The County of Stafford, New Hampshire, is emarkable for its wild and broken scenery. remarkable to its wild and orders scenery.— Ranges of hills, towering one above another as tangled with dark and deep tavines, 'orn the magnificent cuatacersmic program and miscale current region.

A high Precipice, called Chocorna's Ciff, is rendered peculiarly interesting, by a legend, which tradiction alone has saved from utter oblivion. This spot, being in the midst overy romantic seenery is little known, and less visited, for the vicinity is as yet, untraversed by railroads or canals, and no "mountain house," perched on the tremendous buttlements allures the traveller hither to mock the maicale of nature with the insipidities of fashion.

icsty of nature with the insipidities of fashion. In olden times, when Goffe and Whalley passed for wizards and mountain spirits among the superstitious, the vicinity of the spot, we the superstitions, the vicinity of the spot, we have been describing was occupied by a very small colony, which, either from discontent or enterprise had retired to this remote part of New Hampshire. Most of them were ordinary men, led to this independent mode of life by impatience of restraint, which as frequently accommanies yulgar, obtlinger, a season. ly accompanies vulgar obstinacy as generous pride. But there was one master spirit among them, who was capable of a higher desmestic excitement, his hard features would rapidly light up, seeming like the sunshines flying over the shaded field in an April day.

His companion was one peculiarly calculated to excite and retain the deep strong energies of manly love. She had possessed extraordinary beauty; and had, in the full maturity of an excellent judgment, relinquished several splendid alliances, and incurred her father's displeasure for the sake of Cornelius Campbell. Had political circumstances proved favourable, his talents and ambition would unquestionably have worked out a path for emolument and fsme; but he had been a zealous and active enemy of the Stuarts; and the restoration of Charles the Second was a death-blow to his hojes of advancement in his counrestoration of Charles the Second was a death-blow to his hopes of advancement in his coun-try. Immediately flight became necessary; America was the chosen place of refuge, and to this solitary spot he withdrew with his fa-

M small settlement, in such a remote place, was of course subject to inconvenience and occasional sufferings. From the Indians they received meither rinjury or insult. No cause of quarrelling had ever arisen: and although their frequent visits were sometimes troublesome, they never had given indications of jealousy or malice. Chocorus was considered a prophet among them, and as such, an object of peculiar respect. He had a mind which education and motive, would have nerved with giant strength; but growing up in savage freedom, it wasted itself in fury and ungovernable passions. There was something fearful in the quiet haughtiness of his lip—it seemed like slumbering power, too proud to be lightly roused, and too implacable to sleep again. In his small black fiery eye, expressions lay coiled up like a beautiful snake. The white people knew that his hatred would be terrible; but they had never proved it, and even the children became too much accustomed to him to fear him. A small settlement, in such a remote place

Chocorua had a son about nine or ten years remnant of them departed from the fatal spot, old, to whom Caroline Campbell had occasion- to mingle with the populous and fortunate coold, to whom Caronne Campoen had occessor-ally made such gaudy presents as were likely to attract his savage fancy. This won the child's affections, so that he became a familiar visitant, almost an inmate of their dwelling; visitant, almost an inmate of their dwelling; and being unrestrained by the contresses of ci-ilized life, he would inspect every thing and tasted of every thing which came in his way. Some poison prepared for a mischievous fox which had long troubled the little settlement, was discovered and drunk by the Indian boy, and he went home to his father to sicken and die.

From that moment icalousy and hatted took

From that moment jealousy and hatred took possession of Chocorna's soul. He never told his suspiciors; he brooded over them in secret, to nourish the deadly revenge he contemplated against Cornelius Campbell.

plated against Cornelius Campbell.

The story of the Indian animosity is always the same. Campbell left his hut for the fields one bright morning in June. Still a lover the ten years a hust and, his last Isok was towards his wife, answering her parting smile—his last action a kiss for each of his children. When has action a giss for each with which he returned, they were dead—all dead! and their disfigured bodies too surely showed that an Indian's hand had done the work!

In such a mind, grief like all other emotions, was tempestuous. Home had been to him the only verdant spot in the wide desert of bie. In his wife and children he had garnered up all his life-heart, and now they were torn from him. The remembrance of her love clung to him like the death grapple of a drowning man, num use the neath grapple of a drowning man, sucking him down in darkness and death, This was followed by a calm a thousand times more terrible, the creeping agony of des-pair, that brings with it no power of resis-tance.

For many days those who knew and reverenced him, feared that the spark of reason was forever extinguished. But it rekindled again, and with it came a wild demoniac spirit of revenge. The death groan of Chocorus would make him smile even in his dreams—and when he looked, death seemed too pitiful a vengeance for the anguish that was eating into his very soul.

into his very soul.

Chocorua's brethren were absent on a hunting expedition when he committed murder and those who watched his movements ob-ing expedition when he committed murder; and those who watched his movements observed that he frequently climbed the high precipice, which afterwards took his name probably looking at for their return. Here Campbell proposed to effect his deadly purpose. Having traced the dark-minded prothet to his lair, he was one morning startled at a loud voice, from beneath the precipice, commanding him to throw himself into the deep abyas below. He knew the voice of the enemy, and replied with an Indian's calmess, "the Great Spirit gave life to Chocorus, he will not take it away at the command of a white man" "Then hear the Great Spirit speak in the white man's thunder," exclaimed Campbell, as he pointed his rifle to the precipice. Chocorus, though fierce and fearless as the panther, had never overcome his dread of fire-arms. He placed his hands to his ears to shut out the stunning report, the next moment the lood bubbled from his neck and he recled fearfully on the edge of the precipice. But the stuaning report, the next moment the blood bubbled from his neck and he recled fearfully on the edge of the precipice. But recovering and raising himself on his hands he spoke in a voice rendered more terrific as the huskiness encreased—" a curse upon ye, white men! May the Great Spirit curse ye when he speaks in the clouds, and his words are fire! Chocorun had a son—and ye killed him while the eye still loved to look on the bright sun and green earth! The evil spirit breathe death upon your cattle! Your graves lie in the war-path of the Indians! Panthers howl and wolves fatten over your bones!—Chocorun goes to the Great Spirit—bis curse stays with the white men.?

The prophet sunk upon the ground—still uttering inandable maledictions—and they left his bones to whiten in the sun. But his curse rested in the settlement. The to mahawk and the scalping knife were busy among them; the winds tore up trees and hurled tiem at their dwelling; their crops were blasted, their catlle died, and sickness came upon the strongest men. At last the dead in his fult.

To this day the town of Burton, in New-Hampshire, is remarkable for a pestilence which infects its cattle; and the superstitious think that Chocarua's spirit sits enthroused on his precipice, breathing curses upon them.

The tug of war is again about to commence in real carnest, and the government and loyal inhabituals of the two Canadas are now to have a trial of strength with American sympathisers and French rebels, for the purposs of deciding which party shall have possession of the country. Sir John Colhorne has received the most positive information that slong the whole frontier line in the states of New York, Ohio, and Michigan, the most extensive preparations are making for an invasion, and there is no doubt but that Vermont and Maine will also turn out their horders of buscancers for a similar purpose. Sir John Colhorne has once again thrown himself on the loyalty of the volunteers of this city, and we are sure that his appeal to their patriotism will not be made in vain. We are sure that there is not a man who can board of the seg git siles being his fatherland, but will respond with cheerfulness and alaerity to the spirit -tring call, and will be anxious, with his life, if necessary, to assist in protecting his country from the domination of theives and murderers. KING LOG AND KING STORK.

Or, The Lament of " La Petite Famille." O, old King Log was a good oil seed,

And well did he love the flowing bowl,

The song, the laugh, the jest;

And merry were all in his castle hall

To "the music of knife and fork;

But, alsa-aday' he has pass of away,

And now we have got King Stork.

Old King Log would sit at his board Surrounded by kingly cheer; Old King Log would sit at his board Surrounded by kingly cheer; et drunk us a bod, O'er a pipe and a jug of beer; all office, At your house or mine he would gainly dines. And now we have got King Stork.

So mild was the mood of King Lug the good,
And he lov'd not your brawler nor fighter,
When they smote one check King Lug was so meek
That the other he held to the smiter;
Yet when both checks were util'd, his friends
would be half'd,
would be half'd,
And rail that he had not got three:
Ahl well may we monn that King Lug is gone,
Such another we ne'er shall see.

But they scoff'd at King Log and pull'd his beard, And cuff'd him, and scratched his poll, Though he gave up the "strangers" and bureau-crat heard. To the real Enfans du Sol; Had the Enfans been wise, then the day was their

But now it is up-hill work :—

Log is gone,

And we have, in his stead, King Stork.

King Log loved mirth, King Log loved case; King Stork still his greatness increases; King Log said, "My friends, just do what yes please; King Stork just does what he pleases: And we sigh, though in vain, for our Log back

(Oh! then we so happy should be,)
But, alas! he is dead—his spirit is fled—

LIFE AND DEATH.

Every thing has two distinct principles to

THE PRINCIPLE OF LIFE THE OTHER

THE PRINCIPLE OF DEATH.

So long as the principal of Life predomin-ates, Health is enjoyed. When the principle of Death, Sickness takes place. How is this accounted for t the principle of Death, I mean the principle of decomposition or decay, which is principle of decomposition of decay, when is each hour going on in the human frame from the hour of birth, to that of our final exit. While the radural outlets—the pores—the bowels—and all other directories of the body, discharge these decayed particles as fast they are generated, we are in a state of health; we are free from the presence of the

When, from breathing an impure atmos When, from breathing an impure atmosphere, living in a vicinity of swamps, or where we are in the constant habit of coming in contact with bad swells—cillwis arising from obnaxious accumulations of animal or vegetable hodics in a state of putridity, being infected from a living body under the influinfected from a living body under the influence of disease in a malignant state; or sedentary occupations; or, in short, any cause which promotes decomposition fasterthan the somach and bowels and the other exerctories can remove, naturally; we are then in satur of disease. And should the cause which procan remove, naturally; we are then in state of discass. And should the cause which produces this state of the body remain, and nothing be done to drive the accumulated and accumulating impurities out of the body, the principle of death or decomposition, will become pararount, and the last glimmering of life de-

How then, shall we counteract these death dispensing influences? How?

PURGE!—Yes—I say Purge!
The magic in that word shall yet be understood, if this hand or brain can accomplish so stood, if this hand or brain can accomplish so mighty an explanation. Ves, purged be that pain in the head, the back, the bowels, the foot, the stomach, the side, the throat. Does it arise from internal or external cause,—I still say purge!—For know this self-evident truth, that pein cannot exist, save by the pre-sence of some impurity—some deposite of decomposed particles upon the organ or part where the pain is seated. And purging disaccomposed particles upon the organ or pain is seated. And purging discharges this impurity by the bowels, and continuing the practice daily will cure every complication of di-ease; and will prevent any one from becoming seriously indisposed; even when in c nstant contact with the most ma-when in c nstant contact with the most ma-lignant fevers which cannot by possibility seriously affect the body, if we are continually careful to preserve it in a pure state, by fre-quent and effectual purgation. Hippocrates says, "Purgation expulses what must be ex-pulsed, and patients find relief; if, on the confrary, they are tormented by purgation, it is a proof there are yet matters which must be expulsed."

The subscriber of this has resided in every variety of climate, and by always purging on the first appearance of sickness, has enjoyed for the last ten years, uninterrupted health. For we may call such the state of him who have sick more than 6 or 8 hours, about the time it takes to secure the effect of a purgative. The purgative I make use of is my grandfather's pills, and they are, to my certain knowledge, the most judiciously balanced purge in existence. I have used them for 8 months daily, in does of from 2 to 16 pills per day, to satisfy myself as to their innocence. It therefore, cannot be doubted. It is my opinion, that any person, be he ever so prostrated by disease, provided he is capable of taking exercise at all, may lengthen his life to 60 years, by continuing to essist his natural functions with the BRANDETH VEGETA. The subscriber of this has resided in every functions with the BRANDETH VEGETA-BLE PILLS. Death never can take place until the Principle of Decomposition puts out the lamp of life. And that would seldom be before 60 or 70 years, was this principle of purgation always resorted to on the first aprance of sickness.

In the hope that these remarks may be of ome service, I am the public's obedient ser-
