POETRY.

The After-glow.

In the hush of the summer evening
When the turmoil of day is still,
And the sun to rest in the glowing west
Has passed o'er the far blue hill;
In the slowly gathering twilight,
We stand where the waters flow,
And watch on their radiant surface
The light of the after-glow.

Like a trembling veil of glory
Over the landscape thrown,
The light on the river glitters
With a radiance all its own;
From heaven above the splendor
Falls on the waves below,
And the land in a calm sweet stillness
Lies in the after-glow.

Farther it spreads and farther,
Till it gilds the whole fair scene,
And each tree and cottage homestead
Glow in the golden gleam.
The top of the distant steeple
Is crowned with a bar of flame,
And the peaks on the far horizon
A touch of the glory claim.

But see! the bright light is fading,
Softly the golden ray,
Sinking into the river
Peacefully dies away.
A moment the hill-tops glitter
In the radiance faint and low—
Then only the light in memory
Remains of the after-glow.

And gazing upon the waters
As the twilight shadows fall,
We humbly ask our Father,
The loving God of All,
That life for us at sunset,
May, thro' His blessings, throw
A glory on earth's river
In love's bright after-glow.

SELECT STORY.

SALLY.

BY ALBERT FLEMING.

VII.

Sally went to Miss Parker's school. She had to face all the drudgery of preparing the girls for their lessons, and taking them safely through the rudiments. She knew what awaited her and did not flinch. During the last five years she had learned how to master her love, to use it as an incentive to hard work, to fight as it fought the battle alone; to fight at all in Kenneth's presence was impossible. Day by day she plunged with feverish vigor into the work of teaching, plodding on with a pale face and heavy eyes through the long list of pupils. During the night watches she thought it was a hundred times better that she should suffer than be, better that she should marry her, and his good name be clouded by her shameful story.

Time passed more quickly for Kenneth, for at the end of it she hoped Sally had none.

When the month was over Kenneth said, "Today I am going to Sally."

"What will you tell the whim of a moment ruin your life?" said Hannah.

"If I follow your advice two lives would be ruined."

That very day he went to Sreatham. Sally's work had been harder than usual. The everlasting exercise, the never ceasing scales, the persistent notes, the enormous difficulties of teaching suburban young ladies without voice or ear to sing had worn her out. Suddenly a pupil exclaimed, "Oh! there is such a handsome young man coming up the drive." (Sally was unmoved; no young man was likely to call on her.) "He must have come to see Miss Davison. That's four cousins in three weeks!"

Sally looked up and saw Kenneth. Her heart seemed to rush into her mouth. She dismissed the girl and staid herself. A mirror was in front of her, and she saw her own face pale as death, with dark shadows round the eyes. She wore a dingy old black dress but even that could not conceal the grace of the lovely young neck and the sweep of the beautiful shoulders. And now Kenneth entered and when she saw his radiant face, full of strength and fervor, she felt that he looked years younger than she did. That sorrowful girl's face full of pathetic endurance, appeared to her heart irresistibly, and without a moment's thought he flung his arms round her and kissed her.

All Sally's 19 years of life culminated in that first unwarrantable embrace. As her pretty, flushed face rested for a moment on his shoulder, her heart whispered, "Why not rest there forever?" Then she wrenched herself free, and her blush ebbed away, leaving her as pale as marble and as hard.

"You might, at least, have spared me this, and left me some self-respect," she said, looking like a young Joan of

Are. He ought to have been abashed and humbled, but he wasn't. "Sally!" he whispered, so tenderly that she drew back again, mistrusting herself and him. "Sally, I love you you know I do." Sally tried hard to keep back the flood of joy that welled up from her heart into her eyes.

"Do men in your rank of life act like that and speak afterward?" Looking down into the sweet depths of her eyes, he said:

"Oh my love, you are wasting moments that might be so sweet. We love each"—Ere he could finish Sally dashed in:

"Who told you I loved you? Have I ever led you to think I loved you?" He gazed at her with such sweet, manly assurance that she felt her anger melting away.

"Sally, my darling, I see it in your eyes—I hear it in your voice. Love has given me insight."

"Of course you know it." And her voice took those thrilling tones which had moved his heart so when she sang.

"I dare say every one does. I have loved you for years, and shall love you always. I am not ashamed to own it. It has been the strength of my life. If you had never spoken I should have gone on loving you all the same, and gone down to my grave single for your sake; but oh, my love, I shall never wed you—never be with you."

Kenneth would once more have flung his arms around her, but she composed herself by a great effort, and said:

"Wait just a moment and I will tell you all."

"You told me all when you said you loved me."

"Not all. Let me speak once and forever. What I am you made me. All I have you gave me; and in return I mean to guard your good name—to guard it from yourself and from me."

He interrupted her with an impatient gesture, but she persisted. "You know what I was when you found me. You think you know all but not one even told you that I had been in prison for theft—that I had my hair cut short, wore prison dress and ate prison food and—"

"Her voice failed her—her face grew deadly white—her hungry eyes searched his face to see if he shrank from her. To her joy the brightness of his eyes never dimmed for a moment. He took her hand with a sweet gesture of love and reverence, and holding it steadily between his own, he spoke:

"Dear I know it—have known it for years. Biddy came and told me long ago, and, knowing all, I'll ask you to be my wife."

Sally's blood slowly came back to her pale cheeks, slowly flooded her fair face with its tender rose, slowly the sweet light mingled with the tears in her eyes and conquered them. It was so doubly sweet that he should know all and yet love on. Her joy at first was too great for words. She moved a little closer to him, then with a swift, sweet abandonment she flung her arms around his neck and drew his face down to hers.

"But, dear," she whispered, "the world will know." As their lips met he answered:

"You are all the world to me."

A kind word.

A kind word has a magic power. Here is a striking incident in which this is shown: "Sir," said an old man one day to a minister, "would you like to know how it was that I, an old, gray-headed sinner, was instrumentally led to become a Christian?"

"Yes," replied the minister, "I would very much like to know."

"Well, sir, I was walking the street one morning, when I met a bright-eyed boy. The little fellow stopped up to me, and in the most polite manner imaginable, said, 'please sir, will you read it?' Now, I had always hated tracts and when any one offered them to me I generally got angry; and shame to say it, I sometimes swore dreadfully at them. But that 'please sir,' overcame me that morning. I could not swear at that gentlemanly little fellow with his kind 'please, sir.' No; so I took the tract, and I thanked the boy. As I had promised him that I would read it, I did read it. By God's mercy the reading of that tract led me to see that I was a sinner. It showed me that Jesus Christ was my only Saviour. It was the true means of bringing me to Christ. That 'please, sir,' was the key that unlocked my hard old heart."

Under Drainage.

The autumn is the best season for underdrainage. The ground is usually in a more favorable condition for prosecuting the work at that time, and there is generally more leisure for it.

There is still a very large amount of this work required on our farms to bring them in the best condition for being cultivated at the proper season and for producing to their full capacity. Every farmer whose lands require it should try and do more or less of this every season. It is unfortunate that much of the draining that has been done in this country has not been done to the perfect way in which the work has been performed. We know of no branch of work where the careful execution is of more importance than in laying drains, because of the difficulty of making repairs. If a wagon wheel gives way through defective workmanship it can at once be removed and the weak part repaired, but where a drain is to be mended the chief part of the work consists in getting down to the defective part to make the repair. Drains that last only a few years are expensive, and material that will not secure effective work for a long term of years should not be used at all, now that tiles are so abundantly provided.

If an underdrain is well laid with good tiles it should continue to do its work for generations, and with increasing rather than decreasing effectiveness, owing to the more thorough filtration in the soil as the years roll on. The measure of the value of a drain is that of its weakest or most poorly laid tile, just as the measure of the value of a chain is that of its weakest link.

The White Ribbon.

Edith J. Archibald, president of the W. C. T. U., writes the following to the Union Signal, from Cow Bay:

Down by the sea, from Hantsport in the west to Canis in the east, the narrow strait which divides the four counties of Cape Breton Island from the mainland, reaching down to the busy shipping and mining ports of North Sydney, Sydney and Cow Bay (next door to historic Louisbourg) extend the links of the golden chain of the W. C. T. U.

But the work is still in its infancy and there remains yet very much land to be possessed. We are looking forward to a large accession to our ranks this summer, after the feet of Francis R. Willard shall have passed this way, and her eloquent and forceful utterances shall have published the good tidings and spoken words of cheer and encouragement to her white-ribboned sisters in the land of "the murmuring pines and the hemlocks." May these things be!

Seeding Potatoes.

Experiments at the Wisconsin farm station showed that more merchantable potatoes were grown from heavy seeding both with whole and uncut potatoes, but this increase was not in proportion to the increased amount of seed. The proportion of small potatoes increased with the increase of seed. The smaller whole potatoes give inferior results to the smaller cuttings. Two single eyes in a hill yielded decidedly more than one, without a corresponding increase in small potatoes. No loss in yield followed planting in hills as compared with drills. The results were clearly opposed to cutting off the "seed end" of the potato before planting. No advantage followed sprinkling the cuttings with land plaster before planting.

Don't Forget.

That anxiety is easier to bear than sorrow. That talent is sometimes hid in napkins, and ancient never. That good brains are often kept in a poor looking vessel. That the time to bury a hatchet is, before blood is found upon it. That mistakes are often bought at a big price, and sold at a small one. That if it were not for emergencies, but little progress would be made in the world. That it is often better to go a good way round than to take a short cut across lots. That tears shed upon a coffin will not blot out the stains that may have been cast in life upon the stilled heart within it.

Five Minutes to Live.

A young man stood before a large audience in the most fearful position a human being could be placed—on the scaffold. The noose had been adjusted around his neck. In a few moments more he would be in eternity. The sheriff took out his watch, and said "If you have anything to say, speak now; as you have but five minutes more to live." What awful words for a young man to hear in full health and vigor?

Shall I tell you his message to the youth about him? He burst into tears, and said, with sobbing, "I have to die. I had only one little brother. He had beautiful eyes and flaxen hair. How I loved him! I got drunk—the first time. I found my little brother gathering strawberries. I got angry with him, without cause, and killed him by a blow from a rake. I knew nothing about it until I awoke the next day and found myself guarded. While key had done it! It has ruined me! I have only one more word to say to the young people before I go to stand in the presence of my Judge. Never, never, never, touch anything that can intoxicate!"

Think what one indulgence in drinking may do.

What a Man of Science Says.

I have long had the conviction that there is no greater cause of evil, moral and physical in this country than the use of alcoholic beverages. I do not mean by this that extreme indulgence produces drunkenness. The habitual use of fermented liquors to an extent far short of what is necessary to produce that condition, and such as is quite common in all ranks of society, injures the body and diminishes the mental power to an extent which I think few people are aware of. Such, at all events, is the result of observation during more than twenty years of professional life devoted to hospital practice, and to private practice in every rank above it. Thus I have no hesitation in attributing a very large proportion of some of the most painful and most dangerous maladies which come under my notice, as well as those which every medical man has to treat, to the ordinary and daily use of fermented drink taken in the quantity which is conventionally deemed moderate. But if I ventured one step further it would be to express a belief that there is no single habit in this country which does so much to deteriorate the qualities of the race, and so disqualifies it for entrance in that competition which in the nature of things must exist, and in which struggle the prize of superiority must fall to the best and to the strongest.—Sir Henry Thompson, F. R. S.

Hats and Heads.

It has been noticed by Henry Heath, who sends hats all over the world from Calcutta to Peru, that different nationalities possess heads of distinctive size, and shape. For instance, Germans have very round heads, a peculiarity shared by our own royal family. The average English head is what hatmakers call a good shape—that is rather long. The Scotch, one is not surprised to learn, are very long-headed. Canadians are distinguished by exceptionally large heads, South Americans by very small ones. Australians, again, have rather small heads. The subject is an interesting one and worth pursuing further if space allowed. The heads of individuals also vary a good deal from time to time, shrinking during illness or mental worry, and generally becoming smaller with advancing years. As to shape, there is such a thing as fashion; but it only affects mashers; men stick to much the same shape year after year.—Pull Mall Gazette.

Uses of Hot Water.

Hot water is one of the best among simple remedies. For instance, headache almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

A towel folded several times, and dipped into hot water, and quickly wrung out, and applied over the forehead or nape of the neck, will generally afford prompt relief.

A strip of flannel, or napkin folded lengthwise, and dipped into hot water and wrung out, and then applied around the neck of a child that has the croup, will sometimes bring relief in ten minutes.

Hot water taken freely half an hour before bedtime is helpful in the case of constipation, and has a most soothing effect upon the stomach.

A goblet of hot water taken just after rising, before breakfast, has cured thousands of indigestion, and no simple remedy is more widely recommended by physicians to dyspeptics.

Don't Get Seasick

Lemons, oranges, champagne—all these are recommended, says the Ladies' Home Journal, but the best recommendation, the most practical and common-sense, is to let the sea-sickness have its way and then you are over with it. You can modify any possible attack by a little care as to diet a day or two before sailing, by avoiding greasy and rich foods, and this is wise. But don't go on board with the settled conviction that you are going to be sick. Dismiss the thought. Keep on your feet the first day out. Walk up and down the deck continuously. By this method you get accustomed to the motion of the ship, tire yourself out, and, if you are any sort of a sleeper, you will sleep soundly the first night. Then the worst is over. But if not and you do get sick, just accept it philosophically. Of course you will feel miserable. But, let the spell run its course and it is done. And you are better for it, and certainly will be wiser than to try to cure it by a mixture of things which only give the stomach a reason for the continuance of proceedings. One of the leading medical authorities in the world says that fifteen grains of sulphate of quinine, administered two hours or four hours at the most before embarking will completely free even sensitive subjects from the horrors of sea sickness.

All the dirty, gummy hair preparations should be displaced at once by Ayer's Hair Vigor, and thousands who go around with heads looking like "the fetid porcupine" should hurry to the nearest drug store and purchase a bottle of the Vigor.

We know that Ayer's Hair Vigor differs from most hair tonics and similar preparations, in being perfectly harmless."—From Economical Housekeeping, by Eliza R. Parker.

Our Old Fire Company. That was a gay old company that we belonged to, Joe, away back in '68, when you and I ran with the machine. Do you remember that big fire in Hotel Row, on freezing night, when fifteen people were pulled out of their burning rooms and came down the ladder in their night clothes and you 'Dick' were brought down two 'kicks' at once - one in his arm, the other along to his back? Poor 'Dick'! He got the catarrh dreadfully from so much exposure, and suffered from it five years or more. We thought once he was going into consumption, sure. But finally he heard of Dr. Sage's Catarrh remedy and tried it and it cured him up as sound as a fiddle. I tell you, Joe, that catarrh remedy is a great thing. It saved as good a man as I have a fireman as ever trod shoe leather.

Miracle of Modern Days.

HAMILTON PRODUCE ONE OF HER MOST REMARKABLE CURES OF RECORD.

"TOTALLY DEBARKED," YET CURED. Hamilton Times, May 27th 1891.

One of the most remarkable cures in the history of medicine has just been effected in this city and the fame of it is fast spreading throughout the land. Over four years ago Mr. John Marshall, then employed as a manager of Mr. J. C. Williams' coal and railway works here, sustained a fall, which at the time was not thought to be serious. He dislocated his left shoulder and was confined to bed for some time. After a long and fruitless search for relief, he was finally cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

With an honorable girl, with an honorable man, an engagement carries with it something more than a few empty months of courtship. After courtship comes marriage. After marriage comes the home. To describe the reasons which to some young people seem sufficient to justify them, first in "flirting" and then getting "engaged," would answer no good purpose.

Doing Well.—Herbert.—"That man Eithers started at the bottom of the ladder." "Stoic"—"Where is he now?" "Herbert"—"He is holding his own."

Political Economy.—G.—"Robinson is a great free trader." P.—"I never knew that. How do you make it out?" G.—"Why, he never pays his bills."

Over fifty cases of Liver, Stomach, Kidney and Blood diseases have been cured in the past year in this province by using Dr. Norton's Blood Purifier after doctors and all other remedies have failed.

Lord Lansdowne leaves India in October. The Marquis of Lorne will succeed him in the viceroyalty. The princess Louise will go out with the Marquis.

Swimming to Church. A girl named Nyangandi, who lived near the Ogowe River, West Africa, one Saturday came in her canoe with two bundles of platelets to sell to the missionary. When she was going away Mrs. Batehall, the missionary's wife, said to her: "Now you must not forget that to-morrow will be the Sabbath day, and you have already promised to come every time." "Yes," said the girl, "I will surely come if I am alive." And so she did, but no one knew how she got there, until, at the close of the service, she told the girls that in the night her canoe had been stolen, and none of her friends would lend her one; but she had promised to come to church, and so she felt she must. She swam all the way. The current was swift, the water deep, and the river fully a third of a mile wide; but by swimming diagonally she succeeded in crossing the river.—New York Observer.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Mirand's Liniment the Lumberman's Friend. The difference between the barber and the sculptor is, the barber curls up and dies, while the sculptor makes faces and busts.

Mirand's Liniment cures Distemper. The man who sells beer by the gallon is the one exception to the rule that no man can serve two masters.

Mirand's Liniment cures Gout in Cows. Aims and Names.—She—"I'm so tired of an aimless life." He—"Dearst, I have a name I shall be only too glad to give you."

Ball players and athletes need Johnson's Anodyne Liniment for bruises, lacerations and cuts.

"But, Madams," said the tramp, "you can't expect me to saw wood on an empty stomach." "Oh, no," said the lady, "there is a warehouse in the shed."

The advice given with each bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is worth many times the cost.
