this: 24

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
cell;

And gave him what became of love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. 28

Cap. Why, I'm glad on't; this is well: stand
up:

This is as't should be. Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.

Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar, 32

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? 36

Lady Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her. We'll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt JULIET and Nurse.]

Lady Cap. We shall be short in our provision:

'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about. 40

And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife:

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;

I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone;

I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!

They are all forth: well, I will walk myself 45

To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. 48

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best; but, gentle nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;

For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state, 4

Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What! are you busy, ho? need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow: 8

So please you, let me now be left alone,

And let the nurse this night sit up with you;

For, I am sure, you have your hands full all

In this so sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good-night: 12

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a falut cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life: 16

I'll call them back again to comfort me;

Nurse! What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Come, vial. 20

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no; this shall forbid it: lie thou there.

[Laying down a dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar 24

Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd

Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, 28

For he hath still been tried a holy man.

I will not entertain so bad a thought.

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo 32

Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes

in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like, 37

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, 40

Where, for these many hundred years, the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they 44

say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort:

Alack, alack! is it not like that I,

So early waking, what with loathsome smells,

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the 48

earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad:

O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,

Environ'd with all these hideous fears,

And madly play with my forefathers' joints, 52

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's 43

bone,

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?

O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost 56

Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body

Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She falls upon her bed within the curtains.]

Scene IV.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spleens, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock: 4

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica;

Spare not for cost. 20

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go;

Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow

For this night's watching. 8

Cap. No, not a whit; what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt
in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Serving-men, with spits, logs, and baskets.

Now, fellow, 13

What's there?

First Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit first Serving-man.] Sirrah, fetch drier logs: 16
Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

Sec. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson,
ha! 20

Thou shalt be logger-head. Good faith! 'tis
day:

The county will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would. [Music within.] I hear him near.

Nurse! Wife! what, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up; 25

I'll go and chat with Paris. He, make haste, Make haste; the bridegroom he is come
already:

Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast, I warrant her, she;

Why, lamb! why, lady! lie, you slug-a-bed!

Why, love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride!

What! not a word? you take your pennyworths
now: 4

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The County Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little. God forgive me,
Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep! 8

I needs must wake her. Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;

He'll fright you up, I' faith. Will it not be?

What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again! 12

I must needs wake you. Lady! lady! lady!

Alas! alas! Help! help! my lady's dead!

O! well-a-day, that ever I was born.

Some aqua-vita, ho! My lord, my lady! 16

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

Lady Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

Lady Cap. O me, O me! my child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! 20

Help, help! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead;
alack the day!

Lady Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead! she's dead! 24

Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's cold;

Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;

Life and these lips have long been separated:

Death lies on her like an untimely frost 28

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse. O lamentable day!

Lady Cap. O woeful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak. 32

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.

O son! the night before thy wedding-day

Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies, 36

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;

My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,

And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's! 40

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

Lady Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw 44

In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,

But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel death hath catch'd it from my
sight! 48

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day,

That ever, ever, I did yet behold!

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! 52

Never was seen so black a day as this:

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spite'd,
slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd, 56

By cruel cruel thee quite overthrow'd!

O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why can'st thou now 60

To murder, murder our solemnity?

O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!

Dead art thou! dead! alack, my child is dead;

And with my child my joys are buried! 64

Fri. L. Peace, ho! for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself

Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all.

And all the better is it for the maid: 68

Your part in her you could not keep from

death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was her promotion,

For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd;

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd 73

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O! in this love, you love your child so ill.

That you run mad, seeing that she is well: 76

She's not well married that lives married long;

But she's best married that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stek your rosemary

On this fair corse; and, as the custom is, 80

In all her best array bear her to church;

For though fond nature bids us all lament,

Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordain'd festival. 84

Turn from their office to black funeral;

Our instruments to melancholy bells,

Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change, 88

Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go in; and, madam, go with

him;

And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare 92

To follow this fair corse unto her grave.

The heavens do lower upon you for some ill;

Move them no more by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, PARIS, and FRIAR.

First Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone. 97

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up, for, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit.

First Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be attended. 101

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians! O! musicians, 'Heart's ease,

Heart's ease!' O! an ye will have me live, play

'Heart's ease.' 104

First Mus. Why 'Heart's ease?'

Pet. O! musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe;' O! play me

some merry dump, to comfort me. 108

Sec. Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Musicians. No. 112

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

First Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith! but the gleek;

I will give you the minstrel. 115

First Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate, I will carry no erotichets:

I'll re you, I'll fa you. Do you note me? 121

First Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

Sec. Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit. 125

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men: 128

When griping grief the heart doth wound,

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,

Then music with her silver sound—

Why 'silver sound?' why 'traverse with her silver sound?' What say you, Simon Catling? 133

First Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

Sec. Mus. I say 'silver sound,' because musicians sound for silver. 140

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James

Soundpost? 140

Third Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O! I cry you mercy; you are the singer;

I will say for you. It is, 'traverse with her silver sound,' because musicians have no gold for sounding: 145

Then music with her silver sound

With speedy help doth lend redress. [Exit.

First Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same! 149

Sec. Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.

Act V.

Scene I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of

sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:

My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;

And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit 4

Lifts me above the ground with cheerful

thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead;—

Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think,—

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips, 8
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, booted.

News from Verona! How now, Balthasar? 12
Dost thou not bring me letters from the fr. r?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill if she be well. 16

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, 20
And presently took post to tell it you.
O! pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I ~~defy you stars!~~ Thou know'st my lodging; get me ink and
paper, 25

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.
Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import 28
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter; get thee gone, 32
And hire those horses: I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHASAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means: O mischief! thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men. 36
I do remember an apothecary,

And hereabouts he dwells, which late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, 40
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:

And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves 44
A beggarly account of empty boxes,

Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of pækthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show. 48
Noting this penury, to myself I said

An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caltiff wretch would sell it him. 52
O! this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.

As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. 56
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats; let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear 60
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be dischar'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir'd 64
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's
law

Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretched-
ness, 68

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back;
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich; 73
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. 76

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,

And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls, 80

Doing more murders in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh. 84
Come, cordial and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Verona. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN,

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar
John.

Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo?

Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter. 4

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town, 8
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd. 12

Fri. L. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it, here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection. 16

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,

The letter was not nice, but full of charge
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;

Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

[Exit.

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument
alone;

Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:

She will beshrew me much that Romeo

Hath had no notice of these accidents;

But I will write again to Mantua,

And keep her at my cell till Romeo come:

Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.

Scene III.—The Same. A Churchyard; in it a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof;

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.

Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,

Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground:

So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,

Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,

But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,

As signal that thou hear'st something approach.

Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee; go.

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone.

Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed
I strew,

O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones;

Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,

Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans:

The obsequies that I for thee will keep

Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.

[The Page whistles.

The boy gives warning something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,

To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?

What! with a torch?—muffle me, night, awhile.

[Retires.

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning

See thou deliver it to my lord and father.

Give me the light: upon thy life I charge thee,

Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,

And do not interrupt me in my course.

Why I descend into this bed of death,

Is partly, to behold my lady's face;

But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger

A precious ring, a ring that I must use

In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone!

But, if thou, jealous, dost return to pry

In what I further shall intend to do,

By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,

And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.

The time and my intents are savage-wild,

More fierce and more inexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship. Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good
fellow.

Bal. [Aside.] For all this same, I'll hide me hero about:

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of
death,

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,

Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Opens the tomb.

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,

That murder'd my love's cousin, with which grief

It is supposed the fair Juliet died;

And here is come to do some villanous shame

To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.—

[Comes forward.

Stop thy unhallow'd toll, vile Montague,

Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?

Condemn'd villain, I do apprehend thee:

Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;

Fly hence and leave me: think upon these gone;

Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,

Put not another sin upon my head

By urging me to fury: O! be gone!

By heaven, I love thee better than myself.

For I come hither arm'd against myself:

Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say

A madman's mercy bids thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,

And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou take me? then have at thee, boy!

[They fight.

Page. O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.

[Exit.

Par. [Falls.] O, I am slain!—If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet.

[Dies.

Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face:

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!

What said my man when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think

He told me Paris should have married Juliet:

Said he not so? or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,

To think it was so? O! give me thy hand,

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book:
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave;
A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth, 84
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying PARIS in the tomb.]

How oft when men are at the point of death, 82
Have they been merry! which their keepers call
A lighting before death: O! how may I
Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty: 93
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there. 96
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O! what more favour can I do to thee,

Than with that hand that ent thy youth in twain
To sunder his that was thine enemy? 100
Forgive me, cousin! Ah! dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous,
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps 104
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again: here, here will I remain 108
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O!
here

Will I set up my everlasting rest,
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last! 112

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on 117
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die. 120
[Dies.]

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, FRIAR LAURENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft
to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's there?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my
friend, 124

What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capel's monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master, 128
One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir.

My master knows not but I am gone hence; 132
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay then, I'll go alone. Fear comes upon me;

O! much I fear some ill unlucky thing. 136

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. [Advances.] Romeo!

Alack, alack! what blood is this which stains 140
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?

What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discoloured by this place of peace?

[Enters the tomb.]

Romeo! O, pale! Who else? what! Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah! what an unkin-
hour 145

Is guilty of this lamentable chance,
The lady stirs. [JULIET wakes.]

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be, 149

And there I am. Where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.]

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep: 152
A greater power than we can contradict

Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away.

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;

And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee 156
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;

Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare not longer stay.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.

[Exit FRIAR LAURENCE.]

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand? 161

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end.

O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop

To help me after! I will kiss thy lips; 164

Happily, some poison yet doth hang on them,

To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.]

Thy lips are warm!

First Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy: which way?

Jul. Yea, noise? then I'll be brief. O happy dagger! [Snatching ROMEO'S dagger]

This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] to bleed, rest and let me die. 170

[Falls on ROMEO'S body and dies.]

Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS.

Page. This is the place; there where the torch doth burn.

First Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard. 172
Go, some of you; whoe'er you find, attach.

[Exeunt some of the Watch.]

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried. 176

Go, tell the prince, run to the Capulets,
Raise up the Montagues, some others search:
[Exeunt others of the Watch.]

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry. 181

Re-enter some of the Watch, with BAL-THASAR.

Sec. Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

First Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Re-enter other of the Watch, with FRIAR LAURENCE.

Third Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps; 184
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

First Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and Others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

Lady Cap. The people in the street cry Romeo,

Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run 192
With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain;

And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, 196
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;

With instruments upon them, fit to open 200
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heaven!—O wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en!—for, lo, his house 204
Is empty on the back of Montague—

And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.
Lady Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague: for thou art early up, 208

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas! my liege, my wife is dead to-night;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.
What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see. 213

Mon. O thou untiaught! what manners is in this,

To press before thy father to a grave?
Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, 216

Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience. 221

Bring forth the parties of suspicion

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place 224

Doth make against me, of this dreadful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this. 228

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:
I married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd. 236

You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To County Paris: then comes she to me,
And, with wild looks bid me devise some mean
To rid her from this second marriage, 241
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her,—so tutor'd by my art,—
A sleeping potion; which so took effect 244
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave, 248
Being the time the potion's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight
Return'd my letter back. Then, all alone, 252
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo: 256
But, when I came,—some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,—here untimely lay

The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
 She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, 260
 And bear this work of heaven with patience;
 But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
 And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
 But, as it seems, did violence on herself. 264
 All this I know; and to the marriage
 Her nurse is privy: and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
 Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time, 268
 Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Ba. I brought my master news of Juliet's death; 272

And then in post he came from Mantua
 To this same place, to this same monument.
 This letter he early bid me give his father,
 And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault, 276

If I departed not and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.
 Where is the county's page that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave, 281

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did;
 And on, comes one with light to ope the tomb;

And by and by my master drew on him; 284
 And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
 And here he writes that he did buy a poison 288
 Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
 Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
 Where be these enemies?—Capulet! Montague!
 See what a scourge is laid upon your hate, 292
 That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love;

And I, for winking at your discords too,
 Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague! give me thy hand:
 This is my daughter's jointure, for no more 297
 Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more;
 For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
 That while Verona by that name is known, 300
 There shall no figure at such rate be set
 As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity! 304

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things:
 Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:

For never was a story of more woe 309
 Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

Act I.

Scene I.—Athens. A Hall in TIMON'S HOUSE.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange,

Which manifold record not catches? See,

Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power

Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O! 'tis a worthy lord.

Jed. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were,

To an untrable and continue goodness:

He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here— 12

Mer. O! pray, let's see't: for the Lord Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse 16
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good forun.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thlug slipp'd illy from me.

Our poesy is as a gun, which oozes 21

From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire! the flint

Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current files 24

Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir. Let's see your piece. 28

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace speaks his own standing! what a mental power This eye shoots forth! how big imagination 33 Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life. 36 Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it, It tutors nature: artificial strife Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the stage.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd! 40

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man, 44 Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug With amplest entertainment: my free drift Hails not particularly, but moves itself In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice 48 Infects one comma: no the course I hold; But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on, Leaving no track behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbait you. 52 You see how all conditions, how all minds—

As well of glib and slippery creatures as Of grave and austere quality—tender down Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune, Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, 57 Subdues and properties to his love and tenderness

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better 60 Than to abhor himself: even he drops down The knee before him and returns in peace Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill 64

Felign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o' the mount

Is rauk'd with all deserts, all kind of natures, That labour on the bosom of this sphere To propagate their states: amongst them all, 68 Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd, One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her; Whose present grace to present slaves and servants 72

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throut, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below, Bowing his head against the steepy mount To climb his happiness, would be well express'd In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on. All those which were his fellows but of late, Some better than his value, on the moment 80 Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance, Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear, Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, unarry, what of these? 84

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down, 88

Not one accompanying his declin'g foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:

A thousand moral paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's 92

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter LORD TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him; LUCILIUS and other servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt, 96

It means most short, his creditors most strait: Your honourable letter he desires

To those have shut him up; which, falling, Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well; 100

I am not of that feather to shake off

My friend when he must need me. I do know him

A gentlem' that well deserves a help, Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt and free him. 104

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him. I will send his ransom;

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, 108 But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour. [Exit.

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him? 113

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here or no? Luclius!
Luc. Here, at your lordship's service. 116
Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,
 By night frequents my house. I am a man
 That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
 And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd 120
 Than one which holds a trencher.
Tim. Well; what further?
Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin
 else,
 Or whom I may confer what I have got:
 The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride, 124
 And I have bred her at my dearest cost
 In qualities of the best. This man of thine
 Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord,
 Join with me to forbid him her resort; 128
 Myself have spoke in vain.
Tim. The man is honest.
Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
 His honesty rewards him in itself;
 It must not bear my daughter.
Tim. Does she love him? 132
Old Ath. She is young and apt:
 Our own precedent passions do instruct us
 What levity's in youth.
Tim. [To Luclius.] Love you the maid?
Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.
Old Ath. If in her unmarriage my consent be misg, 137
 I call the x is to witness, I will choose
 Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
 And dispossess her all.
Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
 If she be mated with an equal husband? 141
Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.
Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me
 long:
 To build his fortune I will strain a little, 144
 For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter;
 What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
 And make him weigh with her.
Old Ath. Most noble lord,
 Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. 148
Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.
Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship; never may
 That state or fortune fall into my keeping
 Which is not owed to you? 152
 [Exeunt Luclius and Old Athenian.]
Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!
Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me
 anon:
 Go not away. What have you there, my friend?
Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech 156
 Your lordship to accept.
Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man;
 For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
 He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are 160
 Even such as they give out. I like your work;
 And you shall find I like it: wait attendance
 Till you hear further from me.
Pain. The gods preserve you!
Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your
 hand; 164
 We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel
 Hath suffer'd under praise.
Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?
Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
 If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extolled, 168
 it would unclaw me quite.
Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
 As those which sell would give: but you well
 know,
 Things of like value, differing in the owners,
 Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear
 lord, 172
 You mend the jewel by the wearing it.
Tim. Well mock'd.
Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
 Which all men speak with him. 176
Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be
 child?
 Enter APEMANTUS.
Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.
Mer. He'll spare none.
Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!
Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good
 morrow; 180
 When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves
 honest.
Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.
Apem. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes. 184
Apem. Then I repent not.
Jew. You know me, Apemantus?
Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by
 thy name. 188
Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.
Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.
Tim. Whither art going?
Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.
Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.
Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law. 192
Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?
Apem. The best, for the Innocence. 200
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?
Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy 204
Pain. You're a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation:
what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords. 208

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'ldst anger ladies.

Apem. O! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension. 212

Apem. So thou apprehendest it, take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus? 216

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher! 221

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes. 224

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work,
where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feigned; he is so. 230

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour; he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord! 234

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart. 237

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore? 240

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.
Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will
not! 245

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee! 248

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,
All of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us. [Exit some Attendant]

You must needs dine with me. Go not you hence
Till I have thanked you; when dinner's done,
Show me this place. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCEBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so, there! 256

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!

That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet . . . es,

And all this courtesy! The stralu of man's bred out

Into baboon and monkey. 260

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir!
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. 264

[Exit all except APEMANTUS.]

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

First Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still onilt'st it. 268

Sec. Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools.

Sec. Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well. 272

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

Sec. Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for
I mean to give thee none. 276

First Lord. Hang thyself!

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding:
make thy requests to thy friend.

Sec. Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog! or I'll spurn thee hence. 281

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of an ass. [Exit.]

First Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in, 284

And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

Sec. Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward: no need but he repays 288
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding

All use of quittance.

First Lord. The noblest mind he carries
That ever govern'd man. 292

Sec. Lord. Long may he live in fortunes!
Shall we in?

First Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exit]

Scene II.—The Same. A Room of State in Timon's House.

*Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and Others attending;
then enter LORD TIMON, ALCEBIADES, Lords, and Senators, VENTURIUS and Attendants.
Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS discontentedly, like himself.*

Ven. Most honour'd Timon,
It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's
age,

And call him to long peace.
 He is gone happy, and has left me rich : 4
 Then, as I grateful virtue I am bound
 To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose
 help
 I deriv'd liberty.
Tim. O! by no means, 5
 Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;
 I gave it freely ever; and there's none
 Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
 If our betters play at that game, we must not dare 12
 To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.
Ven. A noble spirit.
[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.]
Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first
 To set a gloss on falut deeds, hollow welcomes,
 Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown; 17
 But where there is true friendship, there needs
 none.
 Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes
 Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.]
First Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it. 21
Apem. Ho, no! confess'd it; hang'd it, have
 you not?
Tim. O! Apemautus, you are welcome.
Apem. No, 24
 You shall not make me welcome:
 I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.
Tim. Fle! thou'rt a churl; ye've got a humour there
 Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.
 They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est; 28
 But yond man is ever angry.
 Go, let him have a table by himself,
 For he does neither affect company,
 Nor is he fit for it, indeed. 32
Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon:
 I come to observe; I giv' thee warning o't.
Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou'rt an Athenian, therefore, welcome. I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make thee silent. 38
Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should Ne'er flatter thee. O you gods! what a number
 Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not. 41
 It grieves me to see so many dip their meat
 In one man's blood; and all the madness is,
 He cheers them up too. 44
 I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
 Methinks they should invite them without knives;
 Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
 There's much example for't; the fellow that 48

Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges
 The breath of him in a divided draught,
 Is the readiest man to kill him: 't has been proved.
 If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals; 52
 Lest they should spy my wind-pipe's dangerous
 notes:
 Great men should drink with harness on their
 throats.
Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health
 go round.
Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.
Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.
 Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, 60
 Honest water, which ne'er left man I' the mire:
 This and my food are equals, there's no odds;
 Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.
 Immortal gods, I crave no self; 64
 I pray for no man but myself:
 Grant I may never prove so fond,
 To trust man on his oath or bond;
 Or a harlot for her weeping; 68
 Or a dog that seems a-sleeping;
 Or a keeper with my freedom;
 Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
 Amen. So fall to't: 72
 Rich men sin, and I eat root.
[Eats and drinks.]
 Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!
Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now. 76
Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my
 lord.
Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends. 80
Alcib. So they were bleedlug-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.
Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em and bid me to 'em. 86
First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. 91
Tim. O! no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er wished myself poorer that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O! what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes. O joy! 'em made away ere it can be born. Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks. to forget their faults,

I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weepst to make them drink,
Timon, 116

Sec. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our
eyes,

And, at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much. 120

Apem. Much! [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. How now! How now!
Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance. 124

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures. 128

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon; and to
all

That of his bounties taste! The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely 132

To gratulate thy pienteous bosom. Th' ear, taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance: 136

Music, make their welcome! [Exit CUPID.]

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're befo'rd.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way:

They dance! they are mad women. 140

Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root.

We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves;
And spend our flatteries to drink those men 144

'pon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite and envy.

Who lives that's not depraved or depraves?

Who dies that bears not one spur to their graves 148

Of their friend's gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now
Would one day stamp upon me: it has been
done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 152

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and to show their loves each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't and lustre, 156
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. 161

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord. 164
[Exeunt CUPID and Ladies.]

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord!

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More jewels yet I
There is no crossing him in 's humour; 168

Else I should tell him well, I' faith, I should,
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

[Exit.]

First Lord. Where be our men? 173

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS with the Casket.

Tim. O, my friends! I have one word to say
to you; 176

Look you, my good lord,
I must entreat you, honour me so much

As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it.
Kind my lord. 180

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate

Newly alighted, and come to visit you. 184

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour,
F f

Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near! why then another time I'll hear thee.

I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment. 188

Flav. [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver. 192

Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents

Be worthily entertained.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?

Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucilius, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds. 198

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, 201

And all out of an empty coffer:

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is, 204

Being of no power to make his wishes good. His promises fly so be, and his state

That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes For every word: he is so kind that he now 208

Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.

Well, would I were gently put out of office

Before I were forc'd out! Happier he that has no friend to feel 212

Than such as do e'en enemies exceed. I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves

Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love. 216

Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

Third Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty. Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser 220 I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

Third Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect: 224 I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;

I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords.

O! none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give; 223

Methinks, I cou'd deal kingdoms to my friends, And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich; It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, devil'd land, my lord.

First Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—

Tim. And so Am I to you.

Sec. Lord. So infinitely endear'd,— 236

Tim. Ah to you. Lights, more lights!

First Lord. The best of happiness, Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt ALCEBIADES, LORDS, &c.]

Apem. What a coil's here! Serving of becks and jutting out of bums! 240

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curst-les. 244

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories? 252

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.

Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.

Apem. So: 255 Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not then;

I'll lock thy heaven from thee. O! that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery. [Exit.

Act II.

Scene I.—Athens. A Room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore

And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold;
 If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
 Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon, 5
 Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
 And able horses. No porter at his gate,
 But rather one that smiles and still invites
 All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason 12
 Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
 Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Capl Here, sir; what is your pleasure?
Se. on your cloak, and haste you to
 'em;
 Impor in for my moneys; be not ceas'd 16
 With slight denial, nor then silence'd when—
 'Commend me to your master'—and the cap
 Plays in the right hand, thus;—but tell him,
 My uses cry to me; I must serve my turn 20
 Out of mine own; his days and thives are past,
 And my reliances on his fracted dates
 Have suit my credit: I love and honour him,
 But must not break my back to heal his finger;
 Immedlate are my needs, and my relief 25
 Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
 But find supply immedlate. Get you gone:
 Put on a most importunate aspect, 28
 A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
 When every feather sticks in his own wing,
 Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
 Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone. 32

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. 'I go, sir!' Take the bonds along with
 you,

And have the dates in compt.

Caph.

Sen.

I will, sir.

Go. [Ezeunt.

Scene II.—*The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S
 House.*

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,

That he will neither know how to maintain it,
 Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account
 How things go from him, nor resumes no care 4
 Of what is to continue: never mind

Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
 What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:
 I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting. 8

Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What!
 You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv.

It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. Here comes the lord! I fear it. 12

Caph. Here comes the lord!

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth
 again,

My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord. 17

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month: 20

My master is awak'd by great occasion

To call upon his own; and humbly prays you

That with your other noble parts you'll suit

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend, 24

I prithee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. Oue Varro's servant, my good
 lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment. 28

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas duo on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks

And past.

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my
 lord; 32

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Ezeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.

[To FLAVIUS.] Come hither: pray you, 36

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,

And the detention of long-since-due debts,

Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen 40

The time is unagreeable to this business:

Your importunacy cease till after dinner,

That I may make his lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends. 44

See them well entertained. [Exit.

Flav. Pray, draw near. [Exit.

Enter APEMANTUS and FOOL.

Caph. Stay, stay; here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us. 48

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee. 52

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool.]
Come away.

Isid. Serv. [To VAR. SERV.] There's the fool hangs on your back already. 56

Apem. No, thou stand'st single; thou'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want! 61

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why? 64

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress? 69

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth! 72

Apem. Good! gramerey.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress'
page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain!
what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably. 80

Page. Prithce, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read? 84

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd. 89

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not: I am gone. [Exit Page.]

Apem. E'en so thou outrunn'st grace.—
Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers? 97

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I, as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. 100

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool.
When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this? 108

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it, then, that we may account thee

a whoremaster and a knave; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed. 112

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a sprit; sometime't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than 't artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this sprit walks in. 12

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: a much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest. 12

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord
Timon. 12

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother and woman; sometime the philosopher
[Exit APEMANTUS and FOOL.]

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon. [Exit SERVANTS.]

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore, er-this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rerted my expense 13
As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me
At many leisures I proposed.

Tim. Go to:
Perchance some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back; 14
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thins to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord!
At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,

And say you found them in mine honesty.

When for some trifling present you have bid me Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept;

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray
you

To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate
And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, 1
Though you hear now, too late, yet now's
time,

The greatest of your having lacks a hal.

To pay your present debts.

Flav. O my good lord! the world is hut a world;
 Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
 How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true. 164

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or false-
 hood,

Call me before the exactest auditors,
 And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
 When all our offices have been oppress'd 166
 With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept
 With drunken spilt of wine, when every room
 Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with min-strely,

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock, 172
 And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.

Flav. Heavens! have I said, the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants
 This night englutted! Who is not Timon's? 176
 What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
 Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise,
 The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
 Feast-won, fast-lest; one cloud of winter showers,
 These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further;
 No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
 Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. 184
 Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
 If I would broach the vessels of my love,
 And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
 Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use 189
 As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine
 are crown'd,

That I account them blessings; for by these 192
 Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
 Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVIUS, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord! my lord! 196

Tim. I will dispatch you severally: you, to Lord Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius.
 Commend me to their loves; and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord. 204

Flav. [Aside.] Lord Lucius, and Lucullus? hum!

Tim. [To another Servant.] Go you, sir, to the senators,—

Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing,—bid 'em send o' the instant 208

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold.—

For that I knew it the most general way,—
 To them to use your signet and your name;
 But they do shake their heads, and I am here
 No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be? 213

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate
 voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry; you are honourable; 216

But yet they could have wish'd; they know not;
 Something hath been amiss; a noble nature
 May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity;
 And so, intending other serious matters, 220
 After distasteful looks and these hard fractions,
 With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods
 They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!

Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows
 Have their ingratitude in them hereditary; 225
 Their blood is eak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;
 'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;
 And nature, as it grows again toward earth, 228
 Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.

[To a Servant.] Go to Ventidius.—[To FLAVIUS.

Prithee, be not sad,

Thou art true and honest; ingenuously I speak,
 No blame belongs to thee.—[To Servant.] Ven-tidius lately 232

Buried his father; by whose death he's stepped
 Into a great estate; when he was poor,
 Imprison'd and in scarcity of friends,
 I clear'd him with five talents; greet him from
 me; 236

Bid him suppose some good necessity
 Touches his friend, which craves to be remembered

With those five talents. [Exit Servant.] [To FLAVIUS.] That had, give'these fellows
 To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe; 242
 Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exit.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Athens. A Room in LUCULLUS'
 House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCIUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men! a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I'd eant of a silver bason and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectfully welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master? 12

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius? 16

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothlug doubting your present assistance therein. 22

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas! good lord; a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and oftcu I ha' dined with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from it. 31

Re-enter Servant with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted t' e always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure. 36

Lucul. I have observ'd thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. [To the Servant.—Get you gone, sirrah.—Exit Servant.] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy iord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well. 49

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ, And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee. 52

[Throwing the money away.]

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coln be thy damnation, 56

Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart It turns in less than two nights? O you gods! I feel my master's passion. This slave unto his honour 60

Has my lord's meat in him: Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment When he is turn'd to poison? O! may diseases only work upon't, 64 And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature

Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. [Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him. 8

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for't, and show'd what necessity belong'd to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How! 16

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! Now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. 26

Enter SERVILIUS.

Servil. See, by good hap, yender's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. [To Lucius.] My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. 32

Servil. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending; how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now? 38

Servil. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents. 41

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants less,
my lord. 44

If his occasion were not virtuous,

I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servillus?

Servil. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir. 45

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servillus, now, before the gods, I am not able to do; the more beast, I say; I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind; and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servillus, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words
to him? 66

Servil. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servillus.

[Exit SERVILLUS.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit.]

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Sec. Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why this is the world's soul;
and just of the same piece 72

Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him
His friend that dips in the same c. h? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,

And kept his credit with his purse, 76

Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money

Has paid his men their wages; he ne'er drinks

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;

And yet, O! see the monstrousness of man, 80

When he looks out in an ungrateful shape;

He does deny him, in respect of his,

What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part, 84

I never tasted Timon in my life,

Nor came any of his bounties over me,

To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,

For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, 88

And honourable carriage,

Had his necessity made use of me,

I would have put my wealth into donation,

And the best half should have return'd to 92

him,

So much I love his heart. But, I perceive,

Men must learn now with pity to dispense;

For policy sits above conscience. [Re-ent.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in SERPONTUS'S HOUSE.

Enter SERPONTUS and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Ser. Must he needs trouble me in't. Hinn!

'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;

And now Ventilius is wealthy too,

Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these 4

Owe their estates unto him.

Ser. My lord,

They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for

They have all denied him.

Ser. How! have they denied him?

Have Ventilius and Lucullus denied him? 8

And does he send to me? Three? hum!

It show but little love or judgment in him:

Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrice give him over; must I take the cure

upon me? 12

He has much disgrac'd me in't; I'm angry at

him,

That might have known my place. I see no sense for't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;

For, in my conscience, I was the first man 16

That e'er receiv'd gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,

That I'll requite it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter 20

To the rest, and I 'mongst lords he thought a fool.

I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,

He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now

return, 24

And with their faint reply this answer join;

Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin.

[Exit.]

Ser. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he cross'd himself by't:

and I cannot think but in the end the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are

fled 36

Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead,

Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their

wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd

Now to guard sure their master: 40

And this is all a liberal course allows;

Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

First Var. Serr. Well met; good morrow
Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius!

What! do we meet together!

Luc. Serr. Ay, and I think
One business does command us all; for mine 4
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serr. And Sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serr. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine. 8

Luc. Serr. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serr. Not yet

Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to shiue at seven.

Luc. Serr. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter
with him:

You must consider that a prodigal course 12
Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet 16
Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord scuds now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money. 21

Hor. It is ungalst my heart.

Luc. Serr. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em. 25

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods cau
witness:

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth. 28

First Var. Serr. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns; what's yours?

Luc. Serr. Five thousand mine.

First Var. Serr. 'Tis much deep: and it should seen by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine; 32
Else, surely, his had equalled.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serr. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth? 36

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so
much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit FLAMINIUS.]

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serr. Ha! is not that his steward muffled
so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir? 44

Sec. Var. Serr. By your leave, sir.

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay,
If money were as certain as your waiting, 48

'Twere sure enough.
Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills,

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?
Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts,
And take down the interest into their gluttonousmaws 5.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly:

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end; 51

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serr. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as
you; 54

For you serve knives. [Exit.]

First Var. Serr. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter? 62

Sec. Var. Serr. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer. 66

Servil. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't; for, take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serr. Many do keep their chambers and not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health, 71

Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts.

And make a clear way to the gods.

Servil. Good god!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help! my lord's
my lord! 82

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What? are my doors oppos'd against my passage?
Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my tentative enemy, my gaol?
The place which I have feasted, does it now, 24
Like a black-bait, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serr. Put in no more, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serr. Here's mine, 28

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serr. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle, 32

Luc. Serr. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Phi. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood, 36

Luc. Serr. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? and yours?

First Var. Serr. My lord,—

Sec. Var. Serr. My lord,— 40

Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a mad-man owes 'em. [Exeunt.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves;

Creditors? devils!

Flav. My dear lord,— 48

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord. 52

Tim. So fitly! Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:

I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord!

You only speak from your distracted soul; 56
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care: go. I charge thee, luvite them all; let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Same. The Senate House.

The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have uty voice to it; the fault's

Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die;

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him. 4

Enter ALCIABIDES, attended.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

First Sen. Now, captain.

Alcib. I am a humble sultor to your virtues; For pity is the virtue of the law, 8

And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy

Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that without heed do plunge into't. 13

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Of comely virtues;

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice,— 16

An honour in him which buys out his fault,—

But, with a noble fury and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his foe; 20

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,

As if he had but prov'd an argument.

First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair; 25

Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour; which indeed 28

Is valour misbegot, and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born.

He's truly vallant that can wisely suffer

The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs 32

His outskides, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill, 36

What's jolly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord,—

First Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;

To revenge is no valour, but to bear. 40

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me,

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle.

And not endure all threats? sleep upon't, 44

And let the foes quietly cut their throats

Without repugnancy? If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Abroad? why then, women are more vallant 48

That stay at home, if bearing carry it.

And the ass more captain than the lion, the felon

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,

If wisdom be in sufferlug. O my lords! 52

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
 But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. 56
 To be in anger is impetuosity;
 But who is man that is not angry?
 Weigh but the crime with this.

Sec. Sen. You breathe in vain.

Aleib. In vain! his service done 60
 At Lacedaemon and Byzantium
 Were a sufficient briber for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Aleib. I say, my lords, he has done fair service, 64

And slain in fight many of your enemies.
 How full of valour did he bear himself
 In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds!

Sec. Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em; 68

He's a sworn rioter; he has a sin that often
 Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner:
 If there were no foes, that were enough
 To overcome him; in that beastly fury 72
 He has been known to commit outrages
 And cherish factions; 'tis infer'd to us,
 His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

First Sen. Ho dies. 76

Aleib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
 My lords, if not for any parts in him,— Though his right arm might purchase his own
 time,

And be in debt to none,—yet, more to move you,
 Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both; 81

And, for I know your reverend ages love
 Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
 My honour to you, upon his good returns. 84

If by this crime he owes the law his life,
 Why, let the war receive 't in valiant gore;
 For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

First Sen. We are for law; he dies: urge it
 no more, 88

On height of our displeasure. Friend, or brother,
 He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Aleib. Must it be so? it must not be. My
 lords,

I do beseech you, know me. 92

Sec. Sen. How!

Aleib. Call me to your remembrances. What!
Third Sen. 94

Aleib. I cannot think but your age has forgot
 me;

It could not else be I should prove so base, 96
 To sue, and be denied such common grace,
 My wounds ache at you.

First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
 'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
 We banish thee for ever.

Aleib. Banish me! 100
 Banish your dotage; banish usury,
 That makes the senate ugly.

First Sen. If, after two days' silence, Athens contain thee,

Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit, 104
 He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt Senators.]

Aleib. Now the gods keep you old enough;
 that you may live
 Only in bone, that none may look on you!
 I am worse than mad: I have kept back their foes, 103

While they have told their money and let out
 Their coin upon large interest; I myself
 Rich only in large hurts: all those for this?
 Is this the balsam that the usuring senate 112
 Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
 It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
 It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
 That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up 116
 My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
 'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;
 Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.
 [Exit.]

Scene VI.—The Same. A Room of State in Timon's House.

Music. Tables set out; Servants attending.
Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day. 3

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his now feasting. 9

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear. 14

Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provisión was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go. 20

Sec. Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.
Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces! 24

First Lord. What of you?
Third Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

[Enter Timon and Attendants.]

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:
 and how fare you? 29

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. 33

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our summer will not recompense this long stay; feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently. 39

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O! sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,— 44

Tim. Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that when your lordship this other day sent to me I was so unfortunate a beggar. 48

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in.] Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you. 56

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it? 61

First Lord. Alcibiades banished!

Sec. Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How? how? 64

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward. 68

Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

Sec. Lord. It does; but time will—and so—

Third Lord. I do conceive. 72

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.—

You great benefactors sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your dettles be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is anish in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap. 96

[The dishes uncovered are full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold, You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and lukewarm water 100

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing the water in their faces.]

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long, 104 Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites, Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears, You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man and beast the infinite malady 109

Crust you quite o'er! What! dost thou go? Soft! take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou;—

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none. 112

[Throws the dishes at them.]

What! all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.

Burn, hence! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit.

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, &c.

First Lord. How now, my lords! 117

Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?

Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap? 120

Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown.

First Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat: did you see my jewel? 125

Third Lord. Did you see my cap?

Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.

Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown. 128

First Lord. Let's make no stay.

Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

Third Lord. I feel 't upon my bones.

Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exit.

Act IV.

Scene I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall,

That grindest in those wolves, dive in the earth, And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn innocent!

Obedience fall in children! slaves and fools, 4
 Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
 And minister in their steads! To general filths
 Convert, o' the instant, green virginity!
 Do't in your parents' eyes! Ba' krupts, hold fast; 8

Rather than render back, out with your knives,
 And cut your trusters' throats! Bound servants, steal!—

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,—
 And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed; 12
 Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen,
 Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,
 With it beat out his brains! Piety, and fear,
 Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, 16
 Domestic awe, night-rest and neighbourhood,
 Instruction, manners, mysteries and trades,
 Degrees, observances, customs and laws,
 Decline to your confounding contraries, 20
 And let confusion live! Plagues incident to men,
 Your potent and infectious fevers heap
 On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold scelatica,
 Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
 As lamciy as their manners! Lust and liberty
 Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
 That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
 And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains, 28
 Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their erop
 Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath,
 That their society, as their friendship, may
 Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee
 But nakedness, thou detestable town! 33
 Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!
 Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
 The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
 The gods confound—hear me, you good gods
 all— 37

The Athenians both within and out that wall!
 And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
 To the whole race of mankind, high and low! 40
 Amen. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Athens. A Room in TIMON'S
 House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, Master steward! where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack! my fellows, what should I say
 to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, 4
 I am as poor as you.

First Serv. Such a house broke!
 So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not
 One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
 And go along with him!

Sec. Serv. As we do turn our backs 8
 From our companion thrown into his grave,
 So his familiars to his buried fortunes
 Slink all away, leave their false vows with him,

Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self, 12
 A dedicated beggar to the air,
 With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd
 house. 16

Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,

That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
 Serving alike in sorrow. Leak'd is our bark,
 And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, 20
 Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
 Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
 The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
 Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake 24
 Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and
 say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
 'We have seen better days.' Let each take some;
 [Giving them money.]

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
 more: 28

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.
 [They embrace, and part several ways.]

O! the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us.
 Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
 Since riches point to misery and contempt? 32
 Who would be so mock'd with glory? or so live,
 But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp and all what state compounds
 But only painted, like his varnish'd friends? 36
 Poor honest lord! brought low by his own heart,
 Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,
 When man's worst sin is he does too much
 good!

Who then dares to be half so kind agen? 40
 For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
 My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most accurs'd,
 Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
 Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord,
 He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat 45
 Of monstrous friends;
 Nor has he with him to supply his life,
 Or that which can command it. 48
 I'll follow and inquire him out:
 I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
 Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. [Exit.]

Searce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes;
 The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,
 To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,
 But by contempt of nature. 8
 Raise me this beggar, and deny't that lord;
 The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
 The beggar native honour.
 It is the pasture lards the rother's sides, 12
 The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
 In purity of manhood stand upright,
 And say, 'This man's a flatterer?' If one be,
 So are they all; for every grize of fortune 16
 Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
 Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;
 There's nothing level in our cursed natures
 But direct villany. Therefore, be abhorr'd 20
 All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
 His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
 Destruction fang mankind. Earth, yield me roots!
 [Digging.
 Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate 24
 With thy most operant poison! What is here?
 Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No, gods,
 I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
 Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair, 28
 Wrong right, base uoble, old young, coward valliant.
 Ha! you gods, why this? What this, you gods?
 Why, this
 Will lug your priests aud servants from your sides,
 Pluck stout men's pillows from below their head: 32
 This yellow slave
 Will knit and break religions; bless the aceurs'd;
 Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thlves,
 And give them title, knee, and approbation, 36
 With senators on the bench; this is it
 That makes the wappen'd widow wod again;
 She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores Would east the gorge at, this embalms and splees 40
 To the April day again. Come, damned earth, Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st
 odds
 Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
 Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.] Ha! a drum? thou'rt quick, 44
 But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief,
 When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:
 Nay, stay thou out for earnest.
 [Keeping some gold.
 Enter ALCEBIADES, with drum and Mfe, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.
 Alcib. What art thou there? speak. 48

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,
 For showing me again the eyes of man!
 Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,
 That art thyself a man? 52
 Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.
 For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
 That I might love thee something.
 Alcib. I know thee well,
 But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
 Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee 57
 I not desire to know. Follow thy drum:
 With man's blood paint the ground, gules,
 gules;
 Religious canons, evil laws are cruel; 60
 Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine
 Hath in her more destruction than thy sword
 For all her cherubin look.
 Phry. Thy lips rot off!
 Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns 64
 To thine own lips again.
 Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?
 Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:
 But then renew I could not like the moon; 68
 There were no suns to borrow of.
 Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?
 Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.
 Alcib. What is it, Timon? 72
 Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! If thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man! 76 Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.
 Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.
 Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed
 time.
 Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots. 80
 Timan. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the world
 Vole'd so regardfully?
 Tim. Art thou Timandra?
 Timan. Yes.
 Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee;
 Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
 Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves 85
 For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheek'd
 youth
 To the tub-fast and the diet.
 Timan. Hang thee, monster!
 Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits 88

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious hand: I have heard and griev'd
How curs'd Athens, mindless of thy worth, 93
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them.—
Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee
gone. 96

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well!

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it. 100

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest; and 104

Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains, thou wast born to conquer

My country.

Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove 109

Will o'er some high-vle'd elty hang his poison

In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one.

Pity not honour'd age for his white beard; 112

He is a usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron;

It is her habit only that is honest,
Here self's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milkpaps, 116

That through the window-bars bore at men's
eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their
mercy; 120

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut.

And mince it sans remorse. Swear against objects;

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes, 124 Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:

Mak' me confusion; and, thy fury spent, 128
Confound be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee! 132

Phr. Give us some gold, good Timon:
Timon. Hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you
sluts,

Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable,
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear 137

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues
The immortal gods that hear you, spare your oaths,

I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still;
And he whose plous breath seeks to convert you,

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,

And be no turncoats: yet may your pains, six
months, 144

Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead; some that were hang'd,

No matter; wear them, betray with them: whore
still;

Paint till a horse may mire upon your face: 148
A box of wrinkles!

Phr. Well, more gold. What then?

Timon. Believe't, that we'll do anything for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow 152

In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp
shins,

And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voce,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillts shrilly: hoar the flamen,

That seolds against the quality of flesh, 157

And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away

Of him that, his particular to foresee, 160
Smells from the generall weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald,

And let the unscarr'd draggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all,

That your activity may defeat and quell 164
The source of all erection. There's more gold;

Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!

Phr. More counsel with more money,

Timon. More mischief first; I have given you earnest. 168

Tim. More mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens!

Farewell, Timon:

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm. 173

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!
[*Drum beats. EZEUNT ALCTBIADES,
PHAYNIA, and TIMANDRA.*]

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou,
[Digging.]

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettie,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm, 183
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!
Ensear thy fertile and conceitious womb, 188
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!

Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face

Hath to the marbled mansion all above 192
Never presented! O! a root; dear thanks:
Dry up thy marrows, vines and plough-torn leas;

Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips! 197

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man! Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog 201

Whom I would imitate: consumption catch
thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but lufected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung 204
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?

This slave-like habit? and these 'books of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot 208
That ever Timon was. Shame not these words
By putting on the cunning of a carper.

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou 'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid
welcome, 216

To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again, Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself; 221

A madman so long, now a fool. What! think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt warm? will these moss'd
trees, 224

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold brook,

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste
To cure the o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures 228

Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhouse'd trunks
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee; 232
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a curst.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee. 237

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit
on 240

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou 'dst courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before; 244
The one is silling still, never complete;

The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content. 248

Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog. 252
Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd
thyself 256

In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The key precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself, 260
Who had the world as my confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of
men

At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves 264
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare

For every storm that blows; I, to bear this,
That never knew hut better, is some burden: 263
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, thine Hath made thee hard lu't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, 272
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet? 277

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, 280
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.]

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

Tim. First mend my company, take away
thyself. 284

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;

If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, 289

Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest;

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm. 292

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it. 296

Tim. Would polson were obedient and knew
my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not. 306

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now.
What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means? 312

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog. 317

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the
men. 322

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon. 325

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass; if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf; if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner; wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence.
What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation! 351

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city? 357

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again. 361

Tim. When there is nothing living hut thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus. 364

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit
upon! 364

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse!

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure. 368

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou
speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.

I'll beat thee, hut I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!
I am sick of this false world, and will love
nought

But even the mere necessities upon't.
Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave; 380
Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat
Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,
That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce 384
Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou vallant Mars!
Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,
Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visibler god, 389
That solder'st close impossibilities,
And mak'st them kiss: that speak'st with every
tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! 392
Think, thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire.

Apen. Would 'twere so:
But not till I am dead; I'll say thou'st gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?
Apen. Ay.
Tim. Thy back, I prithee.
Apen. Live, and love thy misery!
Tim. Long live so, and so die!

[Exit APEMANTUS.
I am quit.
More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor
them. 400

Enter Thieves.

First Thief. Where should he have this gold?
It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy. 405

Sec. Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure.

Third Thief. Let us unake the assay upon him: if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

Sec. Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid. 412

First Thief. Is not this he?
Thieves. Where?

Sec. Thief. 'Tis his description.
Third Thief. He; I know him. 416

All. Save thee, Timon.
Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.
Tim. Both too; and women's sons. 420

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips; 425
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each hush Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

First Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water, 428

As beasts, and birds, and fishes.
Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds,
and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con
That you are thieves profess'd, that you work
not 432

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves, Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape,

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physielian;
His antidotes are polson, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villany, do, since you protest to do't, 440
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun; 444

The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement, each thing's a thief;

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough
power 449

Have uncheek'd theft. Love not yourselves;
away!

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut
throats;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal 453
But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howso'er!

Amen. 456

Third Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Thief. 'Tis in the mallice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery. 461

Sec. Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

First Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens;
there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. [Exit Thieves.]

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!
Is yond despised and ruinous man my lord? 463
Full of decay and falling? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made! 472
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest mounds to basest ends!
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies! 476
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me than those that do!
He hath caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, 480
Still servo him with my life. My dearest master!

TIMON comes forward.

Tim. Away! what art thou?
Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?
Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all
men;
Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee. 484
Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.
Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had an honest man about me; ay all
I kept were knaves, to servo in meat to villalns.
Flav. The gods are witness, 488
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.
Tim. What! dost thou weep? Come nearer.
Then I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and disclahust 492
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Plty's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!
Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts 497
To entertain me as your steward still.
Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable? 500
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman.
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, 504
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man, mistake me not, but one;
No more, I pray, and he's a steward.
How fain would I have hated all mankind! 508
And thou redeem'st thyself: hut all, save thee,
I fell with curses.
Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me, 512

Thou mightst have sooner got another service;
For many so arrive at second masters
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, 51
If not a usuring kindness and as rich men detest
gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast 52

Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late.
You should have fear'd false times when you did
feast;

Suspect still comes when an estate is least,
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind, 52
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me, 52
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requite me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so. Thou singly honest
man, 53

Here, take: the gods out of my misery,
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from
men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none, 53
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar; give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow
'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing; be men like
blasted woods, 54

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell and thrive.

Flav. O! let me stay
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hatest Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free: 544

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee,
[Exit, severally.]

Act V.

Scene I.—The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true that he is so full of gold? 5

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum. 10

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else, you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation;
 only, I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming towards him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation; performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use.
 To promise is most courtly and fashionable;
 performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Enter TIMON from his cave.

Tim. [Aside.] Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulence.

Tim. [Aside.] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whelp thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:
 Then do we sin against our own estate,
 When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;
 When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
 Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
 Come.

Tim. [Aside.] I'll meet you at the turn.
 What a god's gold,
 That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
 Than where swine feed!
 'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st the foan,

Settlest admiral reverence in a slave:
 To thee be worship; and thy saints for aye
 Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey.
 Ft! I meet thee. [Advancing.]

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master! 60

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,

Having often of your open bounty tasted,
 Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
 Whose thankless natures—O ahhorred spirits!
 Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—

What! to you,
 Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
 To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
 With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the
 better:

You, that are honest, by being what you are,
 Make them best seen and known.

Pain. He and myself
 Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
 And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you
 service.

Tim. Ye're honest men. Ye've heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest
 men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens: thou'rt, indeed, the best;
 Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and
 smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art.

But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say you have a little fault:
 Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
 You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour
 To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
 That unghilly deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd

That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you
 gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to me, 108

I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know them.

Tim. You that way and you this, but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 112

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art two villains shall not be.

Come not near him. [To the Poet.] If thou would not reside

But where one villain is, then him abandon. 116

Hence! pack! there's gold; ye came for gold, ye slaves!

You have done work for me, there's payment: hence!

You are an alchemist, make gold of that.

Out, rascal dogs! 120

[Beats them out and then returns to his cave.]

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself

That nothing but himself, which looks like man, is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave: 124

It is our part and promise to the Athenians

To speak with Timon.

Sec. Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand, 128

Offering the fortunes of his former days,

The former man may make him. Bring us to him,

And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon! 132

Look out, and speak to friends. The Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee: Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter TIMON, from his cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd: 136

For a true word, a blister! and each false

Be as a scurfer to the root o' the tongue,

Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon. 140

Sec. Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen.

O! forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. 144

The senators with one consent of love

Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. Sen.

They confess 144

Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross;

Which now the public body, which doth seldom

Play the recanter, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 152

Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful

Than their offence can weigh down by the dram:

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth

As shall to thee block out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,

Ever to read them thine.

Tim.

You witch me in it; 160

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,

And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators

First Sen. Therefore so please thee to return with us, 164

And of our Athens—thine and ours—to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name

Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back

Of Aleibades the approaches wild; 169

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up

His country's peace.

Sec. Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword Against the walls of Athens.

First Sen.

Therefore, Timon,— 172

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus:—

If Aleibades kill my countrymen.

Let Aleibades know this of Timon,

That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens, 176

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,

Giving our holy virgins to the stain

Of contumellous, beastly, mad-brain'd war;

Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it, 180

In pity of our aged and our youth

I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,

And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not

While you have throats to answer: for myself,

There's not a whistle in the unruly camp 185

But I do prize it at my love before

The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you

To the protection of the prosperous gods, 188

As thieves to keepers.

Flav.

Stay not; all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my eplthap;
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend, 192
And nothing brings me all things. Go; live still:
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

First Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country, and am
not 196
One that rejoices in the common wrack,
As common bruit doth put it.

First Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men,—

First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them. 200

Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, 208
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them :

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades'
wrath. 208

Sec. Sen. I like this well; he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; tell my friends, 212
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, 216
And hang himself. I pray you, do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion 220
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Who once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle. 224

Lips, let sour words go by and language end:
What is a miss plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Exit.

First Sen. His discontents are unremovably
Coupled to nature.

Sec. Sen. Our hope in him is dead; let us
return,

And strain what other means is left unto us 232
In our dear peril.

First Sen. It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As fall as thy report?

Mess. I have spok'd the least;
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach. 4

Sec. Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend,
Whom, though in general part we were op-
pos'd,

Yet our old love made a particular force, 8
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which import'd
His fellowship i' the cause against your city, 12
In part for his sake mov'd.

First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Enter Senators from TIMON.

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scour-
ing

Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare. 17
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Woods. TIMON'S Cave, and a rude Tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho! No answer! What is
this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:

Some beast rear'd this; here does not live a
man. 4

Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill;

An ag'd interpreter, though young in days. 8
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.

Scene IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCI BI ADES with his Powers.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious
town

Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.

Enter Senators, on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills 4
The scope of justice; till now myself and such
As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our traverst'd arms, and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush, 8
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, 'No more;' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And pury insolence shall break his wind 12
With fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm, 16
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

Sec. Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promis'd means: 20
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have received your grief; nor are they such That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall 25
For private faults in them.

Sec. Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out:
Shame that they wanted cunning in excess 28
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By declamation, and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food 32
Which nature loathes,—take thou the destin'd tenth,

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take 36
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin 40
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

Sec. Sen. What thou wilt, 44
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile

Than hew to't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentile heart before, 48
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers 52
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own 56
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream 60
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.
Alcib. Descend, and keep your words. 64
[The Senators descend, and open the gates.]

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this inscryption, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression 68

Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:

Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked cavilifs left!

Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate: 72

Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass and stay not here thy gail.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorrd'st in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets
which 76

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory 80

Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war;
make each

Prescribe to other as each other's leech. 84
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

Act I.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:

1- this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign 4
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

8 What dost thou with thy best apparel on? 8
You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me
directly. 12

Sec. Com. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty
knave, what trade? 16

Sec. Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me; yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow! 20

Sec. Com. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork. 29

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop today?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings us home? 36

What tributaries follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, 40
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft

Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,

Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation, 45

To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,

Have you not made a universal shout, 48
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,

To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire? 52
And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?

Be gone! 56
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,

Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault 60

Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all. 64

[Exeunt all the Commoners.
See wher their basest metal be not mov'd;

They vanish tongue-tied in their gulltness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;

This way will I. Disrobe the images 68
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images 72
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about

And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too where you perceive them thick.

These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing 76

Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men

And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter, in procession, with music, CÆSAR; ANTONIUS, for the course; CALPURNIA, PORTIA, DECIVS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.

Cæs. Calphurnia!

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calphurnia!

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. Antonius! 4

Ant. Cæsar, my lord.

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touch'd in this holy chase, 3
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd.

Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.
[Music. 12

Sooth. Cæsar!
Cæs. Ha! Who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still: peace yet again! [Music ceases.

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, 16

Cry 'Cæsar.' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?
Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.
Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar. 21

Cæs. What styst thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him: pass.
[Sennet. Exeunt all but BRUTUS and

CASSIUS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?
Bru. Not I.

Cæs. I pray you, do.
Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some
part 25

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;

I'll leave you.
Cæs. Brutus, I do observe you now of late: 32

I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:

You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius, 36
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,

I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am

Of late with passions of some difference, 40
Conceptions only proper to myself,

Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,—

Among which number, Cassius, be you one.— 44
Nor construe any further my neglect,

Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cæs. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion; 46

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,

But by reflection, by some other things. 53
Cas. 'Tis just:
 And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
 That you have no such mirrors as will turn 56
 Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
 That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
 Where many of the best respect in Rome,—
 Except immortal Cæsar,—speaking of Brutus, 60
 And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
 Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.
Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,
 That you would have me seek into myself 64
 For that which is not in me?
Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to
 hear;
 And, since you know you cannot see yourself
 So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
 Will modestly discover to yourself
 That of yourself which you yet know not of.
 And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
 Were I a common laughèr, or did use 72
 To stale with ordinary oaths my love
 To every new protester; if you know
 That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
 And after scandal them; or if you know 76
 That I profess myself in banqueting
 To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.
 [Flourish and shout.
Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear the people
 Choose Cæsar for their king.
Cas. Ay, do you fear it? 80
 Then must I think you would not have it so.
Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
 well.
 But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
 What is it that you would impart to me? 84
 If it be aught toward the general good,
 Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
 And I will look on both indifferently;
 For let the gods so speed me as I love 88
 The name of honour more than I fear death.
Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
 As well as I do know your outward favour.
 Well, honour is the subject of my story. 92
 I cannot tell what you and other men
 Think of this life; but, for my single self,
 I had as lief not be as live to be
 In awe of such a thing as I myself. 96
 I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:
 We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he:
 For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
 The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores, 100
Cæsar said to me, 'Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
 Leap in with me into this angry flood,
 And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,
 Accoutred as I was, I plunged in 105
 And bade him follow; so, indeed he did.
 The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lusty sinews, throwing it aside 108
 And stemming it with hearts of controversy;
 But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cæsar cried, 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'
 I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor, 112
 Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
 The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
 Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
 Is now become a god, and Cassius is 116
 A wretched creature and must bend his body
 If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
 He had a fever when he was in Spain,
 And when the fit was on him, I did mark 120
 How he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake;
 His coward lips did from their colour fly,
 And that same eye whose bend doth awe the
 world
 Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan; 124
 Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans
 Mark him and write his speeches in their books,
 'Alas! it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'
 As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me, 128
 A man of such a feeble temper should
 So get the start of the majestic world,
 And bear the palm alone. [Flourish. Shout.
Bru. Another general shout!
 I do believe that these applauses are 132
 For some new honours that are heaped on Cæsar.
Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow
 world
 Like a Colossus; and we petty men
 Walk under his huge legs, and peep about 136
 To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
 Men at some time are masters of their fates:
 The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
 But in ourselves, that we are underlings. 140
Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that
 'Cæsar?'
 Why should that name be sounded more than
 yours?
 Write then together, yours is as fair a name;
 Sould them, it doth become the mouth as well;
 Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
 'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar.'
 Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
 Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed, 148
 That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd!
 Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
 When went there by an age, since the great flood,
 But it was fam'd with more than with one man?
 When could they say, till now, that talk'd of
 Rome, 153
 That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?
 Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,
 When there is in it but one only man. 156
 O! you and I have heard our fathers say,

jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim:
How I have thought of this and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present, 164

I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say

I will with patience hear, and find a time 168
Both meet to hear and answer such high things.

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome 172
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad
That my weak words have struck but thus much
show

Of fire from Brutus. 176

Bru. The games are done and Caesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day. 180

Re-enter CÆSAR and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calphurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero 184
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonius! 189

Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights.

Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look; 193

He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous;

He is a noble Roman, and well given. 196

Cas. Would he were fatter! but I fear him not:

Yet if my name were liable to fear,

I do not know the man I should avoid

So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;

He is a great observer, and he looks 201

Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no plays,

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;

Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort 204

As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit.

That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.

Such men as he be never at heart's ease

Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,

And therefore are they very dangerous. 209

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd

Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Sennet. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.
CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd
to-day,

That Cæsar looks so sad. 216

Casca. Why you were with him, were you
not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him;
and, being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too. 224

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony. 232

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets; and, as I told you, he put it by once;
but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again;

then he put it by again; but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time: he put it the third time by; and still as he refused it the rabblement shouted and clapped their chopp'd hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and utter'd such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swoonded and fell down at it; and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you: what did Cæsar swoond for? 232

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like; he hath the fallingsickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,
and honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that;
but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the rag-rag people do not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeas'd them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true
man. 243

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Caesca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, 'Alas! good soul,' and forgave him with all their hearts; but there's no need to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that he came, thus sad, away?

Caesca. Ay.

Caes. Did Cicero say any thing?

Caesca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Caes. To what effect?

Caesca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too; Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Caes. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Caesca. No, I am promised forth.

Caes. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Caesca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Caes. Good; I will expect you.

Caesca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit.]

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Caes. So is he now in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise,

However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,

Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you;

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you; or, if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Caes. I will do so: till then, think of the world. [Exit BRUTUS.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,

Thy honourable metal may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd: therefore 'tis meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes;

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?

Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:

If I were Brutus now and he were Cæsar

He should not honour me. I will this night,

In several hands, in at his windows throw,

As if they came from several citizens,

Writings all tending to the great opinion

That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely

Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:

And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;

For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CAESCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Caesca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero!

I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds

Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen

The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,

To be exalted with the threatening clouds:

But never till to-night, never till now,

Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.

Either there is a civil strife in heaven,

Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,

Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Caesca. A common slave—you know him well by sight—

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides,—I have not since put up my sword,—

Against the Capitol I met a lion,

Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,

Without annoying me; and there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,

Transformed with their fear, who swore they

Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.

And yesterday the bird of night did sit,

Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,

Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say

'These are their reasons, they are natural;'

For, I believe, they are portentous things

Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time;

But men may construe things after their fashions,

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Caesca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius

Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Casca: this disturbed

sky

Is not to walk in.

Caesca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICERO.]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so? 44

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me unto the perilous night, And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, 45 I have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone; And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it. 52

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble

And when the most mighty gods by tokens send

Such dreadful heralds to astonish us. 56

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want,

Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,

And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, 60

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause

Why all these fires, why all these gilding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind;

Why old men, fools, and children calculate; 65

Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,

To monstrous quality, why, you shall find 68

That heaven hath infused them with these spirits

To make them instruments of fear and warning

Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man 72

Most like this dreadful night,

That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol,

A man no mightier than thyself or me 76

In personal action, yet prodigious grown

And fearful as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now 80

Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;

But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;

Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish. 84

Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;

And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,

In every place, save here in Italy. 88

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:

Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat: 92

Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,

Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,

Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;

But life, being weary of those worldly bars, 96

Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides,

That part of tyranny that I do bear

I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.

Casca. So can I: 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears

The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?

Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf 104

But that he sees the Romans are but sheep;

He were no lion were not Romans hind.

Those that with haste will make a mighty fire

Begin it with weak straws; what trash is Rome,

What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves 108

For the base matter to illuminate

So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief!

Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this

Before a willing bondman; then I know 112

My answer must be made: but I am arm'd,

And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man 116

That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand:

Be factious for redress of all these griefs,

And I will set this foot of mine as far

As who goes furthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made. 120

Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already

Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans

To undergo with me an enterprise

Of honourable-dangerous consequence; 124

And I do know by this they stay for me

In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,

There is no stir, or walking in the streets;

And the complexion of the element 128

In favour's like the work we have in hand,

Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna; I do know him by his gait: He is a friend.

Enter CINNA.

Cinna, where haste you so? 133

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus

Libert?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate

To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is

this! 137

There's two or three of us have seen strange

Cin. Yes, you are.

O Cassius! If you could 140

But win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,

Where Brutus may hut find it; and throw this

In at his window; set this up with wax 145

Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done,

Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find

us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there? 148

Cin. All hut Metellus Cimber; and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,

And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

[Exit CINNA.]

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day 153

See Brutus at his house: three parts of him

Is ours already, and the man ent're

Upon the next encounter yields him ours. 156

Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's

hearts:

And that which would appear offence in us,

His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need

of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,

For it is after midnight; and ere day

We will awake him and be sure of him. 164

[Exeunt.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Rome. BRUTUS' Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,

Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!

I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. 4

When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! what,

Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:

When it is lighted, come and call me here. 8

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Bru. It must be by his death: and, for n.

part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,

But for the general. He would be crown'd: 12

How that might change his nature, there's the

question:

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;

And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—

that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, 16

That at his will he may do danger with.

The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins

Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of

Cæsar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd 20

More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,

Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;

But when he once attains the upmost round, 24

He then unto the ladder turns his back,

Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:

Then, lest he may prevent. And, since the quarrel 28

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,

Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,

Would run to these and these extremities;

And therefore think him as a serpent's egg 32

Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,

And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.

Searching the window for a flint, I found 36

This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure

It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.

Is not to-morrow, boy, the Ides of March? 40

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me

word.

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air 44

Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter.]

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake and see thyself.

Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake! 48

Such instigations have been often dropp'd

Where I have took them up.

'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I p'cease it out:

Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What,

Rome? 52

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome

The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.

'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated

To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee

promise; 56

If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st

Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.]

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,

I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing

And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream :
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,

Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them? 72

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks.

That by no means I may discover them

By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter. 76

[Exit LUCIUS.]

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,

When evils are most free? O! then by day

Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough 80

To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;

Hide it in smiles and affability:

For if thou path, thy native semblance on,

Not Erebus itself were dim enough 84

To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night. 88

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here

But honours you; and every one doth wish

You had but that opinion of yourself 92

Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; 96

And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? 100

[BRUTUS and CASSIUS whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O! pardon, sir, it doth; and you grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day. 102

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;

Which is a great way growing on the south,

Weighing the youthful season of the year. 104

Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire; and the high east stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one. 111

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men

The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,

If these be motives weak, break off betimes, 114

And every man hence to his idle bed;

So let high-sighted tyranny range on,

Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,

As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 118

To kindle cowards and to steel with valour

The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen

What need we any spur hut our own cause

To prick us to redress? what other bond 122

Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word

And will not patter? and what other oath

Than honesty to honesty engag'd,

That this shall be, or we will fall for it? 126

Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,

Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls

That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear

Such creatures as men doubt; hut do not stain

The even virtue of our enterprise, 130

Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,

To think that our cause or our performance

Did need an oath; when every drop of blood 134

That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,

Is guilty of a several bastardy,

If he do break the smallest particle

Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. 140

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O! let us have him; for his silver hairs

Will purchase us a good opinion 144

And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:

It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands;

Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,

But all be buried in his gravity. 148

Bru. O! name him not: let us not break with him;

For he will never follow any thing

That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out. 152

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is unmeet,

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, 156
 Should outlive Cæsar: we shall find of him
 A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
 If he improve them, may well stretch so far
 As to annoy us all; which to prevent, 160
 Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Calus
 Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
 Like wrath in death and envy afterwards; 164
 For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Calus.
 We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
 And in the spirit of men there is no blood: 168
 O! then that we could come by Cæsar's spirit,
 And not dismember Cæsar. But, alas!

Cæsar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends,
 Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully; 172
 Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
 Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
 And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
 Stir up their servants to an act of rage. 176
 And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
 Our purpose necessary and not envious;
 Which so appearing to the common eyes,
 We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. 180
 And, for Mark Antony, think not of him;
 For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm
 When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him;
 For in the engrafted love he bears to Cæsar— 184

Bru. Alas! good Cassius, do not think of
 him:

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
 Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar:
 And that were much he should; for he is given
 To sports, to wildness, and much company. 189

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not
 die:

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.
 [Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace! count the clock.
Cas. The clock hath stricken three. 192

Treb. 'Tis time to part.
Cas. But it is doubtful yet

Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;
 For he is superstitious grown of late,
 Quite from the main opinion he held once 196
 Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.

It may be, these apparent prodgites,
 The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
 And the persuasion of his augurers, 200
 May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,
 I can o'erway him; for he loves to hear
 That unicorns may be betray'd with trees, 204
 And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
 Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
 He says he does, being then most flattered. 208
 Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent,
 And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch
 him. 212

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the utter-most?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Cains Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
 Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey;

I wonder none of you have thought of him. 217

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
 He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. 220

Cas. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true
 Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
 Let not our looks put on our purposes, 225

But bear it as our Roman actors do,
 With untir'd spirits and formal constancy:

And so good morrow to you every one. 228

[Exeunt all except BRUTUS.

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
 Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:

Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
 Which busy care draws in the brains of men; 232
 Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit
 Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently,
 Brutus, 237

Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper
 You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,

Musing and sighing, with your arms across, 240
 And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
 You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.

I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your
 head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot; 244
 Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
 But, with an angry wature of your hand,

Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
 Fearing to strengthen that impatience 248

Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
 Hoping it was but an effect of humour,

Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
 It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep, 252

And could it work so much upon your shape
 As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,

I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
 Make me acquainted with your cause of grief. 256

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is
 all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed. 260

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed 264
To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place, 269
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow 272
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
Why are you heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been 276
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets 281
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort of limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs 285

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops 289
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman, hut, withal, 292
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife;
I grant I am a woman, but, withal,
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex, 296
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience
And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods!

Render me worthy of this noble wife.

[Knocking within.]

Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake 305
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the character of my sad brows. 308
Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA.]

Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Bru. Calus Ligarius, that Metellus spoke of.
Boy, stand aside. Calus Ligarius! how? 312

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O! what a time have you chose out brave Calus,

To wear a kerechief. Would you were not sick

Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour. 317

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand
Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome! 321
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!

Thou, like an exorist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, 324

And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick? 328

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Calus,

I shall unfold to thee as we are going
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fired I follow you, 333

To do I know not what; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then. [Exit

Scene II.—The Same. CÆSAR'S HOUSE.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR
in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord!

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you Cæsar? Think you to walk forth? 3

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

 things that

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished. 12
Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
 Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
 Recounts most horrid slights seen by the watch.
 A lioness hath whelped in the streets; 17
 And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead;
 Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
 In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
 Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol; 21
 The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
 Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
 And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the
 streets. 24
 O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
 And I do fear them.
Cæs. What can be avoided
 Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
 Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
 Are to the world in general as to Cæsar. 29
Cal. When beggars die there are no comets
 seen;
 The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.
Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths; 32
 The vallaut never taste of death but once.
 Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
 It seems to me most strange that men should
 fear;
 Seeing that death, a necessary end, 36
 Will come when it will come.
 Re-enter Servant.
 What say the augurers?
Serv. They would not have you to stir forth
 to-day.
 Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
 They could not find a heart within the beast. 40
Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
 If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
 No, Cæsar shall not; danger knows full well 44
 That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
 We are two lions litter'd in one day,
 And I the elder and more terrible:
 And Cæsar shall go forth.
Cal. Alas! my lord, 48
 Your wisdom is consent'd in confidence.
 Do not go forth to-day; call it my fear
 That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
 We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house, 52
 And he shall say you are not well to-day:
 Let me upon my knee, prevail in this.
Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
 And, for thy humour, I will stay at home. 56
 Enter DECIVS.
 Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy
Cæsar;

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.
Cæs. And you are come in very happy time
 To bear my greeting to the senators, 61
 And tell them that I will not come to-day:
 Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser;
 I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius. 64
Cal. Say he is sick.
Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
 Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far
 To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
 Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come. 68
Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some
 cause,
 Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.
Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not come;
 That is enough to satisfy the senate: 72
 But for your private satisfaction,
 Because I love you, I will let you know:
 Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
 She dreamt to-night she saw my statue, 76
 Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
 Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
 Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it:
 And these does she apply for warnings and por-
 tents, 80
 And evils imminent; and on her knee
 Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.
Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
 It was a vision fair and fortunate: 84
 Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
 In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
 Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
 Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
 For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. 89
 This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.
Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.
Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say: 92
 And know it now: the senate have concluded
 To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
 If you shall send them, word you will not come,
 Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock 96
 Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
 'Break up the senate till another time,
 When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better
 dreams.'
 If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper too
 'Lo! Cæsar is afraid?'
 Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love
 To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
 And reason to my love is liable. 104
Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia!
 I am ashamed I did yield to them.
 Give me my robe, for I will go:
 Enter PUBLIUS, DACTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS,
 CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.
 And look where Publius is come to fetch me. 108
Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.
 G g

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.
 What! Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
 Good-morrow, Casca. Calpurnius Ligarius,
 Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy 112
 As that same ague which hath made you lean.
 What is't o'clock?

Bru. Cæsar 'tis strucken eight.
Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

Sen. Anton. That revels long o' nights, 116
 I know'st standing up. Good-morrow, Antony.
Ant. So to meet most noble Cæsar.

Ant. Bid them prepare within:
 I am to be thus visited for.
 Now Cimber says, Metellus, what, Trebonius?
 I have an hour's talk in store for you; 121
 Remember that you call on me to-day:
 Be near me that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will:—[Aside]; and so near will
 I be, 124
 That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, away, and taste some wine
 with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Bru. [Aside.] That every like is not the same,
 O Cæsar! 128

The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon.
 [Exit].

Scene III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper

Art. Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metel-lus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wrong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and 'tis bent against Cæsar. If thou be'st not immortal look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, 9

ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass alone.
 And as a suitor will I give him this.
 My heart laments that virtue cannot see
 Out of the teeth of emulation.
 If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou may'st live;
 If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit]

Scene IV.—The Same. Another part of the same Street, before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;
 Stay not to answer me, but get the news
 Whether 'tis that thou stay?

Luc. To know my master's business,

Por. I would have had thee there, and here
 again.

Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st
 there.

O constancy! be strong upon my side;
 Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
 tongue.

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might
 How hard it is for women to keep counsel!

Art thou here yet?

Luc. Yes, madam. What shall Run to the Capitol, and no thing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?
Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord is well.

For he went sickly forth; and take good note
 What Cæsar saith, what suitors press to him.

Hark, boy! what noise is that?
Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prithee, listen well.
 I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
 And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither fellow: which way thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What 't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take
 stand,

To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady: it will please Cæsar.

To be so good to answer to hear me,
 I shall beseech you to give me leave.

 toward him?

 that I may see him.

 The heavens spread thee in this enterprise.

Sure, the boy heard me. Brutus hath a suit
 That Cæsar will not grant. I grow faint.

and bring me word. I doth say to thee.

Act III.

Scene I. Before the Capitol, the senate sitting above.

Antony of People; a young man ARTEMIUS
with a sword Enter CAESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, DECELIUS METELLUS,
 POPILIUS LENA, and OCTAVIUS
 CAESAR. He says he will march
 South. A. Caesar
 Art. He. Caesar
 Dec. Trebonius

 not, Caesar; read it instantly.
 Is the fellow mad?
 Sirrah, give place.
 urge you your petitions in the Capitol.
 up to the Senate-House, the rest
 All the Senators rise.
 our enterprise to-day may
 What enterprise, Popilius?
 Fare you well.
 [Advances to CAESAR.
 What says Popilius Lena?
 He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.
 our purpose is discovered.
 Bru. Look, how he makes to Caesar: mark
 him.
 Ca. Casca, be sudden, for we fear presention.
 Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, 20
 Caesar never shall turn back,
 I'll slay myself.
 Cassius, be constant:
 us Lena speaks not of our purposes;
 For look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.
 Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look
 you, Brutus,
 He draws Mark Antony out of the way.
 Ezeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS. CAESAR and the Senators take their seats.
 Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
 And presently prefer his suit to Caesar. 28

Br. Ho is address'd; press near and second
 him.
 Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your
 hand.
 Casca. Are you all ready? What is now amiss,
 That Caesar and his senate must redress? 32 Met. Most high, most mighty, and most pulssant Caesar,
 Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
 A humble suit,— [Kneeling.
 Cas. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
 These couchings and these lowly courtesies, 36
 Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
 And turn pre-ord'ance and first decree
 Into the law of lenity. Be not fond,
 To think that time bears such rebel blood 40
 That will be thine from the true quality
 With that which killeth fools; I mean sweet
 words,
 Low-crook'd curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.
 Thy brother by decree is banish'd: 44
 If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
 I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
 Kuow, Caesar doth not wrong, nor without cause
 Will he be satisfied. 48
 Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
 To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear
 For the repeal of my banish'd brother?
 Bru. I would, but not in flattery.
 Cas. 52
 Desiring to see Publius Cimber may
 Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
 Cas. What
 Cas. As low as to thy brother Cassius fall, 56
 To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
 Cas. I could be better mov'd if I were as you;
 If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;
 But I am constant as the northern star, 60
 Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
 There is no fellow in the firmament.
 The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
 They are all fire and every one doth shine, 64
 But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
 So, in the world; 'tis furnished well with men,
 And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
 Yet in the number I do know but one 68
 That unassailable holds on his rank,
 Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,
 Let me a little show it, even in this,
 That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
 And constant do remain to keep him so. 73
 Cin. O Caesar,—
 Cas. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus!
 Dec. Great Caesar,—
 Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?
 Casca. Speak, hands, for me! 76
 [They stab Caesar.
 Cas. Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Caesar! [Dies.
 Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out, 80

'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'

Bru. People and senators be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still; ambition's debt is paid.

Cæsa. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too, 84

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this unthly.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's

should chance— 88

Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the
people, 92

Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed
but we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tri. Fled to his house amaz'd, 96
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run
As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fites, we will know your pleasures.
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon. 100

Cæsa. Why, he that cuts off twenty years
of life

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd 104
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans,
stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords;
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads, 109
Let's all cry, 'Peace, freedom, and liberty!'

Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages
hence

Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er, 112
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be, 116
So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels

With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome, 121

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me
kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down; 124
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:

Brutus is noble, wise, vallant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;

Say I love Brutus, and I honour him; 128
Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd

him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd

How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death, 132
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead

So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus

Thorough the hazards of this untrod state 136
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and vallant Roman;

I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place, 140
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,

Depart untouched.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.]

Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may; but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my forgiving still 145
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome,
Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,

Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,

Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit 153

As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made

rich

With the most noble blood of all this world, 156
I do beseech ye, if ye bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die: 160

No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,

The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful; 169

And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony; 173

Our arms, in strength of mallee, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence. 176

Cæs. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear, 180
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand: 184
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valliant Cæsar, yours; 188
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas what shall I say?

My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer. 193

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O! 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace, 197
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?

Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.

Parlon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart; 204
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
stand,

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy leth
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee. 208
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie!

Cæs. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cæsar shall say this; 212
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cæs. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends? 216
Of small we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed

Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all, 220
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons

Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard 224
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover sultor that I may Produce his body to the market place; 228
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cæs. Brutus, a word with you, [Aside to BRUTUS.] You know not what you do;
do not consent 232

That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?

Bru. By your pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first, 236
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Cæsar shall 240
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cæs. I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's
body. 244

You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
And say you do't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all 248
About his funeral; and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;

I do desire no more. 252

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

[Exeunt all but ANTONY.]

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers;
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man 256
That ever lived in the tide of times.

Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy; 264
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,

That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds: 270

And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war; 273
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth

With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not? 276

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;

And bid me say to you by word of mouth— 280

[Seeing the body.]

O Caesar!—

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, 284
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd:

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 289

He hence and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile;

Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse into the market-place; there shall I try, 292

In my oration, how the people take

The cruel issue of these bloody men;

According to the which thou shalt discourse

To young Octavius of the state of things. 296

Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt, with CAESAR'S body.]

Scene II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Cassius, go you into the other street,

And part the numbers. 4

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;

Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;

And public reasons shall be rendered

Of Caesar's death.

First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak. 8

Sec. Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons.

When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens;

BRUTUS goes into the pulpit.]

Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last. 12

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die a thousand slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Citizens. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar, than you shall do Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, when in he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CAESAR'S body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony, who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart: that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live! live!

First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Sec. Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Cit. Let him be Caesar.

Fourth Cit. Caesar's better part shall be crown'd in Brutus.

First Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

Sec. Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speak.

First Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart: and, for my sake, stay here with Antony.

Do grace to Caesar's corpse, and grace his

Tending to Caesar's glories, which Mark Antony

By our permission, is allowed to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart,

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit Antony.]

First Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;

We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you. [Goes up.]

Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

Third Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake, He finds himself beholding to us all. 75

Fourth Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

Third Cit. Nay, that's certain: We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him. 76

Sec. Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Citizens. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears:

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. 80

The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious; 84

If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men.—
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says he was ambitious; 92

And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious? 96

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man. 100

You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; 104

And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him? 108

O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, 112

And I must pause till it come back to me.

First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

Sec. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cæsar has had great wrong.

Third Cit. Has he, masters? 116

I fear there will a worse come in his place.

Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear able it. 120

Sec. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world; now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence:
O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, 128

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are Honourable men.
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men. 133

But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
I found it in his closet, 'tis his will.
Let but the commons hear this testament— 136

Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, 140

And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.

Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will; read it, Mark Antony. 144

Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar, 149

it will inflame you, it will make you mad.
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O! what would come of it.

Fourth Cit. Read the will! we'll hear it, Antony; 153

You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?
I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it. 156

I fear I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

Citizens. The will! the testament! 160

Sec. Cit. They were villains, murderers. The will! read the will.

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
And let me show you him that made the will. 164

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Citizens. Come down.

Sec. Cit. Descend. [ANTONY comes down.]
