What Will Kaiser Do? The political situation in Europe as a whole is more satisfactory today than it has been for several years. The day sessions of the convention are to take place in the Dundas Street Blain, M. P., Mr. C. M. Bowman, M. P. If this is the case. the Provincial Government may receive severe criticism, as some of the clauses of the bill are not at all to the liking of the temperance people.

Two bombs were thrown in quick succession at the vehicle, as it was passing close to a branch of the treasury, after which a rush was made at the wagon by a number of armed men, who after exchanging a hot fire with the gendarmes escorting it, managed to secure the booty, and fled across a small foot bridge over the Ekaterinsk Canal, leaving five of their number in the hands of the police. black eye yesterday by a decision of Chief Justice Meredith in favor of Mr. T. S. Hobbs, ex-M. P. P., of this city

The Ontario Government in 1895 entered into a contract with one O'Connor for the manufacture of binder twine in ernment, by order-in-council, made another contract, which later passed into the hands of the Independent Cordage Company, of which Mr. T. S. Hobbs was the chief owner.. When Mr. Whitney became premier, his administration summarily cancelled this last contract-apparently on political grounds -representing that it had not been ratified by the Legislature and was therefore illegal.

Mr. Hobbs, on behalf of the Indenendent Cordage Company, entered action against the Government for $8,216, the balance of an account, and for $5,000, being the amount of the company's deposit in connection with the contract. The Government filed a counter-claim of $51,000, alleging that the company owed this amount for machinery installed in the Central Prison after the original plant was de-fair, even cheap. Chief Justice Meredith gave judgment for the company for the full amount of $13,216, and dismissed the Government's claim with costs. Every single item of the Government's claim was pronounced untenable

An interesting argument took piace on the question of the validity of the order-in-council ratifying the second contract, which was assigned to the Independent Cordage Company. Mr. F. H. Hodgins, K.C., who appeared for the crown, argued that where a contract has once been approved by the Legislature it cannot be altered by the Government without the consent of the Chief Justice Meredith-Assume if you like that the first contract was the very best in the interests of the Province, and the second the very worst. The Government still has the power to make the change. They are, of course, responsible to the House and to the people.

The chief justice further instanced the way in which the Government from time to time sold large blocks of land. The Independent Cordage Company made in Berlin for this world-wide Everything in connection with the construction of the necessary buildings and decorations is to tend to massive ness combined with art. Berlin may be justly compared to Paris, France, as holding second place in all things concerning music, as well as many other branches of art. At the World's Fair, Paris, in 1900 over 300 different pianoforte manufacturers had pianos on exhibition, as well as in severe competition. Canada received the high distinction of having a Canadian pianoforte firm receive the Gold Medal, the highest award possible. The Newcombe Piano Company, Toronto, have the honor of being this firm, and have the greatest of confidence in their beautiful piano, especially when we consider the act that the judges numbered twenty and were picked from among the best experts and musicians in the world. The year 1912 will mark the time of the third World's Fair in the old land In 1886 at London, England, the first was held, at which time the Newcombe

Piano Company received the medal and diploma and had the honor of supplying Her Majesty Queen Victoria with an instrument chosen by the world-renowned Sir Arthur Sullivan. A piano firm manufacturing pianos of such a high standard of quality well deserve the patronage they now enjoy. A large and extensive stock of these instruments may at any time be seen in their modern parlors at

The football game this afternoon at Tecumseh Park should be a most exciting and hard-fought struggle. Hamilton will not have any such a walkaway as she had last Saturday. A PRO LEAGUE IN WEST ONTARIO

Quiet Effort Being Made to Form One-London To Be Asked to Enter.

Guelph, Oct. 26.-The latest development in hockey circles is a quiet effort which is being made to form a professional league in Western Ontario. Guelph has not yet been approached, but it is known that the Royal City is one of the places counted on to com. plete the circuit. Last year a similar effort was made, but owing to the fact that Toronto and Brantford had corraled the best of the pro-players, the other places backed out. This year it is said that a Toronto team, Woodstock and Brantford are sure to fall into line, and London and Guelph will be approached to enter teams also. It is impossible as yet to say how the project will be regarded locally.

NO RACE FOR

New York, Oct. 26 .- The Evening Post today says: "There will be no race for the America's Cup next year. There will, however, be a race for that historic mug in the summer or early fall of 1908, unless the New York Vacht Club refuses to meet the challenger a fraction of half way which is extremely unlikely. Both the foregoing statements may be accepted as coming from the best sort of authority. At the present time no understanding or agreement of any sort between Sir Thomas Lipton and the New York Yacht Club with regard to a challenge for the cup has been reached. In fact, the sportsmanlike baronet has had no conference or correspondence with any officer of the club acting in his capacity as a member."

During the sultry weather of summer deer and moose may be seen in the daytime along almost any wild stretch of water in New Brunswick, Maine or the Temagami Lake country. They seek the water in order to cool themselves and secure protection from the flies.

For a similar reason, the caribou of Newfoundland take to the dense spruce thickets in hot weather, coming out at dusk to spend much of the night browsing over the moss rocks. The hunter who waits until after August will have a better chance of getting his coveted pair of

So alert and wily are the animals that it is difficult to approach them at best. A caribou can scent a man at almost incredible distance, and once he catches the scent, he is promptly off for another locality, The hunter will have much better success if he patiently waits for the game to approach him.

TO BREAK UP A COLD IN 24 HOURS AND CURE ANY COUGH THAT IS CURABLE

Mix one-half ounce of the Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) with two ounces of Glycerine and half a pint of good Whisky. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

Dr. Leach, the famous throat and lung specialist, who established a camp for consumptives in the Pine Woods of Maine, and whose wonderful cures there have attracted the attention of the civilized world, declares that the above formula will strengthen weak lungs, relieve the cough, heal the bronchial tubes, and cure any case of lung trouble that is not too far advanced, providing the patient will assist by taking plenty of outdoor exercise, inhaling long deep breaths every

It is said the mixture will break up an ordinary cold in 24 hours, and, being free from opiates and drugs, is far preferable for use among children to the ordinary cough mixtures.

The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost and easily prepared in your own home.

Inquiry at the prescription department of one of our leading drug-gists elicited the information that Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is put up only in half-ounce vials securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, showing the name—"Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)"— plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), which are being put out under various names, such as Concentrated Oil of Pine, Pine Balsam, etc. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea, and never effect the desired results.

A local physician, who is familiar with the treatment used by Dr. Leach in his camp in the Pine Woods, says it is undoubtedly the most effective known to medical science at the present time, and save for the open air life in the forest would prove just as effective if used in the home. He says the formula given above is the one used by Dr. Leach, and that it has the unqualified indorsement of the leading physicians of

The physician added, if this formula was known and used generally by the people, throat, lung, and bronchial affections would rarely reach an acute stage.

The Pure Virgin Oil of Pine is also a perfect neutralizing agent for uric acid. A few drops taken on sugar night and morning will heal and regulate the kidneys and relieve the most obstinate case of rheumatism if caused by uric acid in the system.

But the cedar-bark drum is brother to the magic canoe and I would take it with me where I am going.'

> Then the five slaves bore Sigana down to the shore, for he was feeble with age so that he could not walk, and placed him in the canoe; and Gasta brought the magic cedar-bark drum and placed it there also. Then the slaves shoved off the canoe and stepped in themselves. The canoe moved from the shore and at once Gasta saw it grow new and bright and shining as it had looked when it was first made, and the figurehead on the bow began to chant a song as it

Gasta looked again and saw that the old chief had changed into a young man, who stood high in the bows and waved his arms toward the setting sun. Straight toward the setting sun the canoe went, the five dark slaves sitting with their elbows on their knees and covering their faces with their hands.

Then a cloud rolled up out of the ocean, enveloping the canoe and its passenger, and Gasta saw it and then no more forever.

HOMEMADE SWEETS

I do not know that confectioners were more honest then than now, but they were more simple concerning that which is evil. In unbiblical language, they were not "up" in the matter of adulterations of their wares. Alba terra had no marketable value, and candy-makers neither poisoned nor painted the "goodies" that had children for their chief customers.

The subject of this Talk with the Housemother was suggested to me by the sight of a "scare head"

"WHOLE FAMILY POISONED BY CANDY BOUGHT OF A RE-PUTABLE CONFECTIONER!"

It was not cheap candy, I learn from perusal of the story, but put up in pretty boxes, and colored at-tectively. Retail price—40 cents a pound. The father bought it on his way home from work, and he, the mother and the three children ate the whole pound before bedtime, with the exception of a few bits left in the bottom of the box. These, when analyzed by the doctors, whose united skill saved the lives of the sufferers, were adjudged to contain arsenical green and other deadly

I submit that it is better exercise for the moral muscles, as it assuredly is for the physical, than waltzing and "bridge."

CLEANING THE KETTLE

Now, as to the modus operandi of the family and social entertainment: Cover the aning table with clean white cloth, and set on this four large platters, and a large plate for each pair of "pullers." Platters and plates are well-buttered, and saucers of cornstarch and pats of butter stand conveniently near the platters. The candy is cooked in the kitchen. If Bridget resent the invasion of her domain when an "acquaintance" may be with her, choose her "evening out" for the frolic. "Our" cooks have been uniformly tolerant of candy pulls, for we give them no additional trouble in the way of cleaning kettles and plates next day. As soon as the k ttle is emptied it is filled with hot water and set on the side of the range to soak itself clean by the time the fun is over. The plates are piled in the sink, soaped, and covered with hot water when they

To one quart of the best quality of molasses allow one cup of granulated sugar, a great spoonful of butter and half a cup of vinegar. Dissolve the sugar in the vinegar, mix with the molasses, and cook-slowly at first-until the mixture hardens when dropped into water. At this point stir in the butter, and when this is melted a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little hot water. The boiling mixture will foam up furiously, so be on your guard against spatters of hot syrup. As soon as the effervescing ceases, take the kettle from the fire and empty into the buttered platters, dividing the contents equally between them. Now, let the pullers gird them for the work by donning big white aprons, turning back sleeves, removing cuffs, and buttering the tips of the fingers. The adroit candymaker never touches the hot mass except with dainty finger-tips. It is a sign of awkwardness or ignorance if any

If left to cool until tolerable to the touch, it will string, and give no end of annoyance. Let the practiced puller—who is almost surely a woman—manipulate the hot lump alone for a minute to get it into working order. When she can draw it into a thick rope, her partner must come to her help by grasping the other end of it. Henceforward the business is play, and graceful play. The fast-whitening rope is drawn out as far as may be without danger of parting, caught dexterously in the middle, first by one, then by another of the pullers, turned back upon itself to double its thickness, then drawn out again. THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

OUR friendly Talks embolden me to ask a question that weighs upon the mind of this one of your readers, and probably perplexes some others.

Do you know of any book or periodical that tells what vegetables, fruits and meats should be used together, to give what I should call "a balanced ration," and the reasons for eating them at one and the same meal? reasons for eating them at one and the same meal?

I do not ask this with the desire to follow any "fad," but to try to get the best and most helpful results from money spent for focd and labor expended in the preparation of meals.

Let me illustrate: A meal to which I sat down lately consisted of beefsteak, mashed potatoes, maccaroni and corn starch pudding. The hostess remarked to an invited guest to whom she wished to pay especial honor:

"I know that you like them all, and had these dishes prepared expressly to please you."

That her lumbers means all starch with these dishes prepared expressly to please you."

That her luncheon was all starch with the exception of the meat never occurred to her as an objection to the menu. I felt that it was wrong without being able to formulate my belief.

If you can take time to answer me by mail, please do it. If not, won't you say something in the Exchange on what seems to me an important matter to such of us as would like to feed our families (and, incidentally, ourselves) intelligently?

K. N. (Boston, Mass.).

This letter has set a-going a train of thought which cannot find expression in a private communication to a single individual.

in a private communication to a single individual.

"K. N." has worded a query that comes daily to the mind of the household caterer. I never order a meal without thinking, and often saying, "What will go well with this or that main dish?"—the "piece de resistance," as the French have taught us to name it. Instinctively, I condemn the combination of beef and two or three starchy vegetables, such as our intelligent correspondent enumerates. Re-

it. Instinctively, I condemn the combination of beef and two or three starchy vegetables, such as our intelligent correspondent enumerates. Reflection assures me of the justice, upon hygienic principles, of the instinctive revulsion. Beef is a "red meat," a heavy meat—nutritious, it is true, when properly masticated, but fatty in part—and demanding condiments in the form of horse-radish, mustard, pickles, etc., to make it go down palatably and rest easily on the stomach when down. In other words, we demand vegetable acids to help on the assimilation of suct and fibres.

While I do not know that any book or magazine has been published that deals with this subject, it is true that convention—which is an interchangeable term with fashion—has settled many of the mooted branches of this, as of many another difficult matter. An astonishing percentage of conventionalities will be found, upon examination, to be rooted and grounded in common sense.

It is not an arbitrary and irrational rule, then, which ordains that delicate green peas and currant jelly shall accompany roast lamb. The dictate of mint sauce in the same connection is based upon something which approximates natural selection. Green peas and apple sauce go as naturally with duck as apple sauce with pork; turnips with boiled mutton; sweet potatoes with roast beef, and boiled rice with fricasseed chicken. We serve cucumber sauce with shad, pass sliced lemon with soft shell crabs, and garnish brolled chicken with fried hominy, from the force of habit—or so we imagine. If interrogated as to any deeper reason for the habit, we fall back upon custom. Somebody set the fashion in culinary "frills" long ago, and one must be in the fashion in table appointments or be considered antiquated. Nobody who is anybody would think of serving venison without currant jelly. That custom has the favor of antiquity. The careless talker and superficial thinker never asks herself why the fashion was made in the first place, nor why everybody follows it slavishly—in the popular opinion. Epicures made a study of culinary affinities in days gone by, and we have entered into their labors—ignorantly, perhaps, but to our advantage.

Now and then somebody awakens to the consciousness that there must be reason back of action, and questions why these things are.

reason back of action, and questions why these things are.

Writers on dietetics explain that green esculents should enter into every meal in which meat or oil in any form plays a part. From them, too, we learn why the healthy system craves sweets after dinner, the acid to which sugars change in the process of digestion, correcting the grossness of fats. We comprehend, too, why buckwheat cakes and the like the grossness of fats. We comprehend, too, why buckwheat cakes and the like heat-making foods are wholesome in winter, and unwholesome in summer; also why they are more easily digested if the longing to coat them with molasses be gratified. The syrup is a beneficial agent in the business of converting the homely, hot and "hearty" favorite of the farmhouse kitchen into brawn and blood.

The theme is interesting and practi-

The theme is interesting and practically inexhaustible. It is one that commends itself with peculiar force to the housemother who would feed her brood with food convenient for it, in the deepest sense of the word.

The Dried Flour Ball

If "Eva," the young mother, who asked you for advice some time ago, will try the following remedy, I think she will soon see that her baby will derive much benefit from it. I know it proved abundantly successful in my own child's case many years ago:

Tie several spoonfuls of flour up in a piece of muslin, or linen; put it into a saucepan of boiling water and let it cook for three or four hours, according to the quantity of flour, until it becomes a solid mass. She will now have a hard white ball. Let her turn it out of the bag, and leave it in the sun all day. It may be dried in the oven if the need of the little one be urgent. When cold and perfectly dry, she should scrape enough at each time of feeding to make a sort of gruel with water, or milk and water. Her baby can readily digest this food, especially as he is twelve months old. Mine was only a few weeks old and it was perfectly assimilated.

months old. Mine was perfectly assimilated.

ANOTHER MOTHER (Ohio). ANOTHER MOTHER (Ohio).

ANOTHER MOTHER (Ohio).

Thirty-odd years ago, when my little ones were in the nursery, the subject to the dangers of teething and second summers, a kind friend, the wife of our family physician, dictated the formula of the "dried flour ball" to me, and I wrote it down as it came from her gentle lips. She had used it with each of her nine children, and believed it to be original with herself. After testing the efficacy of the simple remedy to my own satisfaction, I incorporated it into a section of my first household manual, under the heading: "Dried Flour for Teething Children."

Scores of letters from grateful mothers have told how widely the good news has spread. I am quite certain that the mother who recommends the recipe to her sister got it indirectly from my dear old mentor. I thank her for reminding me of it, and thus setting the admirable "simple" before our members. I have said how coulially and unhesitatingly I can indorse all she says in praise of it.

IX in a saucepan three cupfuls of coffee sugar, a cupful of boiling water, and one of the best quality of molasses. Set over the fire and bring to a boil. Add, then, a half-teaspoonful of cream-of-tartar, stirred in well. Cook steadily until the syrup hardens in cold water, when stir in a half cupful of butter and as much soda as will lie on a dime. Take at once from the fire when it boils up, after the effervescing is over, add any essence you like, and pull into light, yellow ropes. Lay these on a floured board, and cut into lengths of an inch and a half. Wrap in squares of buttered paper. They will be far superior in flavor to those sold in the shops under the same name. Maple Fudge.

Crush a pound of maple sugar fine with a rolling pin. Pour upon it a pint of hot milk, into which you have put a pinch of baking soda. Let the sugar melt slowly over the fire, and then bring to a fast boil. When the syrup threads from the tip of a spoon, stir in a tablespoonful of butter. When it reaches the boil again, pour into buttered pans, and cut into squares as it hardens.

Chocolate Fudge.

To three cupfuls of coffee sugar add a half pound of grated chocolate (best quality and unsweetened). Stir until thoroughly mixed, when wet with a half cupful of sweet cream; beat to a smooth paste, adding, as you go on, two tablespoonfuls of warmed butter. This done, put the mixture into a porcelain-lined kettle, and set it where it will melt very slowly. It should not reach the boil under two hours. At the end of that time, increase the heat, and boil fast for ten minutes, or until a teaspoonful "balis" if you manipulate it. Stir into the candy two tablespoonfuls of vanilla, and pour into buttered pans with straight sides. While still rather soft, mark into squares. To three cupfuls of coffee sugar add

Vanilla Caramels.

Wet two cupfuls of granulated sugar with half a cupful of milk. When it has dissolved, add a quarter teaspoonful of cream-of-tartar and set it at the side of the range until very hot, when draw to the front, and stir to z boil. Stir for ten minutes, or until a little dropped into cold water forms into a soft mass. Add a dessert-spoonful of vanilla, pour into a bread bowl and let it cool until you can handle it easily. Now beat with a flat spoon to a sort of doughy paste. Knead this, as you would bread, upon a board strewed with sugar, and roll into a sheet less than half an inch thick. Cut into squares.

Plain Fudge.

Dissolve two pounds of brown sugar, in a pint of milk. Add a pinch of soda, to prevent curdling, and cook in a porce-lain-lined saucepan until a bit dropped into cold water hardens into a brittle mass. Pour into a buttered pan with straight sides, and as it cools, cut into small squares with a wet knife.

Strain and press the leaves dry. Pour the teaupon three cupfuls of coffee sugar and set over the fire as soon as the sugar is dissolved. Add then a tablespoonful of vinegar and cook steadily until the candy breaks when dropped into cold water. Pour into a buttered pan and cut into caramels or pull into ropes.

Peanut Brittle.
