PARTICULARS OF U. S. SHIPS SENT TO BERLIN.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The United States has adopted the practice of notifying the German Admiralty through ambassador Gerard of the time of departure of every passenger ship sailing under the American flag, and approximately the hours during which the ship will pass through the war zone; this precaution is being taken in order that German submarine commanders may be on the watch for American vessels and prevent a repetition of the attack upon the tank ship Gulfport.

Necessity the Mother of Invention

The Kingston Whig says:—Rev. P. Pilkey, one of Queen's University's recent graduates and formerly a well-known football player, is doing great work in Northern British Columbia where he was sent to stem the tide of wickedness. At Queen's everyone knew Peter Pilkey either personally or by reputation for he was a leader, that the Presbyterian Church wanted in this British Columbia district. Men like Pilkey might be making big money in some other profession, but like many another, Peter Pilkey chose to "serve." Here is what he did some time ago.

A missionary's pocket is never full of money, but generally empty. Peter Pilkey wished very badly to attend the Presbytery meeting at New Westminster, but was minus the "where-withal." However he found a way out. A prisoner was to be sent to penitentiary at New Westminster, so the Presbyterian missionary in the British Columbia wilds had himself appointed a special constable, and he travelled nearly 200 miles in one way and another to his destination. He landed his prisoner safely and then attended Presbytery.

LAI D TO REST

The large number of friends who assembled at the Marchmont Home yesterday afternoon, for the funeral of Miss Grace Ramsay, was a tribute to the loving esteem in which the deceased lady was held by a large circle of friends. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The service at the Home was conducted by the Rev. R. Wallace, assisted by the Rev. C. G. Smith, and Mr. Perry. Among the friends present from a distance were Mr. Tom Ramsay from Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richardson from Rochester.

The pall bearers were Col. Ponton, Mr. J. J. Haines, Mr. S. Burrows, Mr. Perry, Mr. McBride and Mr. H. O. Knight.

Child's Death

Ronald A. Smith, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Smith, residing at 100 St. George Street, died yesterday at the Belleville hospital.

Miss Kathleen Boland is spending her holidays in Toronto.

Miss Mabel Miller, Wellington St., left today to spend the summer at Timagami Summer Resort, Timagami, Ont.

EITHER SUICIDE OR ACCIDENT

Finding of the Jury in the John Scott Inquest at Marmora.

Coroner Dr. W. S. Harper of Madoc held an adjourned inquest at Madoc yesterday to inquire into the death of John Scott who was found on Sunday morning, June 20th near his home with a bullet wound through his head.

Dr. Gardner of Eldorado gave evidence as to the nature of the wound. His testimony went to show that the shot might have been fired intentionally or by accident. The muzzle of the gun had been close to his head for there were indications of burning from the powder. The direction taken by the bullet might have resulted from the gun being held purposely to cause death or it might have been received through an accidental discharge.

Mr. Scott was a bachelor and lived with his widowed sister, Mrs. Brown, who owned the farm. Also resident in the house were Miss Scott, another sister and Mrs. McCann and Miss Brown, both daughters of Mrs. Brown.

The evidence of the family and of the neighbors went to show that the family relations were of the most cordial nature. Mr. Scott was a man of congenial temperament and without known enemies. He appeared to be in his usual cheerful frame of mind and was not subject to depression, melancholy or any morbid tendency such as might have caused suicide.

The jury after a brief deliberation brought in the following verdict:—That John Scott came to his death on June 19th, inst., on lot 20 Con. 10, township of Marmora, by reason of a bullet wound. It is impossible for us to say from the evidence whether his death was accidental or self-inflicted.

Struck by Lightning.

A heavy electric storm passing over Madoc and destroyed by fire the barn of Mr. J. E. Emmons, second concession of Tyendinaga. Mr. Emmons, residing at his farm, was on the premises at the time the lightning struck the barn. The business loss is estimated at $1000. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Emmons.

Police Court

Mrs. Aloysia Fisher was arrested, charged with being drunk. The case was enlarged for ten days.

GENERAL ALDERSON'S ADDRESS

Rev. J. F. Fraser Has Received From His Son a Copy Which Mrs. Alderson Sent to all Wounded Canadians in Hospitals

Rev. J. F. Fraser has received from his son, Harold Fraser, who was wounded at the Battle of St. Julien, a copy of the address of General Alderson to the Canadian troops after twelve days of strenuous fighting. All the wounded in hospitals received copies of the address from Mrs. Alderson, wife of the General, because they were not on the field when he delivered the address. The message reads:—

"All units and all ranks of the 1st Canadian Division, I tell you truly, that my heart is so full I hardly know how to speak to you; it is full of two feelings, the first being sorrow for the loss of those comrades of ours who have gone, and the second, pride in what the 1st Canadian Division has done.

"As regards our comrades who have lost their lives—and we will speak of them with our caps off—there he took off his cap, and all did likewise, my faith is the Almighty is such, that I am perfectly sure that, when men die, as they have died, doing their duty and fighting for their country, for the empire, and to save the situation for others, in fact, to die for their friends, no matter what their past lives have been, no matter what they have done that they ought not to have done (as all of us do)—I repeat, I am perfectly sure that the Almighty takes them, and looks after them at once. Lads, we cannot leave them better than like that, (here he put on his cap, and all did the same). "Now I feel that we may, without false pride, think a little of what the Division has done during the past few days.

"I would first of all tell you that I have never been so proud of anything in my life as I am of this army, with '1 Canada' on it (pointing to it) that I wear on my right arm. I thank you and congratulate you from the bottom of my heart, for the part each one of you have taken in giving me this feeling of pride. "I think it is possible that you do not, all of you, quite realize that if we had retired on the evening of the 22nd of April—when our allies fell back before the gas, and left our left flank quite open—the whole of the 27th and 28th Divisions would probably have been out of Canada, certainly they would not have got away a gun or a vehicle of any sort, and probably no more than half the infantry. "This is what our Commander-in-Chief meant when he telegraphed, as he did, that the Canadians saved the situation! My lads, if ever men had a right to be proud in this world, you have.

"I know my military history pretty well, and I cannot think of an instance, especially when the cleverness and determination of the enemy is taken into account, in which troops were placed in such a difficult position, nor can I think of an instance in which so much depended on the standing fast of one Division.

"You will remember the last time I spoke to you, just before you went into the trenches at Sully, now over two months ago, I told you about my old Regiment—the B. W. Kent—having gained a reputation for not budging from their trenches, no matter how they were attacked. I said then that I was quite sure that in a short time, the army out here would be saying the same of you.

"I little thought, none of us thought—how soon those words would come true. But now today, not only the army out here, but all Canada, all England, and all the Empire, are saying it of you.

"The share each unit has taken in earning this reputation is no small one."

"I have three pages of congratulatory telegrams from His Majesty the King downwards which I will read to you, with also a very nice letter from our Army Commander, Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien.

"Now, I doubt if any Divisional Commander, of any division, ever had so many congratulatory telegrams and messages as these and remember, they are not merely polite and sentimental ones, they express just what the senders really feel.

"There is one more word I would say to you before I stop, you have made a reputation second to none gained in this war, but remember, no man can live on his reputation, he must keep on adding to it. That you will do so I feel just as sure as I did two months ago when I told you that I would now make a reputation when the opportunity came.

"I am now going to shake hands with your officers, and as I do so, I would like you to feel that I am shaking hands with each one of you. I would actually do it if time permitted. "No, we will not have any cheering now—we will keep that till you have added to your reputation, as I know you will."

ITALIANS WERE COMMITTED

For Trial—Investigation in Police Court

(From Thursday's Daily)
Francisco Bell, laborer, aged 25 years; Joe Friski, laborer, 31, and Antonaccio Carmine, railway brakeman, 25 years, all single, were arraigned in Magistrate Masson's court this morning charged with on June 5th breaking and entering Mr. J. Bargman's store with intent to steal and with having stolen a number of gold and gold-filled watches and jewellery, the property of Mr. Bargman. They did not elect to have a trial.

Mr. P. J. M. Aderson appeared for the crown, Mr. W. Carnew for the informant and Mr. W. D. M. Shorey for the accused.

As a result of the investigation they were committed for trial.

Mr. Bargman testified that the prisoners had been in his store between four and six o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday June 5th. They had come in and looked around. Finally one bought a cap and another paid for it. They went out and came in again, one picked up a straw hat and a second said he thought he would look at a pair of pants. The former Frank Bell said he was working with the show here. He did not buy but went out saying he would be back. Nor did the other buy any trousers. The first visit lasted half an hour, the second 10 or 15 minutes.

Mr. Bargman said he had seen the men later in Toronto jail. The large heap of jewellery displayed on the court table belonged to him. He had seen it in Toronto. It had disappeared from his store between 11 p.m. June 5th and 10 a.m. June 6th.

Carmine had one of the watches in his pocket when arrested. Detective Newton said in Toronto in the presence of the prisoners.

Sergeant Naphia also testified in the hearing.

Shed Was Burned

(From Tuesday's Daily.)
At five o'clock yesterday afternoon fire did considerable damage to a lean-to shed near Mr. Gerald Rose's garage, Campbell street. The flames succeeded in preventing the flames from invading the repair shop and a portion of the shed only was destroyed. The property is owned by Mr. F. Doan. The loss is light. Children are thought to have got into the place and innocently started the fire.

To The Golden Gate in 1915

IS THERE IN ALL THE WORLD ANOTHER SUCH SPOT as the Golden Gate in romance and attraction? Long before gold was discovered in California the Golden Gate had been named and was the haven craved by hundreds of intrepid navigators who had wearily voyaged around the Horn, seeking California's hides and timber. The discovery of gold made it the most talked of spot in the world—the magic gateway to incalculable wealth—the spot above all others to which the eyes of voyagers from all the seas were turned with longing.

In 1915 it will possess an emphasized interest for thousands upon thousands. For, just within the Golden Gate on the shores of the beautiful blue bay of San Francisco, lies the site of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition—the Mecca in that year for all the world.

This newspaper will send a party of young women to the great exposition at the Golden Gate. It is probable that the earth does not hold more of varied loveliness, romantic charm and thrilling interest than these young women, our guests, will see on this trip.

Many candidates have been nominated to go in our party. If you are one of these make sure of your election. Be one of those who, at our expense, will see the Golden Gate and all the beauties that lie within it.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill. — "I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now." — Mrs. M. R. KANSCHER, 1488 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case. Dayton, Ohio. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition." — Mrs. J. W. SHUMAN, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

STIRRING APPEAL BY UNION LEADERS

Prominent Laborites Cooperating With Lloyd George--Example to the World.

LONDON, June 28.—Trade Union leaders have issued a manifesto addressed to their fellow trade unionists, saying: "We are faced with a great responsibility and at the same time are presented with a magnificent opportunity. We are called upon to assist in saving our nation and its allies who are fighting for civilization and international law as against barbarism and brute force." After calling attention to the serious position of the British and Russian armies in the field, in consequence of the shortage of munitions the manifesto appeals to "every skilled workman of the engineering and allied trades who is not at present engaged upon war work to enroll himself as a volunteer in this hour of need and to demonstrate to his comrades in the trenches and to the whole world that British trade unionism stands for all that is best in national life, national freedom and in national security."

Gerard yesterday called at the German Foreign Office and presented the American Note regarding the American ship William J. Frye, sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich in the south Atlantic. The note finds the German conditions for delay in the payment of compensation until the case is passed upon by a prize court to be unconvincing and asks that payment be made now.

THE BABIES An After-the-War Problem.

It does not require much deep thinking to know that the main reason why the Germans thought they could strike at Paris last August was the fact that there are about seventy millions of Germans and about forty millions of French. Had there been seventy millions of French and forty millions of Germans it is not likely that the Germans would have gone to war with France. Distinguished Frenchmen had been warning the French people for years that their declining birth-rate would one day place the nation in jeopardy. It is unfortunately true that prophets are very rarely listened to until too late. No one took much notice of what Admiral Sir Percy Scott said about submarines. Lord Roberts went up and down the country speaking of open to half-empty halls, in his endeavor to arouse England to a sense of its peril. And, no doubt, if at this early stage The Daily Mail directs attention to a great "after-the-war" problem, the problem of the child, our warnings will receive just as much consideration as our long-repeated warnings of Germany's war preparations.

doctors and the nurses are daily growing more engrossed in the task of healing men so that they may return quickly to the firing line. Up and down the country, in almost every community, however small, there is now a hospital for the wounded. War had been managed with the forethought of the brave men who have been broken in the war. In no country and in no war have medical arrangements approached the perfection of those of this Empire. Indeed, if the whole war had been managed with the foresight displayed by the Royal Army Medical Corps, the Red Cross Society, and the St. John Ambulance Association, we believe that our military position would have been a far happier one than it is. Woman's Supreme Duty. It is idle to speculate on most of the "after-the-war" topics. "After the war" will there not be a period of great commercial depression? "After the war" will not the National Debt exceed the bounds of possible repayment? Such discussions do not matter at the moment, because no one can speak with any authority on such subjects. But there is an essential question, and one that can and should be tackled at once, and that is the baby question. Whatever our fate may be in this war, whatever social upheavals may result, it is obvious that the chief consideration is the supply of children for carrying out the high ideals that it is and given in all the countries in the world except Germany, Austria, and Turkey. In the midst of all our war work, and every day sees some new scheme or society in operation—we must see to it that the utmost care shall be given to the children who twenty years hence may have to repel another German attack and who, in any event, will have to carry aloft the banner that has been the emblem of real freedom for a thousand years. This war has touched every life, and in a peculiar way it has affected the little lives. Not only are all sorts of agencies for their care and welfare removed to other spheres of feminine activity, but even the first necessity of child-life—milk—is already in some places more difficult to obtain than formerly. Many months ago milk and eggs were denied at the hotels of Northern France because they were wanted for the wounded; and as the war develops and our wounded become more and more numerous, urgent steps must be taken by the women of this kingdom to see that childhood is cared for and the supplies it needs are guarded most watchfully. The mortality among infants at all times is one of the distressing features of what is called civilization, but now, at the very moment when we need every possible child for the guardianship of our heritage in the future, this factor becomes increasingly important. Munitions of Future Peace. With the mothers of the working classes doing more and more of men's work it is obvious that the children must become more and more neglected unless a great extension of day nurseries and the retention of local nurses for the civil population and other obvious remedies can be arranged. For want of sufficient children France has been twice invaded by Germany. In this conflict we have been most fortunate in being attacked by Germany while she has other nations opposing her. We may not always be in so favorable a position. Many people fear that the eventual peace terms may be such as will enable the Germans afterwards to single out their enemies, and particularly England, individually. For this, if for no other reasons, women who are looking for war work should first see if they cannot do something to cherish the children. Shells and machine guns are the principal munitions of the present war, but infants are the munitions of the future peace.—London (Eng.) Daily Mail.

THE GLORY OF MASONRY

Annual Church Parade of Masons in Honor of St. John the Baptist Yesterday.

From Monday's Daily.
Midsummer Day, June 24th, was St. John the Baptist's Day and yesterday in honor of the festival, the Masonic Fraternity of Belleville attended divine service. The brethren were out in large numbers, and were accompanied by a large number of resident past district deputies and by R. W. Bro. Clarke, the present D.D.G.M. The annual service was held at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. Bro. Chas. Geo. Smith, district deputy grand chaplain officiating. Special music for the occasion was rendered by Miss Wanda Riggs, organist; Miss Brown, soloist, and a large choir. The order of service was organ prelude, doxology, prayer for illumination, hymn "O God our Help in Ages Past," responsive reading of Psalm 94, the reading of the Gloria Logos, Scripture reading, St. Matthew XXV, 31-46; prayer; anthem "Pilgrims of the Night"; solo "Rock of Ages," Miss Brown; hymn "The Son of God goes forth to War," anthem, "Sun of My Soul," and hymn "Lead Kindly Light."

"The Glory of Masonry."
The district chaplain chose for his text St. Matthew XXV-40. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."
Not a word of despair, but a vision of the glorious kingdom marks these words towards the close of Christ's ministry. We are amazed at such regal splendor in the hour of danger and death. He saw the time when all would be won to Him by His love and sacrifice. These chapters give a panoramic view of the Last Judgment. The thought is not "when will He come, but are we ready when He shall come?"
The glory of Masonry is that which exalts, incultures and exhorts not a speculative but a practical Christianity in the name of Jesus and the ties of the brotherhood. It is not irreligious. It acknowledges God at every turn. No lodge can be opened or closed, no degrees conferred without the Word of God. Every man entering the threshold is reminded of the Omnipotent Deity. An Atheist cannot enter the ranks of Masonry.
The teachings of Masonry run parallel with Scriptural teaching and illustrates it in the question of service. It teaches trust in the word of "Father as the first step. It teaches that out of darkness we step into light. Masonry impresses its members with the thought that love is the basis of all.
The brethren missed familiar faces at the service. Its tenets have led many to take up arms and fight in defense of right. But they are present in spirit.
Masonry teaches its members to support and defend each other in doing right but not in wrong. It is

Rev. A. R. Sanderson Closed 4 Years' Pastorate Last Evening--Goes to Campbellford

From Monday's Daily.
His four years' pastorate in Belleville was brought to a close last evening in Holloway Street Methodist Church by the Rev. A. R. Sanderson who goes to Campbellford this week to take up a new charge. His popularity was evinced by the large congregation which gathered to hear his farewell address.

Patriotic School Children of City

Now that the schools are closing a little incident which recently occurred would not be out of place. The boys and girls of Alexandria school being desirous of showing their patriotism, on Victoria Day decided to dispense with fire crackers and donate the money usually expended in this way to help the soldiers on the firing line and as a result Miss Clara Yeomans, treasurer of the Belleville Women's Red Cross and Patriotic Association received $15.00, a contribution from the scholars of the school saved in this way.
Then Miss Fleming's class decided to do something for the purchase of bandages and make a personal effort in saving their pennies and doing services for remuneration and gathered together the sum of $5 to be given to the Women's Patriotic and Red Cross Association for assisting in getting things for the soldiers. Mrs. O'Flynn was called into the school and Mr. Gordon Collins representing the Association presented her, as one of the representatives of the Women's Patriotic and Red Cross Association with $5 which had been saved by the children. Mrs. O'Flynn on behalf of the Association thanked the children for their thoughtfulness and the teacher for the gift and praised the spirit that prompted the act. The happy face of the teacher and the smiling and delighted children gave evidence of their deep interest in what had been done.
The scholars of the whole school were also thanked for their kindly act in saving $15 which was donated to the school to the fund. This spirit which permeates throughout the school children is the one that is going to win the victory for the Empire and we are delighted that the school children have shown throughout the city such an interest in the great cause of the Empire.
Saturday Miss Helen Sinclair and Miss Jessie Wims presented to the association $2 earned by themselves for material for the socks for the boys on the fighting line.

MADOC CHURCH Celebrates Anniversary

On June 24th, 1865, Fifty Years Ago, the Corner Stone of St. John the Baptist Church, Madoc, was Laid with Masonic Honors, and on Sunday last the fiftieth anniversary was celebrated by the attendance of the Masonic Order, about seventy strong, for Divine service in the afternoon

The special preacher for the occasion was the Rev. H. C. Blagrove, D.D., rector of Christ Church, Belleville, assisted by the Rev. Rural Dean Creagan, of Deseronto, and the local pastor, Rev. A. E. Smart.
There were two special present, Mrs. Hungerford and Mr. Chas. O'Hara, at Sunday's service who attended the ceremony of the laying of the corner stone.
The sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. Blagrove was the best Masonic address ever listened to by the local members, all of whom are loud in their praise of the forcefulness in which the emblem, and what they stood for, was put forth.
Rev. Rural Dean Creagan delivered special sermons at the morning and evening services. The evening sermon deserved special mention. He compared the story of Ahab and Jezebel's bid for commercial power to the present war, claiming that owing to financial interests war was an impossibility. He pointed out that the present crisis has aroused the Empire to realize their dependence on God.—Review.
The pastor expressed his belief in systematic work in a study.
The man who fulfills the full duty of a charge is accomplishing a big man's job. There are people to comfort in time of sorrow, to sympathize with in the hour of the fall. Then there is the joy of extracting to the truer life, besides the joy of seeing souls saved and of co-operation with Christ in His mission. "I thank God that

THE PRESENT UNSATISFACTORY MILITARY SITUATION IN EUROPE

Mr. J. J. B. Flint Gives His Impressions in Regard to the Present Outlook--France Has Saved the Situation for the Present--What About the Future?

Dear Sir:

The necessity of another contingent being raised in Canada has been declared by authority.

The time has arrived when it is necessary to examine the situation calmly but earnestly. It has been a great mistake to undertake our enemies. Germany reveals strength far beyond the estimates given to us by military experts. We were to be brave, up to the period of the formation of the Coalition Government, that matters were of a rosy hue, and that it was purely a question of time until the allies would conquer. Like a bolt from the blue, came the un- welcome fact that the Government could not go on, owing to depressions among the war lords. Churchill and Fisher; and the fact that a terrible attack was made against Kitchener by the "Times" and "Mail" after the long visit of the owner of both papers and Sir John French. This would not have been attempted had not the true and most dangerous position of the allies been discovered. No doubt the "Times" echoed Sir John French's views. Success depends chiefly upon explosives. These had not been provided in the necessary quantities. Without them defeat was certain. The bravest Canadians and British were compelled to submit to a hail of shells, under cover of which, the Germans approached. Unsupported by artillery, only the bullet and bayonet, could be read with the terrible results we know of. Tens of thousands of men were in the game today had they been provided with munitions of war. Upon the back of these attacks comes an envoy of Sir John French to tell the British Parliament, the Germans, and the expectant world, that had it not been for the undescribable bravery of the French, within the last six weeks that the allies upon the Western line would have been defeated. Do we understand the meaning of Sir John French's statements? What must be the dreadful peril in the West face when such a statement is given to our enemies, and to all neutral nations with whom we are negotiating?

and entreats labor. The British work man (apparently) is even unwilling to give up or curtail his drinking, altho he knows the peril. Now, what appears to be the true condition of affairs? Germany is holding the West in check, until she smashes Russia as she intended to do to France. For the present she has succeeded, and it must necessarily be a long time before Russia can resume the offensive along the immense line of battle. In the meantime, she has vertically lost Galicia and retreated to her own borders. What will the Germans do? Easily answered. They have made a new army of 500,000 men. They will send these men, together with probably at least three-quarters of a million withdrawn from the East. They will hurl this avalanche upon the West. They are determined by so doing to remain on the line. Re- member, also, that the Canadians recently saved the day. What conclusion can you draw if these immense forces are hurled upon the thin line of the allies? If the Germans gain the French sea coast, then they can shell Dover and ten miles beyond into the interior of England from the French shore.

The question remains, can Kitchener and Lloyd George send men and sufficient explosives to France and hurl back these German forces? If they can, success will follow, if they cannot, you can picture the result. The stern fact is, now before us, if we do not get immense quantities of explosives and a vast number of men the result is a foregone conclusion. Therefore, let every young man, and every man within the age limit, remember that it is now or never and go boldly forward and enlist under the old flag and for the honor of Canada and Britain.

A very large number have been enrolled in The Ontario's Great Popularity Campaign and many are earnestly working to secure for themselves one of the splendid tours that it provided free of cost.

Some are rolling up considerable votes for themselves, but others have already grown weary in their little effort.

A single refusal to subscribe for the paper, or a sour look is sufficient to turn many from their purpose.

The universal experience with newspaper contests is that the competitors narrow down to half a dozen or so earnest workers in each district.

Do you desire for yourself one of these wonderful tours? There is only one way to make it certain, and that is to enter upon the work with a determination to win. Lack of enthusiasm, want of definite purpose, ease of discouragement will cause failure in anything and voting contests are no exception.

You CAN win if you WILL to win. If you have the proper earnestness of purpose and determination to succeed you will formulate proper plans for yourself, enlist the support of your friends, and go about it as if you meant business, not as a half-hearted dreamer, doomed to failure from the start.

Have no fears of a large field of candidates at the beginning. Many of these will inevitably fall out as the contest progresses, and, in any event, it means for you divided opposition.

The majority of the candidates so far are confining their activities to the sending in of coupons. This is well. It is perhaps wisest at the start to enlist the support of your friends in the collection and saving of coupons for you. Then, later, when your friend becomes interested in the campaign, approach him for a subscription.

But the real workers will form their own plans and a little experience will show the best way to achieve success.

Following is the result of polling to date.

LEMBERG'S FALL NOT A DECISIVE EVENT.

ROTTERDAM, June 28.—Major Morahoff the eminent German military critic, writing in The Tagblatt regarding the fall of Lemberg, says:

"Neutrals are inclined to over estimate the importance of this success, especially from a military standpoint. A Danish critic, in calling it a decisive event of the war, forgets that the Russian army was not destroyed or surrounded. Such a catastrophe quite possibly was avoided by the Russian march northward. According to Baron von Moltke, a battle is not conclusive when the opponent is permitted to escape.

"The fall of Lemberg is a highly important event politically, but strategically the victorious combats desired by us are those which will take from the enemy his last prop in northern Galicia.

A cough is often the forerunner of serious pulmonary afflictions, yet there is a simple cure within the reach of all in Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, an old-time and widely recognized remedy, which if resorted to at the inception of a cold, will invariably give relief, and by overcoming the trouble, guard the system from any serious consequences. Price 25c.

If You Wish the Bloom of Youth.

If you wish to have rosy cheeks be careful of your diet. Eat simple, nourishing foods; avoid pastries, sweets, all rich and spicy foods and oily meats, such as pork and veal. Drink milk, cocoa and chocolate instead of tea and coffee. Pure air, pure water and pure food are the first essentials to a pure complexion. So are sunlight, out of door exercises and sleep. A cheerful disposition has much to do with the health. There is a story told of a husband who objected to his wife using cosmetics. He told her that the best way to give the face a good color was to get a pot of rouge and one rabbit's foot, bury them two miles from home and then walk out and back once a day to see if they were still there. She is said to have tried it and found it to be all her husband claimed.

Our Useless buttons.

Masculine dress still reflects the influence of the military uniform. Many of our useless buttons may be blamed on military ancestors. It is related that Frederick William, King of Prussia, was excessively annoyed because his soldiers persisted in wiping their noses on their coat sleeve, even when on dress parade. So he ordered the military tailors to sew buttons on the coat sleeves as a means of discouraging this habit. The buttons are still with us. Have you ever wondered as to the why of the buttons that are fastened in the middle of the back of the Prince Albert coat that Deacon Smith wears on Sundays, or the long-tailed cutaway that Lawyer Jones dons when he tries a big case? Originally those buttons were intended to keep a sword belt from sagging.

GUESTS OF THE ONTARIO WILL ENJOY THIRTY DAYS OF CONCENTRATED HAPPINESS

Will Have None of the Worries of Travelling—Hotels Will be Reserved in Advance—All Details Looked After by the Personal Conductor in Charge and all Bills Paid—Will You Join the Party?

The tours provided by the publishers of The Ontario for its eight guests who are going to the two expositions in California may well be described as thirty days of concentrated happiness.

To the prospective tourists we would say that The Ontario will act as your host par excellence while you are away.

Your business will be to enjoy yourselves—to make whatever use of your journey that will give you the most satisfaction.

This trip will be the most memorable you have ever taken or probably ever will take.

You will bring back with you a storehouse of facts, information and impressions that will serve to bring to you both pleasure and profit all the rest of your life.

There is every reason why you should enjoy yourselves—why you should bring back only pleasant memories.

Because The Ontario makes it possible and gives you every incentive to do so. We take off your shoulders all the burden of planning, of wondering where to go, what is worth stopping over to see, and where to go and how to go.

We pay all your bills. We supply you with all comforts. We afford you every luxury and leave you free.

You can conceive of trips across the continent that would sound well, but which would really not bring you any great amount of pleasure.

If someone offered to pay your fare and left you to look out for all the thousand and one incidentals you wouldn't enjoy it very much.

REASON SIMPLE ENOUGH. The reason is simple—you would have too much to do—your mind would be occupied with wondering what kind of a hotel this was or that was, whether you could afford this or that, whether it was worth while to stop over and see a certain city or point of scenic interest, whether you would be able to secure accommodation in this city or in that, whether you could secure a Pullman berth, whether your train would be on time, and what you would do if you missed it and innumerable other petty trifles.

It wouldn't afford you much pleasure to visit the Garden of the Gods if you had to keep figuring where in the world you were going to stay when you reached San Francisco with the hotels already crowded to overflowing.

THE BEST OF EVERYTHING. The Eight Guests of The Ontario will have the best of everything all through.

Starting at the beginning, a special Pullman will leave Beleville Station Mon. Aug. 9th at 8:05 p.m. by the Grand Trunk's fastest and best train, the International Limited.

There will be a double berth in the Pullman reserved for each guest. There will be the best of meals served on the train à la carte. The winners will stop at the most famous and luxurious hotels where stops are made.

They will view all the scenic wonders along the route or make side trips to them without one cent of extra expense.

It does not make any difference whether the guests are dining at Hotel la Salle, Chicago, or stopping over night at "The Antlers," Colorado Springs, our guests will receive just as much consideration as though they were a party of millionaires traveling in their own private car.

The spirit of the best will pervade the whole trip. The Ontario will spare neither trouble nor money to make the trip ideal in every way from a sight-seeing standpoint as well as for physical comfort. We believe that the tourist who has the best meals will enjoy the scenery best.

Our candidates when they come home, and in after years, will hold this trip up as a model, as a means of comparison with all other trips.

AT THE TWO EXPOSITIONS.

Now as to the two expositions. The Ontario tourists will be accommodated at the famous two-million-dollar U. S. Grant Hotel, and in San Francisco at the beautifully located, spacious and restful Manx.

At both San Diego and San Francisco there will be no lack of features, attractions and side trips to occupy every moment with pleasurable excitement.

We have already outlined in detail the wondrous trip home starting at San Diego with the marvellous orange groves, ostrich farms, alligator farms, and tropical vegetation, Portland, Seattle, Victoria, B. C., Vancouver, Lake Louise, Laggan, Glacier, Banff, Calgary, Winnipeg, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Milwaukee—and all the time everything to make perfect the comfort and enjoyment of our travellers.

They will have the satisfaction of having traversed this mighty continent in two directions and by the most notable and beautiful scenic routes.

The winners of this contest will always be glad that they entered the race and more glad that they won it. Send in your name today as a candidate, or if already nominated begin work in earnest.

Less than six weeks will determine who are to be winners. Do you want to be one?

The Canadian Building

The above out gives a very inadequate idea of the imposing size of the Canadian Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mr. D. V. Sinclair in his letter speaks of it as being the chief center of interest on the grounds. It covers nearly two acres of ground and is a superb palace in the Neo-Greek style of architecture. Of it the San Francisco Examiner says:—

PATRIOTIC DAY AT JOHN STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

(Crowded out of yesterday's issue. The interior of John Street Church was attractively decorated with a profusion of flags and bunting, for the Patriotic Service which was held Sunday morning. An illuminated program was in use with Hymns and Scripture Selections. The subject was "Loyalty," and the text was 1 Peter, 2:17, "Fear God, Honor the King." Rev. Mr. Currie said that the approach of the Natal Day of our Dominion and the special conditions which have arisen, directed our thought to the character of our citizenship. In referring to our national privileges, he drew an interesting contrast between the pioneer days and the present, and spoke of the material prosperity, and the state established with just laws and righteous institutions and our international relations, particularly our closer alliance with the Motherland, as among the things in which Canadians rejoice. The right of suffrage, the protection of person and property and eligibility to public service were noted as among our special privileges. But linked with privilege is responsibility. That it rests upon every citizen, needs to be rung in our ears in these times of political corruption. There have been ugly facts connected with the elections in this country in the past 25 years, and the unsavory things of the past few months who wishes to recount. Pray God that Canada may be saved from the paid agents of political machines and unprincipled grafters who in the face of uncommon national sacrifices would enrich themselves. Mr. Currie then spoke of the duty of Loyalty as the right attitude toward authority—whether of God or man. The genuine article has been growing in Canada. The present war conditions and our relation to the Mother Country have brought the fact into clear relief. All honor to the

WEDDING BELLS

SHAUGHNESSY—FAHEY.

St. Mary's church, Marysville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday, June 28th, at 9 o'clock when Anna Loretta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Fahey, was united in the Holy bonds of matrimony to Jas. A. Shaughnessy, of Saskatoon. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Meagher. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, rendered by Miss Margaret Campbell, the bride entered the church and was given away by her father. The bride looked charming in a gown of ivory silk crepe de chene, with draperies of old orange de Venise lace and white melline hat and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. She was attended by Miss Mary Hunt who wore white Marquessette with touches of pale blue, and blue and white tuxedean hat. She carried pink roses. The groom was assisted by his brother, Patrick Shaughnessy, Melrose. After the ceremony the bridal party adjourned to the home of the bride where the wedding breakfast was served, only the immediate relatives being present. The tables were artistically arranged and the courses served by girl friends of the bride. In the festive drawing-rooms the color scheme of pink and white was carried out in carnations, while the dining-room was tastefully decorated with patriotic colors, carnations and sweet peas. The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts. The groom's gift being a sunburst of pearls, and to the bridesmaid a crescent pin set with pearls, to the organist a cameo ring and a pair of gold cuff links to the best man. After receiving congratulations Mr. and Mrs. Shaughnessy with friends motored to Napanee and left on the 1:15 train for Montreal and Ottawa. Going away the bride wore a suit of navy blue gabardine with a pretty blouse of georgina crepe in apricot shade, and a black and white hat. On their return they will spend a short time at Marysville before leaving for their home in Flint, Michigan.

Painful Accident

On Saturday morning at the Houston factory, Ralph McGuire lost two fingers, and had his wrist badly mangled. He was working on a rip saw when his sleeve became entangled in the feeder drawing his hand through. The feeder tore deep gashes in his wrist down to the bone severing all the cords, etc. In trying to get his hand loose it came in contact with the saw and as a result the two last fingers on his right hand had to be removed. He was taken at once to Dr. Mather's office where Drs. Rutledge, Tuttle and Mather performed the operation. He was under chloroform for two and a half-hours. We are all glad to know that he will soon be around again and that the accident will not cause him much inconvenience.—Tweed News.

OLD LANDMARK WAS BURNED

Chas. Baker's Terrace Suffered From Flames—Five Families Lose Their Belongings.

Fire Monday morning burned down a terrace of frame houses on Water street belonging to Mr. Charles Baker. The fire was first noticed at half past one, but by that time it had secured such headway that little hope was entertained of saving any of the furniture in the west part of the building. It is supposed to have started in the rear or kitchen part at the west end. Five families were burned out or driven out by water. Mr. Albert Wall lost nearly everything by the fire. He saved only a few trunks. He had difficulty in escaping. He was coming down stairs with three of his children when he fell and injured his leg. Mr. Thos. Vancoet another heavy loser had to take two of his children out by the upper window. His wife handing them out. Mr. Wm. Fry carried off $300 in insurance on about $1500 household goods. Wm. Page was the only one without insurance. His loss is heavy. Smoke and water did the damage. Mr. Wm. Bend's effects. Fire did not invade his rooms. The firemen did good work in quenching the flames. The building was an old landmark in Belleville. There was a small insurance on it.

Capt. O'Flynn, 2nd Battalion, writing on June 18 to friends in England, says: "We have been relieved after seven days in the trenches. There are only five of the old company officers left of that city. For 18 months he was accountant with the Halsted Lumber Co. of Phoenix, Arizona. He was a member of Hennepin Council, Knights of Columbus at Minneapolis.

Bright Career Cut Short

Francis Michael Lally, (son of the late Michael Lally who died on Saturday at Phoenix, Arizona, was a native of Belleville. He was a very brilliant young man and his early death is a source of deep regret. Some 3 years ago he underwent an operation for appendicitis but never recovered. He passed into a decline. His ultimate recovery was not expected but his death came rather suddenly. During your pastorate with the church has been built up, spiritually, numerically, and financially, and while you—Rev. Sir—have faithfully discharged your duty as our pastor your faithful partner, Mrs. Sanderson, has ever been ready to lend a helping hand to promote the interests of the church. The efforts you have put forth, Mrs. Sanderson, especially in assisting and instructing the young people of the church in singing, have been untiring, and the songs and solos that have been sung by you, from Sabbath to Sabbath and at concerts, have been inspiring and long will be remembered by your friends with pleasure. We trust that the talent God has given you may never become latent, but that you may be spared many long years to use it for His glory. We regret very much dear Bro. and Sister that you have to leave our church and community and that the friendly relations that have existed are to be severed, but wherever you may be called to go we would wish your efforts to be crowned with success and in leaving, we would ask you to accept this Tea Service as a slight acknowledgment of our best wishes for you, and as you serve the cup of friendship therefrom and drink the contents thereof may it give you pleasure and happiness. Signed on behalf of the Board A. E. Bailey Thos. H. Blanchard B. R. Quincey Charles A. Ostrom G. O. Duprau Dated 1st 25th day of June, 1915

CENTRE.

June 29.—The Annual Conversation, held in the parsonage, Cannifton, Friday evening, was well represented from this district. Mrs. J. Derbyshire has returned home after spending a week with relatives in Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. J. Paterson attended the birthday party of Mr. W. Paterson, Stirling, on Saturday last. Mr. and Mrs. W. Coulter, Belleville, are spending a few days with Mr. A. Ross. Mrs. W. Garrison, Bethany, visited her sister, Mrs. J. Vandewater, last week. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Vandewater spent Sunday at Mr. VanAllen's, Pouchers Mills. Miss Mildred Marvin, of Carrying Place, also her cousin, Miss Maude Denike, spent Friday visiting Miss Leah Gilbert. Miss Annie Campbell, Belleville, spent a few days last week with Mr. E. Horton. Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Gilbert spent Sunday in Corbyville.

Military Notes

Lieut. Ross, No. 2 Company, C.F.A. S.O., has returned to duty with his company in camp, at Barfield, after being in Belleville in connection with the 39th battalion for some time. Lt.-Col. Dawson took command of the 59th battalion on Saturday morning. All homes were reduced to the ranks so as to allow for a re-organization of the entire battalion from that of a base to an actual unit of the Canadian expeditionary force. This gives Lt.-Col. Dawson an opportunity to select the best material for his battalion.

West Belleville Church Bid Farewell to Departing Pastor

(From Tuesday's Daily.) A very large audience, representative of the entire congregation, assembled last night at West Belleville Methodist Church to bid farewell to Rev. A. R. and Mrs. Sanderson who have for four years past been associated with this charge. It was also the occasion of the annual congregational meeting and appreciative addresses were delivered by officials representing every department of the Church work. Mr. A. E. Bailey very efficiently discharged the duties of chairman. Rev. Mr. Sanderson briefly reviewed the work of the last four years. He was followed by Messrs. Geo. Woodley, superintendent of the Sunday School, Thos. Blanchard, recording steward, and Chas. Ostrom, B. Quincey, Jas. Bird, and John McCarthy, and the following ladies.—Mrs. Wm. H. Phillips, Mrs. W. A. Drewry, Mrs. Geo. Bacon, Mrs. Jno. McCarthy, and Miss L. Stocker, also by Revs. Martin Duprau and Pimlott. Towards the latter part of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson were asked to take seats upon the platform when Thos. Blanchard, recording steward, read the following address: To the Rev. and Mrs. Sanderson. Rev. Sir and Madam,— As you are about to leave our church and community, we the members and adherents of Holloway St. church feel we cannot allow this opportunity to pass while we are assembled here at this congregational meeting tonight, without in some way giving an expression of our appreciation of the services you have rendered us. When we look back upon the pasting four years you have been with us, we realize that your labors have not been in vain, but that a good work has been done. Shortly after you came to us the re-building of our church was undertaken, necessitating an expenditure of nearly Twelve Thousand Dollars. You entered into the work heartily, sparing no pains to make it a success, but labored with us in unity and fellowship until our church has been transformed into a new and handsome modern edifice of which we all feel proud, and of which the greater portion of the indebtedness has been paid. We regret that you cannot remain to see the full indebtedness paid. During your pastorate with the church has been built up, spiritually, numerically, and financially, and while you—Rev. Sir—have faithfully discharged your duty as our pastor your faithful partner, Mrs. Sanderson, has ever been ready to lend a helping hand to promote the interests of the church. The efforts you have put forth, Mrs. Sanderson, especially in assisting and instructing the young people of the church in singing, have been untiring, and the songs and solos that have been sung by you, from Sabbath to Sabbath and at concerts, have been inspiring and long will be remembered by your friends with pleasure. We trust that the talent God has given you may never become latent, but that you may be spared many long years to use it for His glory. We regret very much dear Bro. and Sister that you have to leave our church and community and that the friendly relations that have existed are to be severed, but wherever you may be called to go we would wish your efforts to be crowned with success and in leaving, we would ask you to accept this Tea Service as a slight acknowledgment of our best wishes for you, and as you serve the cup of friendship therefrom and drink the contents thereof may it give you pleasure and happiness. West Belleville Church Bid Farewell to Departing Pastor you ever be reminded of the real friends you have in our class. Signed on behalf of the class M. Delbert, Pres. W. Gilbert, Sec. The presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson accompanied the reading of the address and Rev. and Mrs. Sanderson responded on behalf of his wife. Interspersed among the other features of the program were vocal solos by Messrs. O. K. Pimlott and Albert Baldwin. Mrs. Sanderson sang by special request, and with much evidence of deep feeling, Tosti's "Good-Bye." Miss Babeman gave a well rendered recitation and was heartily cheered. The presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson was made by four girls.—Misses In Blanchard, Marion Woodley, May Kerr and Winifred Duprau. At the same time a basket of roses was presented to Mrs. Sanderson by Misses Jean Leavens and Dorothy Vanderpoort. On Thursday last Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson were entertained by the choir at Massasoget. After journeying down in the "Say When," the day was spent in games, songs, and exchanging yarns. During the course of a most satisfying dinner, Miss Lillian Stocker called the party to attention and after testifying to the loyal and efficient service given as a labor of love by Mrs. Sanderson in the choir during her four years' stay at Holloway Street asked her to accept as a slight token of their appreciation an electric grill for table use. Mrs. Sanderson in a few words, gratefully acknowledged their kindness and expressed her deep regret at having to sever the pleasant relationship of recent years with her many friends in the choir.

PICTURES OF BATTLES.

Warfare Has Always Been a Popular Subject For Artists. From the earliest days of history war has given inspiration to the artist, and the work of his hands comes down to us on the walls of ancient Egypt, worn by the passing of thousands of years; from the ruined temples of antique Greece, built centuries before the Christian era. The picture writing of primitive and savage peoples describes exploits of war; many archaic war pictures, brought to view after ages of burial under desert sands, bear much similarity to Indian drawings of our own near time and land. Once, years ago, away up on the Poplar river, in Montana, I bought, bartered for, I suppose I should say, as the purchase was made mainly by the medium of tea, tobacco and sugar—a "painted" robe right off the back of the war chief of a band of Yanktonais. His ornate robes had "rounded up" and brought into the agency. The skin was a true "black bull," tanned on the underside to the softness of the finest chamois leather and decorated with naive pictorial representations of the deeds of war of old Kill-Them-in-a-Hole—as the soldiers translated the name of the chief from some episode in his unquarred career—which in color, in grace and firmness of line were curiously like pictures from the pencil of some artist of the Egypt of old. The glory of war is the theme; the exaltation of the sovereign, the conqueror, forms the chief motive of the war picture of antiquity. The monarch was the hero before whose terrible word all fought gave way, to whom victory came through his personal might and prowess. The warriors of the Greeks are shown as models of virile strength and grace; their attitudes in the fury of combat lost nothing of artistic beauty in the realism of the rendering. The influence of the Greek masters of their art is evident in battle pictures of a time twosome and more centuries later. Rufus Fairbaird Zogbaum in Scribner's.

LORD ROTHSCHILD STUDIES ZOOLOGY

New Head of Great House Maintains Big Menagerie

ONCE SAT IN COMMON.

Successor to Position of Immense Power in British Banking Circle Is an Outstanding Figure in the Old Land—Zoological Park at Tring a Marvelous Sight as Its Fond of Hunting. THE late Lord Rothschild was, even as a personally something of an institution in the sight of Londoners, as a banker he was an institution in the sight of Europe. The fact that the new peer has little or no connection with the office of St. Swithin's lane makes it all the more difficult (says a London journalist) to realize that he is Lord Rothschild, neither more nor less. To be Lord Rothschild and not to be a banker looks like a direct contradiction of terms, but in other respects the succession is a most proper one. "Any fool can make money," says one who has done it; "it takes a genius to keep it." And here, among the Rothschilds, you have generation after generation concerned in the manipulation of vast fortunes, and never a "waster" among them all. Lavish generosity, yes; that, indeed, would seem to be part of the inheritance. Another, and essential, legacy is wisdom in riches. To conserve that wisdom, along with the riches, there has been judicious intermarriage. The new peer's grandmother and mother were both before their marriage, already endowed with the name that means financial stability where it does not mean financial genius. That unity means strength is their motto. Although he has always been a comparative stranger in the region of St. Swithin's lane, this meant no lack of confidence and intimacy between father and son. Except in the city, their paths have run very much in the same direction. Like his father, he was at Cambridge, after a period in the University at Bonn; and, like his father, he sat for the Aylesbury Division in the House of Commons. It is not expected of any Rothschild that he should flourish extremely in Parliament; the House, after all, can never mean a great deal to a member of that more exclusive and distinguished corporation, the Rothschild family. The Hon. Walter, as he then was, took, at any rate, no lively interest in its proceedings. ONCE AN M.P.

While he attacked some questions that appealed to him with a thoroughness characteristic of his line, he had many distractions, and for one period was so often away from his seat that a contentious member made a point of calling the attention of the House to the fact that he was playing truant. But not always was he on the track of rare birds or chasing moths. In 1910 he resigned owing to ill-health. For many years his home, both in town and country, has been the same as his father's. At Tring Park he has organized the Natural History Museum, which embodies the chief interest of his life, zoology. There has been the basis for many scientific expeditions, and the address to which rare species have been forwarded from all parts of the world, it is especially rich in "moths"; the birds and insects discovered by Mr. Meek, the naturalist and moth expert, who searched the Cannibal Islands on Lord Rothschild's behalf. Lord Rothschild's hobby has meant a good deal more to him than a distraction or an entertainment. He has taken it so seriously that illuminati of Berlin are indebted to his researches, and many of his papers, including those on birds-of-paradise and moths, have appeared in the least bird-like or moth-like of all languages. He undertook the very important collection of mammals' trip through Abyssinia, and did it most thoroughly. He is fond of hunting and shooting.

OPERA MANAGER IN THE CITY

Kenneth Mackenzie McNab of New York Makes Short Stay in Belleville Mr. Kenneth Mackenzie McNab of New York was in the city last evening and this morning on a short trip to see conditions in Canada. While here he was the guest of his old friend, Mr. Wm. L. Doyle, of Belleville. Mr. McNab is the manager of a number of world-famed artists who are giving entertainments throughout the United States in aid of the Belgian Relief Fund. Mr. McNab came from Scotland to New York about ten years ago and in that time has made a name for himself on the American stage. He and Mr. J. N. Doyle of this city were in the Augustin Daly Opera Co. in New York, playing in "The Country Girl" and "Singsong". Mr. McNab is a brother of Donald Mackenzie, the producer of important film plays and also of John Mackenzie (McNab), basso profundo of the Dussan Opera Company who sang the title role in "The Grand Mogul" and "Will Scarlett" in the famous Bostonian's original production of "Robin Hood". Kenneth McNab has played the role of Tammany in "The Bonnie Brier Bush". In order to take up the work of the American Belgian Relief Fund Association, he left his office in the National Music Bureau. Mr. McNab is delighted with Canada and would make a longer stay, did time permit.

George Interned

Herbert George was Tuesday evening taken to Kingston and interned as an alien being a Syrian and consequently a Turkish subject. MADOC JUNCTION. Several from here attended the W. M. S. ten cent tea at the home of the Vice President, Miss Keegan on Friday afternoon of last week. Besides the members were a number of visitors whose assistance was much appreciated by the members. The service here was well attended on Sunday. Our pastor gave us an address that should appeal to every Christian and we are sure there is not one who will not be pleased to see him returned to us for another year. Mr. and Mrs. Sills of Madoc were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Andrews on Thursday last week. Mrs. Fickett spent a couple of days in Belleville last week. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Eggleston spent Sunday with friends in Sidney. Some of our people attended the surprise party for Miss Wright of Holloway on Monday evening. Miss Edna Bird is home from Ottawa for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Ashley spent Sunday with friends at Rossmore. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cook of Foxboro visited friends here last Sunday. Mrs. Matthews of Melbridge is spending a couple of weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Bennett. Miss Irene Gallivan and Miss Gould were the guests of Miss Mabel Eggleston on Sunday.

Red Cross Social

Wednesday evening the Fifteenth Regiment band played at the Red Cross lawn social held at the home of Mr. Thomas Montgomery, reeve of Rawdon. The party was a most successful one, the attendance being very large. On the program were two Belleville songs, "The Star of the North", county clerk, and Mrs. W. C. Mikel, K.C. The receipts were most satisfactory.

Patriotic Garden Party

The patriotic garden party held a few evenings ago under the auspices of the Nile Green Knitting Circle on Miss Corbett's lawn, Charles street, was in every way most enjoyable and profitable. The Fifteenth Regimental band gave many spirited and patriotic selections and the bag-pipe playing was also a feature. Everybody had a good time. Net proceeds were over $75. Mrs. Jos. Waddell, the president, and Mrs. Commins, the secretary-treasurer who labored so faithfully to make the event a success, deserve great praise for the splendid showing that has been made.

Madoc Triples Trenton's Score

Madoc, June 22.—The local O. A. L. A. intermediate team tripled the score, 15 to 5, on Trenton-to-day in a cleverly played game, which was witnessed by a large crowd. The teams: Trenton—Goal, Smith; points, O'Rourke and Susk; defence, Bassitt and White; centre, Burnside; homes, Wright, Kiscock, Cummings and Whitty. Madoc—Goal, Phillips; points, Rylatt and Lewis; defence, Smith and Crawford; centre, E. Naylor; homes, P. Naylor, Tufts, Bassette and Moon. CREATOR'S FAMOUS BAND Giuseppe Creator and his famous concert band need no introduction to the music lovers of Toronto, or of Canada. They were the big musical feature of the Canadian National Exhibition last year. When despite the war scare and the cold wet weather, they drew the most enthusiastic crowds that ever assembled on the grand plaza. That this reputation is world wide is evidenced by the fact that they were the band chosen for the opening ceremonies of the Pan-American Exposition at San Francisco during the early part of this year.

Ponies Defeat Brighton 1-0

Belleville Ponies went to Brighton at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning, played and defeated Brighton baseball team and arrived home about five o'clock in the afternoon. Brighton fans say it was the best game ever played in that town. The score was 1-0. The Ponies secured their run in the eighth inning, so closely was the game contested. Both pitchers worked hard as did every player. Very few errors were made. The ponies were composed of the following players—Hunter, r.f.; Burgess, c.; Green, c.f.; Lynch, s.; Smith, l.f.; Hampton, 1b.; Arnett, 2b.; Sapp, 3b.; and H. Whelan, p. Brighton players were—Walt, Marks, Bates, Leart, Hollander, Large, Harris, Covert and Arkett.

Bombs Dropped From Airships

During the past few months it has been difficult to pick up our papers without reading an account of an airship raid or an attack on some unfortified town by one of the gas bags of Count Zeppelin. At the exhibition this year bombs will be dropped from airships in flight but as the missiles will not be loaded with anything but gas or German shrapnel they will be quite harmless. These flights will be most spectacular and realistic and some daring airmen will perform all kinds of stunts in view of the visitors to the Exhibition.

Has Knitted 45 Pairs of Socks

There are twenty-one knitting circles in Belleville at the present time, and many of the members are doing an amazing amount of this practical work for the use and comfort of our soldier boys. But of all the workers we fancy that premier honors should be accorded to Mrs. Rebecca Thompson, 133 Ann street. Mrs. Thompson is a widow and frankly owns up that she has passed her 72nd birthday anniversary. She does all her own housework, which means that she keeps house for her son without the assistance of a maid. Since the organization of the Nile Green Knitting Circle of which she became a member she has knitted for five pairs of socks. And she has knitted the whole sock in each case. She does not buy ready-made legs as others have been doing. Mrs. Thompson is not looking for V.C.'s or medals or rewards or even newspaper publicity. She simply goes on and does what she has conceived to be her duty, and will feel amply rewarded by the knowledge that her labors have contributed in some small degree to the comfort and well-being of some Canadian soldier-boy on the distant battle-front.

What Laymen Did

The Laymen of Bay of Quinte Methodist Conference held sessions during the sitting of Conference at Oshawa and discussed some practical church problems. It would have pleased the ministers to hear the splendid discussions and see the fine spirit which characterized the deliberations. The financial interests of the church were considered and many men gave their experience. The outcome of the debate was the adoption of this resolution: We recommend that all congregations throughout this Conference be earnestly requested to adopt the duplex or other envelope system where necessary in use and to take steps to organize for the successful carrying out of a systematic plan of work for financing each church. The envelope system is the best yet tried and should be adopted by the churches. Attendance at the mid-week prayer service in the churches was considered at length and there seemed to be an earnest desire to accomplish improvement. The recommendations of the laymen were the Conference's lengthiest and attracted the most earnest attention to the subject, that a record of attendance of church of fideals be given at every quarterly meeting, that three laymen in each church be a committee to help the pastor in forming plans and carrying out arrangements for increasing the interest and attendance at prayer meeting, that a record of attendance be given at the quarterly meeting (at every Sunday service) and be still better. It was decided that an appeal be made to all fideals and members for special prayer and earnest efforts by personal invitation and attendance to increase attendance and that minister and brethren be requested to bring this vitally important subject before congregations on a Sunday in July. It is hoped that this request will be honored by every minister.

Military Notes

Dr. H. S. Clapp, veterinary surgeon of the 34th Battery, was in Barriefield the other day. He has applied for overseas service with the 8th C.M.R. as its veterinary officer. It is understood that Capt. Paillister who was to be the veterinary officer of the rifles will not go to the front just now, and Capt. Dr. Clapp is likely to get his place. Sgt. Major Taylor, foreman of works, Kingston, was in town on Wednesday. Private Dobarty, said to be a deserter of the 39th battalion, who was taken from his home on Collingwood Street, Kingston, has joined his regiment. Twelve men were transferred from the 59th Battalion to the 8th C.M.R. and 15 to the 39th battalion. A German, who gave his name as Barclay, but whose address is not known by military authorities, has been taken from the ranks of the 39th battalion. He is now at Fort Henry for the rest of the war. Barclay was a private and joined some time ago and it is stated that not only is he of German extraction, but his sentiments were strongly pro-German. Recently he spoke in an anti-British tone and was arrested. "He did not want to fight the Germans," said an officer. "Did he ask for his release?" "No we arrested him before he had a chance," was the officer's reply. He also stated that he did not know Barclay's former address. Mr. Wm. Stewart of Ottawa who is to go with a dental corps as quartermaster is well known here as he built the armouries at the corner of Bridge and Binnacle streets. General Hughes has promoted him to a captaincy for his efficient work. R. J. McCoy, T. E. Storey, John Dunn, Lewis Clement and James Duffy have been taken on the strength of the 59th Battalion for overseas service at Barriefield.

Recruits for Barriefield

This morning the Fifteenth and Forty-Ninth Regiments sent down a number of men to join the 59th Battalion at Barriefield. Recruits are coming in in a fairly satisfactory manner— 15th REGT. A. Inquest on Child Held At Stirling

Further Developments May Arise Over Death of Infant (From Friday's Daily.) Mr. P. J. M. Anderson was at Stirling yesterday in the crown's interest attending an inquest on the body of a child found buried some time ago. The coroner was Dr. Aiger. The evidence established that the child belonged to an unmarried woman. The jury found on the strength of the medical and other evidence that the baby was born alive and had lived for some time after birth. There was the suggestion that the child had come to its death by some improper means. Some further developments it is said, may arise in connection with the case. Million Dollar Canning Co. THE SITUATION.

It would be vain to deny that the retreat of Russia in Galicia is a regrettable set-back for her and her Allies; but, as yet, it is by no means a disaster. It does not even furnish ground for grave apprehension; nor will it, while Russia is able to hold face to the foe and retire with unbroken lines. Those who may feel disposed to give way to fears should remember the British retreat from Mons, and what followed. The Russians have already been forced back more than once, but have each time rallied and driven their opponents before them. It has become manifest that while comparatively close to their supply bases, and served by their strategic railways, the Germans are too strong for the Russians. But it is equally clear that as the Germans lengthen their lines of communication their effective strength decreases, and a balance of force is set up which tends to establish itself in favor of Russia.

It is quite evident that the Russians for some time past have been short of ammunition when confronted by the German amply supplied from their home bases. But, when the Germans get out of touch with their bases, the Russians are more than able to hold their own. It is confidently to be expected, therefore, that the tide of battle in the East will once more turn in favor of Russia, in the near future, and that we shall soon hear of another Russian advance which may quite possibly overflow all lost ground and even attain a new high-water mark of western progress. At the worst for the Allies, Germany's eastern campaign is costing her enormously in men and material, and must be seriously sapping her military and financial strength. She cannot now withdraw troops from the East to strengthen her western lines or meet the Italian menace on the South.

In the West, Germany is held as firmly as ever and Joffre's "nibbling" tactics go on relentlessly. The Germans, since their repulse from the Marne, have had no important success, in France or Flanders, which has not been more than counterbalanced by the achievements of their opponents. They have not lost much, but they have been steadily losing. They cannot have greatly increased their fighting strength in that quarter. Both the French and British have vastly augmented their troops in the western field. There is every reason to believe that there is now an enormous assemblage of British soldiers in France. We hear of them only on the thirty-mile front which Field Marshal French is holding. It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that they are massed back of that front, and that the intention is that they shall there make a determined attempt to break through the German lines, when adequate preparations have been completed. The buoyant confidence manifested in all recent private letters from our men at the front indicates that they are aware of something, which is, for the present, concealed from the public. It need surprise no one if there should be gratifying news from that quarter before long. The activities of the French adjoining the British lines and their comparative quiescence elsewhere suggest the same thing.

Italy is "doing her bit" quite as satisfactorily as could have been expected. She must be materially distracting both Austrian and German attention. Coupled with that is the equally important fact that by entering the war she has cut off the most important source of exterior supply for the Germanic Powers. They are confined now, almost exclusively to Holland and Denmark for trade facilities of any sort with the outer world. Switzerland has no seaports, and is enclosed by Italy and France. Trade across the Baltic with Norway and Sweden must be exceedingly precarious. The Mediterranean is held by the fleets of the Allies. Greece and the Balkan States, apart from Serbia which is with the Allies, are very doubtful friends of Germany.

The least satisfactory theatre of war at present would seem to be the Dardanelles and the Peninsula of Gallipoli. But the despatches the past two days from that quarter have been of a decidedly more reassuring nature. Russia depends on the early opening up to her of this route to the world's markets for the sale of her surplus products and the purchase of munitions of war of which she stands greatly in need. But "should be borne in mind that the Russian stock market has shown most significant recent indications of an increase rather than a diminution of Russian confidence. So, on the whole, we can well afford to await developments in cheerfulness. There is certainly no occasion for any degree of despondency.

THE GALICIAN STROKE

The German victories in Galicia, while undoubtedly giving the Russians a severe set-back, may prove to have been dearly bought. Indeed, it appears that their success is far less than they anticipated when they dealt their first blow against the Russians in Galicia over a month ago. The greater of the two purposes which the German General Staff had before them at that time was no less than the severance of the Russian armies into two parts, so that each might be dealt with separately. The Grand Duke, however, was not caught in the trap, and although he has been forced to give ground he has so far as reports disclose, conducted his retreat in a masterly fashion, while inflicting very heavy losses upon the enemy. Russia has not been crushed and to that extent the great German offensive has failed.

A studious military critic, writing from the war zone, tells us the object which the German Staff had in view:

"The aim of Germany was to produce a decision, an aim illusory from the first. She could have had no other aim for the sufficient reason that no other aim will profit her. She entered the war with a vastly greater part of her total force immediately available. Russia and Britain have even now a much smaller proportion of their force available than Germany had of hers at the outset. The consequence of this is that so far as Germany has any chance of final victory it grows daily less and less. Relatively, her force must decrease. She is now more and more striving to give it an adventitious preponderance by the use of huge masses of artillery over small areas, by an immense expenditure of ammunition, by the use of asphyxiating gases, and so on. The massed artillery formation in Galicia is the latest device, and it has proved extremely formidable. It is not unduly optimistic to consider that the Germans have put forth their greatest effort against the Galician front. In the immediate future it is difficult to imagine they can strike with any greater violence than they have done in the last month."

The enormous advantage which Germany derived from her position has been clearly shown in each successive campaign. Attacked on two fronts she could throw her strength from side to side, whenever her own territory or that of Austria was actually threatened with an invasion. That advantage has been constantly growing less and particularly so since the entry of Italy into the war. The growing strength in numbers of the Allies will make it possible for them to carry out a simultaneous offensive for Austria and Germany have now a third front to defend, and the gains made against Russia in Galicia will increase their difficulties in that respect.

It was doubtless the hope of the German General Staff that by crushing the Grand Duke's army they would set free a large force to strike against Italy. But the Russian army is not crushed and the moment Germany and Austria draw off any considerable forces from the eastern front to launch an attack on Italy, the Russian forces will be once more in motion. It is difficult, then, to see what military gain Germany has achieved by her dearly bought success in Galicia—a success won in the costliest possible fashion.

Reviewing the eastern situation some days ago the Manchester Guardian expressed the opinion that the German game is now to hold the enemy on two fronts while striking on the third. The object of the Allies, says the Guardian, should be to make her fight equally hard on all fronts at once. From this it is clear that the position of the Allies would be greatly strengthened in two ways if Roumania decided to come into the field. First, her intervention would compel a further dispersion of the forces of Germany and Austria. Even if they maintained a pure defensive against her, their available forces on the other fronts would be seriously weakened, and still more would this be true if they decided—as they would like to do—to mass overwhelming strength against the Roumanian army and crush it separately.

"But—and here is the second point—this," says the Guardian, "is just what they would not be able to do except at the greatest risk. For the Roumanian army would close up the gap which at present exists in the great curve of the Austro-Hungarian front, and the forces of Russia, Serbia, and Italy could combine with her in a simultaneous offensive. In such an attack the geographical position of each would enable it to give its neighbor the most valuable support. If Roumania were now advancing in Transylvania the Austrians would not be able to invade Bukovina and the Eastern Carpathians, as they are doing. At the present moment Serbia dare not undertake an invasion of Austria because her small army might be overwhelmed by a sudden concentration of the kind which we have recently seen in Galicia but with the Roumanian army protecting her right flank she could take her part in a combined movement. Roumania is the keystone to a successful attack on Hungary, the possession of which with its stores of food supplies and raw materials, is indispensable to the German Powers."

It may be that the success Germany has won will defer the greatly-to-be-desired entry of Roumania into the strife but in winning back her Galician territory, she has lost probably a quarter of a million men, and has enormously exhausted her supply of munitions. At the same time, as we pointed out yesterday, she has lengthened her line of communications, while all the time Russia's strength in munitions and personnel is steadily growing. Time is fighting on the side of Russia, and on this front as on all fronts time is against Germany.

SCHOOL FOR SPIES.

A Paris correspondent says that among the many things revealed to us by the war is the fact that practically every German is a spy. Little surprise need be felt, therefore, at the discovery the French have just made of the existence of a School for Spies at Lorrach, in the Grand Duchy of Baden. There, in a sort of university for the information of the perfect spy, spectated Herr Professors initiated their pupils into the mysteries and artifices of espionage.

The University of Espionage of Lorrach admitted women, of course, as well as men. Before admission the candidate would be questioned by military officers, pretending to be police magistrates, who would decide whether the applicants possessed the necessary aptitude and inclination for the profession.

The length of study lasted from a few weeks to several months, according to the degree of perfection or the importance of the position the candidate desired to attain. The professors began the course of instruction with lectures, illustrated by colored prints, on the uniforms, arms and other technical details of the military and naval organization of foreign countries; photographs were shown of British, French and Russian cannon; full explanations were given of the army and navy effectives in each country, the strength of the different garrisons and the strategical utilization of the railways.

Students were told how to collect this information quickly, and how to convey it to headquarters without arousing suspicion. They were told, for instance, how they could mark in a railway time-table the number of regiments in a given town by a system of simple figures. When the student's instruction was completed he was provided with false papers, and sent out to "try his luck." He (or she) was invariably told, however, that any spy who got into trouble would be disavowed by the Government.

TERRORS OF WAR

The experience of the battlefield affect almost everybody differently. But a bronzed young soldier just back from Flanders—where he has been since October—has informed the London Daily Graphic that after comparing notes with at least a dozen friends he has come to the conclusion "that in two respects nearly all fighters feel alike."

"It is a curious fact," he said reflectively, "that all of us seem to feel far less the loss of a comrade who falls before our eyes and in our company than the loss of one of whose disappearance we learn only at the end of the day's grueling, or after an interval even longer. I have noticed this in so many cases that I have come to think it is a rule. Explanation? I don't know."

"In the second place, even the most highly strung men seem no more affected by the actual horrors of the field than the strongest nerved at the time fighting is going on. But both the stolid and the imaginative show the same sort of mental effect when they conjure up the thing afterwards—when they go down to the base for a bit of a change or come back home. It is only then that what they have seen seems to come home to them in its fullness and significance."

The French capture of "the Labyrinth" appears to have been one of the most desperate fights of the whole war to date. The official narrative is a story of desperate fighting and splendid heroism worthy of the finest traditions of French valor. We salute the victors!

The Westminster Gazette says that the American people, usually unbridled for their commercialism, have astonished the world by their altruistic stand for the cause of humanity. "President Wilson places himself in the line of direct descent from the great Presidents."

The French have a ship, the only one of the kind in existence, into which a submarine can be floated and dry docked. Her bow plates are removable. The stem of the vessel is lowered by pumping in water and the submarine is floated in through the bow. Then the water is pumped out again, the bow rises to normal level and the submarine is wedged in a dry dock.

Records destroyed, telegrams burned, documents doctored, witnesses spirited away, hush-money carried about by gum-shoe artists, hold-ups, group of men operating under aliases, patriots rushing to the wars to escape a hotter firing line at home, detectives "detecting" money by the bushel pouring into eager hands—such are some of the ingredients in Manitoba's Million Dollar Mystery now being staged. Small wonder the Winnipeg Free Press resorts to the language of the street, "can you beat it?"

An Englishman interviewed by the New York Outlook, explains the sort of economic pressure that Britain is putting upon Germany.

"A Swedish merchant," he says, "wants us to discount a note. Our banker says, 'I won't do business with you so long as you trade with the Germans.' A Dutch farmer wants to sell us some cheese. Our merchants say, 'You can't deal with the Germans and with us at the same time.' They protest that they are neutrals and have a right to trade with everybody. But we have an equal right not to trade if we don't want to. They splutter and fume and think it over. The Swede decides that he needs our money. The Dutchman sells five cheeses to us for every two he sells to Germany. He would like to go on selling all seven cheeses, but when he sees that he can't he decides to sacrifice the two—Germany. And this is going on everywhere in every commercial relation. We are not losing as much blood as our allies, but we are hitting Germany harder."

The result of the war will not, says an article in the Round Table, be determined by strategy but by exhaustion; the party that can hold out longest will win. What the cost to the winner will be is indicated in bold figures. Already some 2,000,000 of the German-Austrian forces have been put out of action. To kill or disable another 2,000,000 of them will involve a sacrifice of man for man by the Allies. "It is ghastly, but it is at least decisive," says the writer. "It shows us the measure of the effort which is still before us." Where are the 2,000,000 to come from? France cannot do much more. She already has her last man in the field. "We bore the lesser burden at the start," he goes on. "We must be prepared to bear the greater burden at the close. This imposes upon us a very grave responsibility. For on our effort and our preparedness it will depend, whether, in the last crucial months, that final thrust on land is made which will determine whether the German military domination is to be finally overthrown, or whether through sheer exhaustion a peace is patched up which will be no better than a prelude to a new war."

The difficulty in raising enough men in the United Kingdom for war under the voluntary system, is illustrated by the lessening of the requirements in recruiting. The most important of these changes is in raising the age limit from 38 to 40 years. The great majority of men between these ages are, as L. G. Chiozza Money points out, married. According to the census of 1911 there were in England and Wales 76,000 single men of these ages against 382,000 married. On the other hand at 19 only one out of 125 is married, and at 27 one out of two. Between the ages of 19 and 38, the old recruiting limit, there are over seven and a half million men and only half of these are married, thus leaving available over three and a half million men without family ties to recruit from. This reserve, Mr. Money thinks, should be drawn upon before married men are called for.

That there is difficulty in filling up the ranks even in Canada is indicated by a lessening in restrictions here, too, men with false teeth being taken now.

An English member of Parliament, discussing with a New York Outlook representative the after effects of the war on Britain and Germany, said: "We'll be a lot poorer than we were in 1914 but still we'll be the strongest power in Europe. Stronger than ever in relation to the other countries. It will take time and trouble to get our machinery in order again for the plowshares and pruning-hooks. But a few years after the war I expect great prosperity. In Germany? Well I know one industry which will boom after the war—copper. They'll be busy making copper fixtures and putting them back on the machines from which they have been stripping them. They'll be horribly in debt. Even without an indemnity they'll have hard work finding the money to re-establish their industry so they can pay the interest they owe. I hope they will keep to universal military service. It is such an appalling tax, not only in money, but in the withdrawal of men from wealth-producing industry. People do not realize what an immense advantage it is to us to be the only country in Europe without it. What will happen to Kitchener's army? We'll have them all back at work six months after peace is signed. All we want to get out of this war (besides winning and getting a new start on the Germans is to see the Dardanelles open—free trade. That and the Bagdad railway, a steam route from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf. If we get that we won't want any indemnity, nor any new territory."

Other Editors' Opinions

THE TRUTH IS OUT.

In his frank and electrifying speech at Manchester on Thursday last Mr. Lloyd George told his audience that he had come there "to reveal the truth"; for, as he added, "unless you know if you cannot be expected to make sacrifices."

We shall not waste time by drawing from his words a justification of The Daily Mail's campaign for an abundant supply of high-explosive shells. Our readers may draw their own deductions; at this moment the vital and urgent necessity is for the nation to give Mr. Lloyd George its whole-hearted support.

Victory in this great and terrible struggle, of which the eleventh month is nearly ended, rests, as he pointed out, with the Power which can produce the munitions.

No instance could be more convincing than that of the German victories in Galicia. Our Russian Allies as he told his hearers have suffered a severe set-back. The cause of it is not to be found in any fault of leadership; the whole world has come to recognize and admire the splendid competence of the Grand Duke Nicholas. It does not lie in any want of valor in the Russian soldier. In a noble tribute to the heroism of our Allies which will re-echo to the blood-soaked wastes of Poland, Mr. Lloyd George declared that no soldiers since the dawn of time have ever fought with greater gallantry and bravery than the Russian soldiers have done. It does not reside in any want of numbers. Russia, as Herr von Jagow told the British Ambassador at Berlin on the eve of war has limitless numbers of men. The explanation of the Russian set-back and of the loss of Przemysl is to be found in the lack of shells and munitions.

The Germans, in fact, with an infinite number of guns firing an infinite number of shells blasted a passage through the Russian line. Our Allies' Headquarters have revealed the astonishing fact that in a single period of four hours, when this infernal rain of death reached its maximum of intensity, 700,000 projectiles were discharged by the German batteries.

If only the British Army had been able to apply this process in Flanders the enemy's line would have been pierced.

We should not have been faced with the problem of holding the "bloody angle" at Ypres; we should rather have driven the enemy from Northern France, from Belgium, that country which he has devastated and tortured; we should have penetrated into Germany itself; and the end of the war would have been in sight. Whereas now we are fighting an uncertain and dubious struggle in which the balance does not visibly incline; if it is inclined at all, does so towards the German scale. In the tenth month the enemy still holds firmly in Northern France, still martyrs Belgium, still occupies more than half of Poland and a great stretch of the Russian Baltic provinces, and is, moreover, forcing the Russians slowly back from Galicia, which but three months ago they seemed to have securely won.

The salvation of Europe, the end of the war, the triumph of the cause which means everything for Great Britain and death to her if it is lost, depends on the men and women of this country behind the fighting line. To them has come the call for sacrifice, and Mr. Lloyd George made it in no uncertain fashion. With them it rests to see to it that their heroic soldiers at the front are supplied with the munitions without which progress is impossible and the sacrifice of noble lives infinite. There ought to be no need for compulsion in such a cause.

Win we can, even now after so many wasted opportunities, but only if we devote to the war our whole energy, if we sink all internal differences, if we work as a nation for victory and do not imagine that the conduct of the war can be left to a mere fraction of the population in the Army. In the last resort, and if necessity arises, as Mr. Lloyd George stated plainly, compulsion can be applied. It is no longer a question of principle—for all are agreed that it is the duty of every citizen "to place his whole strength and resources at the disposal of his native land." The only question is whether the number of those who recognise this principle in theory but do not act on it in practice is sufficient to render its vigorous enforcement by the State essential.—London (Eng.) Daily Mail.

If the prisoners who number between 300 and 400, prove that they are deserving of the privileges that will come from seeing something of the outside world, an effort will be made to keep them employed. If not, they will go

The Old Distillery Ruins Have Stood For 47 Years— Whiskey Used to Sell at 25c per Gallon.

For 47 years the ruins of the old Read distillery on Dundas street have stood like Druidical stones, spelling to almost two generations an industry which once flourished in Belleville. Now a portion of the walls and brick chimney are being demolished.

Few in town have knowledge of the day when these old stones formed the walls of a distillery. It was created about 80 years ago by a man named Lytle, who later disposed of the plant to the Hon. Senator Robert Read, one of the leading citizens in the old days. It was twice destroyed by fire, the last time being about the year 1868. On the first occasion there was a continuous blaze from the distillery to the bay as the whiskey ran down from the works during the fire.

When this industry was at its height, whiskey had the low price of 25c a gallon, and the majority of people used it as a beverage. How thin-the thought of that might make some people, even in these days. The product of the distillery was known as "forty rod" whiskey.

One tragedy marked the history of the plant, the death by poisoning of a man named Nott.

Since 1868 a forest of trees has grown up, covering the site. For nearly 50 years the property has been in various hands, the main activity over it, being the annual payment of taxes.

Now after this long idleness of half a century the material in a portion of the ruins is again to be put to use.

THE DAWN OF YOUNG WOMANHOOD

Girls upon the threshold of womanhood often drift into a decline in spite of all care and attention, even strong and lively girls become weak, depressed, irritable and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—a crisis in the life of every girl—and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood pure and rich with the red tint of health.

If the body is not in a healthy condition at this critical stage, grave disorders may result, and future life becomes a burden. Deadly convulsions often follow this crisis in the lives of young women.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls from what might have been a life-long invalidism or early death. They are a blood-builder of unequalled merit, strengthening weak nerves and producing a liberal supply of rich, red blood, which every girl needs to sustain her strength.

Over and over again Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and thanks to this great medicine I am again enjoying good health, with a good appetite, good color and an esprit of energy.

Every anemic girl can be made well and strong through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The crusade against alcohol is being carried on very vigorously in France, and it is one of the signs of the extremely serious state of mind obtaining in that country.

In ordinary times the average Frenchman, although he may occasionally complain of the ravages of drunkenness, satisfies his conscience by shrugging his shoulders and remarking that wine is necessary, and that some drunkards are inevitable.

In days of stress, however like the present, when every man is needed by the nation, either at the front or in the production of food and munitions of war, serious and radical projects are spoken of for the abolition of extreme forms of indulgence in alcoholic drinking.

In the Journal des Debats for May 1st is found a very serious article on the subject, from which the following extract is translated.

"Within a few days the representatives of the associated employers in the textile industries have pointed out to the government that one of the principal obstacles to the full resumption of work on a profitable basis is the drink habit.

The Paris Chamber of Commerce has also recently adopted a resolution in favor of the small distillers (the so-called privileges des bouilleurs de cru), which is a fiscal privilege becoming less and less defensible when one considers the present financial needs, and a privilege moreover, which is one of the prime causes of the growth of alcoholism.

To-day, the Prefect of the Seine, following the example of many of his colleagues, announces that he will revoke the government allowance granted to the wives of men at the front who have been convicted of unduly frequenting the bars.

The English government also proposes to enact several measures for the purpose of checking the evil. When will the government of France do the same? It is a very live question, and journalists are discussing it seriously, as we see from a vigorous article in the Revue by M. Jean Finot, who resumes, with an abundance of impressive facts and arguments, the campaign against this wide-spread evil.

If any sceptical persons still exist they have only to read his able piece of pleading. Alcoholism is the root of nearly all the dangers which now menace us. It is one of the most pitiless causes of death amongst us.

A very high mortality rate characterizes the Departments where the greatest consumption of alcohol occurs, as for instance in Calvados or the Lower Seine. The alcoholic person has children, but the poor creatures die like flies.

Alcohol is the cause of half the cases of phthisis and insanity, and of more than half the criminal offences. One is astounded at the statistics on the subject, which have been collected by the sanitary officials, alienists and criminologists of all countries.

If we pass to economic considerations, the conclusion is the same. The sale of spirituous liquors reaches a billion and a half of francs (about $300,000,000) per year, and for the most part they are sold to the peasant and working classes.

We hardly dare speak of the loss of work due to absent days, and to the inferior quality of the service performed. It is enormous, one might say incalculable. And amongst the men under arms, is it not sad to observe the relapses if liquor is accessible to them again? So often do these relapses occur that the authorities have been forced in many places to confine maimed and convalescent soldiers for the purpose of preventing accidents.

But it is not necessary to insist on these things; everybody is familiar with the mischief done by alcohol. Nobody disputes it, but it is difficult to undertake a vigorous fight against alcoholism on account of the fact that too many interests are involved in its support.

The great misfortune for France is that it is a country which produces alcohol in all forms and in great quantities. The countries which adopt draconian measures in regard to alcohol are usually in a less delicate situation.

In France we have 1,600,000 producers of wine, 1,100,000 producers of cidre, almost as many small distillers (bouilleurs de cru), 50,000 professional distillers, 500,000 saloon keepers and 50,000 wine merchants, as well as an army of draymen, coopers, etc., who are closely associated with these.

One cannot make a bayonet charge against that well organized army, well-entrenched and deeply buried in the trenches of their own self-interest.

"Still the war permits us, nay, commands us, to take action. Germany (thought we were already destroyed by alcohol. She was mistaken in her calculations. But her mistake might turn out to be a reality if we were to allow things to develop freely. If we are prompt we may take effective measures. We have won a point in connection with absinth, a thing we could never have done in time of peace. That is an encouragement to go farther. The military authorities can forbid the sale of spirituous liquors to the men under arms, and still more easily to the wounded. They have in some cases already done so. General Frauchet d'Espercy has set an excellent example to others. Why not extend the prohibition introduced by him? And the prefects can, and should, all of them, imitate those of their colleagues who are trying to save from drink the women who are the beneficiaries of the government allowances granted certainly for a quite different purpose. All these remedies would be for the present moment, but would have the advantage of being prompt and might be a preparation for permanent legislative measures.

"These measures are especially the reduction of the number of bars and saloons and the abolition of the privilege of the small distillers. If we wait till the end of the war it will be difficult to do anything. Meanwhile the small distillers are ruining themselves and others with their alcohol, and at the same time defrauding the public treasury of more than 100 million francs a year. In 1903 their rights were attacked and their number fell from 1,137,000 to 302,000. But, in 1906, on the eve of an election, both Houses of Parliament restored the privilege and put the distillers in their old position. Such a lack of heroism is particularly characteristic of parliamentary bodies. We must not, therefore, hope for much from the government, unless it is possible to reorganize the alcohol industry on some large and rational basis. That is to say we must find an outlet for our alcohol without being forced to drink it. It must be consumed in some other way than in human stomachs. That raises the question of what is known as the 'denaturalization' of alcohol. By the industrial use of spirits, Germany has succeeded in trebling the quantity consumed in twenty years, and the price is reduced from about twenty-five cents a quart, the French price, to about eight cents in Germany! Some such thing must be done in France. The perfume industry would alone consume a vast quantity of alcohol, if the manufacturers could have it duty free. The solution of the problem demands care method and perseverance, but the future, perhaps the very existence, of the French race is at stake, and the effort must be made. We are now making enormous sacrifices for the salvation of the France of today, shall we not make some slight sacrifice for the salvation of the France of tomorrow?"

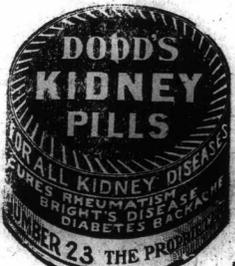

A Canadian reading this article must remember that there are very few total abstainers in France. There are some, but the average Frenchman takes regularly wine or cider at his meals, and would be surprised if required to abstain from the use of these harmless drinks, as he considers them. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that there is no system for the licensing and limiting of the sale of liquor. Anybody is practically free to open a bar where he will and sell as much as he can. Hence the extension of drinking is great amongst the working classes of the populous centres, and particularly of objectionable forms of alcohol such as absinth. The system of allowing producers of their own cider to distill brandy for their own use has also proved very harmful, inasmuch as it has led to a great increase of drinking amongst the peasant class, and that of inferior grades of liquor.

Now a Captain.

His many friends will be glad to learn that Lieut. C. Ross Cameron of the 57th Regiment, who is now a member of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., has been promoted to captain and is now second in command of D. Company of the 39th, the company in which the 136 Peterborough men are in. The company is commanded by Major Doggs, with Captain Cameron second in command.

Died in Toronto.

Mr. Alexander Rollins, who formerly resided on Catherine street and was employed with Messrs. Wm. McIntosh and Co., died this week in Toronto. He left here about six months ago. His illness was of short duration.

LOYD GEORGE'S TRIBUTE TO GREAT METHODIST

It was nearly limned full-length portrait of Hugh Price Hughes that Mr. Lloyd George drew at the West London Mission meeting. Someone called it the tribute of the greatest living Welshman to the greatest dead Welshman. It was, at any rate, a glowing and intimate analysis of a remarkable personality, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer spoke from the fullness of his heart in his sympathetic estimate of the man's life and industry. It was a career of fearlessness, courage and devotion to the bottom dog that obviously appealed to Mr. Lloyd George's instincts, and it was interesting and natural to find the Chancellor wondering what sort of a figure Hugh Price Hughes would have cut as a Parliamentarian. He unhesitatingly expressed his opinion that this man, with a platform style similar to Mr. Chamberlain's and with towering qualities of character that almost obscured his intellectual gifts, would have left his mark on the events of the day. The speech will stand for long as the outstanding tribute to the memory of the great Methodist. Mr. Runciman, who presided, and whom Mr. Lloyd George described as one of Hugh Price Hughes' men, made the interesting confession that he considered that he and the Chancellor of the Exchequer—who had never incurred a debt in a bad cause—had more things in common than any other two members of the Cabinet. Mr. Lloyd George returned the compliment by describing Mr. Runciman as one of the most distinguished and serviceable members of the Ministry.

Mr. Lloyd George, at a West London Mission anniversary meeting in Kings way Hall today, unveiled a memorial portrait to the late Hugh Price Hughes, the founder of the Mission, and paid a glowing tribute to his life and work. He described him as the "greatest personal force my race has turned out for a generation." Personal force was a combination of qualities of mind and heart, and no man had ever dominated his generation who had not in a great measure possessed both. Hugh Price Hughes had great intellectual gifts, gifts of courage, resolution, and, beyond everything, faith. His qualities of character were so towering that they almost obscured his great intellectual powers.

"Had he chosen a Parliamentary career," said the Chancellor of the Exchequer, "I have no doubt he would have been in the front rank of Parliamentarians. He had all the gifts—great, resourceful, incisive, above all courage. His many years' mingled me rather of Mr. Chamberlain, and I have no doubt that if he had been in politics he would have been a great, dominant, compelling figure. He would have impressed his personality upon the events of the day. There are three kinds of men in public life, political, and religious, and I will tell you what they are in military terms. The first is the heavy, who fires slowly and ponderously, with much effort, but if his shells contain a good quantity of high explosives the havoc wrought amongst the enemy is terrible (laughter), but if they don't (laughter), and very often they don't, they drop heavily into the clay, get thoroughly embedded there out of sight, and absolutely forgotten until in some future generation some excavator picks out the sort of weapon they used in the past dark ages. (Laughter) Then there is the idealist—that is the howitzer with a high trajectory, aiming high, pointing to the heavens, firing in a misty way which comes down with crashing effect on the entrenchment of the enemy on the earth. There is also the quick-firing gun, aiming straight at the ranks of the enemy, firing unceasingly, destructively, breaking their ranks, and dispersing them. Hugh Price Hughes was a compound of the last two" (Applause).

"The Cradle in which he was Rocked." "You don't know Hugh Price Hughes unless you know the cradle in which he was rocked. For fifty years, culminating about the time he was born, Wales produced a larger number of orators of the first rank than any other country in the history of the world during the same time. It had them," added Mr. Lloyd George. "I should like to write their story. There is nothing I would love better, because their true greatness has not been interpreted outside their native land. They were men of genius, with fire beyond the ordinary, and Hugh Price Hughes was born at an hour in Wales when the whole air was thrilled with magic of their words. You look at their portraits—their dead portraits today—and you can see the radiance of eternal hope and the horror of endless agony struggling in the very gleam of their eyes. Hugh Price Hughes was not influenced by their oratory. His style was entirely his own. In style and manner he was completely detached from the Welsh night oratory. He did not sit, as they did, with his feet on a stool, but when he was excited it came out. The religious leader he seemed most devoted to was St. Francis of Assisi, who subordinated every material effort to the success of his mission. He was content with a wage that would have sent a black squad on strike. (Laughter) His instinct made him shun prosperity. His vitality rejuvenated Methodism, but he was bigger than any sect."

C compassion for the Underworld. Recalling the first time he ever heard him, Mr. Lloyd George said he read on that Sunday afternoon the chapters of Victor Hugo's great novel "Les Misérables," one of the greatest books ever written—the story of the underworld. He had living interest in the underworld. He knew the multitudes had to be fed as well as preached to. Christ's promise was that His kingdom should mean a hundredfold on this earth and in the world to come life eternal. It was the reproach of Protestantism that it had too often forgotten the first part of the promise whilst concentrating its whole thought on the latter, but Hugh Price Hughes did his best to remedy that. He knew the dumb, suffering millions were waiting patiently for the distribution of the present part of the dividend, and until they received it it could barely be expected that they should believe in the deferred dividend to come. He more than anyone else served to Methodism, the consciousness of the importance of that side of the Christian mission. He was impatient of the wrong and wretchedness of the great city, and that was a great saying of his when he walked across Hampstead Heath, after talking of the wretchedness of London: "Oh, why is not God in more of a hurry? There was no more reverent soul than he, and when he said it must have been the cry from the agony of a soul that was hurt for the millions of people who were suffering."

Where His Courage is Missed. Speaking of his courage, "We miss his fearlessness," said Mr. Lloyd George. "We miss it more than ever now when you have a House of Commons quailing before an enraged crowd of Irish publicans and distillers. (Loud applause.) We need courage. We need fearless men of his type. It was a privilege to unveil the portrait of a great fellow-countryman. For generations to come men struggling in great causes, feeling discouraged by difficulties, depressed by obstacles and by failure of immediate success, would be inspired and strengthened when they gazed at the resolute countenance of that fearless man of God. (Applause.)"

TOURISTS TURN TOWARD CANADA

Americans Usually Summering in Europe Will Sojourn in North

That this season will be the most prosperous for a tourist traffic standpoint that the Dominion of Canada has ever enjoyed, due chiefly to the inability of the Europe-loving American to visit his favorite Old World resort, is the opinion of G. R. Mackay, gassie, magazine writer, and public representative of the Canada Steamship Lines, which with 115 vessels in operation on the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence is reputed to be the largest inland navigation company. "Each year," said Mr. Mackay, "more than 25,000 tourists from the United States have been in the habit of summering in Europe, leaving behind them a sum computed by the Department of Commerce to be fully $50,000,000. This year, however, the tour of Europe will be practically closed. The tourist will have to go somewhere and Canada feels that with her magnificent scenery, wonderful climate and her unparalleled sporting facilities, she is well able to attract a very large number. "Canada is in no sense at war. Conditions are about commensurate with conditions here. The uncertainty of the past few months has been outlived, and prosperity looms large on the horizon of the tomorrow. The visitor to Canada will find things just as in other years. The somewhat ubiquitous soldier, the outward indication of her imperial obligations, will be the only suggestion of the war abroad, and if anything, less of the war will be heard than on this side of the boundary. "The Dominion Government has placed no restrictions on free intercourse between the two countries. No passports will be required, nor will the tourist have to comply with any of the accepted regulations of nominal times. In fact, the American vacationist will be more welcome this summer than ever before, for the Dominion feels that 1915 presents an opportunity for the exploitation of her scenic and climatic advantages that may never recur."

Mr. Agassiz, who has been traveling steadily for the past two and a half months, having visited every large center east of the Mississippi and some beyond in that time, believes the United States faces the dawn of the greatest era of prosperity in her history. Everywhere he has found unmistakable signs of business recovery, and a return of national confidence in the inherent destiny of the country. The Bryan resignation, he thinks, has served to clarify the situation, because the people as a whole, feeling that the interests of America will be conserved, will not be so prone to hasty action. Vacillation could have had only one ending, and that would not have been a peaceful one.

"Kitchen Shower"

Last evening, Mrs. R. Timmerman, No. 12 Moira St. West gave a kitchen shower to Miss Gertie Elvins. About 30 young ladies were present, and the bride-to-be was graciously showered with kitchen utensils. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Walter Lasher Arrested

Walter Lasher was last evening arrested in Napanee on a charge of taking a bicycle belonging to Mr. Scantlebury. Lasher was brought to the city by P. C. Corrigan today. The bicycle said to have been the one stolen had been lately repainted.

HIGHLAND CASUALTIES

The Late Lieut. A. F. Paterson

The Beany members of D company, 4th Camerons have suffered very considerably in the Feubert battle, and the greatest sympathy is felt for the parents and friends of those who have given their lives for their country. Lance Corporal D. Paterson and Pte. John Mackenzie were reported killed. The former is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Paterson, Kewbank. He was an accident in the employment of the Lands Valuation Department, one of the members of the Shanty team, and one of the most respected young men in Beany.

Lieut. A. F. Paterson, who is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Paterson, Kewbank, was wounded and secured from all accounts to be progressing favorably, when on Saturday his parents received the news of his serious illness. Both his father and mother left with express haste for France, but unfortunately they were too late to find him in life, he having passed away when he was in a hospital. He was buried with military honors on Sunday. The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Paterson, Miss Paterson and the only surviving son in their double bereavement. Lieut. Paterson was a fine athlete, a crack shot, and captained the Beany Shanty team in their recent double success. He was very popular and his letters from the front were full of sympathy for those of his comrades who had no friends to send them comforts, and he was instrumental in obtaining these things for them—Inverness Northern Chronicle, June 28, 1915.

Their father, John Paterson of Beany and Donald Paterson of the Dominion Customs here, are full first cousins.

Lecture at John Street Church

A large audience was present at John Street church, Tuesday night, when the Rev. A. H. Drumm of Bowmanville, lectured under the auspices of the Church Help Society, on the subject of "The Prussian Peril." Prof. D. R. Coleman did duty as chairman and with his usual grace, introduced the several numbers. Mr. H. MacKay's singing of the "Recessional" was much appreciated. The lecturer of the evening was received with hearty applause and throughout his interesting lecture was followed with the closest attention. He traced the causes leading up to the great war with precision and variously illustrated the way in which the jungle principle of the Hobbes theory has been manifesting itself through the centuries, extending territory by taking slices from neighbors by force of arms, and manifesting itself as a menace to Europe and still to be reckoned with. Many notes of local interest were found in the lecture, e. g. that the reason for the coming to Canada of many of our longest resident Germans was in the oppressions which opened up in the forties and fifties of the last century though many of them do not know it. A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. R. Tannahill and seconded by Mr. L. Moore and replied to by the lecturer. The program of the evening was then concluded by singing the National anthem.

Popular Young Lady Soon to Leave City

On Wednesday evening of last week Mrs. R. Anderson and Mrs. Howard J. Sharpe, 43 Hillside street gave a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Gertrude Elvins who leaves Belleville soon to reside in Toronto. Miss Elvins received many pretty and useful gifts. Although the gathering was a great surprise, Miss Elvins made a suitable reply. On Saturday afternoon last before leaving the gas office Miss Elvins was presented with a beautiful illuminated address, accompanied by a purse containing $20 in gold, from the city hall staff and employees of the gas department. During the years Miss Elvins has been engaged as book-keeper in the gas department she has made many friends. Miss Elvins, although greatly surprised thanked all those who so kindly remembered her.

Entertained by the Choir

Mrs. (Rev.) A. R. Sanderson is being entertained this afternoon at a picnic at Massawaga park by the choir of West Belleville Methodist Church. Mrs. Sanderson has been so-prone sojourner in that organization since her arrival in the city and her work in that connection has been highly appreciated. She leaves with her husband in a few days to take up a new charge at Campbellford.

Successful Tea

The tea held at the residence of Mrs. St. Charles yesterday evening was a great success, both socially and financially, $60 being realized for the organ fund. The fancy basket was won by Mrs. L. P. Hughes, the lucky number being 19.

Some of the most daring and experienced her rollers and expert handlers of the canoe have been engaged for the water carnival at the Canadian National Exhibition, and every day from 5.30 to 6.30 a performance will be given on the lake front. PRESENTATION TO MRS. W.G. CLARKE

Beautiful Sterling Silver Tea Service Given by Tabernacle Congregation Last Evening

(From Thursday's Daily.) An official farewell was last evening given by the congregation of the Tabernacle Methodist church to Rev. W. G. Clarke, Mrs. Clarke and daughter, who leave shortly for Bowmanville. The function took place in the Sunday school parlors and was in the form of an address and presentation. Every society of the church was represented by its officers and the congregation in large numbers was proof of the popularity of the retiring pastor and his family.

Members of the quarterly official board and of the various church organizations occupied the platform along with Rev. Mr. Clarke, Mrs. Clarke and their daughters, Rev. A. Campbell, Mrs. Campbell, and Mrs. Sherman. Mr. Thos. F. Willis occupied the chair and offered the following address: "Dear Mr. Clarke, we are reminded to-night that we have no continuing city here, that we must get and pass on as do the ships at sea. Time with its inexorable changes whirled us into an eddy for a brief space, then away on down the stream to its close. We meet at this time because of the all too brief days you have been with us. Four years ago you came quietly and unostentatiously to our parsonage. Soon we began to realize the loveliness of your personality, that you were ever heroic in your home duties, ever helpful in your church associations, ever gracious in your dealings with those who were selfish in your efforts on our behalf. "As a congregation then we want to say we can never express our appreciation of your presence and ministrations as our pastor's wife, but instead we must refer to you as a reminder of our love and gratitude this Sterling Silver Tea Service, with the hope that in the many future years that we trust are to be yours, you will find in it a reflection of the memory of Tabernacle days. "We remember Nora and Dorothy and hope they will develop in beauty and grace of character like their mother. "On behalf of Tabernacle Congregation. Elizabeth Campbell, Alzina Sherman, Belleville, Ont., June 23, 1915.

At this juncture Mrs. Sherman presented Mrs. Clarke with a beautiful four-piece sterling tea service. Tributes to the tireless endeavor of the departing pastor and his wife were spoken by Messrs. T. F. Willis, T. Hill, A. Egan, and J. W. Rowland. Rev. J. Egan, Aid. J. O. R. McCurdy, and B. O. Frederick, Rev. Mr. Clarke had stood four-square to the world. The church could not forget his work in Belleville and the great amount of open fearlessness and of enthusiasm in his calling. The Rev. Mr. Egan pointed to the earnestness of Mr. Clarke's conviction, concluded that Mr. Reid's death was inspiring to all with whom he came in contact. All the speakers joined in bidding Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and family God-speed and every temporal and spiritual blessing. Mr. Harry Moorman sang a solo. Rev. Mr. Clarke made a short address of appreciation of the thoughtfulness and kindness of the congregation, he referred to the closing of the pastorate as the breaking of the box of spikenard, resulting in the pouring out of love. "On behalf of Mrs. Clarke, we appreciate most highly the love that marks the giving of this gift." The pastor then spoke of the preservation for it is of solid sterling. While the parting meant the severance of friendships, yet the occasion was one of brightness. It makes life worth living in remembering from place to place to place with such pleasant and loving memories. He did not expect to find a more loyal, faithful, zealous and earnest band anywhere than the quarterly members of the Tabernacle. The work of the church had been dear to the pastor and Mrs. Clarke. Mr. Clarke explained that a new parsonage was being built at Bowmanville and that the new pastor of the Tabernacle, Rev. S. C. Moore, would arrive in Belleville on Wednesday next. In closing he said that the latch-string on the door of the Bowmanville parsonage would always be of the outside for every friend of the Tabernacle congregation and expressed gratitude for all the wealth of affection which had been lavished upon Mrs. Clarke, his family and himself. The meeting closed with a farewell hymn.

MAN DEAD, WIFE ILL, RESULT OF POISONING

TOOK SALTS FROM CAN THAT IS SAID TO HAVE CONTAINED STRYCHNINE BEFORE. Tamworth, Ont., June 22.—R. A. Reid, fifty-four years of age who was retired near Enterprise, is dead, and his wife, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien of this village, is seriously ill as the result of poisoning Sunday morning. Coroner Dr. G. H. Cowan of Napanee, on investigation, concluded that Mr. Reid's death was accidental, but how the poisoning occurred is still somewhat of a mystery. The doctors claim that Reid and his wife, who had taken canned peaches Saturday night and again Sunday morning, not feeling well had taken salts, which had been kept in a can that formerly contained strychnine. In a short time they were both taken violently ill. A neighbor heard Mrs. Reid groaning, and going in found her and her husband in great pain. A physician was summoned, but in spite of all medical assistance, Mr. Reid passed away in convulsions about 3 a.m. There is hope of his wife's recovery.

New Potatoes

Mr. Chas. Champagne of Avondale, has laid on the editor's table a box of new potatoes. The tubers are as large as good-sized hen's eggs showing remarkable development for the time of year. The abnormally cool season has not evidently retarded growth of the "marphises" for these were not transplanted but put out in the ordinary manner in the early spring.

LAI TO REST

The remains of the late Mrs. Alex. Elliott arrived Tuesday evening from Toronto having been delayed by a blockade on the C. N. R. The funeral was held from the station to the cemetery directly instead of to Christ church. The Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrove officiated at the grave. The bearers were Messrs. A. Delaney, J. Warham, J. Duckworth, A. Goodsell, W. C. Reid and E. Post.

The funeral of the late John Jos. Bohan took place Wednesday from his late residence, the Hastings House to St. Michaels church where the Rev. Father Killen officiated at a solemn requiem mass. There were many mass cards and beautiful floral designs upon the casket. The mass was attended by a large body of citizens of Belleville and many residents of Tweed were present. Interment was at St. James cemetery, the bearers being Messrs. Haslip, Allore, Hart, Smith, Welsh and McPhee.

TRENTON.

TRENTON, June 22.—Mr. C. M. Stork, of Belleville, is in town to-day attending court of revision. Yesterday, the government official engaged in securing a record of the number of people and vehicles crossing the bridge during the day, reported the number of people as nearly 4000. We did not get the number of vehicles. On Saturdays and Sundays it is safe to say that from 6,000 to 7,000 people cross the bridge during the day and evening. Mr. Snider of Toronto, a former Trentonian, is in town to-day. Many citizens on Marlboro street are placing curbing in front of their residences. THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1915.

FAIL TO REALISE OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

They of the Motherland have been prompt to give Canada full credit for everything that she has done in connection with the war, and slow indeed even to hint at laxity on her part in the performance of her duty to the British Union. But they have evidently had their own thoughts which are beginning to find expression, in very guarded and gentle language which should be all the more suggestive and impressive on that account.

For example, a recent writer in the "Round Table," after indicating how imperfectly the Motherland has realised the seriousness of the war situation, turns his attention to us. He points out that as the people of the United Kingdom have done less than their Continental Allies, so we have done still less than the Homeland people and "have been yet slower to realise the responsibilities which rest upon us." He adds:

"And it is becoming increasingly probable that success in that final and supreme crisis which will decide the issue of the war, will depend on whether the Dominions come forward, as we have still to come forward, with their last horse and their last man."

The "Round Table" writer, with evident truthfulness, says that he "has no desire to belittle what we have already done." On the contrary, he declares that we have made every effort which has been asked of us. Our sons, he admits gladly, have fought with a courage and persistence which have not been surpassed. But he correctly intimates that we have not done, and are not doing, nearly enough. He holds that our efforts, however commendable they may have been, are far from sufficient. "It is THE EFFORT WHICH HAS STILL TO BE MADE," he justly maintains, "which will win the war; and that effort, if it is to be successful MUST COME EQUALLY FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EMPIRE."

This is exactly what we have been asserting and insisting upon for months past with regard to Canada. Our Government has been doling out contributions in men almost as if it were reluctant to make them. It has been waiting for requests from the Motherland, instead of acting as would properly become the rulers of an independent national unit of the Empire on their own initiative. The Government of Canada is as free to move in this matter as that of the United Kingdom. Canada is as much at war as Great Britain. It is perhaps even more deeply concerned in the outcome of the war than the Old Country. The United Kingdom might be profoundly humiliated; it could hardly be annexed by Germany. Canada might, and almost certainly would, be seized by the Germans should the war go against us. That, in a nutshell, is for us the possible situation.

It is quite evident that neither the Government nor the people of Canada at all clearly realise the seriousness of the issue, and that no adequate efforts are being exerted to safeguard our most vital interests, which are so directly involved. Once again, therefore, we must urge and insist that every available man in Canada shall, as soon as possible, be enrolled and got ready for service in the pressing interests of ourselves, of the Empire, and of humanity.

The "S. O. S." call may, any day during the coming months, be issued from the Motherland to the world-wide British brotherhood of nations. What if Canada could not effectively respond to it? What if we had no forces available in addition to those which we have already forwarded or are now enlisting? Should we ever be able to forgive ourselves? Would it ever be possible to redeem our error? Let us ponder these questions while there is yet time. Let us make ready to avail ourselves of the services of every competent man in the Dominion, who is willing to volunteer in defence of the common British cause and for the ultimate salvation of the British Empire. Half a million Canadians can undoubtedly be got for the asking. The Government should call out, at once, at least, a quarter of a million. Canada is at war. Is the Government neutral?

HAVE BROKEN ALL THE RULES.

Supplementing and amplifying the heart-piercing report of Lord Bryce's Committee on outrages and atrocities committed by the German Army in Belgium and France, Professor J. H. Morgan, the eminent constitutional lawyer, in the "Nineteenth Century" for June, gives a terrible and poignant account of his personal experiences as an official investigator in northeastern France into alleged breaches of the laws of war by the German troops. Liberal use of the material accumulated by Professor Morgan has been made by Lord Bryce's Committee, but in his contribution to the "Nineteenth Century" he covers new ground.

A jurist of distinction, accustomed to weigh evidence and to take a critical view of men and things, he is not the type of man to accept with blind credulity every tale told by an indignant soldier of a frightened refugee. His method of inquiry was severely judicial. From it there emerges indubitable evidence of wholesale atrocities that will stamp the German Army with infamy for all time. Proof is cited from field diaries of dead or captured Germans of a "malignant frenzy" against British troops; and there is tragic evidence that some British prisoners were killed in cold blood by their barbarous foe. As for the crimes against non-combatants, against innocent women, girls, and feeble old men, they are so dreadful as to suggest that they must have been committed by devils incarnate, not by men.

"The Germans," he writes, "have broken all rules, human and divine, and not even the ancient freemasonry of arms, whose honorable traditions are almost as old as war itself, has restrained them in their brutal and licentious fury. It is useless to discriminate between the people and their rulers; an abundance of diaries of soldiers in the ranks shows that all are affected with a common spirit." A whole nation has been taught with passionate method, through a long course of years, that war is a normal state of civilization; that the lust of conquest and the arrogance of race are the most precious of the virtues. "On this Dead Sea fruit the German people have been fed for a generation, until they are rotten to the core."

THE AWFUL WRECK OF YPRES

John Buchan, in his fourth volume of the History of the War, describing the condition of Ypres, around which the war has raged for months, says: "The red cottages are riddled and roofless; the asylum opposite has had its front blown off; a water tower has a shell hole in the middle of it. Presently you are in the main street, with the Cathedral at the head of it. The street lies white and empty in the sun, and over all reigns a deathly stillness. There is not a human being to be seen in all its length, and the houses which comprise it are skeletons. Here the whole front has gone and bedrooms with wrecked furniture are open to the light. Here a 42 cm. shell has made a breach in the line with raw edges of masonry on both sides and a yawning cavern below. Go into one of the houses which have suffered least. In one room the carpet is spattered with plaster from the ceiling, but the furniture is unbroken. There is a Boule cabinet with china, red plush chairs, a piano, and a gramophone—the plenishing of the best parlor of a middle-class home. In another room is a sewing machine, from which the owner has fled in the middle of a piece of work. Here is a novel with the reader's place marked. It is like a city which has been visited by an earthquake which caught the inhabitants unawares and drove them shivering to seek a place of refuge. Through the gaps in the houses are glimpses of greenery. Push open this broken door and you enter a garden—a carefully-tended garden, for the grass has been once trimly kept and the owner must have had a pretty taste in spring flowers. A little fountain still splashes in a stone basin. But at one corner an incendiary shell has fallen on the house, and in the heap of charred debris there are human remains. Most of the dead have been removed, but there are still bodies in out-of-the-way corners. Over all hangs a sickening smell of decay, against which the lilacs and hawthorns are powerless. That garden is no place to tarry in."

A news despatch says: "Welsh Brothers' circus has offered former Secretary Bryan $15,000 for a ten-minute speech daily for twelve weeks." And the Boston Transcript asks: "What's the matter, is the clown sick?"

Somebody has asked whether, in view of the terrible war in Europe, there is really such a thing as progress. The New York Post answers the question by asking another. In case of a terrible illness, would anyone go about asking if there was really such a thing as health? There is still a great deal of illness apart from the inevitable decline of old age. But undoubtedly there has been progress in medical and sanitary science. Perhaps, however, international relations have not been studied in the scientific way that has improved the health of the body.

Activity in the construction of British merchant tonnage is declining, according to expert statements. We are told by the London Times that at the end of March there were, according to the returns of Lloyd's Register, 471 merchant vessels of 1,587,467 tons under construction in the United Kingdom, against 535 of 1,890,856 at the corresponding date of 1914. This is a sharp falling off which sets Englishmen searching for its cause, which doubtless is that efforts are largely concentrated on warship construction and other military objects.

Eight French 75-millimetre guns can use up as much ammunition in one day as can be turned out by a factory employing 4,000 to 5,000 men. Every soldier in the French army will use up ten rifles in the course of a year, or say 15,000,000 all told. It would probably take the labor of 500,000 men to keep up that supply. And all this labor is being devoted to the work of destruction.

A despatch from Athens says news received from Constantinople says there have been bread riots on a somewhat dangerous scale, and violent collisions have taken place between Turks and Germans in the Galata quarter. Feeling against the Germans is reported to be steadily rising. The population want to know why German officers' families are being sent back to the fatherland. There is a general feeling of extreme despondency. Even German officers of high standing recognize only one thing can save Turkey now, and that is peace.

The German Government has made a special appeal to its people to hand over their hoards of gold for the public service. The appeal is being responded to, thousands of wives giving up their gold rings in return for iron ones. In one case a woman called on her vicar and brought him ten gold twenty-mark pieces which she received as her dowry when she married, and exchanged them for paper. She had had them for years and was loth to part with them, as they had tender associations in her mind. But she had the "national spirit of sacrifice, and offered them to her fatherland."

Whether or not German sympathies are behind the organization recently formed in England those opposed to conscription, is not stated. At any event, a number of men have formed what they call the "No-conscription Fellowship." The leaders of the new movement are mostly officials of the Independent Labor party or of the Allied Union of Democratic Control. Their organization, they state, is a "fellowship for common counsel and action of men of men of enlistment age who are not prepared to bear arms in the event of conscription, whatever the penalties for refusing."

There is a scathing article from the pen of Archibald Hurd in the current issue of T. P.'S Journal of Great Deeds. Mr. Hurd has much to say about the German pro-war talk of emulating the sea chivalry of Nelson. He speaks of their war methods and the ghastly fashion in which they have shattered the shrine of sea honor.

"One is led to wonder in what terms of contempt and execration the old sailors would refer to the acts which have been committed at sea in the course of the present war by the officers and men of the youngest of navies. The main body of the German navy remains in harbor, while submarines carry on a policy of piracy, in the pursuit of which the triumphs of mechanical and chemical science are employed. No preparation for neutralizing the acts of this new form of warfare has been made, and against the depredations there is at present no protection. It is a new disease which the enemy has developed.

"The case of the Lusitania is parallel to these; it is a manifestation of disease and crime."

There is a war shortage of 170,000 male agricultural laborers on the farms of England Scotland and Wales, according to a report from the Board of Agriculture. During the next two months the board hopes to fill virtually all these vacancies with women.

Already women have come to the assistance of farmers in the counties of Essex, Norfolk and Lincolnshire in planting the potato crop and in truck gardening. Several hundred women are being trained and employed in place of men laborers on dairy farms in Cheshire, Dorset and Berks, where the wages paid range from $3.50 to $5 a week.

There is one feature of dairy work which the board hopes to see taken over everywhere by women for the duration of the war, and that is twice daily drive to the station with the milk or the delivery of the milk to the customers. It is a common sight in Ireland to see the women drive the milk to the station of creamery in a donkey cart.

General Sir Robert Biddulph writes to the London Times to say:

It is not improbable that these continuous attacks on the British lines, which are daily causing us heavy losses, are made because it is supposed that our supply of shells is not so good as it ought to be, and the Germans may think that this will afford them an opportunity of breaking our line.

Not only is it "not improbable," says the Westminster Gazette, that these attacks are due to the talk about our want of shells; it is highly probable that they are so due. "We have already said that the only possible justification for declaring that a shortage existed would be that the statement was a ruse which did not tell the truth about the situation, and was intended to invite attack. It is not a little surprising to find the statement of Sir Robert Biddulph in the columns of the Times, of all places. If these daily 'heavy losses' are the outcome of talk about shells, then we know where the responsibility lies."

BATTLE.

The Question.

I wonder if the old cow died or not, Gey had she was the night I left, and sick Dick reckoned she would mend. He knows a lot. At least he fancies so himself, does Dick.

Dick knows a lot. But maybe I did wrong To leave the cow to him, and come away. Over and over like a silly song These words keep humming in my head all day.

And all I think of, as I face the foe And take my lucky chance of being shot, Is this—that if I'm hit, I'll never know Till Doomsday if the old cow died or not.

Raining.

The night I left, my father said: "You'll go and do some stupid thing. You've no more sense in that fat head Than Silly Billy Witterling."

"Not sense to come in when it rains— Not sense enough for that, you've got. You'll get a bullet through your brains, Before you know, as like as not."

And now I'm lying in the trench And shells and bullets through the night Are raining in a steady drench, I'm thinking the old man was right.

His Father.

I quite forgot to put the spigot in. It's just come over me . . . And it is queer To think he'll not care if we lose or win, And yet be jumping mad about the beer.

I left it running full. He must have said A thing or two. I'd give my stripes to hear What he will say if I'm reported dead Before he gets me told about that beer! —Wilfrid Wilson Gibson in The Nation, London.

UNMENTIONED IN DESPATCHES.

We love to sing our heroes, in martial days like these, The lads whose daring deeds are signified By eulogies and medals, promotions and V.C.'s. We talk about their gallantry with pride. But for every one we hear of, there are hundreds left unsung, Whose hardihood the highest valour matches, For whom no bands are playing, no village bells are rung, The heroes who're unmentioned in despatches.

There's a crop of British valor on the blood-stained battlefield Made fertile by a steady rain of shells, There's many a gallant exploit that will never be revealed.

In Flanders and the distant Dardanelles, When you read about the fighting, grim and fierce in foreign parts, When a sympathetic gasp your breathing catches, Don't forget to keep a corner, swept and garnished in your hearts

For the heroes who're unmentioned in despatches. —Jessie Pope in London (Eng.) Daily Mail.

WHY WOOL DROPPED.

Last week our pages bore the announcement that the embargo which had been placed on wool a short time before had been taken off, allowing Canadian wool to again go to the United States. When the embargo was announced wool manufacturers in this country immediately dropped the price from eight to ten cents per pound. Why? Canada imports wool. Canada requires as much wool as she produces. Wool prices early in June in the United States were from 28 to 30 cents per pound for mediums. The market in Britain showed a slight easing off, but, while indications were that wool might be a little easier, there was no real reason in the trade why wool should have been dropped so suddenly and so much because of the embargo. It looks very much like another trick of the wool manufacturers. They saw their opportunity to take advantage of the wool producer, and not satisfied with a reasonable haul dropped wool so low that they completely disorganized the market. Of three manufacturers written for prices during the worst days of the slump one quoted an extremely low price, one did not quote and the other refused to quote. At the same time, it is said, Canadian manufacturers were buying wool in the United States, where prices had not dropped. This would appear to be one grand attempt to take about 40 per cent. of the value of the wool right out of the Canadian farmers' pockets and had the embargo continued it would no doubt have accomplished its purpose for it came just as the bulk of the Canadian clip was being removed from the backs of the sheep. Particularly is this true of the West. Fortunately the embargo did not last, and, robbed of its protection as an excuse wool has advanced but not as much as it dropped. The Live Stock Commissioner and the Department of Agriculture are deserving of credit for removing this menace to the sheep-breeding industry and the executive of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association, whose efforts have been untiring on behalf of sheep breeding in this country, are to be congratulated upon the success of their work to get the embargo removed. Had the embargo stayed, Canadian wool producers would have been forced to accept prices about 40 per cent. below the real value of the wool, while the manufacturers of the product would have reaped a fat harvest. At the same time sheep-breeding would have received a severe setback when everyone is anxious for increased production and when the industry had a chance to regain some of its lost ground. It is such inexcusable actions as this on the part of manufacturers that hold agriculture down, that make the farming community suspicious of the manufacturer, that rob agriculture of its just dues and make its people hewers of wood and drawers of water. Imagine, if you can, such a grab at a time like this when every Canadian's patriotism is appealed to. It seems that as with charity some men's patriotism begins at home and amounts to selfishness pure and simple. However, wool producers should be grateful to the executive of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association and to the Live Stock Commissioner and Ministers at Ottawa for the quashing of this excuse which was robbing them and filling the pockets of the manufacturer.—Farmer's Advocate.

BIG JOB; BIG MEN.

A war correspondent just back from Flanders and France says that it is the intention of the Allies in their campaign this summer in that zone to "dynamite their way through." And from what he has seen of the effect of intensified artillery fire he believes they will be successful. This statement makes clear, to some extent, why Lloyd-George, perhaps the biggest man in the cabinet, was selected for the portfolio of Minister of Munitions. To dynamite a path through the German lines will require an unlimited supply of shells. So tremendous is the wastage in modern artillery actions that it will need incessant work to meet the demand. The factories of the United Kingdom will be kept going at top speed day and night if the guns are to be adequately fed. The production of this ammunition is as important as the raising of another army of 300,000 men for Kitchener. Naming Lloyd-George for the job of "delivering the goods" was a wise move. His executive abilities are just what is required to organize factories so that the production may be swift and unhampered, and he has the gift of passing on his energy and enthusiasm to others. In some respects the new Minister of Munitions' task is as big as that of Kitchener and French, but it could not have been placed in stronger hands.—London Advertiser.

HUMANITY DELUDED BY DEMON DOCTRINES

Deception of Our First Parents.

Satan's Monumental Lie Foisted Upon the Church—Christian Standards Lowered—Foundation Falsehood For All Unscriptural Teachings—Refuge of Lies to Be Swept Away—The Name of God Blasphemed Daily—Medieval Darkness Passing—Responsibility of the Ministry—Day of Their Visitation.

Indiana, June 27.—Pastor Russell is here to-day. We report his address on the text, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ should shine unto them." (2 Cor. 4:4.) The Pastor spoke as follows:

During the Dark Ages doctrines of demons were foisted upon the Church by Satan's hosts of fallen angels. Millions were driven into the Church, but driven away from God and from the Bible. The theory was that all not members of the Church would surely go to eternal torture, but that by joining the Church they would have a chance of Heaven, even though the path led through Purgatory. Under these unscriptural teachings, Christianity has enrolled its hundreds of millions very few of whom know anything about the real Christianity of the Bible—true discipleship of Jesus Christ.

We see them in Europe to-day—of all creeds—doing their best to destroy each other—to send each other to Purgatory or to eternal torture. About five per cent. are estimated to be Mohammedans, Jews and infidels, and the remaining ninety-five per cent. Christians. What a farce! What a hypocritical deception! The fact is that probably less than one per cent. of all these millions would make any claim to be followers of Christ or of seeking to cultivate the Spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love. The great majority manifest the reverse spirit of anger, malice, hatred, envy, strife—works of the flesh and of the Devil.—Col. 3:8; Gal. 5:19-23; 1 John 3:8.

How few anywhere profess to be disciples or followers of Jesus and His teachings! Christian standards have been so lowered that to-day a Christian is not one who has surrendered his whole being to God and His service, and who has devoted himself to following the Master's example, but merely one who refrains from profanity and such gross sins as murder and immorality. This change has come about as a result of the thought that everybody except a mere handful of saints is on route to eternal torture. Kind-hearted people could not think of their friends and relatives as suffering thus. They had the thought of eternal torture firmly fixed and let it remain, but moved down low the standard of worthiness for everlasting life.

Lucifer, the cherub, through ambition became Satan, God's opponent. He deceived our first parents into sin by his gross and subtle lies. "I shall not surely die." (Genesis 3:4.) Since then he has supported that lie personally and through his demon hosts of fallen angels. These are not far off seeking to eternal torture. Kind-hearted people could not think of their friends and relatives as suffering thus. They had the thought of eternal torture firmly fixed and let it remain, but moved down low the standard of worthiness for everlasting life.

Have we not driven away from God and from the promises of the Bible. He tells them that the dead are alive everywhere, and that at death the good and the bad immediately enter their rewards and punishments without resurrection. The errors are so skillfully framed as to teach that Heaven can be entered only through a number of passage ways; such as baptism in infancy, confirmation, holy water, holy candles and holy burial, prayers, Eucharist and masses. Satan enlists on his side all who are interested in these various Heavenward helps. These have been revered; money has been paid to them freely; they have made the masses already suggested, and claim four hundred million Christians. But how few of these really know the true God or really love Him!

In the Bible, however, God sets forth the True Church of the Firstborns, whose names are written in Heaven. Jesus is the Head over these; and they all are brethren, and have made the masses already suggested, and claim four hundred million Christians. But how few of these really know the true God or really love Him!

In the Bible, however, God sets forth the True Church of the Firstborns, whose names are written in Heaven. Jesus is the Head over these; and they all are brethren, and have made the masses already suggested, and claim four hundred million Christians. But how few of these really know the true God or really love Him!

Then a New Epoch will open; and under the Headship of Jesus these jewels will constitute the Messianic Kingdom. Then the blessing of the world will begin. The first step in this blessing will be the binding of Satan, that he may deceive the people no more. Next will come the sweeping away of the ignorance and superstition which have been the web of enchanting humanity. Thus all the blinded eyes will be opened, and all the deaf ears unstopped—all will see; all will hear; all will know of the Love of God, which passes all human understanding. (Isaiah 35:5-6; Romans 8:33.) Then the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the earth; and as a result every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God.—Isaiah 11:3; Hab. 2:14; Rev. 19:1-6.

The outcome will be that all will sinners will be destroyed in the Second Death, while all others will be ushered into the perfection of life in a world-wide Eden. Then there will be no more dying, no more crying, no more dying; for all the former things shall have passed away. "And He that sat upon the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new."—Revelation 21:4, 5.

It is a sad thing that we have loved the monstrous falsehoods taught us by these doctrines of demons—that the dead are more alive than ever; that nearly all of them are in Hell; that the majority while the remaining small remnant look over the battlements of Heaven and rejoice in the misery of the unfortunate; that assuredly no human being ever met with a Satan in theory! We challenge the ability of any man to sit down and deliberately concoct anything worse than has been described to us as the Plan of the great Heavenly Creator, the Father of merciful humanity. Thus down every good and every perfect gift, and whose very name is Love. We have never found man or woman so fenshish as our God has been described to us.

Some would never teach about eternal torment; for it would be contrary to his interests and would keep them in disrepute with the world. He deny Him."—Titus 1:16.

Some may be disposed to say, Satan would never teach about eternal torment; for it would be contrary to his interests and would keep them in disrepute with the world. He deny Him."—Titus 1:16.

A Christian lady who has become a Bible student, and who now dearly loves God and the Bible, told me her experience thus: "I was a Presbyter in my youth, but in 1870 I was elected, and felt serene, but not without sympathy for the non-elect, who were to be tortured eternally. Then came the thought, Are you sure that you are one of the Elect, in substance he said, 'You are all right; you are one of the Elect. Do not bother your head about such questions.'"

But still I was troubled. Finally I feared that I would land in an insane asylum; for I could not lift my thoughts from my danger of eternal torture. To escape insanity I plunged into society, gave and attended social functions, and made my life one busy whirl, in which I had no time to think of God or Satan or the Bible. Oh, how changed everything is now, Pastor Russell! My heart always yearned for God, and now I know His Book, and see its great Divine Plan of the Ages, showing a gracious blessing for the Elect on the Heavenly plane and a grand Restitution for the non-elect to perfection on the earthly plane. I ever thank God for the 'Studies in the Scriptures.'"

What does that young man think of his past life?—a liar, a hypocrite, a blasphemer of God—all to hold his place in the religious firmament—justifying himself by saying, Let us do evil that good may come; let us blaspheme God's name, that we may lead the people, and drive them away from God and the Bible! We know of no worse crime than that of blasphemy committed than that of blasphemy God's holy name. In the Bible, however, God sets forth the True Church of the Firstborns, whose names are written in Heaven. Jesus is the Head over these; and they all are brethren, and have made the masses already suggested, and claim four hundred million Christians. But how few of these really know the true God or really love Him!

Then He Finds Out. We are never too old to learn. A man never realizes how little he knows till his small son gets big enough to ask question.

Artificial Eyes. Artificial eyes were invented by a Paris surgeon in the 16th century.

of God, until the beginning of the 19th century, and since then it has been a battle for the Bible to get into the hands of the people and for the letter to realize their privilege of Bible study. Protestant bishops, in front of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, met the example of burning the New Testament, because those who would study it would thereby be ignoring these false apostles, who styled themselves Apostolic Bishops, and of whom Jesus said, "They are not Apostles, but liars."—Revelation 2:2.

Finally the people, feeling after the True God and His true Message, and wondering why the bishops kept from them, made such a stir about the matter that both Protestant and Catholic bishops gave them the Bible in English, but with dire threats that if in reading they got anything different from the creeds, that the bishops had made, they would roast to all eternity. Ever since, the Bible has been obliged to fight for every inch of ground it has gained—fighting against bishops and clergy who, if it could not keep it from the people, did their best to make it support the doctrines of demons—the clergy themselves being deceived away, and verily thinking that they were doing God service.

During the last fifty years general education has come. Satan realized that he must adopt a new course. As St. Paul foretold, he affected to be an angel of light, a leader into new light. (2 Corinthians 11:13-15.) He got hold of the colleges and seminaries, and now sees to it that practically everybody of college education has his religious faith entirely destroyed, so far as a Divine Revelation is concerned. Surely not fifty out of every hundred ministers and others graduated make any pretense of believing in the inspiration of the Bible, when they are speaking privately and confidentially! They are too intelligent to believe in eternal torture, and experience a revulsion of feeling against the Bible, which the doctrines of demons have led them to believe teaches these Satanic delusions.

As a result, we have thousands of ministers drawing salaries totalling millions of dollars annually, who outwardly pose as God's servants, ministers of his religion revealed in the Bible, but who in reality are hypocrites. Privately they will confess that they do not believe that man was created in God's image and fell from it. Neither do they believe that Jesus redeemed man from the fall; for they say, "There was no fall. Never did I believe in a coming Time of Restitution, which the Bible declares is the great hope for the world. (Acts 3:19-23.) They are hypocrites pure and simple. As the Apostle Peter declares, they 'speak lies in hypocrisy, having their consciences seared with a hot iron.'—1 Timothy 4:1, 2.

There are exceptions to this general rule. They are found amongst the less educated ministers, whom their education has not given them "most backs." There are others whose consciences are not entirely seared, who are in great distress, wishing to be honest, but fearing the cost. They say little about their future, occasionally work in a little truth, and are generally very unhappy. I have hope for many of these yet, that they will get right with God and take their stand for truth and righteousness, casting aside their cares and fears upon the Lord—fears respecting their living and provision for their families, respecting their good names, which will be cast out as well, as mine has been, if they will firmly stand the time of decision is here. Whoever is not for God and for the Truth is against the same.

The great leaders of Ecclesiasticism seem to have no conscience. If approached by their confiding flock, they dodge the questions with deceptive phrases, fearing not God, neither regarding man, but merely looking for gain, each from his own quarter—his denomination.—Isaiah 56:11.

It is the duty of all who see the Truth clearly to act positively. (2 Corinthians 6:17, 18.) Whoever lends financial aid or moral support to the great systems which are opposing the true teachings of God's Word, and assisting in the perpetuation of Satan's lie, is a partaker of the evil deeds and will share in the woes soon to come.

Recently a young business man told me of his experience. He inquired of his pastor, "Is there a Hell of eternal torture for all except the saints?" The cheerful answer was, "Yes, certainly." The young man had been reading and thinking, and told the pastor his conclusions. As he left the study, the pastor put his hand on the young man's shoulder, saying, "George, I do not believe in eternal torture either. But, you know, we must preach it; otherwise, what would become of the world? They would go from bad to worse."

Then He Finds Out. We are never too old to learn. A man never realizes how little he knows till his small son gets big enough to ask question.

DETENTION LED TO SUICIDE

Toronto, Jun 24.—Melancholy, which seized her during an eight weeks' detention in Germany after the war broke out, caused Miss Tuer, whose relatives reside in Port Hope, to commit suicide in Toronto yesterday afternoon. About 1.30 p.m. yesterday deceased left a private hospital in the west end where she has been undergoing treatment, and purchased some carbolic acid in a down-town store. Then she went to a lavatory in the store of the Robert Simpson Co., where the poison was swallowed. The police ambulance hurried her to St. Michael's Hospital, where she died within a few minutes after admittance. The bottle was found beside her.

Miss Tuer, who was about 40 years of age, had been travelling in Germany, and was detained by the authorities for eight weeks. Miss Tuer made her way to Port Hope but the detention caused a nervous breakdown.

R. B. Chadwick Died in the West

From Saturday's Daily. Robert B. Chadwick died last night in the hospital at Edmonton, so read a telegram received by Mr. W. S. Cook, his father-in-law this morning.

The message caused expressions of regret on all sides, as Mr. Chadwick was well known in Belleville. He was for five years secretary of the Y.M.C.A. here when the Association occupied the building on Front street. Some days ago Mr. Chadwick underwent an operation for appendicitis and according to letters received it was expected that he would soon be able to leave the hospital as it was deemed a success by the physicians. This morning's telegram came in consequence as a great shock to relatives and friends.

The late Mr. Chadwick was born in Hamilton about 37 years ago. He early in life became associated in Y.M.C.A. work and about 1902 came to Belleville as secretary. His efficiency was so marked that he was not left here long for in 1906 he was appointed to go to Edmonton. There he built a large Y.M.C.A. building and his interest in the work of child welfare was so pronounced that he was made superintendent of neglected and dependent children for the Province of Alberta. Eight years ago he was married in this city to Miss E. E. Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Cook.

In addition to his duties as superintendent of children, Mr. Chadwick was chief censor of motion picture for Alberta. In this capacity he visited Ottawa last year in order to get a measure passed making the censorship localized.

In religion he was a Presbyterian. He leaves besides his wife two children, both boys, aged six and four. Two brothers operate the "Hamilton Brass Works", an industry founded by their father. Whether the remains will be brought east is not known yet, but a message conveying information as to burial is expected today. His death removes from public activity one of the most brilliant young men in the west. He will be missed and deeply mourned. The heartfelt sympathy of all will go out to the bereaved widow and children.

Guard Baby's Health in Summer Time

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea, and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brookville, Ont.

Agent Was Fined $300

Roy Gaithewood, a news agent on the G.T.R. was fined $300 this morning in Belleville police court on a charge of selling liquor without a license.

Two detectives named Hinch and Puzant gave evidence. Hinch testified that he had got on a train at Prescott about ten p.m. on May 29th and when about 5 minutes out from Belleville he was supplied with whiskey by Gaithewood, whom he paid at 2.05 a.m. on May 30th. Hinch an officer in the service of the Liquor Department said he had solicited Gaithewood for a drink and some time after he and Puzant were furnished with whiskey from a quart bottle which Gaithewood had had in his hip pocket. Each man paid 25c for his own drink. The liquor was in one of Seagram's bottles.

Puzant told a similar story. Gaithewood was convicted and costs defrayed by Mr. W. Carnew and Mr. P. J. M. Anderson prosecuted. Mr. R. C. Arnott was prosecutor. Officer Searies attended the session of the court.

SYNOPSIS.
In her apartment at the Leland Villa, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnosis and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer, Macdougall, Lenora's husband, though nearly trepanned to his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

"THE HIDDEN HANDS."

CHAPTER VI.

Sanford Quest and Lenora stood side by side upon the steps of the courthouse, waiting for the automobile, which had become momentarily entangled in a string of vehicles. A little crowd of people were elbowing their way out on to the sidewalk. The faces of most of them were still shadowed by the three hours of tense drama from which they had just emerged. Quest, who had lit a cigar, watched them curiously.

"No need to go into court," he remarked. "I could have told you, from the look of these people, that Macdougall had escaped the death sentence. They have paid their money—or rather their time, and they have been cheated of the one supreme thrill."

"Imprisonment for life seems terrible enough," Lenora whispered, shuddering.

"Can't see the sense of keeping such a man alive myself," Quest declared, with purposeful brutality. "It was a cruel murder, fiendishly committed."

They were on the point of crossing the pavement toward the automobile when Quest felt a touch upon his shoulder. He turned and found Lord Ashleigh standing by his side. Quest glanced towards Lenora.

"Run and get in the car," he whispered. "I will be there in a moment."

"I would not have stopped you just now, Mr. Quest," said Lord Ashleigh, "but my brother is very anxious to renew his acquaintance with you. I think you met years ago."

Sanford Quest held out his hand to the man who had been standing a little in the background. Lord Ashleigh turned towards him.

"This is Mr. Quest, Edgar. You may remember my brother—Professor Ashleigh—as a man of science, Quest? He has just returned from South America."

The two shook hands, curiously diverse in type, in expression, in all the appurtenances of manhood.

"I am very proud to make your acquaintance again, professor," Quest said. "Glad to know, too, that you hadn't forgotten me."

"My dear sir," the professor declared, as he released the other's hand with seeming reluctance, "I have thought about you many times. Your doings have always been of interest to me."

"I am sorry," Quest remarked, "that our first meeting here should be under such distressing circumstances!"

The professor nodded gravely.

"If you'll excuse me, professor," said Quest, "I think I must be getting along. We shall meet again, I trust."

"One moment," the professor begged, eagerly. "Tell me, Mr. Quest—I want your honest opinion. What do you think of my ape?"

"Of your what?" Quest inquired dubiously.

"Of my anthropoid ape which I have just sent to the museum. You know my claim? But perhaps you would prefer to postpone your final decision until after you have examined the skeleton itself."

A light broke in upon the criminologist.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "For the moment, professor, I couldn't follow you. You are talking about the skeleton of the ape which you brought home from South America, and which you have presented to the museum here?"

"Naturally," the professor assented, with mild surprise. "To what else? I am stating my case, Mr. Quest, in the North American Review next month; I may tell you, however, as a fellow scientist, the great and absolute truth. My claim is incontestable. My skeleton will prove to the world, without a doubt, the absolute truth of Darwin's great theory."

"That so?"

"You must go and see it," the professor insisted. "You shall be permitted a special examination."

"Very kind of you," Quest murmured.

"We shall meet again soon, I hope," the professor concluded cordially. "Good-morning, Mr. Quest."

The two men shook hands and Quest took his seat by Lenora's side in the note," the curator pronounced, "away. I gave orders that your case should be placed here that I myself should enjoy the distinction of opening it. An hour ago I commenced the task. That is what I found."

The professor gazed blankly at the empty box.

"Nothing left except the smell," a voice from the open doorway remarked.

They glanced around. Quest was standing there, and behind him Lenora. The professor welcomed them eagerly.

"This is Mr. Quest, the great criminologist," he explained to the curator.

Quest strolled thoughtfully around the room, glancing out of each of the windows in turn. He kept close to the wall, and when he had finished he drew out a magnifying glass from his pocket and made a brief examination of the box. Then he asked a few questions of the curator, pointed out one of the windows to Lenora and whispered a few directions to her.

She at once produced what seemed to be a foot rule from the bag which she was carrying, and hurried into the garden.

"A little invention of my own for measuring footprints," Quest explained. "Not much use here, I am afraid."

Quest stood over the box for a moment or two and looked once more out of the window. Presently Lenora returned. She carried in her hand a small object, which she brought silently to Quest. He glanced at it in perplexity. The professor peered over his shoulder.

"It is the little finger!" he cried—"the little finger of my ape!"

Quest held it away from him critically.

"From which hand?" he asked.

"The right hand."

Quest examined the fastenings of the window before which he paused during his previous examination. He turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"See you later, Mr. Ashleigh," he concluded laconically.

A newsboy thrust a paper at them. Quest glanced at the headlines. Lenora clutched at his arm. Together they read it in great black type:

ESCAPE OF CONVICTED PRISONER!

Macdougall, on His Way to Prison, Grapples With Sheriff and Jumps From Train! Still at Large, Though Searched For by Posse of Police.

CHAPTER VII.

The windows of Mrs. Rheinholdt's town house were ablaze with light. A crimson druzet stretched down the steps to the curbstone. A long row of automobiles stood waiting. Through the wide-fung door was visible a pleasant impression of flowers and light and luxury. In the nearer of the two large reception rooms Mrs. Rheinholdt herself, a woman dark, handsome and in the prime of life, was standing to receive her guests.

By her side was her son, whose twenty-first birthday was being celebrated.

"I wonder whether that professor of yours will come?" she remarked, as the stream of incoming guests slackened for a moment.

"He hates receptions," the boy replied, "but he promised he'd come. I never thought, when he used to drill science into us at the lectures, that he was going to be a tremendous big shot."

Mrs. Rheinholdt's plump finger toyed for a moment complacently with the diamonds which hung from her neck.

"You can never tell in a world like this," she murmured.

"Here he is, mother!" the young man exclaimed suddenly. "Good old boy! I thought he'd keep his word."

Mrs. Rheinholdt assumed her most encouraging and condescending smile as she held out both hands to the professor.

"It is perfectly sweet of you, professor," Mrs. Rheinholdt declared.

Mrs. Rheinholdt breathed a sigh of relief as she greeted her new arrival.

The professor made himself universally agreeable in a mild way, and his presence created even more than the sensation which Mrs. Rheinholdt had hoped for. In her desire to show him ample honor she seldom left his side.

"I am going to take you into my husband's study," she suggested, later on in the evening. "He has some specimens of beetles—"

"Beetles," the professor declared, with some excitement, "occupied precisely two months of my time while abroad. By all means, Mrs. Rheinholdt!"

"We shall have to go quite to the back of the house," she explained, as she led him along the darkened passages.

The professor smiled acquiescently. His eyes rested for a moment upon her necklace.

"You must really permit me, Mrs. Rheinholdt," he exclaimed, "to admire your wonderful stones. I am a judge of diamonds, and those three or four in the center are, I should judge, unique."

She held them out to him. The professor laid the end of the necklace gently in the palm of his hand and examined them through a horn-rimmed eyeglass.

"They are wonderful," he murmured, "wonderful! Why—"

He turned away a little abruptly. They had reached the back of the house and a door from outside had just been opened. A man had crossed the threshold with a coat over his arm and was standing now looking at them.

"How extraordinary!" the professor

"Stolen!" Mrs. Rheinholdt shrieked, "that you, Craig!"

"Yes, sir," he replied. "There is a fatalism, so I ventured to bring your mackintosh."

"Very thoughtful," the professor murmured approvingly. "I have a weakness," he went on, turning to his hostess, "for always walking home after an evening like this. In the daytime I am content to ride. At night I love the fancy-ways to walk."

"We don't walk half enough," Mrs. Rheinholdt sighed, glancing down at her somewhat portly figure. "Dixon," she added, turning to the footman who had admitted Craig, "take Professor Ashleigh's servant into the kitchen and see that he has something before he leaves for home. Now, professor, if you will come this way."

They reached a little room in the far corner of the house. Mrs. Rheinholdt apologized as she switched on the electric lights.

"It is a queer little place to bring you to," she said, "but my husband used to spend many hours here, and he would never allow anything to be moved. You see, the specimens are in these cases."

The professor nodded. His general attitude toward the forthcoming exhibition was merely one of politeness.

As the first case opened, however, his manner completely changed. Without taking the slightest further notice of his hostess, he adjusted a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles and commenced to mumble eagerly to himself. Mrs. Rheinholdt, who did not understand a word, strolled around the apartment, yawning and finally interrupted a little stream of eulogies, not a word of which she understood, concerning a green beetle with yellow spots.

"I am so glad you are interested, professor," she said, "if you don't mind, I will retain my guests. You will find a shorter way back if you keep along the passage straight ahead and come through the conservatory."

"Certainly! With pleasure!" the professor agreed, without glancing up. Mrs. Rheinholdt's reception, notwithstanding the temporary absence of its presiding spirit, was without doubt an unqualified success. In one of the distant rooms the younger people were dancing. Philip Rheinholdt, with a pretty young debutante upon his arm, came out from the dancing room and looked around amongst the little knots of people.

"I wonder where mother is?" he remarked. "She told me—"

The young man broke off in the middle of his sentence. He, too, like many others in the room, felt a sudden thrill almost of horror at the sound which rang without warning upon their ears—a woman's cry, a cry of fear and horror.

Mrs. Rheinholdt, her hands clasping her neck, her splendid composure a thing of the past, a panic-stricken, terrified woman, stumbled into the room. She seemed on the point of collapse. Somehow or other, they got her into an easy chair.

"My jewels!" she cried. "My diamonds!"

"What do you mean, mother?" Philip Rheinholdt asked quickly. "Have you lost them?"

"Stolen!" Mrs. Rheinholdt shrieked. "Stolen there in the conservatory!"

She gazed at her open-mouthed, incredulous. Then a still, quiet voice from the outside of the little circle intervened.

"Instruct your servants, Mr. Rheinholdt, to lock and bar all the doors of the house," the professor suggested.

"No one must leave it until we have heard your mother's story."

"I had just taken the professor into the little room my husband used to call the museum," Mrs. Rheinholdt explained, her voice still shaking with agitation. "I left him there to examine some specimens of beetles. I thought that I would come back through the conservatory, which is the quickest way. I was about half way across it when suddenly I heard the switch go behind me and all the electric lights were turned out. I couldn't imagine what had happened. While I hesitated I saw—"

She broke down again. There was no doubt about the genuineness of her terror.

"I saw a pair of hands—just hands—no arms—nothing but hands—come out of the darkness! They gripped me by the throat. I suppose it was just for a second. I think—I lost consciousness for a moment, although I

"Stolen There in the Conservatory!" was still standing up. The next instant a seat and smoked calmly, with his eyes fixed upon the roof. Lenora went back to her examination of the overturned plants, the mold and the whole ground within the immediate environs of the assault. She abandoned the search at last, however, and came back to Quest's side. He threw away his cigar and rose.

"Nothing there?" he asked laconically.

"Not a thing," Lenora admitted.

Quest led the way toward the door.

"Lenora," he decided, "we've a nut against something big. There's a nut hand at work somewhere."

"No theories yet, Mr. Quest?" she asked, smiling.

"Not the ghost of one," he admitted, gloomily.

Along the rain-swept causeway of Mayton avenue, keeping close to the shelter of the house, his mackintosh turned up to his ears, his hands buried in his pockets, a man walked swiftly along. At every block he hesitated and looked around him. His manner was cautious, almost furtive. Once the glare of an electric light fell upon his face, a face pallid with fear, almost hopeless with despair. He walked quickly, yet he seemed to have no idea as to direction. Suddenly he paused. He was passing a great building, brilliantly lit. For a moment he thought that it was some place of entertainment. The thought of entering seemed to occur to him. Then he felt a firm touch upon his arm, a man in uniform spoke to him.

"Step inside, brother," he invited earnestly, almost eagerly, notwithstanding his monotonous nasal twang. "Step inside and find peace. Step inside and the Lord will help you. Throw your burden away on the threshold."

The man's first impulse at being addressed had seemed to be one of terror. Then he recognized the uniform and hesitated. The man took him by the arm and led him in. There were the best part of a hundred people taking their places after the singing of the hymn. A girl was standing up before them on a platform. She was commencing to speak, but suddenly broke off. She held out her arms to where the professor's confidential servant stood hesitating.

"Come and tell us your sins," she called out. "Come and have them forgiven. Come and start a new life in a new world. There is no one here who thinks of the past. Come and seek forgiveness."

For a moment the wail from the rain-swept world hesitated. The light

"It seems to me," he remarked, "that from the back part of the house the quickest way to reach Mayton avenue would be through this conservatory and out of that door. This is a path leading from just outside straight to a gate in the wall. Does anyone that you know of use this means of exit?"

Mrs. Rheinholdt shook her head.

"The servants might occasionally," she remarked doubtfully, "but not on nights when I am receiving."

The butler stepped forward. He was looking a little grave.

"I ought, perhaps, to inform you, madam, and Mr. Quest," he said, "that I did, only a short time ago, suggest to the professor's servant—the man who brought your mackintosh, sir," he added, turning to the professor—"that he could, if he chose, make use of this means of leaving the house. Mr. Craig is a personal friend of mine, and a member of a very select little club we have for social purposes."

"Did he follow your suggestion?" Sanford Quest asked.

"Of that I am not aware, sir," the butler replied. "I left Mr. Craig with some refreshment, expecting that he would remain until my return, but a few minutes later I discovered that he had left. I will inquire in the kitchen, if anything is known as to his movements."

He hurried off. Quest turned to the professor.

"Has he been with you long, this man Craig, professor?" he asked.

The professor's smile was illuminating, his manner simple but convincing.

"Craig," he asserted, "is the best servant, the most honest mortal who ever breathed. He would go any distance out of his way to avoid harming a fly. I cannot even trust him to procure for me the simplest specimens of insect life. Apart from this, he is a man of some property, which he has no idea what to do with. He is, I think I may say, too devoted to me to dream of ever leaving my service. "You think it would be out of the question, then," Quest asked, "to associate him with the crime?"

The professor's confidence was sublime.

"I could more readily associate you, myself, or young Mr. Rheinholdt here with the affair," he declared.

His words carried weight. The little breath of suspicion against the professor's servant faded away. In a moment or two the butler returned.

"It appears, madam," he announced, "that Mr. Craig left when there was only one person in the kitchen. He said good-night and closed the door behind him. It is impossible to say, therefore, by which exit he left the house, but personally I am convinced that, knowing of the receipt here to-night, he would not think of using the conservatory."

"Most unlikely, I should say," the professor murmured. "Craig is a very shy man. He is at all times at my disposal. Mr. Quest, if you should desire to question him."

Quest nodded assent.

"My assistant and I," he announced, "would be glad to make a further examination of the conservatory, if you will kindly leave us alone."

They obeyed without demur. Quest took a seat and smoked calmly, with his eyes fixed upon the roof. Lenora went back to her examination of the overturned plants, the mold and the whole ground within the immediate environs of the assault. She abandoned the search at last, however, and came back to Quest's side. He threw away his cigar and rose.

"Nothing there?" he asked laconically.

"Not a thing," Lenora admitted.

Quest led the way toward the door.

"Lenora," he decided, "we've a nut against something big. There's a nut hand at work somewhere."

"No theories yet, Mr. Quest?" she asked, smiling.

"Not the ghost of one," he admitted, gloomily.

Along the rain-swept causeway of Mayton avenue, keeping close to the shelter of the house, his mackintosh turned up to his ears, his hands buried in his pockets, a man walked swiftly along. At every block he hesitated and looked around him. His manner was cautious, almost furtive. Once the glare of an electric light fell upon his face, a face pallid with fear, almost hopeless with despair. He walked quickly, yet he seemed to have no idea as to direction. Suddenly he paused. He was passing a great building, brilliantly lit. For a moment he thought that it was some place of entertainment. The thought of entering seemed to occur to him. Then he felt a firm touch upon his arm, a man in uniform spoke to him.

"Step inside, brother," he invited earnestly, almost eagerly, notwithstanding his monotonous nasal twang. "Step inside and find peace. Step inside and the Lord will help you. Throw your burden away on the threshold."

The man's first impulse at being addressed had seemed to be one of terror. Then he recognized the uniform and hesitated. The man took him by the arm and led him in. There were the best part of a hundred people taking their places after the singing of the hymn. A girl was standing up before them on a platform. She was commencing to speak, but suddenly broke off. She held out her arms to where the professor's confidential servant stood hesitating.

"Come and tell us your sins," she called out. "Come and have them forgiven. Come and start a new life in a new world. There is no one here who thinks of the past. Come and seek forgiveness."

For a moment the wail from the rain-swept world hesitated. The light

"It seems to me," he remarked, "that from the back part of the house the quickest way to reach Mayton avenue would be through this conservatory and out of that door. This is a path leading from just outside straight to a gate in the wall. Does anyone that you know of use this means of exit?"

Mrs. Rheinholdt shook her head.

"The servants might occasionally," she remarked doubtfully, "but not on nights when I am receiving."

The butler stepped forward. He was looking a little grave.

"I ought, perhaps, to inform you, madam, and Mr. Quest," he said, "that I did, only a short time ago, suggest to the professor's servant—the man who brought your mackintosh, sir," he added, turning to the professor—"that he could, if he chose, make use of this means of leaving the house. Mr. Craig is a personal friend of mine, and a member of a very select little club we have for social purposes."

"Did he follow your suggestion?" Sanford Quest asked.

"Of that I am not aware, sir," the butler replied. "I left Mr. Craig with some refreshment, expecting that he would remain until my return, but a few minutes later I discovered that he had left. I will inquire in the kitchen, if anything is known as to his movements."

He hurried off. Quest turned to the professor.

"Has he been with you long, this man Craig, professor?" he asked.

The professor's smile was illuminating, his manner simple but convincing.

"Craig," he asserted, "is the best servant, the most honest mortal who ever breathed. He would go any distance out of his way to avoid harming a fly. I cannot even trust him to proof an infinite desire flashed in his eyes. Then he dropped his head. These things might be for others. For him there was no hope. He shook his head to the girl, but sank into the nearest seat and on to his knees.

"He repeats!" the girl called out. "Some day he will come! Brothers and sisters, we will pray for him."

The rain dashed against the windows. The only other sound from within side was the clanging of the street cars. The girl's voice, frenzied, exhorting, almost hysterical, pealed out to the roof. At every pause the little gathering of men and women groined in sympathy. The man's frame was shaken with sobs.

"Confess Your Sins."

Interesting Public School Examination

An interesting public examination was held at S. S. No. 7, Thurlow school on 17th inst. In addition to the regular work of the school which appeared to be satisfactory there were two features that were new in this part, 1st, the presence of two teachers from adjoining sections, each with a number of their pupils, who participated in the class-work, and 2nd the evident interest and progress that was shown in the school garden work. The flowers and plants and plots being in fine condition. Mr. Scott for the Department and Mr. Martin for the School Fair movement, were present and expressed themselves well pleased with what had been done. Other speakers also spoke favorably of the work being done in the school both inside and out. Mr. Howard, the teacher, was much complimented by all the speakers.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to thank the ladies and friends of S. S. No. 7, Thurlow, for their presence and kind appreciation of the work of the school at the Public Examination on the 17th. Also to Miss Fargy and Miss Ross the visiting teachers who attended, and a number of their pupils thus adding to the interest for all parties.

My only regrets are, that many of the gentlemen were too busy to attend and that the time was too short to take up more of the school work.

Respectfully, E. B. Howard.

Pretty June Wedding

BOWIE — MALLOCH

A quite but pretty wedding took place at high noon Tuesday at 11 Earl street, when Miss Lillian E. Malloch was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas G. Bowie. The young couple were attended, and the Rev. A. S. Kerr, M.A., of St. Andrews, performed the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives. After the ceremony, a dainty luncheon was served and the bridal couple left on the afternoon train for a honeymoon to be spent in western cities. The gifts received were very numerous and pretty in design.
