 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
 That day he overcame the Nervii.
 Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through:
 See what a rent the envious Casca made: 180
 Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
 And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
 Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
 As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd 184
 If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;
 For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:
 Judge, O you gods! how dearly Cæsar lov'd
 him.
 This was the most unkindest cut of all; 188
 For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
 Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
 Quite vanquish'd him; then hurst his mighty
 heart;
 And, in his mantle muffing up his face, 192
 Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
 Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.
 O! what a fall was there, my countrymen;
 Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, 196
 Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
 O! now you weep, and I perceive you feel
 The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.
 Kind souls, what! weep you when you but behold 200
 Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here,
 Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.
First Cit. O piteous spectacle!
Sec. Cit. O noble Cæsar! 204
Third Cit. O woeful day!
Fourth Cit. O traitors! villains!
First Cit. O most bloody sight!
Sec. Cit. We will be revenged. 208
Citizens. Revenge!—About!—Seek!—Burn!—
 Fire!—Kill!—Slay! Let not a traitor live.
Ant. Stay, countrymen!
First Citizen. Peace there! Hear the noble
 Antony. 212
Sec. Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
 To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
 They that have done this deed are honourable:
 What private griefs they have, alas! I know not, 217

That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,
 And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
 I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
 I am no orator, as Brutus is; 221
 But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
 That love my friend; and that they know full well
 That gave me public leave to speak of him. 224
 For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
 Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
 To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
 I tell you that which you yourselves do know,
 Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor 228 dumb mouths,
 And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
 And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
 Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
 In every wound of Cæsar, that should move 233
 The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
Citizens. We'll mutiny.
First Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
Third Cit. Away, then! come, seek the conspirators. 237
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me
 speak.
Citizens. Peace, ho!—Hear Antony,—most noble Antony.
Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what. 240
 Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?
 Alas! you know not; I must tell you then,
 You have forgot the will I told you of.
Citizens. Most true. The will! let's stay and hear the will. 244
Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.
 To every Roman citizen he gives,
 To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
Sec. Cit. Most noble Cæsar! we'll revenge his death. 248
Third Cit. O royal Cæsar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
Citizens. Peace, ho!
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
 His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
 On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
 And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
 To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves. 256
 Here was a Cæsar! when comes such another?
First Cit. Never, never! Come, away, away!
 We'll burn his body in the holy place,
 And with the brands fire the traitor's houses.
 Take up the body. 261
Sec. Cit. Go fetch fire.
Third Cit. Pluck down benches.
Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing. [Exeunt Citizens, with the body.]
Ant. Now let it work: mischief, thou art afoot, 265
 Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he? 263

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry.

And in this mood will give us any thing. 272

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people.

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unlucky charge my fantasy;

I have no will to wander forth of doors,

Yet something leads me forth. 284

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name?

Sec. Cit. Whither are you going?

Third Cit. Where do you dwell?

Fourth Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor? 29

Sec. Cit. Answer every man directly.

First Cit. Ay, and briefly.

Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely. 32

Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely
I say, I am a bachelor. 35

Sec. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly. 41

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

First Cit. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend. 44

Sec. Cit. That matter is answered directly.

Fourth Cit. For your dwelling, briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly. 48

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

Sec. Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a con-spirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet. 53

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Sec. Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going. 59

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! firebrands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away! go! 43
[Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Rome. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, 4
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine 8

How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What! shall I find you here?

Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

[Exit LEPIDUS.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, 12
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him;

And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,
In our black sentence and proscription. 17

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than
you:

And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, 20

He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,

To groan and sweat under the business,

Either led or driven, as we point the way;

And having brought our treasure where we will,

Then take we down his load, and turn him off,

Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will;

But he's a tried and valiant soldier. 28

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that

I do appoint him store of provender.

It is a creature that I teach to fight,

To wind, to stop, to run directly on, 32

His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;

A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds 36

On sject orts, and imitations,

Which, out of use and staid by other men,

Begin his fashion: do not talk of him

But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40
 Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers; we must straight make head;
 Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
 Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out; 44
 And let us presently go sit in council,
 How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
 And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake, 45
 And bay'd about with many enemies;
 And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
 Millions of mischiefs. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Camp near Sardis. Before BRUTUS' Tent.

Drum. Enter BAUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius! Is Cassius near?

Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come 4
 To do you salutation from his master.

[PINDARUS gives a letter to BRUTUS.]

Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,

In his own charge, or by ill officers,
 Hath given me some worthy cause to wish 3
 Things done, undone; but, if he be at hand,
 I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt
 But that my noble master will appear
 Such as he is, full of regard and honour. 12

Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
 How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;

But not with such familiar instances, 16
 Nor with such free and friendly conference,
 As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
 A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
 When love begins to sticken and decay, 20
 It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
 But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
 Make gallant show and promise of their mettle; 24

But when they should endure the bloody spur,
 They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
 Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd; 28

The greater part, the horse in general,
 Are come with Cassius.

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.
 [Low march within.]

March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho! 32

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

First Sold. Stand!

Sec. Sold. Stand!

Third Sold. Stand! 36

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs; 40

And when you do them—

Bru. Cassius, be content;

Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.
 Before the eyes of both our armies here,

Which should perceive nothing but love from us, 44

Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
 Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
 And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
 Bid our commanders lead their charges off 48
 A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man

Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. 52

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

Enter BAUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
 For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
 Wherein my letters, praying on his side, 4
 Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a ease.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
 That every nice offence should bear his comment. 8

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
 Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
 To sell and mart your offices for gold
 To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm!
 You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
 Or, by the gods, this speech were else your lust.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
 And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!
 Remember March, the Ides of March remember:

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?

What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, 20
And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, 24
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me; 28
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius. 32

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health; tempt me no further. 36

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak,
Must I give way and room to your rash cholera?
Shall I be frighted when a madman stares? 40
Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;
Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge? 44

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do spill you; for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true, 52
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;
I said an elder soldier, not a better: 56
Did I say, 'better'?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have moved me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not!

Bru. No.

Cas. What! durst not tempt him!

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my
love;

I may do that I shall be sorry for. 64

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind, 68
Which I respect not. I did send to you For certain sums of money which you denied
me;

For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather die my heart, 72
And drop my blood for Caesar's, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions, 76
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart. 84

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults, 88

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
come, 92

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is away of the world;
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O! I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes. This is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within a heart 100
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:

Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know, 104
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger:

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius! you are yok'd with a lamb 108

That carries anger as the flint bears fire,

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,

And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd 112

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand. 116

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Bru. What's the matter?

Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with me,

When that rash humour which my mother gave me

Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth
 When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, 121

He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so. [Noise within.]

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet
 They be alone. 125

Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS.

Cas. How now! What's the matter? 128

Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;

For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cycle rhyme!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,
 hence! 133

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:

What should the wars do with these jiggling
 fools? 136

Companion, hence!

Cas. Away, away! be gone.

[Exit Poet.]

Bru. Lucillus and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala
 with you, 140

Immediately to us.

[Exit LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.]

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Exit LUCIUS.]

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use 144
 If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead. 146

Cas. How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!
 Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
 And grief that young Octavius with Mark

Antony 152

Have made themselves so strong;—for with her
 death

That tidings came:—with this she fell distract,
 And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods! 156

Enter LUCIUS, with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.]

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.
 Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup; 160

I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

[Drinks.]

Bru. Come in, Titinius. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Welcome, good Messala.

Now sit we close about this taper here,

And call in question our necessities. 164

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.
 Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius and Mark Antony
 Come down upon us with a mighty power, 168

Bending their expedition towards Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry, 172

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus.

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
 Mine speak of seventy senators that died 176

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one!

Mes. Cicero is dead,

And by that order of proscription.

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala. 181

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours? 184

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

en I cross'd

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala: 189

With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure. 192

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Phillippi presently? 196
Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This is it:

'Tis better that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still, 200
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better,

The people 'twixt Phillippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection; 204

For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,

By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd;

From which advantage shall we cut him off, 209
If at Phillippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.
Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside, 212

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brini-full, our cause is ripe;

The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline. 216

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries. 220

On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi. 224

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,

And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good-night: 228
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

My gown. [Exit LUCIUS.

Farewell, good Messala:
Good-night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,

Good-night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother! 232

This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good-night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother. 236

Tit. } Good-night, Lord Brutus.
Mes. }

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exit CASSIUS, TITINIUS, and MESSALA.]

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What! thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd. 240

Call Claudius and some other of thy men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro! and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord? 244

Bru. I pray you, sir, lie in my tent and sleep:
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure. 248

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs;

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here 's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket of my gown. 252

[VARRO and CLAUDIUS lie down.]

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it
me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two? 256

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might; 260

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep
again;

I will not hold thee long; if I do live, 264
I will be good to thee. [Music, and a Song.]

This is a sleepy tune: O murderous slumber!
Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good-
night; 268

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good-night.

Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd
down 272

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of CAESAR.

How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes here?

I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition. 276
It comes upon me. Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare?
Speak to me what thou art. 280

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.

[Ghost vanishes.]

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest: 285

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.

Boy, Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!

Claudius! 288

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.

Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord! 292

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord. 296

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah, Claudius!
Fellow thou! awake!

Var. My lord!

Clau. My lord! 300

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. } Did we, my lord?

Clau. } Ay: saw you any thing?

Bru. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother
Cassius. 304

Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var. } It shall be done, my lord.

Clau. } [Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

O. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;

It proves not so; their battles are at hand:
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have outage;

But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

O. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

O. I do not cross you; but I will do so. 308

[March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army.
LUCIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

O. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on the charge.

Make forth; the generals would have some words.

O. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: is it so, country men?

O. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes.
Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying, 'Long live! hail, Caesar!'

Cas. Antony, 312

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Bru. O! yes, and soundless too;

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind

Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers! 4

Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
if Cassius might have rul'd.
Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat, 48
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look;
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never, till Caesar's three-and-thirty wounds 53
Be well averg'd; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.
Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors'
hands, 56
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.
Bru. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable. 60
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masquer and a reveller.
Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth. 64
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.
[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.
Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard! 68
Bru. Ho!
Lucilius! hark, a word with you.
Lucil. My lord?
[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart.
Cas. Messala!
Mes. What says my general?
Cas. Messala,
This is my birth-day: as this very day 72
Was Cassius born. Come me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness that against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
I'pon one battle all our liberties. 76
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion; now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign 80
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away and gone, 84
And in their stead do ravens, crows, and kites
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which 88
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mes. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly.

For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly. 92
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall. 97
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then, determin'd to do? 100
Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself; I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile, 104
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.
Cas. Then, if we lose this battle, 108
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?
Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome; 112
He bears too great a mind: but this same day
Must end that work the Ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take: 116
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.
Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed; 121
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.
Bru. Why, then, lead on. O! that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come; 124
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! away!
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these billsUnto the legions on the other side.
[*Loud Alarum.*Let them set on at once, for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, 4
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
[Exeunt

Scene III.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.Cas. O! look, Titinius, look, the villains fly: Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy;
This ensign here of mine was turning back;

I slew the coward, and did take it from him. 4
Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;

Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
 Took it too eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil,
 Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed. 8

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
 Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord;
 Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire? 12

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me, Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in
 him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
 And here again; that I may rest assur'd 17
 Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought.

[Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
 My sight was ever weak; regard Titinius, 21
 And tell me what thou not'st about the field.

[PINDARUS ascends the hill.]

This day I breathed first; time is come round,

And where I did begin, there shall I end; 24
 My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about 28
 With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
 Yet he spurs on: now they are almost on him;
 Now, Titinius! now some light; O! he lights
 too:

He's ta'en; [Shout.] and, hark! they shout for
 joy. 32

Cas. Come down; behold no more.
 O, coward that I am, to live so long,
 To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

PINDARUS descends.

Come hither, sirrah; 36

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
 And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
 That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath; 40

Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
 That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer; here, take thou the hilts;
 And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, 44
 Guide thou the sword. Caesar, thou art reveng'd,
 Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been;

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius 48

Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
 Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS with MESSALA.

Mea. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, 52
 As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mea. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate,
 With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill. 56

Mea. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mea. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
 But Cassius is no more. O setting sun! 60

As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
 So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;

The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone;
 Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done. 64

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mea. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child!

Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
 The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv'd, 68

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
 But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus? 72

Mea. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
 The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
 Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it;
 For piercing steel and darts envenom'd 76
 Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
 As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
 And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

[Exit MESSALA.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?

Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they 80
 Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
 And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing. 84

But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
 Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I

Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
 And see how I regarded Calpurnius. 88

By your leave, gods: this is a Roman's part;
 Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.

[Kills himself.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, Young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mea. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.
Cato. He is slain.
Bru. O Julius Caesar! thou art mighty yet!
 Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
 In our own proper entrails. [Low alarms.]
Cato. Brave Titinius! 96
 Look wher he have not crown'd dead Cassius!
Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?
 The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
 It is impossible that ever Rome 100
 Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears

To this dead man than you shall see me pay.—
 I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
 Come therefore, and to Thasos send his body:
 His funerals shall not be in our camp, 105
 Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
 And come, young Cato;—let us to the field.
 Laboe and Flavius, set our battles on:— 108
 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
 We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then BRUTUS, Young CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads!
Cato. What bastard? Who will go with me?
 I will proclaim my name,
 I am the son of Marcus Cato, 4
 A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
 I am the son of Marcus Cato.

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus! [Exit, charging the enemy.]
Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou
 down? 9
 Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
 And mayst be honour'd being Cato's son.
First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Lucil. Only I yield to thee: 12
 There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight. [Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.
First Sold. We must not. A noble prison:
Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is taken. 16
First Sold. I'll tell the news: here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is taken, my lord.
Ant. Where is he?
Lucil. Safe, Antony. Brutus is safe enough:
 I dare assure thee there no enemy 21
 Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!
 When you do find him, or alive or dead, 24
 He will be found like Brutus, like himself.
Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure
 you,
 A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,
 Give him all kindness: I had rather have 28
 Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,
 And see wher Brutus be alive or dead;
 And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,
 How every thing is chang'd. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.
Cl. Statillus show'd the torch-light; but, my
 lord,
 He came not back: he is or taken or slain.
Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word; 4
 It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

[Whispers.]
Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.
Bru. Peace, then! no words.
Cl. I'll rather kill myself.
Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.]
Dar. Shall I do such a deed? 3
Cl. O, Dardanius!
Dar. O, Clitus!
Cl. What ill repute old Brutus make to
 thee?

Dar. To kill himself thus. Look, he meditates.
Cl. Now that I am full of grief, 13
 That it runs over at his eyes.
Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?
Bru. Why this, Volumnius: 16
 The ghost of Caesar hath appear'd to me
 Two several times by night; at Sardis once,
 And this last night here in Phillipi fields,
 I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord. 20
Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
 Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
 Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
 It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, 24
 Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, When know'st that we two went to school together;
 Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
 Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it. 28
Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.
 [Alarum still.]

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying
 here.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you,
Volumnius.
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; 32
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,
My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life,
I found no man but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day, 36
More than Octavius and Mark Antony
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history: 40 Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,
That have but labour'd to attain this hour.
[Alarum. Cry within. 'Fly, fly, fly!'
Clit. Fly, my lord, fly.
Bru. Hence! I will follow.
[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.
I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord: 44
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:
Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? 48
Strato. Give me your hand first: fare you well,
my lord.
Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—[He runs on his sword.] Cæsar, now be still;
I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [Dies.
Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY,
MESSALA, LUCILIUS and Army.
Oct. What man is that? 52

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?
Strato. Free from the bondage you are in,
Messala;
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself, 56
And no man else hath honour by his death.
Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Luellius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain
them. 60
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Strato. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.
Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato? 64
Strato. I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all;
All the conspirators save only he 68
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only, in a general honest thought
And common good to all, made one of them. 72
His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, 'This was a man!'
Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect and rite of burial, 76
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.
So, call the field to rest; and let's away, 80
To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.

Act I.

Scene I.—A desert Heath.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again
 In thunder, lightning, or in rain? ~~Storm~~

Sec. Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
 When the battle's lost and won. 4

Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

First Witch. Where the place?

Sec. Witch. Upon the heath.

Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

First Witch. I come, Graymalkin' 6

Sec. Witch. Paddock calls.

Third Witch. Anon.

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Camp near Forres.

Atarun within. Enter KING DUNCAN, MAL-COLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,

As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
 The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant
 Who, like a good and hardy soldier fought 4
 'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend!
 Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
 As thou didst leave it.

Serg. Doubtful it stood;
 As two spent swimmers, that do cling together 8
 And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald—

Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
 The multiplying villanies of nature

Do swarm upon him—from the western isles 12
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied ;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak ;
For brave Macbeth,—well he deserves that
name,— 16

Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion carry'd out his passage
Till he fac'd the slave ; 20
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to
him,

Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chops,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O vallant cousin ! worthy gentleman !
Serg. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to
come

Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland,
mark : 28

No sooner justice had with valour arm'd Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,

But the Norway lord surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men 32
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captives, Macbeth and Banquo ?

Sery. Yes ;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion. 36
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks ;
So they

Doubly relobbled strokes upon the foe :
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha, 41
I cannot tell—

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.
Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds. 44

They smack of honour both. Go, get him surgeons. [Exit Sergeant, attended.]

Enter Ross.

Who comes here ?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes :
So should he look

That seems to speak things strange.
Ross. God save the king ! 48

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane ?
Ross. From Fife, great king ;

Where the Norwegian banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold. Norway himself,
With terrible numbers, 52

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict ;
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, happ'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons, 56
Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit : and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.—

Dun. Great happiness !
Ross. That now 60

Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition ;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disburs'd, at Saint Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use. 64

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present
death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth,
Ross. I'll see it done. 68

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. [Exit.]

Scene III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister ?

Sec. Witch. Killing swine.

Third Witch. Sister, where thou ?

First Witch. A sallow's wife had chestnuts in her lap, 4

And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd ;
'Give me,' quoth I :

'Aroint thee, witch !' the rump-fed ronyon cries,
Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger :

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail, 8

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

Sec. Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

First Witch. Thou'rt kind. 12

Third Witch. And I another.

First Witch. I myself have all the other ;
And the very ports they blow, 16

All the quarters that they know
I' the shipman's earl.

I'll drain him dry as hay :
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid ; 20

He shall live a man forbid.
Weary se'nnights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak and pine ; 24

Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.

Look what I have.

Sec. Witch. Show me, show me.

First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb, 28
Wrack'd as homeward he did come.

[Drum within.]
Third Witch. A drum ! a drum !
Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about :

Three to thine, and three to mine,
And three again, to make up nine,

Peace ! the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres? What are these,

So wither'd and so wild in their attire, 40

That look not like th' inhabitants o' the earth,
And yet are on't? Live you? or are you nought

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying 44

Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?

First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Thane of Glamis! 45

Sec. Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!

Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shall be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? 'Tis the name of truth, 52

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope, 55

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak
not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow and which will
not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60
Your favours nor your hate.

First Witch. Hail!

Sec. Witch. Hail!

Third Witch. Hail!

First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater, 64

Sec. Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none;

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo! 68

First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me
more:

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be king 75

Stands not within the prospect of belief

No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why 76

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge

you. [Witches vanish.]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd? 80

Macb. Into the air, and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten on the insane root 84
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same time and words. Who's here? 88

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy success; and when he reads

Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend 92

Which should be thine or his. Silence'd with that,

In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,

He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,

Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make, 97

Strange images of death. As thick as hail

Came post with post, and every one did hear

Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,

And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent 100

To give thee from our royal master thanks;

Only to herald thee into his sight,

Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,

He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of

Cawdor: 105

In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!

For it is thine.

Ban. What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me

in borrow'd robes? 108

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet;

But under heavy judgment bears that life

Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel 112

With hidden help or vantage, or that with both

He labour'd in his country's wrack, I know not;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,

Have overthrow'n him.

Macb. [Aside.] Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor

The greatest is behind. [To ROSS and ANGUS.]

Thanks for your pains, 117

[To BANQUO.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings?

When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me

Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home, 120

Might I enkindle you unto the crown,

Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths, 124
Win us with honest trifles, to betray'
In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act 128
Of the Imperial theme. I thank you, gentlemen.

[Aside.] This supernatural soffering
Cannot be ill, cannot be good; if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success, 132
Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor:

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears 137

Are less than horrible imaginings;
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is 141
But what is not.

Ban. Look, he... our partner's rapt.

Macb. [Aside.] If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him, 144
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould

But with the aid of use.

Macb. [Aside.] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure. 148

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains

are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king.
Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more
time, 153

The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends. 156
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONAL-BAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back; but I have spoke
With one that saw him die; who did report
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Topp'd your highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life

Became him like the leaving it; he died 3
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face: 12
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS and ANGUS.

O worthlest cousin!

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before 16
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee; would thou hadst less deserv'd,

That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay. 21

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties; and our duties 24
Are to your throne and state, children and servants;

Which do but what they should, by doing everything

safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour 28
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me unfold thee
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow, 32
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know 36
We will establish our estate upon

Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland; which honour must Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And thid us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you: 44

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumberland! that is a step 48

On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be 52
Which the eye fears when it is done to see.

[Exit.]

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him, 56
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Inverness. MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

*They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge.
When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. While I stood rapt in the wonder of it, some missives from the king, who all-hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor;' by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, 'Hail, king that shall be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee.
Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.*

Glams thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be 16
What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy nature;

It is too full of the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way; thou wouldst be great,

Art not without ambition, but without 20
The illness should attend it; what thou wouldst highly,

That thou wouldst holily: wouldst not play false,

And yet wouldst wrongly win; thou'dst have,
great Glamis,

That which cries, 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it;' 24

And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee
hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid do seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings?

Mess. The king comes here to night.

Lady M. Thou'rt unad to say it. 32
Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming;

One of my fellows had the speed of him, 36
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending;

He brings great news.—[Exit Messenger.] The raven himself is hoarse

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits

That tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me here,
And fill me from the crown to the toe top full
Of direst cruelty; make thick my blood, 41

Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers, 49

Where'er in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
night,

And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell, 52
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes, Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,

To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! 56
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence? 60

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand your tongue: look like the innocent
flower,

But be the serpent under't. If that's coming
Must be provided for; and you shall put 68
This night's great business into my dispatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and unmasterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear; 72
To utter favour ever is to fear.

Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALDIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Shuddry and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve 4
By his bold manspliny that the heaven's breath

Smells woollingly here: no juttie, frieze,
Buttress, nor colign of vantage, but this blrat
Hath made his pendent bed and procreant eradle: 8
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd
The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach
you 12
How you shall bid God 'eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done
double,

Were poor and single business, to contend 16 Against those honours deep and broad wherewith

Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor? 20
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp
him

To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever 25
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,

To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; 28
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then, enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then twere well

It were done quickly; if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success, that but this blow 4
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,

We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the Inventor; this even-headed justice

Commends the Ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust: 12
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duucan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been 17
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels trumpet-tongu'd against
The deep damnation of his taking-off; 20
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, 24
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself
And falls on the other.—

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now! what news? 28
Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has? 32
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk, Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept
since, 36

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid

To be the same in thine own act and valour 40
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,' 44
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prithee, peace.
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't, then,
That made you break this enterprise to me? 48
When you durst do it then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now 52

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
I would while it was smiling in my face, 56
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as
you

Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fall,—
Lady M. We fall!

But screw your courage to the sticking-place, 60
And we'll not fall. When Duncan is asleep,
Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince 64
That memory, the warler of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A thimble only; when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death, 68
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only; 72
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two

Of his own chamber and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. 80
Away, and mock the time with falstest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exit.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a Servant bearing a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take't, 'tis later, sir.

Ban. Hidd, take my sword. There's his handy in heaven;

Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature
Gives way to in repose.

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.— 9

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a bed;

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This hollowed he greets your wife withal,

By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd, 17
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters: 20
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business.

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure, 24

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,

It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear, 28
I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you.

[Exit BANQUO and FLEANCE.]

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready

She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. 32
[Exit Servant.]

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible 36
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but

A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppres'd brain?

I see thee yet, in form as palpable 40
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.

Mine eyes are made the fools of the other senses, 44

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,

Which was not so before. There's no such thing:

It is the bloody business which informs 48
Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-
world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleep; witch-haft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder, 52
Alarm'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy
pace,

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, toward his destin

Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,

Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear

They very stones prate of my whereabout,
 And take the present horror from the time,
 Which now sults with it. Whiles I threat he lives: 60
 Worris to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives. [A bell rings.]
 I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
 Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
 That summons thee to heaven or to hell. 64

[Exit.]

Scene II.—The Same.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold,
 What hath quenched them hath given me fire.
 Hark!

Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, 4 Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:

The doors are open, and the surfeltd grooms
 Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets,

That death and nature do contend about them,
 Whether they live or die. 9

Macb. [Within.] Who's there? what, ho!

Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
 And 'tis not done; the attempt and not the deed Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers
 ready; 13

He could not miss them. Had he not resembled
 My father as he slept I had done't. My husband!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise? 16

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark! 20

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. [Looking on his hands.] This is a sorry sight.Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!' 24That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;But they did say their prayers, and address'd
 them

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen'
 the other:
 As they had seen me with these bloody hands.

Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen,'
 When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce
 'Amen?' 32

I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
 stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
 After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep
 no more!' 36

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep,
 Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
 The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, 40

(Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried, 'Sleep no more!' to all the house:

'Glanis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no
 more!' 44

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,

You do unbend your noble strength to think
 So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,
 And wash this filthy witness from your hand. 48
 Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there: go carry them, and smear
 The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more;
 I am afraid to think what I have done; 52

Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
 Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood
 That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, 56

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;
 For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.]
 Macb. Whence is that knocking?

How is't with me, when every noise appals me?
 What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine
 eyes. 60

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
 Making the green one red. 64

[Exit.]

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour, but I
 shame

To wear a heart so white.—[Knocking within.]

I hear a knocking

At the south entry; retire we to our chamber;

A little water clears us of this deed; — 68

How easy is it, then! Your constancy

Hath left you unattended. [Knocking within.]

Hark! more knocking.

Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,

And show us to be watchers. Be not lost 72

So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed 'twere best not know myself.

[Knocking within.]

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate he should have old turning the key. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for't. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock! Who's there, i' the other devil's name! Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in, equivocator. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter. 24

[Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,

That you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things. 29

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery; it makes him, and it mars him; it acts him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him. 41

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me; but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him. 43

Macd. Is thy master stirring? 43

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir.

Macd. Good morrow, both.

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthythane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him: 52

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you; But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain. This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call, 57 For 'tis my limited service. [Exit.]

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does; he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay, 60

Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say, Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death,

And propherying with accents terrible Of dire combustion and confus'd events 64

New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird

Clamour'd the l'velling night: some say the earth Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel A fellow to it. 69

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb. What's the matter?

Len. Confusion now hath made his master-piece! 72

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke open The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' the building!

Macb. What is't you say? the life? 76

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon; do not bid me speak; See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX.]

Awake! awake! So
 Ring the alarm bell. Murder and treason!
 Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
 Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
 And look on death itself! Up, up, and see! 84
 The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banquo!
 As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,
 To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. What's the business, 88
 That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
 The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!
Macd. O gentle lady!
 'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak;
 The repetition in a woman's ear 92
 Would murder as it fell.

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo! Banquo!
 Our royal master's murder'd!
Lady M. Woe, alas!
 What! in our house?
Ban. Too cruel any where.
 Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, 96
 And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance
 I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,
 There's nothing serious in mortality, 100
 All is but toys; renown and grace is dead;
 The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
 Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?
Macb. You are, and do not know't:
 The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
 Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O! by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as 't seem'd, had done't: 103

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood,
 So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted; no man's life

Was to be trusted with them. 112

Macb. O! yet I do repent me of my fury
 That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temper'd and furious,
 Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man: 116
 The expedition of my violent love
 Outran the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
 His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature 120

For ruin a wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart 124
 Courage to make his love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. [Aside to DONALBAIN.] Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours:

Don. [Aside to MALCOLM.] What should be spoken 128

Here where our fate, hid in an auger hole,
 May rush and seize us? Let's away: our tears
 Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. [Aside to DONALBAIN.] Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion,

Ban. Look to the lady: 132

LADY MACBETH is carried out.

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
 That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,
 To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence 137

Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
 Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
 And meet 't the hall together.

All. Well contented. 141

[Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
 Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,

There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,

The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
 Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way 149

is to avoid the aim: therefore, to horse;

And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
 But shift away: there's warrant in that theft

Which steals itself when there's no mercy left.
 [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an Old Man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember
 well;

Within the volume of which time I have seen

Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore
night

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah! good father, 4
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.
Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb, 9
When living light should kiss it?

Old Man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place, 12
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses,—a thing most strange and certain,— Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would 17
Make war with mankind.

Old Man. 'Tis said they eat each other.
Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine
eyes,

That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Macduff. 20

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd, 24

Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still!
Thrifless ambition, that will ravin up 28

Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scene

To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body? 32

Macd. Carried to Colmekill;
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scene?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither. 36

Macd. Well, may you see things well done
there: adieu!

Least our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Farewell, father.

Old Man. God's benison go with you; and with those 40

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exit.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now: King, Cawdor, Glamis
all,

As the weird women promised; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for't; yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity, 4

But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,—

As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,—
Why, by the verities on thee made good, 8

May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

*Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as king;
LADY MACBETH, as queen; LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.*

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been 10
It had been as a gap in our great feast, 12
And all things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which my duties 16
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord. 20

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice—

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous—

In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow,
Is't far you ride? 24

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time.
'Twill be this and supper; go not my horse the better,

I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fall not our feast. 28

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd

In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers 32

With strange invention; but of that to-morrow,
When therewithal we shall have cause of state

Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse; adieu
Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord; our time does call upon's. 37

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;

And so I do commend you to their backs.
Farewell. [Exit BANQUO.]

Let every man be master of his time 41

Till seven at night; to make society
 The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone; while then, God be with you! [Exeunt all but MACBETH and an Attendant.

Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men 45
 Our pleasure?
Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.
Macb. Bring them before us. [Exit Attendant.]
 To be thus is nothing; 48
 But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banquo
 Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature Reigns that which would be fear'd: 'tis much he dares,
 And, to that dauntless temper of his mind, 52
 He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
 To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear; and under him
 My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said 56
 Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters
 When first they put the name of king upon me,
 And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-
 like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings. 60
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crow,
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding. If't be so, 64
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
 Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them; and mine eternal jewel 68
 Given to the common enemy of man,
 To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
 Rather than so, come fate into the list,
 And champion me to the utterance! Who's
 there? 72

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.
 [Exit Attendant.]
 Was it not yesterday we spoke together?
First Mur. It was, so please your highness.
Macb. Well then, now
 Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know 76
 That it was he in the times past which held you
 So under fortune, which you thought had been
 Our innocent self. This I made good to you
 In our last conference, pass'd in probation with
 you, 80
 How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,
 Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
 To half a soul and to a notlous craz'd Say 'Thus did Banquo.'
First Mur. You made it known to us. 84
Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
 Your patience so predominant in your nature
 That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd
 To pray for this good man and for his issue, 89
 Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
 And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue you go for men; 92
 As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept
 All by the name of dogs: the valu'd file
 Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, 96
 The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
 According to the gift which bounteous nature
 Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill 100
 That writes them all alike: and so of men.

Now, if you have a station in the file,
 Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it;
 And I will put that business in your bosoms, 104
 Whose execution takes your enemy off,
 Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
 Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
 Which in his death were perfect.

Sec. Mur. I am one, my liege, 108
 Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
 Have so incens'd that I am reckless what
 I do to spite the world.

First Mur. And I another,
 So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune, 112
 That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you Know Banquo was your enemy.

Sec. Mur. Truc, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance 116

That every minute of his being thrusts
 Against my near'st of life: and though I could
 With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight
 And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, 120
 For certain friends that are both his and mine,
 Whose loves I may not drop, but wall his fall Whom I myself struck down; and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love, 124
 Masking the business from the common eye
 For sundry weighty reasons.

Sec. Mur. We shall, my lord,
 Perform what you command us.

First Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most 128

I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
 Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
 The moment on't; for't must be done to-night,
 And something from the palace; always thought
 That I require a clearness: and with him— 133
 To leave no rubs nor botches in the work—
 Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
 Whose absence is no less material to me 136

Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart ;
I'll come to you anon.
Sec. Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.
Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide with-
in. [Exeunt Murderers.
It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight, 141
if it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.
Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.
Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent, 4
Where our desire is got without content:
Tis safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, 8
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without ail remedy
should be without regard: what's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd
it: 13

she'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer, 16

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep in the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie 21 in restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison, 24

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on ;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks ;
Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray be you.
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:

Unsafe the while, that we 32
Must lave our honours in these flattering streams,

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,

Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear
wife; 36

Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assail-
able;

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown 40
His cloister'd flight, ere, to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done? 44

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,

And with thy bloody and invisible hand 48
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond

Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood;
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse, Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse. 53

Thou marvell'st at my words: hut hold thee
still;

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill:

So, prithee, go with me. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

Third Mur. Macbeth.

Sec. Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delvers

Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us. 4

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the hated traveller apace

To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses. 8

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

Sec. Mur. Then 'tis he: the rest

That are within the note of expectation
Already are i' the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.

Third Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually, 12

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Sec. Mur. A light, a light!

Third Mur. 'Tis he.
First Mur. Stand to't.
Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a torch.
Ban. It will be rain to-night.
First Mur. Let it come down. 16
 [They set upon BANQUO.
Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!
 Thou mayst revenge. O slave!
 [Dies. FLEANCE escapes.
Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?
First Mur. Was't not the way?
Third Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.
Sec. Mur. We have lost 20
 Best half of our affair.
First Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.
 A Banquet prepared. *Enter MACBETH, LADY
 MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.*
Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down:
 at first and last,
 The hearty welcome.
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourselves will mingle with society 4
 And play the humble host.
 Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
 We will require her welcome.
Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;
 For my heart speaks they are welcome. 8
Enter First Murderer, to the door.
Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks;
 Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst:
 Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
 The table round. [Approaching the door.]
 There's blood upon thy face. 12
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's, then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
 Is he dispatch'd?
Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him. 16
Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats;
 yet he's good
 That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,
 Thou art the nonpareil.
Mur. Most royal sir, 20
 Fleance is 'scaped.
Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;
 Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
 As broad and general as the casing air:
 But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in

To sane doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?
Mur. Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch he bides,
 With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
 The least a death to nature.
Macb. Thanks for that. 28
 There the grown serpent lies: the worm that's fled
 Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
 No teeth for the present. Get thee gone; tomorrow
 We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.
Lady M. My royal lord, 32
 You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
 That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making, 'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at home;
 From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony; 36
 Meeting were bare without it.
Macb. Sweet remembrance!
 Now good digestion wait on appetite,
 And health on both!
Len. May it please your highness sit?
 [The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH'S place.
Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd, 40
 Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
 Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
 Than pity for mischance!
Ross. His absence, sir, Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness 44
 To grace us with your royal company.
Macb. The table's full.
Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
Macb. Where?
Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness? 48
Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake
 Thy gory locks at me.
Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not
 well. 52
Lady M. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
 And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep seat;
 The fit is momentary; upon a thought
 He will again be well. If much you note him 56
 You shall offend him and extend his passion:
 Feed and regard him not. Are you a man?
Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on
 that
 Which might appal the devil.
Lady M. O proper stuff! 60
 This is the very painting of your fear;
 This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
 Led you to Dunean. O! these flaws and starts—

Impostors to true fear—would well become 64
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look hut on a stool. 68

Macb. Prithee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears.]

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fly, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, I' the olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal; 76
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end; hut now they rise again, 80
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: this is more strange

Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget. 84
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;

Then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full.
I drink to the general joy of the whole table, 89
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge. 92

Re-enter Ghost.

Macb. Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrow'less, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other; 97
Only it spolls the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger; 101
Take any shape hut that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
Aud dare me to the desert with thy sword; 104
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost vanishes.]

Why, so; being gone,

I am a man again. Pray you, sit still. 108

Lady M. You have dispac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,

With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make me
strange 112

Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord? 116

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question engages him. At once, good-night:

Stand not upon the order of your going.

But go at once.

Len. Good-night; and better health 120
Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good-night to all!

[Exeunt Lords and Attendants.]

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:

Stones have been known to move and trees to
speak;

Augurs and understood relations have 124
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth

The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How sayst thou, that Macduff denies his person 128

At our great hidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send.
There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a servant fe'd. I will to-morrow— 132
And betimes I will—to the weird sisters:

More shall they speak; for now I am bent to
know,

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good

All causes shall give way: I am in blood 136
Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.

Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures,
sleep. 141

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:

We are yet hut young in deed. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting
HECATE.

First Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy and overbold? How did you dare

H h

To trade and traffic with Macbeth
 In riddles and affairs of death ;
 And I, the mistress of your charms,
 The close contriver of all harms,
 Was never call'd to bear my part,
 Or show the glory of our art ?
 And, which is worse, all you have done
 Hath been but for a wayward son,
 Spiteful and wrathful ; who, as others do,
 Loves for his own ends, not for you.
 But make amends now : get you gone,
 And at the pit of Acheron
 Meet me i' the morning : thither he
 Will come to know his destiny :
 Your vessels and your spells provide,
 Your charms and every thing beside.
 I am for the air ; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end :
 Great business must be wrought ere noon :
 Upon the corner of the moon
 There hangs a vaporous drop profound ;
 I'll catch it ere it come to ground :
 And that distill'd by magic sleights
 Shall raise such artificial sprites
 As by the strength of their illusion
 Shall draw him on to his confusion :
 He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
 His hopes 'bove Wisdom, grace, and fear ;
 And you all know security
 Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Song within, 'Come away, come away,' &c.

Hark ! I am call'd ; my little spirit, see,
 Slits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.

First Witch. Come, let's make haste ; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
 Which can interpret further : only, I say,
 Things have been strangely borne. The gracious
 Duncan

Was pitted of Macbeth : marry, he was dead :
 And the right-vallant Banquo walk'd too late ;
 Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Fleance
 kill'd,

For Fleance fled : men must not walk too late.
 Who cannot want the thought how monstrous 's
 It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
 To kill their gracious father ? damned fact !
 How it did grieve Macbeth ! did he not straight
 In pious rage the two delinquents tear,
 That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep ?

Was not that nobly done ? Ay, and wisely too ;
 For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
 To hear the men deny't. So that, I say,
 He has borne all things well ; and I do think
 That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,—

As, an't please heaven, he shall not,—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father ; so should Fleance.
 But, peace ! for from broad words, and 'cause he fall'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
 Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
 Where he bestows himself ?

Lord. The son of Duncan, '24

From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
 Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd

Of the most pious Edward with such grace
 That the malevolence of fortune nothing

Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
 Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid

To wake Northumberland and war-like Siward :
 That, by the help of these—with him above

To ratify the work—wo may again
 Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
 Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives,

Do faithful homage and receive free honours ;
 All which we pine for now. And this report

Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt at war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff ?
Lord. He did : and with an absolute, 'Sir, not I,'

The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
 And hums, as who should say, 'You'll rue the
 time

That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution to hold what distance

His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
 Fly to the court of England and unfold

His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
 May soon return to this our suffering country
 Under a hand accurs'd !

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him !
 [Exeunt.

Act IV.

Scene I.—A cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

Sec. Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

Third Witch. Harper cries : 'Tis time, 'tis

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go ;
 In the poison'd entrails throw.

Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart 100
Throbs to know onething: tell me—if your art
Can tell so much,—shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this, 104
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys.]

First Witch. Show!
Sec. Witch. Show! 108
Third Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come, you shades, so depart.

A song of Eight Kings; the last with a glass in his hand: BANQUO'S Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
down! 112
Thy crown does scar mine eyeballs: and thy hair,

Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,
eyes! 116

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet? A seventh! I'll see
And yet the eighth appears, who bears
Which shows me many more; and so
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. [Apparitions vanish.]

What! is this so? 124
First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights. 128
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antle round,
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay. 132

[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish with HECATE.]

Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter LERNOK.

Len. What's your Grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord. 136

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did hear

The galloping of horse: who was't came by! 140

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread ex-plots; 144

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it; from this moment

The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now, 148

To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge of the sword

His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls 152
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;

This deed I'll do, before th's purpose cool:
But no more sights! Where are these gentlemen?

Come, bring me where they are. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Fife. MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:

His flight was madness: when our actions do not
Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us
not; 8

He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight—

Her young ones in her nest—against the owl.
All is the fear and nothing is the love; 12

As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,

He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows 16
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further:

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear, 20

But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way and move. I take my leave of you:

shall not be long but I'll be here again.
 Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward 24
 To what they were before. My pretty cousin,
 Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer, 28

It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
 I take my leave at once. [Exit.]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
 And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What! with worms and flies? 32

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,

The pit-fall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for. 36

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market. 40

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet, I' faith,

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother? 44

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so? 48

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them? 52

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them. 56

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey!
 But is't wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: If you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father. 61

L. Macd. Poor prattier, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. 64
 I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:
 If you will take a homely man's advice,
 Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
 To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;

To do worse to you were fell cruelty, 69
 Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Exit.]
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now 72
 I am in this earthly world, where, to do harm
 Is often laudable, to do good sometime

Accounted dangerous folly; why then, alas!
 Do I put up that womanly defence, 76

To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope in no place so unsanctified
 Where such as thou mayst find him.

Mur. He's a traitor. So

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain.

Mur. What! you egg
 Young fry of treachery! [Stabbing him.]

Son. He has killed me, mother:
 Run away, I pray you! [Dies.]

[Exit LADY MACDUFF, crying 'Murder,' and pursued by the Murderers.]

Scene III.—England. Before the KING'S Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom; each new born 4

New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds

As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out

Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe I'll wail, 8

What know believe, and what I can redress,

As I shall find the time to friend, I will.

What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.

This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,

Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him
 well; 13

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb 16
 To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is
 A good and virtuous nature may recoil

In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon; 20

That which you are my thoughts cannot trans-
 pose;

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell;
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes. 24

Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child—
Those preclous motives, those strong knots of
love—

Without leave-taking? I pray you, 28
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, 32
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs;

The title is affect'd! Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended: 37
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash 40
Is a'dled to her wounds: I think withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;

And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands: but, for all this, 44
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country

Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, 48
By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth 53
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state

Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd 56
In evils than top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daugh- 61
-ters,

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The chstern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear 64
That did oppose my will; better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.

Macd. Boundless Intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne, 68
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours; you may

Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink. 72

We have willing dames enough; there cannot
be

That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this there grows 76

In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house; 80

And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice 84

Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;

Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will, 88
Of your mere own; all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temperance, stableness, 92
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,

I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime, 95
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland! 100

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!

No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scenter'd, 104
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne

By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blasphemous his breed?

Thy royal
father 108

Was a most salted flag; the queen that bore
thee,

Off'n'd upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well!

These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself 112
Have brench'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope euds here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth 117

By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me

From over-credulous haste; but God above 120
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeaking mine own detraction, here abjure
The talnts and blames I laid upon myself, 124
For strangers to my nature. I am yet Unknown to woman, never was forsorn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith, would not betray 123
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life; my first false speaking

Was this upon myself. What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command; 132
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand war-like men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent? 137

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once

'Tis hard to reconelle.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon. Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140

Doct. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls

That stay his cure; their malady convinces
The great assay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, 144
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor.

[Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, 149 Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,

All swolln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures; 152
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue, 156

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak him full of grace.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him
not. 160

Enter Ross.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove

The means that make us strangers!

Ross. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas! poor country; 164
Almost afraid to know It cannot Be call'd our mother, our grave; where nothing,

But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rent
the air 168

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems

A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps, 172
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O! relation

Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;

Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife? 176

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes't? 180

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather 184
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot.

Now is the time of help; away to Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Their comfort, 188

We are coming thither; but alas! our hats!
Lent us good Siward and our thousand men

An older and a better soldier,
That Christendom gives not me.

Ross. What answer 192

This comfort with the like should have words
That would be howl'd out in desert air,
Where hearing should not reach them.

Macd. What concern they?

The general cause? or is it a friend's grief? 196
Duc to some single breast?

Ross. No, sir; that's honest

But in it shares some woeful part the main part

Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine

Keep it not from me; quickly let me know
Ross. Let not your ears despise

for ever,

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Hum! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes 204

Savagely slaughter'd; to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven!

What! man; ne'er pull your hat upon your brows; 208

Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break.

Macd. My children, too?

Ross. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence! 212
My wife kill'd too?

Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicine of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children. All my pretty ones? 216

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All!

What! all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man: 220

I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff!
They were all struck for thee. Naught that

I am, 224

Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them
now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
let grief

Convert to anger; hunt not the heart, enrage
it. 228

Macd. O! I could play the woman with mine
eyes,

And hraggart with my tongue. But, gentle heavens,

Cut short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.

Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth 236

Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above

Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;

The night is long that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked? 3

Gen. Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep. 9

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gen. That, sir, which I will not report after
her. 16

Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gen. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech. 20

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her;
stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light? 24

Gen. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gen. Ay, but their sense is shut. 28

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gen. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands. I have known her to continue in this a quarter of an hour. 33

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly. 37

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One; two: why, then, 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky!
Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him? 44

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife:
where is she now? What! will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting. 49

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gen. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known. 54

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh! 57

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gen. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body. 61

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gen. Pray God It be, sir.

Doct. This disease is better in practice: yet I have known those who have walked in their sleep who have died high in their beds. 66

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so? 71

Lady M. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed? 76

Gen. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets; More needs she the divine than the physician. 81; God, God forgive us all! Look after her; ~~in the~~ Re- from her the means of all annoyance, A- all keep eyes upon her. So, good-night: My- and she has mated, and amaz'd my sight. I th- , but dare not speak.

Gen. Good-night, good doctor. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, MENTITH, CAITHNESS, ANOUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm 4 Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalhdn be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, 9 And many unrough youths that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies. Some say he's mad; others that lesser have him Do call it vallant fury; but, for certain,

He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel 16 His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraids his faith-breach; Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love; now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn 24 Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on, To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd; Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal, And with him pour we in our country's purge 23 Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.

Make we our march towards Birnam. [Exeunt, marching.]

Scene III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know 4

All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus:

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee.' Then fly, false thanes,

And mingle with the English epleures: 8

The mind I sway by and the heart I bear Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear. |

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where gott'st thou that goose look? 12

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch? Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face? 17

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.] Seyton!—I am sick at heart

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever or disseat me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare
not.
Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from
me.—

Come, sir, dispatch.—If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—
What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.

I will not be afraid of death and bane
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane.

Doct. [Aside.] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Country near Birnam Wood.

*Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old
SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANOUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers marching.*

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand
That chambers will be safe.

Men. We doubt it nothing.

Siw. What wood is this before us?

Men. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough
And bear't before him; thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope;
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Siw. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate,
Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

Scene V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SEY-TON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, 'They come;' our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up;

Were they not fore'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

And beat them backward home.

[A cry of women within.]

What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.]

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears.
The time has been my senses would have cool'd
To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead. 16

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a world.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day. 20

To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player 24
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more; it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing. 28

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to see thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir. 32

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look'd towards Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath if't be not so:
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,

Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee; if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much. 41

I pull in resolution and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth; 'Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane;' and now a wood 45

Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here. 43

I'gin to be weary of the sun,
And wish the estate o' the world were now undone.
Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back. 52

[Exit.

Scene VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,

And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle; worthy Macduff and we 4

Shall take upon 's what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.

Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight. 3

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,

Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exit.

Scene VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot
fly,

But bear-like I must fight the course. What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none. 4

Enter Young SIWARD.

Young Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Young Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Young Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title 8

More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Young Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword

I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight and Young SIWARD is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman:
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, 12
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face:

If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou,
Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again unceded. There thou shouldst
be; 20

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and Old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle's gently render'd; 24

The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes 28
That strike beside us.

Siv. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarums.]

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whilst I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn! 32

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain 36
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou locest labour:
As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; 40
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb 44
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man:
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd, 48
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward, 52
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underw't,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Macb. I will not yield, 56
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be halit with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born, 60
Yet I will try the last: before my body
I throw my war-like shield. Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries, 'Hold,
enough!'
[Ereunt, fighting.]

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, ROSS, THANEs, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe
arriv'd. 64

Siv. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see,

So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt: 68

He only liv'd hut till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siv. Then he is dead? 72
Ross. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siv. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siv. Why then, God's soldier be he! 76
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siv. He's worth no more; 80
They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

The usurper's curs'd head: the time is free: 84
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine;
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! 88 [Flourish.]

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of
time

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do, 93

Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny; 96
Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life; this, and what needful else 100
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace

We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Secon. 104

Act I.

Scene I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me; stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks; 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good-night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And legemen to the Daue.

Fran. Give you good-night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier: 16

Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good-night. [Exit.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo!

Ber. Say,

What! is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus. 20

Mar. What! has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,

And will not let helief take hold of him 24
Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us :
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night ;
That if again this apparition come, 28
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.
Hor. Tush, tush ! 'twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile,
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story, 32
What we two nights have seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same star that's westward from the pole 36
Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,—
Mar. Peace! break thee off; look, where it comes again! 40

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's
dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder, 44
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time
of night,
Together with that fair and war-like form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark 48
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee,
speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See! it stalks away.
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.]
Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer. 52
Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale:
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe 56
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself;
Such was the very armour he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated: 60
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He snote the sledged Polacks on the lee.
'Tis strange, 64
Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch
Hor. In what particular thought to wor. I know not;
But in the gross and scope of my opinion, 68
This bodys some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same striet and most observant watch
So nightly to's the subject of the lan.; 72
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week; 76
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:
Who is't that can inform me?
Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, 80
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant
Hamlet— 84
For so this side of our known world esteem'd
him—
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit with his life all those his lands 88
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror;
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras, 92
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant,
And earriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full, 96
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there
Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprize
That hath a stomach in't; which is no other—
As it doth well appear unto our state— 100
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost. And this, I take it, 104
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief head
Of th's post-haste and romage in the land.
Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so; 108
Well may it sort that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch, so like the king
That was and is the question of these wars.
Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye, 112
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere th' mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets; 116
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,

Disasters in the sun; and the moist star
 Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands
 Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse; 120
 And even the like precurse of fierce events,
 As harbingers preceding still the fates
 And prologue to the omen coming on,
 Have heaven and earth together demonstrated 124
 Unto our climatures and countrymen.
 But, soft! behold! lo! where it comes again.

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it be to me. Stay, illusion!
 If thou hast any sound, or use of voice, 128
 Speak to me:
 If there be any good thing to be done,
 That may do thee good, and grace to me,
 Speak to me: 132
 If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
 Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
 O! speak;
 Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life 136
 Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
 For which they say, you spirits oft walk in death, [Cock crows.
 Speak of it: stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan? 140
 Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
 Ber. 'Tis here!
 Hor. 'Tis here! [Exit Ghost.
 Mar. 'Tis gone!

We do it wrong, being so majestic,
 To offer it the show of violence; 144
 For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
 And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
 Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, 149
 The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
 Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
 Awake the god of day; and at his warning, 152
 Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
 The extravagant and erring spirit hies
 To his confine; and of the truth herein
 This present object made proof. 156

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
 Some say that ever 'gainst that time comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
 The bird of dawning singeth all night long; 160
 And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad;
 The nights are wholesome; then no planets
 strike,
 No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
 So hallow'd and so gracious is the time. 164

Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe
 it.

Ber. Look, the morn in russet mantle clad,
 We kiss o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill;
 Break we our watch up; and by my advice 168
 Let us impart what we have seen to-night

Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
 This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
 Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, 172
 As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning
 know

Where we shall find him most conveniently.
 [Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's
 death

 To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe, 4
 Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
 That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
 Together with remembrance of ourselves.
 Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, 8
 The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
 Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,
 With one auspicious and one dropping eye,
 With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage, 12

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,
 Taken to wife; nor have we herein barr'd
 Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
 With this affair along: for all, our thanks. 16
 Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
 Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
 Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
 Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, 20
 Colleagu'd with the dream of his advantage,
 He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
 Importing the surrender of those lands

Lost by his father, with all bands of law, 24
 To our most valiant brother. So much for him.
 Now for ourself and for this time of meeting,
 Thus much the business is: we have here writ
 To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras, 28
 Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
 Of this his nephew's purpose, to suppress
 His further gait herein; in that the levies,
 The lists and full proportions, are all made 32
 Out of his subject; and we here dispatch
 You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
 For bearers of this greeting to old Norway,
 Giving to you no further personal power 36
 To business with the king more than the scope
 Of these delated articles allow.

Farewell an' let your haste commend your duty.
 Cor. } In that and all things will we show
 Vol. } our duty. 40
 King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, 44
And lose your voice; what wouldst thou beg,

Laertes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth, 48
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. Dread my lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark, 52

To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France

And bow them to your gracious leave and
pardon. 56

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent: 60
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will.
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,— 64

Ham. [Aside.] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much I' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off, 68

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy veiled lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st 'tis common; all that live must die,
Passing through nature to eternity. 73

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.
Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?
Ham. Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not
'seems.' 76

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly; these indeed seem.
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father: 88
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and you the survivor bound

In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow; but to persevere 92
In obstinate condolement is a course
Of implous stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfordfd, a mind impatient, } 96

An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what we know must be and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition 100
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,

To reason most absurd, whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried, 104
From the first corse illi he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father; for let the world take note, 108
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love

Than that which dearest father bears his son
Do I impart toward you. For your intent 112
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire;
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye, 116
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet:

I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come;
This gentlo and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof, 124
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit
again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away. 128
[Exeunt all except HAMLET.]

Ham. O! that this too too solid flesh would melt,

Thaw and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O
God! 132

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature 136

Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead; nay, not so much, not

As if increase of appetite had grown 144
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month, Let me not think on't: Frailty, thy name is woman!

A little month; or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears; why she, even she,— 149
O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with mine
uncle,

My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules: within a month, 153
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O! most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets. 157
It is not nor it cannot come to good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well: 160
Horatio, or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?
Marcellus? 165

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. [To BER-NARDO.] Good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord. 169

Ham. I would not hear you enemy say so,
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report 172
Against yourself; I know you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral. 176

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;

I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats 180

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven

Ere I had ever seen that day, Horatio!

My father, methinks I see my father. 184

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,

I shall not look upon his like again. 188

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king, my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while 192

With an attent ear, till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,

This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentle-
men, 196

Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd: a figure like your
father,

Armed at points exactly, cap-a-pe, 200

Appears before them, and with solemn march

Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd

By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,

Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, dis-till'd 204

Almost to jelly with the act of fear,

Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did,

And I with them the third night kept watch;

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in 209

Form of the thing, each word made true and

good,

The apparition comes. I knew your father;

These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this? 212

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did;

But answer made it none; yet once methought

I lifted up its head and did address 216

Itself to motion, like as it would speak;

But even then the morning cock crew loud,

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away

And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange. 220

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;

And we did think it writ down in our duty

To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles

me. 224

Hold you the watch to-night?

Mar. } We do, my lord.

Ber. }

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Mar. }

Ber. }

Ham. Arm'd, my lord.

Mar. }

Ham. From top to toe?

Mar. }

Ham. My lord, from head to foot.

Mar. }

Ber. }

Ham. Then saw you not his face? 228

Hor. O yes! my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What! look'd he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale or red? 232

Hor. Nay, very pale.
 Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?
 Hor. Most constantly.
 Ham. I would I had been there.
 Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.
 Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long? 236 Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
 Mar. }
 Ber. } Longer, longer.
 Hor. Not when I saw it.
 Ham. His beard was grizzled, n' it?
 Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life, 240
 A sable silver'd.
 Ham. I will watch to-night;
 Perchance 'twill walk again.
 Hor. I warrant it will.
 Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
 I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape 244
 And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
 If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
 Let it be tenable in your silence still;
 And whatsoever else shall hap to-night, 248
 Give it an understanding, but no tongue:
 I will requite your loves. So, fare you well,
 Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve.
 I'll visit you.
 All. Our duty to your honour. 252
 Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell.
 [Exit HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.
 My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
 I doubt some foul play: would the night were
 come!
 Till then sit still, my soul: foul deeds will rise, 256
 Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.]

Scene III.—A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:
 And, sister, as the winds give benefit
 And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
 But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that? 4 Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,

Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
 A violet in the youth of primy nature,
 Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, 8
 The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
 No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:

For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
 In thews and bulk; but, as this temple waxes, 12
 The inward service of the mind and soul
 Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now,
 And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
 The virtue of his will; but you must fear, 16

His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own,
 For he himself is subject to his birth;
 He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
 Carve for himself, for on his choice depends 20
 The safety and the health of the whole state;
 And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
 Unto the voice and yielding of that body Wherof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you, 24

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
 As he in his particuler act and place
 May give his saying deed; which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal. 28
 Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
 If with too credent ear you list his songs,
 Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd importunity. 32

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire.
 The chariest maid is prodigal enough 36
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon;
 Virtue herself 'scapes not calumnious strokes;
 The canker galls the infants of the spring
 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd, 40
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
 Contagious blastments are most imminent.

Be wary then; best safety lies in 'car:
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near. 44
 Oph. I shall th' effect of this good lesson keep,
 As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven, 48
 Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And recks not his own rede.

Laer. O! fear me not.
 I stay too long; but here my father comes. 52

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail, 56
 And you are stay'd for. There, my blessing with
 thee!

And these few precepts in thy memory
 Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no
 tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. 60
 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar;
 The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
 Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
 But do not dull thy palm with entertainment 64
 Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in,
 Bear 't that th' opposed may beware of thee.
 Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice; 68

Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you? 88

Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.

If it be so,—as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,—I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,

Unsettled in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself
a baby,

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or,—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, 108
Running it thus,—you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with
love

in honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it: go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do
know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these hazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,
You must not take for fire. From this time 120
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young, 124
And with a larger tether may he walk
Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers,
Not of that dye which their investments show, 128
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment's leisure, 133
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: then it draws near the season

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring
reels;

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom? 12

Ham. Ay, marry, is't:
But to my mind,—though I am native here
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations;
They clepe us drunkards, and with awlsh phrase

Soll our addition; and indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chanceth in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth,—wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin,—

By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
 Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
 Or by some habit that too much overleavens 29
 The form of plausible manners; that these men,
 Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
 Being nature's livery, or fortune's star, 32
 Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
 As infinite as man may undergo,
 Shall in the general censure take corruption
 From that particular fault: the dram of calè 36
 Doth all the noble substance of a doubt,
 To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
 Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, 40
 Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
 Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
 Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
 That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,
 King, father; royal Dane, O! answer me: 45
 Let me not hurt in ignorance; but tell
 Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
 Have hurst their cerements; why the sepulchre,
 Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd, 49
 Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
 To cast thee up again. What may this mean.
 That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel 52
 Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
 Making night hideous; and we fools of nature
 So horribly to shake our disposition
 With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
 Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

[The Ghost beckons HAMLET.

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
 As if it some impartment did desire
 To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action 60
 It waves you to a more removed ground;
 But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then, will I follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear? 64
 I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
 And for my soul, what can it do to that,
 Being a thing immortal as itself?
 It waves me forth again; I'll follow it. 68

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,
 my lord,

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
 That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
 And there assume some other horrible form. 72
 Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
 And draw you into madness? think of it;
 The very place puts toys of desperation,
 Without more motive, into every brain 76
 That looks so many fathoms to the sea
 And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still. Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands! 80

Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,

And makes each petty artery in this body
 As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.

[Ghost beckons.

Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen, 84

[Breaking from them.

By heaven! I'll make a ghost of him that lets
 me:

I say, away! Go on, I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost and HAMLET.

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey
 him. 88

Hor. Have after. To what issue will this
 come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him.
 [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak;
 I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
 When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
 Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas! poor ghost. 94

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing

To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear
Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
 Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
 And for the day confin'd to fast in fires,
 Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
 Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbidd 98

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
 I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
 Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young
 blood, 100
 Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
 And each particular hair to stand an end,
 Like quills upon the fretful porpentine: 104
 But this eternal blazon must not be

To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O list!

If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

Ham. O God! 24

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder!

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is; but this most foul, strange, and unnatural. 28

Ham. Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation or the thoughts of love,

May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;

And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weel

That rots itself in ease on Lethæan wharf, 33

Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:

'Tis given out that, sleeping in mine orchard, A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark 36

Is by a forged process of my death

Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth,

The serpent that did sting thy father's life

Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! 40

My uncle!

Ghost. A, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,—

O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power 44

So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust

The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen.

O Hamlet! what a falling-off was there;

From me, whose love was of that dignity 48

That it went hand in hand even with the vow

I made to her in marriage; and to decline

Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor

To those of mine! 52

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,

Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven.

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,

Will sate itself in a celestial bed, 56

And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;

Brief let me be. Sleeping within mine orchard,

My custom always in the afternoon, 60

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole.

With juice of cursed hebona in a vial,

And in the porches of mine ears did pour

The leperous distilment; whose effect 64

Holds such an enmity with blood of man

That swift as quicksilver it courses through

The natural gates and alleys of the body,

And with a sudden vigour it doth posset 68

And curd, like eager droppings into milk,

The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine:

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,

Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,

All my smooth body. 73

'Twas thus I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,

Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd;

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin, 76

Unhouse'd, disappointed, unanel'd,

No reckoning made, but sent to my account

With all my imperfections on my head:

O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! 80

If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be

A couch for luxury and damned incest.

But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act, 84

Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive

Against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,

To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!

'The glow-worm shows the matlin to be near, 88

And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire;

Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit]

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth!

What else? 92

And shall I couple hell? O fie! Hold, hold,

my heart!

And you, my slews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stifiy up! Remember thee!

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee!

Yea, from the table of my memory

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,

That youth and observation copied there;

And thy commandment all alone shall live

Within the book and volume of my brain,

Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!

O most pernicious woman!

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!

My tables,—meet it is I set it down,

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain,

At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark. 96

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my work.

It is, 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.'

I have sworn't. 100

Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!

Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!

Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure!

Mar. [Within.] So be it!

Hor. [Within.] Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord? 117

Ham. O! wonderful.

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No; you will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven!

Mar. Nor I, my lord. 120

Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?

But you'll be secret.

Hor. } Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Mar. }

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all

Denmark,

But he's an arrant knave. 124

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are i' the right; And so, without more circumstance at all, I hold it fit that we shake hands and part; 128 You, as your business and desire shall point you,—

For every man hath business and desire, Such as it is,—and, for mine own poor part, Look you, I'll go pray. 132

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio, 136

And much offence, too. Touching this vision here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you; For your desire to know what is between us, O'ermaster't as you r And now, good friends, 140

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers, Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night. 144

Hor. } My lord, we will not.

Mar. }

Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed. 148

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ah, ha, he! sayst thou so? art thou there, true-penny?

Come on—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—

Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord. 152

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Hic et ubique! then we'll shift our ground. 156

Come hither, gentlemen,

And lay your hands again upon my sword:

Never to speak of this that you have heard,

Swear by my sword. 160

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy plover! once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange! 160

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. 162

But come;

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy, How strange or odd so'er I bear myself, As I perchance hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on, 172

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall, With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase, As, 'Well, well, we know,' or, 'We could, an i

we would;' 176

Or, 'If we list to speak,' or, 'There be, an i

they might;' 178

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know aught of me: this not to do, So grace and mercy at your most need help you

Swear. 180

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear. [They swear.]

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you: And what so poor a man as Hamlet is 184

May do, to express his love and friendship to you, God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in to gether; And still your fingers on your lips, I pray. The time is out of joint; O cursed spite, 188

That ever I was born to set it right! [Exeunt]

Nay, come, let's go together.

Act II.

Scene I.—A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquiry of his behaviour. 4

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said, very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Daneskers are in Paris; And how, and who, what means, and where they keep, 8

What company, at what expense; and finding By this encompassment and drift of question

That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it: 12

Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;

As thus, 'I know his father, and his friends,
And, in part, him;' do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord, 16

Pol. 'And, in part, him; but,' you may say,
'not well:

But if't be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so; and there put on him
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him; take heed of that; 21
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord? 24

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,

Drabbing; you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge, 25

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency;
That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults
so quaintly

That they may seem the talents of liberty, 32
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord, 36
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, hero's my drift;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a tiling a little soll'd i' the working, 40
Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd, 44
He closes with you in this consequence;
'Good sir,' or so; or 'friend,' or 'gentleman,'
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord, 48

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does,— what was I about to say? By the mass I was about to say something; where did I leave?

Rey. At 'closes in the consequence,' 52
At 'friend or so,' and 'gentleman.'

Pol. At 'closes in the consequence,' ay marry;

He closes with you thus: 'I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day, 55
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was a' gaming; there o'ertook in 's rouse;
There falling out at tennis;' or perchance,

'I saw him enter such a house of sale,' 60

Pol. Indeed, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth;
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach, 64

With windlasses, and with assays of bias,

By indirections find directions out:
So by my former lecture and advice

Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God bid' wi' you; fare you well. 69

Rey. Good my lord!

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord, 72

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. [Exit REYNALDO.]

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?

Oph. Alas! my lord, I have been so afraid,

Unrighted.

Pol. With what, in the name of God? 76

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrae'd;

No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ancle; 80

Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell

To speak of horrors, he comes before me. 84

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard,

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;

At last, a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down, 92

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk

And end his being. That done, he lets me go, 96
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his help;

For out o' doors he went without their help,
And to the last bended their light on me. 100

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the cause.

There is a madness of love,
Which so weak a party fordoes itself

And makes the will a desperate undertaker
As oft as any passion under heaven 105

It does afflict our natures. I am sorry.

What have you seen him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my lord; but, as you did command, 108

I did repel his letters and deuled
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better heed and judgment
I had not quoted him; I fear'd he did but trifle,
And meant to wrack thee; but, beshrew my jealousy! 113

By heaven, it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves In our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort 115
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
This must be known; which, being kept close,
might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
Come. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSECRANTZ, GULDEN-STERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Gulldenstern!
Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it, 5
Since nor the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be More than his father's death, that thus hath put
him 8

So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That, being of so young days brought up with
him,
And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour, 12

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time; so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean, 16
Wher' aught to us unknown afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And sure I am two men there are not living 20
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope, 24
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey, 29
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded. 32

King. Thanks, Rosecrantz and gentle Gulldenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Gulldenstern and gentle Rosencrantz;

And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. Go, some of you, 36
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!
[Exeunt ROSECRANTZ, GULDENSTERN, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good
lord, 40
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. I have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, 44
Both to my God and to my gracious king;
And I do think—or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do—that I have found 48
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast. 52

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit POLONIUS.]

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends!
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires. 60

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;

But, better look'd into, he truly found 64
It was against your highness: whereat griev'd,
That so his sickness, age, and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests

On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys, 68
Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle never more

To give the assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, 72
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee

And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;

With an entreaty, herein further shown. 76
[Giving a paper.]

That It might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well; 80
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business:
Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour.

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home.

[Ereunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Pol. This business is well ended. 85
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, 'what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Your noble son is mad: 92
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art. 1

Pol. Madam; I swear I use no art at all. 96
That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect, 101
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause;
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend. 105

I have a daughter, have while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: now, gather, and surmise.
To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia.— 109

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase; but you shall hear. Thus:
In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.— 112

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;

Doubt that the sun doth move; 116

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.

*O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers:
I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best! believe it. Adieu.*

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,

HAMLET.

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me;
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she 128
Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,—132
As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,—what might you,
Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book, 136
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? No, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak: 140
'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star;
This must not be:' and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens, 144
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed,—a short tale to make,—
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness, 148
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we wail for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely. 152

Pol. Hath there been such a time,—I'd fain know that,—

That I have positively said, 'Tis so,'

When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:

[Pointing to his head and shoulder.

If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know sometimes he walks four hours together 160

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter
to him;

Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter; if he love her not, 164

And be not from his reason failen thereon,

Let me be no assistant for a stat,

But keep a farm, and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading. 168

Pol. Away I do beseech you, both away.

I'll board him presently.

[Ereunt KING, QUEEN, and ATTENDANTS.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

O! give me leave,

How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God a-mercy. 172

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.
Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man. 177
Pol. Honest, my lord!
Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand. 181
Pol. That's very true, my lord.
Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter? 185
Pol. I have, my lord.
Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend, look to't. 189
Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord?
Ham. Words, words, words. 196
Pol. What is the matter, my lord?
Ham. Between who?
Pol. I mean the matter that you read, my lord. 200
Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum, and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward. 210
Pol. [Aside.] Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?
Ham. Into my grave? 214
Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. [Aside.] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you. 222
Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.
Pol. Fare you well, my lord. [Going.]
Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is. 226
Ros. [To POLONIUS.] God save you, sir!
Guil. Mine honour'd lord!
Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both? 234
Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.
Guil. Happy in that we are not over happy; On Fortune's cap we are not the very button. 237
Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?
Ros. Neither, my lord.
Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours? 241
Guil. Faith, her privates we.
Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? O! most true; she is a strumpet. What news? 244
Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.
Ham. Then is doomsday near; but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?
Guil. Prison, my lord! 252
Ham. Denmark's a prison.
Ros. Then is the world one.
Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst. 257
Ros. We think not so, my lord.
Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison. 261
Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind.
Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.
Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream. 269
Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.
Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow. 273
Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason. 277
Ros. } We'll wait upon you.
Guil. }
Ham. No such matter; I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?
Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion. 285
Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come, deal justly with me: come, come, nay, speak.

Ham. Why anything, but to the purpose.
 You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you. 297
Ros. To what end, my lord?
Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no! 305
Ros. [Aside to GULDENSTERN.] What say
 you?
Ham. [Aside.] Nay, then, I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off. 309
Guil. My lord, we were sent for.
Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moults no feather. I have of late,—but wherefore I know not,—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave overhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours.
 What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! In form, in moving, how express and admirable! In action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintesence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so. 331
Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.
Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said,
 'man delights not me?' 335
Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what luten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service. 340
Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target;
 the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they? 349
Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.
Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways. 354

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.
Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?
Ros. No, indeed they are not. 359
Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?
Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically elapped for't: these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages,—so they call them,—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills, and dare scarce come thither. 363
Ham. What! are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players,—as it is most like, if their means are no better,—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession? 376
Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides: and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question. 381
Ham. Is it possible?
Guil. O! there has been much throwing about of brains. 384
Ham. Do the boys carry it away?
Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.
Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [Flourish of trumpets within.
Guil. There are the players. 395
Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsi-nore. Your hands, come then; the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comp' with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players—which, I tell you, must show fairly outward—should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.
Guil. In what, my dear lord? 404
Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.
 Enter POLONIUS.
Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen! 408
Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too;
 at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. You say right, sir; o' Monday morning; 'twas so indeed. 416

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz! 421

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou! 432

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why

*One fair daughter and no more,
The which he loved passing well.* 436

Pol. [Aside.] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not 't the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well. 440

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

As by lot, God wot. 444

And then, you know,

It came to pass, as most like it was.—

The first row of the pious ehanson will show you more; for look where my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am glad to see thee well; welcome, good friends. O, my old friend! Thy face is valenced since I saw thee last: com'st thou to beard me in Denmark? What! my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech. 461

First Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: hut it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of 'an excellent play, well digested in the scene, down with as much modesty as cunning remember one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indiet the author of affectation; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved; 'twas .Eneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see:— 480

*The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,—
'tis not so, it begins with Pyrrhus:—*

*The rugged Pyrrhus, he, whose sable arm,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse, 485 Hath now this dread and black complexion sneard*

*With heraldry more dismal; head to foot
Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd 488*

*With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,
Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous and damned light
To their vile murders: roasted in wrath and fire, 492*

*And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks.*

So proceed ~ a. 496

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent and good discretion.

First Play. Anon, he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, 500

Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide;

*But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerved father falls. Then senseless*

Ilium, 504

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash

*Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for lo! his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head 508*

Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:

*So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood,
And like a neutral to his will and matter, 512*

Did nothing.

*But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,*

*The bold winds speechless and the orb below
As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder*

Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause, Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work;

*And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof eterne, 520*

*With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.*

*ut, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod, take away her power; 524*

*Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,
And bowl the round heaven down the hill of

Pol. This is 'oo long. 528

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithce, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba. 532

First Play. But who, O! who had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. 'The mobled queen?'—

Pol. That's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames 536

With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up; 540
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,

'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd:

But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs, 545

The instant burst of clamour that she made—
Unless things mortal move them not at all—
Would have made mileh the burning eyes of

heaven, 548

And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look! wh'er he has not turned his colour and has tears in's eyes. Prithce, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert. 560

Ham. God's bodikins, man, much better; use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in. 565

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. [Exit POLONIUS, with all the Players but the First.] Dost thou hear me, old friend;
can you play the Murder of Gonzago? 570

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha' to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

First Play. Ay, my lord. 576

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit First Player.] [To RO-SENCRANTZ and GULDENSTERN.] My good friends,
I'll leave you till night; you are welcome to Elsinore. 581

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exit ROSENCRANTZ and GULDENSTERN.]

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi'ye! Now I am alone.
O! what a rogue and peasant slave am I: 584

Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit
That from her working all his visage wann'd, 588
Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function sultring,
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing;
For Hecuba! 592

What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba
That he should weep for her? What would he do
Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with
tears, 596

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,
Make mad the guilty and appal the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed
The very faculties of eyes and ears. 600

Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,

And can say nothing; no, not for a king, 604
Upon whose property and most dear life
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?

Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face? 608

Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?

Ha!
Swounds, I should take it, for it cannot be 612
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter, or ere this
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain! 617

O! vengeance!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, 620

Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion! 624

Fie upon't! foh! About, my brain! I have heard,
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Beeu struck so to the soul that presently 628

They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father 632
Before mine uncle; I'll observe his looks;
I'll tent him to the quick: if he but blench
I know my course. The spirit that I have seen
May be the devil; and the devil hath power 636

To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps

Out of my weakness and my melancholy—
As he is very potent with such spirits—
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds 640
More relative than this: the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.]

Act III.

Scene I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,

Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy? 4

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted;

But from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be soundled,

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof, 8
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition. 12

Ros. Niggard of question, but of our demands

Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him

To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players 16

We o'er-raught on the way; of these we told him,

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: they are about the court,

And, as I think, they have already order 20
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true;

And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me 24

To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exit ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:

For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither, 29
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
Affront Ophelia.

Her father and myself, lawful espials, 32

Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge,

And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for. 36

Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope your virtues 40

Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may.

[Exit QUEEN.]

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so please you,

We will bestow ourselves. [To OPHELIA.] Read on this book; 44

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,
'Tis too much prov'd, that with devotlon's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er 48
The devil himself.

King. [Aside.] O! 'tis too true;
How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!

The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it 52
Than is my deed to my most painted word:
O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.

[Exit KING and POLONIUS.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question: 56

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep;

No more; and, by a sleep to say we end 61
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep; 64

To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may
come

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect 68

That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of
time,

The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's con-
tumely,

The pang of disprized love, the law's delay, 72
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear, 76

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourne

No traveller returns, puzzles the will, 80
 And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
 Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
 And thus the native hue of resolution 84
 Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
 And enterprises of great pith and moment,
 With this regard their currents turn aright,
 And lose the name of action. Soft you now! 88
 The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons
 Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
 How does your honour for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
 That I have longed long to re-deliver;
 I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
 I never gave you aught. 96
Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
 And, with them, words of so sweet breath
 compos'd
 As made the things more rich: their perfume lost.

Take them again; for to the noble mind 100
 Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
 There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?
Oph. My lord! 104

Ham. Are you fair?
Oph. What means your lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty. 109

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?
Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love thee once. 117

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived. 123

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in.
 What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father? 135

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in his own house. Farewell.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens. 140
Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.
 Get thee to a nunnery, go; farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too.
 Farewell. 148

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!
Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance.
 Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad.
 I say, we will have no more marriages; those that are married already, all but one, shall live;
 the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.
 [Exit.]

Oph. O! what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown:
 The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword; 160

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
 The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
 The observed of all observers, quite, quite down!
 And I, of ladies most deject and wretched, 164
 That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
 Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
 Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
 That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth 168

Blasted with ecstasy: O! woe is me,
 To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
 Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little, 172
 Was not like madness. There's something in his soul

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
 And, I do doubt, the hatch and the disclose
 Will be some danger; which for to prevent, 176
 I have in quick determination
 Thus set it down: he shall with speed to England,

For the demand of our neglected tribute:
 Haply the seas and countries different 180
 With variable objects shall expel
 This something settled matter in his heart,
 Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus
 From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe 185
 The origin and commencement of his grief

Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia! You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said; We heard it all. My lord, do as you please; 189
But, if you had it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his griefs: let her be round with
him; 192

And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him, or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so: 196
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and—as I may say—whirlwind of passion, you must acquiesce and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O! it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it. 17

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O! there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and belov'd that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably. 40

First Play. I hope we have reformed that rudely with us.

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowus speak no more than I set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered; that's villanous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now! will the king hear this piece of v

Pol. A. . . . queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit POLONIUS.]

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. } We will, my lord. 5
Guil. }

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Ham. What, ho! Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal. 6

Hor. O! my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast but thy good spirits To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd? 6

No; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp, And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice And could of men distinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing, A man that fortune's buffets and rewards Hast ta'en with equal thanks; and bless'd art those

Whose blood and judgment are so well commingled

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee. Something too much of this. There is a play to-night before the king; One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death: I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe mine uncle; if his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen, And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note;

As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note;

For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord: 92
If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be like:
Get you a place. 96

*Danish march. A Flourish. Enter KING,
QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHIELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.*

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?
Ham. Excellent, I' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-cramped; you cannot feed capons so. 100

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To POLONIUS.] My lord, you played once i' the university, you say? 105

Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact? 108

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was kill'd
i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready? 112

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by
me. 116

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the KING.] O ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap? 120 [Lying down at OPHIELIA'S feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord. 125

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maid's legs.

Oph. What is, my lord? 128

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord. 132

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within two hours. 136

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens!
died two months ago, and not forgotten yet?
Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, hy'r lady, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.' 146

Hauteboys play. The dumb-show enters.

*Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him.
He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him.
Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown,
kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooces the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.*

Oph. What means this, my lord?
Ham. Marry, this is niching unlatheo; 't means mischief. 149

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all. 153

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him; be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means. 157

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us and for our tragedy, 160
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring? 164

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.
Ham. As woman's love.

Enter two Players, King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone round

*Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orb'd ground,
And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen
About the world have times twelve thirties been,
Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands
Unite commutual in most sacred bands. 172*

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

*Make us again count o'er ere love be done!
But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;
For women's fear and love holds quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity. 180*

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there. 184

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to do:
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind 188
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O! confound the rest;
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
A second husband let me be accurst;

None wed the second but who kill'd the first. 192
Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move,

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;
A second time I kill my husband dead, 196
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak;

But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory, 200
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,
But fall unshaken when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis that we forget 204

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt;
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose. 208

The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy;
Where joy most revels grief doth moost lament,
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange,
That even our love should with our fortunes 213
change;

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove
Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite 216
flies;

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try 220
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown, 224
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband win
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light! 228

Sport and repose lock from me day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An acher's cheer in prison be my scope!

Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 233
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now! 235

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain,
And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play? 241

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O! but she'll keep her word. 244

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest, no offence i' the world. 248

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Truly. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work; but what of that? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung. 257

Enter Player as Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are a good chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying. 261

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge. 264

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands. Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come; the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge. 269

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected
With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property, 274
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison into the Sleeper's ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for'state. His name's Gonzago; the story is extant, and writ in very choice Italian. You shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife. 280

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Ham. Give o'er the play. 284

Q. Give me some light: away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all except HAMLET and HORATIO.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play; 238
For some must watch, while some must sleep:

So runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I. 296

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—pajock. 300

Hor. You might have rinned.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord. 304

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning?

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come,
the recorders! 308

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word
with you. 313

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him? 316

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous dis-tempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler. 320

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler. 324

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir; pronounce. 328

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your garden and my return shall be the end of my business. 337

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,— 344

Ros. Then, thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart. 349

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother, Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers. 356

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend. 360

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark? 364

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,'— the proverb is something musty.

Enter Players, with recorders.

O! the recorders: let me see one. To withdraw with you: why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toll?
Guil. O! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe? 373

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot. 376

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying; govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill. 385

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. 396

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel? 401

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel. 404

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by. [Aside.] They fool me to the top of my bent. [Aloud.] I will come by and by. 409

Pol. I will say so. [Exit.]

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends. [Exeunt all but HAMLET.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot
blood,

And do such bitter business as the day 416
Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.

O heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom;

Let me be cruel, not unnatural; 420

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites;

How in my words soever she be shent,

To give them seals never, my soul, consent! 424
[Exit.]

Scene III.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare
you;

I, our commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you. 4

The terms of our estate may not endure

Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow

Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide.
Most holy and religious fear it is 8

To keep those many many bodies safe

That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armour of the mind
To keep itself from noyance; but much more 13

That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cause of majesty

Die; not alone, but, like a gulf doth draw 16

What's near it with it; it is a massy wheel,

Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence, 21

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone

Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage; 24

For we will fetters put upon this fear,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros.

Guil.

We will haste u

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself

To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him

home;

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,

'Tis meet that some more audience than

mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'er

hear

The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege;

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed

And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit POLONIUS.]

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;

It hath the primal eldest curse upon't;

A brother's murder! Pray can I not,

Though inclination be as sharp as will:

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this curs'd hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serve mercy

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what's in prayer but this two-fold force,

To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,

Or pardon'd, being down? Then, I'll look up;

My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer

Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder?'

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd

Of those effects for which I did the murder,

My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.

May one be pardon'd and retain the offence? 5

In the corrupted currents of this world

Offence's ghild hand may shove by justice,

And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above;

There is no shuffling, there the action lies

In his true nature, and we ourselves compell'd

To give in evidence. What then? what rests?

Try what repentance can: what can it not?

Yet what can it, when one can not repent?

O wretched state! O bosom black as death!

O limed soul, that struggling to be free

Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay!

Bow, stubborn knees; and heart with strings o'

steel

Be soft as snaws of the new-born babe.

All may be well. [Retires and kneels.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying; 73
 And now I'll do't: and so he goes to heaven;
 And so am I reveng'd. That would I. scann'd:
 A villain kills my father; and for that, 76
 I, his sole son, do this same villain send
 To heaven.
 Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
 He took my father grossly, full of bread, 80
 With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
 And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?
 But in our circumstance and course of thought
 'Tis heavy with him. And am I then reveng'd,
 To take him in the purging of his soul, 85
 When it is fit and season'd for his passage?
 No.
 Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid heat;
 When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage, 89
 Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed,
 At gaming, swearing, or about some act
 That has no relish of salvation in't; 92
 Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
 And that his soul may go as damn'd and black
 As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
 This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]

The KING rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below: 97
 Words without thoughts never to heaven go.

Scene IV.—The QUEEN'S Apartment.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him;
 Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
 And that your Grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here. 4
 Pray you, be round with him.
Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!
Queen. I'll warrant you;
 Fear me not. Withdraw, I hear him coming.
 [POLONIUS hides behind the arras.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter? 8
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue. 12
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so: You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
 And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother.
Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak. 17
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;
 You go not, till I set you up a guss
 Where you may see the inmost part of you. 20
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?
 Help, help, ho!
Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!
Ham. [Draws.] How now! a rat? Dead, for a ducat, dead!
 [Makes a pass through the arras.]
Pol. [Behind.] O! I am slain. 24
Queen. O me! what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not: is it the king?
Queen. O! what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good mother,
 As kill a king, and marry with his brother. 28
Queen. As kill a king!
Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.
 [Lifts up the arras and discovers POLONIUS.
 [To POLONIUS.] Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
 I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune; 32
 Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
 Leave wringing of your hands: peace! sit you down,
 And let me wring your heart; for so I shall
 If it be made of penetrable stuff, 36
 If damned custom have not brass'd it so
 That it is proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
 In noise so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act
 That blurs the grace and blush of modesty,
 Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose
 From the fair forehead of an innocent love
 And sets a blister there, makes marriage vows
 As false as dicers' oaths; O! such a deed 45
 As from the body of contraction plucks
 The very soul, and sweet religion makes
 A rhapsody of words; heaven's face doth glow,
 Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
 With tristful visage, as against the doom,
 Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ay me! what act,
 That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
 The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. 53
 See, what a grace was seated on this brow;

Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself, 56
 An eye like Mars, to threaten and command,
 A station like the herald Mercury
 New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill,
 A combination and a form indeed, 60
 Where every god did seem to set his seal,
 To give the world assurance of a man.
 This was your husband: look you now, what follows.

Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear, 64 Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
 eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
 And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
 You cannot call it love, for at your age 68

The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
 And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
 Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,

Else could you not have motion; but sure, that sense 72

Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err,
 Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
 But it reserv'd some quantity of choicest,
 To serve in such a difference. What devil was't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
 Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
 Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,

Or hut a sickly part of one true sense 80
 Could not so mope.

O shame! where is thy blush? Repellous
 hell,

If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
 To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, 84
 And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
 When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
 Since frost itself as actively doth burn,

And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more;
 Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul; 89
 And there I see such black and grained spots
 As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
 In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed, 92
 Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
 Over the nasty sty,—

Queen. O! speak to me no more;
 These words like daggers enter in mine ears;
 No more, sweet Hamlet!

Ham. A murderer, and a villain;
 A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe 97
 Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
 A cut-purse of the empire and the rule,
 That from a shelf the precious diadem stole, 100
 And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!
Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,

You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure? 104

Queen. Alas! he's mad!
Ham. Do not come near my son to ehld,

That, laps'd in sense and passion, thus go by
 The important acting of your dreadful command?
 O! say.

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation 109
 Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
 But, look! amazement on thy mother sits;
 O! step between her and her fighting soul; 112

Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
 Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas! how is't with you,

That you do bend your eye on vacancy 116
 And with the incorporeal air do hold discourse?
 Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
 And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,

Your bedded hair, like life in excrements, 120
 Starts up and stands an end. O gentle son!
 Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
 Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable. Do not look upon
 me;

Lest with this piteous action you convert
 My stern effects: then what I have to do 128
 Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away; 133

My father, in his habit as he liv'd;

Look! where he goes, even now, out at the portal. [Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain: 136

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,

And makes as healthful music. It is not madness 141

That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,

And I the matter will re-word, which madness

Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,

Lay not that flattering unctio[n] to your soul, 145

That not your trespass but my madness speaks;

It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,

Whiles rank corruption, mining all within, 148

Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;

Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;

And do not spread the compost on the weeds
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue; 152

For in the fatness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart
In twain. 156

Ham. O! throw away the worsrer part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night; but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not. 160

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery, 164

That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And master ev'n the devil or throw him out 169
With wondrous potency. Once more, good-
night:

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord, 172
[Pointing to POLONIUS.

I do repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well 176
The death I gave him. So, again, good-night.

I must be cruel only to be kind:
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do? 180
Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you
do:

Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse;

And let him, for a pair of recchy kisses, 184
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him
know; 188

For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy, 192

Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down. 196

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack!

I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on. 201
Ham. There's letters seal'd; and my two schoolfellows,

Whom I will trust as I will aiders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way, 204

And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Holst with his own petar: and it shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines, 208 And blow them at the moon. O! 'tis most sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet.
This man shall set me packing;
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room. 212
Mother, good-night. Indeed this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you. 216
Good-night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; HAMLET dragging in the body of POLONIUS.

Act IV.

Scene I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:
You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?

Queen. [To ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDEN-STERN.] Bestow this place on us a little while. 4

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
Ah! my good lord, what have I seen to-night.

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?
Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit, 8
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat! a rat!'
And, in his brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed! 12
It had been so with us had we been there.

His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence 17
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man: but so much was our
love,

We would not understand what was most fit, 20
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath
kill'd; 24
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.
King. O Gertrude! come away. 28
The sun no sooner shall the mountain's touch
But we will ship him hence; and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse. Ho! Guilden-stern! 32

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
Go seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this. 37
[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter, 41
As level as the cannon to his blank Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our
name,
And hit the woundless air. O! come away; 44
My soul is full of discord and dismay. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.
Ros. } [Within.] Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!
Guil. }
Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O! here they come. 4

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?
Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence
And bear it to the chapel. 8
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!
what replication should be made by the son of a king? 14

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed; when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry
again. 23

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
Ros. My lord, you must all us where the body is, and go with us to the king. 25
Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—Guil. A thing, my lord!
Ham. Of nothing; bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt]

Scene III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.
How dangerous is it that this man goes loose!
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's loved of the distracted multitude, 4
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause; diseases desperate grown 8
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,
Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now! what hath befall'n?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord, 12
We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know
your pleasure.
King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord. 16

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper! Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.
King. Alas, alas! 28
Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.
King. What dost thou mean by this? 32
Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.
King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him in the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby. 40

King. [To some Attendants.] Go seek him
there.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve 44
For that which thou hast done, must send thee
hence

With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thy-
self;

The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
The associates tend, and every thing is bent 48
For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that says them. But, one; for England! Farewell, dear mother. 52

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh, and so, my mother. Come, for England! [Exit.]

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard: 57

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.
Away! for every thing is seal'd and done

That else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste. 60

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at ought,—
As my great power thereof may give thee sense,

Since yet thy cleatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe 64

Pays homage to us,—thou mayest not coldly set
Our sovereign process, which imports at full,

By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;

For like the hectic in my blood he rages, 69
And thou must cure me. Till I know 'tis done,
Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun.

[Exit.]

Scene IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish
king;

Tell him that, by his licence, Fortinbras
Claims the conveyance of a promis'd march

Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous. 4
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,

And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. 3
[Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Soldiers.]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN,
&c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland. 12

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland,
sir,

Or for some frontier? 16

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground

That hath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; 20

Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole

A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd. 24

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats

Will not debate the question of this straw:
This is the imposthume of much wealth and

peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without 28

Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit.]

Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt all except HAMLET.]

How all occasions do inform against me, 32
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure he that made us with such large discourse, 36

Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason

To fast in us unus'd. Now, wher't it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple 40

Of thinking too precisely on the event,
A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,

And ever three parts coward, I do not know
Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do;'

44 Sith I have cause and will and strength and means

To do't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
Witness this army of such mass and charge

48
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd

Makes mouths at the invisible event,
Exposing what is mortal and unsure

To all that fortune, death and danger dare, 52
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great

Is not to stir without great argument,
I 18

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
 When honour's at the stake. How stand I then,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd, 57
 Excitements of my reason and my blood,
 And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men, 60
 That, for fantasy and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
 Which is not tomb enough and continent 64
 To hide the slain? O! from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit.]

Scene V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.
 Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract;
 Her mood will needs be pitied.
 Queen. What would she have?
 Gent. She speaks much of her father; says
 she hears 4
 There's tricks i' the world; and seems, and beats
 her heart;
 Spurs enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,

That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing.
 Yet the unshap'd use of it doth move 8
 The hearers to collection; they aim at it,
 And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
 Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,
 Indeed would make one think there might be thought, 12
 Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with, for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Gentleman.
 To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is, 17
 Each toy seems prologue to some great unness:
 So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
 It spills itself in fearing to be spilt. 20

Re-enter Gentleman, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. How should I your true love know
 From another one?
 By his cockle hat and staff, 24
 And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas! sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark. 25
 He is dead and gone, lady,
 He is dead and gone;
 At his head a grass-green turf,
 At his heels a stone. 22

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,—

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers;
 Which bewept to the grave did go
 With true-love showers. 4

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ld you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table! 4

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
 All in the morning betime,
 And I a maid at your window,
 To be your Valentine;
 Then up he rose, and doun'd his clothes,
 And dupp'd the chamber door;
 Let in the maid, that out a maid
 Never departed more. 5

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I'll make an end on't:

By Gis and by Saint Charity,
 Alack, and fie for shame!
 Young men will do't, if they come to't;
 By Cock they are to blame.
 Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
 You promis'd me to wed;
 So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
 An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it; and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Goodnight, ladies; good-night, sweet ladies; goodnight, good-night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch,
 I pray you. [Exit HORATIO.
 O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs 75
 All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions. First, her father slain;
 Next, your son gone; but he most violent author 80

Of his own just remove: the people muddled, Thicke and unwholesome in their thoughts and
 whispers,

For good Polonius' death; and we have done
 but greenly,

In hugger-mugger to enter him: poor Ophelia
 Divided from herself and her fair judgment, 85
 Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts:
 Last, and as much containing as all these,
 Her brother is in secret come from France, 88
 Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
 And wants not huzzers to infect his ear
 With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
 Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, 92
 Will nothing stick our person to arraign
 In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude! this,
 Like to a murdering-piece, in many places
 Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.
 Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door. 97
 What is the matter?
 Gen. Save yourself, my lord;
 The ocean, overpeering of his list,
 Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
 Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, 101
 O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord;
 And, as the world were now hut to begin,
 Antiquity forgot, custom not known, 104
 The ratifiers and props of every word,
 They cry, 'Choose we; Laertes shall be king!'
 Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
 'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!' 108

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!
 O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs!
 King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is the king? Sirs, stand you all without. 112

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you: keep the door. O thou vile king!
 Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes. 116

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,

Cries eye-kold to my father, brands the harlot
 Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
 Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
 That thy rebellion looks so giant-like? 121

Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:
 There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
 That treason can but peep to what it would, }
 Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, 125

Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go, Gertrude.

Speak, man.
 Laer. Where is my father?
 King. Dead.
 Queen. But not by him.
 King. Let him command his fill. 123
 Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled
 with.

To hell, allegiance! Vow, to the blackest devil!
 Conscience and grace go to the profoundest pit!
 I dare damnation. To this point I stand, 132
 That both the worlds I give to negligence.
 Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd
 Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?
 Laer. My will, not all the world: 136

And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,
 They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
 If you desire to know the certainty
 Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge, 142

That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?
 Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?
 Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll open my arms; 144

And like the kind life-renderer Helican,
 Repeat them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
 Like a good child and a true gentleman.
 That I am guiltless of your father's death, 148
 And am most sensibly in grief for it,
 It shall as level to your judgment pierce
 As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.
 Laer. How now! what noise is that? 152

Re-enter OPHELIA.

O heat, dry up my bralvs! tears seven times
 salt,

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!
 By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight,
 Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
 Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! 157
 O heavens! Is't possible a young maid's wits
 Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
 Nature is fine in love, and where 'tis fine 160
 It sends some precious instance of itself
 After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier;
 Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny; 164
 And in his grave rain'd many a tear;—

Fare you well, my dove!
 Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus. 163

Oph. You must sing, a-down a-down,
 And you call him a-down-a.

O how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter. 172

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts. 176

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines; there's rue for you; and here's some for me; we may call it herb of grace o' Sundays. O! you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy; I would give you some violets, but they have withered all when my father died. They say he made a good end,— 185

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,

She turns to favour and to prettiness. 188

Oph. And will he not come again?

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead;

Go to thy death-bed,

He never will come again. 192

His beard was as white as snow

All flaxen was his poll;

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan: 196

God ha' mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls! I pray God. God be wi' ye! [Exit.

Laer. Do you see this, O God? 201

King. Laertes, I must common with your grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart, Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, 204

And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.

If by direct or by collateral hand

They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,

Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours, 208

To you in satisfaction; but if not,

Be you content to lend your patience to us,

And we shall jointly labour with your soul

To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so: 212

His means of death, his obscure burial,

No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite nor formal ostentation,

Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,

That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall; 217

And where the offence is let the great axe fall.

I pray you go with me. [Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HORATIO and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir; they say, they have letter for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant]

I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

Sec. Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir;—it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England;—in your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is. 1

Hor. Horatio, when thou shalt have overview'd this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very war-like appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell. 31

He that thou knowest thine, 34

HAMLET.

Come, I will give you way for these your letters; And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he which hath your noble father slain Pursu'd my life. 4

Laer. It well appears: but tell me Why you proceeded not against these feats, So crimeful and so capital in nature, As by your safety, wisdom, all things else, You mainly were stirr'd up. 8

King. O! for two special reasons; Which may to you, perhaps, seem much un-snew'd,

But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks, and for myself,— 12

My virtue or my plague, be it either which,— She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,

That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive, 16
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him:
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone,

Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them. 24

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age 28
For her perfections. But my revenge will
come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that; you must not think
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
more; 33

I lov'd your father, and we love ourself,
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine.—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
This to your majesty; this to the queen. 37

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sullors, my lord, they say; I saw them
not:

They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd
them 40
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.
Leave us. [Exit Messenger.]

High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return. HAMLET.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back? 49

Or is it some abuse and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked.'
And in a postscript here, he says, 'alone.' 52
Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him
come:

It warns the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth, 56
'Thou diddest thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise?
Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;

So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace. 60

King. To thine own peace. If he be now re-turn'd,

As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device, 64
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd; 63
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talked of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality 72 Wherein, they say, you shiue; your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord? 76

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds, 80
Importing health and graveness. Two months
since

Here was a gentleman of Normandy:
I've seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't, he grew unto his seat, 85
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast; so far he topp'd my thought, 88

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same. 92

Laer. I know him well; he is the brooch indeed

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report 96
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed
If one could match you; the scrimers of their nation, 100

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg 104
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, 108
A face without a heart?

Laer.

Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,

But that I know love is begun by time,
 And that I see, in passages of proof, 112
 Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
 There lives within the very flame of love
 A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it,
 And nothing is at a like goodness still, 116
 For goodness, growing to a plurisy,
 Dies in his own too-much. That we would do,
 We should do when we would, for this 'would'
 changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many 120
 As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
 And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift sigh,

That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer;

Hamlet comes back; what would you undertake
 To show yourself your father's son in deed 125
 More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat 't' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanc-tuarize;
 Revenge should have no bounds. But, good
 Laertes, 128

Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.
 Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home;
 We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
 And set a double varnish on the fame 132
 The Frenchman gave you, bring you, in fine, together,

And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
 Most generous and free from all contriving,
 Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease 136
 Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
 A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice
 Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't;

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword. 140
 I bought an unclou'd mountebank,
 So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
 Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
 Collected from all simples that have virtue 144
 Under the moon, can save the thing from death
 That is but scratch'd withal; I'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
 It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this; 148
 Weigh what convenience both of time and means

May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
 And that our drift look through our bad performance

'Twere better not assay'd; therefore this project
 Should have a back or second, that might hold,
 If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see;
 We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning:
 I ha't: 156

When in your motion you are hot and dry,—
 As make your bouts more violent to that end,—
 And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd
 him

A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
 If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck, 161
 Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel, 164

So fast they follow: your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
 There with fantastic garlands did she come, 169
 Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
 That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
 But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call
 them: 172

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
 Clambling to hang, an envious silver broke,
 When down her weedy trophies and herself Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide, 176

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up;
 Which time she charmed snatches of old tunes,
 As one incapable of her own distress,
 Or like a creature native and indu'd 180
 Unto that element; but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
 Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
 To muddy death.

Laer. Alas! then, she is drown'd? 184*Queen.* Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
 Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears; but yet
 It is our trick, nature her custom holds, 188
 Let shame say what it will; when these are gone
 The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord!
 I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
 But that this folly douts it. [Exit.]

King. Let's follow, Gertrude.
 How much I had to do to calm his rage! 193
 Now fear I this will give it start again;
 Therefore let's follow. [Exit.]

Act V.

Scene I.—A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades and mattock.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore nd dry,— that end,— ve prepar'd

 t sipping,
 I stuck, 161
 stay! what n another's
 164
 's drown'd,
 s aslant a ssy stream;
 e come, 169

make her grave straight: the crowner hath sat in her, and finds it Christian burial. 5
First Clo. How can that be, unless she crown'd herself in her own defence?
Sec. Clo. Why, 'tis found so. 8
First Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly it argues an act; and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drown'd herself wittingly. 13
Sec. Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver,—
First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that? but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life. 21
Sec. Clo. But is this law?
First Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's quest
 law. 24
Sec. Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentiewoman she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.
First Clo. Why, there thou sayest; and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adan's profession. 34
Sec. Clo. Was he a gentleman?
First Clo. A' was the first that ever bore arms.
Sec. Clo. Why, he had none. 37
First Clo. What art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digg'd; could he dig without arms?
 I'll put another question to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—
Sec. Clo. Go to. 43
First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?
Sec. Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants. 48
First Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith;
 the gallows does well, but how does it well? It does well to those that do ill; now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee.
 Go't again; come.
Sec. Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter? 56
First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and myoke.
Sec. Clo. Marry, now I can tell.
First Clo. To't.
Sec. Clo. Mass, I cannot tell. 60
 Enter HAMLET and HORATIO at a distance.
First Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, 'a grave-maker': the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Youghan; fetch me a stoup of liquor.

 [Exit Second Clown.
First Clown digs, and sings.
 In youth, when I did love, did love,
 Methought it was very sweet, 68
 To contract, O! the time, for-a! my behave,
 O! methought there was nothing meet.
Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making? 72
Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of hisness.
Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. 76
First Clo.
 But age, with his stealing steps,
 Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
 And hath shipped me full the land,
 As if I had never been such. 80
 [Throws up a skull.
Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once; how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Caln's jaw-bone, that dkl the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-offices, one that would circumvent God, might it not? 86
Hor. It might, my lord.
Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say,
 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not? 92
Hor. Ay, my lord.
Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the maz-zard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with 'em? mine ache to think on't.
First Clo.
 A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, 100
 For and a shrouding sheet;
 O! a pit of clay for to be made
 For such a guest is meet.
 [Throws up another skull.
Ham. There's another; why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quiets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his re-cognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries; is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than mattock.

 Christian
 ation?
 therefore the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyance of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sir?

First Clo. Mine, sir.

O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is here.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

First Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours; for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir: 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so pleted that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

First Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that; it was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

First Clo. Why, because he was mad; he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

First Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

First Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

First Clo. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

First Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

First Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die,—as we have many pocky courses now—days, that will scarce hold the laying in,—will last you some eight year or nine year; a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

First Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore deceiver of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull hath lain you i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

First Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

First Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This!

First Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see.—[Takes the skull.]—Alas! poor Yorick. I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chapfallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

[Puts down the skull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away;

O! that that earth which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw.
But soft! but soft! aside; here comes the king.

*Enter Priests, &c., in procession: the Corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following;
KING, QUEEN, their Trains, &c.*

The queen, the courtiers: who is that they follow?

And with such malined rites? This doth betoken
The corpse they follow did with desperate hand
Fordo its own life; 'twas of some estate.
Couch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring with HORATIO.]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,
A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

First Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warrantise; her death was doubtful,

And, but that great command o'ersways the order,

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on
her;

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bring'ng home
Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

First Priest. No more be done:
We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing a requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;

And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia?

Queen. Sweets to the sweet; farewell!
[Scattering flowers.]

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's
wife;

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet
maid,

And not have strew'd thy grave.
Laer. O! treble woe

I fall ten times treble on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of. Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms.

[Leaps into the grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he whose grief

Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them
stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,

Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul! 280

[Grapples with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;

For though I am not splenetic and rash

Yet have I in me something dangerous,

Which let thy wisdom fear. Away thy hand!

King. Pluck them usunder.

Queen.

All. Gentlemen,— Hamlet! Hamlet!

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this thence

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,

Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her?

King. O! he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear liid.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou'lt do:

Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself?

Woo't drink up elsel? eat a crocodile?

I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground,

Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:

And thus a while the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;

What is the reason that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him. [Exit HORATIO.]

[To LAERTES.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

We'll put the matter to the present push.

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.

This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other;
You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting

That would not let me sleep; methought I lay

Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,—

And prais'd be rashness for it, let us know,

Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well

When our deep plots do pall; and that should teach us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,

Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark

Grop'd I to find out them, had my desire,

Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew

To mine own room again; making so bold—

My fears forgetting manners—to unseal

Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,

O royal knavery! an exact command,

Larded with many several sorts of reasons

Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,

That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,

No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,

My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus be-netted round with villanies,—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains

They had begun the play,—I sat me down,

Devil'd a new commission, wrote it fair;

I once did hold it, as our statist's do,

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much

How to forget that learning; but, sir, now

It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know

The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,

As England was his faithful tributary,

As love between them like the palm should

flourish,

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,

And staid a comma 'tween their amities,

And many such-like 'Ases of great charge,

That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further, more or less,

He should the bearers put to sudden death;

Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven or-nant.

I had my father's signet in my purse,

Which was the model of that Danish seal;

Folded the writ up in form of the other,

Subscrib'd it, gave't th' impression, plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequen-

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz gto't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to th-employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow.

'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes

Between the pure and fell-discensed points

Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, thinks't thee, stand in now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother,

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes,

Thrown out his angle for my proper life,

Aud with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience

To quit him with this arm? and is't not to be

damn'd

To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from

England

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;

And a man's life's no more than to say 'One.'

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself;

For, by the image of my cause, I see

The portraiture of his: I'll count his favours;

But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me

Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. [Aside to HORATIO.] Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. [Aside to HAMLET.] No, my good lord.

Ham. [Aside to HORATIO.] Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vlee to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a cough; but, as I say, spaciou in the possession of dirt.

Os. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head. 97

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly. 100

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and not for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 'twere, I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter.— 108

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing; indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see. 117

Ham. Sir, his defacement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither, in respect of his quick gall. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him. 128

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, readily. 133

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes? 136

Hor. His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant— 140

Ham. I would you did, sir; in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is— 144

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger. 152

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six

Barbary horses; against tho which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hits, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit. 160

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the mar-gent, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers. 164

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides; I would it might be hangers till then.
But, on; six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imponed,' as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer. 176

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits. 185

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will. 188

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit OSRIC.] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn. 192

Hor. This ipawing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug before he sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter, a kind of vesty collection which carries them through and through the most fond and wronged opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out. 202

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall; he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time. 207

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down. 213

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play. 217

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter. 224

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman. 228

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it; I will forestal their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes? Let be. 238

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir; I've done you wrong;

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd

With sore distraction. What I have done, 241

That might your nature, honour and exceptioun

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be taken away, 248

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? His madness. If't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; 252

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house, 257

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge; but in my terms of honour 260

I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace,

To keep my name ungor'd. But till that time,

I do receive your offer'd love like love, 265

And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;

And will't as brother's wager frankly play.

Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me, 263

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,

Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand. 274

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.

Cousin Hamulet,

You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your Grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both;

But since he is better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

Osric. Ay, my good lord. 280

[They prepare to play.]

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire; 284

The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;

And in the cup an union shall he throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups; 288

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without,

The canons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

'Now the king drinks to Hamlet!' Come,

begin; 292

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. Oue.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Osric. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well; again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine; 296

Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.

Come.—[They play.] Another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess, 300

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows;

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
Ham. Good madam!
King. Gertrude, do not drink. 304
Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.
King. [Aside.] It is the poison'd cup! it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.
Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face. 308
Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.
King. I do not think't.
Laer. [Aside.] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.
Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but dally;
I pray you, pass with your best violence. 312
I am afraid you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.
Os. Nothing, neither way.
Laer. Have at you now.
[LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.
King. Part them! they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay, come, again. [The Queen falls.
Os. Look to the queen there, ho!
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord?
Os. How is it, Laertes?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osric; 320
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the queen?
King. She swoonds to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!
The drink, the drink; I am poison'd. [Dies.
Ham. O villainy! Ho! let the door be lock'd; Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls.
Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good; 328
in thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd. The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo! here I lie, 332
Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd.
I can no more. The King, the king's to blame.
Ham. The point envenom'd too!—
Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.
All. Treason! treason!
King. O! yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion;—is thy unlon here? 340
Follow my mother. [King dies.
Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee, 344
Nor thine on me! [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act, 349
Had I but time,—as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest,—O! I could tell you—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead; 352
Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left.
Ham. As thou'rt a man, 356
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have't.
O God! Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me.
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart, 360
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.
[March afar off, and shot within.
What war-like noise is this?
Os. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, 364
To the ambassadors of England gives
This war-like volley.
Ham. O! I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England, 368
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited—The rest is silence. [Dies.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good-night, sweet prince, 373
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?
[March within.
Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors,
and Others.
Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it ye would see? 376
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death!
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot 380
So bloodily hast struck?
First Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless that should give us
hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, 384
That Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern are dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you: 387
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view; 392
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world
How these things came about: so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters; 396
Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd cause.

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads; all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it, 400
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,

Which now to elaim my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak.
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mis-
chance 408

On plots and errors happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage, 412

The soldiers' music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies: such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. 417

[A dead march. Exeunt, bearing off the bodies; after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.

Act I.

Scene I.—A Room of State in KING LEAR'S Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord? 8

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you. 12

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-womb'd, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault? 16

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund? 26

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better. 32

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Senet. Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester. 36

Glo. I shall, my liege.

[Exit GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there. Know that we have divided

In three our kingdom; and 'tis our fast intent
To shake all cares and business from our age, 41
Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, 44
We have this hour a constant will to publish
Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife
May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, 48
Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,—

since now we will divest us both of rule,
Interest of territory, cares of state,—
Which of you shall we say doth love us most:
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge.
Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first. 56
Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty,
honour; 60

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found;
A love that makes breath poor and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. [Aside.] What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent. 64

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains
rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-sky'd meads,
We make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter, 69

Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love; 73
Only she comes too short: that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys

Which the most precious square of sense possesses 76

And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. [Aside.] Then, poor Cordelia!
And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's
More richer than my tongue. 80

Lear. To thee and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom,
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril. Now, our joy,
Although our last, not least; to whose young love

The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interest'd; what can you say to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.
Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?
Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak
again. 9

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little,

Lest you may mar your fortunes.
Cor. Good my lord

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you. 100

Why have my sisters husbands, if they say
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord whose hand must take my plighted shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care and duty:
Sure I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all. 105

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. Ay, good my lord

Lear. So young, and so untender?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so; thy truth then be thy dower:

For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate and the night, 112

By all the operation of the orbs
From whom we do exist and cease to be,

Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,

And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom 120

Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and relieved,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—
Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath. 124
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence, and avoid my sight!

So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her! Call France. Who stirs? 128

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany,

With my two daughters' dowers digest the third;
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her. 132

I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty. Ourself by monthly
course,

- With reservation of a hundred knights,
 By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode 136 Make with you by due turn. Only we shall retain
 The name and all th' addition to a king;
 The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
 Belov'd sons, be yours: which to confirm. 140
 This coronet part between you.
Kent. Royal Lear,
 Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
 Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
 As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn; make from the shaft. 145
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
 The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly
 When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old
 man? 148
 Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to
 speak
 When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound
 When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy state;
 And, in thy best consideration, check 152
 This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
 Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
 Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound
 Reverbs no hollowness.
Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn 157
 To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
 Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight!
Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain 160
 The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo,—
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
 Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O vassal! miscreant!
 [Laying his hand on his sword.
 All. } Dear sir, forbear. 164
 Corn. }
Kent. Do;
 Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
 Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
 Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
 I'll tell thee thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, recreant! 169
 On thine allegiance, hear me!
 Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,—
 Which we durst never yet,—and, with strain'd pride 172
 To come betwixt our sentence and our power,—
 Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,—
 Our potency made good, take thy reward.
 Five days we do allot thee for provision 176
- To shield thee from diseases of the world;
 And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom: If, on the tenth day following
 Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
 The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
 This shall not be revok'd. 182
Kent. Fare thee well, king; slith thus thou wilt appear,
 Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.
 [To CORDELIA.] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid, 185
 That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!
 [To REGAN and GONERIL.] And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
 That good effects may spring from words of
 love. 188
 Thus Kent, O princes! bids you all adieu;
 He'll shape his old course in a country new.
 [Exit.
Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE,
 BURGUNDY, and Attendants.
Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble
 lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy, 192
 We first address toward you, who with this king Hath rival'd for our daughter. What, in the least,
 Will you require in present dower with her,
 Or cease your quest of love?
Bur. Most royal majesty, 196
 I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
 Nor will you tender less.
Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
 When she was dear to us we did hold her so,
 But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands: 200
 If aught within that little-seeming substance,
 Or all of it, with our displeasure pleec'd,
 And nothing more, may fitly like your Grace,
 She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer. 204
Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,
 Unfriendly, new-adopted to our hate,
 Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
 Take her, or leave her?
Bur. Pardon me, royal sir; 208
 Proportion makes not up on such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
 I tell you all her wealth.—[To FRANCE.] For you,
 great king,
 I would not from your love make such a stray
 To match you where I hate; therefore, beseech
 you 213
 To avert your liking a more worthier way
 Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
 Almost to acknowledge her.

France. This is most strange, 216
That she, who even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of
time,
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantlè 220
So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint; which to believe of her, 224
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty—
If for I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not; since what I well
Intend, 228
I'll do't before I speak—that you make known
It is no vicious blot nor other foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour,
But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-solemn eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou 236
Hadst not been born than not to have pleas'd me
better.
France. Is it hut this? a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do? My Lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love is not love 241
When it is mingled with regards that stand
Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.
Bur. Royal Lear, 244
Give hut that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordella by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm. 248
Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a
father
That you must lose a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife. 252
France. Fairest Cordella, that art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful I take up what's cast away. 256
Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.
Thy answerless daughter, king, thrown to my
chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France: 260
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Shall huy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordella, though unkind:
Thou lovest here, a better where to find. 264

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again, therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, uoble Burgundy.
[Flourish. EZEUNT LEAR, BURGUNDY, CORDELLA,
WALL, ALBANY, GLOUCESTER, &c.
Attendants
France. Bid farewell to your sisters.
Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash
eyes
Cordella leaves you: I know you what you are;
And like a sister am most loath to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Use well our
father:
To your professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So farewell to you both.
Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.
Gon. Let your student
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms; you have obedience scanted
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.
Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides;
Who covers faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!
France. Come, my fair Cordella!
[Exit FRANCE and CORDELLA.
Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.
Reg. That's most certain, and with you next month with us.
Gon. You see how full of changes his age is the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.
Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been hut rash; then, must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long engrafted condition, but, therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.
Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.
Gon. There is further compliment of leave taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.
Reg. We shall further think on't.
Gon. We must do something, and I'll the heat.
[Excunt.

Scene II.—A Hall in the EARL OF GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess; to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me, 4
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines

Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true, 8
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base,
base?

Who in the lusty stealth of nature take
More composition and fierce quality 12
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: 16
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund
As to the legitimate. Fine word, 'legitimate!'
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base 20
Shall top the legitimate:—I grow, I prosper;
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Kent banished thus! And France in cholera parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! 24
Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter? 29

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord. 32

Glo. No? What need'd then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see; come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles. 37

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me; it is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'er-read, and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'er-looking. 41

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it.
The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame. 45

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my
virtue. 49

Glo. This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered.
Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live
the beloved of your brother, EDGAR.—Hum!
Conspiracy! 'Sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue.'—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it? 64

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord;
there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the easement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's? 69

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 72

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business? 77

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue. 82

Glo. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, de-tested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain! Where is he? 87

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger. 98

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this,
and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening. 104

Glo. He cannot be such a monster—

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo.—to his father, that so fondly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution. 111

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal. 114

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'Tis strange! [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains by necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion, knaves, thieves, and traitors by spherical predominance, drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. 'Sfoot! I should have been that I am had the malignant star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar— 142 and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! Fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in? 156

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that? 160

Edm. I promise you the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state; menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissolution of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what. 16

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical? 17

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last? 17

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance? 18

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty forbear his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay. 19

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you have contentment forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower, and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed. 19

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed; I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you; I have told you what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it; pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business. 200

[Exit EDGAR.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms
That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy! I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. [Exit.]

Scene III.—A Room in the DUKE OF ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL and OSWALD her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me; every hour

He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That seizes us all at odds: I'll not endure it!
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting
I will not speak with him; say I am sick:
If you come slack of former services,
You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him. 12

[Horns within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:
If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, 16
Not to be over-ru'd. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities
That he hath given away! Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again, and must be us'd 20
With cheeks as flatteries, when they are seen abus'd.
Remember what I have said.
Osw. Well, madam.
Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;
What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows 24
so:
I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak: I'll write straight to my sister
To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner.
[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness. Now, banish'd!
Kent, 4
If thou canst serve where thou dost staid condemn'd,
So may it come, thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now!
what art thou? 10

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem;
to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no flesh.

Lear. What art thou? 19

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou? 24

Kent. Service.Lear. Whom wouldst thou serve?Kent. You.Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow? 28

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?Kent. Authority. 32*Lear.* What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me is diligence. 38

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing;
I have years on my back forty-eight. 42

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knave? my fool? Go you and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.]

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter? 48

Osw. So please you,—[Exit.]

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight.] Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep. How now!
where's that mongrel? 53

Re-enter Knight.

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is
not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him? 57

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not! 60

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so? 68

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent
when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days. 78

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much plied him away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.
Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with
her. [Exit an Attendant.]

Go you, call hither my fool. [Exit an Attendant.]

Re-enter OSWALD.

O! you sir, you, come you hither, sir. Who am
I, sir? 86

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father!' my lord's knave:
you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur! 89

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.]

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord. 94

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base football player. [Tripping up his heels.]

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee. 98

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to; have you wisdom? so.

[Pushes OSWALD out.]

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee:
there's earnest of thy service. 104

[Gives KENT money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too: here's my cox-comb. [Offers KENT his cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou? 108

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him thou must needs wear my coxcomb. How now, nuncle!
Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy? 119

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whelp. 123

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. [To KENT.] Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech. 129

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Have more than thou showest, 132

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest,

Ride more than thou goest,

Learn more than thou trowest, 136

Set less than thou throwest;

Leave thy drink and thy whore,

And keep in-a-door,

And thou shalt have more 140

Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unsee'd lawyer, you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. [To KENT.] Prithee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee

To give away thy land,

Come place him here by me,

Do thou for him stand;

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in motley here,

The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and ladies too: they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.
Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg I'll take the middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns the egg. When thou clovest thy crown I'll take the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this let him be whipped that first finds it so. 138

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year:

For wise men are grown foppish,

And know not how their wits to wear, 139

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers; for when thou gavest them the rod and puttest down thine own breeches.

Then they for sudden joy did weep, 140

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,

And go the fools' song.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped. 143

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nunele; thou hast par'd thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle: here comes one o' the parings. 208

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown. 211

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To GONERIL.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mum, mum;

He that keeps nor crust nor crumb, 220

Wearry of all, shall want some.

That's a shealed peascod. [Pointing to LEAR.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-lieens'd fool,

But other of your insolent retinue 224

Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,

I had thought, by making this well known unto
you,

To have found a safe redress; but uow grow fearful, 228

By what yourself too late have spoke and done,

That you protect this course, and put it on

By your allowance; which if you should, the fault

Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, 233

Might in their working do you that offence,

Which else were shame, that then necessity

Will call discreet proceeding. 236

Fool. For you trow, nunele,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,

That it had it head bit off by it young.

So out went the candle, and we were left darkling. 240

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught; and put away

These dispositions which of late transform you

From what you rightly are. 245

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me? This is not

Lear: 248

Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes?

Either his notion weakens, his discernings

Are lethargied. Ha! waking? 'tis not so.

Who is it that can tell me who I am? 252

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. I would learn that; for, by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters. 256

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is what o' the favour 260

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you

To understand my purposes aright:

As you are old and reverend, should be wise.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires; 264

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,

That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn: epleurism and lust

Make it more like a tavern or a brothel 268

Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth
speak

For instant remedy; be then desir'd

By her that else will take the thing she begs,

A little to disquantity your train; 272

And the remainder, that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your age,

Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!

Saddle my horses; call my train together. 276

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:

Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rabble

Make servants of their betters. 280

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe that too late repents;

[To ALBANY.] O! sir, are you come?

Is it your will? Speak, sir. Prepare my horses.

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,

More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,

Than the sea-monster.

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient. 285

Lear. [To GONERIL.] Detested kite! thou liest:

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know, 288

And in the most exact regard support

The worships of their name. O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!

Which, like an engine, wrenched my frame of nature 292

From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all
love,

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!

Beats at this gate, that let thy folly in.

[Striking his head.]

And thy dear judgment out! Go, go, my people

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant

Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.

Hear, Nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!

Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend 300

To make this creature fruitful!
 Into her womb convey sterility!
 Dry up in her the organs of increase,
 And from her derogate body never spring
 A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
 Create her child of spleen, that it may live
 And be a threat to whosoever touches it;
 Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
 With cadent tears beset her cheeks,
 Turn all her mother's pangs and benefits
 To laughter and contempt, that she may Howl sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child! Away, away!

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes
 this?
Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause,
 But let his disposition have that scope
 That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What! fifty of my followers at a meal
 Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter?
Lear. I'll tell thee. [To GONZIL.] I am bound in duty to do thee death!

I am ashamed
 That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:
 That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
 Should make thee worth them. Blame and frown upon thee!

Th' untended woundings of a father's curse
 Pierce every sense about thee! Old eyes
 Bewep this cause again! I'll pluck you
 And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
 To temper clay. Yea, is't come to this?

Alb. Yea, is't come to this?
 Let it be so: I have another daughter,
 Who, I assure, looks like a better one;
 When she shall see thee, she'll shake her head
 As one that wails; she'll say, 'Tis better
 That I should feel this than to see you
 Thus suffer.

Lear. I have cast off my ever-natural
 love,
 And do despise you from my throne.

Gon. Do not mark this.
Alb. I'll not be so parted from you
 To the great loss I bear you.

Gon. Pray you, content.
 To the Fool. You, sir, more fool than
 I am, I'll be your fool.

Fool. Nunc, my lord, I'll be your fool
 To do you good: you shall not Take the fool with you. A fox, when one has caught her,
 And she will sware she is a cat,
 Show I'll sware to the slaughter,
 If my ears won't buy a halter;
 So the fool follows you.

Gon. [Exit.]
 I'll be your fool. A hundred times
 I'll follow you to keep you from any harm that may befall you.
 Yes, that on every

Each buzz, each fan, each complaint, dislike,
 He may command his powers,
 And he will. Oswald, I say!

Alb. You'll you'll fear too far.
Gon. Saf'r than trust too far.
 Let me see I take away the harms I fear,
 Not fear will be his task, I'll show his heart.
 What shall I do? I'll say, my sister
 If she sustains a harm, I'll be her
 And I'll have her to my house.

Alb. I'll have you with me, if you'll have your will.
Gon. Ay, my lord.

Gon. Take your son
 with you,
 and I'll be
 with you full of my will.
 I'll be
 with you full of my will.
 I'll be
 with you full of my will.

Alb. How
 my eyes
 may pierce
 I cannot tell:
 trying to be
 oft we mar what's well.

Alb. No, my lord.
Alb. We'll see the event.

Scene - Close before the Same.

Enter LEAR, GONZIL, and Fool.

Lear. I'll see you before Gloucester with these letters, and I'll say my daughter no further with any man; you know what comes from her demand; I'll be of the better. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Gon. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter.

Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, were not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall not slip thee.

Lear. Ha, ha!

Fool. I'll see thy other daughter will use thee as she'll; for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong,—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell? 28

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail goes as a horse.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his laughers, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father! Be my horses ready? 37

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason. 40

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed; thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce! Monster ingratitude! 45

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O! let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven;

Keep me in temper, I would not be mad! 52

Enter Gentleman.

Lear. How now? Are my horses ready?

Gent. Yes, my lord.

Lear. O!

Fool. She will now, and laughs at my departure. 56

Lear. Shall not be cut short, unless things be cut shorter. [Exit.]

Act II.

Scene I.—A Court within the Castle of the EARL OF GLOUCESTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him to-night. 5

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments? 9

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany? 12

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night! The better! Best! 15

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act. Briefness and fortune, work! Brother, a word; descend: brother, I say! 21

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches: O sir! fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid: You have now the good advantage of the night. Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall? 25

He's coming hither, now, 't' the night, 't' the haste, And Regan with him; have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? 28 Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming; pardon me; In cunning I must draw my sword upon you; Draw; seem to defend yourself; now 'quilt you well. 32

Fly;—come before my father. Light, ho! here! Fly, brother. Torches! torches! So, farewell. [Exit EDGAR.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards 36

Do more than this in sport. Father! father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, 40

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon To stand auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could— 44

Glo. Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exit some Servants.] 'By no means' what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;

Spoke with how manifold and dreadful sound 48

The child was bound to tell, Seeling how loathly open To his unnatural parent

With his prepared sword, My unprovided body

But when he saw my sword Bold in the quarrel's rank

Or whether gasted by Full suddenly he fled

Glo. Not in this land shall

And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master, 66

My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night :
By his authority I will proclaim it.
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murderous coward to the stake ; 64
He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him plight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him : he replied, 68
'Thou unpossessing bastard ! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd ? No ; what I should deny, — 72

As this I would ; ay, though thou didst produce
My very character, — I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice :
And thou must make a dullard of the world, 76
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.'

Glo. Stroug and fasten'd villain !
Would he deny his letter ? I never got him. 80 [Trucket within.

Hark ! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.

All ports I'll bar ; the villain shall not 'scape ;
The duke must grant me that ; besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom 84
May have due note of him ; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend ! since I came hither, — 88
Which I can call but now, — I have heard strange
news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short

Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord ?

Glo. O ! madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd. 92

Reg. What ! did my father's godson seek your life ?

He whom my father nam'd ? your Edgar ?

Glo. O ! lady, lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights 96

That tend upon my father ?

Glo. I know not, madam ; 'tis too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel then though he were ill affected ; 100

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues.

I have this present evening from my sister
Been well-inform'd of them, and with such cautions

That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your faith
A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice ; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursu'd ?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Corn. If he be taken he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm ; make your own propose.

How in my strength you please. For you, Edmond,

Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours :

Natures of such deep trust we shall much use
You we must seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your Grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit
you, —

Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-ey-
night :

Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some prize,
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home ; the several messengers From hence attend dispatch. Our good of-
friend,

Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow
Your needful counsel to our businesses,
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam
Your Graces are right welcome. [Exit

Scene II.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend : art thou this house ?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses ?

Kent. I'll lead them.

Osw. Prithce, if thou lovest me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury plowfield, would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus ? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou deniest
the least syllable of thy addition. 26

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee! 29

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines: I'll make a sop o'
the moonshine of you. [Drawing his sword.]
Draw, you whoreson, cullionly, barber-mouger,
draw. 37

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal; you come with letters against the king, and take vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father.
Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks: draw, you rascal; come your ways. 44

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand;
you neat slave, strike. [Beating him.

Osw. Help, oh! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND with his rapier drawn.

Edm. How now! What's the matter? 48

[Parting them.

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please:
come,

I'll flesh ye; come on, young master.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter
here?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives: 52

He lies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord. 56

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow; a tailor make a man? 61

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours o' the trade. 64

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd at sult of his grey beard,—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him. Spare my grey beard, you wagtail? 72

Corn. Peace, sirrah!
You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou augry? 75

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear
a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such snuffing rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinsic t' unloose; smooth every passion 80

That in the natures of their lords rebel;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters, 84
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.

A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, 88

I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What! art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy 92

Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers. 97

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain:

I have seen better faces in my time

Than stands on any shoulder that I see 100

Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb

Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he, 104

An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth:

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.

These kind of knaves I know which in this plainness

Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends

Than twenty silly-ducking observants, 108

That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,

Under the allowance of your grand aspect, 112

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire

On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't. 120

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Oro. I never gave him any:
It pleas'd the king his master very late
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction; 124
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king 128
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! 132
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,
We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn,
Call not your stocks for me; I serve the king,
On whose employment I was sent to you; 136
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! As I have life and honour, 140
There shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! Till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will. 144

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks. [Stocks brought out.]

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace not to do so,
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't: your purpos'd low correction 149

Is such as basest and contemn'd st wretches
For pilferings and most common trespasses
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill, 152
That he, so slightly valu'd in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs. Put in his legs.

[KENT is put in the stocks.]
Come, my good lord, away.

[Exit all but GLOUCESTER and KENT.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows, 160
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for
thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels: 164

Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill ill taken. [Exit]

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,

Thou out of heaven's benediction comest
To the warm sun.

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may

Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracle
But misery: I know 'tis from Cordelia,

Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time

From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies. All weary and o'er-watched,

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night, smile once more; turn the wheel! [He sleeps.]

Scene III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree

Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,

Does not attend my taking. While I may scape,
I will preserve myself; and am bethought

To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever peev'd in contempt of man,

Brought near to beast; my face I'll graine with filth,

Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,
And with presented nakedness outface

The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent

Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms

Plas, wooden pricks, nalls, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,

Poor peiting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity. Poor Turligood! poor

Tom!

That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am. [Exit]

Enter LEAR, FOOL, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Of this remove.

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook 12

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,

Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes. 16

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have. 20

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't; They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage. 24

Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage, Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home I did commend your highness' letters to them, Ere I was risen from the place that show'd 29

My duty kneeling, there came a recking post,

Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth

From Goneril his mistress salutations; 32

Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,

Which presently they read: on whose contents

They summoned up their meiny, straight took horse;

Commanded me to follow, and attend 36

The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:

And meeting here the other messenger,

Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,—

Being the very fellow which of late 40

Display'd so saucily against your highness,—

Having more man than wit about me,—drew:

He rais'd the noise with loud and coward cries.

Your son and daughter found this trespass worth

The shame which here it suffers. 45

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags 48

Do make their children blind,

But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore, 52

Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

But for all this thou shalt have as many dolours

As thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O! how this mother swells up toward

my heart; 56

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow!

Thy element's below. Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir: here within.

Lear. Follow me not; stay here. [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a number. 64

Fool. An thou hadst been set 't the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring 't the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
 And follows hut for form, 80

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly: 84

The knave turns fool that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not 't the stocks, fool. 88

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOUCESTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me! They are sick! they are weary.

They have travell'd hard to-night! Mere fetches, The images of revolt and flying off.

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord, 92

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremovable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion! Fiery! what quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester, 97

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man? 100

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commaunds her service:

Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood! Fiery! the fiery duke! Tell the hot duke that—

No, but not yet; may be he is not well: 106

Infirmity doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound; we are not ourselves 108

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body. I'll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headler will,

To take the indispo'd and sickly fit 112

For the sound man. Death on my state! [Look- ing on KENT.] Wherefore

Should he sit here? This act persuades me

That this remotion of the duke and her

Is practice only. Give me my servant forth. 116

Go, tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with them,

Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear

me,

Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum

Till it cry sleep to death. 120

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you.

[Exit,

Fool. O, me! my heart, my rising heart! but,
down!

Fool. Cry to it, uncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' the paste alive; she knappel 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried, 'Down, wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, butter'd his
hay. 128

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your Grace!

[KENT is set at liberty.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason

I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, 133 Sepulchring an adultress.—[To KENT.] O! are you free?

Some other time for that. Belov'd Regan,

Thy sister's naught: O Regan! she hath tied 136

Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here:

[Points to his heart.]

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe

With how depriv'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope 140

You less know how to value her desert

Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least would fall her obligation: if, sir, perchance 144

She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,

'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,

As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir! you are old; 148

Nature in you stands on the very verge

Of her confine: you should be rul'd and led

By some discretion that discerns your state

Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray you

That to our sister you do make return; 151

Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness

Do you but mark how this becomes the house:

'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;

Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg

That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsighttricks:

Return you to my sister.

Lear. [Rising.] Never, Regan. 16

She hath abated me of half my train;

Look'd black upon me; struck me with her

tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.

All the stor'd vengeances of heaven fall 16

On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones

With taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fle, sir, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightning, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty, 16

You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun

To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods! So will you wish on me,

When the rash mood is on. 17

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give

Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce, but thine

Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee 17

To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,

To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,

And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt

Agalust my coming in: thou better know'st 18

The offices of nature, bond of childhood,

Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;

Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,

Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose. 184

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't, my sister's; this approves her letter,

That she would soon be here. Is your lady
come?

Enter OSWALD.

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd
pride 188

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.

Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your Grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope your Grace?

Thou didst not know on't. Who comes here?
O heavens, 192

Enter GONERIL.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down and take my
part!

To GONERIL. Art not ashamed to look upon this beard? 196

O Regan I wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?

All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too tough;
Will you yet hold? How came my man f' the stocks? 201

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.
Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month, 205

You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd!

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' the air; 212

To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,
Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her!
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took

Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot. Return with her!
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom. [Pointing at OSWALD.

Gon. At your choice, sir. 220
Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad;

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter; 224

Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine; thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide
thee; 228

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy
leisure; 232

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:

I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister; 236

For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what! fifty followers! 240

Is it not well? What should you need of more?

Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger

Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one
house,

Should many people, under two commands, 244
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you 243

We could control them. If you will come to
me,—

For now I spy a danger,—I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty: to no more

Will I give place or notice. 252
Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my guardians, my deposit-
aries,

But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number. What! must I come to
you 256

With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so?
Reg. And speak't again, my lord; no more
with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd,

When others are more wicked; not being the worst 260

Stands in some rank of praise. [To GONERIL.
I'll go with thee:

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord.
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five, 264
To follow in a house, where twice so many
I have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?
Lear. O! reason not the need; our basest beggars

Are in the poorest thing superfluous: 268
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, 272

Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both! 276
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble
anger.

And let not women's weapons, water-drops, 280
Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things,—
What they are yet I know not,—but they shall be 284

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep;

I have full cause of weeping, but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws 288
Or ere I'll weep. O fool! I shall go mad.

[Exit LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and FOOL.

Corn. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.

[Storm heard at a distance.

Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people

Cannot be well bestow'd. 292

Gov. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly.
Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly;

But not one follower.
Gov. So am I purpos'd. 296

Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth. He is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither. 300

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gov. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack! the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about 304
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O! sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure

Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors;

He is attended with a desperate train 308
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night;

My Roman counsels well; come out o' the storm.

[Exit.

Act III.

Scene I.—A Heath

A storm, with thunder and lightning. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, mounquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element—
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease; tears hi-
white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.

This night, wherein the eub-drawn Lear woul-
couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool, who labours to out-jest

His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;

And dare, upon the warrant of my note,

Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd 2
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;

Who have—as who have not, that their great stars

Thron'd and set high—servants, who seem no-
less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen, 25
Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne

Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof perchance these are but furnishings; 29
But, true it is, from France there comes a
power

Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet 32
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find 36
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadd'ng sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding, 4
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more 44

Than my out-wall, open his purse, and take

What it contains. all see Cordella,—

As doubt not but you.—show her this ring,

And she will tell you 't is her fellow's 48

That yet you do not know. Fly on this storm!

I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet; 52

That, when we have found the king,—in which your pain

That way, I'll this,—he that first lights on him

Holla the other. {Exeunt severally.}

Scene II.—Another Part of the Heath.

Storm still.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
rage! blow!

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout

Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!

You sulphurous and thought-executing fires, 4

Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts,

Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,

Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!

Crack nature's moulds, all gerruens spill at once
That make ingrateful man! 9

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry nose is better than this rain-water out o' door.

Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing;
here's a night plies neither wise man nor fool.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire! spout,
rain! 14

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:

I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,

You owe me no subscription: then, let fall

Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak, and despicable old man. 20

But yet I call you servile ministers,

That have with two pernicious daughters join'd

Your high-engender'd batties 'gainst a head,

So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul, 24

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in has a good head-piece.

The cool-piece that will house

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall louse;

So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make,

Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass. 36

Enter KENT.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;
I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cool-piece;
that's a wise man and a fool. 41

Kent. Alas! sir, are you here? things that love night

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful
skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark. 44

And make them keep their caves. Since I was
man

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid
thunder,

Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard; man's nature cannot carry 48

The affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,

That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes, 52

Unwhipp'd of justice; hide thee, thou bloody hand;

Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue

That art incestuous; calf, to pieces shake,

That under covert and convenient seeming 56

Hast practis'd on man's life; close pent-up gullets,

Rive your concealing continents, and cry

These dreadful summoners grace. I am a man
More sinn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack! bare-headed!

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel; 61

Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;

Repose you there while I to this hard house,—
More harder than the stone whereof 'tis rais'd,—

Which even but now, demanding after you, 65

Denied me to come in, return and force

Their scanted courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turr.

Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold? 68

I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?

The art of our necessities is strange.

That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee. 73

Fool.

He that has a little tiny wit,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

Must make content with his fortunes fit, 76

Though the rain it raineth every day.

K K 8

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exeunt LEAR and KENT.]

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtesan.

I'll speak a prophecy ere I go: 80
 When priests are more in word than matter;
 When brewers mar their malt with water;
 When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
 No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors; 84
 When every case in law is right;
 No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
 When slanders do not live in tongues;
 Nor cutpurses come not to throngs; 88
 When usurers tell their gold i' the field;
 And bawds and whores do churches build;
 Then shall the realm of Albion
 Come to great confusion: 92
 Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
 That going shall be us'd with feet.
 This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.]

Scene III.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack! Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural! 7

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night; 'tis dangerous to be spoken; I have locked the letter in my closet. These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there's part of a power already footed; we must incline to the king. I will seek him and privily relieve him; go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. 21

[Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke instantly know, and of that letter too: This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me that which my father loses; no less than all; 25 The younger rises when the old doth fall. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—The Heath. Before a Hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
 The tyranny of the open night's too rough
 For nature to endure. [Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Will break my heart

Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentions storm

Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;

But where the greater malady is fix'd,

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,

Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. Wh

the mind's free

The body's delicate; the tempest in my mind

Doth from my senses take all feeling else

Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!

'Tis not as this mouth should tear this hand

For lifting food to't? But I will punish home

No, I will weep no more. In such a night

To shut me out! Pour on; I will endure.

In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!

Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave

all,—

O! that way madness lies; let me shun that;

No more of that.

Kent. Good, my lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithce, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder

On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.

[To the Fool.] In, boy; go first. You houseless poverty,—

Say, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,

That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,

How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend

you

From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en

Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;

Expose yourself to feel what wretches feel,

That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,

And show the heavens more just. 31

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the hovel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle; here's a spirit.

Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there? 34

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' the straw?

Come forth.

Enter EDMOND disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me! 37

Through the sharp hawthorn blow the winds.
Humi go to thy cold bed and warm thee.

Lear. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?

And art thou come to this? 48

Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-ined bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. O! do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there again, and there.

[Storm still.]

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass?

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed. 65

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir. 68

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters. Is it the fashion that discarded fathers should have thus little mercy on their flesh? 72
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillocock sat on Pillocock-hill:

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo! 76

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold. 82

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A servingman, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman; keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind; says suum, mun in no nonny. Dolphin my boy, my boy; senna! let him trot by. [Storm still.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come; unbutton here. 112

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Prithce, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wide field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look! here comes a walking fire. 117

Enter GLOUCESTER with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Filibertigibbet; he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth. 122

Swiwithd footed thrice the old;

He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;

Bid her alight,

And her troth plight,

And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your Grace? 125

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog; the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stock-punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear; 141

But mice and rats and such small deer

Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend. 145

Glo. What! hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman; made he's call'd, and Mabu.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,

That it doth hate what gets it. 150

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer. To obey in all your daughters' hard commands; Though their injunction be to bar my doors, 154

And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,

Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out 156
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house. 160

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord; 165

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him? [Storm still. His daughters seek his death. Ah! that good Kent;

He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!
Thou sayst the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend, 169

I am almost mad myself. I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,
But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend, 172
No father his son dearer; true to tell thee,

[Storm continues.]

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your Grace,—

Lear. O! cry you mercy, sir.

Noble philosopher, your company. 176

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher. 180

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words: hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still, Fly, foh, and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man. 187

[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of. 5

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. How malleous is my fortune, that must repent to be just! This is the letter spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heaven, that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father that he may be free for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting a king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully; will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—A Chamber in a Farmhouse adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LEAR, KENT, FOOL, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can; I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness! [Exit GLOUCESTER.]

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Ned is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a man may be a gentleman or a yeoman!

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a manly yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burnings splits

Come hizzing in upon 'em,—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign thee straight.

[To EDGAR.] Come, sit thou here, most learned justice;

[To the Fool.] Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now you see the foxes!

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares; wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the horizon, Bessy, to me,—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend hunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Ho! dance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Creak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd: 35

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.

[E. EDGAR.] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;

[I. the Fool.] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, 40 bench by his side. [To KENT.] You are o' the commission, sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd? 44

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Purr! the cat is grey. 48

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril? 52

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose whor'd looks proclaims 56

What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!

False justice, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits! 60

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now that you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfelting. 64

Lear. The little dogs and all,

They, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Lap. Tom will throw his head at them. A want you curs! 68

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Hound or spaniel, brach or lym; 72

Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail;

Tom will make them weep and wail;

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled 76

De, de, de, de. Sessu! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? [To EDGAR.] You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments; you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good! my lord, lie here and rest awhile. 88

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: so, so, so. We'll go to supper 't the morning: so, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon. 92

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone. 96

Glo. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms;

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him.

There is a litter ready; lay him in't.

And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet 100

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master:

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,

With thine, and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up; 104

And follow me, that will to some provision

Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps: This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews,

Which, if convenience will not allow, 108

Stand in hard cure.—[To the Fool.] Come, help to bear thy master;

Thou must not stay behind.

Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt KENT, GLOUCESTER, and the Fool, bearing away LEAR.

Edg. When we our letters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes. 112

Who alone suffers suffers most 't the mind,

Leaving free things and happy shows behind;

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'er-skip.

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellow-ship, 116

How light and portable my pain seems now,

When that which makes me bend makes the king bow;

He childed as I father'd! Tom, away!

Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray 120

When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee.

What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king!

Lurk, lurk.

[Exit.

Scene VII.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND,
and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the traitor Gloucester.

[Exeunt some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.

[Enter OSWALD.]

How now? Where's the king?

Osw. My Lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,

Hot questrists after him, met him at gate;

Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,

Are gone with him toward Dover, where they do rest

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.

[Exeunt GONERIL, EDMUND, and

OSWALD.]

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other Servants.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life

Without the form of justice, yet our power

Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men

May blame but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOUCESTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your Graces? Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard. O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

[REGAN plucks his beard.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady,

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host,
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know
truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you the traitors

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent lunatic king?

Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral head,
And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And fall

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer
that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see the cruel mail
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor that his aged

In his anointed flesh stick boarish nails;

The sea, with such a storm as his

In hell-black night endur'd, would

And quench'd the stelled fires;

Yet, poor old heart, he help the heart to bear;

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that a man

Thou shouldst have said, 'Good porter, turn the key.'

All cruels else subscrib'd; but I shall see

The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help! O cruel! O ye gods!

[GLOUCESTER'S eye put out.]

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord!

I have served you ever since I was a child,

But better service have I never done you

Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My villain!

First Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Draws. They fight.]

CORNWALL is wounded.

I am your host;
 ble favours 43

 s had you late

we know the have you with 44

you sent the

Reg. Give me the sword. A peasant stand up thus! [Takes a sword and runs at him behind.]

First Serv. O! I am slain. My lord, you have one eye left 81

To see some mischief on him. O! [Dies.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now? 84
Glo. All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature
 To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
 Thou call'st on him that hates thee; it was he that made the overture of thy treasons to us, 89
 Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd.
 Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him! 92

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover. [Exit one with GLOUCESTER.]
 How is't, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me,
 lady.

Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave
 Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace: 97
 Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm.

[Exit CORNWALL led by REGAN.]

Sec. Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do
 If this man come to good.

Third Serv. If she live long, 100
 And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
 Women will all turn monsters.

Sec. Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the

To lead him where he would: his roguish madness 104

Allows itself to any thing.

Third Serv. Go thou; I'll fetch some flax,
 and whites of eggs,

To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be con-temn'd,

Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
 The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
 Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear: 4

The lamentable change is from the best;
 The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,
 Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace:

The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who comes
 here? 9

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an old MAID.

My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!
 But that thy strange mutations make us hate
 thee,

Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord! 12
 I have been four tenant, and your father's tenant,

These fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone;

Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
 Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. You cannot see your way.
Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no
 eyes;

I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,
 Our means secure us, and our mere defects 20
 Prove our commodities. Ah! dear son Edgar,
 The fool of thy abused father's wrath;

Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
 I'd say I had eyes again.

Old Man. How now! Who's there? 24
Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, 'I am at the worst?'

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet; the worst is not,

So long as we can say, 'This is the worst.' 28
Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?
Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg
 If the last night's storm I such a fellow saw, 32
 Which made me think a man a worm: my son
 Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
 Was then scarce friends with him: I have hear'd more since.

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; 36
 They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?
 Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
 Angering itself and others.—[To GLOUCESTER]

Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?
Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, prithee, get thee gone. If, for my sake, 41

Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
 If the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
 And bring some covering for this naked soul: 44
 Who I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.
Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure,
 Above the rest, be gone. 48

Old Man. I'll bring him the best parcel that I have,

Come on't what will. [Exit.]

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside.] I cannot daub it further. 52

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must. Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obdicut; Hobbldkane, 61 prince of dumbness; Malin, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Filbbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched Makes thee the happier: heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, 65
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master. 72

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending
head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep;
Bring me but to the very brim of it, 76
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear;
With something rich about me; from that place
I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm:
Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Before the DUKE OF ALBANY'S
Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord; I marvel our mild husband

Not met us on the way. [Enter OSWALD.] Now, where's your master?

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd.

I told him of the army that was landed; 4
He smil'd at it; I told him you were coming.
His answer was, 'The worse' of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot, 8
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to
him;

What like, offensive,

Gon. [To EDMUND.] Then, shall you go no
further.

It is the wish, terror of his spirit

That dares not undertake; he'll not feel wrong Which the hint to an answer. Our wishes on the way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his musters and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the staff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us; ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech [Giving a Jewel]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.
Conceal, and fare thee well. 2

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester
[Exit EDMUND.]

O! the difference of man and man!

To thee a woman's services are due:

My fool usurps my bed.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril! 2
You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind

Blows in your face. I fear your disposition;
That nature, which contemns its origin 3
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will silver and illbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither
And come to deadly use. 3

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;

Filths savour but themselves. What have you done?

Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man, 4

Whose reverence the head-hugg'd bear would lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddled.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it? 4
A man, a prince, by him so benefitted

If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences—
It will come, 4

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear't a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs—

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning 5

Thine honour from thy suffering; that no know'st

Fools do those villainous pity who are punish'd

Ere they have done their mischief. Where's the drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
land. 56

With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats,
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest
'Alack! why does he so?'

Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend 60
So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!
Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for
shame,

Be monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness
To let these lands obey my blood, 64

They are apt enough to dislocate and bear
my flesh and bones; how'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood.—Mew! 68

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?
Mess. O! my good lord, the Duke of Corn-wall's dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes! 72
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,

Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, therat enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell; him dead;
But not without that harmful stroke, which since 77

Hath pluck'd him after.
Alb. This shows you are above,
You justleers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!
Lo! he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord. 84
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck 85
From my hateful life: another way,

This news is not so tart. [To Messenger.] I'll read and answer. [Exit.]

Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes? 88

Mess. Come with my lady; hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him. 92

As I quit the house on purpose that their punishment

Might have the freer course
Alb. Gloucester, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the
king 94

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend:
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The French Camp, near Dover.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of;
which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, that his personal return was most requir'd and necessary. 7

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?
Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur la Fur.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief? 12

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear tripp'd down
Her delicate cheek; it seem'd she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like, 15
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O! then it mov'd her.
Gent. Not to a rage; patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have seen

Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears
Were like a better way; those happy smiles 22
That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to know What guests were in her eyes; which parted
thence,

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief, 24
Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved,
If all could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?
Gent. Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of 'father'

Painfully forth, as if it press'd her heart; 25
Cried, 'sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies! sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What, if the storm? if the
night?

Let pity not be believed! There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes, 32
And clamour-molsten'd, then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and make could not beget 37
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.
Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since
Kent. Well, sir, the poor distress'd Lear's
if the town, 40

Who sometime, in his better time, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means

Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent.

Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights

To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting

His mind so venomously that burning shame

Detains him from Cordella.

Gent.

Alack, poor gentleman,

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so, they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master

Lear,

And leave you to attend him. Some dear cause

Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;

When I am known aright, you shall not grieve

Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go

Along with me.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Enter with drum and colours, CORDELLA, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack! 'tis he: why, he was met even now

As mad as the vex'd sea; slinging aloud:

Crown'd with rank fustler and furrow weeds,

With burlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,

Darnel, and all the lile weeds that grow

In our sustaining corn. A century send forth;

Search every acre in the high-grown field,

And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]

What can man's wisdom?

In the restoring his bereaved sense?

He that helps him take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam;

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,

The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,

Are many simples operative, whose power

Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor.

All bless'd secrets,

All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,

Spring with my tears! be ablant and remediate

In the good man's distress! Seek, seek for

him,

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life

That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.

News, madam;

The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands

In expectation of them. O dear father!

It is thy business that I go about;

Therefore great France

My mourning and important tears hath pitied,

No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our aged father's right:
Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth

Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Osw. Madam, with much ado

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to

him?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,

To let him live; where he arrives he moves

All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone in pity of his misery, to dispatch

His lighted life; moreover, to desery

The strength of the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us,

The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam;

My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you

Transport her purposes by word? Bolke,

Something—I know not what, I'll love thee

much,

Let me unseal the letter.

Osw. Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;

I am sure of that: and at her late being here,

She gave strange allinides and most speaking looks

To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam!

Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I

know't;

Therefore I do advise you, take this note:

My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd,

And more convenient is he for my hand

Than for your lady's. You may gather more,

If you do find him, pray you, give him this,

And when your mistress hears thus much of

you,

I pray desire her call her wisdom to her:

So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,

Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Glo. Would I could meet him, madam: I would show

What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter Gloucester, and Edmond dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now; look how we labour.

Glo. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep;

Mark I do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly. 4

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect

By your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be, indeed.

Methinks thy voice is altered, and thou speak'st in better phrase and matter than thou didst. 8

Edg. You're much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd

But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks you're better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still.

How fearful 12

And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows and choughs that wing the midway air

Show scarce so gross as beetles; half way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade! 16

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.

The fishermen that walk upon the beach

Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark

Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy 20

Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,

That on the number'd idle pebbles chafes,

Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,

Let my brain turn, and the delicate sight 24

Fopple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand. 3

Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking: fables and gods

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;

I'll do farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair

Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods!

This world I do renounce, and, in your sights, 36

Shake patiently my great affliction off;

If I could bear it longer, and not fall

To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,

My snuff and loathed part of nature should 40

Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!

Now, fellow, fare thee well. [He falls forward.]

Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.

[Aside.] And yet I know not how conceit may rob

The treasury of life when life itself 44

Yields to the theft; had he been where he thought

By this had thought been past. Alive or dead?

[To Gloucester.] Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir? speak!

Thus might he pass indeed; yet he revives. 48

What are you, sir?

Glo. Away and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathoms down precipitating,

Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg; but thou dost breathe, 52

Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak'st, art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude

Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:

Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again. 56

Glo. But have I fallen or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-heap; it; the shrill-gorg'd lack so far

Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up. 60

Glo. Alack! I have no eyes.

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit

To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage, 64

And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm:

Up: so. How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness. Upon the crown of the cliff, what thing was that which parted from you?

Glo. A man of fortunate beggar. 68

Edg. As I stand here below methought his eyes

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses, horns whelk'd and I was like the enridged sea:

It was some fiend: therefore, thou happy father, think that the dearest gods, who make them

honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now; henceforth I'll bear affliction till it do cry out itself. 72

Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of

I took it for a man; often 'twould say
 'The fiend, the fiend!' Led me to that place.
Edg. Bear free and vent thoughts. But who comes here? 81

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
 His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining;
 I am the king himself. 82

Edg. O thou old piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.
 There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper; draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace!
 this piece of toasted cheese will do't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills. O! well flown bird; if the clout, I the clout; hewgh! Give the word. 83

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice. 84

Lear. Ha! Generil, with a white beard!
 They flatter'd me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to everything
 I said! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smell 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words; they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie, I am not azure proof. 85

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:

Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
 When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
 I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?
 Adultery? 86

Thou shalt not die; oh, for adultery! No!
 The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
 Does lecher in my sight. 87

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son

Was kinder to his father than my daughters
 Got 'twixt the lawful sheets,
 To't luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers. 88
 Behold yond simpering rascal

Whose face betwixt her looks presageth snow,
 That mines virtue, and docks shake the head
 To hear of pleasure's name. 89

The bitchew nor the sotted horse goes to't
 With a more riotous appetite. 90

Down from the waist they are Centaurs—
 Though wemen all above. 91

But to the girl do the gods a-shew't
 How south is all the Beasts! 92

Whore and hell-thier, 93
 phurons pit

Burning, scalding stench, consumption; fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination; there money for thee.

Glo. O! let me kiss that hand.

Lear. Let me wipe it first. It smells of motality. 94

Glo. O rum'd piece of nature! This greas-
 world

Shall so wear out to nought. Dost thou know
 me? 95

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
 Dost thou spy on me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it. 96

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see.

Edg. [Aside] I would not take this from report; it is. 97

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What! with the ease of eyes? 98

Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse.
 Your eyes are in a heavy case; your purse in a light; yet you see how this world goes. 99

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What! art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear; change places; and handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar? 100

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
 There thou mightst behold the great image of authority; a dog's obey'd in office. 101

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!

Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly hast't to use her in that kind

For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener. 102

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold.

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks,
 Arm'd in rags, in pigmy's straw doth pierce it.

None does offend, none, I say none; I'll abb-
 end; 103

Take that of too, my friend, who have the power
 To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;

And like a scurvy poltroon, seem
 To see the things thou dost not. Now, now

now, now;

pull off my boots, harder, harder; so.

Edg. [Aside] O! matter and impertinency mix'd;

Reason in madness. 104

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take
 my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester:

Thou must be patient; we came crying hither: Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air

We wail and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.
Glo. Alack! alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come to this great stage of fools. This' a good block! It were a delicate stratagem to shoe

A troop of horse with felt; I'll put it in proof, And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law, then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O! here he is; lay hand upon him. Sir, Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well; you shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons; I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.
Lear. No seconds? All myself?

Why this would make a man a man of salt, To use his eyes for garden water-pots, Ay, and laying ant-hill's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—
Lear. I will die bravely as a bridegroom.

What!
I will be jovial; come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you cut it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.

[Exit. Attendants follow.]

Gent. A slight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,

Fast speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir!
Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that,

Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favour,

How near's the other army?
Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir; that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,

Her army is mov'd on.
Edg. I thank you, sir.

[Exit Gentleman.]

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me:

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows:

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,

I'll lead you to some bidding.
Glo. Heartly thanks:

The bounty and the benison of heaven To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first from'd flesh

To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor,

Briefly thyself remember: the sword is out That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to't. [EDGAR interposes.]

Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant, Darest thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence; lest that infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, zur, without further caution.

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.
Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor folk pass. An chud ha' bin zwaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin so long as

'tis by a fortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder. Chill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill!
Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zur. Come; no matter vor your foins.

[They fight and EDGAR knocks him down.]

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse.

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body; And give the letters which thou find'st about me

To Edmund Earl of Gloucester; seek him out Upon the English party; O! untimely death,

[Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: a servicable villain; As ditions to the vices of thy mistress

As badness would desire.
Glo. What' is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you. Let's see his pockets: these letters that he speaks of May be my friends. He's dead; I am only sorry

He had no other death-mum. Let us see: Leave, gentle wax; and manners blame us not: To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts;

Their papers, is more lawful.

Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off; if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done if he return the conqueror; then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.

Your—wife, so I would say— 276
Affectionate servant,

GONERIL.

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life, 280
And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands,

Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers; and in the mature time
With this ungracious paper strike the slight 284
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis well
That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glo. The king is mad: how stiff is my velle
sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling 286
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,

And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves. [Drums afar off.]

Edg. Give me your hand: 290
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—A Tent in the French Camp;

Enter CORDELIA, KENT, Doctor, and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live and work

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,

And every measure fall me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er paid. 4

All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more nor ellipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suit-sht:
These weeds are memories of those worse
hours:

I prithee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam; 5
Yet to be known shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord—[To the Doctor.] How does the king?

Doc. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,

Cure this great breach in his abused nature
The untun'd and jarring senses. O! wind up 10
Of this child-changel father!

Doc. So please your majesty
That we may wake the king? he hath sleep'd long

Cor. govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I' the sway of your own will. Is he array'd? 2

Enter LEAR in his chair, carried by Servants.

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep
We put fresh garments on him.

Doc. Be by, good madam, when we do awake
him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [Music.]

Doc. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there. 2

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! 23

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds? 24

To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?

In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick cross lightning? to watch—poor perdu!—

With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog, 26
Though he had bit me, should have stood that
night

Against my fire. And wast thou fo'n, poor
father,

To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 28

'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once Had not concluded all. He wakes; speak to
him.

Doc. Madam, do you 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? 30

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out of the grave;

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears

Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me? 32

Lear. You are a spirit I know; when did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide.

Doc. He's scarce awake; let him alone a while.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?
Fair day-light? 34

I am mightily abus'd. I should even die with
this.

To see another thus. I know not what I say.

I will not swear these are my hands; let's see; I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd Of my condition!

Cor. O! look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er me. No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, fourscore and upward, not an hour more or less;

And, to deal plainly, I fear I am not in my perfect mind. Methinks I should know you and know this man;

Yet I am doubtful; for I am mainly ignorant What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know

Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me; For, as I am a man, I think this lady To be my child Cordella.

Cor. And so I am, I am. Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith, I pray, weep not: If you have poison for me, I will drink it. I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause. Lear. Am I in France? Kent. In your own kingdom, sir. Lear. Do not abuse me. Doc. Be comforted, good madam; the great rage, You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger To make him even o'er the time he has lost. Desire him to go in; trouble him no more. Tell further settling.

Cor. Will it please your highness walk? Lear. You must bear with me. Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish. [Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, DOCTOR, and Attendants.]

Gon. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain? Kent. Most certain, sir. Gon. Who is conductor of his people? Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Gon. They say Edgar, his banished son, is at the Earl of Kent in Germany. Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach.

Gon. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Lear.] Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly performed. O! 'tis ill as this day's battle's fought

Act V.

Scene I.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMOND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advi'd by night To change the course; he's full of alteration And self-reproving; bring his constant pleasure. [To an Officer, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried. Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, You know the goodness I intend upon you: Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love. Reg. But have you never found my brother's way

To the forefended place? Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam. Reg. I never shall endure her; dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not. She and the duke her husband

Enter with drums and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside.] I had rather lose the battle than that sister should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met. Sir, this I heard, the king is come to his daughter, With others; whom the rigour of our state Fore'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest I never yet was vallant; for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land.

Not holds the king, with others, whom, I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose. Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd? Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy; For these domestic and particular broils

Are not the question here. Alb. Let's then determine With the ancient of war on our proceeding.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us? Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. [Aside.] O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aloud.] I will go.

Enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your Grace had speech with man
so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you. Speak.
(Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.)

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. 40
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though
I seem,

I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry, 44
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And inclination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, 48
And I'll appear again.

Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper. [Exit EDGAR.]

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces 52

By diligent discovery; but your haste is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my
love;

Each jealous of the other, as the sting 56
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive: to take the widow
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril; 60
And hardly shall I carry out my slide
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use His countenance for the battle; which being done

Let her who would be rid of him devise 64
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy

Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his parlor; for my state 68 stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.]

Scene II.—A Field between the two Camps.

*Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours,
LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and exeunt. Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.*

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.

If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, sir!
[Exit EDGAR.]

Alarum; afterwards a retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand away!

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter taken,
Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may not even
here.

Edg. What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo. And that's true too.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The British Camp, near Dover.

*Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, prisoners;
Officers, Soldiers, &c.*

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst. 4

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison; 6

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage;
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel
down,

And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh 12

At gilded butterflies; and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them
too,

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out;
and take upon's the mystery of things, 16

As if we were God's spies; and we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sets of great ones
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, 20
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from
heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The gonjeres shall devour them, flesh and fell, 24
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see 'em starve first.

Cor. [Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded.]

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [Giving a paper.] go follow them to prison: 28

One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes; know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded 32
Does not become a sword; thy great employment

Will not bear question; either say thou 't do't,
Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do't, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done. 36

Mark.—I say, instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried onions;
If't be man's work I will do it. [Exit.]

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have show'd to-day your valiant strain, 41
And fortune led you well; you have the captives

Who were the opposites of this day's strife;
We do require them of you, so to use them 44
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard; 48
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes Which do command them. With him I sent the queen; 52

My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time

We sweat and bleed; the friend hath lost his
friend, 56

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness;
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience, 60
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's us we list to grace him:
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded.

Are you had spoke so far. He led our powers, 64
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother

Gon. Not so hot;
In his own grace he doth exalt himself 68
More than in your rebellion.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compares the best.
Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.
Gon. Holla, holla! 72
That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony; 76
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine;
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.
Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Hal! blooded fellow, yes. 80
Reg. [To EDMUND.] Let the drum strike, and prove my title mine.

Alb. Stay, stay; let me reason. Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest, 84
This gilded serpent. [Pointing to GONERIL.] For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contrail'd your bans. 88
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!
Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloucester; let the trumpet sound:

If none appear to prove upon thy person 92
Thy heinous manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; [Throws down a glove.] I'll prove it on thy heart.

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Slek! O slek! 96
Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.

Edm. There's my exchange; [Throws down a glove] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain like he lies,
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach.

On him, on you, who not? I will maintain 100
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!
Edm. A herald, ho! a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name 104
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.
Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit REGAN, &c.]

Come hither, herald.

Enter a Herald.
Let the trumpet sound.— 108
And read out this
Off. Sound, trumpet! [A trumpet sounds

Her, If an man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound! [First Trumpet.
Her. Again! [Second Trumpet.
Her. Again! [Third Trumpet.
Trumpet answers within.

Enter EDGAR, armed, with a Trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears Upon this call of the trumpet.

Her. What are you? [Edm.]
Your name? your quality? and why you answer This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit:
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself: what sayst thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword, [Edm.]

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine:
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword and fire new fortune,
Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor,
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince,
And from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou 'No,'
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But since thy outside looks so fair and war-like,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well deny
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn;
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head,
With the hell-bated lie o'erwhelm thy heart,
Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely glance,

'Tis sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets,
speak!

[Alarums. The fight is heard afar off.]

Alb. Save him, save him!

Edm. This is practice: I'll answer;
By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; then art not conqueror
But cozend and begull'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir;
Thou worse than any name, real thine evil:

No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.
[Gives the letter to EDM.]

Edm. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, and
thine:

Who can arraign me for 't? [Exit EDM.]
Alb. Most monstrous!

know'st thou this paper?

Edm. Ask me not what I know;
Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern
her. [Exit an Officer.]

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, thou have I done,

And more, much more; the time will bring
out:

'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou
That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us:

The dark and vicious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your
father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief
tale;

And, when 'tis told, O! that my heart would burst:
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so near,—O! our lives' sweet-
ness,

That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift
Into a murtherer's rags, to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;

Never,—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him,
Till some half hour past, when I was arm'd;
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,—

A weak too weak the conflict to support;
Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief, 200
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall perchance do good; but speak you
on;

You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve, 205
Hearing of this.

Edy. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity. 209

Whilst I was big in clamour came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on the other;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and his daughter;
That ever ear receiv'd; which in record
His grief grew piteous, and the strings of life Began to crack; twice then the trumpet sounded,

And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this? 220
Edy. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise

Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife.

Kent. Help, help! O help!
Edy. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man. 224
Edy. What means that bloody knife?

Kent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead.

Alb. Who dead? speak, man.
Kent. Your lady, sir, your lady; and her sister 228

Which is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three

Now marry in an instant.
Edy. Here comes Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead; 232

The judgment of the heavens, that makes us
tremble,

Does us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.

Enter KENT.

O! is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come 236
To bid my king and master eye good-night;

Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

Seest thou this object, Kent? 240
[The bodies of CORDELIA and REGAN are brought in.

Kent. Alack! why thus?
Edm. Yet Edmund was believ'd:

The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so. Cover their faces. 244
Edm. I pant for life: some good I mean to do

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,
Be brief in it, to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia. 248

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O run!
Edy. To whom, my lord? Who has the office? send!

Thy token of reprieve.
Edm. Well thought on: take my sword, 252
Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit EDMUND.

Edm. He hath commission from my wife and
me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair, 256
That she forc'd herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [EDMUND is borne off.

*Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms;
EDGAR, Officer, and Others.*

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O! you are men of stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vaults should crack. She's gone
for ever. 261

I kiss when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end? 265
Edy. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall and cease?
Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! If it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows 263
That ever I have felt.

Kent. [Kneeling.] O, my good master!
Lear. Pr'ithee, away.

Edy. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.
Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors!
all!

I might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for ever! 267

Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!
What is't thou sayest? Her voice was ever soft, gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman.

I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee. 275
Off. 'Tis true, my lord, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight. 281

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?
Kent. The same, 284

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant
Cahus?
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that; He'll strike, and quickly too. He's dead and rotten.
Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very
man— 288

Lear. I'll see that straight.
Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else; all's checreless, dark, and deadly: 292

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.
Lear. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says, and vain it is
That we present us to him.
Edg. Very bootless. 296

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here.
You lords and noble friends, know our intent;
What comfort to this great decay may come
Shall be applied: for us, we will resign, 300

During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power:—[To EDGAR and
KENT.] You, to your rights;
With boot and such addition as your honours
Have more than merited. All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings. O! see, see!
Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no no life!
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, 308
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no
more,
Never, never, never, never, never!
Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir.
Do you see this? Look on her, look, her lips, 312
Look there, look there! [Dies.]

Edg. He faints!—my lord, my lord!
Kent. Break, heart; I prithee, break.
Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost: O! let him pass;
he hates him
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone, indeed. 317
Kent. The wonder is he hath endured so long:
He but usurp'd his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present
business 320
Is general woe. [To KENT and EDGAR.] Friends of my soul, you twain
Rule in this realm, and the god'd state sustain.
Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;
My master calls me, I must not say no. 324
Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long. 328
[Exeunt, with a dead march.]

Scene.—For the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-Port in Cyprus.

Act I.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush! Never tell me; I take it much unkindly
 That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
 As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me: 4
 If ever I did dream of such a matter,
 Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great 8
 ones of the city,
 In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
 Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man,
 I know my price, I am worth no worse a place;
 But he, as loving his own pride and purposes, 12
 Evades them, with a bombast circumstance
 Horribly stuffed with epithets of war;
 And, in conclusion,
 Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says he, 16

'I have already chose my officer.'
 And what was he?
 Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
 One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, 20
 A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
 That never set a squadron in the field,
 Nor the division of a battle knows
 More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoretic,
 Wherein the tog'd consuls can propose 25
 As masterly as he; mere prattle, without practice, Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election;

And I—of whom his eyes had seen the proof 28
 At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds Christian and heathen—must be be-lee'd and calm'd

By debtor and creditor; this counter-caster,
 He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, 32
 And I—God bless the mark!—his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. Why, there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of the service,
 Preference goes by letter and affection, 36
 Not by the old gradation, where each second

Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,

Wher I in any just term am affin'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then. 40

Iago. O! sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him;
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark 44
Many a dutcou and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender, and when he's old,
cashier'd; 48

Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
And, throwing but shows of service on their lcrds, 52

Do well thrive by them, and when they have lined their coats

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;

And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo, 56

Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end; 60

For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In complment extern, 'tis not long after

But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve 64
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,

If he can carry't thus!

Iago. Call up her father;
Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets, incense her kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies; though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't 72
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aboud.

Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire 76
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho! Brabantio! Signior Brabantio, ho!

Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves!
thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags! 80

Thieves! thieves!

Enter BRABANTIO, above, at a window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you are robb'd; for shame put on your gown;

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram

Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise!

Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.

Arise, I say.

Bra. What! have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I, what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome.

I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors;
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say

My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draught,
Upon malicious knavery dost thou come

To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir!

Bra. But thou must needs be sur-

My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio

In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans. 11

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee
Roderigo. 12

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But, I beseech you,

If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent.—
As partly, I find, it is,—that your fair daughter,

At this odd-even and dull-watch o' the night, 124
Transported with no worse nor better guard

But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—

If this be known to you, and your allowance, 128
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;

But if you know not this, my manners tell me

We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all evility, 132
I thus would play and trife with your reverence:
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes 136
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself:

If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state 140
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper! call up all my people!
This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already. 144
Light, I say! light! [Exit, from above.]

Iago. Farewell, for I must leave you:
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place
To be produe'd, as, if I stay, I shall,—
Against the Moor; for, I do know the state, 148
However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,— Which even now stand in act,—that, for their souls, 152

Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business; in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life, 156
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. 160
[Exit.]

Enter below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is
And what's to come of my despoiled time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O, unhappy girl!
With the Moor, sayst thou? Who would be a
father! 165
How didst thou know 'twas she? O, she deceives
me
Past thought. What said she to you? Get more tapers!
Raise all my kindred! Are they married, think
you? 168

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Bra. O heaven! How got she out? O, treason of the blood:

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters'
minds

By what you see them act. Are there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother. O! that you had had her. 170

Some one way, some another! Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please

To get good guard and go along with me. 180

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;

I may command at most. Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.

On, good Roderigo; I'll deserve your pains. 184
[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Another Street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants, with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain
men,

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity Sometimes to do me service. Nine or ten times 4

I had thought to have jerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour 8

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? Be assured of this,
That the magnifico is much beloved, 12
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's; he will divorce you.
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance

The law—with all his might to enforce it on— 16
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My servilees which I have done the signory Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to
know,

Which when I know that boasting is an honour 20
I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege, and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd; for know, Iago, 24
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,

I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond? 28

Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends:

You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they? 32

Iago. By Jove, I think no.

Enter CASSIO and certain Officers, with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.

The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general, 36
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine. 40
It is a business of some heat; the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels,
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd for; 44

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you,
I will but spend a word here in the house, 48
And go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land
carrack;

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To who? 52

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for
you.

Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis'd;
He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers, with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there! 56

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides.]

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for
you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years 60

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief; where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Daun'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;
For I'll refer me to all things of sense, 64

If she in charms of magic were not bound,

Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,

so opposite to marriage that she shunn'd

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom;
Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight:
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minrals

That waken motion: I'll have't disputed on
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.
Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known
Without a prompter. Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison; till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state
To bring me to him?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior,
The duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council
In this time of the night! Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.
[Exit.]

Scene III.—A Council Chamber. The Duke and Senators sitting at a table. Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd:
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Sec. Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference,—yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:

I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What, ho! what, ho! what,
ho!

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter a Sailor.

Duke. Now, what's the business?
Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;

So was I bid report here to the stato
By Signior Angelo, 16

Duke. How say you by this change?

First Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk, 20

And let ourselves again hut understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such war-like hrace, 24

But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought
Of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first, 28

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.
Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news. 32

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injoined them with an after fleet.

First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess? 36

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now they do re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor, 40
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then, for Cyprus.
Marcus Lucileo, is not he in town? 44

First Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, ROBERTO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you 48
Against the general enemy Ottoman.
(To BRABANTIO.) I did not see you; welcome,
gentle signior;

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me; 52

Neither my place nor ought I heard of business Hath rals'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care

Take hold of me, for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature 56
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O! my daughter.

Duke. Dead?

Sen. Ay, to me;

Bra. She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted 60
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;

For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not. 64

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding
Hath thus begull'd your daughter of herself

And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter 68

After your own sense; yea, though our proper
son

Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,

Your special mandate for the state affairs, 72
Hath hither brought.

Duke. We are very sorry for it.

Sen. [To OTHELLO.] What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors, 76

My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,

It is most true; true, I have married her;
The very head and front of my offending 80

Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' 84

plth,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action in the tented field; 88

And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;

And therefore little shall I grace my cause 88
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious
patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic, 92
For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,
I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold; Char
L 1

cl. 21 Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; and she, in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing, 97
To fall in love with what she feard to look on!

It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect
That will confess perfection so could err 100
Against all rules of nature, and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the
blood, 104

On with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more certain and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods 108
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

First Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Shedue and poison this young maid's affections;
Or came it by request and such fair question 113
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father: 116
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.
Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know
the place. 121

[Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present 124
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life 129
From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes
That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days 132
To the very moment that he bade me tell it;
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of half-breath'd 'scapes from the imminent deadly breach, 136

Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence
And portance in my travel's history;
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle, 140
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads 144
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline;

But still the house-affairs would draw her
thence;

Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greet ear 147
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pilant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart 152
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intently: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears, 155
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my young suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me my pains a world of sighs:
She swoon'd with oath, 'twas strange, 'twas passing
strange; 160

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd That heaven had made her such a man; she thank'd me,

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story, 163
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake:

She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her that she did pity them. 166
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter her too.

Good Brabantio, 171
Take up this mangled matter at the best;
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak
If she confess that she was half the wooer, 174
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress:

Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty.
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband; 181

And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

Bra. God be with you! I have don
Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor: 187

I here do give thee that with all my heart
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel,

 r sake, jewel,

I am glad at soul I have no other child; 196
 For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
 To hang clogs on them. I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself and lay a sentence,

Which as a grize or step, may help these lovers
 Into your favour. 201

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
 By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone 204
 Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
 What cannot be preserv'd when Fortune takes Patience her injury a mockery makes.

The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief; 208

He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;

We lose it not so long as we can smile.
 He bears the sentence well that nothing bears

But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
 But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow

That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
 These sentences, to sugar, or to gall, 216

Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
 But words are words; I never yet did hear

That the hruls'd heart was pierc'd through the ear.

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of
 state. 220

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, thence sends me a safer voice on you: you must therefore content to slubber the gloss of your new opinion, this more stubborn and boisterous custom. 229

Oth. The most custom, most grave senators,
 Hath made the tinct and steel couch of war
 My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize 232

A natural and prompt alacrity
 I find in hardness, and do undertake

These present wars against the Ottomites,
 Most humbly therefore bending to your state, 237

I crave fit disposition for my wife,
 Due reference of place and exhibition,

With such accommodation and besort
 As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, 240
 Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.
Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
 To put my father in impatient thoughts

By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
 To my unfolding lend your gracious ear;

And let me find a charter in your voice
 To assist my simpleness. 245

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
 My downright violence and storm of fortunes
 May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdu'd
 Even to the very quality of my lord; 253

I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
 And to his honours and his valiant parts

Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate. 256
 So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
 A moth of peace, and he go to the war,

The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
 And I a heavy Interim shall support 260

By his dear absence. Let me go with him.
Oth. Let her have your voice.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not
 To please the palate of my appetite, 264

Nor to comply with heat,—the young affects
 In me defunct,—and proper satisfaction,

But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
 And heaven defend your good souls that you think

I will your serious and great business scant 269
 For she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys
 Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dulness

My speculative and odd'd instruments, 272
 That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
 Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,

And all indign and base adversities
 Make head against my estimation! 276

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine.
 Either for her stay or going. The affair cries

haste,
 And speed must answer it.

First Sen. You must away to-night.
Oth. With all my heart. 280

Duke. At nine of the morning here we'll meet
 again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
 And he shall our commission bring to you;

With such things else of quality and respect 284
 As doth import you.

Oth. So please your Grace, my ancient; 1790
 A man he is of honesty and trust:
 To his conveyance I assign my wife,

With what else needful your good grace shall think 288

To be sent after me.
Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one. [To BRABANTIO.] And,
 noble signior,

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
 Your son-in-law is far more fair than black. 292

First Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona
 well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see:
 She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt DUKE, SENATORS, OFFICERS, &c.]

Oth. My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
 My Desdemona must I leave to thee; 297

I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
 And bring them after in the best advantage.

Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
 Of love, of worldly matters and direction 300

To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.]

Rod. Iago!

Iago. What sayst thou, noble heart? 304

Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after. Why, thou silly gentleman! 309

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician. 312

Iago. O! villainous; I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen I would change my humanity with a baboon. 319

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it. 322

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions; but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unblitted lusts, whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be. 338

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with a usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her. It was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration; put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money:—the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as colicintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. She must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst.

If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of heaven shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. Put in our revenge against him; if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, no sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me: go, make money. I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again, and again, I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him; if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, no sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet to-morrow?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell! put money enough in your purse. [Exit RODERIGO.]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse; For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane If I would time expend with such a snipe But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor. And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets He has done my office: I know not if't be true. But I, for mere suspicion in that kind, Will do as if for surety. He holds me well; The better shall my purpose work on him. Cassio's a proper man; let me see now: To get his place; and to plume up my will In double knavery; how, how? Let's see: After some time to abuse Othello's ear That he is too familiar with his wife: He hath a person and a smooth dispose To be suspected; framed to make women false. The Moor is of a free and open nature, That thinks men honest that but seem to be. And will as tenderly be led by the nose As asses are.

I have't; it is engender'd: hell and night Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

Act II.

Scene I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus.
An open place near the Quay.

a in Cyprus.
 Quay.
 gentlemen.
 n you discern at
 It is a high-

I cannot twixt the heaven and the main
 Desery a sail. 4

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at
 land;
 A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements;
 If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
 What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
 Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of
 this? 9

Sec. Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet;
 For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
 The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds; 12
 The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
 seems to cast water on the burning bear
 And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
 I never did like molestation view 16
 On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
 It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
 The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks
 That their designment hails, a noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wrack and sufferance
 On most part of their fleet. 24

Mon. How! is this true?
 Third Gent. The ship is here put in,
 A Veronesa; Michael Cassio,
 Lieutenant to the war-like Moor Othello,
 Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea, 28
 And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.
 Third Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly 32
 And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.
 Mon. Pray heaven he be;
 For I have serv'd him, and the man commands like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho! 36

As well to see the vessel that's come in
 As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
 Even till we make the main and the aerial blue
 An indistinct regard.

Third Gent. Come, let's do so; 40
 For every minute is expectancy
 Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this war-like isle,

That so approve the Moor. O! let the heavens
 Give him defence against the elements, 45
 For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot 48
 Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
 Therefore my hopes, not surfetted to death,
 Stand in bold cure.

[Within, 'A sail!—a sail!—a sail!']

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise? 52
 Mess. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
 Stand ranks of people, and they cry, 'A sail!'

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor. [Guns heard.]

Sec. Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy; 56
 Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
 And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

Sec. Gent. I shall. [Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general
 arriv'd? 60

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid

That paragons description and wild fame;
 One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
 And in th' essential vesture of creation 64
 Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?
 Sec. Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling
 winds, 68

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
 Traitors unsteep'd to elog the guiltless keel,
 As having sense of beauty, do omit
 Their mortal natures, letting go safely by 72
 The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
 Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts 76
 A se'nright's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
 And swell his sail with thine own powerful
 breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
 Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
 Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits, 80
 And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Attendants.

O! behold,
 The riches of the ship is come on shore.
 Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees. 84
 Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
 Before, behind thee, and on every hand,

Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valliant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord? 88

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! but I fear—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies 92

Parted our fellowship. But hark! a sail.

[Cry within, 'A sail!—a sail!' Guns heard.]

Sec. Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news!

[Exit Gentleman.]

Good ancient, you are welcome:—[To EMILIA.] welcome, mistress. 96

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

[Kissing her.]

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips 100

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still when I have list to sleep: 104

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so. 108

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housew'ry, and housewives in your beds 112

Des. O! fie upon thee, slanderer.

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not. 116

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't,
For I am nothing if not critical.

Des. Come on; assay. There's one gone to the harbour? 120

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry, but I do beguile
The thing I am by seeming otherwise.

Come, how wouldst thou praise me? 124

Iago. I am about it; but indeed my invention

Comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize;
It plucks out brains and all: but my muse labours.

And thus she is deliver'd. 128

If she be fair and wise, fairness and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair,
For even her folly help'd her to an heir. 137

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul and foolish there-unto 141

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.
Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud,
Had tongue at will and yet was never loud, 149

Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,'

She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly, 153

She that in wisdom never was so frail
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail,

She that could think and ne'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following and not look behind, 157

She was a wight, if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor? 164

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] Ho takes her by the palm; ay, well said, whisper; with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will give thee in thine own courtship. You say true, 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in.
Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy!
'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were eyster-pipes for your sake! [A trumpet heard.] The Moor! I know his trumpet. 181

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him and receive him.

Cas. Lo! where he comes. 184

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
 If after every tempest come such calms, 185
 May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!
 And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas
 Olympus-high, and duck again as low
 As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 192
 There now to be most happy, for I fear
 My soul hath her content so absolute
 That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid! 196
 But that our loves and comforts should increase
 Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!
 I cannot speak enough of this content;
 It stops me here; it is too much of joy: 200
 And this, and this, the greatest discords be,
 [Kissing her.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside.] O! you are well tun'd now,
 But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
 As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle. 204
 News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?
 Honey, you shall be well desired in Cyprus;
 I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet, 208

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
 In mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago,
 Go to the bay and disembark my coffers.
 Bring thou the master to the citadel; 212
 He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,

Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt all except IAGO and RODRIGO.]

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come nither. If thou be'st valiant, as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them, list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard: first, I must tell thee this,
 Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible. 223

Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it.
 Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, as it is a most pregnant and unforced position, who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble, no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: a slipper and subtle knave, a finder-out of occasions, that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that foily and green minds look after; a pestilent complete knave! and the woman hath found him already. 255

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition. inde?

Iago. Blessed figs and! the wine she drinks is made of grapes; if she had been blessed she would never have loved the Moor; blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy. 264

Iago. Lechery, by this hand! an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion.
 Pish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you; do you find some occasion to anger Cassio: either by speaking too loud, or taunting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. 280

Iago. He is rash and very sudden in choler, and simply may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means
 I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity. 291

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore.
 Farewell. 296

Rod. Adieu.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;

[Exit.

That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
 The Moor, nowbeit that I endure him not, 300
 Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
 And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
 A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too;
 Not out of absolute lust,—though peradventure
 I stand accountant for as great a sin,— 305
 But partly led to diet my revenge,
 For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
 Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards; 309
 And nothing can or shall content my soul
 Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife;
 Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor 312
 At least into a jealousy so strong That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,
 If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
 For his quick hunting, starv'd the putting-on,
 I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip; 317
 Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,
 For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too,
 Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward
 me 320
 For making him egregiously an ass
 And practising upon his peace and quiet
 Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd:
 Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd. 324
 [Exit.]

Scene II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and vallant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these benefecial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the Isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! [Exit.]

Scene III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-
 night:
 Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
 Not to outsport discretion.
 Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; 4
 But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
 Will I look to't.
 Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good night; to-morrow with your earliest

Let me have speech with you. [To DESDEMONA.]
 Come, my dear love, 8

The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
 That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.
 Good night.

[Exit OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, who let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove. 17

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature. 21

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest. 25

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine, and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello. 33

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking; I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment. 37

Iago. O! they are our friends; but one cup:
 I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more. 44

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in. 49

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
 With that which he hath drunk to-night already,
 He'll be as full of quarrel and offence 53
 As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sleek fool

Roderigo,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side
 out,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd 56
 Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch.

Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
 That hold their honours in a wary distance,

spirits,
istance,

The very elements of this war-like isle,
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle. But here they come.
If consequence do both approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen. Servant following with wine.

Cas. 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already. 63

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; 72
And let me the canakiu clink:

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why then let a soldier drink. 76

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting; your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,
—drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking? 84

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled 88

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England! 92

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor lown. 96

He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree.

'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho! 101

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again? 104

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved. 108

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved. 112

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me;
the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient.

Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.
God forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough. 122

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then; you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before;
He is a soldier fit to stand by Cesar 128

And give direction; and do but see his vice;

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,

The one as long as the other; 'tis pity of him.

I fear the trust Othello puts him in, 132

On some odd time of his infirmity,

Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set, 136

If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The general were put in mind of it.

Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature

Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio, 140

And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. [Aside to him.] How now, Roderigo!
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit RODERIGO.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor

Should hazard such a place as his own second

With one of an ingrate infirmity;

It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island: 148

I do love Cassio well, and would do much

To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?

[Cry within, 'Help! Help!']

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty! 152

I'll beat the knave into a twigen bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking RODERIGO.

Mon. [Staying him.] Nay, good lieutenant;

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir, 156

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. [Aside to RODERIGO.] Away, I say! go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit RODERIGO.

Nay, good lieutenant! God's will, gentlemen!

Help, ho! Lieutenant! sir! Montano! sir!
Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch indeed!

[Bell rings.]

Who's that that rings the bell? Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be sham'd for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here? 165

Mon. 'Zounds! I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, ho, lieutenant! Sir! Montano!
gentlemen! 168

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold! the general speaks to you; hold for
shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth
this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites? 173

For Christian shame put by this barbarous brawl;

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.

Silence that dreadful bell! It frights the isle 177
From her propriety. What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with greylag, Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge
thee. 180

Iago. I do not know; friends all but now,
even now,

In quarter and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed; and then, but now,— 184

As if some planet had unwitting men,—
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,

In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds,

And would in action glorious I had lost 188
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil; 192

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure; what's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus 196

And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;
Your officer, Iago, can inform you, 200

While I spare speech, which something now
offends me,

Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,

Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice, 204
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,

And passion, having my best judgment collied,
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir, 203

Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know

How this foul rout began, who set it on; 211
And he that is approv'd in this offence, Though he had twinn'd with me—both at birth—

Shall lose me. What! in a town of war,

Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, 213
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety

'Tis monstrous. Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth, 217

Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near;
I had rather have this tongue cut from my 219

mouth
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio; 221

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help, 223

And Cassio following with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman

Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,

Lest by his clamour, as it so fell out,
The town might fall in fright; he, swift of foot,

Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,

And Cassio high in oath, which till to-night 231
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,—
For this was brief,—I found them close together,

At blow and thrust, even as again they were 241

When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him, 243
As men in rage strike those that wish them

best,
Yet, surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd

From him that feel some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago, 245
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;

But never more be officer of mine.

Enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look! if my gentle love be not ruin'd up; 251
[To Cassio.] I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.
Lead him off. [MONTANO is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town, 257
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldiers' life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.]

Iago. What! are you hurt, lieutenant? 261

Cas. Ay; past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O!
I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving; you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What! man; there are ways to recover the general again; you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affront an imperious lion.
Sue to him again, and he is yours. 279

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk!
and speak parrot! and squabble, swagger, swear,
and discourse fustian with one's own shadow!
O thou invisible spirit of wine! If thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you? 288

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should, with joy, pleasure, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts. 296

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough;
how came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath; one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself. 302

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen, but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good. 307

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every Inordinate cup is unblest and the ingredient is a devil. 314

Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good fami-llar creature if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you. 318

Cas. I have well approved it, sir. I drunk!

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general: I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces;
confess yourself freely to her; importune her;
she'll help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before. 334

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here. 341

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago! [Exit.]

Iago. And what's he then that says I play the villain? 345

When this advice is free I give and honest,
Probal to thinking and indeed the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy 348
The inelining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And then for her
To win the Moor, were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin, 353
His soul is so enfeet'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god 356
With his weak function. How am I then a villain!

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will the blackest sins put on, 360
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows.
As I do now; for while this honest fool
Piles Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, 364
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear
That she repels him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor. 368
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the ery. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? 380
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft,

And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashiered Cassio. 384

Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe:
Content thyself awhile. By the mass, 'tis morning;

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: 389
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit RODERIGO.] Two things are to be done,

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on; 393

Myself the while to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Sollelling his wife: ay, that's the way 396
Dull not device by coldness and demerit. [Exit.]

Act III.

Scene I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter CASSIO, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains;
Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, general.' [Music.]

Enter Clown.

Clow. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak of the nose thus?
First Mus. How, sir, how? 5

Clow. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments? 5

First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clow. O! thereby hangs a tale. 6 8

First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clow. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it. 14

First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clow. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care. 18

First Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clow. Then put up your pipes in your bag, I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away!

[Exit Music.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?
Clow. No, I hear not your honest friend; hear you

Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quilllets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentiwoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, bid her there's one Cassio entreats her a little farther of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clow. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir him, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clow.]

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, Iago

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, to send in to your wife; my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently. And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor out of the way, that your converse and business may be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit IAGO.] I never knew a Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant; I am sorry

For your displeasure; but all will soon be well. The general and his wife are talking of it, and she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies that he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus, and great affinity, and that in wholesome dom

He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you,

And needs no other suitor but his likings. To take the safest occasion by the front To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you, if you think fit, or that it may be done, Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in: I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exit Emilia.]

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot, And by him do my duties to the senate; That done, I will be walking on the works; Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't. 4
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see't?
Genl. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.]

Scene III.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband,
 As if the case were his. 4
Des. O! that's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio,
 But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were.
Cas. Bounteous madam,
 Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, 8
 He's never anything but your true servant.
Des. I know't; I thank you. You do love my lord;
 You have known him long; and be you well assur'd
 He shall in strangeness stand no further off 12
 Than in a politic distance.
Cas. Ay, but, lady,
 That polley may either last so long,
 Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
 Or breed itself so out of circumstance, 16
 That, I being absent and my place supplied,
 My general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee, 20
 If I do vew a friendship, I'll perform it
 To the last article; my lord shall never rest;
 I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
 His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
 I'll intermingle every thing he does 25
 With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio;
 For thy solicitor shall rather die
 Than give thy cause away. 28

Enter OTHELLO, and IAGO at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease,
 Unfit for mine own purposes. 33
Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit CASSIO.]
Iago. Ha! I like not that.
Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my lord; or if—I know not what. 36
Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure. I cannot think it
 That he would steal away so guilty-like,

Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he. 4
Des. How now, my lord!
 I have been talking with a suitor here,
 A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. Who is't you mean? 44
Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,
 If I have any grace or power to move you,
 His present reconciliation take;
 For if he be not one that truly loves you, 48
 That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,
 I have no judgment in an honest face.
 I prithee call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, 52
 That he hath left part of his grief with me,
 To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you. 56
Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
 I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday 60
 morn;
 On Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn:
 I prithee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;
 And yet his trespass, in our common reason,—
 Save that they say, the wars must make examples
 Out of their best,—is not almost a fault
 To incur a private check. When shall he come?
 Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul, 68
 What you could ask me that I should deny,
 Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael
 Cassio,
 That came a wooing with you, and so many a time,
 When I have spoke of you displeasingly, 72
 Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
 To bring him in? Trust me, 't could do much.—
Oth. Prithee, no more; let him come when he will;
 I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon; 76
 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
 Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
 Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
 To your own person; nay, when I have a suit 80
 Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
 It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
 And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
 Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, 84
 To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come. Be as your fancies teach you; 88
 What'e'er you be, I am obedient.

[Exit, with EMILIA.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul
 But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
 Chaos is come again. 92

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio when you woo'd
 my lady,
 Know of your love? 96

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask? 96

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
 No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O! yes; and went between us very oft. 100

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed; discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Honest! ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know. 104

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord!

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,
 As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something; 108

I heard thee say but now, thou lik'dst not that,
 When Cassio left my wife; what didst not like?
 And when I told thee he was of my counsel
 In my whole course of wooing, thou criest, 'Indeed!' 112

And didst contract and purse thy brow together,
 As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
 Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,
 Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost;

and, for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
 And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them
 breath,

Therefore these steps of thine fright me the
 more; 120

For such things in a false disloyal knave
 Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just
 They are close delations, working from the heart
 That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio, 124
 I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
 Or those that be not, would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest
 man. 128

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this.
 I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
 As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts 132

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
 Though I am bound to every act of duty,
 I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
 Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false; 136

As where's that palace whereinto foul thoughts
 Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure

But some uncleanly apprehensions
 Keep lects and law days, and in session sit 140
 With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend,
 Iago,

If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear

A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you, 144

Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,—
 As, I confess, it is my nature's plague

To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not,—that your wisdom
 yet, 148

From one that so imperfectly conceits,
 Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble

Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
 It were not for your quiet nor your good, 152
 Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
 To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear
 my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls: 156
 Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something,
 nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that fleches from me my good name
 Robs me of that which not enriches him, 160
 And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody. 164

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
 It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock
 The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss
 Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; 168
 But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet soundly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough, 172

But riches fluxless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor,
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this? 176

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is once to be resolved. Exchange me for a goat
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago;
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with love or jealousy! 192

Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit; therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me; I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature
Out of self-bounty be abus'd; look to't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is not to leave't undone, but keep unknown. 204

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying
you;

And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks,

She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then; 208

She that so young could give out such a seem-
ing,

To seal her father's eyes up close as oak,
He thought 'twas witchcraft; but I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon 212
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. I' faith, I fear it has.
I hope you will consider what is spoke 216 Comes from my love. But, I do see you're mov'd;

I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion. 220

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech would fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend—

My lord, I see you're mov'd

Oth. No, not much mov'd: 224
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And, yet, how nature erring from itself,— Iago. Ay, there's the point: as, to be bold
with you, 228

Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own cilme, complexion, and degree,
Where'to, we see, in all things nature tends;
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural,
But pardon me; I do not in position
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recolling to her better judgment, 236
May fail to match you with her country forms
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago. 240

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.]

Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago. [Returning.] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour 244

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time.

Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,
For, sure he fills it up with great ability,

Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile, 248
You shall by that perceive him and his means:

Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;

Much will be seen in that. In the mean time, 252
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,

As worthy cause I have to fear I am,

And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government. 256

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.]

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings; if I do prove her haggard, 260
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation 264
That chamberers have, or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years—yet that's not much—
She's gone, I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage! 268
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites. I had rather be a towl,

And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love 272
For other uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great
ones;

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us, 276
When we do quicken.

Look! where she comes.
If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.
I'll not believe it.

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner and the generous islanders 280
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here. 284
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away
again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little:
[She drops her handkerchief.]
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you. 288

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
[Exit Othello and Desdemona.]

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor;
My wayward husband hath a hundred times 292
Wood'd me to steal it, but she so loves the token,
For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give't Iago; 297
What he will do with it heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone? 300
Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for
you.

Iago. A thing for me? It is a common thing—
Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife. 304
Emil. O! is that all? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief?
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona: 308
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?
Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence,
And, to the advantage, I, being there, took't up.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me. 313

Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest
To have me fetch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatches it.]
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import 317

Give't me again; poor lady! she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknowledg'd on't; I have use for it. 320

Go, leave me. [Exit EMILIA.]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it; trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong 324
As proofs of holy writ; this may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But with a little act upon the blood, 329
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so:
Look! where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, 332
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'd'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of
that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack; 336

I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd
Than but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?

I saw't not, thought I not, it harmed not me;
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips;
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know't and he's not robbed at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this. 345

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioners and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O! now, for ever 348
Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content!

Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill
trump, 352

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit, 357

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!
Iago. Is it possible, my lord?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore. 360

Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;
 Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
 Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
 Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see't; or, at the least, so prove it, 365

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
 To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,— 368
Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture
 me,

Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
 On horror's head horrors accumulate;
 Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
 amaz'd; 372

For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven forgive me!
 Are you a man! have you a soul or sense?
 God be wi' you; take mine office. O wretched
 fool! 376

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice.
 O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O
 world!

To be direct and honest is not safe.

I thank you for this profit, and, from hence 380
 I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay; thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
 And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world, 384
 I think my wife be honest and think she is not;
 I think that thou art just and think thou art
 not.

I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black 388
 As mine own face. If there be cords or knives,
 Poison or fire or suffocating streams,

I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion. 392

I do repent me that I put it to you.
 You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would! nay, I will.
Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied, my
 lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on; 396
 Behold her tupp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
 To bring them to that prospect; damn them
 then.

If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster 400
 More than their own! What then? how then?
 What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?

It is impossible you should see this,
 Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
 As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross 405

As ignorance made drunk; but yet, I say,
 If imputation, and strong circumstances,

Which lead directly to the door of truth, 408
 Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office;

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far, 412
 Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love,
 I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;

And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep. 416

There are a kind of men so loose of soul
 That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;
 One of this kind is Cassio.

In sleep I heard him say, 'Sweet Desdemona, 420
 Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!'

And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my
 hand,

Cry, 'O, sweet creature!' and then kiss me
 hard.

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots, 424
 That grew upon my lips; then laid his leg
 Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cried, 'Cursed fate, that gave thee to the Moor!'

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion:
 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs

That do demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces. 432

Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing
 done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
 Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief
 Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift. 437

Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief—

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day
 See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,— 440
Iago. If it be that, or any tinct was hers,
 It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O! that the slave had forty thousand
 lives;

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge. 444
 Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;
 All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven:
 'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell!
 Yield up, O love! thy crown and hearted throne To tyrannous hate. Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspies' tongues!

Iago. Yet be content.

Oth. O! blood, blood, blood! 452

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on 456
To the Propontic and the Hellespont,
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge 460
Swallow them up. [Kneels.]

Now, by yond marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet. [Kneels.]
Witness, you ever-burning lights above! 464
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command, 468

And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody business ever.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to't: 472
Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done at your request:
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw 477
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why, man? 4

Clo. He is a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to; where lodges he?

To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie. 9

Des. Can anything be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat. 13

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer. 17

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well. 20

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.]

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather lost my purse
Full of cruzadoes; and, but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough 29
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who! he? I think the sun where he was born

Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look! where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio 33
Be call'd to him.

Enter OTHELLO.

How is't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside.] O! hardness to dissemble.

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist,
my lady. 37

Des. It yet has felt no age nor known no
sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heat;

Hot, hot, and moist; this hand of yours requires 40

A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand, 44
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand; the hearts of old gave hands,
But our new heraldry is hands not hearts. 48

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak
with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends
me. 52

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault,
That handkerchief 56

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people; she told her, while she kept it,

'Twould make her amiable and subdue my

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should

And bid me, when my father would have me wife,
To give it her. I did so: and take heed on't;
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose't or give't away, were such perdition 68
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true; there's magic in the web of
it;

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses, 72
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,

And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true? 76

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would to heaven that I had never seen it!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash? 80

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out o'
the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost: but what an if it were?

Oth. How! 84

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:

Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again. 88

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief; my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio. 92

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. A man that all his time

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,

Shar'd dangers with you,—

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. In sooth you are to blame. 96

Oth. Away! [Exit.]

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief;
I am most unhappy in the loss of it. 101

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a
man;

They are all hut stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungrily, and when they are full

They belch us. Look you! Cassio and my husband. 105

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must
do't:

And, lo! the happiness: go and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news
with you? 108

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech
you

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love

Whom I with all the office of my heart 112

Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd.

If my offence be of such mortal kind

That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity, 116

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,

And shut myself up in some other course 120

To fortune's aims.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio!

My advocacy is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,

Were he in favour as in humour alter'd. 124

So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best

And stood within the blank of his displeasure

For my free speech. You must awhile be patient; 128

What I can do I will, and more I will

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,

And, certainly in strange unquietness. 132

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother; and can he be angry?

Something of moment then; I will go meet him;

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prithee, do so. [Exit Iago.] Something, sure, of state,

Either from Venice, or some unhatred practice

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him, 141

Hath puddled his clear spirit; and, in such cases

Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;

For let our finger ache, and it indues 145

Our other healthful members even to that sense

Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not gods,

Nor of them look for such observancy 148

As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,

I was—unhandsome warrior as I am—

Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find I had suborn'd the witness, 152

And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,

And no conception, nor no jealous toy
Concerning you. 156

Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd
so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself. 161

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout; 164

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? 169
F' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging,
Cassio.

What! keep a week away? seven days and nights? 172

Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent
hours,

More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckonug!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca,

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd, 176

But I shall, in a more continue time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca.

[Giving her DESDEMONA'S handkerchief.]

Take me this work out.

Bian. O Cassio! whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend; 180

To the felt absence now I feel a cause;

Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous
now 184

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance;

No, in good troth Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not, sweet; I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded,— 188
As like enough it will,—I'd have it copied;

Take it and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general, 192

And think it no addition nor my wish

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.
I pray you, bring me on the way a little 196

And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring
you,

For I attend here; but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd. [Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago!

Iago. What!

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend a-bed
An hour or more, not meaning any harm? 4

Oth. Naked a-bed, Iago, and not mean harm?
It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt
heaven. 8

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip;
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and,
being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man. 12

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen; 16

They have it very oft that have it not:
But for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—

Thou said'st,—O! it comes o'er my memory, 20
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good now. 24

Iago. What.
If I had said I had seen him do you wrong? 24

Or heard him say, as knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose 28

But they must blab.

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well
assur'd,

No more than he'll unswear. 32

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Falt'n, that he did—I know not what he did. 32

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! We say, lie on her, when they belle her. Lie with her! that's fulsome. Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief. To confess, and be hanged for his labour. First, to be hanged, and then to confess: I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus. Plish! Noses, ears, and lips. Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil! [Falls in a trance.]

Iago. Work on, 45
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames even thus. All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord! 48

My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter CASSIO.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy; this is his second fit; he had one yesterday. 52

Cas. Ruh him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear;

The lethargy must have his quiet course, if not he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look! he stirs; Do you withdraw yourself a little while, 57 He will recover straight; when he is gone, I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit CASSIO.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head? 60

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven. Would you would bear your fortune like a man!

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then, in a populous city, 64

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;

Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd May draw with you; there's millions now alive That nightly lie in those unproper beds 69 Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.

O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock, To lip a wanton in a secure couch, 72

And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know; And knowing what I am I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart; Confine yourself but in a patient list. 76

Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief,—

A passion most unsultry such a man,— Cassio came lither; I shifted him away, And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy; 80 Bade him anon return and here speak with me; The which he promis'd. Do but enerve yourself, And mark the fees, the gibes, and notable scorns, That dwell in every region of his face; 84 For I will make him tell the tale anew, Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is again to cope your wife: I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, 89 And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? I will be found most cunning in my patience; But—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss; 92 But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw? [OTHELLO goes apart.]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca, A housewife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes; it is a creature That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strumpet's 97 plague

To beguile many and be beguild by one. He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain From the excess of laughter. Here he comes:

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad; 101 And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour

Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant? 104

Cas. The worse that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Pity Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

[Speaking lower.] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, 108

How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas! poor catfist!

Oth. Look! how he laughs already!

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas! poor rogue, I think, I' faith, she loves me. 112

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he hurpurtunes him To tell it o'er: go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her; 116

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

Cas. I marry her! what? a customer? I prithce, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her. 125

Cas. Prithce, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. 128

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story. 133

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck;—

Oth. Crying, 'O dear Cassio!' as it were; his gesture imports it. 140

Cas. So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me; so hales and pulls me; ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that nose of yours, but not the dog I shall throw it to. 145

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one. 149

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work! A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work! There, give it your hobby-horse; wheresoever you had it I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now! 161

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.]

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street else. 169

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you. 173

Cas. Prithce, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.]

Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him. Iago? 177

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O! Iago! 180

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand; and to see how he prizes the fopish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore. 185

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killling. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that. 188

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature; she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way. 195

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is. So delicate with her needle! An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear. Of so high and plenteous wit and invention! 200

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O! a thousand, a thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle. 204

Oth. Nay, that's certain;—but yet the pity of it, Iago! O! Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody. 209

Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me!

Iago. O! 'tis foul in her. 212

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night: I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago. 218

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good; the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker; you shall hear more by midnight. 224

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet within.] What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,

Come from the duke; and see, your wife is with him. 228

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. God save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a packet.]

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. [Opens the packet, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico? 232

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant
Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir. 236

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and
my lord

An unkind breach; but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will— 240

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

I- there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much
To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio. 245

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What! is he angry?

Lod. May be the letter moved him;

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government. 249

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed!

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil! [Strikes her.

Des. I have not deserved this. 252

Lod. My lord, this would not be better'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw't: 'tis very much;
Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile. 257

Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you.

[Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady;

I do beseech your lordship, call her back. 260

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, 264

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,

Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears.

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!—

I am commanded home. Get you away; 269

I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the mandate.

And will return to Venice. Hence! avaunt!

[Exit DESDEMONA.

Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together; 273

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus. Goats and monkeys! [Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all-in-all sufficient? Is this the noble nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid

virtue

The shot of accident nor dart of chance

Could neither graze nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd

Lod. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of brain? 280

Iago. He's that he is; I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be, if, what he might, he is not.

I would to heaven he were!

Lod. What! strike his wife?

Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew 284

That stroke would prove the worst!

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me to speak 288

What I have seen and known. You shall observe
him,

And his own courses will denote him so

That I may save my speech. Do but go after

And mark how he continues. 292

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceived in him.

[Exit.

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?

Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and her together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard 4

Each syllable that breath made up between
them.

Oth. What! did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing? 5

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest.

Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other.

Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true, 10

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither; go.

[Exit EMILIA.

She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle
whore, 20
A closet lock and key of villanous secrets;
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her
do't.

Re-enter EMILIA with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes; 24

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy's this?

Oth. [To EMILIA.] Some of your function,
mistress;

Leave procreants alone and shut the door;

Cough or cry 'hem' if any body come; 28

Your mystery, your mystery; nay, dispatch.

[Exit EMILIA.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words. 32

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true

And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee; therefore be doubledamn'd; 36

Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false
as hell,

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?

Oth. Ah! Desdemona; away, a ay, away! 40

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?

If haply you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back, 44

Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost
him,

Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven

To try me with affliction, had he rain'd

All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head,
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips, 49

Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,

I should have found in some part of my soul

A drop of patience; but, alas! to make me 52

The fixed figure for the time of scorn

To point his slow and moving finger at;

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well;

But there, where I have garner'd up my heart,

Where either I must live or bear no life, 57

The fountain from the which my current runs

Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!

Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads 60

To knot and gender lu! Turn thy complexion
there,

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherub; 1

Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me
honest. 64

Oth. O! ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed!

Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet

That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst

ne'er been born. 68

Des. Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,

Made to write 'whore' upon? What committed!

Committed! O thou public commoner! 72

I should make very forges of my cheeks,

That would to cinders burn up modesty,

Did I but speak thy deeds. What countenit!

Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon winks,

The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets 77

Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,

And will not hear it. What countenit!

Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong. 80

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian.

If to preserve this vessel for my lord

From any other foul unlawful touch

Be not to be a strumpet, I am none. 84

Oth. What! not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O! heaven forgive us.

Oth. I cry you merey, then; 88

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice

That married with Othello. You, mistress,

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,

And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA.

You, you, ay, you!

We have done our course; there's money for your pains. 92

I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel.
[Exit]

Emil. Alas! what does this gentleman coucease?

How do you, madam? how do you, my good
lady?

Des. Falth, half asleep. 96

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with
my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady. 100

Des. I have none; do not talk to me, Emilia;
I cannot weep, nor answer have I none,

But what should go by water. Prithce, to-night lay on my bed my wedding sheets: remember:
And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here's a change indeed! 105

[Exit.]

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my least misuse? 108

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks; 110
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas! I go, my lord hath so bewhor'd
her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear. 117

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore; a beggar in his drink 120

Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none
such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day! 124

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,

Her father and her country and her friends,
To be call'd whore? would it not make one
weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it! 128

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,

Some cogging cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie! there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon
him!

Emil. A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones! 136

Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abused by some most villanous
knave,

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
O heaven! that such companions thou'dst unfold, 141

And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak with n door. 144
Emil. O! fie upon them. Some such squire he was

That turn'd your wit the scamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago, 143

What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of
heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, 152

Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,

Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did, 156

And ever will, though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement, love him dearly,

Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life, 160
But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore':

It does abhor me now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you be content, 'tis but his humour; 165

The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—

Iago. 'Tis but so, I warrant. [Trumpets.
Hark! how these instruments summon to supper; 169

The messengers of Venice stay the great:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo! 172

Rod. I do not find that thou dealest justly
with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou daffest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered. 182

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly. 186

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance, but I find none. 193

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: by this hand, I say, it is very scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well. 198

Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona; if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful sollicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now. 204

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo; if thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair. 212

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage, and valour, this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reach and compass? 224

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice. 228

Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio. 233

Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do? 237

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a bariotry, and thither will I go to him; he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence,—which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,—you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste; about it. 250

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O! pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir? 4

O! Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith; dismiss your attendant there; look it be done. 9

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent; he hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you. 12

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displeas him. 15

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his cheeks and frowns,— 20

Prithee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith! how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me In one of those same sheets. 24

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara; She was in love, and he she lov'd prov'd mad

And did forsake her; she had a song of 'willow;' 28

An old thing 'twas, but it expressed her fortune,

And she did sing it; that song to-night Will not go from my mind; I have much to do

But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithee, dispatch. 32

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man. 36

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip. 40

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow: 44
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow:
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;—

Lay by these:— 48
Sing willow, willow, willow:

Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—
Sing all a green willow must be my garland.
Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that's not next. Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he then? 56

Sing willow, willow, willow:
If I court moe women, you'll couch with moe
men.

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do luteh;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men, these men! 61

Dost thou in conscience think, tell me, Emilia,
That there be women do abuse their husbands
in such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the
world? 65

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might do't as well i' the dark. 68

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the
world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing; 'tis a great price

For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. In troth, I think I should, and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but for the whole world, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world. 50

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having th' world for your labour,
'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make i' the right. 54

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.
Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage, as would store the world they play'd
for. 58

But I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps,
Or else break out in peevish jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon us; or, say they strike
us,

Or scant our former having in despite;
Why, we have galls, and though we have some
grace,

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them; they see and smell, 57

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?

I think it is; and doth affection breed it? 60
I think it doth; is't frailty that thus errs?

It is so too; and have not we affections,
Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? 64

Then, let them use us well; else let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night; heaven me such usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend! 68
[Exit.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow.
It makes us, or it mars us; think on that, 4
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand. [Retires.]

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed; 3
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:

'Tis but a man gone: forth, my sword; he dies.
Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Cassio, 12

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: five Roderigo,

He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bob'd from him, 15

As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be; if Cassio do remain,

He hath a dally beauty in his life
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor 20

May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril.

No, he must die. But so; I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait; 'tis he. Villain, thou dost!

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed. 24

But that my coat is better than thou know'st;
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.

Rod. O! I am slain.

[IAGO from behind wounds CASSIO in the leg, and exit.

Cas. I am mahn'd for ever. Help, ho! murder! murder! [Falls.

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio: Iago keeps his word. 28

Rod. O! villain that I am!

Oth. It is e'en so.

Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he: O brave Iago, honest and just!
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong;
Thou teachest me. Mithou, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate hies; strumpet, I come!
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;

Thy bed lust-stain'd shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit.

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

Cas. What ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark! 40

Rod. O wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groan: It is a heavy night;
These may be counterfeits; let's think't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help. 44

Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Lod. Hark!

Re-enter IAGO, with a light.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder? 48

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very vallant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously? 53

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd, undone by villains!
Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this? 55

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!

[To LODOVICO and GRATIANO.] What are you there? come in, and give some help.

Rod. O! help me here. 60

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!
[Stabs RODERIGO.

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!

Iago. Kill men 't the dark! Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good or evil? 65

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir. 68

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio!

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid, 72
Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?

Iago. Who is't that cried!

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio! 76
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be that have thus mangled
you?

Cas. No. 80

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus; I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O! for a chair,

To bear him easily hence!

Bian. Alas! he faints! O Cassio, Cassio,
Cassio! 84

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this Injury.

Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come,
Lend me a light. Know we this face, or no? 88

Alas! my friend and my dear countryman,
Roderigo? no; yes, sure, O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What! of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir: did you know him?

Gra. Know him! ay. 92

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle
pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,

That so neglected you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio? O! a chair, a chair! 96

Gra. Roderigo! [A chair brought in.]
Iago. He, he, tis he.—O! that's well said; the chair:

some good men bear him carefully from hence; I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To BIANCA.]

For you, mistress, 100
save you your labour. He that lies slain here, Cassio,

Was my dear friend. What mallee was between you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. [To BIANCA.] What! look you pale? O! bear him out o' the air— 104

[CASSIO and RODERIGO are borne off.] stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale, mistress?—

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye? Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her: 108

Do you see, gentlemen? way, guiltiness will speak

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark 112

By Roderigo and fellows that are scaped: He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas! good gentleman; alas! good Cassio!

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. Prithee, Emilia, 116

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night. What! do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. Fle, fie upon thee, strumpet! 121

Bian. I am no strumpet, but of life as honest as you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I! foh! fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd. 124

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale. Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd. Will you go on afore? [Aside.] This is the night

That either makes me or fordoes me quite. 129

[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—A Bedchamber in the Castle. DES- DEMONA in bed asleep. A light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul;

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars! It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, 4
And smooth as monumental alabaster.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men. Put out the light, and then put out the light:

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, 8

I can again thy former light restore, Should I repent me; but once put out thy light,

Thou cunning'st pattern of excell'ing nature, I know not where is that Promethean heat 12

That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again, It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree.

[Kisses her.]

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade 16
Justice to break her sword! One more, one more.

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, And love thee after. One more, and this the 18 last:

So sweet was ue'er so fatal. I must weep, 20
But they are cruel tears; this sorrow's heavenly,

It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord? 24

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.
Oth. If you be think yourself of any crime 28
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,

Sollicit for it straight.
Des. Alas! my lord, what may you mean by 30
that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by: I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;

No; heaven forbid! I would not kill thy soul.
Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.
Des. Then heaven 33
Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen! with all my heart.
Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill 35
me.

Oth. Hum!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal 36
then

When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear I know not,

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I fear.
Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you. 40

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural that kills for loving.

Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip? Some bloody passion shakes your very frame; 44
These are portents, but yet, I hope, I hope

They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee 42
Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!
Send for the man and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed.
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.
Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently; 52
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath
Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die. 56

Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!
Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio
But with such general warranty of heaven 60
As I might love; I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call what I intend to do 64
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then:
I never gave it him. Send for him hither:
Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd. 68
Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?
Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.
Oth. No; his mouth is stopp'd:

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. 72

Des. O! my fear interprets. What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd and I undone. 76

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not!

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night!

Oth. Nay, if you strive,— 81

Des. But half an hour!

Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer!

Oth. It is too late. [He smothers her.]

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what, ho!
my lord, my lord! 84

Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I thine am cruel and yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

So, so.

Emil. [Within.] What, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there? 88

Emil. [Within.] O! good my lord, I would speak a word with you!

Oth. Yes; 'tis Emilia: by and by. She's dead. 'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death; 'The noise was high. Ha! no more moving? Still as the grave. Shall she come in? We. t good?

I think she stirs again: no. What's best to do? If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife: My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife: O, insupportable! O heavy hour! Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse 92 Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you 100 That I may speak with you, O! good my lord.

Oth. I had forgot thee: O! come in, Emilia: Soft, by and by: let me the curtains draw. Where art thou? [Unlocks the door.]

Enter EMILIA.

What's the matter with thee now? 102
Emil. O! my good lord, yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What! now?

Emil. But now, my lord. Oth. It is the very error of the moon; she comes more near the earth than she was wont, 108 And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian

Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd?

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd. 112
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out o' tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O! falsely, falsely murder'd.

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?
Oth. That! what? 116

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:

Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak again! Sweet Desdemona! O! sweet mistress, speak.

Des. A guiltless death I die. 120

Emil. O! who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord. O! farewell!

[Dies.]

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas! who knows? 124

Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell;

'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O! the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil. 128

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore

Emil. Thou dost belle her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say That she was false: O! she was heavily true.
Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else,
 O! I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell But that I did proceed upon just grounds To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Thy husband.
Emil. That she was false to wedlock.
Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, ha true,
 If heaven would make me such another Of our entire and perfect chrysolite, I'd not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first: An honest man he is, and hates the siltne That sticks on filthy deeds.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I say thy husband.
Emil. O mistress! villany hath made mocks with love.
 My husband say that she was false!
Oth. He, woman; I say, thy husband: dost understand the word? My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.
Emil. If he say so, may his pernifolous soul Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart: She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha!
Emil. Do thy worst: This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace! you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harru
 As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt! As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,— I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known. Though I lost twenty lives. Help! help, ho! help!
 The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!
Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO, and Others.
Mon. What is the matter? How now, general!
Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well.
 That men must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Disprove this villain if thou be'st a man:
 He says thou told'st him that his wife was false. I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain. Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought, and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie, an odious, damned lie; Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie. She false with Cassio! Did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.
 My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.
All. O heavens forfend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villany! villany! villany! I think upon't, I think, I smell't; O villany! I thought so then; I'll kill myself for grief. O! villany, villany!
Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:
 'Tis proper I obey him, but not now. Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. O! O! O!
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar. For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. O! she was foul. I scarce did know you, uncle. There lies your niece, Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:
 I know this act shows terrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.
 Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now, This sight would make him do a desperate turn, Yea, curse his better angel from his side, And fall to reprobation.
Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows That she with Cassio hath the act of shame A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:
 And she did gratify his amorous works With that recognizance and pledge of love Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand: It was a handkerchief, an antique token My father gave my mother.
Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out; I hold my peace, sir? no;

No, I will speak as liberal as the north;
Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak. 220

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.

[IAGO offers to stab EMILIA.
Fie!

Gra.
Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
More than, indeed, belonged to such a trifle, 225
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villanous whore!

Emil. She gave it Cassio! no, alas! I found
it, 228

And I did give 't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou fiest!

Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife?

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven

But what serve for the thunder? Precious villain! [He runs at IAGO. IAGO stabs

EMILIA, and exits.

Gra. The woman falls: sure, he has kill'd his
wife.

Emil. Ay, ay; O! lay me by my mistress' side.

Gra. He's gone; but his wife's kill'd. 236

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor.
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,
But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,
For 'tis a damned slave.

[Exeunt MONTANO and GRATIANO.

Oth. I am not valiant neither, 241
But every puny whilpster gets my sword.
But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady? 244
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music:—

Willow, willow, willow.

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel
Moor; 248

so come my soul to ~~whis~~ as I speak true;
so speaking as I think, I die, I die. [Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber;
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.

O! here it is. Uncle, I must come forth. 253

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with
me, 256

Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon

A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day, 260

That with this little arm, and this good sword,

I have made my way through more impediment

Than twenty times your stop: but, O vain boast

Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now. 265

Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,

And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear; 270

Man but a rash against Othello's breast,

And he retires. Where should Othello go?

Now how dost thou look now? O ill-starred wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet 275

compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl

Even like thy chastity.

O! cursed, cursed slave. Whelp me, ye devils, 280

From the possession of this heavenly sight!

Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!

O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead!

Oh! Oh!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO carried in chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello; here I lay

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that a fable.

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.
[Wounds IAGO.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee
live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once
good,

Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:

An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought did I in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd villany:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil

Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know,
you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What! not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best. 305

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath be-fall'n,

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo, 308

And here another; the one of them imports

The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,

Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain,

But that, belike, Iago in the interim 316

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious caltiff!

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;

And he himself confess'd but even now 320

That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose

Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter

How he upbraids Iago that he made him 324

Slave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast: and even but now he spake,

After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on. 328

Lod. You must forsake this room and go

with us;

Your power and your command is taken off,

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,

If there be any cunning cruelty 332

That can torment him much and hold him long,

It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest.

Till that the nature of your fault be known

To the Venetian state. Come, bring him away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go. 337

I have done the state some service, and they
know't;

No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate, 340

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate.

Nor set down aught in malice: then, must you
speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well;

Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,

Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away

Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd
eyes

Albert unused to the melting mood, 343

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

Their med'cinable gum. Set you down this;

And say besides, that in Aleppo once,

Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk 352

Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,

And smote him thus. [Stabs himself.]

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee; no way but this, [Falling upon DESDEMONA.]

Killing myself to die upon a kiss. [Dies.]

C. This did I fear, but thought he had no
weapon;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. [To IAGO.] O Spartan dog! 360

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea.

Look on the tragic loading of this need;

This is thy work; the object poisons sight;

Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house, 364

And selze upon the fortunes of the Moor,

For they succeed on you. To you, lord governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain,

The time, the place, the torture; O! enforce it.

Myself will straight aboard, and to the state 369

This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

[Exeunt.]

Act I.

Scene I.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure; Those his godly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now
turn

The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front; his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper, 8
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust. Look! where they come.

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him

The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool; behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much
Ant. There's beggary in the love that can reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be below'd
Ant. Then must thou needs find out heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.
Ant. Grates me; thus.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia, perchance, is angry; or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or this'
Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that?
Perform't, or else we damn thee?

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like;
You must not stay here longer; your dismissal
Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it, Antony.

Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's I won't say?
both? 28

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blishest, Antony, and that blood of thine
Is Caesar's homager; else so thy cheek pays
shame

When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The messengers! 32

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber rust, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space,
Kingdoms are clay; our dungy earth alike
Feels beast as man; the rootness of life 36
Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair

[Embracing.

And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weat
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! 40

Why did he marry Fulvia and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours, 44
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now. What sport tonight?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fle, wrangling queen! 48

Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.

No messenger, but thine; and all alone, 52
To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it: speak not to us.

[Exeunt ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry 60

That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands. 6

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will? 3

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand. 12

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine
enough
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee. 16

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid! 21

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more loving than belov'd. 24

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all; let me have a child at fifty,
to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage; find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress. 32

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune.

Than that which is to approach. 36

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names; prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million. 41

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes. 44

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be,—drunk to bed. 48

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. E'en as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine. 52

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.
Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune. 57

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how? but how? give me particulars. 60

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose. 65

Char. Our worse thoughts heaven mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune. O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee; and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee! 74

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave unecckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly! 80

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't! 84

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he; the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here? 88

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus!

Eno. Madam! 92

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him; go with us. [Exit CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS, CHARMIAN, Soothsayer, and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius? 97

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state made friends of them, jointing their force against Caesar, 100

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy upon the first encounter drove them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward. On; Things that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus: 105

Who tells me true, though in his tale lay death, I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus— This is stiff news—hath, with his Parthian force Extended Asia; from Euphrates 109

His conquering banner shook from Syria To Lydia and to Ionia: whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,— 112

Mess. O! my lord.

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue;

Name Cleopatra as she is called in Rome; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults 116

With such full licence as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds

When our quick winds lie still; and our hills told us

Is as our earring. Fare thee well awhile. 120

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit]

Ant. From Sleyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att. The man from Sleyon, is there such an one?

Sec. Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear. 124
These strong Egyptian letters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?

Sec. Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she? 127

Sec. Mess. In Sleyon: Her length of sickness, with what else more serious Importeth thee to know, this bears.

[Giving a letter]

Ant. Forbear me

[Exit Second Messenger]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it

What our contempts do often hurl from us 131

We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,

By revolution lowering, does become

The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;

The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on. 135

I must from this enchanting queen break off,

Ten thousand harms, more than the hills I know

My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir? 141

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. W see how mortal an unkindness is to them;

they suffer our departure, death's the word. 144

Ant. I must be gone.
Eno. Under a compelling occasion let women die; it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, coming but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think there is mettle in a state which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.
Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.
Eno. Alack! sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.
Ant. Would I had never seen her!
Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Sir?
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Fulvia!
Ant. Dead.
Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their delities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.
Ant. The business she hath broached in the state cannot endure my absence.
Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.
Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers have notice what we purpose. I shall break the cause of our expedience to the queen, and get her leave to part. For not alone the death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, do strongly speak to us, but the letters too of many our contriving friends in Rome petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands the empire of the sea; our slippery people—whose love is never link'd to the deserter—till his deserts are past—begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities upon his son; who, high in name and power, higher than both in blood and life, stands up for the main soldier, whose quality, going on,

The sides of the world may danger. Much is breeding.
Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.
Eno. I shall do it. [Ezeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.
Cleo. Where is he?
Char. I did not see him since.
Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does;
I did not seud you: if you find him sad,
Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick; quick, and return.
[Exit ALEXAS.
Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.
Cleo. What should I do I do not? S
Char. In each thing give him way, cross him:
In nothing.
Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool; the way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:
In time we hate that which we often fear.
But here comes Antony.
[Enter ANTONY.
Cleo. I am sick and sullen.
Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—
Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall:
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.
Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—
Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.
Ant. What's the matter?
Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.
What says the married woman? You may go:
Would she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here;
I have no power upon you; hers you are.
Ant. The gods best know,—
Cleo. O! never was there queen
So mightily betray'd; yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.
Ant. Cleopatra,—
Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, 32

But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying

Then was the time for words; no going then:

Eternity was in our lips and eyes,
Bliss in our brows bent; none our parts so poor

But was a race of heaven; they are so still, 37

Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst
know 40

There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile, but my full heart

Remains in use with you. Our Italy 44

Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome;

Equality of two domestic powers Breeds scrupulous faction. The hated, grown to strength, 48

Are newly grown to love; the condemn'd Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should save my

going, 56

I—Fulvia's death. 56

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness: can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen:
Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read 60

The garbolls she awak'd; at the last, best,
See wheu and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, 64

In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to
know

The purposes I bear, which are or cease
As you shall give the advice. By the fire 68

That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;
But let it be: I am quickly ill, and well; 72

So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear,
And give true evidence to his love which stands

An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me,
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her; 76

Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene

Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more

Cleo. You can do better yet, but this is meetly. 80

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target. Still he mends
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Char-mian,

How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe. 84

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it: 88

Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it; 88

That you know well: something it is I would,—
O! my oblation is a very Antony,

And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour 92

To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;

Since my becomings kill me when they do not 92

Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpleas'd folly,

And all the gods go with you! Upon your sword
Sit laurel victory! and smooth success 100

Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come;

Our separation so abides and files,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee. 104

Away! [Exeunt]

Scene IV.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
know,

It is not Cæsar's natural vlee to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria

This is the news: he fishes, dries, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more man-
like

Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy
More womanly than he; hardly gave audience or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: you shall find there

A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are

Evils enow to darken all his goodness;
His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven, 12
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change
Than what he chooses.

Ces. You are too indulgent. Let us at it is not 16

Ands to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knives that smell of sweat; say this becomes him,— 21

As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must
Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear 24
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones
Call on him for't; but to confound such time 28
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

As his own state and ours, 'tis to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,

Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news. 33

Mess. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour,

Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea, 36
And it appears he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar; to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state, 41
That he which is was wish'd until he were;
And the obb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth
love,

Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body, 44

Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lacking the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menebrates and Menas, famous pirates, 49
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound

With keels of every kind; many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt;
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon 53
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Ces. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassalls. When thou once

Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience
more 60

Tha avages could suffer; thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at; thy palate then did delgn

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge; 64
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,

The barks of trees thou brows'd'st; on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this— 68
It wounds thy honour that I speak it now—
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Ces. Let his shames quicken 72
Drive him to Romè. 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves ' the field; and to that end Assemble me immediate council; Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar, 76
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell. 80

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian!

Char. Madam!

Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam? 4

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O! 'tis treason.

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure? 8

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught a eunuch has. 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseason'd, thy freer thoughts

May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou nections? 12

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed!
Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
 But what in deed is honest to be done; 16
 Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. O Charmian!
 Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
 Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? 20
 O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
 Do bravely, horse, for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?
 The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
 And burget of men. He's speaking now, 24
 Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?'
 For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
 With most delitious poison. Think on me,
 That am with Phoebe's amorous pinches black,
 And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted
 Caesar, 29
 When thou wast here above the ground I was
 A morsel for a monarch, and great Pompey Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow; 32
 There would he anchor his aspect and die
 With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark
 Antony!
 Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath 36
 With his thnet gilded thee.
 How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
 He kiss'd, the last of many doubled kisses, 40
 This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he,
 'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
 This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot, 44
 To mend the petty present, I will place
 Her opulent throno with kingdoms; all the east,
 say thou, shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,
 And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed, 48
 Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke
 Was beastly dumb'd by him.
Cleo. What! was he sad or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes 52
 Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:

He was not sad, for he would shine on those
 That make their looks by his; he was not merry, 56
 Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay
 In Egypt with his joy; but between both:
 O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry,
 The violence of either thee becomes, 60
 So does it no man else. Mett'st thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers
 Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day
 When I forget to send to Antony, 64
 Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian.
 Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian,
 Ever love Caesar so?
Char. O! that brave Cæsar.
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!
 Say the brave Antony.
Char. The vallant Cæsar! 69
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
 If thou with Cæsar paragou again
 My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon, 72
 I sing but after you.
Cleo. My salad days,
 When I was green in judgment, cold in blood,
 To say as I said then! But come, away;
 Get me ink and paper: 76
 He shall have every day a several greeting.
 Or I'll unpeople Egypt. [Exit.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter POMPEY, MENEKRATES, and MENAS.
Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
 The deeds of justest men.
Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
 That what they do delay, they not deny.
Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their thrones, decays 4
 The thing we sue for.
Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
 Beg often our own harms, which the wise
 powers
 Deny us for our good; so find we profit
 By losing of our prayers.
Pom. I shall do well: 5
 The people love me, and the sea is mine;
 My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
 Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony
 In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make 12
 No wars without doors; Cæsar gets money
 where
 He loses hearts; Lepidus flatters both,
 Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
 Nor either cares for him.

Men. Caesar and Lepidus 16
Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.
Pom. Where have you this? 'Tis false.
Men. From Silvius, sir.
Pom. He dreams; I know they are in Rome
together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wain'd lip! 21
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks 24
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite, That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour
Even till a Lethè'd dulness!

Enter VARRIUS.

How now, Varrus!
Varr. This is most certain that I shall deliver: 23
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for further travel.
Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think 32
This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helu
For such a petty war; his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck 36
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope
Caesar and Antony shall well greet together;
His wife that's dead did trespasses to Caesar, 40
His brother warr'd upon him, although I think
Not mov'd by Antony.
Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all 44
Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords; but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions and bind up 43
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be it as our gods will have't! It only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.
Exeunt. Come, Menas. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Rome. A Room in LEPIDUS'
House.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.
Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him, 4
Let Antony look over Caesar's head,

And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave't to-day.
Lep. 'Tis not a time 3
For private stomaching.
Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't.
Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.
Eno. Not if the small come first.
Lep. Your speech is passion; 12
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Caesar.
Enter CESAR, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.
Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark ye, Ventidius.
Cæs. I do not know, 16
Mecenas; ask Agrippa.
Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard; when we debate 20
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds; then, noble partners,—
The rather for I earnestly beseech,— Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms, 24
Nor curstness grow to the matter.
Ant. 'Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.
Cæs. Welcome to Rome. 23
Ant. Thank you.
Cæs. Sit.
Ant. Sit, sir.
Cæs. Nay, then. 32
Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laugh'd at
If, or for nothing or a little, I Should say myself offended, and with you 36
Chiefly I' the world; more laugh'd at that I should
Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.
Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What was't to you? 40
Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt; yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd? 44

Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine
Intent
By what did here befall me. Your wife and brother
Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war. 45
Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never
Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather 52
Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars unlike against my stomach,
Having alke your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel, 56
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.
Cæs. You praise yourself
By lying defects of judgment to me, but
You patch'd up your excuses.
Ant. Not so, not so; 60
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, 65
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife. 68
Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!
Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils,
Cæsar,
Made out of her impatience,—which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too,—I grieving grant 73
Did you too much disquiet; for that you must
But say I could not help it.
Cæs. I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria; you 76
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.
Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted; then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want 80
Of what I was i' the morning; but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend, 84
Out of our question wipe him.
Cæs. You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.
Lep. Soft, Cæsar!
Ant. No,
Lepidus, let him speak: 88
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,

Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Cæsar;
The article of my oath.
Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them, 92
The which you both denied.
Ant. Neglect'd, rather;
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my
power 97
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do 100
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.
Lep. 'Tis noble spoken.
Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no
further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite 104
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.
Lep. Worthily spoken, Meccenas.
Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do. 111
Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more
Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.
Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.
Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone. 116
Cæs. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for it cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew 120
What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O' the world I would pursue it.
Agr. Give me leave, Cæsar.
Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.
Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side
Admir'd Octavia; great Mark Antony 122
Is now a widower.
Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa:
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness. 124
Ant. I am not married, Cæsar; let me hear Agrippa further speak.
Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony 128
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men,
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this ma-
riage, 131
All little jealousies which now seem great,

And all great fears which now import their dangers,
 Would then be nothing; truths would be but

 Where now half tales be truths; her love to both
 Would each to other and all loves to both Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
 For 'tis a studied, not a present thought, 144
 By duty ruminated.
Ant. Will Caesar speak?
Ces. Not till he hears how Antony is touched
 With what is spoke already.
Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
 If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,' 148
 To make this good?
Ces. The power of Caesar, and His power unto Octavia.
Ant. May I never
 To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
 Dream of Impediment! Let me have thy hand;
 Further this act of grace, and from this hour 153
 The heart of brothers govern in our loves
 And sway our great designs!
Ces. There is my hand.
 A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
 Did ever love so dearly; let her live 157
 To join our kingdoms and our hearts, and never Fly off our loves again!
Lep. Happily, amen!
Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
 Pompey, 160
 For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
 Of late upon me; I must thank him only,
 Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
 At heel of that, defy him.
Lep. Time calls upon's: 164
 Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
 Or else he seeks out us.
Ant. Where lies he?
Ces. About the Mount Misenum.
Ant. What's his strength
 By land?
Ces. Great and Increasing; hut by sea 168
 He is an absolute master.
Ant. So is the fame.
 Would we had spoke together! Hasten we for it;
 Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we
 The business we have talk'd of.
Ces. With most gladness; 172
 And do I love you to my sister's view,
 Whither straight I'll lead you.
Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
 Not lack your company.
Lep. Noble Antony.
 Not sickness should detain me. 176 [Flourish. Exit CESAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.
Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.
Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecrenas! My nonourable friend, Agrippa!

Agr. Good Enobarbus! 180
Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by 't in Egypt.
Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.
Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true? 188
Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle; we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.
Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her. 193
Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.
Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her. 197
Eno. I will tell you.
 The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
 Burn'd on the water; the poop was beaten gold,
 Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that 201
 The winds were love-sick with them, the oars were silver,
 Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
 The water which they beat to follow faster, 204
 As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
 It beggar'd all description; she did lie
 In her pavilion,—cloth-of-gold of tissue,—
 O'er-ploturing that Venus where we see 208
 The fancy outwork nature; on each side her
 Stood pretty-dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
 With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
 To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
 And what they could did.
Agr. O! rare for Antony. 213
Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
 So many mermaids, tended her 't the eyes,
 And made their bends adornings; at the helm
 A seeming mermaid steers; the silken tackle 217 Swell with the touches of those flower-soft
 hands,
 That yarely frame the office. From the barge
 A strange invisible perfume hits the sense 220
 Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
 Her people out upon her, and Antony,
 Enthron'd 't the market-place, did sit alone,
 Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
 Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too 225
 And made a gap in nature.
Agr. Rare Egyptian!
Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
 Invited her to supper; she replied 228
 It should be better he became her guest,
 Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony, Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard
 speak,
 Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast,
 And, for his ordinary pays his heart 233

For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench! She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed; He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street; 237 And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted

That she did make defect perfection. And, breathless, power breathe forth. 240

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety; other women cloy 244 The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests Bless her when she is riggish. 248

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go. Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest 252 Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them; Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

Oct. All which time Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia, 4 Read not my blemishes in the world's report; I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.

Oct. Good night, sir. 8

Cæs. Good night. [Exeunt CÆSAR and OCTAVIA.]

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you

Thither! 12

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue; but yet Hele you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's or mine? 16

Sooth. Cæsar's.

Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side; Thy demon—that's thy spirit which keeps thee, —is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 20 Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel Becomes a fear, as being o'erpowered; therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee. 24

If thou dost play with him at any game Thou art sure to lose, and, of that natural luck, He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustrous thickens

When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit is all afraid to govern thee near him, But he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone: Say to Ventidius I would speak with him.

[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap 30 He hath spoken true; the very dice obey him. And in our sports my better cunning faints Under his chance; if we draw lots he speeds, His cocks do win the battle still of mine 35 When it is all to nought, and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt; And though I make this marriage for my peace I' the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O! come, Ventidius, 40 You must to Parthia; your commission's ready Follow me, and receive't. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further; pray you hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,

Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall

As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter; My purposes do draw me much about: You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. } Sir, good success!

Agr. }

Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Attendant.

of us that trade in love.

Attend. The musle, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmlan.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian. 4

Cleo. As well a woman with a eunuch play'd
As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me,
sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though't come too short, 8

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now.
Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: there—
My musle playing far off—I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up, 13
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, 'Ah, ha!' you're caught.

Char. 'Twas merry when
You wager'd on your angling; when your olver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he 17
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn, 20
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippian.

Enter a Messenger.

O! from Italy;

Ran thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears, 24
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—
Cleo. Antony's dead! if thou say so, villain,
Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and 28

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand that kingly
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold.
But, sirrah, mark, we use 32
To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will; 36
But there's no goodness in thy face; if Antony
Be free and healthful, so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings! If not well, Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes, 40

Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cesar, or not captive to him,

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail 45
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cesar and he are greater friends than ever. 48

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like 'but yet,' it does allay

The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet!'

'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth 52

Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee, friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,

The good and bad together. He's friends with Cesar;

In state of health, thou sayst; and thou sayst,
free. 55

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report:

He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn I the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmlan!

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. 60

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hence,
[Strikes him again.

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head: 64

[She hales him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,

Smarting in lingering pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,

I, that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give
thee, 68

And make thy fortunes proud; the blow thou hadst

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage,

And I will boot thee with what gift beside

Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam. 72

Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long.

[Draws a knife.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself;

The man is innocent. 76

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures

Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again!

Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call. 80

Char. He is afraid to come.

Ces. )
Ant. ) That's our offer.
Lep. )
Pom. ) Know, then.
I came before you here a man prepar'd 4
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Cesar and your brother were at blows, 44
Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly.
Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand: 48
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.
Ant. The beds of the east are soft; and thanks to you,
That call'd me thither than my purpose hither,
For I have gain'd by't.
Ces. Since I saw you last, 52
There is a change upon you.
Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh Fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come
To make my heart her vassal.
Lep. Well met here, 56
Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us.
Ces. That's the next to do.
Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part; and let's 60
Draw lots who shall begin.
Ant. That will I, Pompey.
Pom. No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Cesar 64
Crew fat with feasting there.
Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.
Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then, so much have I heard;
And I have heard Apollodorus carried— 68
Eno. No more of that: he did so.
Pom. What, I pray you?
Eno. A certain queen to Cesar in a mattress.
Pom. I know thee now; how far'st thou, soldier?
Eno. Well;
And well am like to do; for I perceive 72
Four feasts are toward.
Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.
Eno. Sir,
I ne'er loved you much, but I ha' prais'd ye 76
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.
Aboard my galley I invite you all: 80
Will you lead, lords?
Ces. )
Ant. ) Show us the way, sir.
Lep. )
Pom. ) Come.
[Exeunt all except MENAS and ENOBARBUS.
Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty. You and I have known, sir.
Eno. At sea, I think. 84
Men. We have, sir.
Eno. You have done well by water.
Men. And you by land.
Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land. 90
Men. Nor what I have done by water.
Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety; you have been a great thief by sea.
Men. And you by land. 94
Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas; if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.
Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoever their hands are. 100
Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.
Men. No slander; they steal hearts.
Eno. We came hither to fight with you. 104
Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.
Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back
again. 109
Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra? 112
Eno. Cesar's sister is called Octavia.
Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Calus Marecellus.
Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius. 117
Men. Pray ye, sir?
Eno. 'Tis true.
Men. Then is Cesar and he for ever knlt
together. 121
Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity,
I would not prophesy so.
Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties. 126
Eno. I think so too; but you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation. 130
Men. Who would not have his wife so?
Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again; then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you. 141

Eno. I shall take it, sir; we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exit.]

Scene VII.—On board POMPEY'S Galley off Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three Servants, with a banquet.

First Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind'll the world will blow them down.

Sec. Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured. 4

First Serv. They have made him drink almost-drink.

Sec. Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, 'No more;' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

First Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion. 11

Sec. Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship; I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partisan I could not have. 15

First Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MECENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir. They take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales o' the pyramid; they know
By the height, the lowness, or the meam, if dearth

Or folsion follow. The higher Nilus swells
The more it promises; as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, 25
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You've strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus. 28

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is now of your nud by the operation of you; am; so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so. 32

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out. 36

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear; what is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee captain,

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?
Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs; it lives in that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of a own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so; and the tears of it are wet.

Ces. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him; else he is a very epicure.

Pom. Go hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that away!

Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call for?

Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. I think thou'rt mad. The matter [Walks aside]

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith; What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,

Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Will thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What sayst thou?

Men. Will thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain me; And though thou think me poor, I am thy man

Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: Whatever the ocean pales, or sky inclips, Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats: All there is thine.

Pom. Ah! this thou shouldst have done

And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis vil-lany; 81

In thee 't had been good service. Thou must
know

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;

Mine honour it. Repent that e'er thy tongue hath so betray'd thine act; being done unknown, 85

I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this, 88
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,

shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus!

Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him,
Pompey. 92

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas!

Men. Eno-barbus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.

Men. Why? 95

Eno. A' bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk; would it were all,

That it might go on wheels! 100

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels,
ho! 104

Here is to Caesar!

Ces. I could well forbear't.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler,

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Ces. Possess it, I'll make answer; 108
But I had rather fast from all four days
Than drink so much in one.

Eno. [To ANTONY.] Ha! my brave emperor;
shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier. 112

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense

In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands.

Make battery to our ears with the loud music; 116

The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing,

The holding every man shall bear as loud

As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine, 120
Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eyes!
In thy fats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd;
Cup us, till the world go round, 124
Cup us, till the world go round!

Ces. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother,

Let me request you off; our graver business
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks; strong
Enobarb 129

Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks; the wild disguise hath almost

Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good
night. 132

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir. Give's your hand.

Pom. O, Antony!

You have my father's — But, what? we are friends.

Come down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not. 135

[Exeunt POMPEY, CESAR, ANTONY, and Attendants.

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.

These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what!

Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell

To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd!
sound out! 140

[A flourish of trumpets with drums.

Eno. Hoo! says a'. There's my cap.

Men. Hoo! noble captain! come. [Exeunt.

Act III.

Scene I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, in triumph, with SILIUS and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck;
and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death
Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's body
Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes, 4
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither 5

The routed fly; so thy grand captain Antony

Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius!
I have done enough; a lower place, note well, 12
May make too great an act; for learn this,
Silius,

Better to leave undone than by our deed
Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's away.

Cesar and Antony have ever won 16
More in their officer than person; Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour. 20

Who does I' the wars more than his captain can Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,
The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss
Than gain which darkens him. 24
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, 28 Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia 33
We have jaded out o' the field.

Sil. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with's will permit,
We shall appear before him. On, there; pass along. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

Agr. What! are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey;
he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus, Since Pompey's feast, as Metus says, is troubled
With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one. O! how he loves
Cesar.

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark
Antony! 8

Eno. Cesar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cesar? How! the nonpareil!

Agr. O, Antony! O thou Arabian bird! 12

Eno. Would you praise Cesar, say, 'Cesar' go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cesar best; yet he love
Antony.

Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, hard-poets, cannot 1

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number; hoo!
His love to Antony. But as for Cesar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves

Eno. They are his sharvs, and he their beetle [Trumpets within.] So;

This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa. 2

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of my self; 2

Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my further
band

Shall pass on thy approval. Most noble Antony
Let not the piece of virtue, which is set 2

Betwixt us as the cement of our love
To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts 3
This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended in your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find
Though you be therein curious, the least cause

For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep
you, 3

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends
We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee
well:

The elements be kind to thee, and make 4
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Oct. My noble brother!

Ant. The April's in her eyes; it is love
spring.

And these the showers to bring it on, B cheerful.

Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house and— 4

Cæs. Wha
Octavia?

Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her hear-nor can

Her heart obey her tongue; the swan's down feather, 4

That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] Will Cesar weep?

Agr. He has a cloud in's face

Eno. He were the worse for that were he swan's down-of tide, 43

 Cesar weep?
 lond in's face.
 hat were he a 52

So is he, being a man.
Agr. Why, Enobarbus,
 When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead
 He cried almost to roaring; and he wept
 When at Philipp! he found Brutus slain. 56
Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;
 What willingly he did confound he wall'd,
 Believe't, till I wept too.
Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,
 You shall hear from me still; the time shall not
 Out-go my thinking on you.
Ant. Come, sir, come; 61
 I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love;
 Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
 And give you to the gods.
Cæs. Adieu; be happy! 64
Leop. Let all the number of the stars give light
 To thy fair way!
Cæs. Farewell, farewell!
 [Kisses OCTAVIA.
Ant. Farewell!
 [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.
Cleo. Where is the fellow?
Alex. Half afraid to come.
Cleo. Go to, go to.
Enter a Messenger.
 Come hither, sir.
Alex. Good majesty,
 Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
 But when you are well pleas'd.
Cleo. That Herod's head 4
 I'll have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.
Mess. Most gracious majesty!
Cleo. Dilst thou behold
 Octavia?
Mess. Ay, dread queen.
Cleo. Where?
Mess. Madam, in Rome; 8
 I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.
Cleo. Is she as tall as me?
Mess. She is not, madam.
Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrilltongu'd, or low? 12
Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-volu'd.
Cleo. That's not so good. He cannot like her long.
Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.
Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish! 16

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
 If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.
Mess. She creeps;
 Her motion and her station are as one;
 She shows a body rather than a life, 20
 A statue than a breather.
Cleo. Is this certain?
Mess. Or I have no observance.
Char. Three in Egypt
 Cannot make better note.
Cleo. He's very knowing.
 I do perceive't. There's nothing in her yet. 24
 The fellow has good judgment.
Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.
Mess. Madam,
 She was a widow,—
Cleo. Widow! Charmian, hark.
Mess. And I do think she's thirty. 28
Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is't long or round?
Mess. Round even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.
 Her hair, what colour? 32
Mess. Brown, madam: and her forehead
 As low as she would wish it.
Cleo. There's gold for thee:
 Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
 I will employ thee back again; I find thee 36
 Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready;
 Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed, he is so; I repent me much
 That so I hurried him. Why, methinks, by him,
 This creature's no such thing.
Char. Nothing, madam. 40
Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seen majesty? Is't else defend,
 And serving you so long! 44
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:
 But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me
 Where I will write. All may be well enough. 47
Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—*Athens. A Room in ANTONY'S
 House.*

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.
Ant. Nay, my, Octavia, not only that,
 That were excusable, that, and thousand's more
 Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
 New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it 4
 To public ear:
 Spoke scantily of me; when perforce he could
 not
 But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly

He vented them; most narrow measure lent
me; 8

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Oct. O my good lord!

Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady, 12

If this division chance, ne'er stood between,

Praying for both parts:

The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, 'O! bless my lord and husband;' 16

Uudo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
'O! bless my brother!' Husband win, win brother,

Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, 20

Let your best love draw to that point which seeks

Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour

I lose myself; better I were not yours

Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested, 24

Yourself shall go between's; the mean time,
lady,

I'll raise the preparation of a war

Shall stain your brother; make your soonest
haste,

So your desires are yours.

Oct. Thanks to my lord, 28

The Joye of power make me most weak, most weak,

Your reconeller! Wars 'twixt you twain would be

As if the world should cleave, and that slain
men

Should solder up the rift. 32

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults

Can never be so equal that your love

Can equally move with them. Provide your going; 36

Choose your own company, and command what cost

Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Ero. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Ero. What, man?

Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey. 5

Ero. This is odd: what is the success?

Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him

rivally, would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey upon his own appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Ero. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps
no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast They'll grind the one the other. Where?

Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus: and spurns

The rush that lies before him; cries, 'Foot
Lepidus!'

And threatens the throat of that his officer

That murder'd Pompey.

Ero. Our great navy's rigg'd. 20

Eros. For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius
My lord desires you presently: my news

I might have told hereafter.

Ero. 'Twill be naught; 22

But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.]

Scene VI.—Rome. A Room in CAESAR'S House.

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, and MECENAS.

Caes. Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more

In Alexandria; here's the manner of 't;

I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,

Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold

Were publicly enthron'd; at the feet sat

Caesarion, whom they call my father's son,

And all the unlawful issue that their lust

Since then hath made between them. Unto her

He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her

Of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,

Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?

Caes. I' the common show-place, where they exercise. 12

His sons ho there proclaim'd the kings of kings;

Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia

He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd

Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia. She 16

In the habiliments of the goddess Isis

That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,

As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus informed.

Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence 20

Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Caes. The people know it; and have now
receiv'd

His accusations.

Agr. Whom does he accuse?

Caes. Caesar; and that, having in Sicily 24
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him

His part o' the isic; then does he say, he lent me
 Some shipping unrestor'd; lastly, he frets
 That Lepidus of the triumvirate 23
 Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
 All his revenue.

Ag. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel; 32
 That he his high authority abus'd,
 And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd.

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,
 And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I 36
 Demand the like.

McC. He'll never yield to that.
Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Oct. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs. That ever I should call thee cast-away! 40

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus?
 You come not

Like Cæsar's sister; the wife of Antony
 Should have an army for an usher, and 44
 The neighs of horse to tell of her approach
 Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way
 Should have borne men; and expectation fainted,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust 48
 Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
 Rat'd by your populous troops. But you are come

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
 The ostentation of our love, which, left un-shown, 52

Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
 By sea and land, supplying every stage
 With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord,
 To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it 56
 On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,
 Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
 My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I begg'd
 His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted, 60
 Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eyes upon him,
 And his affairs come to me on the wind.
 Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens. 64

Cæs. No, my most wrong'd sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
 Up to a whore; who now are levying

The kings o' the earth for war. He hath assembled 68

Bocchus, the King of Libya; Archelaus,
 Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, King
 Of Paphlagonia; the Tiraclan king, Adallas;
 King Maleims of Arabia; King of Pont; 72
 Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, King
 Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas,
 The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia,
 With a more larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ay me, most wretched, 76
 That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
 That do afflict each other!

Cæs. Welcome hither:
 Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
 Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led 80
 And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart;
 Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
 O'er your content these strong necessities,
 But let determin'd things to destiny 84

Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome;
 Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
 Beyond the mark of thought, and the high gods,
 To do you justice, make their 1000 asters 88
 Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort,
 And ever welcome to us.

Ag. Welcome, Welc me, lady.

McC. Welcome, dear madam.
 Each heart in Rome does love and pity you; 92
 Only the adulterous Antony, most large
 In his abominations, turns you off.
 And gives his potent regiment to a truil
 That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir? 96

Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome; pray you,
 Be ever known to patience; my dearest sister!

[Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near to the Promontory of ACTIUM.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forsok me being in these wars,

And sayst it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it? 4

Cleo. If not denounc'd against us, why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:

If we should serve with horse and mares together,
 The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
 A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say? 9

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's
 time,

What should not then be spar'd. He is already

Traduc'd for levity, and 'tis said in Rome 13
That Plotinus a eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against us! A charge we bear 't the war, 16

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius, 20
That from Tarentum and Brundisium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on't,
sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd 24
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men,
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else? 28

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to't.
Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage his battle at Pharsalia, Where Caesar fought with Pompey; but these offers, 32

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd;
Your mariners are mulcters, reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet 36
Are those that oft'n have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea. 40

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw a-
way

The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted 44
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea. 48

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And with the rest, full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail, 52
We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is de-seried;

Caesar has taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible; 56

Strange that his power should be. Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship:
Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier! 60

Sold. O noble emperor! do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians

And the Phœnicians go a-ducking; we 64
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well: away!

[Exit ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am 't the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows 68

Not in the power on't: so our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justellus, 72
Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's

Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions as 76
Requid'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour, and throes forth 80
Each minute some. [Exit.

Scene VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter CAESAR, TAURUS, Officers, and Others.

Caes. Taurus!

Taur. My lord?

Caes. Strike not by land; keep whole: provoke not battle,

Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed 4
The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies Upon this jump. [Exit.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side o' t' hill,

In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place 8

We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Enter CANTIDIUS, marching with his land army one way over the stage; and TAURUS, the lieutenant of CESAR, the other way. After their going in is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBABBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, 12
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?
Scar. The greater gentler of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away 17
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. You ribaudred nag of Egypt, 20

Whom leprosy o'ertake! 'T' the midst o' the fight,
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The breeze upon her, like a cow in June, 24
Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, 23
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard,
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame;
For perience, manhood, honour, ne'er before 32
Laid violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANTIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well: 36
O! he has given example for our flight
Most grossly by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts?
Why, then, good night, indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled. 40

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow 44
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason

Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't;

It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither:
I am so lated in the world that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship 4
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Caesar.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards

To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone; 8

I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it. O!
I followed that I blush to look upon: 12
My very hairs do mutiny, for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and dotting. Friends, be gone; you shall

Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the sea-side straightway; 16
I will possess you of that ship and treasure. 21
Leave me, I pray, a little; pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you, I'll see you by and by. 24 [Sits down.

Enter EROS following CLEOPATRA, led by
CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort
him.

Irass. Do, most dear queen.

Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno! 23

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam! 32

Irass. Madam; O good empress!

Eros. Sir, sir!

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes. He, at Philippi kept
His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck 35
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended; he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah! stand by. 40

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Irass. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualified with very shame. 44

Cleo. Well then, sustain me: O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches:
 Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but
 Your comfort makes the resene. 43
Ant. I have offended reputation,
 A most un noble swerving.
Eros. Sir, the queen.
Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
 How I convey my shame out of thine eyes 52
 By looking back what I have left behind
 'Stroy'd in dishonour.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
 Forgive my fearful sall: I little thought
 You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well 56
 My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
 And thou shouldst tow me after; o'er my spirit
 Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beek might from the blidding of the gods 60
 Command me.
Cleo. O! my pardon.
Ant. Now I must
 To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
 And palter in the shifts of lowness, who
 With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd, 64
 Making and marring fortunes. You did know
 How much you were my conqueror, and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon! 68
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
 All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
 Even this repays me. We sent our schoolmaster;
 Is he come back? Love, I am full of lead. 72
 Some wine, within there, and our viands! Fortune knows,
 We scorn her most when most she offers blows.
 [Exeunt.]

Scene X.—Egypt. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and Others.

Cæs. Let him appear that's come from Antony.
 Know you him?
Dol. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
 An arguement that he is pluck'd, when hither
 He sends so poor a plinon of his wing. 4
 Which had superfluous kings for messengers
 Not many moous gone by.

Enter EUPHONIUS.

Cæs. Approach, and speak.
Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
 I was of late as petty to his ends 8
 As is the unorn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
 To his graud sea.
Cæs. Be't so. Declare thine office.
Euph. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; while not content, 12

 He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
 To let him breathe between the heavens and
 earth,

A private man in Athens; this for him.
 Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness, 16
 Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
 The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
 Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cæs. For Antony,
 I have no ears to his request. The queen 22
 Of audience nor desire shall fall, so she
 From Egypt drive her all-dsgraced friend,
 Or take his life there; this if she perform,
 She shall not sue unheard. So to them both. 24
Euph. Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs. Bring him through the bands.
 [Exit EUPHONIUS.
 [To THYREUS.] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time; dispatch.

From Antony win Cleopatra; promise,
 And in our name, what she requires; add more,
 From thine invention, offers. Women are not In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure
 The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
 Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we 32
 Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.
Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
 And what thou think'st his very action speaks
 In every power that moves.
Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.]

Scene XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Think, and die.
Cleo. Is Antony or we, in fault for this?
Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled 4
 From that great face of war, whose several ranges
 Frighted each other, why should he follow?
 The itch of his affection should not then 4
 Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point, 5
 When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
 The mered question. 'Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
 And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prithce, peace. 12

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHONIUS.

Ant. Is that his answer?
Euph. Ay, my lord.
Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy,
 so sho

Will yield us up?

Euph. He says so.

Ant. Let her know't. 16

To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principallities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose 20

Of youth upon him, from which the world should note

Something particular; his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child as soon 24

As if the command of Cæsar: I dare him therefore

To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me. 28

[EZEUNT ANTONY and EUPHONIUS.]

Eno. [Aside.] Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will

Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show Against a sworder! I see men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward

Do draw the inward quality after them, 33

To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Cæsar. 37

Cleo. What! no more ceremony? See! my women;

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, sir. 40

[Exit Attendant.]

Eno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square.

The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly; yet he that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord, 44

Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place in the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends; say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has, 49

Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend; for us, you knew
Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's.

Thyr. So. 52

Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on; right royal.

Thyr. He knows that you embrace not

Antony 56

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour therefore he

Does pity, as constrained blenishes,

Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows 60

What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky,

That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for 64

Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.]

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar
What you require of him? for he partly begs

To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff 68

To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony,

And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name? 72

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cæsar this: in deputation

I kiss his conqu'ring hand; tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel; 76

Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course,
Wisdom and fortune combating together,

If that the former dare but what it can, 80

No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, 84

As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. [Aside.] You will be whipp'd. 88

Ant. Approach there! Ah, you kite! Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried
'Ho!'

Like boys into a muss, kings would start forth,
And cry, 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.

Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him. 93

Euo. [Aside.] 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp

Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find
them

So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,

Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him eringe his face 100
And whine aloud for merey; take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony.—

Ant. Tug him away; being whipp'd, Bring him again; this Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him. 104

[Exeunt Attendants with THYREUS.]

You were half blasted ere I knew you; ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd 103
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever;
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,—
O misery on't!—the wise gods seal our eyes; 112
In our own filth drop our clear judgments;
make us

Adore our errors; laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O! is't come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon 116
Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment

Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out; for, I am sure, 120 Though you can guess what temperance should
be,

You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards
And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with 124
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts. O! that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outrour
The horned herd; for I have savage cause; 128
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

First Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a' pardon?

First Att. He did ask favour. 133

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry

To follow Caesar in his triumph, since 136

Thou hast been whipp'd for following him;
henceforth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Caesar,

Tell him thy entertainment; look, thou say 141
He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was; he makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do't, 144
When my good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has 143
Hipparchus, my enfranchised bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me; urgo it thou:
Hence with thy stripes; be gone! 152

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack! our terrene moon
Is now eclip'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet? 157

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah! dear, if I be so,

From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so 161
Dissolve my life. The next Casarian smite,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all, 164
By the discanding of this peileted storm,
Lie graveless, till the files and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.

Caesar sits down in Alexandria, where 168
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, threaten'ing most sea-
like.

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady? 172

If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord! 176

Ant. I will be treble-snew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight malleously; for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth, 180
And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day: 184

I had thought to have held it poor; but, since my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night I'll force

The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen;

There's sap lu't yet. The next time I do fight I'll make death love me, for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious

Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,

A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason

It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.

Act IV.

Scene I.—Before Alexandria. CESAR'S Camp.

Enter CESAR, reading a letter; AGRIPPA, MECENAS, and Others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat, [Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know I have many other ways to die; meantime laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think, When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now 8 Make boot of his distraction: never anger Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads Know that to-morrow the last of many battles We mean to fight. Within our files there are, 12 Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done; And feast the army; we have store to do't. And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,

He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier, 4

By sea and land I'll fight; or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry, 'Take all'

Ant. Well said; come on. 8

Call forth my household servants; let's to-night Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand, Thou hast been rightly honest; so hast thou; Thou; and thou, and thou: you have serv'd me well, 12

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. [Aside to CLEOPATRA.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.

I wish I could be made so many men, 16

And all of you clapp'd up together In An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done.

Servants. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night, 20

Scant not my cups, and make as much of me As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to ENOBARBUS.] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to CLEOPATRA.] To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night; 24

May be it is the period of your duty:

Haply, you shall not see me more; or if,

A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow

You'll serve another master. I look on you 28

As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master

Married to your good service, stay till death.

Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, 32

And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,

To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;

And I, an ass, am on my ey'd: for shame,

Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho! 36

Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus!

Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense,

For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you 40

To burn this night with torches. Kneel, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you
Where rather I'll expect victorious life Than death and honour. Let's to supper,
come,
And drown consideration. 44
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

First Sold. Brother, good night; to-morrow is the day.

Sec. Sold. It will determine one way; fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

First Sold. Nothing. What news? 4

Sec. Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

First Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Sec. Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

Third Sold. And you. Good night, good night.
[The first two place themselves at their posts.]

Fourth Sold. Here we:

[They take their posts.]

And if to-morrow 9

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope

Our landmen will stand up.

Third Sold.

'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music of hautboys under the stage.]

Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise?

First Sold.

List, list! 12

Sec. Sold. Hark!

Music! the air.

Third Sold.

Under the earth!

Fourth Sold. It signs well, does it not?

Third Sold.

No.

First Sold.

Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

Sec. Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd, 16

Now leaves him.

First Sold. Walk; let's see if other watch-
men

Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another post.]

Sec. Sold.

How now, masters!

Soldiers.

How now!—

How now!—do you hear this?

First Sold.

Ay; is't not strange?

Third Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear? 20

First Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how't will give off.

Soldiers. [Speaking together.] Content.—'Tis strange. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN, and Others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo.

Sleep a little

Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on:

If Fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. Come.

Cleo.

Nay, I'll help too

What's this for?

Ant.

Ah! let be, let be; thou art

The armourer of my heart: false, false; this
this.

Cleo. Sooth, la! I'll help: thus it must be.

Ant.

Well, well; 8

We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow?

Go put on thy defences.

Eros.

Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant.

Rarely, rarely: 12

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.

Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou: dispatch. O love!

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st 16

The royal occupation, thou shouldst see

A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome;

Thou look'st like him that knows a war-like
charge:

To business that we love we rise betime, 20

And go to't with delight.

Sold.

A thousand, sir,

Early though't be, have on their riveted trim,

And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets flourish.]

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow,
general. 24

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant.

'Tis well blown, lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well
said. 28

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me;

This is a soldier's kiss. [Kisses her.] Rebukeable!

And worthy shameful check it were, to stand

On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee

Now, like a man of steel. You that will fight, 33
Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.

[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, Captains,
and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might 36

Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—but now.—Well, on. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Alexandria. ANTONY'S Camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier 4

That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?

Sold. Who!

One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's camp 8

Say, 'I am none of thine.'

Ant. What sayst thou?

Sold. Sir,

He is with Cæsar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him— 13

I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings;

Say that I wish he never find more cause

To change a master. O! my fortunes have 16

Corrupted honest men. Dispatch, Enobarbus!
[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Before Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, with AGRIPPA, BARBUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:

Our will is Antony be took alive;

Make it so known.

Agr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.

Cæs. The time of universal peace is near: 5

Prove this a prosperous day, the three-hook'd
world

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony
Is come into the field.

Cæs. Go charge Agrippa 8

Plant those that have revolted in the van,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury

Upon himself. [Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.

Eno. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on

Affairs of Antony; there did persuade 13

Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar,

And leave his master Antony: for this pains

Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest

That fell away have entertainment, but 17

No honourable trust. I have done ill,

Of which I do accuse myself so sorely

That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony 20

Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with

His bounty overplus: the messenger

Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now

Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you. 24

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.

I tell you true: best you saff'd the bringer

Out of the host; I must attend mine office

Or would have done't myself. Your emperor 28

Continues still a Joye. [Exit.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,

And feel I am so most. O Antony!

Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid

My better service, when my turpitude 33

Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my

heart:

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean

Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't,

I feel. 36

I fight against thee! No: I will go seek

Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits

My latter part of life. [Exit.

Scene VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

*Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA
and Others.*

Agr. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far.

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression

Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed! 4

Had we done so at first, we had droven them

home

With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st again.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,

But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire. 8

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes: I have

yet

Room for six scotches more.

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves

For a fair victory.

Sear. Let us score their backs, — 12
And snatch 'em up, as we take horses belted;
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
For thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thou on.

Sear. I'll halt after. — Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching, SCARUS, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; ran one before.

And let the queen know of our gestications
tomorrow,

Before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all; — 4
For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clap your wives, your friends, — 8
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful
tears

Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss

The honour'd gashes whole. [To SCARUS.] Give me thy hand:

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, — 12 Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day of the world!

Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and
all,

Through the roof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords! — 16
O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl, though grey

Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we — 20

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand;

Kiss it, my warrior: he hath fought to-day
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like hely Phœbus' ear. Give me thy hand: — 29

Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that own
them:

Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together
And drink carouses to the next day's fate
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeter
With brazen din blast you the city's ear
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sound
together,

Applauding our approach. — Exeunt.

Scene IX.—CESAR'S Camp.

Soldiers on their march.

First Sold. If we be not rebellious with your,

We must return to the court to guard the honour

is shiny, and they say we shall beattle
By the second hour of the morn,

Sec. Sold. This last day was I'll reward ourselves.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. O Sear the witness, night,—
Third Sold. What man is that?

Sec. Sold. Stand close and list his words.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed me
When men revolted from upon record

Bear a faithful memory of Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!

First Sold. Enobarbus!
Third Sold. Peace!
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy
The poisonous damp of night dispounce upon
me,

Thy wife, a very rebel to my will,
May make me longer on me; throw my
Against the stout and hardness of my heart

Which, being dried with grief, will breed powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,

Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register

A master-leaver and a fugitive.
O Antony! O Antony!

Sec. Sold. Let's speak to him,
First Sold. He's here, for the him speaks

May concern Caesar.

Third Sold. Let's speak to him, for the him
First Sold. He's here, for the him prayer

Was never yet

Sec. Sold. Let's speak to him, for the him
Third Sold. He's here, for the him
Sec. Sold. Let's speak to him, for the him

Here, for the him

And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence,
Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death.
To the monument! [Exeunt.]

Scene XII.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish;

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,

A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,

A forked mountain, or blue promontory,

With trees upon't, that nod unto the world

And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;

They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dissolves, and makes it indistinct,

As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony;

Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.

I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine,

Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto't

A million more, now lost; she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph.

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us

Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O! thy vile lady;

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony;

My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled

With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!

She hath betray'd me and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once.

And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst
do

Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake

Was, 'Antony! most noble Antony!'

Then in the midst a tearing groan did break

The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She render'd life,

Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is
done,

And we must sleep. [To MARDIAN.] That thou
depart'st hence safe;

Does pay thy labour richly; go. [Exit MARDIAN.
Off, pluck off:]

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O! cleave, my sides;

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,

Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.

No more a soldier; bruised pieces, go;

You have been nobly borne. From me awhile.

[Exit EROS.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and

Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is torture; since the torch is out,

Lie down, and stray no further. Now all labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles

Itself with strength; seal then, and all is done.

Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me:

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts
gaze;

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,

And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,

I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods

Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword

Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back

With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack

The courage of a woman; less noble mind

Than she, which by her death our Caesar tells

'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art sworn,

Eros,

That, when the exigent should come,—which now

Is come indeed,—when I should see behind me

The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,

Thou then wouldst kill me: do't; the time is
come.

Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.

Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!

Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts,

'Though enemy, lost aim and could not?

Ant. Eros,

Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see

Thy master thus with pluck'd arms, bending
down

His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd

To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat

Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, brand'd

His baseness that ensu'd?

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn

Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me. 80

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once, or thy precedent services are all but accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come. 84

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance.

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him.]

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once 88

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,

My captain, and my emperor, let me say,

Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man; and farewell. 92

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike

now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then; thus do I escape the sorrow [Kills himself.]

Of Antony's death.

Ant. Thrice-nobler than myself!

Thou teachest me, O valliant Eros, what 96

I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and

Eros

Have by their brave instruction got upon me

A nobleness in record; but I will be

A bridegroom in my death, and run into't 100

As to a lover's bed. Come, then; and, Eros,

Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus

[Falls on his sword.]

I learn'd of thee. How! not dead? not dead?

The guard, ho! O! dispatch me.

Enter DRACETAS and Guard.

First Guard. What's the noise? 104

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O!

make an end

Of what I have begun.

Sec. Guard. The star is fallen.

First Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me strike me dead.

First Guard. Not I. 108

Sec. Guard. Nor I.

Third Guard. Not any one. [Exeunt Guard.]

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.

This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings, shall enter me with him. 111

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he?

Will thou not answer, man? [Exit DRACETAS.]

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me 116

suffling strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear 120

Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw—

Which never shall be found—you did suspect

She had dispos'd with Caesar, and that your rage

Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was

dead: 124

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent

Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,

I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard.

I prithee. 128

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come, your lord calls!

Enter four or five of the Guard of ANTONY.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra

lives;

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear 133

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with your sorrows; bid that welcome

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it 137

Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up;

I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,

And have my thanks for all 140

[Exeunt, bearing ANTONY.]

Scene XIII.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA and her maids aloft, with

CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not.

All strange and terrible events are welcome.

But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow, 14

Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

As that which makes it.

Enter, below, DIOMEDES.

How now! Is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o' the other side your monument; 8

His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun!

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in; dark'ning

stand 1

The varying star o' the world. O Antony,

N n

Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help; 12

Help, friends below! let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace!

Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony 16
Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last 20
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear,—
Dare my lord, pardon,—I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall 24
Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents,
have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour 28
Demuring upon me. But come, come, Antony,—
Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up.
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O! quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs
my lord! 32

Our strength is all gone into heaviness;
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's
power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little, 36
Wishers were ever fools. O! come, come, come;
[They heave ANTONY aloft to CLEOPATRA.]

And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast liv'd;

Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight! 40

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel, 44

Provok'd by my offence.
Ant. One word, sweet queen.

Of Caesar seek your honour with your safety. O!
Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius. 48

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;
None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to 56
My countryman; a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going;

I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?

Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty? O! see my women,
[ANTONY dies.]
My lord!

The crown o' the earth doth melt. My lord!
O! wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n; young boys and girls

Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. [Swoon.]

Char. O, quietness, lady!

Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady!

Iras. Madam!

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Iras. Royal Egyptian

Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras!

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares. It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught;

Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad; then is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death, Ere death dare come to us? How do you women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Char-mian!

My noble girls! Ah, women, women, look!
Our lamp is spent, it's out. Good girls, take heart;—

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come
away;

This case of that huge spirit now is cold;
Ah! women, women. Come; we have no friends
But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt; those above bearing off ANTONY's body.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Alexandria. Caesar's Camp.

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MECENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit]

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st 4
Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd; whilst he stood up and spoke
He was my master, and I wore my life 8
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is't thou sayst? 12

Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack; the round world
Should have shook lions into civil streets, 16
And citizens to their dens. The death of
Antony

Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar;
Not by a public minister of justice, 20
Nor by a bired knife; but that self hand,
Which writh his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Spitted the heros. This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd 24
With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is, 28
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Wag'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity; but you, gods, will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony!
I have follow'd thee to this; but we do lance 36
Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce
Have shown to thee a declining day,

Or look on thine, and not stall together
In the whole world. Yet let me lament, 40
With tears as soon as the blood of hearts,

That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war, 44
The arm of mine own body, and the heart

Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equities to this. Hear me, good friends,—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meetest season:
The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says. Whence are
you?

Egypt. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress, 52

Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forc'd to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart; 56
She soon shall know of us, I y some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Cæsar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Egypt. So the gods preserve thee! 60
[Exit.]

Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and say,
We purpose her no shame; give her what coun-forts

The quality of her passion shall require,
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke 64
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.]

Cæs. Gallus, go you along. [Exit GALLUS.
Where's Dolabella,

To second Proculeius?

Agr. Dolabella!
Mec.

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember how
How he's employ'd; he shall in time be ready
Go with me to my tent; where you shall see 73
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see 76
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. The Monument.

Enter aloft, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paitry to be Cæsar;
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,
A minister of her will; and it is great 4

To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change,
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's. 8

Enter, below, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt;

And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?
Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd, That have no use for trusting. If your master Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him, That majesty, to keep decorum, must No less beg than a kingdom: If he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son, He gives me so much of mine own as I Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer; You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing. Make your full reference freely to my lord, Who is so full of grace, that it flows over On all that need; let me report to him Your sweet dependance, and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness, Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him The greatness he has got. I hourly learn A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly Look him i' the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady: Have comfort, for I know your plight is pittied Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

[PROCLEIUS and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder, and come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates, discovering the lower room of the monument.]

[To PROCLEIUS and the Guard.] Guard her till Caesar come. [Exit.]

Iras. Royal queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen.
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

Pro. [Drawing a dagger.] Hold, worthy lady, hold! [Seizes and disarms her.]

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too, That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra, Do not abuse my master's bounty by The undoing of yourself; let the world see His nobleness well acted, which your death Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death? Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O! temperance, lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,

if idle talk will once be necessary,

I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin.

Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait prison'd at your master's court, Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye Of dull Octavia. Shall they holst me up And show me to the shouting varletry Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make My country's high pyramids my gibbet, And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall find cause in Caesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius, What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows, And he hath sent for thee; as for the queen, I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella, It shall content me best; be gentle to her. [To CLEOPATRA.] To Caesar I will speak what you shall please, If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die. [Exit PROCLEIUS and Soldiers.]

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;

Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd there was an Emperor Antony;

O! such another sleep, that I might see But such another man.

Dol. If it might please ye,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens, and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean; his beard arm Crested the world; his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in't, an autumn 'twas That grew the more by reaping; his delights Were dolphin-like, they show'd his back above The element they liv'd in; in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets, realms and islands

Dol. Gentle madam, no.
Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were, one such, 96
It's past the size of dreaming; nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy; yet to imagine
An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,
Condemning shadows quite.Dol. Hear me, good madam. 100

Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well 120
To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often sham'd our sex.Cæs. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce: 124
If you apply yourself to our intents,— Which towards you are most gentle,—you shall findA benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking 128
Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave. 132*Cleo.* And may through all the world: 'tis yours; and we,Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.Cleo. [Giving a Scroll.] This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, 137
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;

Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam. 140*Cleo.* This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.Sel. Madam, 144I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril, Speak that which is not.Cleo. What have I kept back?Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve Your wisdom in the deed.Cleo. See! Cæsar! O, behold, 149
How pomp is follow'd; mine will now be yours;
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does 152

Even make me wild. O slave! of no more trust
Than love that's hid. What! goest thou back?
thou shaltGo back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes,Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog! 156

O rarely base!

Cæs. Good queen, let us entreat you.Cleo. O Cæsar! what a wounding shame is this,That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness 160

To one so meek, that mine own servant should

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by

Addition of his envy. Say, good Cæsar,

That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, 164

Inmoment toys, things of such dignity

As we greet modern friends withal; and say,

Some nobler token I have kept apart

For Livia and Octavia, to induce 168

Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites meBeneath the fall I have. [To SELEUCUS.] Prithce, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits 172

Through the ashes of my chance. Wert thou a
man,

Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs. Forbear, Seleucus.[Exit SELEUCUS.]Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are milsthought

For things that others do; and, when we fall, 176

We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.

Cæs.

Cleopatra.

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowlodg'd,

Put we'l the roll of conquest: still be't yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe, 181
Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear
queen; 184

For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu. 188

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cæs.

Not so. Adieu.

[Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.]

Cleo. He worls me, girls, he worls me, that I should not

Be noble to myself: but, hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers CHARMIAN.]

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done, 192

And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hee thee again:

I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.

Char.

Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char.

Behold, sir. [Exit.]

Cleo.

Dolabella! 196

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,

I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria

Intends his journey; and within three days 200

You with your children will he send before.

Make your best use of this; I have perform'd

Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo.

Dolabella,

I shall remain your debtor.

Dol.

I your servant. 204

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cæsar.

Cleo.

Farewell, and thanks. [Exit DOLABELLA.]

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown

In Rome, as well as I; mechanic slaves 208

With greasy aprons, rules and hammers, shall

Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,

Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,

And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras.

The gods forbid! 212

Cleo.

Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras. Sancey lletors

Will catch at us, like strumpets, and seal'd rimers

Ballad us out o' tune; the quiek comedians

Extemporally will stago us, and present 216

Our Alexandrian revels. Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' the posture of a whore.

Iras.

O, the good gods! 220

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure my nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo.

Why, that's the way

To fool their preparation, and to conquer 224

Their most absurd intents.

Re-enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian,

Show me, my women, like a queen; go fetch

My best attires; I am again for Cydnuus,

To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah Iras, go. 228

Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed;

And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave

To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all. [Exit IRAS. A noise heard.]

Wherefore's this noise?

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard.

Here is a rural fellow 232

That will not be denied your highness' presence:
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guard.] What poor an instrument

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty. 236

My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing

Of woman in me; now from head to foot

I am marble-constant, now the fleeting moon

No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard.

This is the man. 240

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.]

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,

That kills and pains not?

Clo. Truly, I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died
on't? 248

Clo. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday;

a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm. 258

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clo. I wish you all joy of the worm. 260
[Sets down the basket.]

Cleo. Farewell.

Clo. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell. 264

Clo. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clo. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding. 270

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clo. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman; I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five. 278

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clo. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.]

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have 282

Immortal longings in me; now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear
Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men 288
To excuse their after wrath: husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to base life. So; have you done? 292

Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell, kind Charmian; Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.]

Have I the apple in my lips? Dost fall?

If thou and nature can so gently part, 296

The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,

Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?

If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world

It is not worth leave-taking. 300

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say,

The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base:

If she first meet the cur'd Antony,

He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss

Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch, 305

[To the asp, which she applies to her breast.]

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate

Of life at once untie; poor venomous fool,

Be angry, and dispatch. O! couldst thou

speak, 308

That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass

Unpoll'd.

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break I O, break I 312

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too.

[Applying another asp to her arm.]

What should I stay— [Dies.]

Char. In this vile world? So, fare thee

well. 316

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be behind
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry; 320
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

First Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies an asp.]

O! come apace, dispatch; I partly feel thee. 324

First Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well;

Cæsar's begull'd.

Sec. Guard. There's Dolabella sent from

Cæsar; call him.

First Guard. What work is here! Charmian,

Is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a

princess 328

Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah! soldier. [Dies.]

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

Sec. Guard. All dead.

Dol.

Cæsar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this; thyself art coming

To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou 332

So sought'st to hinder.

[Within, 'A way there!—a way for Cæsar!']

Re-enter CÆSAR and all his Train.

Dol. O! sir, you are too sure an angurer;

That you did fear is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last, 336

She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,

Took her own way. The manner of their deaths:

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

First Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs: 342

This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd thou.

First Guard. O Cæsar!

This Charmian lived but now; she stood, and

speak:

I found her trimming up the diadem

On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood, 344
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison 'twould appear
By external swelling; but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony 348
In her strong toll of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vept of blood, and something blown;
The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an asple's trail; and these fig-leaves 352
Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable
That so she died; for her physician tells me
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite 356
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony;
No grave upon the earth shall ellp in it 360
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral, 365
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.]

Scene.—Sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

Act I.

Scene I.—Britain. The Garden of CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns; our bloods No more obey the heavens than our courtiers Still seem as does the king.

Sec. Gent. But what's the matter?

First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom He purpos'd to his wife's sole son,—a widow That late he married,—hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded;

Her husband banish'd, she imprison'd: all is outward sorrow, though I think the king Be touch'd at very heart.

Sec. Gent. None but the king?

First Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,

That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier, Although they wear their faces to the heat 13 Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

Sec. Gent. And why so?

First Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing 16

Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,— I mean that married her, ahck! good man! And therefore banish'd—is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth 20 For one his like, there would be something falling

In him that should compare. I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but lie.

Sec. Gent. You speak him far. 24

First Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself.

Crush him together rather than unfold His measure duly.

Sec. Gent. What's his name and birth?

First Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: his father 28

Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenanthus whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success, 52
So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus;
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time Died with their swords in hand; for which their
father— 36

Then old and fond of issue—took such sorrow
That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe 40
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him and makes him of his bedchamber,
Puts to him all the learnings that his true
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd, 45
And in's spring became a harvest; liv'd in court,—

Which rare it is to do,—most prais'd, most lov'd;
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that feated them, and to the graver 49
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteen'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read 53
What kind of man he is.

Sec. Gent. I honour him,
Even out of your report. But pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent. His only child. 56
He had two sons,—if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,—the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge 60
Which way they went.

Sec. Gent. How long 's this ago?

First Gent. Some twenty years.

Sec. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,
So slackly guarded, and the search so slow, 64
That could not trace them!

First Gent. Howsœ'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

Sec. Gent. I do well believe you.

First Gent. We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman, 68
The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.]

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me,
daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you; you're my prisoner, but 72
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,

So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate; marry, yet 76
The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness.

I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril: so

I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying

The pangs of barr'd affections, though the king

Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit.]

Imo. O!

Dissembling courtesy. How fine this tyrant 84

Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband,

I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing,—

Always reserv'd my holy duty,—what

His rage can do on me. You must be gone; 88

And I shall here abide the hourly shot

Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,

But that there is this jewel in the world

That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! 92

O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause

To be suspected of more tenderness

Than doth become a man. I will remain

The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.

My residence in Rome at one Philario's, 97

Who to my father was a friend, to me

Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,

And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, 100

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you;

If the king come, I shall ineer I know not

How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move him

To walk this way. I never do him wrong, 104

But he does buy my injuries to be friends,

Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave

As long a term as yet we have to live,

The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little: 109

Were you but riding forth to air yourself

Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;

This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart;

But keep it till you woo another wife, 113

When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?

You gentle gods, give me but this I have,

And tear up my embracements from a next 116

With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here [Putting on the ring.]

While sense can keep it on! And, sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,

To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120

I still win of you; for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet on her arm.

Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack! the king! 124
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you 128
And bless the good remain-ers of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st instead 132

A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace. 137

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle

And did avoid a puttock. 140

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added

A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus;
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is 145

A man worth any woman, overbuys me

Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir; heaven restore me! Would I were 148

A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus

Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Cym. Thou foolish thing!

Re-enter QUEEN.

They were again together; you have done
Not after our command. Away with her, 152
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish 156
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!

[Exit CYMBELINE and Lords.

Queen. Fie! you must give way;

Enter PISANIO.

Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha! 160
No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger; they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't. 164

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick 168
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command: he would not suffer
me

To bring him to the haven; left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to, 172
When't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been Your faithful servant; I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk awhile.

Imo. [To PISANIO.] About some half-hour
hence, 176

I pray you, speak with me. You shall at least
Go see my lord aboard; for this time leave me.

[Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter CLOREN and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt: the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent. 5

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
Have I hurt him?

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] No faith; not so much as his patience. 9

First Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt; it is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt. 12

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. 17

First Lord. Stand you! You have had enough of your own, but he added to your having, gave you some ground. 2

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies

Clo. I would they had not come between us. 24

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] So would I till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me! 29

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

First Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together; she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. 37

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

First Lord. I'll attend your lordship. 41

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

Sec. Lord. Well, my lord. [Exit]

Scene III.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores of the haven,

And question'dst every sail; if he should write
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee? 4

Pis. It was his queen, his queen?

Imo. Then wai'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!
And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief.
Still waving, as the fits and starts of's mind 12
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did. 16

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, hat

To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle,
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam.
With his next vantage. 24

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say; ere I could tell him

How I would think on him at certain hours
Such thoughts and such or I could make him
swear 28

The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest and his honour, or have charg'd
him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnigh,
To encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwixt two charring words, comes in my
father,

And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam, 37
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exit]

Scene IV.—Rome. A Room in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items. 8

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he. 14

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter,—wherein he must be weigh'd rather by her value than his own,—wors him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then, his banishment. 19

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance? 26

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. 32

Enter POSTHUMUS.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine; how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own bearing. 37

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 42

French. Sir, you over-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature. 48

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but, upon my mended judgment,—if I offend not to say it is mended,—my quarrel was not altogether slight. 54

French. Faith, you to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference? 60

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out. 72

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her foreours of Italy. 76

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. 87

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle. 93

Post. You are mistaken; the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep. 100

Iach. You may wear her in title yours, but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too; so your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last. 107

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress. If, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring. 113

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. With all my heart. This worthy signior's boldness, makes no stranger of me; we are friends. 117

Iach. I should have been so much conversation I should have thought of your fair mistress, make her go back, and she yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend. 121

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something; but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are indeed deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and cannot not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that? 132

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserves more,—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted. 137

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke! 140

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand pounds to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear. 154

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear. 158

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between's: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking; I dare you to this match. Here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay. 164

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours; provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. 173

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: If you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand that you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: If she remain un-seduced,—you not making it appear otherwise,—for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword. 183

Iach. Your hand; a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded. 188

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers:

Make haste; who has the note of them?

First Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.]

Now, Master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay; here they are, madam: [Presenting a small box.]

But I beseech your Grace, without offence,—My conscience bids me ask,—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, 8

Which are the movers of a languishing death, But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distill? preserve? yea, so 13 That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,—

Unless thou think'st me devilish,—is't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in 17 Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging,—but none human,— 20

To try the vigour of them and apply Allayments to their act, and by them gather Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart; 24

Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him

Will I first work: he's for his master, 28 And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio! Doctor, your service for this time is ended; Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam; But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To PISANIO.] Hark thee, a word. Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has 33

Strange lingering poisons; I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense awhile; 37 Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs.

Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, 4 More than the locking-up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer. So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, 44 Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

Queen. Weeps she still, sayst thou? Dost thou think in time 48

She will not quench, and let instructions enter

Where folly now possesses? Do thou work: 48
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my
son,

I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then
As great as is thy master; greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name 52
Is at last gasp; return he cannot, nor Continue where he is; to shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes comes to decay 56
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
To be depend on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,
So much as hut to prop him?

[The QUEEN drops the box; PISANIO takes it up.

Thou tak'st up 60

Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy
labour:

It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death; I do not know
What is more cordial: nay, I prithee, take it; 64
It is an earnest of a further good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on, but
think 68

Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king

To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, 72
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women;
Think on my words. [Exit PISANIO,

A sly and constant knave,

Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master, 76
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him
that

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of leigers for her sweet, and which she after, 80
Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

So, so;—well done, well done.

The violets, cowslips, and the primroses
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio: 84
Think on my words.

[Exit QUEEN and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do:

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself; there's all I'll do for you.

[Exit.

Scene VI.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;

A foolish sutor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd: O! that husband,

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n, 5
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable

Is the desire that's glorious; bless'd be those,
How mean so'er, that have their honest wills, 3
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam? 12
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a letter.

Thanks, good sir:

Imo. You are kindly welcome.

Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door most rich!

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, 16
She is above the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; 20
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud;
But even the very middle of my heart is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully, 23
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them
eyes 27

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twin'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not 36
Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be 't the eye; for apes and monkeys

'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way
and 40

Contemn with mows the other; nor 't the judgment.
For idiots in this case of favour would
He wisely definite; nor 't the appetite;
Sluttish to such neat excellence oppos'd 44
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The eloyed will,—
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub 48
Both fill'd and running,—ravening first the lamb,
Longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? are you well?

Jach. Thanks, madam, well.
[To PISANIO.] Beseech you, sir, 52
Desire my man's abode where I did leave him;
He's strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir.
To give him welcome. [Exit.]

Imo. Continue well my lord his health, beseech you? 56

Jach. Well, madam.
Imo. Is he disposed to mirth? I hope he is.
Jach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger
there

So merry and so gamesome: he is called 60
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Jach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one. 64
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
loves

A Callian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton—

Your lord, I mean—laughs from 's free lungs, cries, 'O! 68
Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for 72
Assured bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?
Jach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter:

It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but, heavens know, 76

Some men are much to blame.
Imo. Not he, I hope.

Jach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you,—which I account his beyond all talents,— Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound 81
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Jach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
You look on me: what wraack discern you in
me 84

Deserves your pity?
Jach. Lamentable! What!

To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff!

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers 88
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Jach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it, 92
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me; pray
you,—

Since doubting things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties 96
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,—discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Jach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fling it only here; should I—damn'd thou—
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs 105
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood,—falsehood, as
With labour;—then by-peeping in an eye, 108
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear, 112
Has forgot Britain.

Jach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this Intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more. 117
Jach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair,—and fasten'd to an empery 120
Would make the great'st king double,—to be partner'd

With tom-boys hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures

That play with all infirmitie for gold 124
Which rottenness can lend nature! such bold'st stuff

As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoll from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd! 128
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart, that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse,—if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Jach. Should he make me 132
Live like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
While he is vaulting variable ramps,

In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it,
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure, 136
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
As still close as sure.

Imo. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have 141

So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,

Thou wouldest have told this tale for virtue, not For such an end thou seek'st; as base as
strange. 144

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far From thy report as thou from honour, and sollicit'st here a lady that disdains

Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio! 148

The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault; if he shall think it fit,

A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound 152

His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who

He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio! 156

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee

Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever 160

Country call'd his; and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.

I have spoken this, to know if your affianc'd
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord

That which he is, new o'er; and he is one 165

The truest manner'd; such a holy witch
That he enchants societies into him;

Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends. 168

Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended
god;

He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,

Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd 172

To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment

In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err. The love I bear 176

Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made
you,

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power of the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot 180

To entreat your Grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns

Your lord, myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't? 184
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us and your
lord,

The best feather of our wing, have mingled some

To buy a present for the emperor,
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done 188

In France; 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;

And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage. May it please
you 192

To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety; since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk, 196

Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;

I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O! no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech, or I shall short my word 200

By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise

To see your Grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow!

Iach. O! I must, madam: 204

Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:

I have outstod my time, which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write. 208

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome,
[Exeunt.]

Act II.

Scene I.—Britain. Before Cymbeline's
Palace.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck!
when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't; and then a whoreson Jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bow! 8

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to eurtall his oaths, ha? 13

Sec. Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank! 17
Sec. Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth. A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou? 28

Sec. Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

Sec. Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say. 36

First Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on't!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. 41

First Lord. There's an Italian come; and 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

First Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't? 49

First Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool, granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

Sec. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exit CLOEN and First Lord.]

But such a crafty devil as is his mother should yield the world this ass: a woman that bears all down with her brain; and this her son cannot take two from twenty—or his heart And leave eighteen. Alas! poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest 64 Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer More hateful than the first expulsion is Of thy dear husband than that horrid act 68 Of thy divorce he'd make. The heavens hold him

The walls of thy dear house, keep unshak'd
 That temple, thy dear name, that thou mayst

Enjoy this great hand!

[Exit]

Scene II.—A Bedchamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her bed; a Lady attending

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours; ten; mine eyes are weak:

Fold down the leaf where I have left; to bed:

Take not away the taper, leave it burning,

And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,

I prithee call me. Sleep has seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady]

To your protection I commend me, gods!

From faeries and the tempters of the night

Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. IACHIMO comes from the trunk.]

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus

Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd

The chastity he wounded. Cytherea

How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily,

And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss! Rubies imparagon'd,

How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus; the flame of the taper

Bows toward her, and would under peep her lips.

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied

I'nder these windows, white and azure lac'd

With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design

To note the chamber: I will write all down;

such and such pictures; there the window; such

Th' adornment of her bed; the arras, figures,

Why, such and such; and the contents of the story.

Ah! but some natural notes about her body.

Above ten thousand meaner moveables

Would testify, to enrich mine inventory.

O sleep! thou ape of death, lie dull upon her;

And be her senses but as a monument

Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off;—

[Taking off her bracelet]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!

'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,

As strongly as the conscience does within,

To the madding of her lord. On her left breast

A noble cinque-spotted, like the ermin drops

I' the bottom of a cowslip; here's a voucher

Stronger than ever law could make; this secret

Will force him think I have pluck'd the lock and

ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what

end;

Why should I write this down, that's riveted

...d to my memory? She hath been reading late 44
the tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down Where Philomel gave up. I have enough;
the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
- swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawn'd 45
May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear,
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.

One, two, three; time, time!
[Goes into the trunk. The scene closes.

Scene III.—An Ante-chamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartments.

Enter CLOTES and Lords

First Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd to ice.
Clo. It would make any man cold to lose. 4
First Lord. But not every man patient after a noble temper of your lordship. You are not hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage.
I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have said enough. It's almost morning, is't not?
First Lord. Day, my lord. 11

Clo. I would this music would come. I am wised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come our time. If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-concerted thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it: and then let her consider. 21

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise,
his steeds to water at those springs
On chalced' flower that lies;
And winking Mary birds begin
To open their golden eyes:
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise!

So get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider you must: the better; if it do not, it is done in her ears, which horse-hairs and eaves-drops, her the voice of unpar'dl' munnch to boot, is never amend. [Exeunt Musicians.

sec. Lord. Here comes the king. 36
Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early, he cannot choose but be angry with me I have done fatherly.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother. 4

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
daughter?
Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assail'd her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice. 45

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new.
She hath not yet forgot him; some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out, 48
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king.
Who lets go by no vintages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly softening, and be friended 53
With aptness of the season; make denials Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which

You tender to her; that you in all obey her 56
Save when command to your dismissal tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius. 60

Cym. A worthy fellow, 60
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness forespent on us,
We must extend our notice. Our dear son, 65
When you have given good morning to your
mistress,

Attend the queen and us; we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen. [Exeunt all but CLOTES

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if no,
Let her lie still, and dream. By your leave, ho! 71

[Knocks.

I know her women are about her. What if I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold 7
Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and murks

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand o' the stenter; and 'tis gold Which makes the true man kill'd and saves this thief. 7

Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man.
What

Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me: for
I yet not understand the case myself. 8
By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks? 8

Clo. A gentleman.
Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.
Lady. [Aside.] That's more
 Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours 84
 Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?
Clo. Your lady's person: Is she ready?
Lady. To keep her chamber. Ay,
Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report. 88
Lady. How! my good name? or to report of
 you
 What I shall think is good?—The princess!

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet hand. [Exit Lady.]
Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains 92
 For purchasing but trouble; the thanks I give
 Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
 And scarce can spare them.
Clo. Still, I swear I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with
 me: 96

If you swear still, your recompense is still
 That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
 I shall unfold equal discourtesy 101
 To your best kindness. One of your great knowing

Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin: 104

I will not.

Imo. Fools cure not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad; 108

That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,

You put me to forget a lady's manners,

By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,

That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce

By the very truth of it, I care not for you; 113

And am so near the lack of charity,—

To accuse myself,—I hate you; which I had rather

You felt than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against 116

Obedience, which you owe your father. For

The contract you pretend with that base wretch,

One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,

With scraps o' the court, it is no contract,
 none; 120

And though it be allow'd in meaner parties—

Yet 'tis no more than he more mean?—to kilt their souls—

On whom there is no more dependency

But brats and beggary—in self-figur'd knot; 124
 Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
 The consequence o' the crown, and must not sell
 The precious note of it with a base slave,
 A bidding for a livery, a squire's cloth, 128
 A painter, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!
 Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
 But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
 To be his groom; thou wert dignified enough,
 Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made 133
 Comparative for your virtues, to be sty'd
 The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
 For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come 137
 To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment
 That ever bath but ellip'd his body, is dearer
 In my respect than all the hairs above thee, 140
 Were they all made such men. How now, Pisanio!

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. 'His garment!' Now, the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently.—

Clo. 'His garment!'

Imo. I am sprighted with a fool, 144
 Frighted, and anger'd worse. Go, bid my woman
 Search for a jewel that too casually Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's, shrew
 me

If I would lose it for a revenue 148

Of any king's in Europe. I do think

I saw't this morning; confident I am

Last night 'twas on mine arm, I kiss'd it;

I hope it be not gone to tell my lord 152

That I kiss ought but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so; go, and search.

[Exit PISANIO.]

Clo. You have abus'd me:

'His meanest garment!'

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:

If you will make't an action, call witness to't. 156

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.]

Clo. I'll be reveng'd. 160

'His meanest garment!' Well. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—Rome. A Room in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure
 To win the king as I am bold her honour
 Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of time,
 Quake in the present winter's state and wish
 That warmer days would come; in these scar'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love, they falling,
 I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company
 O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
 Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius
 Will do's commission throughly, and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
 Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
 Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe—
 Statist though I am none, nor like to be—
 That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
 The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
 In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
 Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
 Are men more ordered than when Julius Caesar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: their discipline,— Now wing'd,—with their courage will make known

To their approvers they are people such
 That mend upon the world.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Enter IACHIMO.

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,
 And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails, 28
 To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer
 made
 The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
 Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon. 32

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts
 And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like, 36

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the British court
 When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then.

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.
 Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it
 I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

'Till make a journey twice as far to enjoy
 A second night of such sweet shortness which
 Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by

Iach. Not a whit,
 Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
 Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
 If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
 The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
 We were to question further, but I now
 Profess myself the winner of her honour,
 Together with your ring; and not the wronger
 Of her or you, having proceeded but
 By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
 That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
 And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
 You had of her pure honour gains or loses
 Your sword or mine or masterless leaves both
 To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances
 Being so near the truth as I will make them,
 Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
 I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not, You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,— Where I confess I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching,—It was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
 Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
 And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
 The press of boats or pride; a piece of work
 So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
 In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd
 Could be rarely and exactly wrought,
 Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is true;
 And this you might have heard of here, by me,
 Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
 Must justify my knowledge

Post. So they must,
 Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
 Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece
 Chaste Dian bathing; never saw I figures
 So likely to report themselves; the cutter
 Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
 Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing
 Which you might from relation likewise reap,
 Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
 With golden cherubins is fretted, her andirons—
 I had forgot them—were two winking Cupids
 Of silver, each on one foot standing nicely
 Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour

Let it be granted you have seen all this,—and praise 92

Be given to your remembrance,—the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg, but leave to air this jewel; see!
[Showing the bracelet.

And now 'tis up again; it must be married 97
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir,—I thank her,—that: 100
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enriched it too. She gave it me, and said

She priz'd it once.
Post. May be she pluck'd it off 104
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?
Post. O! no, no, no, 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the ring.

It is a basilisk into mine eye,
Kills me to look on't. Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth where semblance;
love 109

Where there's another man; the vows of women
Of no more bondage be to where they are made
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing. 112

O! above measure false.
Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?

Post. Very true; 117
And so I hope he came by't. Back my ring.
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen. 120

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.
Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

'Tis true; may, keep the ring; 'tis true: I am sure
She would not lose it; her attendants are 124
All sworn and honourable; they induc'd to steal
it)

And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her;
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this; she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly. 128

There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient;
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on't! 132
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek

For further satisfying, under her breast,
Worthy the pressing, lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life, 136
I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confound
Another stain, as big as hell can hold, 140
Were there no more but it.

Ia h. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetick; never count the turns;

Once, and a million!
Iach. I'll be sworn,—
Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee if thou dost deny 145
Thou'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O! that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal.

I will go there and do't, if the court, before 148
Her father, I'll do something— [Exit.

Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience! You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. 152
[Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers? We are all bastards; all,
And that most venerable man which I
Did call my father was I know not where 154
When I was stamped; some colner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife
Like a nonpareil of this. O! vengeance, vengeance;
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with A pudency so rosy the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her 158

As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O! all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?
Or less—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but
Or less—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, 162
Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man but I affirm 164
It is the woman's part; be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiv'ing, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges,
hers; 168

Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
All faults that man may name, nay, that hell
knows,

Why, hers, in part, or all; but rather, all; 28
For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice but of a minute old for one

Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater skill 33

In a true hate to pray they have their will;
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.]

Act III.

Scene I.—*Britain. A Hall in CYMBELINE'S
Palace.*

Enter at one door CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords; and at another CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say what would Augustus Cæsar
with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæsar—whose remembrance yet

lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues
Be thence and hearing ever—was in this Britain,

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,— 5
Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less

Than in his feats deserving it,—for him
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, 8

Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately

is left untender'd.
Queen. And, to kill the marvel, shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars

Ere such another Julius. Britain is 12
A world by itself, and we will nothing pay for wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,

Which then they had to take from's, to resume,
We have again. Remember, sir, my Hege, 16

The kings your ancestors, together with
The natural bravery of your isle, which stands

As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscalable and boiling waters, 20

With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,

But suck them up to th' topmast. A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here, but made not here his brag
Of 'caine, and saw, and overcame;' with shame—

The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his ship—

plung—
Poor ignorant saubies!—on our terrible seas,

Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof 29

The faul'd Cassibelan, who was once at point—

O gilot fortune!—to master Cæsar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing-fires bright, 32
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid.
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time;

and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars;
other of them may have crooked noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end. 39

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan; I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,

Till the injurious Romans did extort 48
This tribute from us, we were free; Cæsar's ambition—

Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch

The sides o' the world—against all colour here
Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake off 52

Becomes a war-like people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar

Our ancestor was that Mulnuttus which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Cæsar hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise 57

shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulnuttus made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did put 60

His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar—

Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy. 65

Receive it from me, then: war and confusion
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look

For fury not to be resisted. Thus deliver'd, 68
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent

Much under him; of him I gather'd honour:
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce, 72

Beloves me keep at utterance. I am perfect
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for

Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons cold;

So Cæsar shall not find them.
Luc. Let proof speak. 77

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer; if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there's an end. 84

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure and he mine;
All the remain is 'Welcome!' [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter PISANIO, reading a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery! Wherefore write you not

What monster's her accuser? Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian—
As poison-tongued as handed—hath prevail'd

On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No;
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in some virtue. O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder her?
Upon the love and truth and vows which I Have made to thy command? I, her? her blood?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to?—Do't: the letter
That I have sent her by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity:—O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble,

Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.
I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter IMOGES.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord, Leonatus.

O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content, yet not
That we two are asunder; let that grieve him,—
Some griefs are med'cinable; that is one of them.
For it doth physic love,—of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, thy leave. Bless'd
be

You bees that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not all else:
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You chasp young Cupid's tables. Good news, gods!

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Haven; what *your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing

love.*

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O! for a horse with wings! Hearst thou, Pi-sanio

He is at Milford-Haven; read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day! Then, true Pisanio,— Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—

O! let me bate, but not like me; yet long'st,
But in a fainter kind:—O! not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond; say, and speak thick;—

Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,

To the smothering of the sense,—how far it is
To this same blessed Milford; and, by the way, Tell me how Wales was made so happy as T'inherit such a haven; but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence, and, for the gap

That we shall make in time, from our hence
going

And our return, to excuse; but first, how get
hence.

Why should excuse be born or ere begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'T'wat hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, is enough for you, and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to's execution,
man,

Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run f' the clock's behalf. But this is foolery;

Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father; and provide me presently

A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man; ner here, nor
here,

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee;
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Wales. A mountainous Country with a Cave.

Enter from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as rural Stoop, boys; this gate
 Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
 To a morning's holy office; the gates of monarchs
 Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
 And keep their imploms turbans on, without cool morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair heaven!

We house I' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
 As prouder silvers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!
Arr. Hail, heaven!
Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill;
 Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow, that it is place which lessens and sets off; And you may then revolve what takes I have told you

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war; This service is not service, so being done, but being so allow'd; to apprehend thus Draws us a profit from all things we see, And often, to our comfort, shall we find The sharded beetle in a safer hold Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life is nobler than attending for a check, Richer than doing nothing for a bribe, Prouder than rustling in unpaid for silk; Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine, Yet keeps his book incross'd; no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak; we, poor unfledg'd,
 Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor know not What air's from home. Haply this life is best, If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
 That have a sharper known, well corresponding With your stiff age; but unto us it is A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
 A prison for a debtor, that not dares To stride a limit.

Arr. What should we speak of
 When we are old as you? when we shall hear the rain and wind beat dark December, how
 In this our pinching eave shall we discourse
 The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing;

We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey,
 Like war-like as the wolf for what we eat; our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
 We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
 And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak! 44
 Did you but know the city's surles
 And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court,
 As hard to leave as keep, whose top to climb
 Is certain falling, or so slippery that

The fear's as bad as falling; the toll of the war,
 A pain that only seems to seek out danger
 I' the name of fame and honour; which dies
 I' the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
 As record of fair act; nay, many times,
 Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
 Must curtsy at the censure: O boys! this story
 The world may read in me; my body's mark'd
 With Roman swords, and my report was once
 First with the best of note; Cymbeline lov'd me,
 And when a soldier was the theme, my name
 Was not far off; then was I as a tree Whose boughs did bend with fruit, but, in one
 night,
 A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
 Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,

And left me bare to weather.
Gui. Uncertain favour! 64
Bel. My fault being nothing,—as I have told you off,—
 But that two villains, whose false oaths pre-vall'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
 I was confederate with the Romans; so
 Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years
 This rock and these demesnes have been my
 world,
 Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
 More plous debts to heaven than in all The fore-end of my time. But, up to the mountains!

This is not hunter's language. He that strikes
 The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
 To him the other two shall minister;
 And we will fear no poison which attends
 In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt GUILDENUS and ANIRAGUS.]

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
 These boys know little they are sons to the king;
 Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
 They think they are mine; and, though train'd up thus meanly
 I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit

The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
 In simple and low things to prinee it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
 The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
 The king his father call'd Guildenus,—Jove!
 When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
 The war-like feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say, 'This mine enemy fell,
 And thus I set my foot on's neck;' even then
 The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother,
 Cadwal,—

Once Arviragus,—in as like a figure, 96
 Strikes life into my speech and shows much more
 His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd.
 O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows
 Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon, 100
 At three and two years old, I stole these babes, Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rest'st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother, 104
 And every day do honour to her grave:
 Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
 They take for natural father. The game is up.

Scene IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
 Was near at hand: ne'er long'd my mother so
 To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! man!
 Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind, 4
 That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
 From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
 Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
 Beyond self-explication; put thyself 8
 Into a havlour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staler senses. What's the matter?
 Why tender'st thou that paper to me with
 A look untender? It 't be summer news, 12
 Suille to 't before; if wint'ly, thou need'st
 But keep that count'nance still. My husband's hand?
 That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-crafted him,
 And he's at some hard point. Speak, man; thy
 tongue 16
 May take off some extremity, which to read
 Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
 And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
 The most disdain'd of fortune. 20

Imo. Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal. 33

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?
 the paper
 Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose
 tongue 36
 Outvenomis all the worms of Nile, whose breath
 Rides on the posting winds and doth belle All corners of the world; kings, queens, and states,
 Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave 40
 This viperous slander enters. What cheer, madam?
 Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
 To lie in watch there and to think on him?
 To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge
 nature, 44
 To break it with a fearful dream of him,
 And cry myself awake? that's false to's bed, is
 it?

Pis. Alas! good lady.

Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness'
 Iachimo, 48
 Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
 Thou then look'dst like a villain; now methinks
 Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd
 him: 52

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion,
 And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
 I must be ripp'd; to pieces with me! O!
 Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming, 56

By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought
 Put on for villany; not born where 't grows,
 But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
 .Aeneas, 60
 Were in his time thought false, and Sinon's weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
 From most true wretchedness; so thou, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men; 64
 Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjurd
 From thy great fall. Come, fellow, be thou honest;

Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seest
 him,

A little witness my obedience; look!
 I draw the sword myself; take it, and hit
 The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.
 Fear not, 'tis empty of all things but grief;
 Thy master is not there, who was indeed 72
 The riches of it: do his bidding; strike.
 Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause,
 But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
 Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die; 76
 And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
 No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine word, whose 36

What cheer,

That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart. 80
Something's afore't; soft, soft! we'll no defence; obedient as the scabboard. What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus
All turn'd to heresy! Away, away! 84
Corruptors of my faith; you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor
fools
Believe false teachers; though those that are betrayed
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor 88
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits 92
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her 96
That now thou tr'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prithee, dispatch;
The lamb entreats the hatcher; where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, 100
When I desire it too.
Pis. O, gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.
Imo. Do't, and to bed then.
Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first.
Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd 105
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court, 108
For my being absent?—whereunto I never Purpose return.—Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?
Pis. But to win time 112
To lose so bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear, 116
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so, neither; 120
But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd; some villain,
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art, 124
Hath done you both this cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman courtesan.
Pis. No, on my life,
I'll give but notice you are dead and send him

Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded 128
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how
live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am 132
Dead to my husband?
Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing Cloten!
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Pis. If not at court, 137
Then not in Britain must you bide.
Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
night,
Are they not hut in Britain? I' the world's volume 140
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think
There's livers out of Britain.
Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador, 144
Luclius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow; now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, t'appear itself, must not yet be 148
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view; yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh at least
That though his actions were not visible, yet 152
Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.
Imo. O! for such means:
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.
Pis. Well, then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change 157
Command into obedience; fear and niceness—
The handmaids of all women, or more truly
Woman it pretty self—into a waggish courage:
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and 161
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O! the harder heart, 164
Alack! no remedy—but to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.
Imo. Nay, be brief: 168
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.
Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit—
'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all 172
That answer to them; would you in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Luclius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him 176
Wherein you are happy,—which you'll make him
know,

If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless
With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable,

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad, 180

You have me, rich; and I will never fall
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithce, away;
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even 184
All that good time will give us; this attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell, 188

Lest, being misst'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box, I had it from the queen,
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this 193
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen. I thank thee. [Exeunt.]

Scene V.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir, 4
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unking-like.

Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven. 8
Madam, all joy befall your Grace.

Queen. And you!
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;

The due of honour in no point omit.
So, farewell, noble Luclius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord. 12
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time
forth

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Luclius, good my lords, 16

Till he have crossed the Severn. Happiness!
[Exeunt LUCIUS and Lords.]

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours
us

That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better;
Your vallant Britons have their wishes in it. 20
Cym. Luclius hath wrote already to the emperor

How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our charlots and horsemen be in readiness;
The powers that he already hath in Gallia 24
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves

His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day; she looks us like 32
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in surerance.

[Exit an Attendant,

Queen. Royal sir.
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd 36
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her; she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes, 40
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd, and there's no
answer

That will be given to the loudest noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you, 48
Which dally she was bound to proffer; this
She wish'd me to make known, but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which

I fear 52
Prove false!

[Exit]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.
[Exit CLOTEN]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus! 56
He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence

Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her.

Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd
her, 60

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown

To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either; she being down, 64
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the king; he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Queen. [Aside.] All the better; may 63
This night forestall him of the coming day!

Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one 72
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but Disdaining me and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus slanders so her judgment 76
That what's else rare is chok'd, and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither. Ah! you precious pandar. Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O! good my lord.
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter 84
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas! my lord, 89
How can she be with him? When was she missh'd?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer.
No further halting; satisfy me home 92
What is become of her?

Pis. O! my all-worthy lord.
Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once.
At the next word; no more of 'worthy lord!' 96
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]
Clo. Let's see 't. I will pursue her 100
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum!

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead.
O Imogen! 104

Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' laud; I know 't. Sir-rah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy so'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man; thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment. 116

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir I will. 123

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress. 129

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Millford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon,— even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time,—the bitterness of it I now bech from my heart,—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined, —which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments? 152

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is 't since she went to Millford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet. 155

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee:
the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but deuteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it!

Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss; for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be, 164
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed!
[Exit.]

Scene VI.—Wales. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is tedious one;
I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed; I should be sick
But that my resolution helps me. Milford, 4
When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd
thee,
Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me 8
I could not miss my way; will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness 12
Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord!
Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on
thee,
My hunger's gone, but even before I was 16
At point to sink for food. But what is this?
Here is a path to't; 'tis some savage hold;
I were best not call, I dare not call, yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valliant.
Plenty and peace breeds cowards, hardness ever
Of hardness is mother. Ho! Who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take care to lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy 25
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look
on't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit to the cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and 28
Are master of the feast; Cutwal and I
Will play the cook and servant, 'tis our match;
The sweat of Industry would dry and die
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs 32
Will make what's homely savoury; weariness
Can snore upon the flint when resty sloth

Finds the down pillow hard. Now, peace be
here,

Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am throughly weary, 36
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. [Looking into the cave.] Stay; come not in;

But that it eats our victuals, I should think 40
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon! Behold divineness
No elder than a boy! 44

Re-enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took.
Good troth,

I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though I had found 48
Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat;

I would have left it on the board so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth? 52

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry.
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should 56
Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir, I have a kinsman who 60
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford:
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fall'n in this offence.

Bel. Prithee, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good
minds 64
By this rude place we live in. Well encountter'd!

'Tis almost night; you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it.
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, 68
I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty,

I bid for you, as I do buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him 72
After a long absence, such is yours; most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.
Imo. 'Mongst friends,
 If brothers. [Aside.] Would it had been so,
 that they
 Had been my father's sons; then had my prize
 Been less, and so more equal ballasting 77
 To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free 't!
Arv. Or I, whate'er it be,
 What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys.
 [Whispering.]
Imo. Great men, 81
 That had a court no bigger than this cave,
 That did attend themselves and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them,—laying by 84

That nothing-gift of differing multitudes,—
 Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
 Since Leonatus' false.

Bel. It shall be so. 88
 Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in:

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
 So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near. 92
Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

Scene VII.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:

That since the common men are now in action
 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
 And that the legions now in Gallia are 4
 Full weak to undertake our wars against
 The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite
 The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius pro-consul; and to you the tribunes, 8
 For this immediate levy, he commends
 His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!

First Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?
Sec. Sen. Ay.

First Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
First Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy 12
 Must be supplyant; the words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time
 Of their dispatch.

First Tri. We will discharge our duty. 16
 [Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Scene I.—Wales. The Forest, near the Cave of Belarius.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tall or, not be fit too? the rather,—saving reverence of the word,—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself,—for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber,—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe; out, sword, and to a sore purpose!
 Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of thy meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. [To IMOGEN.] You are not well; remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.
Arv. [To IMOGEN.] Brother, stay here;
 Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be,
 But clay and clay differs in dignity, 4
 Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with
 him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
 I'm not so citizen a wanton as 8

To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave
 me;

Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom

Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by
 me

Cannot amend me; society is no comfort 12
 To one not sociable. I am not very sick,

Since I can reason of it; pray you, trust me here,
I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it;
How much the quantity, the weight as much, 17
As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how! how!
Arr. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why 20
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
'My father, not this youth.'

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain! 24
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Towards father cowards, and base things sire
base:

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and
grace.

'I'm not their father; yet who this should be, 28
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arr. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arr. You health. So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.

Gods, what lies I have heard! 32

Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:

Experience, O! thou disprov'st report.

The temperous seas breed monsters, for the dash
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish. 36

I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.]

Gui. I could not stir him:

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40

Arr. Thus did he answer me; yet said hereafter

I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!

[To IMOGEN.] We'll leave you for this time; go in and rest.

Arr. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick. 44

For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well or ill,

I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever.

[Exit IMOGEN.]

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had

Good ancestors.

Arr. How angel-like he slugs! 48

Gui. But his neat cookery! he cut our roots

In characters,

And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick

And he her diet.

Arr. Nobly he yokes

A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh 52

Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The subtle mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divin' a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note 56
That grief and patience rooted in him, both Mingle their spurs together.

Arr. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking-elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine! 60

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—
Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot d those runagates; that villain

Hath mock'd i an faint. 64
Bel. 'Those runagates!'

Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.

I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and my brother search 68

What companies are near; pray you,
Let me alone with him.

[Exit BELARIUS and ARVIRAROUS.]

Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountainers?

I have heard of such. What slave art thou?
Gui. A thing 72

More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A 'slave' without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yeld thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou?
Have not I 76

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not

My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I should yeld to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base, 80
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes.

Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool; 85

I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name? 88

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy
name,

I cannot tremble at it; were it Toad, or Adder, Spider, smile;

ould fly

Clot. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know 92
I am sou to the queen.

Gui. I'm sorry for't, not seeming so worthy as thy birth.

Clot. Art not afraid?
Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear,
the wise;

At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clot. Die the death: 96

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustie mountaineer. [Exeunt fighting.]

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No companies abroad. 101

Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell; long is it since I saw him,
But th' hath nothing blurr'd those lines of
favour 104

Which then he wore; the smatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him, 108
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment
Is off the cease of fear. But see, thy brother. 112

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN'S head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
There was no more in't. Not Hierules Could have known his brains, for he had
none;

Yet I not doing had borne 116
My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's
head,

Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in, 121
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—
they grow,

And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose, 124

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us; then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threaten us,
Play judge and executioner all himself, 128
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul!

Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour 132

Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court that such as we 137
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in thine
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,—

As it is like him,—might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable 141
To come alone, either he so undertaking.

Or they so suffering; then, on good ground we
fear,

If we do fear this body hath a tail 144
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordilance
Come as the gods foresay it; howso'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day; the boy Fidele's sleekness 143
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en

His head from him; I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock, and let it to the sea, 152
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd.
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't! though valour

Becomes thee well enough
Arv. Would I had done't 156

So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed; I would revenges,

That possible strength might meet, would seek us through 160

And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done.—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay 164
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sleek Fidele!
I'll willingly to him; to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood, 168
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess!
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys. They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet, 172
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchauf'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder

That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop 180
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter CLAUDIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark! Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark! 188

Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys 193
Gui. Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAOUS, with IMOGEN, as dead, bearing her in his arms.

Bel. Look! here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms 196
Of what we blame him for.

Arr. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O, sweetest, fairest lily! 201
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find 204
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish errare
Might easilist harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made;
but I,

Thou didst, a most rare boy, of melancholy. 208
How found you him?

Arr. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?
Arr. O' the floor, 212
His arms thus leagu'd; I thought he slept, and put

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness

Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed; 216

With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arr. With fairest flowers
While summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave; thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor 221

The azure hare-bell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would, 224

With charitable bill,—O bill! sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument,—bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are
none, 228

To winter-ground thy course.

Gui. Prithce, have done,
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what 232
Is now due debt. To the grave!

Arr. Say, where shall'st lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arr. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground, 236

As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing; I'll weep, and word it with
thee; 240

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fances that lie.

Arr. We'll speak it then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less, for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys, 244
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that; though mean and mighty rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence—
That angel of the world—doth unake distinction 248

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princeely,

And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax' 252
When neither are alive.

Arr. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.

[Exit BELARIUS.]
Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the cast;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arr. 'Tis true. 256
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arr. So, begin.

- Gui.* Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done, 260
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages,
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.
- Arv.* Fear no more the frown o' the great, 264
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke:
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak;
The sceptre, learning, physic, must 268
All follow this, and come to dust.
- Gui.* Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arv. Thou hast finished joy and moan; 272
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.
- Gui.* No exorciser harm thee! 276
Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Arv. Nothing ill come near thee! 280
Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!
- Re-enter BELARIUS, with the body of CLOTEN.*
- Gui.* We have done our obseques. Come, lay him down.
Bel. Here's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight,
more;
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the
night 284
Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so
These herblets shall, which we upon you drew.
Come on, away; apart upon our knees. 288
The ground that gave them first has them
again;
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.
[Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGES.
- Iino.* [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?
I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far
thither? 292
'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?
I have gone all night: Faith, I'll lie down and
sleep.
[Seeing the body of CLOTEN.] But, soft! no bedfellow! O gods and goddesses!
These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the cure on't. I hope I dream; 297
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures; but 'tis not so,
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing, 300
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity 304
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
- The dream's here still; even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of's leg, this is his hand, 309
His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh,
The brawns of Hercules, but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven? How! 'Tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks, 313
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio 317
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio,
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas! 320 Where is thy head? where's that? Ay rue!
where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be?
Pisanio?
'Tis he and Cloten; malice and luere in them
Have laid this woe here. O! 'tis pregnant, 325 pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home; 328
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seem to those Which chance to find us. O! my lord, my lord. [Falls on the body.
- Enter LUCIUS, a Captain, other Officers, and a Soothsayer.*
- Cap.* To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia, 333
After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.
Luc. But what from Rome? 336
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, 340
Ulenna's brother.
Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.
Luc. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't. Now,
sir, 344
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?
Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision,—
I fast and pray'd for their intelligence,—thus:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd 348
From the spongy south to this part of the west,

There vanish'd in the sunbeams; which portends,

Unless my sins abuse my divination,
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so, 354
And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime

It was a worthy building. How! a page!
Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead rather,
For nature doth abhor to make his bed 357
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He's alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll, then, instruct us of this body.

Young one, 360

Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did, 364 Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest

In this sad wrack? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very vallant Briton and a good, 369
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas!
There are no more such masters; I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service, 372
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend. 376

Imo. Richard du Champe.—[Aside.] If I do lie and do

No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?

Luc. The name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same; 380
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner 385
Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep 388
As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh; 392
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth.

And rather father thee than master thee.

My friends,

The boy hath taught us manly duties; let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave; come, arm him. Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd 4
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes.
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, LORDS, PISANIO, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with
her. [Exit an Attendant.]

A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger. Heavens!
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past 3
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours, 12
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mis-tres-

I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,

Hold me your loyal servant.

First Lord. Good my liege, 16
The day that she was missing he was here;
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him, 23
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome.
[To PISANIO.] We'll sllp you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.

First Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and
queen!

I am amaz'd with matter.

First Lord. Good my liege, 26
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of; come more, for more you're ready;

The want is, but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw; 32
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not

What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here. Away!

[Exeunt all but PISANIO.]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since
I wrote him Imogen was slain; 'tis strange; 37
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain 40
Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true:

These present wars shall fin' I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd; 42
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

Scene IV.—Wales. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans 4
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sous,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going; newness 9
Of Cloten's death,—we being not known, not muster'd

Among the bands,—may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd, and so extort from 's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death 13
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely 16
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their
eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O! I am known 21
Of many in the army; many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves 25
Who find in my exile the want of breeding.
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, 28
But to be still hot summer's tanlings and

The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Tian be so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself, 32
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood 36
But that of coward hares, hot goats and venison!
Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed 40
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens! I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, 44
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans.

Arv. So say I; amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve 49
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie: 52 Lead, lead.—[Aside.] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born.

[Exeunt.]

Act V.

Scene I.—Britain. The Roman Camp

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handker.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, if wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,

If each of you should take the course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves 4

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond but to do just ones. Gods! If you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never 8

Had liv'd to put on this; so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack!

You snatch some heuce for little faults; that's
love, 12

To have them fall no more; you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the loers' thrif.

But Imogen is your own; do your best wills, 16
And make me bless'd to obey. I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom; 'tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress-plece! 20 I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore good
heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant; so I'll fight 24
Against the part I come with, so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril 28
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me than my habits show.
Gods! put the strength o' the Leonati in me.
To shame the gulse o' the world, I will begin 32
The fashion, less without and more within.

[Exit.

Scene II.—Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps.

*Enter, from one door, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; the British at another; LEONATI'S
POSTHUMUS following like a poor soldier.
They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHU-MUS; he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.*

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Reveningly enfeebles me; or could this earl, 4
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before 8
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods.

[Exit.

*The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cym-BELINE is taken; then enter, to his rescue,
BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.*

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground.

The lane is guarded; nothing routs us but 12
The villany of our fears.

*Gui. } Stand, stand, and fight!
Arv. }*

Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons; they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then re-enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such

As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies, 16
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did;
Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost.

But that the heavens fought. The king himself 4
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having
work 8

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling

Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damu'd

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane? 12

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd 16

So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country; athwart the lane,

He, with two striplings,—lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such

slaughter,— 20

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,

Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
'Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men: 24

To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.
Stand!

Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,

But to look back in frown: stand, stand! These

three, 28

Three thousand confident, in act as many,—
For three performers are the file when all

The rest do nothing,—with this word, 'Stand,
stand!'

Accommodated by the place, more charming 32
With their own nobleness,—which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance,—gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward

But by example,—O! a sin of war, 36

Dam'd in the first beginners.—'gan to look

The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon, 40
A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;
slaves,

The strides they victors made. And now our cowards—

Like fragments in hard voyages—became 44
The life o' the need; having found the back door open

Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens! how they wound;

Some stain before; some dying; some their friends

O'er-borne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd by

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty;
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys! 52

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rime upon 't,

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one: 56
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.'

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack! to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend; 60
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rime.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry. [Exit.
Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery! 64

To be i' the field, and ask, 'what news?' of me!
To-day how many would have given their honours

To have sav'd their carcases! took heel to do 't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd, 68
'Could not find death where I did hear him groan, Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,

'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we 72
That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him;

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again 76
The part I came in; fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take. For me, my ransom's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath, 81
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers.

First Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken. 84

'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.

Sec. Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave th' affront with them.

First Cap. So 'tis reported;
But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who is
there? 83

Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.

Sec. Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A lag of Rome shall not return to tell 92
What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

*Enter CYMBELINE, attended: BELARIUS, GUIDER-RIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives.
The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBE-LINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler; then exeunt omnes.*

Scene IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaolers.

First Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n, you have looks upon you;

So graze as you find pasture.

Sec. Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
[Exeunt Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,

I think, to liberty. Yet am I better 4
Than one that's sick o' the gout, since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By the sure physician death; who is the key

To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd 8

More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pluck that bolt;
Then, free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry? 12
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?

I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrained; to satisfy,

If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take 16
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
On their abatement: that's not my desire;
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you eou'd it;
'Twee man and man they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake : 25
You rather mine, being yours ; and so great
powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen ! 28
I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to POSTHUMUS, an old man, attired like a warrior ; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to POSTHUMUS, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal files :
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, 32
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw ? 36
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law :

Whose father then—as men report,
Thou orphans' father art— 40
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes ; 44
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity !

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry, 45
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,
As great Sicillus' heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man, 52
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best 56
Could deem his dignity ?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown 60
From Leouati's seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen ?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy, 64
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy ;
And to become the geek and scorn
O' the other's villany ? 68

Sec. Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain,
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely and were slain ; 72

Our fealty and Tenantlus' right
With honour to maintain.

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath To Cymbeline perform'd : 76
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd ? 80

Sici. Thy crystal window open ; look out ;
No longer exercise
Upon a vallant race thy harsh
And potent injuries. 84

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion ; help !
Or we poor ghosts will cry 88
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity.

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter ! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly. 92

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle : he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing ; hush ! How dare you ghosts

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts ? 96

Poor shadows of Elysium, hence ; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers :

Be not with mortal accidents oppress ;
No care of yours it is ; you know 'tis ours. 100

Whom best I love I cross ; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content ;

Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift :
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.

Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in 105
Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade !

He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made. 108

This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine ;

Aud so, away : no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine. 112
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.]
Sici. He came in thunder ; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell ; the holy eagle

Stoop'd, as to foot us ; his ascension is 116
More sweet than our bless'd fields ; his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak,

As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter !
Sici. The marble pavement closes ; he is enter'd 120

His radiant roof. Away ! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[The Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Awaking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot

A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers. But—O scorn!—
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born:

And so I am awake. Poor wretches, that depend
On greatness' favour dream as I have done; 128
Wake, and find nothing. But, alas! I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance and know not why.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one! 133

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers; let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, 136
As good as promise.

When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue and brain not; either both or nothing;
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such 148
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is 't, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

First Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death? 153

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

First Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot. 158

First Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink, sorry that you have paid too much; and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O! the charity of a penny cord; it sums up thousand in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book and counters; so the acquittance follows. 174

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

First Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep four sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed,

I think he would change places with his officer; for look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go. 181

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

First Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one. 190

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking. 197

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free. 201

First Gaol. I'll be hang'd, then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. 204

[Exeunt all but first Gaoler.]

First Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and our mind good; O! there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses. I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exit.]

Scene V.—CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRIUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart

That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arius, whose naked
breast 4

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing; 3
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym.

No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been scarce'd among the dead and living,

But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am 12
The heir of his reward; which I will add

[To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain.

By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the time

To ask of whence you are: report it.

Bel. Sir, 16

In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:

Further to boast were neither true nor modest,

Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees, 20

Arise, my knights o' the battle: I create you

Companions to our person, and will fit you

With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly

Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, 24

And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!

To sour your happiness, I must report

The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse : a physician 28

Would this report become? But I consider,

By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death

Will seize the doctor too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;

Which, being cruel to the world, concluded 32

Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd

I will report, so please you: these her women

Can trip me if I err; who with wet cheek

Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee, say, 36

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you, only

Affected greatness got by you, not you;

Married your royalty, was wife to your place;

Abhorrd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; 40

And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess 44

Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,

But that her flight prevented it, she had

Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!

Who is't can read a woman? Is there more? 48

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,

Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring,

By inches waste you; in which time she pur-

pos'd, 52

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to

O'recome you with her show; yea, and in time—

When she had fitted you with her craft—to work

Her son into the adoption of the crown; 56

But falling of her end by his strange absence,

Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so, 60
Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

First Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;

Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,

That thought her like her seeming: it had been vicious 65

To have mistrusted her; yet, O my daughter!

That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,

And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded: POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou canst not, Calus, now for tribute; that 69

The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit

That their good souls may be appeas'd with

slaughter 72

Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:

So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day

Was yours by accident; had it gone with us, 76

We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the goals

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives

May be call'd ransom, let it come; sufficeeth, 80

A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer;

Augustus lives to think on't; and so much

For my peculiar care. This one thing only

I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born, 84

Let him be ransom'd; never master had

A page so kind, so dutious, diligent,

So tender over his occasions, true,

So feat, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join 88

With my request, which I'll make bold your

highness

Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,

Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,

And spare no blood beside. 92

Cym. I have surely seen him;

His favour is familiar to me. Boy,

Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,

And art mine own. I know not why nor where-

fore, 96

To say, 'Hve, boy;' ne'er thank thy master; live:

And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,

Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;

Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, 100

The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness,

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;

And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no; alack!
There's other work in hand. I see a thing
Bitter to me as death; your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me; briefly die their joys
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? 109
I love thee more and more; think more and
more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak;

Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me 113 Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.
Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?
Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart, 117
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.
Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv. One sand another 121
Not more resembles;—that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive, 124
Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;

Creatures may be alike; were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Cui. But we saw him dead.
Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress: 128
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good, or hail.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.
Cym. Come, stand thou by our side:
Make thy demand aloud.—[To IACHIMO.] Sir,
step you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely, 132
Or, by our greatness and the grace of It,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render 136
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?
Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou't torture me to leave unspoken
that 140
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! mo?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that

Which torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel, 144 Whom thou didst banish, and—which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me—a nobler or ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy laughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false
spirits 149

Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.
Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength;

I had rather thou shouldst live while nature
will 152
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and
speak.

Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!—It was in Rome,— accents'd

The mansion where!—'twas at a feast—O, would
Our viands had been poison'd, or at least 157
Those which I heav'd to head!—the good Pos-
thumus,—

What should I say? he was too good to be
Where lil men were; and was the best of all 160
Amongst the rar'st of good ones;—sitting sadly
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak; for feature laming 164

The shrine of Venns, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye.

Cym. I stand on fire, 169
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Posthumus—

Most like a noble lord in love, and one 172
That had a royal lover—took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd,—therein
He was as calm as virtue,—he began

His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made, 176
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description

Prov'd us unspeaking sots.
Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity, there it begins, 180

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold; whereat I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise, and waver'd with
him

Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd fuger, to attain 185

In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident 183
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phoebus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of a car. Away to Britain 192
Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd 196

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd, 200
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes 204
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet;—

Oh cunning! how I got it!—nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd, 208
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,— Methinks I see him now,—

Post. [Coming forward.] Ay, so thou dost.
Italian fiend!—Ay me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing 212
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come. O! give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer. Thou king, send out
For torturers lugenous; it is I 216
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That killed thy daughter; villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself, 220
A sacrilegious thief, to do't; the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Spit, and throw stones, east mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and 225
Be villany less than 'twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear!
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page, 229

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.]

Pis. O, gentlemen, help!
Mine, and your mistress! O! my Lord Posthu-
mus,
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round? 233

Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress? 235

Imo. O! get thee from my sight:
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady, 241
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O gods! 244

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd.
Which must approve thee honest: 'If Pisanio
Have,' said she, 'given his mistress that cou-fection

Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd 248
As I would serve a rat.'

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only 252

In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem; I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life, but in short time 257
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. Have you ta'en o'
it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys, 258

There was our error.

Gai. This is, sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling.] Your blessing, sir.

Bel. [To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for't.

Cym. My tears that fall 263
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.

Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her was 271

That we meet here so strangely; but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord
Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me 274
With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore stress? 235

low, hence!
of Imogen!
243

queen.
d me.
O gods! 244

If Pisalio

Cornelius?
ortun'd me

My boys, 258

ce.
My lord, truth, Lord
me 276
e mouth, and

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's 280
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforce'd from me, away he posts 284
With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
My lady's honour; what became of him
I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forbend! 288
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prithee, valliant youth,
Deny't again.
Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a prince. 292
Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did
me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke
me
With language that would make me spurn
the sea
If it could so roar to me. I cut off 's head; 296
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou'rt dead.
Ino. That headless man 300
I thought had been my lord.
Cym. Blind the offender,
And take him from our presence.
Bel. Stay, sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath 304
More of thee merited than a band of Cloten's Had ever sear for. [To the Guard.] Let his arms alone;
They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent 309
As good as we?
Arr. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for't.
Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove that two on's are as good 312
As I have given out him. My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangrous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.
Arr. Your danger's ours.
Gui. And our good his.
Bel. Have at it, then, by leave. 316
Thou hadst, great king, a subject who was call'd
Belarius.
Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.
Bel. He it is that hath

Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man; 320
I know not how a traitor.
Cym. Take him hence:
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be uscate all so soon 324
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy; here's my knee:
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir, 328
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your lolsn, my llege,
And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How! my issue! 332
Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd 336
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—
For such and so they are—these twenty years
Have I train'd up; those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't,
Having receiv'd the punishment before, 344
For that which I did then; beaten for loyalty
Exalted me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious
sir, 348
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy 352
To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st
The servlee that you three have done is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish 356
A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arrivragus, 360
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had 364
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is ,

Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise nature's end in the donation, 368
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O! what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more. Bless pray you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now. O Imogen! 373
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by't. O my gentle brothers!

Have we this met? O, never say hereafter 376
But I am truest speaker; you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers
When ye were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arr. Ay, my good lord.

Gwi. And at first meeting lov'd; 377

Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dream she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which 384 Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?

When came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers? how first met
them?

Why fled you from the court, and whither?
These, 388

And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,

And all the other by-dependances,
From chance to chance, but nor the time nor
place 392

Will serve our long Interrogatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,

And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting 396

Each object with a joy: the counterechange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.

[To BELARIUS.] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever. 400

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve
me.

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master, 404
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought
He would have well becom'd this place and grac'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir, 408

The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitner for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo; I had you down and might 412
I have made you finish.

Iach. [Kneeling.] I am down again;
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech
you,
Which I so often owe, but your ring first, 416
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd! 422
We'll learn our freeness of a son in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother; 424
Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd, 428
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness that I can 432
Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philharmonus!
Sooth. Here, my good lord.
Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.
Sooth. Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow: then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp; 444
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
[To CYMBELINE.] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer 448
We term it mulier; which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, [To POSTHUMUS.] unsought, were clipp'd about 452
With this most tender air.
Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee, and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen, 456
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,

To the majestic cedar join'd, whose Issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well;
My peace we will begin. And Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar, 451
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen; 454 Whom heavens—in justice both on her and hers—

Have laid most heavy hand.
South. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision 455
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft, 472

Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, 476
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let 480
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts. 484
Set on there. Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.
[Exeunt.]

Scene.—Dispersedly in various Countries.

Act I.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

Enter GOWER.

To sing a song that old was sung.
 From whence ancient Gower is come,
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes. 4
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eyes, and holy-ates;
 And lords and ladies in their towers
 Have read it for restoratives: 8
 The purchase is to make men glorious;
 Et hominum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rimes, 12
 And that to hear an old man sing
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you like taper-light. 16

*This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
 Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
 The fairest in all Syria,
 I tell you what mine authors say:
 This king unto him took a fere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke.
 Bad child, worse father! to entice his own
 To evil should be done by none.
 By custom what they did begin
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
 Which to prevent, he made a law,
 To keep her still, and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:*

*So for her many a night did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.* 40
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.]

Scene I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIUCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul Embolden'd with the glory of her praise, 4
Think now no hazard in this enterprise.

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucrea reign'd, 8
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections. [Music.]

Enter the Daughter of ANTIUCHUS.

Per. See, where she comes apparell'd like the spring, 12
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curlous pleasures, as from thence 16
Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

You gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That hath inflam'd desire in my breast 20
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness! 24

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this filr Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Hee face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye 32
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues and semblance
pale, 36

That without covering, save yon field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist. 40

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must; 44
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,

Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling
woe, 43

Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did:
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do:
My riches to the earth from whence they came,
[To the Daughter of ANTIUCHUS.]

But my unspotted fire of love to you. 53
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.

Ant. Scorning advice read the conclusion
then; 56

Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. Of all say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous!

Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness! 60

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume 'he lls,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

I am no viper, yet I feed 64

On another's flesh which did me breed;

I sought a husband in which labour

I found that kindness in a father.

He's father, son, and husband mild, 68

I mother, wife, and yet his child.

How they may be, and yet in two,

As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physie is the last: but, O you powers! 72
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still, 76

Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you now my thoughts revolt;

For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate. 80

You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who, finger'd to make men his lawful music,

Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken;

But being play'd upon before your time, 84
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.

Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,

For that's an article within our law, 88
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd:

Either expound new or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act; 92
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;

For vice repeated is like the wandering wind, 96
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;

And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts

Cropp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is through'd

By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't.

Kings are earth's gods; in vlee their law's their
will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,

What being more known grows worse, to smoother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven! that I had thy head;
he has found the meaning;

But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,

We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree

As your fair self, doth time us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do respite you;

If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son;

And until then your entertain shall be
As doth befit our honour and your worth.

[Exeunt all but PERICLES.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like a hypocrite,

The which is good in nothing but in sight!
If it be true that I interpret false,

Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;

Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasplings with your child,—

Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father;—
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,

By the defiling of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who though they

On sweetest flowers yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men

Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke.

Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:

Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.]

Re-enter ANTIOCHEUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning for which we mean

To take his head.

He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner;

And therefore instantly this prince must die, 142
For by his fall my honour must keep high.

Who attends us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard,
You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy;

And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
him;

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord, 'tis done.

Ant. Enough. 160

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
Mess. My lord, Prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.]

Ant. [To THALIARD.] As thou
Wilt live, fly after; and, as an arrow shot

From a well-experienc'd archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return

Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead.'

Thal. My lord,
If I can get him within my pistol's length,

I'll make him sure enough; so, farewell to your highness.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! [Exit THALIARD.]
Till Pericles be dead,

My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. [To those without.] Let none disturb us.—
Why should this change of thoughts,

The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest, as not an hour

In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night—
The tomb where grief should sleep—can breed me quiet?

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
shun them,

And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;

Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.

Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,

Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,

Grows elder now and cares it be not done.
And so with me: the great Antiochus,—

'Gainst whom I am too little to contend, Since he's so great can make his will his act,— infamy, st die, 142

high.
ness call?

153 nce you.
ere's gold;
n must kill 156

Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say I honour him, 20
If he suspect I may dishonour him;
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land, 24
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state,
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,— 29
Who are no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by and defend
them.—

Make both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish. 33

Enter HELICANUS and other Lords.

First Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

Sec. Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us, 36

Peaceful and comfortable.
Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue,
They do abuse the king that flatter him;
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark, 40
To whi' that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life, 45
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares
o'erlook 48
What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.]

Helicenus, thou

Hast mov'd us; what seest thou in our looks?
Hel. An angry brow, dread lord, 52

Per. If there be such a dart in prince's frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment?
Per. Thou know'st 't have power 56
To rob thy life from thee.

Hel. [Knocking.] I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise;
Sit down; thou art no flatterer: 60
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!

'Tis counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience 65
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicenus,
That minister'st a potion unto me 68
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me then: I went to Antioch,
Where as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty, 72
From whence an issue I might propagate
Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest, hark in thine ear, as black as incest;
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss,
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled, 80
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears 84
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years,
And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed, 88
To keep his bed of blackness unkind ope,
To lop that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done
him;

When all, for mine, if I may call't, offence, 92
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it,—

Hel. Alas! sir,

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks, 96

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest, ere it came;
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them. 100

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given leave to speak,

Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war or private treason 104
Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life, 108
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth, 112

From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyro, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee, 116
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I'll lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it,

our haste.

 Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The Same. In Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So this is Tyre, and this the court.
 Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 'tis dangerous.
 Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the lachmenture of his oath to be one.
 Hush! here come the lords of Tyre. 10

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
 Further to question me of your king's departure:
 His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, 13
 Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone!

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, 16
 Why, as it were unliens'd of your loves,
 He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
 Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?

Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I
 know not— 20
 Took some displeasure at him, at least he judg'd
 so;

And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
 To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
 So puts himself unto the shipman's toil, 24
 With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
 But since he's gone, the king it sure must please:
 He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea. 29
 I'll present myself. [Aloud.] Peace to the lords of Tyre.

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come, 32
 With message unto princely Pericles;
 But since my landing I have understood Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,
 My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, 37
 Commended to our master, not to us;
 Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
 As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. 40
 [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Tarsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
 And by relating tales of others' griefs,
 See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it; 4

For who digs hills because they do aspire
 Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
 O my distressed lord! even such our griefs are;
 Here they're but felt, and seen with mischiefs'
 eyes, 8

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza,

Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants
 it, 10

Or can conceal his hunger till he famish? 12

Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep

Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep
 Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; 16

That if heaven slumber while their creatures want, 18

They may awake their helps to comfort them.

I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
 And wanting breath to speak help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir. 20

Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom plenty held full hand,
 For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;

Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds, 24

And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;

Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,

Like one another's glass to trim them by;

Their tables were stor'd full to glad the sight, 28

And not so much to feed on as delight;

All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,

The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O! 'tis too true. 32

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,

These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and air

Were all too little to content and please,
 Although they gave their creatures in abunddance, 36

As houses are defild for want of use,

They are now starv'd for want of exercise;

Those palates who, not yet two summers young, 40

Must have inventions to delight the taste,

Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it;

Those mothers who, to nouse up their babes,

Thought nought too curious, are ready now

To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd. 44

So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife

Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.

Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial. 49
Is not this true?

Dis. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness
it.

Cle. O! let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste, 53
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor? 56

Cle. Here.
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in
haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, 60

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor; 64
And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,

Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
power,

To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me, 69
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the senblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
peace, 72

And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will and what they can,
What need we fear? 77

The ground's the lowest and we are half way
there.

Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes, 80

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Cle. Welcome is peace if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist. 84

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre, 88
And seen the desolation of your streets:

Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships, you happily may think 92
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd with

With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,

Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half
dead. 95

All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves.
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils! 104

Till when—the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen—

Your Grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile,

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. 108
[Exeunt.]

Act II.

Enter GOWER.

*Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be, 5
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain. 8
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he speken can; 12
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?*

DUMB SHOW.

Enter, from one side, PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all their Train with them. Enter, at another door, a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES; who shows the letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON &c., severally.

*Good Helicans hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive, 20
And to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haws in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him; 24
And that in Tarsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest.*

*He, doing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;* 29
*Thunder above and deeps below
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wrack'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,* 33
*By waves from coast to coast is tost.
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne ought escapen but himself;* 36
*Till Fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad;
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gover, this longs the text.* [Exit.

Scene I.—Pentopolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of
heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you. 4
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
breath
Nothing to think on but cursing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers 8
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch! 12
Sec. Fish. Ha! come and bring away the nets.
First Fish. What, Patch-breech, I sa!
Third Fish. What say you, master?
First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now!
come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wamion. 17
Third Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even
now. 20
First Fish. Alas! poor souls; it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves. 24
Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and troubled? they say they're half fish half flesh;
a plague on them! they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea. 30
First Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones; I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale;
a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful.

Such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all. 38

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

Third Fish. But master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

Sec. Fish. Why, man? 43

Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up ag'dn. But if th' good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

Th. d Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey. 52

Per. [Aside.] How from the finny subject of
the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect! 56
[Aboud.] Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

Sec. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that?
If it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it. 60

Per. Y' may see the sea hath cast me on your coast.

Sec. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to east thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, 64

In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him;
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working. 70

Sec. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then?

Per. I never praetised it.

Sec. Fish. Nay then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for 't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to
know, 76

But what I am want teaches me to think on;
A man through'd up with cold; my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help:
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, 81
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

First Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now, gods forbid!
I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow!
Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting days, and more'er puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome. 89

Per. I thank you, sir.

First Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg. 92

Per. I did but crave.

Sec. Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then? 97

Sec. Fish. O! not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net. 101

[Exit with Third Fisherman.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

First Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where ye are? 104

Per. Not well.

First Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good King Simonides do you call him? 109

First Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called for his peaceable reign and good government. 112

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

First Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love. 120

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

First Fish. O! sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wife's soul.— 125

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

Sec. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; 132 And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge, even as he left his life,

Keep it, my Pericles, It hath been a shield 136 'Twixt me and death;—and pointed to this brace;

For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity— The which the gods protect thee from!—'t may defend thee.

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it; 140 Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd they have given't agaln.

I thank thee for 't; my shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father's gift in's will. 144

First Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this east of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king;

I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, 148 And for his sake I wish the having of it;

And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman; And if that ever my low fortunes better, 152 I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms. 157

First Fish. Why, do'e take it; and the gods give thee good on't!

Sec. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the water; there are certain condolences, certain valls. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe it, I will. 165

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rapture of the sea, This jewel holds his bidding on my arm: 168 O to thy value will I mount myself

Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread. Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided 172 Of a pair of bases.

Sec. Fish. We'll sure provide; thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a vail, and I'll bring thee to the court myself. 176

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will! This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—The Same. A public Way. Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISSA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter, 4

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express 8

My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected, 12
So princes their renowns if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform. 16

Enter a Knight; he passes over the stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of sparta, my renowned
father;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethlop reaching at the sun; 20
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you. [The Second Knight passes over.]

Who is the second that presents himself?
Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield 25
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dutzura que por fuerza.

[The Third Knight passes over.]

Sim. And what's the third?
Thai. The third of Antioch; 28

And his device, a wreath of chivalry;
The word, Me pompee provexit apex.

[The Fourth Knight passes over.]

Sim. What is the fourth?
Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside
down; 32

The word, Quod me alit me extinguit.
Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

[The Fifth Knight passes over.]

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds.
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;
The motto thus, Sie spectanda fides.

[The Sixth Knight, PERICLES, passes over.]

Sim. And what's
The sixth and last, the which the knight himself 40

With such a graceful countess deliver'd?
Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo. 44

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortune yet may flourish.

First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show 48
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For, by his rusty outside he appears

To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance.

Sec. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes 52

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.
Third Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan 56

The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw
Into the gallery.

[*Exeunt. Great shouts, and all cry,
'The mean knight!'*]

Scene III.—The Same. A Hall of State,
A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Marshal, Ladies, Lords, Knights from tilting, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms, 4
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guests. 8

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit. 12

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed; 16
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen
o' the feast,—

For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place;
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides. 20

Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour
we love,

For who hates honour, hates the gods above,
Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.
First Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen 24

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights,
Sim. Sit, sir; sit. 28

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts, 28

These eates resist me, she but thought upon.
Thai. [Aside.] By Juno, that is queen of marriage,

All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury, Wishing him my neat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman. 32

Sim. He's but a country gentleman;
He has done no more than other knights have
done;

He has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yon king's to me like to my father's picture, 37

Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence. 40

None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the
night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men; 45
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights? 48

First Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile; 53

Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth. 56
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it
To me, my father?

Sim. O! attend, my daughter:

Princes in this should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes 60
To honour them;

And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.

Therefore to make his entrance more sweet, 64
Here say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to
him.

Thai. Alas! my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold;
He may my proffer take for an offence, 68
since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. 72

Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know of him,

whence he is, his name, and parentage.

Thai. The king, my father, sir, has drunk to
you.

Per. I thank him. 76

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre, my name, Pericles; 81

My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas rest of ships and men, 84
And after shipwrack, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself
Pericles,

A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas 88

Bereft of ships and men, east on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles, 92
And waste the time which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.

I will not have excuse, with saying this 96
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads

Since they love men in arms as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.

So this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, sir; 100

Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard, yon knights of Tyre

Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent. 104

Per. In those that practise them they are,
my lord.

Sim. O! that's as much as you would be denied

Of your fair courtesy.

[The Knights and Ladies dance.

Unclasp, unclasp;

Thanks, gentlemen, to all: all have done well, [To PERICLES.] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct 109

These knights unto their several lodgings!
Yours, sir,

We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your Grace's pleasure. 112

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at;

Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best. 116

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter HILICANUS and ESCANES.

Hil. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding
longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,

Due to this helnous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot

Of an incestimable value, and his daughter with him,

A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,

That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. See, not a man in private conference

Or council has respect with him but he.

Sec. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

Third Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it.

First Lord. Follow me then. Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome. Happy day, my lords.

First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,

And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.

First Lord. Wrong not yourself then, noble Helicane;

But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

Sec. Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure:

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know'st how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. For honour's cause forbear your suffrages:

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time exclud'd he not return,

I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous
worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

First Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;

And since Lord Helicane enjoyneth us,
We with our travels will endeavour it.

L. L. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.
[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter; the Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.

Sec. Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. Falth, by no means; she hath so strictly tied

Her to her chamber that 'tis impossible.
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

Third Knight. Though loath to bid farewell,
we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.]

Sim. So,
They're well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's letter.

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight.
Or never more to view nor day nor light.

'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;

I like that well: how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!

Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholding to you

For your sweet music this last night: I do protest my ears were never better fed

With such delightful pleasing harmony

Per. It is your Grace's pleasure to commend,

Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask you one thing.

What do you think of my daughter, sir? 32

Per. A most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.

Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you; 37

Ay, so well, that you must be her master,

And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it.

Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster. 40

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside.] What's here?

A letter that she loves the knight of Tyre!

'Tis the king's subtilty to have my life. 44

O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never alur'd so high to love your daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her. 48

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not:

Never did thought of mine levy offence; 52

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king.

That calls me traitor, I return the lie. 57

Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent. 60

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy. 64

Sim. No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,

Resolve your angry father, if my tongue 68

Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe

To any syllable that made love to you.

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,

Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

[Aside.] I am glad on't, with all my heart.

I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.

Will you, not having my consent, 76

Bestow your love and your affections

Upon a stranger? [Aside.] who, for aught I

know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary,

As great in blood as I myself.— 80

[Aloud.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame

Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,

Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you—

Man and wife: 84

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too;

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;

And for a further grief,—God give you joy!

What! are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir. 88

Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.

Sim. What! are you both agreed?

Thai. Yes, if't please your majesty.

Per. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed; 92

Then with what haste you can get you to bed.

[Exeunt.]

Act III.

Enter GOWER.

Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;

No din but snores the house about,

Made louder by the o'er-fed breast

Of this most pompous marriage-feast. 4

The cat, with cyme of burning coal,

Now couches fore the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,

E'er the blither for their drouth. 8

Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,

Where, by the loss of maidenhead,

A babe is moulded. Be attend;

And time that is so briefly spent 12

With your fine fancies quaintly eche;

What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

DUMB SHOW.

Enter, from one side, PERICLES and SIMONIDES,

with Attendants; a Messenger meets them,

kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter: PERICLES

shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to

PERICLES. Then enter THAISA with child, and

LYCHORIDA: SIMONIDES shows his daughter

the letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES

take leave of her father, and all depart.

By many a dorn and painful perch,

Of Pericles the careful search 16

By the four opposing coigns,

Which the world together joins,

Is made with all due diligence

That horse and sail and high expense, 20

Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,—

Fame answering the most strange inquire—

To the court of King Simonides

Are letters brought, the tenour these: 24

Antiochus and his daughter dead;

The men of Tyrus on the head

Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none: 28
The mutiny he there hastes to oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms, 32
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yraved to their dooms,
And every one with claps can sound, 36
'Our heir apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire,— 40
Which who shall cross?—along to go;
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes 44
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut: but Fortune's mood
Varies again: the grisled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth, 48
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and well-a-neighbor
Does fall in travail with her fear; 52
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, as'er may
Conveniently the rest convey, 56
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak. 60

[Exit.]

Scene I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou God of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou,
that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O! still 4
Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes. O! how Lychorrida,
How does my queen? Thou stormest venomously;
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The scaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death, 9
Unheard. Lychorida! Lucina, O!
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy delfy 12
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails!

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.Now, Lychorida!

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,

Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do: take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen, 25
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below,
Recall not what we give, and therein may 25
Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now mild may be thy life!

For a more blust'rous birth had never babe: 28
Quiet and gentle thy conditions!
For thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows!

Thou hast as chlding a nativity 32
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make.
To herald thee from the womb; even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here. Now, the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon't! 37

Enter two Sailors.First Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!

Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst. Yet for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer, 41
I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bolins there! thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself. 44

Sec. Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard:
the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead. 49

Per. That's your superstition.

First Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir. 56

Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear;

No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the oze; 61

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the beehing whale
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells! O Lychorida! 65

Bld Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper.
My casket and my jewels; and bld Nicander

Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit LYCORIDA.]

Sec. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the latches, caul'k'd and bitum'd ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

Sec. Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner.

Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Sec. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O! make for Tarsus.

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Can not hold out to Tyrus; there I'll leave it
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner
I'll bring the body presently. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON, a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;
'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Ser. I have been in many; but such a night as this

Till now I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;
There's nothing can be minister'd to nature

That can recover him. [To PHILEMON.] Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

[Exit all except CERIMON.]

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good morrow, sir.

Sec. Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake;

The very principals did seem to rend,

And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house.

Sec. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O! you say well.

First Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange,

Nature should be so conversant with pain,

Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever.

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater

Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs

May the two latter darken and expend,

But immortality attends the former,

Making a man a god. 'Tis known I ever

I have studied physick, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have—

Together with my practice—made familiar

To me and to my aid the best infusions

That dwell in vegetables, in metals, stones;

And can speak of the disturbances

That nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me

more content in course of true delight

Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,

Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,

To please the fool and death.

Sec. Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves

Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay.

Enter two Servants, with a chest.

First Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

First Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest:

'Tis of some wrack.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon't.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caul'k'd and bitum'd!

Did the sea cast it up?

First Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open.

Soft! It smells most sweetly in my sense.

Sec. Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.

O you most potent gods! what's here? a corpse!

First Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd

With full bags of spices! A passport too!

Apollo, perfect me! the characters!

Here I give to understand.

If e'er this coffin drive a-land,

I, King Pericles, have lost

This queen worth all our mundane cost.

Who finds her, give her burying; 72
 She was the daughter of a king;
 Besides this treasure for a fee,
 The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart 76
 That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd tonight.

Sec. Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
 For look, how fresh she looks. They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within; 80
 Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.
 [Exit Second Servant.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
 And yet the fire of life kindle again
 The overpress'd spirits. I heard 84
 Of an Egyptian, that had nine hours then
 dead,
 Who was by good appliances recovered.

Re-enter Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths.
 The rough and woeful music that we have, 88
 Cause it to sound, beseech you.
 The viol once more;—how thou stirr'st, thou block!

The music there! I pray you, give her air.
 Gentlemen, 92
 This queen will live; nature awakes, a warmth
 Breathes out of her; she hath not been en-tranç'd

Above five hours. See! how she 'gins to blow
 Into life's flower again.

First Gent. The heavens 96
 Through you increase our wonder and set up
 Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold,
 Her cyelds, cases to those heavenly jewels
 Which Pericles bathed, 100
 Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
 The diamonds of a most praised water
 Do appear, to make the world twice rich.
 Live,
 And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature, 104
 Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana!
 Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
 is this?

Sec. Gent. Is not this strange?

First Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours!
 Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear
 her. 108
 Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to,

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;
 And Esculapius guide us!

[Exit, carrying THAISA away.]

Scene III.—Tersus. A Room in CLEON'S
 House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, and LYCHORIDA, with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone;

My twelve months are exple'd, and Tyrus stands
 In a litigious pence. You and your lady
 Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods
 Make up the rest upon you! 5

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt
 you mortally,

Yet glance full wanderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!
 That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither, 8

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey

The powers above us. Could I rage and roar
 As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
 Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina—whom,
 For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so—here
 I charge your charity withal, and leave her
 The infant of your care, beseeching you
 To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your Grace, that fed my country with your corn—

For which the people's prayers still fall upon
 you—

Must in your child be thought on. If neglectful
 Should therein make me vile, the common body,
 By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;
 But if to that my nature need a spur,
 The gods revenge it upon me and mine, 24
 To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you;
 Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't,
 Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,
 By bright Diana, whom we honour, all 28
 Unclassar'd shall this hair of mine remain,
 Though I show ill in 't. So I take my leave.
 Good madam, make me blessed in your care
 In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself, 32
 Who shall not be more dear to my respect

Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cle. We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge
 o' the shore;

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and 36
 The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
 Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O! no tears,
 Lychorida, no tears:

Look to your little mistress, on whose grace 40
 You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord.

[Exit.]

Scene IV.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON and THAISIA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your chamber; which are now
At your command. Know you the character?

Thai. It is my lord's. 4

That I was shipp'd at sea; we'll remember,
Even on my eaning time; but whether there
Deliver'd, by the holy gods,

I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles, 8
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this your purpose as you speak, 13
Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you. 16

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.
[Exeunt.]

Act IV.

Enter GOWER.

Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.

His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,

Into Diana there a votaress.

*For 'tis Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find* 4

*At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd* 8

*Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place*

*Of general wonder. But, alas!
That monster envy, oft the wrack* 12

*Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.*

*And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown,* 16

*Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
Hign. Philoten, and it is said*

For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be: 20

*But when she receiv'd the sleided silk
With fingers, long, small, white as milk,*

*Or when she would with sharp needl wound
The cambric, which she made more sound* 24

*By hurting it; when to the lute
She sung, and made the night bird mute,*

*That still records with moan; or when
She would with rich and constant pen* 28

Vail to her mistress Diem; still This Philoten contends skill

*With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow* 32

*Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks* 36

*In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare*

*For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter.* 40

*The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyza hath*

*The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:* 44

*Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rime;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.* 48

*Dionyza doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer.* [Exit.

Scene I.—Tarsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't:

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing if the world so soon,
To yield it so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love if thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose. 3

Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here

She comes weeping for her only mistress' death.
Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd. 12

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers; the yellows,
blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave, 16

While summer days do last. Ay me! poor maid,
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,

This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends. 20

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's
chang'd 24

With this unprofitable woe. Come,
Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her. 29

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself, 32
With more than foreign heart. We every day Expect him here; when he shall come and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you;
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal 40
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least. 45
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while;

Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood: 48
What! I must have cure of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.
[Exit DIONYZA.]

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands hallug ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck. 56

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:

Never were waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off 60
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' say'st thou, 'wilt out?'
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stern to stern; the boats vain whistles, and
The master calls, and troubles their confusion. 64

Leon. Conue; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious, 68
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd? 72
Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spuke bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature; believe me, la, 76

I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit, 30
Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that
fought;

Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now;
Your lady seeks my life; come you between. 38
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling.

First Pirate. Hold, villain! 92
[LEONINE runs away.]

Sec. Pirate. A prize! a prize!

Third Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part.
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exit Pirates with MARINA.]

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes; 96
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon
her, 100

Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

[Exit.]

Scene II.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pandar. Boul.

Boul. Sir?

Pandar. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants; we lost too much money this morn by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual aetion are even as good as rotten. 9

Pandar. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, what-e'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper. 13

Bawd. Thon sayst true; 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as, I think, I have brought up some eleven— 16

Boul. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully solden. 21

Pand. Thou sayst true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage. 24

Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. [Exit.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old? 32

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over. 39

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boult. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin? 45

First Pirate. O! sir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see; if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest. 49

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and is excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be hated one doit of a thousand pieces. 56

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment. 60

[Exit Pandar and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, 'He that will give most, shall have her first.' Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you. 67

Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit.]

Mar. Alack! that Leonine was so slack, so slow.

He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates—

Not enough barbarous—had not o'erboard thrown me

For to seek my mother! 72

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not. 76

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are liko to live.

Mar. The more my fault

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die. 80

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentleness of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman? 83

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling; I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me! 95

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's returned.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou erled her through the market? 101

Boult. I have erled her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voler. 104

Bawd. And I prithee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Falsh, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on. 113

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers in the hams? 116

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow. 120

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun. 124

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To MARINA.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not. 136

Boult. O! take her home, mistress, take her home; these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayst true, I' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— 144

Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet. 150

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town; report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report. 156

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night. 160

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.

Diana, aid my purpose! 164

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. You'll turn a child again. 1 think 4

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess

To equal any single crown o' the earth 8

I' the justice of compare. O villain Leoniac!

Whom thou hast poison'd too;

If thou hadst drunk to him 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact; what canst thou say 12

When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates.

To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent, 17

And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O! go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods—
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think 21

The pretty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,

And open this to Pericles. I do shrieve

To think of what a noble strain you are, 24

And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then; 23

Yet none does know but you how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.

She did distain my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes; none would look on her,

But cast their gazes on Marina's face, 33

Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malkin

Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural, 36

You not your child well loving, yet I find

It greets me as an enterprise of kindness

Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles, 40

What should he say? We wept after her hearse;

And even yet we mourn; her monument

Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs

In glittering golden characters express 44

A general praise to her, and care in us

At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,

Which, to betray, dost with thine angel's face,

Seize with thine eagle's talons. 43

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously

Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the fles;

But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—Before the Monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Enter GOWEA.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't;

Making—to take your imagination—

From bourn to bourn, region to region. 4

By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime

To use one language in each several clime

Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you

To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach

you. 8

The stages of our story. Pericles

Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,

Attended on by many a lord and knight,

To see his daughter, all his life's delight. 12

*Old Helicanus goes along. Behind
Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate. 16
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought*

*This king to Tarsus, think his pilot thought,
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone. 20
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears into your eyes I'll reconcile.*

DUMB SHOW.

*Enter at one door PERICLES, with his Train;
CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows
PERICLES the tomb of MARINA; whereat PERI-CLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Ezeunt
CLEON and DIONYZA.*

*See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, 25
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-shower'd,*

*Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs; 28
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ 32
By wicked Dionyza.*

[Reads inscription on MARINA'S monument.

THE FAIRST, SWEETST, AND BEST LIES HERE, WHO WITHER'D IN HER SPRING OF YEAR:
SHE WAS OF TYRUS THE KING'S DAUGHTER, 36
ON WHOM FOUL DEATH HATH MADE THIS SLAUGHTER.
MARINA WAS SHE CALL'D; AND AT HER BIRTH,
THE TISBIO PROUD, SWALLOW'D SOME PART O' THE EARTH:

THEREFORE THE EARTH, FEARING TO BE O'ERFLOW'D, HATH THE TISBIO'S BIRTH-CHILD ON THE HEAVENS BESTOW'D: WHEREFORE SHE DOES, AND SWEARS SHE'LL NEVER STINT,

MAKE RAGING BATTERY UPON SHORES OF FLINT.

*No visor does become black villany
So well as soft and tender flattery. 44
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day 49
In her unholy service. Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylene. [Exit.*

Scene V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

Sec. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

First Gent. But to have divinely preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing? 5

Sec. Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall's go hear the vestals sing?

First Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for you. [Ezeunt.

Scene VI.—[The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter PANDAR, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fle, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation;
we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for ellents her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a purltan of the devil if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests. 13

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers. 21

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health. 25

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now!
wholesome iniquity, have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon? 29

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thro' wouldst say. 33

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth. 36

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee?

Boult. O! sir, I can be modest. [Exit. 40

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit BOULT.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you—

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature? 47

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you; leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave; a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you do. 52

Bawd. [To MARINA.] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him. 56

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not. 61

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold. 64

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha! you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. 71

Lys. Go thy ways. [Exit Bawd, Pandar, and BOULT.] Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend. 76

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession? 80

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamster at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one. 84

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am? 92

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place; come, come. 100

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage. 104

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came, Diseases have been sold dearer than physic, 103 O! that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird

That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think 112 Thou couldst have spoke so well; we'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee;

Persever in that clear way thou goest, 116 And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten 120 That I came with no ill intent, for to me

The very doors and windows savour vlicely. Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee. 124

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost

Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me. 129

Lys. Avaunt! thou damned door-keeper. Your house,

But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit.

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me? 139

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? 144

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O! abominable. 148

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable. 157

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods! 165

Bawd. She conjures; away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hark you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! 165

[Exit.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear. 169

Mar. Prithee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art. Since they do better thee in their command. 177 Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change; Thou art the damned door-keeper to every 180

Coystril that comes inquiring for his Tib, To the choleric fisting of every rogue

Thy ear is liable, thy food is such As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs. 184

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a woman one? 189

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doest. Empty

Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman:

Any of these ways are yet better than this; 193 For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,

Would own a name too dear. O! that the gods Would safely deliver me from this place. 196

Here, here's gold for thee. If that thy master would gain by me,

Proclaim that I can sling, weave, sew, and dance, With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;

And I will undertake all these to teach. 201 I doubt not but this populous city will yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of? 204

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,

And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee; if I can place thee, I will. 209

Mar. But, amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.

Act V.

Enter GOWER.

Marina thus the brothel's escapes, and chances Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances As goddess-like to her admired lays; Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her need compasses

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry; 3

That pupils lacks she none of noble race, Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain She gives the curs'd bawd. Here we her place; 3

And to her father turn our thoughts again, 12 Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost,

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd 16 God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense; 20

And to him in his barge with fervour hies. In your supposing once more put your sight Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark: 20

Where what is done in action, more, if might, Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark.

[Exit.

Scene I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mitylene.] Where's the Lord Helleanus? he can resolve you.

O! here he is,—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene, And in it is Lysimachus, the governor, 4

Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call? 8

Hel. Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard;

I pray ye, greet them fairly.

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.]

Enter from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir, This is the man that can, in aught you would, resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am, and die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well. Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs, seeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir, Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king; a man who for this three months hath not spoken

To any one, nor taken sustenance But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'T would be too tedious to repeat; But the main grief springs from the loss Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may; But bootless is your sight: he will not speak to any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. [PERICLES discovered.] This was a goodly person,

Till the disaster that, one mortal night, Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

First Lord. Sir, We have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager, Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought. She questionless with her sweet harmony And other chosen attractions, would allure, And make a battery through his deafen'd ports Which now are midway stopp'd: She is all happy as the fair'st of all, And with her fellow maids is now upon The leafy shelter that abuts against The island's side,

[Whispers first Lord, who puts off in the barge of LYSIMACHUS.]

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit, That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you, That for our gold we may provision have, Wherein we are not destitute for want, But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O! sir, a courtesy, Which if we should deny, the most just gods For every graff would send a caterpillar, And so afflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you; But see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, LORI, with MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one! Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady. Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd Came of a gentle kind and noble stock, I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty Expect even here, where is a kingly patient: If that thy prosperous and artificial feat Can draw him but to answer thee in aught, Thy sacred physis shall receive such pay As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use My utmost skill in his recovery,

Provided That none but I and my companion maid Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her; And the gods make her prosperous!

Lys. Mark'd he your music? [MARINA sings.]

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes, But have been gaz'd on like a comet; she speaks, My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief

Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd. Though wayward Fortune did malign my state, My derivation was from ancestors Who stood equivalent with mighty kings; But time hath rooted out my parentage, And to the world and awkward casualties Bound me in servitude.—[Aside.] I will desist; But there is something glows upon my cheek, And whispers in mine ear, 'Go not till he speak.'

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—

To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage, 100

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What countrywoman?

Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores; 104
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one 108

My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-vole'd; her eyes as jewel-like,

And eas'd as richly; in pace another Juno; 112
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger; from the deck

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred? 116
And how achlev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?

Mar. Should I tell my history, it would seem like lies, disdain'd in the reporting. 120

Per. Prithce, speak;
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace

For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation 125

To points that seem impossible; for thou lookest like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?

Didst thou not say when I did push thee back,—
Which was when I perceiv'd thee,—that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou saidst

'Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine, 133

If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing I said, and said no more but what my thoughts Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story; 136
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl; yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling 140

Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O! I am mock'd, 144

And thou by some incens'd god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To cail thyself Marina.

Mar. The name 148
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace, 153
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?

Motion!—Well; speak on. Where were you born? 156

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina

For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;

Who died the minute I was born, 160
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Dellerv'd weeping.

Per. O! stop there a little.
This is the rarest dream that e'er doth sleep
Did mock sad fools withal; this cannot be. 164

My daughter's buried. Well; where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.

Mar. You'll scorn to believe me; 'twere best
I did give o'er. 168

Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me, 172

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me; and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to
do't,

A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me; 176
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be
You think me an impostor; no, good faith:
I am the daughter to King Pericles, 180

If good King Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst, 185
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene, 188
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain, 195
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'rbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O! come hither, 196

Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again. O Helicanus!
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us; this is Marina. 201
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray, 204
What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you
said

Thou hast been god-like perfect; 202
Thou'rt heir of kingdoms, and another life
To Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa? 212
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art
my child,
Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have
been, 217

By savage Cleon; she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess. Who is this? 220

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens! bless my girl. But, hark! what music? 225

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him:
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt.
How sure you are my daughter. But, what music? 228

Hel. My lord, I hear none.
Per. None!

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

Lys. 'Tis not good to cross him; give him
way. 232

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. My lord, I hear. [Music.]

Per. Most heavenly music;
It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes; let me rest. [Sleeps.]

Lys. A pillow for his head. 237
So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you. 240

[Exeunt all but PERICLES.]

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; life thee
thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice.
There, when my maiden priests are met together,

Before the people all, 244
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife;
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's,
call

And give them repetition to the life.
Perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe; 243
Do it, and happy; by my silver bow!
Awake, and tell thy dream! [Disappears]

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee! Helicanus!

Enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir? 252

Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon; but I am
For other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails; oftsoons I'll tell thee
why. 256

[To LYSIMACHUS.] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir, 260
With all my heart; and when you come ashore,
I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arm. 264
Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Enter GOWER.

Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.
This, my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me, 4
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylene 8

Scene III.—The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side;
CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS,
HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the King of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa, 4
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess!
Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years
He sought to murder; but her better stars 9
Brought her to Mitylene, 'gainst whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard

us,
Where, by her own most clear remembrance,
she 12
Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles!—

[She faints.
Per. What means the nun? she dies! help,
gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir, 16
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no;
I threw her o'erboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.
Per. 'Tis most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady. O! she's but o'erjoy'd. 21

Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I o'p'd the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her 24

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,
Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recovered.

Thai. O! let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity 28
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,
But curb it, spite of seeing. O! my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, 32
Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,

A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd. 36

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.
Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness 40

Makes my past miseries sport: you shall do
well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O! come, be buried
A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart 44
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to THAISA.
Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd, and mine own! 48

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I put behind an ancient substitute;
Can you remember what I call'd the man? 52
I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation:

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.
Now do I long to hear how you were found, 56
How possibly preserv'd, and whom to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man, Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can 60
From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord. 64
Beseech you, first go with me to my house.

Where shall be shown you all was found with
her;

How she came plac'd here in the temple;
No needless thing omitted. 68

Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision: I
Will offer night-oblations to thee, Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now 72
 This ornament
 Makes me look dismal will I clip to form :
 And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
 To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify. 76
Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
 My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet
 there, my queen,
 We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves 80
 Will in that kingdom spend our following days ;
 Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
 Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay
 To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead's the way. 84

[Exeunt.]

Poems.

Venus and Adonis.

Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Poecula Castalia plena ministret aqua.

To the Right Honourable Henry Wriothesly,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I am honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove defunct, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

EVEN as the sun with purple colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-check'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare, 8
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Salth that the world hath ending with thy life.

Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed, 13
And rein his proud head to the saddle bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy need
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know: 16
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses;
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses;

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather furnish them amid their plenty, 20
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.' 24

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of plith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good: 28
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy, 32
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire. 36

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimble she fastens;—O! how quick is love;—
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove: 4 Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
    And govern'd him in strength, though not in
    lust.

So soon was she along as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips: 44
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears
Both quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks: 52
    He saith she is Immodest, blames her miles;
    What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste, 57
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone;
    Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
    And where she ends she doth anew begin. 60

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace; 64
    Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
    flowers,
    So they were dew'd with such distilling
    showers.

Look! how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies; 68
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eye:
Ruin added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank. 74

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale; 76
    Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
    Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears, 80
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
    Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
    And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave; 83
    But when her lips were ready for his pay,
    He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get; 93
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O! pity,' 'kiss she cry, 'flint-hearted boy:
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?' 96

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and dreadful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar; 100
    Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
    And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt
    have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest, 104
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest;
    Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
    Making my arms his field, his tent my bed. 108

'Thus be that overrul'd I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain;
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength
obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain. 112
    O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
    For ~~mastering her that foil'd the god of fight,~~
    she conquers him

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,—
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,—
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine; 117
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy
head:
    Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies;
    Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes? is mine?

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight; 124
    These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
    Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
your opportunity
Shows thee urine, yet mayst thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip; 129
Beauty ~~within itself should not be wasted;~~
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time. 132

'Were I hard favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'erworn, despis'd, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,

Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee; 157

But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning; 149

My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow;
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy pain dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear, 145
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire, 149
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support
me; 152

Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport
me:

Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook, 161
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use, 164
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's
abuse:

Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth
beauty;

Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty. 168

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,

Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat, 177
With hurling eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side. 180

And now Adonis with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His lowering brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky, 184 Souring his cheeks, cries, 'Fie! no more of
love:

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ay me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind?
What hare excuses mak'st thou to be gone; 188
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun:
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs:
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my
tears, 192

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but
warm,
And lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done 197
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relent-
eth. 200

Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love torment
eth?

O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind. 204

'What am I that thou shouldst contemn me
this?

Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor
kiss?

Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute: 208

Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead, 212
Statue contenting but the eye alone,

Thing like a man, but of no woman bred;
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,

For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue, 217

And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:

And now she weeps, and now she fain would
speak, 221

And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand;
 Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground 224
 Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
 She would, he will ~~not in her arms~~ be bound;
 And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
 She locks her lily fingers one in one, 228

Fondling, she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here
 Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
 I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
 Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
 Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry, 233
 Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough,
 Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
 Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
 To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
 Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
 No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark, 240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
 That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
 Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
 He might be buried in a tomb so simple; 244
 Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
 Why, there Lovelly'd and there he could not die.

These lovely eaves, these round enchanting pits,
 Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
 Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
 Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking? 250
 Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
 To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
 Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
 The time is spent, her object will away, 255
 And from her twining arms doth urge releasing:
 'Pity,' she cries; 'some favour, some remorse!'
 Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo! from forth a copse that neighbours by,
 A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud, 260
 Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
 And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud:
 The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
 Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds, 265
 And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
 The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
 Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder; 268
 The iron bit he crushes 'tween his teeth,
 Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd; his bridle hanging idle
 Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end; 272
 His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
 As from a furnace, vapours doth he send;
 His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
 Shows his hot courage and his high desire. 276

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
 With gentle majesty and modest pride;
 Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
 As who should say, 'Lo! thus my strength is tried'; 280
 And this I do to captivate the eye
 Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What reeketh he his rider's angry stir,
 His flattering 'Holla,' or his 'Stand, I say?' 284
 What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
 For rich comparisons or trapping gay?
 He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
 Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
 In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship exceeds,
 As if the dead the living should exceed; 292
 So did this horse excel a common one,
 In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
 Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide, 296
 High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
 Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
 Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
 Save a proud rider on so proud a back, 300

Sometimes he sends far off, and there he stares;
 Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
 To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
 And wher' he run or fly they know not whether;
 For through his mane and tail the high wind sings, 305
 Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
 She answers him as if she knew his mind; 308
 Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
 She puts on outward straggleness, seems unkind, Spurns at his love and scorns the heat he feels,
 Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent, 313
 He vails his tail that, like a falling plume
 Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent;
 He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.
 His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd, 317
 Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him;
 When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear, 320
 Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
 With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
 As they were mad, unto the wood they hie
 them,
 Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly
 them. 324

All swoll with chafing, down Adonis sits.
 Banning his boisterous and unruly beast;
 And now the happy season once more fits,
 That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest:
 For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
 When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
 Burneth more hotly; swelleth with more rage:
 So of concealed sorrow may be said; 333
 Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
 But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
 The client breaks, as desperate in his suit. 336

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,—
 Even as a dying coal revives with wind,—
 And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
 Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind.
 Taking no notice that she is so nigh, 341
 For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
 How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
 To note the fighting conflict of her hue, 345
 How white and red each other did destroy;
 But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
 It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat, 349
 And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
 Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels: 352
 His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
 As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O! what a war of looks was then between them;
 Her eyes petitioners to his eyes spring; 356
 His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen
 them;
 Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing;
 And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
 With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did
 rain. 360

Full gently now she takes him by the hand
 A lily prison'd in a goal of snow,
 Or ivory in an alabaster band;
 So white a friend enlight's so white a foe: 364
 This beauteous combat, willful and unwilling
 Show'd like two silver doves that sit a billing

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
 'O fairest mover on this mortal round, 368
 Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
 For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee, Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.' 372

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'
 'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt
 have it;
 O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
 And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
 Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
 Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go;
 My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, 380
 And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
 I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:
 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.' 384

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
 Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
 Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
 Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire: 388
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath
 none;
 Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
 Scarcely master'd with a leathern rein! 392
 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee.
 He held such petty bondage in disdain;
 Throwing the base thong from his bending
 crest,
 Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed, 397
 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
 His other agents aim at like delight? 400
 Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
 And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee, 404
 To take advantage on presented joy;
 Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach
 thee.
 O learn to love; the lesson is but plain.
 And once made perfect, never lost again.' 408

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it,
 Unless it be a bear, and then I chase it;
 'Tis much to horror, and I will not owe it:
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it; 412
 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs and weeps and all but with a
 breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd, 417
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:
The colt that's back'd and burleu'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong, 420

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat;
Removing your slege from my unyielding heart;
To love's alarms it will not ope the gate: 424 Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery;
For where a heart is hard, they make no
battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue?

O! would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing;
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune, harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding. 432

'Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible: 436
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, 440
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still'tory of thy face excell'g Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling. 444

But O! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four;
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid Suspicion double-look the door, 448
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?'

Once more the ruby-colour'd portai open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield; 452
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wrack to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advis'dly she marketh: 457
Even as the wind is hush'd before it ralneth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh.
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, 460
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun.
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth; 464
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping unakes it red; 463

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did tbluk to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her! 472
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard, 476
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kias her still. 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-leaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the world reliev-
eth: 484
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illum'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine,
Were never four such laups together mix'd, 489
Had not his elonded with his brows' replne;
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave
light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night. 492

'O! where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary eveu?
Do I delight to die, or life desire? 496
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eyes' shrew'd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain 501
That they have murder'd this poor heart of
mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen. 504

'Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O! never let their crimson liveries wear;
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year: 508
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented, 513
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips. 516

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone? 520 Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?'

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me; 525
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green stalks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste. 528

'Look! the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west;
The owl, night's herald, shrleaks, 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest, 532
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's
light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.

'Now let me say good night, and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss,' 536
'Good night,' quoth she; and ere he says adieu,
The honey fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfet, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth, 545
Their lips together glu'd, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth; 548
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the prey
so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil, 552
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back, 557
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's wrack.

Hot, falst, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling, 560
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing, 567
Cblefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission.
Affection falnts not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd. 572
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last. 576

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart, 580
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence inaged in his breast.

'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sleek heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?'
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends. 588

'The boar!' quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheeks, she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws: 592
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove, 597
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To cllp Elysiun and to lack her joy. 600

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfet by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw, 604
The waru effects which she in him finds missing,
She seeks to kndle with continual kissing.

But all lu vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd; 608
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;
-he's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd;
'Fie, fie!' he says, 'you crush me; let me go;
'You have no reason to withhold me so.' 612

Thou hadst been gone; quoth she, 'sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the boar.

O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore, 616
Whose tusles never sheath'd he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

'O! his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes; 620
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his crooked tusles
slay. 624

His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easil' harm'd;
Being treful, on the lion he will venture: 628
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him part, through whom he rushes,

'Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes; 632
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, wondrous dread!
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead. 636

'O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends. 640
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? And fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boiling heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my
breast. 648

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry 'Kill, kill!' 652
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy, 657
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers lu mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye 661
The pleture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore; 664
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the Imagination? 668
The thought of it doth make my faint heart
bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow. 672

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare: 676
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the winds, and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many mists through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes. 684

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their
smell,
And sometime where earth-delving couies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell, 688
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt, 692
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo re-piles,
As if another chase were in the skies. 696

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still;
Anon their loud alarms he doth hear; 700
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

'Thou shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way; 704
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch.
Each shadow unakes him stop, each murmur
stay;

'For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev'd by any. 708

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize, 712
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where,' quoth
he:

'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends: 716
The night is spent,' 'Why, what of that?' quoth
she.

'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.'

'But if thou fall, O! then imagine this, 721
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves: so do thy lips 724

Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn.
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shew, 725
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine;

Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's despite,

To shame the sun by day and her by night, 732

'And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature.
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature: 736
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood, 740
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attain
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood;

Surfets, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,

Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies 745
But in one minute's flight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the mid-day sun.

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns, 752
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light. 756

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must
have,

If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity? 760
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife, 764
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do
slay,

Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again 769
Into your kile over-handled theme;

The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-faced night, desire's foul nurse, 773

Your treasle makes me like you worse and worse.

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own, 776

Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine
ear,

And will not let a false sound enter there; 780

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest. 784
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groau,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love, 789
That lends embracements unto every stranger.

You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the hawk to lust's abuse. 792

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name:
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame; 796
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon be-reaves,

As caterp'ars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun; 800
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done.
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies. 804

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen: 808
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark land runs apace; 813
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distressed.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye; 816

Which after him she darts, as she on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night 821
Fold in the object that did feel her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood, 824
Or astonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way. 828

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans.
That all the neighbour eaves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled: 832
'Ayme!' she cries, and twenty times, 'Woe, woe.'
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She mark'd them, begins a wailing note,
And sings temporarily a woeful ditty; 836
How love makes young men thrall and old men
dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so. 840

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun, 845
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites; 848
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says, 'Tis so;' they answer all, 'Tis so;'
And would say after her, if she said 'No.' 852

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty; 850
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good mornow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, 853
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a sou that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove, 865
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily, 869
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay;
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake. 876

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder; 880
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place, 885
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud;
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him
first. 888

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling
part; 892
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,
Till, cheering up her senses sore dismay'd, 896
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no
more;
And with that word she spied the hunted
boar, 900

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled hoth together,

A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:

This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways,
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,

Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;

And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,

Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;

So she at these sad sighs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,'—thus chides she Death,—
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean

To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead, O no! It cannot be,
Soeug his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it;
O yes! It may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.

Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spok'd,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee erop a weed, thou pluck'at a flower.

Love's golden arrow at him should have fled.
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou [groan] such weeping?

What may a heavy groan advantage 'her?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.'

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vall'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;

But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O! how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow;

Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,

Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions through her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
But none is best; then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman ho! ho!
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well;
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;

For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,

To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love! how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous;
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes:

Despair and hope make thee ridiculous;
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought,
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him all to naught,

Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings,

Impetuous supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear
Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe; 1000
Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
He wreak'd on him, invisible commander; 1004
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he's author of my slander;
Grief hath two tongues; and never woman
yet,
Could rule them both without ten women's wit.' 1008

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate; 1012 Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and stories
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

'O Jove!' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind 1016
To wall his death who lives and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear 1021
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;
Trifles, unvisited with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.'
Even at this word she hears a merry horn, 1025
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately sples 1029
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew: 1032

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backwards in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again; 1036
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain; 1040
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan, 1044

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound. 1043
This mutiny each part doth so surpris:
That from their dark beds once more leap her
eyes;

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd 1052
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed. 1056

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth,
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead: 1060
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem
three; 1064
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face secus twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled. 1068

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas! poor world, what treasure hast thou lost?
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing? 1076
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or anything ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and
true;
But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died with
him. 1080

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss
you: 1084
But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone, 1089
Play with his locks; then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in city of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears. 1092

'To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear
him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey. 1097
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow In the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills; 1100
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries. 1104

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-shouted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave: 1108
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear, 1112
Who did not wiet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd unaware the tusk In his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accurst.' 1120
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, 1125
As if they heard the woeful word she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies; 1128

Two glasses where herself herself bebed
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect: 1132
'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That, you being dead, the day should yet be
light.

'since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend: 1136
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end,
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low;
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud, 1141
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak, Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to
speak.

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to treat the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet, 1149
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear; 1153
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set discension 'twixt the son and sire; 1160
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustions matter is to fire'
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their love shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd 1165
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the
blood 1169
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to
smell,
'Comparing it to her Adonis' breath; 1172
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is left from her by death:
She creeps the stalk, and in the breach appears Green dropping sap, which she compares to
tears. 1176

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire, 1180
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
 Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
 Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
 My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
 night:
 There shall not be one minute in an hour
 Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
 And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
 Their mistress, mounted, through the empty
 skies
 In her light chariot quickly is convey'd; Holding their course to Paphos, where their
 queen
 Means to immure herself and not be seen.

The Rape of Lucrece.

To the Right Honourable Henry Wriothesley,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; .. meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS,—for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus,—after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullus, to be cruelly murdered, and contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper, every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife—though it were late in the night—spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and reveling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, and another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and the whole manner of his dealing, and ~~withal suddenly~~ stabbed herself. When done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

The Rape of Lucrece.

1

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Happly that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;
Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun;
An explr'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apology be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows,
O! rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old!

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd
Which of them both should underprop her fame:
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;
Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argu'd by beauty's red and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right:
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight;
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be
kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow
tongue—
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so—
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil,
Birds never linn'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in platts of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never eop'd with stranger eyes,
 'Could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
 Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies 101
 Writ in the glassy margents of such books:
 She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no
 hooks;
 Nor could she moralize his wanton sight, 104
 More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
 Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
 And decks with praises Coliattine's high name,
 Made glorious by his manly chivalry 109
 With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
 Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,
 And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither, 113
 He makes excuses for his being there:
 No cloudy show of stormy hustering weather
 Doth yet in this fair welkin once appear; 116
 Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
 Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
 And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed, 120
 Intending weariness with heavy spright;
 For after supper long he questioned
 With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
 Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
 And every one to rest themselves betake, 125
 Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake.

As one of them doth Tarquin lie revolving
 The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining; 128
 Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
 Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:

Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
 And when great treasure is the meed propos'd,
 Though death be adjunct, there's no death
 suppos'd. 133

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
 For what they have not, that which they possess
 They scatter and unloose it from their bond, 136
 And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
 Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
 Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
 That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life 141
 With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
 And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
 That one for all, or all for one we gage; 144
 As life for honour in fell battles' rage;
 Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost
 The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill we leave to be 148
 The things we are for that which we expect;
 And this ambitious foul infirmity,

In having much, torments us with defect
 Of that we have: so then we do neglect 152
 The thing we have: and, all for want of wit,
 Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
 Pawning his honour to obtain his lust, 156
 And for himself himself he must forsake:
 Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
 When shall he think to find a stranger just,
 When he himself himself confounds, betrays 162
 To slanderous tongues and wretched hateful days? 161

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
 When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;
 No comfortable star did lend his light, 164
 No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries:
 Now serves the season that they may surprise
 The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still,
 While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed, 169
 Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
 Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
 Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
 But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,
 Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
 Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth, 176
 That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
 Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
 Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
 And to the flame thus speaks advisedly: 180
 'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
 So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
 The dangers of his loathsome enterprise, 184
 And in his inward mind he doth debate
 What following sorrow may on this arise:
 Then looking scornfully, he doth despise
 His naked armour of still-slaughter'd life, 188
 And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
 To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
 And ere, unallow'd thoughts, before you blot
 With y<sup>e</sup> cleanliness that which is divine; 191
 Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
 Let fair humanity abhor the deed
 That stunts and stains love's modest snow-white weed. 196

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
 O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
 O Impious act, including all foul harms!
 A martial man to be soft fancy's slave! 200
 True valour still a true respect should have;
 Then my digression is so vile, so base,
 That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive;
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity shan'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy;
Who buys a minute's mirth to wall a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy,
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crop,
Would with the sceptre straight be struck
Down?

'If Collatinus dreamt of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frowl joints shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?

The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lay in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quit of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is; ay, if the fact be known;
Hateful it is; there is no hate in loving;
I'll beg her love; but she is not her own;
The worst is but denial and reproving;
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing,
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
Two frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the war-like hand
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O! how her fear did make her colour rise;

First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

'And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
When at she smil'd with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
His love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'What want I then for colour or excuses?
All our senses are dumb when beauty plealeth;
Our wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Our hearts are rest in the heart that shadows
Plealeth.

'What want I then for colour or excuses?
All our senses are dumb when beauty plealeth;
Our wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Our hearts are rest in the heart that shadows
Plealeth.

'Then, full of fear, awant'ly debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye;
Sad pause and deep regard besecm the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.
Desire my plume's beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking there, shall be surpris'd Hes'?

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of fond hope, and full of fond request,
Both which, as servants to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a burgue, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly face sits,
And in the self-same seat sits Collatine;
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so fast will not lide ne;
But with a purer eye seeks to the heart,
Which, once corrupted, makes the worse part;

And then in heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours,
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe,
By reprobate desire thus made led,
The Roman lord marcheth Lucrece led.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforced, retire his want;
But as they open, they all return still,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard;
The threshold grates the door to haste his
heart;
Night wandering weasels
They fright him, yet he stirs his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay
And blows the smoke of it into his face;
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, which kind desire Scorch,

Puffs forth another wind that fires the
And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucrece's glove, wherein her needful tricks:
He takes it from the russet where it lies,

al they in that darksome prison died,
had they seen the period of their ill;
illatine again, by Lucrece's side,
his clear bed might have reposed still:
it they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
and the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between those hills her head entomb'd is:
Where, like a virtuous monument she lies,
The be-should'r'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Went the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Should like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night,
Her eyes, like marigolds, and sheath'd their
light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her
breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unacquor'd, 438
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred ;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about 412
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted ?
What did he note but strongly he desir'd :
What he beheld, on that he firmly dot'd, 415
And in his will his willful eye he tir'd.
With more than admiration he admir'd
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin. 420

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified ; 424
Slack'd, not suppress'd ; for standug by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Into a greater uproar tempts his veins :

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting, 428

Obturate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting,

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting : 432
Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking,

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand ; 436
His hand, as proud of such a dignity, Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his
stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her laud ;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale, 440
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset, 444
And fright her with confusion of their cries :
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up
eyes,
Who, sleeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dunn'd and con-
troill'd. 448

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghostly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking ; 452
What terror 'tis ! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturb'd, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears, 456
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies ;
She dares not look ; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antles, ugly in her eyes :
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries ; 460
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
Rude run to batter such an ivory wall ! 464
May feel her heart,—poor citizen,—distress'd
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her hulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity, 468
To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe ;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter
chin, 472

The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show ;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill. 476

Thus he replies : ' The colour in thy face,—
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,—
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale ; 480
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort ; the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

' Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide : 484
Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my
might ; 488
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

' I see what crosses my attempt will bring ;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends ; 492
I think the honey guarded with a sting ;
All this, beforehand, counsel comprehend :
But will is deaf and hears no heedful friends ;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty, 496
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law of duty.

' I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed ;
But nothing can affection's course control, 500
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity ;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infancy.' 504

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threats if he mount he dies: 508

So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucrecia, marking what he tells
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy
thee: 512

If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee:
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay.

To kill thine honour with thy life's decay; 516
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye; 520
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless lustardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass elted up in rimes, 524
And sung by children in succeeding times.

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend;
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm done to a great good end, 528
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified. 532

'Then for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take.
The blemish that will never be forgot; 536
Worse than a stovish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye 540
He ronseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure plety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws, 544
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,

In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get, 549

Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,

Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays, 552
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse pant-
eth:

Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly, 556
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust though marble wear with raining. 560

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is unfix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace. 564
She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove, 568
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's
oath,

By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire, 572
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended; 576

Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow 580
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave
me; 3

Myself a weakling, do not, then, ensnare me; 584
Thou look'st not like deceit, do him deceive me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave
thee;

If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.

'All which together, like a troubled ocean, 588
Beat at thy rocky and wrack-threatening heart.
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert. 592
O! if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate;
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

'In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee; 596
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely
name. 4

Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

'How will thy shame be soiled in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring! 604
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a king?
O! be remembered no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away; 608
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

'This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear, 612
When they in thee the like offences prove.
If but for fear of this, they will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

'And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn? 617
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it
thee, 624
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil, 628
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may
say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the
way?

'Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another. 632
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O! how are they wrapp'd in with infamies 636
That from their own misdeeds askeance their
eyes.

To thee, to thee, my heav'd up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash reller:
I sue for exile'd majesty's repeal; 640
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy dotting eyne,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine.'

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this tide.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret: 648
The petty streams that pay a dally debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls
haste
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood 653
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good, 656
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is heard,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified; 660
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler
grave;
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's
foot, 664
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'—
'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I will not hear
thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate, 668
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear
thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.' 672

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseem, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries, 677
Till with her own white fleece her voice con-troll'd
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears 680
He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O! that prone lust should stain so pure a bed,
The spots whereof could weeping purify, 685
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire convert, to cold disdain:
Pure Chastity is rifed of her store, 692
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look! as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight;
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O! deeper sin than bottomless conceit
 Can comprehend in still imagination; 701
 Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
 Ere he can see his own abomination. 704
 While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
 Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
 Till like a jade Self will himself doth tire.

And then with hauk and lean discolour'd cheek,
 With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless
 pace, 709
 Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
 Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his ease:
 The flesh belug proud, Desire doth fight with Grace, 712
 For there it revels; and when that decays,
 The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
 Who this accomplishment so hotly chas'd; 716
 For now against himself he sounds this doom,
 That through the length of times he stands dis-
 grac'd;
 Besides, his son's fair temple is defac'd;
 To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
 To ask the spotted princess how she fares. 721

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
 Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
 And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
 Her immortality, and made her thrall 725
 To living death, and pain perpetual:
 Which in her prescience she controlled still,
 But her foresight could not forestall their
 will. 728

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
 A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
 Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
 The scar that will despite of cure remain; 732
 Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
 She bears the load of lust he left behind,
 And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sully thence, 736
 She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
 He scowls and hates himself for his offence,
 She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear;
 He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear, 740
 She stays, exclaiming on the dreadful night:
 He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd de-
 light.

He thence departs a heavy ead,
 She there remains a hopeless 744
 He in his speed looks for the morning light,
 She prays she never may behold the day;
 'For day,' quoth she, 'night's 'scapes doth open
 hy,
 And my true eyes have never practis'd how
 To cloak offences with a cunning brow. 747

'They think not but that every eye can see
 The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
 And therefore would they still in darkness be,
 To have their unseen sin remain untold; 752
 For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
 And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
 Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest, 757
 And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
 She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
 And bids it leap from thence where it may find 760
 Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
 Fraztle with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
 Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell! 764
 Dim register and notary of shame!
 Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
 Vast slu-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
 Blind muffled bawd! dark harlour for defame!
 Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
 With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
 Since thou art guilty of my curseless crime, 772
 Muster thy mist to meet the eastern light,
 Make war against proportion'd course of time;
 Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
 His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed, 776
 Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
 't their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sleek
 The life of purity, the supreme fair, 780
 Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;
 And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
 That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light
 May set at noon and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child,
 The silver shining queen he would distain;
 Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defild,
 Through Night's black bosom should not peep
 again; 788
 So should I have co-partners in my pain;
 And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
 As palmers' chant makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me, 792
 To cross their arms and hang their heads with mine.
 To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
 But I alone alone must sit and pine,
 Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine, Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans, 797
 Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

'O Night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face 800
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possess' d of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade. 805

'Make me not object to the tell tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow
The story of sweet chastity's decay, 808
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow;
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defiance, 817
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted: 821
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted, and undeserv'd reproach to him allotted 824
That is as clear from this attain of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! chest-wounding, private scar! 828
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas! how many bear such shameful blows, 832
Which not themselves, but he that gives them
knows.

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee, 836
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept. 840

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Couling from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him: 844
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue: O! unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil.

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden hud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests? 852

But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coffers up his gold
Is plagu'd with cramps and gouts and painful fits; 854
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useles barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain 860
But torquent that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it: 864
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed soras
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Urusly blasts wait on the tender spring: 868
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
flowers;
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours: 872
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

'O Opportunity! thy guilt is great, 876
Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;
Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displeas'd laud:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief! 888

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name, 892
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vaulties can never last.
How comes it, then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee? 896

'When wilt thou be the imble suppliant's
friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd? 900
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for
thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps; 904
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds: 908
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid: 912
They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He gratis comes; and thou art well appall'd
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me 916
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, 920
Guilty of incest, that abomination;
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom. 924

'Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare; 928
Thou nursest all, and murderest all that are;
O! hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time,
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose? 932
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchain'd me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes; 936
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things, 941
To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To ruate proud buildings with thy hours, 944
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents, 948
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild, 956
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguill'd,

To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends: 964
O! this dread night, wouldst thou one hour
come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack.

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity, 969
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
And the dre thought of his committed evil 972
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances 976
To make him moan, but pity not his moans;
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than
stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wildier to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair, 981
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave, 984
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdain'd scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort; 989
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport; 992
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wall the ausing of his time.

'O Time! thou tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this
ill; 996

At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill:
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base would such an office have 1000
As slanderous deathsmen to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing 1004
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest fate.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the lilt away ;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay. 1012
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day.

Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaze'd upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools, 1016
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters:
To trembling clients be you mediators: 1022
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my ease is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night; 1024
In vain I cavil with my infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite;
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good, 1028
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee, 1032
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame;
Since thou could'st not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.' 1036

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no slaughter-house no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath;
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life: 1045
I fear'd by Tarquin's falsehood to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife: 1049
So am I now: O no! that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifed me.

'O! that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die. 1053
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy.
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay? 1057

'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated troth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so. 1060
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This hasty graft shall never come to growth;

He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art doating father of his fruit. 1064

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1070
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attainr, 1072
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses;
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain-spring th' feeds a dale. 1077
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure
tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow, 1080
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when, lo! the blushing morrow
Leads light to all fair eyes that light will borrow;
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see, 1084
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits
weeping;
To whom she sobbling speaks: 'O eye of eyes!
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping; 1088
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by
night.' 1092

Thus evils she with everything she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:
Oh woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild, 1097
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care, 1103
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues: 1107
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words,
Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody;
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is dead with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd 1112
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the saive cloth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it
good; 1117

Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'er-flows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes en-tomb' 1121

Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb;
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests: 1125
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with
tears.

Come, Phillomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair: 1129
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear: 1132
For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Terens descant'st better skill.

And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy
part

To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I, 1136
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument, shall tune our heart-strings to true languish-
ment. 1141

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows nor parching heat nor freezing cold,
We will find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kluds:

Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle
minds.' 1143

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily; 1152
So with herself is she in mummy.
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach's deliver.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack! what were it
But with my body my poor soul's pollution? 1157
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion, 1160

Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine? 1164
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay; 1168
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy: 1173
Then let it not be call'd impety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul. 1176

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath, 1181
Which by him tainted, shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'Mine honour I'll bequeath unto the knife 1184
That wounds my body so dishonour'd.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead;
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred; 1188
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee? 1192
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be.
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

'This brief abridgment of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skles and ground; 1200
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my
wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will; 1205
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint net, faint heart, but stontly say, "So be it:"
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer
thee:

Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be?

This plot of death when sadly she had hid, 1212
 And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
 With untun'd tongue she hoarsely call'd her maid,
 Whose swift obedience to her mistress lies;
 For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers
 flies, 1216
 Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
 With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
 And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, 1221
 For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
 But durst not ask of her audaciously
 Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, 1224
 Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
 Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
 Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet
 Her circled eyne, enforce'd by sympathy 1229
 Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
 Who in a salt-way'd ocean quench their light,
 Which makes the maid weep like the dewy
 night. 1232

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
 Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling;
 One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
 No cause but company of her drops spilling;
 Their gentle sex to weep are often willing, 1237
 Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
 And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts:

For men have marble, women waten minds, 1240
 And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
 The weak oppress'd, the Impression of strange kinds
 Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
 Then call them not the authors of their ill, 1244
 No more than wax shall be accounted evil
 Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,
 Lays open all the little worms that creep; 1248
 In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
 Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep:
 Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
 Though men can cover crimes with bold stern
 looks, 1252
 Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
 But chide rough winter that the flower hath
 kill'd:
 Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
 Is worthy blame. O! let it not be hid 1257
 Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
 With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
 Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view, 1261
 Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
 Of present death, and shame that might ensue
 By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
 Such danger to resistance did belong,
 That dying fear through all her body spread;
 And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak 1263
 To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
 'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
 Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?

If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, 1272
 Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
 If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—and there she stay'd
 Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from hence?'—
 'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid, 1277
 'The more to blame my sluggard negligence:
 Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;
 Myself was stirring ere the break of day, 1280
 And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
 She would request to know your heaviness.'
 'O! peace,' quoth Lucrece; 'if it should be told,
 The repetition cannot make it less; 1285
 For more it is than I can well express:
 And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
 When more is felt than one hath power to
 tell. 1288

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen:
 Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
 What should I say? One of my husband's men
 Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear 1292
 A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
 Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
 The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write, 1296
 First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:
 Conceit and grief no anger combat fight;
 What wit sets down is blotted straight with
 will;
 This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill: 1300
 Much like a press of people at a door,
 Through her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord
 Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee, 1304
 Health to thy person: next vouchsafe this ford,
 If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see,
 Some present speed to come and visit me.
 So I commend me from our house in grief:
 My woes are tedious, though my words are brief. 1309

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertaintly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know 1312
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery.
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse. 1316

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her 1320
From that suspicion which the world might bear
her.

To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them
told; 1324

For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear:

'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear; 1328
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,

And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste.'
The post attends, and she delivers it. 1333

Charging the sour-fac'd groom to lie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast.
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems: 1336

Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsles to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no. 1340

And forth with bashful innocence doth lie:
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
shame: 1344

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily 1348
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age
Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gaze.

His kindled duty kindled their mistrust, 1352
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's
lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd;
His earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:

The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish. 1357
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. 1360
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pansing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy. 1363
Threatning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the cancelled painter drew so proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there, 1373
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life;
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's strife;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring plow, 1380
Begrin'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust: 1384
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity; 1390
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble,
That one would swear he saw them quake and
tremble. 1393

In Ajax and Ulysses, O! what art
Of physiognomy might one behold;
The face of either either's heart; 1396
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand, 1403
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight.
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly Thin winding breath, which puri'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces, 1408
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice;
All jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice,
Some high, some low, the painter was so nice;
The scalps of many, almost hid behind, 1413
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear:
Here one being throng'd bears back, all bolt'n and red; 1417
Another smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, 1422
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there:
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear, 1424
Grip'd in an armed hand; himself behind,
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagin'd. 1428

And from the walls of strong-beseleg'd Troy,
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seem'd to appear,—
Like bright things stain'd—a kind of heavy fear.

And, from the strand of Dardan, where they fought, 1436
To Simols' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and than 1440
Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join and shoot their foam at Simols' banks.

To this well painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stell'd. 1444
Many she sees where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd,
Till she despairing Heecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which blessing under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies,

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign:
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were dis-guis'd; 1452
Of what she was no semblance did remain
Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein, Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes
had fed,
Show'd life in prison'd in a body dead, 1457

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1460
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her
wrong,
To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so
long, 1473
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear, 1477
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye, 1479
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many more?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1483
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe;
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general? 1484

'Lo! here weeps Heecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swoons,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds, 1488
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had dotting Priam check'd his son's desire, Troy had been bright with fame and not with
fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell, 1493
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell;
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell 1496
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament; 1502
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content:
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes, 1504
mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble guilt, calm looks, eyes wailing still, 1522
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe
Checks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have

But, like a constant and confirmed devil, 1515
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust 1516
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story 1521
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words, like wildfires, burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry, 1524
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill, 1523
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied. 1531

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile,—
She would have said,—'can lurk in such a look;'
But Tarquit's shape came in her mind the
while, 1536
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'
took:

'It cannot be,' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked name; 1540

For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguill'd 1544
With outward honesty, but yet deff'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Snon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds; 1552
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold, 1556
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hobbl,
Only to flatter fools and unake them bold:
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.' 1561

Here, all entranc'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails, 1564
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
'Fool, fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.' 1568

This ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining;
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining; 1572
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought,
That she with pained images hath spent; 1577
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surprise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent. 1580
It enseth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home the lord and other company; 1584
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distain'd eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-falls in her dim element 1588
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when the sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazed in his sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though soot in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares. 1593
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance. 1596

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: 'What unthought ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling
stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent? 1601
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
 Ere once she can discharge one word of woe :
 At length address'd to answer his desire,
 She modestly prepares to let them know
 Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe ; 1613
 While Collatine and his consort of lords
 With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this passion in her watery nest
 Begins the sad diege of her certain ending. 1612
 Few words, ' quoth she, ' small at the trespass best,
 Where no excuse can give the fault amending :
 In me more woe than words are now depending ;
 And my laments would be drawn out too long,
 To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

' Then be this all the task it hath to say :
 Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
 A stranger came, and on that pillow lay 1620
 Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head ;
 And what wrong else may be imagined
 By foul enforcement might be done to me,
 From that, alas ! thy Lucrece is not free. 1624

' For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
 With shining falchion in my chamber came
 A creeping creature with a flaming light,
 And softly cried, " Awake, thou Roman dame, 1623
 And entertain my love : else lasting shame
 On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
 If thou my love's desire do contradict.

" For some hard-favour'd groom, of thine, " quoth
 he, 1632
 " Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
 I'll murder straight, and thou I'll slaughter thee,
 And swear I found you where you did fulfil
 The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill 1636
 The leechers in their deed : this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy."

' With this I did begin to start and cry,
 And then against my heart he set his sword, 1640
 Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
 I should not live to speak another word ;
 So should my shame still rest upon record,
 And never be forgot in mighty Rome 1644
 The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

' Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
 And far the weaker with so strong a fear :
 My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak ;
 No rightful plea might plead for justice there :
 His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650
 That my poor beauty had parloin'd his eyes ;
 And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner dies.

' O ! teach me how to make mine own excuse,
 Or, at the least, this refuge let me find ;
 Though my gross blood be stain'd with this
 abuse,
 Immaculate and spotless is my mind ; 1656
 That was not forc'd ; that never was inclin'd

To necessary yieldings, but still pure
 Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.

Lo ! here the help'd merchant of this loss, 1660
 With head declin'd, and voice damn'd up with
 woe,

With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across,
 From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
 The grief away that stops his answer so : 1664
 But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain ;
 What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
 Ostruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
 Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride 1670
 Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast ;
 In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past :
 Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
 To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
 And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh :
 ' Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth 1676
 Another power ; no flood by raining slaketh.
 My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
 More feeling painful : let it then suffice
 To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

' And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
 For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me :
 Be suddenly revenged on my foe,

Public, mine, his own : suppose thou dost defend
 me 1684

From what is past : the help that thou shalt lend
 me

Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die ;
 For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

' But ere I name him, you, fair lords, ' quoth she, — Speaking to those that came with Collatine, —
 ' Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
 With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine ;
 For 'tis a meritorious fair design 1692
 To chase injustice with revengeful arms :
 Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.

At this request, with noble disposition
 Each present lord began to promise aid, 1696
 As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
 Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd :
 But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
 The protestation stops. ' O ! speak, ' quoth she,
 ' How may this forced stain be wiped from me ?

' What is the quality of mine offence,
 Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance ?
 May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
 My low-declin'd honour to advance ? 1705
 May any terms acquit me from this chance ?
 The poison'd fountain clears itself again ;
 And why not I from this compelled stain ?

With this, they all at once began to cry, 1709
 Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
 While with a joyless smile she turns away
 The face, that map which deep impression bears
 Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears, 1713
 'No, no, quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
 By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
 She throws forth Tarquin's name, 'He, he,' she says, 1717

But more than he' her poor tongue could not
 speak;

Till after many accents and delays,
 Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
 She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he, 1721
 That guides this hand to give this wound to
 me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
 A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheath'd; 1724

That blow did ball it from the deep recess
 Of that polluted prison where it breath'd;
 Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd
 Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly 1728

Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
 stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
 Full Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed, 1732
 Himself on her self-slaughter body threw;
 And from the purple fountain of his drew
 The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
 Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide two slow rivers, that the crimson blood circles her body in on every side,
 Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood, 1740
 Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood,
 Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
 And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congeal'd face, 1744
 Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
 Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
 And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
 Corrupted blood some watery token shows; 1748
 And blood untainted still doth red abide,
 Blushing at that which is so putrified.

Daughter, dear daughter! old Lucretius cries,
 That life was mine which thou hast here
 depriv'd 1752

If in the child the father's image lies,
 Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd?
 Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd.
 If children predecease progenitors, 1757
 We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
 In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
 But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
 Shows me a bare bon'd death by time outworn,
 I! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
 And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
 That I no more can see what once I was, 1764

'O Time! cease thou thy course, and last no
 longer,
 If they surcease to be that should survive,
 Shall 'tend death make conquest of the stronger,
 And leave the faltering feeble souls alive? 1768
 The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
 Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see
 Thy father die, and not thy father thee!'

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream, 1772
 And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
 And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
 He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
 And counterfeit to die with her a space; 1776
 Till mauly shame bids him possess his breath
 And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
 Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
 Who, mad that sorrow should his use control
 Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
 Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng Weak words so thick, come in his poor heart's aid, 1784
 That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tis my poor unweeded plain,
 But through his tears, that I have used he tore.
 This windy tempest that I have used he tore, 1788
 Held back his sorrow, that I have used he tore;
 At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
 Then son and father weep with equal strife
 Who should weep most, for daughter or for
 wife, 1792

The one doth call her his, the other his,
 Yet neither may possess the dead, they lay.
 The father says, 'She's mine, 'tis mine she is,'
 Replies her husband; 'do not take away 1796
 My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
 He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
 And only must be walf'd by Collatine.'

'O!' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life 1800
 Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'
 'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
 I lov'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
 'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd 1804
 The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life, Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my
 wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece's side
 Seeing such emulation in their woe, 1303
 Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
 Burying in Lucrece's wound his folly's show,
 He with the Romans was esteemed so
 As silly-jeering idlers are with kings, 1311
 Forsportive words and uttering foolish things :

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
 Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
 And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly, 1316
 To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes,
 'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise !'
 Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
 Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe ?' 1321
 Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds ?

Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
 For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds ?
 Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds : 1325
 Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
 To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
 In such relenting dew of lamentations ;' 1329
 But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
 To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
 That they will suffer these abominations : 1333

Since Rome herself in them doth stand dis-
 grac'd,

By our strong arms from forth her fair streets
 chas'd.

'Now, by the Capitol we adore,
 And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
 By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store, 1337

By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
 And by chaste Lucrece's soul, that late com-plain'd

Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
 We will revenge the death of this true wife.'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
 And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow ;
 And to his protestation urg'd the rest, 1344
 Who, wondering at him, did his words allow :
 Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow ;

And that deep vow, which Brutus made before,
 He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advis'd doom, 1349
 They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence ;
 To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
 And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence : 1351
 Which being done with speedy diligence,
 The Romans plausibly did give consent
 To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

Sonnets.

I.

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripen should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory :
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud burlest thy content
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

II.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv' I thy beauty's use
If thou couldst answer, 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

III.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some
mother,
For where is she so fair whose mear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime;
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember not to be,
Die single, and thine image lies with thee.

IV.

In thrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend?
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free:
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive;
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which used, lives th' executor to be.

V.

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair which fairly doth excel,
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was;
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show; their substance still lives
sweet.

VI.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some vial; treasure then some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which bappies those that pay the willing loans;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times regard'd thee;
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst see
part,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-wild'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine hair.

VII.

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from highest pitch, with weary ear
Like feeble age, he recleth from the day,
The eyes, fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way:
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy:
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not
gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure, thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do, but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming
one,
Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none.'

IX.

Is't for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee like a makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still woe
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.
Look what an unthrifty in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unused, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom
That on himself such murderous slanders casts.

X.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to me,
A kinder thyself, of so improvident
Crime, if thou wilt, thou art beloved of me,
But not loved for myself; let that be clear,
By thy unkindness I myself despise,
Though otherwise the world should win my prize,
That can so vilely use the truest I,
For thou art so possess'd with envy,
That to the world thou wilt sell me.

O! change thy thought that I may hate, by
mind:

Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind hearted prove:
1

Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st

Thou may'st call thine when thou from youth convertest.

Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;
Without this, folly, age, and cold decay: 5

If all were minded so, the times should cease,
And threescore year would make the world away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish:

Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish: 12

She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy die.

XII.

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls, all silver'd o'er with white;

When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
5 Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,

Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow; 12

And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence

save breed, to brave him when he takes thee
down.

XIII.

O! that you were yourself; but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:

So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination, then you were 5

Yourself again, after your self's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold? 12

O! 'tis your fault; but, O! my dear, you know
You had a father: let your son see so,

XIV.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
 And yet methinks I have astronomy,
 But not to tell of good or evil luck,
 Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind,
 Or say with princes if it shall go well,
 By oft predlet that I in heaven find;
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such art
 As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive,
 If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;' 1
 Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
 'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.'

XV.

When I consider every thing that grows
 How in perfection but a little moment,
 That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
 Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
 When I perceive that men as plants increase,
 Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
 Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
 And wear their brave state out of memory,
 Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
 Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
 Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay, 11
 To change your day of youth to sullied night;
 And, all in war with Time for love of you,
 As he takes from you, I engraft you new

XVI.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
 Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
 And fortify yourself in your decay
 With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
 Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
 And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6
 With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
 Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
 So should the lines of life that life repair,
 Which this Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
 Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
 Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
 To give away yourself keeps yourself still;
 And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
 If it were fill'd with your most high deserts,
 Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb,
 Which hides your life and shows not half your
 parts,
 If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
 And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
 The age to come would say 'This poet lies:
 Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.'

So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
 Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
 And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
 And stretch'd metre of an antique song: 12
 But were some child of yours alive that time,
 You should live twice,—in it and in my rhyme.

XVIII.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
 Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
 And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
 Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
 And often is his gold complexion dimm'd; 6
 And every fair from fair sometime declines,
 By chance, or nature's changing course underman'd;
 But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st,
 Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
 When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st; 12
 So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
 So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

XIX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
 And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
 T'pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
 And burn the long-lived phoenix in her blood;
 Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
 And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time, 6
 To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
 But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
 O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
 Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
 In him in thy course untainted do allow
 For heavenly's pattern to succeeding men. 12
 Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
 My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.

A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
 Hast thou, the master mistress of my passion;
 A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;
 An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
 Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
 A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
 Which steals men's eyes and women's souls
 amazeth,
 And for a woman wert thou first created;
 Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a detour,
 And by addition me of thee defeated,
 By adding one thing to my purpose nothing. 12
 But since she prick'd thee out for women's
 pleasure,
 Make be thy love, and thy love's use, their treasure.

XXI.

So is it not with me as with that Muse
 Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
 Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
 And every fair with his fair doth rehearse,
 Making a complement of proud compare,
 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems, 6
 With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
 That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
 O! let me, true in love, but truly write,
 And then believe me, my love is as fair
 As any mother's child, though not so bright
 As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air: 12
 Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
 I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

XXII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
 So long as youth and thou are of one date;
 But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
 Then look I death my days should explate,
 For all that beauty that doth cover thee
 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
 Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me: 6
 How can I then, be elder than thou art?
 O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
 As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
 As tender nurse her babe from faring ill: 12
 Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain:
 Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an imperfect actor on the stage,
 Who with his fear is put besides his part,
 Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
 Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
 heart;
 So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
 The perfect ceremony of love's rite, 6
 And in mine own love's strength seem to decay, O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
 O! let my books be then the eloquence
 And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
 Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
 More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
 O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
 To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit. 12

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
 Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
 My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
 And perspective it is best painter's art.
 For through the painter must you see his skill,
 To find where your true image pictur'd lies: 6
 Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
 That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.

Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have
 done:
 Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for
 me
 Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
 Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee; 12
 Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
 They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
 Of public honour and proud titles boast,
 Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
 Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most,
 Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
 But as the marigold at the sun's eye, 6
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die.
 The painful warrior famouled for fight,
 After a thousand victories once foild,
 Is from the book of honour razed quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he foild: 12
 Then happy I, that love and am belov'd,
 Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
 Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
 To thee I send this written ambassage,
 To witness duty, not to show my wit:
 Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
 May make seem bare, in wanting words to show 6
 it,

But that I hope some good conceit of thine
 In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
 Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
 Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
 And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
 To show me worthy of thy sweet respect: 12
 Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
 Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

XXVII.

Weary with toll, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
 But then begins a journey in my head
 To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd:
 For then my thoughts—from far where I abide—
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee, 6
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
 Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beautiful, and her old face
 new. 12
 Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
 For thee, and for myself no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day oppress'd,
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me, 6
The one by toll, the other to complain
How far I toil, still further off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the
heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night;
When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the
even, 12
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

XXIX.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee,—and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising 11
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate;
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow, 5
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight:
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoan'd moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before. 12
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

XXXI.

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts
Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
And there reigns Love, and all Love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie.

Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give,
That due of many now is thine alone: 12
Their images I lov'd I slew in thee,
And thou—all they—hast all the all of me.

XXXII.

If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen, 6
Reserve them for my love, not for their time,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing
age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage: 12
But since he died, and poets better prove, Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his
love.'

XXXIII.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy,
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face, 6
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
With all triumphant splendour on my brow;
But, out! black! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask'd him from the
now.
Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIV.

Why didst thou promise such a beautiful day,
And make me travel forth with out my cloak,
To bid base clouds (certainly) my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou
break,
To dry the rain on my stain'd beaten face:
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the boss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross. 12
Alas! but those tears are pearl which thy love steal,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXV.

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast
done:

Roses have thorns, and silver mountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorising thy trespass with compare, 6
Myself corrupting, saving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,—
Thy adverse party is thy advocate,—
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate, 12
That I an necessary needs must be
To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

XXXVI.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite, 6
Which, though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me, 11
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit, 6
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give

That I in thy abundance am suffic'd
And by a part of all thy glory live. 11
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; that thou ten times happy be!

XXXVIII.

How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse:
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy praise! stand against thy slight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?

Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rhimers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date. 12

If my slight Muse do please these curious
days,

The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self
bring?
And what is't but mine own when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one, 6
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee, which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave,
To entertain the time with thoughts of love, 11
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain.

XL.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst
before?
No love, my love, that thou mayst true love
call;
All mine was thine before thou hadst this more
Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou ushest; 6
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself decevest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest,
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet, love knows it is a greater grief 11
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with smiles; yet we must not be foes.

XLI.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometimes absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art,
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd; 6
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ay me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there 11
Where thou art forc'd to break a two-fold truth;—
Here, by thy beauty, tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty, being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly,
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love
her;

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

XLIII.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,

How would thy shadow's form form bappy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay!

All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From haunts far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the furthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art
gone,

But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow,
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present absent with swift motion glide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;

Until life's composition be reunit'd
By those sweet messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,

My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,—

A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,—
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To evade this title is lunammel'd

A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determin'd
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's
part:

As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVII.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other;
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,

With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
Or thou not further than my thoughts canst move,

And I am still with them and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might amused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and
part;

And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sun
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects
Against that time when thou shalt strangely

pass,

And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I ensconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,

Since why to love I can allege no cause.

L.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy
friend!'

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee:
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind:
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me
thence?

Till I return, of posting is no need,
O! what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
In winged speed no motion should I know;
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, of perfect love being made,
Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade,—
Since from thee going he went wilful slow,
Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go!

LII.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his eye's unpecked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure,
Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the caruncle.

Sells the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special best
To new unfolding his imprison'd pride:
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph; being lack'd, to hope.

LIII.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, a shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow end,
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new;
Speak of the spring and foison of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know,
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.

O! how much more doth beauty's use seem
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live,
The cambric-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfum'd tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds dis-closes!

But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwood'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made;
And so of you, beautiful and lovely youth,
When that shall vade, my verse distils your truth.

LV.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish
time,
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
 Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
 Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
 Tomorrow sharpen'd in his former might:
 So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
 Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
 To-morrow see again, and do not kill
 The spirit of love with a perpetual dizziness.
 Let this sad interim like the ocean be Which parts the shore, where two contracted

new

Come daily to the banks, that, when they see
 Return of love, more bless'd may be the view; 12
 Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
 Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
 I have no precious time at all to spend,
 Nor services to do, till you require.
 Nor dare I chide the world without-end hour
 Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
 Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
 When you have bid your servant once adieu;
 Nor care I question with my jealous thought
 Where you may be, or your affairs suppose, 12
 But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought,
 Save, where you are how happy you make those.
 So true a fool is love that in your will,
 Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

LVIII.

That god forbid that made me first your slave,
 I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
 Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
 Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
 O! let me suffer, being at your beck,
 The imprison'd absence of your liberty; 6
 And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
 Without accusing you of injury.
 Be where you list, your charter is so strong
 That you yourself may privilege your time
 To what you will; to you it doth belong
 Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime. 12
 I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
 Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains begull'd,
 Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
 The second burden of a former child!
 O! that record could with a backward look,
 Even of five hundred courses of the sun, 6
 Show me your image in some antique book,
 Since mild at first in character was done!

That I might see what the odd world could say

To this compos'd wonder of your frame;
 Wher we are mended, or wher better they,
 Or whether revolution be the same. 12
 O! sure I am, the wits of former days
 To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
 So do our minutes hasten to their end;
 Each changing place with that which goes before,
 In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
 Nativity, once in the main of light,
 Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd, 6
 Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
 And Time that gave doth now his gift confound,
 Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
 And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
 Feels on the rarities of nature's truth, 12
 And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow;
 And yet to times in hope my verse shall
 stand,
 Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
 My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
 Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken, While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
 Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
 So far from home, into my deeds to pry,
 To find out shames and idle hours in me,
 The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
 O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great
 It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake; 6
 For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
 From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
 And all my soul and all my every part;
 And for this sin there is no remedy,
 It is so grounded inward in my heart.
 Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
 No shape so true, no truth of such account; 6
 And for myself mine own worth do define,
 As I all other in all worths surmount.
 But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
 Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
 Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
 Self so self-loving were iniquity. 12
 'Tis thee, myself,—that for myself I praise,
 Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,

Stealing away the treasure of his spring:
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory

My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life:
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
The rich-proud east of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;

When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soll win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store;

When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That Time will come and take my love away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless
sea,

But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey breath hold out

Against the wrackful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,

Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot
back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O! none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry
As to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,

And gibbed honour shamefully misplac'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,

And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly—doctor-like—controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tir'd with all these, from these would I be
gone,

Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXVII.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impetly,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And laze itself with his society?

Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead sealug of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?

Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.

O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;

Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:

In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;

And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view

Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;

All tongues—the voice of souls—give thee that due,

Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;

But those same tongues, that give thee so thine
own,

In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,

And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then,—churls,—their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The soll is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXX.

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve
 Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
 For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd;
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To 'le up envy evermore enlarg'd:
 If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Give warning to the world that I am fled
 From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
 Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 If thinking on me then should make you woe.
 O! If,—I say, you look upon this verse,
 When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay;
 Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O! lest the world should task you to recite
 What merit lived in me, that you should love
 After my death,—dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
 To do more for me than mine own desert,
 And hang more praise upon deceased I
 Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
 O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
 My name be buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
 For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.

That time of year thou may'st in me behold
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold, Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
 In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
 As after sunset fadeth in the west;
 Which by and by black night doth take away,
 Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.

In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
 That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the death-bed whereon it must expire
 Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.
 This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
 To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

LXXIV.

But be contented; when that fell arrest
 Without all bail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,
 Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee:
 The earth can have but earth, which is his
 due;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead;
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered,
 The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
 Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
 Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
 Doubting the fleching age will steal his treasure:
 Now counting best to be with you alone,
 Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure:
 Sometime, all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by clean starved for a look;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took.
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why with the time do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds
 strange?
 Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a noted weed,
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
 O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument;
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is dully new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste ;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory ; 6
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look ! what thy memory cannot contain,
 Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
 Those children nursed, deliver'd from thy brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind. 12
 These offences, so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.

So oft have I invoc'd thee for my Muse
 And found such fair assistance in my verse
 As every alien pen hath got my use
 And under thee their poesy disperse.
 Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing
 And heavy ignorance aloft to fly, 6
 Have added feathers to the learned's wing
 And given grace a double majesty.
 Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
 Whose influence is thine, and born of thee :
 In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
 And arts with thy sweet graces gracest be ; 12
 But thou art all my art, and dost advance
 As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace ;
 But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
 And my sick muse doth give another place.
 I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen ; 6
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live. 12
 Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O ! how I faint when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
 To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame !
 But since your worth—wide as the ocean is,—
 The humble as the proudest swan doth bear, 6
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth wilfully appear.

Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
 Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride ;
 Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
 He of tall building and of goodly pride : 12
 Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
 The worst was this ;—my love was my decay.

LXXXI.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
 Or you survive when I in earth am rotten ;
 From hence your memory death cannot take,
 Although in me each part will be forgotten.
 Your name from hence immortal life shall
 have,
 Though I, once gone, to all the world must die : 6
 The earth can yield me but a common grave,
 When you entomb'd in men's eyes shall lie.
 Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
 Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read ;
 And tongues to be your being shall rehearse, 11
 When all the breathers of this world are dead ;
 You still shall live,—such virtue hath my pen,—
 Where breath most breathes,—even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII.

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
 And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook
 The dedicated words which writers use
 Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
 Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
 Finding thy worth a limit past my praise ; 6
 And therefore art enforce'd to seek anew
 Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
 And do so, love ; yet when they have devis'd
 What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
 Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd 11
 In true plain words by thy true-telling friend ;
 And their gross painting might be better used Where cheeks need blood ; in thee it is abus'd.

LXXXIII.

I never saw that you did painting need,
 And therefore to your fair no painting set ;
 I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
 The barren tender of a poet's debt :
 And therefore have I slept in your report, 5
 That you yourself, being extant, well might show
 How far a modern quill doth come too short,
 Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
 This silence for my sin you did impute,
 Which shall be most my glory, being dumb ;
 For I impair not beauty being mute, 11
 When others would give life, and bring a tomb.
 There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
 Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most? which can say more
Than this rich praise,—that you alone are you?
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew.
Lean penury within that pen doth dwell 5
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where. 12
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse, Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
Whilst comments of your praise, richly compiled,
Deserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the Muses filed.
I think good thoughts, while others write good
words,
And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry 'Amen' 6
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you prais'd, I say, 'Tis so, 'tis true,'
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank
before. 12
Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead? 6
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast;
I was not sick of any fear from thence: 12
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then hack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

LXXXVII.

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving? 6
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting.
And so my patent back again is swerving.

Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon imprisonment growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment mak-
ing. 12
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flat-
ter,
In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art for-sworn.
With mine own weakness, being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story 6
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me. 12
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change, 6
As I'll myself disgrace; knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell. 12
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must never love him whom thou dost hate.

xc.

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe; 6
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me fast,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might; 12
And other strains of woe, which now seem
woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

XCI.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
 Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
 Some in their garments, though new-fangled
 ill;
 Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their
 horse;
 And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
 Wherein it finds a joy above the rest: 6
 But these particulars are not my measure;
 All these I better in one general best.
 Thy love is better than high birth to me,
 Richer than wealth, prouder than garments'
 cost,
 Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
 And having thee, of all men's pride I boast: 12
 Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
 All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCII.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
 For term of life thou art assured mine;
 And life no longer than thy love will stay,
 For it depends upon that love of thine.
 Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end, 6
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie,
 O! what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die: 12
 But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

XCIII.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy change. 6
 In many's looks the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles
 strange,
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings
 be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness
 tell, 12
 If like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
 It thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCIV.

They that have power to hurt and will do none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,
 Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
 Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;

They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
 And husband nature's riches from expense; 6
 They are the lords and owners of their faces,
 Others but stewards of their excellence.
 The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
 Though to itself it only live and die,
 But if that flower with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his dignity: 12
 For sweetest things turn soonest by their deeds;
 Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds,

XCV.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the
 shame
 Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
 Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
 O! in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose,
 That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
 Making lasciv. as comments on thy sport, 6
 Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
 Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
 O! what a mansion have those vices got
 Which for their habitation chose out thee,
 Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
 And all things turn to fair that eyes can see! 12
 Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
 The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

XCVI.

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
 Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
 Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less;
 Thou makest faults graeces that to thee resort.
 As on the finger of a throned queen
 The basest jewel will be well esteem'd, 6
 So are these errors that in thee are seen
 To fruits translated and for true things deem'd.
 How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
 If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
 How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
 If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy
 state! 12
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII.

How like a winter hath my absence been
 From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
 What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!
 What old December's bareness every where!
 And yet this time remov'd was summer's time;
 The teeming autumn, big with rich increase, 6
 Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
 Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
 Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
 But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit;
 For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
 And, thou away, the very birds are mute: 12
 Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer,
 That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCIII.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
 When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
 Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
 That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him.
 Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
 Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
 Could make me any summer's story tell,
 Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew ;
 Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
 Nor praise the deep vermillion in the rose ;
 They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
 Drawn after you, you pattern of all those. 12
 Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
 As with your shadow I with these did play.

XCIV.

The forward violet thus did I chide :
 Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
 If not from my love's breath ? The purple pride
 Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
 In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
 The lily I condemned for thy hand,
 And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair ;
 The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
 One blushing shame, another white despair ;
 A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
 And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath ;
 But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth 12
 A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
 More flowers I noted, yet I none could see
 But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
 To speak of that which gives thee all thy might ?
 Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
 Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light ?
 Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
 In gentle numbers time so idly spent ;
 'Tis slug to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
 And gives thy pen both skill and argument,
 Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
 If Time have any wrinkle graven there ;
 If any, be a satire to decay,
 And make Time's spoils despised every where. 12
 Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life ;
 So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

CI.

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed ?
 Both truth and beauty on my love depends ;
 So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
 Make answer, Muse : wilt thou not happily say, 5
 ' Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd ;
 Beauty no penell, beauty's truth to lay ;
 But best is best, if never intermix'd ?'

Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb ?
 Excuse not silence so ; for 't lies in thee
 To make him much outlive a gilded tomb
 And to be prais'd of ages yet to be. 12
 Then do thy office, Muse ; I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows
 now.

CII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming ;
 I love not less, though less the show appear ;
 That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming
 The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
 When I was wout to greet it with my lays ; 6
 As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
 And stops her pipe in growth of riper days ;
 Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the
 night,
 But that wild music burthens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear de-
 light. 12
 Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII.

Alack ! what poverty my Muse brings forth,
 That having such a scope to show her pride,
 The argument, all bare, is of more worth
 Than when it hath my added praise beside !
 O ! blame me not, if I no more can write !
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face 6
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace,
 Were it not shifal then, striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well ?
 For to no other pass my verses tend
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell ; 12
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
 Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

CIV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
 Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers' 7
 rinde,
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd
 In process of the seasons have I seen,
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green,
 Ah ! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
 Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd ;
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth
 stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd : 12
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred :
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
 Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
 Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
 'Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument,
 'Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words;
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords. 12
 'Fair, kind, and true,' have often lived alone,
 Which three till now never kept seat in one.

CVI.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rime,
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.
 So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
 And, for they look'd but with divining eyes, 11
 They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
 For we, which now behold these present days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage; 6
 Incertainties now crown themselves assured,
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
 Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rime, 11
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain, that ink may character,
 Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
 What's new to speak, what new to register,
 That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
 Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
 I must each day say o'er the very same; 6
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
 Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.

So that eternal love In lov's fresh case
 Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page; 12
 Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
 Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O! never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
 As easy might I from myself depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth
 lie:
 That is my home of love: If rang'd,
 Like him that travels, I re- gain; 6
 Just to the thine, not with some exchange'd,
 So that myself bring water for my stals
 Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
 That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good; 12
 For nothing this wide universe I call,
 Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.

Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,
 And made myself a motley to the view, Gored mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
 Made old offences of affections new;
 Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
 Askance and strangely; but, by all above, 6
 These blenches gave my heart another youth,
 And worse essays prov'd thee my best of
 love.
 Now all is done, save what shall have no end:
 Mine appetite I never more will grind
 On newer proof, to try an older friend,
 A god in love, to whom I am confin'd. 12
 Then give me welcome, next my heaven tho
 best,
 Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

CXI.

O! for my sake do you with Fortune chide
 The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
 That did not better for my life provide
 Than public means which public manners breeds.
 Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
 And almost thence my nature is subdu'd 6
 To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
 Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd;
 Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
 Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection;
 No bitterness that I will bitter think,
 Nor double penance, to correct correction. 12
 Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye
 Even that your pity is enough to cure me

CXII.

Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your
tongue;

None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.
In so profound abyssm I throw all care
Of other's voices, that my adder's sense
To erlite and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII.

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the Leart
Of hrd, of flower, or shape, which it doth lath:
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

CXIV.

Or whether doth my mind being crown'd with
you,
Drink up the monarch's: 't'ery?
Or whether shall I say, in me,
And that your love tangl' me,
To make of monsters and t' ad'st
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 'tis the first, 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is
'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the enp:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer:
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;

Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not thou say, 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er Incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubtlug of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests and is never shaken; 6
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom. 12
If this be error, and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor do you man ever loved.

CXVII.

Ascense me thus: that I have scanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereto all bouds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchase'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me furthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate; 12
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweet-
ness,
To bitter sances did I frame my feeding; 6
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus polley in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state, 11
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd;
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
 Distill'd from limbeckes foul as hell within,
 Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
 Still losing when I saw myself to win!
 What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
 Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
 How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
 In the distraction of this madding fever!
 O benefit of ill! now I find true
 That better is by evil still made better:
 And ruin'd love, when it is built anew, 11
 Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
 So I return rebnk'd to my content.
 And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
 And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
 Needs must I under my transgression bow,
 Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
 For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
 As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time; 6
 And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
 To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
 O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
 My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd 11
 The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
 But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
 Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom
 me.

CXXI.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd.
 When not to be receives reproach of being;
 And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
 Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
 For why should others' false adulterate eyes
 Give salutation to my sportive blood? 6
 Or on my frailties why are frailer splees,
 Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
 No, I am that I am, and they that level
 At my abuses reckon up their own:
 I may be straight though they themselves be level;
 By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown; 12
 Unless this general evil they maintain,
 All men are bad and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
 Full character'd with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank remain,
 Beyond all date, even to eternity:
 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist; 6
 Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
 Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.

That poor retention could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold, 11
 To trust those tables that receive thee more:
 To keep an adjunct to remember thee
 Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change;
 Thy pyramids built up with newer might
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
 They are but dressings of a former sight.
 Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old; 6
 And rather make them born to our desire
 Than think that we before have heard them told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy,
 Not wond'ring at the present nor the past,
 For thy records and what we see doth lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste. 12
 This I do vow, and this shall ever be;
 I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
 It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
 As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers
 gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident;
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls 6
 Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
 Whereto the luring time our fashion calls:
 It fears not polley, that heretic,
 Which works on leases of short number'd hours,
 But all alone stands hugely polltle,
 That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers. 12

To this I witness call the fools of time,
 Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV.

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
 With my extern the outward honouring,
 Or laid great bases for eternity,
 Which prove more short than waste or ruin-
 ing?
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour Lose all and more by paying too much rent, 6
 For compound sweet foregoing simple savour
 Pitiul thrivers, in their gazing spent?
 No; let me be obsequious in thy heart,
 And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
 Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no
 art,
 But mutual render, only me for thee. 12
 Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul
 When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fleckle glass, his sickle hour;
Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still wilt pluck thee
back,

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure:

Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard's shame:
For since each hand hath put on Nature's
power,

Fairing the foul with Art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.

Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Stand'ring creation with a false esteem:

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st
The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand:
To be so tickl'd, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living
lips.

Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;
Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:

Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Mad, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.

All this the world well knows; yet none knows
well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red:
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;

If hairs be wires, black vires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go,— My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground:

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;

For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan:

To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even,
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face:
O! let it then as well b'pseem thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
grace,

And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

R r

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must
be?

Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd: 6
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart ball;

Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail: 12
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind; 6
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that putt'st forth all to use,
And suc a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse. 12
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious, 6
Not once vouchsafe to bide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right grack'ous,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will 11
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let not unkind 'No' fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love-sult, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one. 6
In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:

Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee: 12
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine
eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride, 6
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face? 12
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue: 7
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told: 12
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O! call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy
tongue:
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lovest elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside: 6
What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been my enemies; 10
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;— 6
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians
know;—

For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be. 12
That I may not be so, nor thou belied, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXLII.

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;

Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone. 6
Nor taste nor smell desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to
be: 12
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLIII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O! but with mine compare thou thine own
state,

And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments 6
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be. 12

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,

By self-example mayst thou be denied!

CXLIII.

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all quick dispatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;

Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent 6
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent:
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind; 12
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy
Will,

If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worse spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side, 6
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Woolding his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell: 12
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate,'
To me that languish'd for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet 6
Was us'd in giving gentle doom;
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate,' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who I like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away. 12
'I hate' from hate away she drew,
And sav'd my life, saying— 'Be true to me.'

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Feof'd by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend? 6
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more: 12
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on
men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying
then.

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
 For that which longer nurseth the disease ;
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
 The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
 My reason, the physician to my love,
 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept, 6
 Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physick did except.
 Past cure I am, now Reason is past care,
 And frantic-mad with evermore unrest ;
 My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's are,
 At random from the truth vainly express'd ; 12
 For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
 Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.

O me ! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
 Which have no correspondence with true sight ;
 Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
 That censures falsely what they see aright ?
 If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote, 6
 What means the world to say it is not so ?
 If it be not, then love doth well denote
 Love's eye is not so true as all men's : no,
 How can it ? O ! how can Love's eye be true,
 That is so vex'd with watching and with tears ?
 No marvel then, though I mistake my view ; 12
 The sign itself sees not till heaven clears.
 Ooming Love ! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
 Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O cruel ! say I love thee not,
 When I against myself with thee partake ?
 Do I not think on thee, when I forgo
 Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake ?
 Who hateth thee that I do call my friend ?
 On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon ? 6
 Nay, if thou lovest on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan ?
 What merit do I in myself respect,
 That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes ? 12
 But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind ;
 Those that can see thou lov'st and I am blind.

CL.

O ! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
 With insufficiency my heart to sway ?
 To make me give the lie to my true sight,
 And swear that brightness doth not grace the day ?
 Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
 That in the very refuse of thy deeds 6
 There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
 That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds ?
 Who taught thee thus how to make me love thee more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate ?
 O ! though I love what others do abhor, 11
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my state :
 If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is ;
 Yet who knows not conscience is born of love ?
 Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove :
 For, thou betraying me, I do betray 6
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason ;
 My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love ; flesh stays no further reason,
 But ruling at thy name doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side. 12
 No want of conscience hold it that I call
 Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing ;
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty ? I am perjur'd most ; 6
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost :
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy ; 12
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
 Or made them swear against the thing they see ;
 For I have sworn thee fair ; more perjur'd I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie !

CLIII.

Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep :
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground ;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love 6
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my breast ;
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest, 12
 But found no cure : the bath for my help lies
 Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.

The little Love-god lying once asleep
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
 Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep
 Came tripping by ; but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire 6
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd ;
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was, sleep'ng, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseas'd ; but I, my mistress' thrall, 12
 Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A Lover's Complaint.

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
 A plaintful story from a sisting vale,
 My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
 And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale; 4
 Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
 Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
 Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw, 8
 Which fortified her visage from the sun,
 Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw

The carcass of a beauty spent and done: 12
 Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
 Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,

Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Off did she heave her napkin to her cyne, 16
 Which on it had canceled characters,
 Laundering the sliken figures in the brine
 That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
 And often reading what content it bears; 20
 As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
 In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
 As they did battery to the spheres intend;
 Sometime diverted, their poor balls are tied 24
 To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
 Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
 To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
 The mind and sight distractedly commix'd. 28

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
 Proclaim'd in her careless hand of pride;
 For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
 Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside; 32
 Some in her threaden'd net still did abide,
 And true to bondage would not break from
 thence
 Though slackly bruded in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew 36
 Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
 Which one by one she in a river threw,
 Upon whose weeping margent she was set;
 Like usury, applying wet to wet, 40
 Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall
 Where want cries some, but where excess begs
 all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
 Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;

Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,

Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
 Found yet more letters sadly penn'd in blood,
 With sleided silk feat and affectedly 48
 Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
 And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
 'Cried 'O false blood! thou register of lies, 52
 What unapproved witness dost thou bear;
 Ink would have seem'd more black and dammed
 here.'

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
 Big discontent so breaking their contents. 56

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh—
 Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
 Of court, of city, and had let go by
 The swiftest hours, observed as they flew— 60
 Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
 And, privileged by age, desires to know
 In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained hat, 64
 And comely-distant sits he by her side;
 When he again desires her, being sat,
 Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
 If that from him there may be aught applied 68
 Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
 'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
 The injury of many a blasting hour,
 Let it not tell your judgment I am old; 72
 Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
 I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
 Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied 76
 Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended
 A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace,
 Of one by nature's outwards so commended, 80
 That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face.
 Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her
 place;

And when in his fair parts she did abide,
 She was new lodg'd and newly delid, 84

- 'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips the'r silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find: 88
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in litle drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was seen.
- 'Small show of man was yet upon his chin; 92
His phoenix down began but to appear
Like unshorn velvet on that termless skin
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that coat more dear, 96
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.
- 'His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-ton-n'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mo'd him was he such a storm 101
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be,
His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth 104
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.
- 'Well could he ride, and often men would say "That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, 108
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed. 112
- 'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case: 116
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions; yet their purpos'd trim
Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.
- 'So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill, 125
Catching all passions in his craft of will:
- 'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted, 128
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted:
And dialogu'd for him what he would say, 132
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.
- 'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like tools that in the imagination set 136
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
- And labouring in more pleasures to bestow them
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe
them. 140
- 'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart,
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part, 144
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.
- 'Yet did I not, as some my equals did, 148
Demand of him, nor being desir'd yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks builded 151
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.
- 'But, ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay? 157
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen 161
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.
- 'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof;
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good, 164
For fear of harms that preach in our behalf.
O appetite! from judgment stand aloof;
The one a palate bath that needs will taste. 167
Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last."
- 'For further I could say "This man's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards-
grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling; 171
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters and words merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.
- 'And long upon these terms I held my elty, 176
Till thus he 'gan beslege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to ye sworn to none was ever said; 180
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.
- "All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind; 184
Love made them not: with nature they may be.
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame
did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains, 188
By how much of me their reproach contains.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,
Or my affection put to the smallest teen, 192
Or any of my leasures ever charm'd;
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;
Kept hearts in liversies, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy. 196

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls and rubles red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200
In bloodless white and the emersinon'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

"And, lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd, 205
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With the annexions of far genus enrich'd, 208
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

"The diamond; why, 'twas beautiful and hard,
Whereto his invis'd properties did tend; 212
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sleekly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone, 216
With witwell blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

"Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender, 219
Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and ender;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you empatron me. 224

"O! then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these smiles to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys, 229
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums,

"Lo! this device was sent me from a nun, 232
Or sister sanctified, of hollest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by sprits of richest coat, 236
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet! what labour is't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives, 240
Palling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,

The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight, 244
And makes her absence valliant, not her might.

"O! pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue, 248
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out Religion's eye:
Not to be temptel, would she be humur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd. 252

"How mighty then you are, O! hear me tell:
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among: 256
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congeat,
As compound love to physie your cold breast.

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace, 261
Bellev'd her eyes when they to us a'il begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place,
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space, 264
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

"When thou impresses, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame, 268
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears. 273

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend, 276
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst
mine,

Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And erudent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my troth." 280

"This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace. 284
O! how the channel to the stream gave grace;
Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

"O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies 288
In the small orb of one particular tear,
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath, 293
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath.

'For, lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
 Even there resolv'd my reason into tears; 296
 There my white stole of chastity I daff'd,
 Shook off my sober guards and evil fears;
 Appear to him, as he to me appears,
 All melting; though our drops this difference bore, 300
 His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

'In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
 Appl'd to cantels, all strange forms receives,
 Of burning blushes, or of weeping water, 304
 Or swoounding paleness; and he takes and leaves.
 In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
 To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
 Or to turn white and swoond at tragle shows: 308

'That not a heart which in his level eame
 Could 'scape the hail of his ill-hurting aim,
 Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;

And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would malm:
 Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
 When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
 He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace 316
 The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd;
 That the unexperient gave the tempter place,
 Which like a cherubim above them hover'd.
 Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd?
 Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make 321
 What I should do again for such a sake.

'O! that infected moisture of his eye,
 O! that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,
 O! that fore'd thunder from his heart did fly,
 O! that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd,
 O! all that borrow'd motion seeming ow'd,
 Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd, 328
 And new pervert a reconciled maid.'

The Passionate Pilgrim.

I.

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth,
 I do believe her, though I know she lies,
 That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
 Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although I know my years be past the best, 6
 I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
 Outfaeing faults in love with love's ill rest.
 But wherefore says my love that she is young?
 And wherefore say not I that I am old?
 O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
 And age, in love, loves not to have years told. 12
 Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me, Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
 Which like two spirits do suggest me still;
 The better angel is a man, right fair,
 The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
 To win me soon to hell, my female evill
 Tempteth my better angel from my side, 6
 And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
 Wooling his purity with her fair pride:
 And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
 Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
 For being both to me, both to each friend,
 I guess one angel in another's hell. 12
 The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
 Till my bad angel fle, my good one out.

III.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
 'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
 Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
 Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
 A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
 Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee: 6
 My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
 Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
 My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
 Then thou, fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,
 Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:
 If broken, then it is no fault of mine. 12
 If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
 To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
 With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
 Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
 Such looks as none could look but beauty's
 queen.
 She told him stories to delight his ear;
 She show'd him favours to allure his eye; 6
 To win his heart, she touch'd him here and
 there,—
 Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
 But whether unripe years did want conceit,
 Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
 The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
 But smile and jest at every gentle offer: 12
 Tneu fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
 He rose and ran away; ah! fool too froward.

V.

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to
 love?
 O! never faith could hold, if not to beauty
 vow'd:
 Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
 Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like oslers
 bow'd.
 Study his bias leaves, and makes his book to
 his eyes,
 Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend. 6
 If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
 Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
 All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
 Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire;
 Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
 Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet
 fire, 12
 Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong,
 To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI.

Scarcely had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
 And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
 When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
 A longing tarrance for Adonis made
 Under an osler growing by a brook,
 A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen: 6
 Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
 For his approach, that often there had been.
 Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
 And stood stark naked on the brook a green bria:
 The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
 Yet not so wisely as this queen on him: 12
 He, spying her, boune'd in, whereas he stood:
 'O Jove,' quoth she, 'why was not I a flood!'

VII.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fleckle;
 Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
 Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
 Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
 A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
 None fairer, nor none fals'er to deface her. 6

Her lips to mune how often hath she join'd,
 Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
 How many tales to please me hath she e'en'd,
 Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
 Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
 Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings. 12

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
 She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out-burneth;
 She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
 She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
 Was this a lover, or a lecher whether? 6
 Bad in the best, though excellent in nether.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
 As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
 Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and 10,
 Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
 Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
 Upon the lute doth ravish human sense; 6
 Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
 As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
 Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
 That Phœbus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
 And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
 Wheneas himself to singing he betakes. 12
 One god is god of both, as poets feign;
 One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,
 * * * * *
 Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
 For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;

Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill:
 Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds; 6
 She, silly queen, with more than love's good will, Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:

'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet youth
 Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
 Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth! 11
 See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the sore.
 She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one,
 And blushing fled, and left her all alone.'

X.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon
 vaded,
 Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
 Bright orient pearl, atack! too timely shaded;
 Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
 And falls, through wind, before the fall should
 be. 6

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
 For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
 And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
 For why I craved nothing of thee still:
 O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
 Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me. 12

XI.

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
 Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
 She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
 And as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
 'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the war-like god embraed me,'
 And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms; 6
 'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the war-like god unlac'd me.'

As if the boy should use like loving charms.
 'Even thus,' quoth she, 'he seized on my lips,
 And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
 And as she f . . . . . breath, away he skips,
 And would not take her meaning nor her pleasure. 12

Al! that I had my lady at this bay,
 To kiss and clip me till I ran away.

XII.

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
 Youth is full of treasure, age is full of care;
 Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather:
 Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
 Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
 Youth is nimble, age is lame; 6
 Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
 Youth is wild, and age is tame.
 Age, I do abhor thee, youth, I do adore thee;
 O! my love, my love is young;
 Age, I do defy thee: O! sweet shepherd, hie thee,
 For methinks thou stay'st too long. 12

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good ;
 A shining gloss that vaneleth suddenly ;
 A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud ;
 A brittle glass that's broken presently :
 A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower.
 Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour. 6

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
 As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
 As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
 As broken glass no cement can redress,
 So beauty be wish'd once's for ever lost,
 In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost. 12

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share:
 She bade good night that kept my rest away ;
 And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with eare,
 To descent on the doubts of my decay.
 'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again to-morrow :'
 Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.
 Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn of friendship, nil I construe whether :
 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
 'T may be, again to make me wander thither :

'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself, 11
 As take the pain, but cannot pluck the self.

Lord! how mine eyes t'row gazes to the east ;
 My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise
 Doth eld each mov'd sense from idle rest.
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
 While Phillomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
 And wish her lays were tuned like the lark ; 18

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
 And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night :
 The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty ;
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wish'd sight ;
 Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with
 sorrow ;
 For why, she sigh'd and bade me come to-morrow. 24

Were I with her, the night would post too soon ;
 But now are minutes added to the hours ;
 To spite me now, each minute seems a moon ;
 Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers !
 Pack night, peep day ; good day, of night now
 borrow ;
 Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow. 30

Sonnets to Sundry Notes of Music.

i.

It was a lordling's daughter, the fairest one of three,
 That liked of her master as well as well might be,
 Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
 Her fancy fell a-turning. 4

Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
 To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight ;
 To put in practice either, alas! it was a spite
 Unto the silly daisel. 8

But one must be refused ; more mickle was the pain
 That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
 For of the two the trusty knight was wounded
 with disdain :
 Alas! she could not help it. 12

Thus art with arms contending was victor of the
 day,
 Watch by a gift of learning did bear the maid
 away ;
 Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay ;
 For now my song is ended. 16

ii.

On a day, alack the day !
 Love, whose month was ever May,
 Spied a blossom passing fair,
 Playing in the wanton air : 4
 Through the velvet leaves the wind,
 All unseen, gave passage find ;
 That the lover, sick to death,
 Wish'd himself the heaven's breath. 8
 'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow ;
 Air, would I might triumph so !
 But, alas! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn : 12
 Vow, alack! for youth unmeet :
 Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet,
 Thou for whom Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiop were ; 16
 And deny himself for Jove,
 Turning mortal for thy love.'

iii.

My flocks feed not,
 My ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not,
 All is amiss : 4
 Love's denying,
 Faith's defying,
 Heart's renying,
 Cause of this. 8

- All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
 All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
 Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
 There a nay is plac'd without remove. 12
 One silly cross
 Wrought all my loss;
 O! frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame;
 For now I see 16
 Inconstancy
 More in women than in men remain
- In black mourn I,
 All fears scorn I, 20
 Love hath forlorn me,
 Living in thrall:
 Heart is bleeding,
 All help needling, 24
 O! cruel speeding,
 Fraughted with gall.
 My shepherd's pipo can sound no deal,
 My wether's bell rings doleful knell; 28
 My curtal dog, that wont to have play'd,
 Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
 My sigh so deep
 Procure to weep, 32
 In howl arise, to see my doleful plight.
 How sighs resound
 Through heartless ground,
 Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight! 36
- Clear well spring not,
 Sweet birds sing not,
 Green plants bring not
 Forth their dye; 40
 Herds stand weeping,
 Flocks all sleeping,
 Nymphs back peeping
 Fearfully: 44
 All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
 All our merry meetings on the plains,
 All our evening sport from us is fled,
 All our love is lost, for Love is dead. 48
 Farewell, sweet lass,
 Thy like ne'er was
 For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
 Poor Corydon 52
 Must live alone;
 Other help for him I see that there is none.
- IV.
- Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
 And stall'd the deer that thou should'st strike,
 Let reason rule things worthy blame,
 As well as fancy, partial wight: 4
 Take counsel of some wiser head,
 Neither too young nor yet unwed.
- And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
 Smooth not thy tongue with fled talk, 8
 Lest she some subtle practice smell;
 A cripple soon can find a halt:
 But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
 And set thy person forth to sell. 12
- What though her frowning brows be bent,
 Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
 And then too late she will repent
 That thus dissembled her delight; 16
 And twice desire, ere it be day,
 That which with scorn she put away.
- What though she strive to try her strength,
 And ban and brawl, and say thee nay, 20
 Her feeble force will yield at length,
 Her craft hath taught her thus to say,
 'Had women been so strong as men, in faith, you had not had it then.' 24
- And to her will frame all thy ways;
 Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
 Where thy desert may merit praise,
 By ringing in thy lady's ear: 28
 The strongest castle, tower, and town,
 The golden bullet beats it down.
- Serve always with assured trust,
 And in thy suit be humble true; 32
 Unless thy lady prove unjust,
 Seek never thou to choose anew.
 When time shall serve, be thou not slack
 To proffer, though she put thee back. 36
- The wiles and gullies that women work,
 Dissembled with an outward show,
 The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
 The cock that treads them shall not know. 40
 I, we you not heard it said full oft,
 A woman's nay doth stand for nought?
- Think, women love to match with men
 And not to live so like a saint: 44
 Here is no heaven; they holy then Begin when age doth them attain.
 Were kisses all the joys in bed,
 One woman would another wed. 48
- But, soft! enough! too much, I fear;
 For if my mistress hear my song,
 She will not stek to ring my ear,
 To teach my tongue to be so long: 52
 Yet will she blush, here be it said,
 To hear her secrets so bewray'd.
- V.
- Live with me, and be my love,
 And we will all the pleasures prove
 That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
 And all the craggy mountains yields. 4 8

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

12
There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtie
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

16
A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be thy love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love.

VI.

23
As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
'Fie, fie, fie!' now would she cry;
'Tereu, Tereu!' by and by;
That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.

Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain; 20
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead, 24
All thy fellow birds do sing
Careless of thy sorrowing,
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me. 28
Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both begull'd.
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery, 32
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find;
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend; 36
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call, 40
And with such-like flattering.
'Pity but he were a king.'
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice; 44
If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandment:
But if Fortune once do frown,
Then farewell his great renown; 48
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed,
He will help thee in thy need; 52
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep:
Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee does bear a part. 56
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

The Phoenix and the Turtle.

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wluvs obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precursor of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session Interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one,
Two distincts, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phoenix' sight;
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
S'ngle nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded.

That it cried, 'How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.'

Whereupon It made this threne
To the phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
