DECEMBER MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

Was Short and Uneventful—Licenses Discussed and Accounts Paid

The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council last evening was a rather short one and uneventful in character. All the councillors were present, Mayor Chambers, who is still confined to his home by illness, being the only absentee. The Streets, Water, Sewer, Police and License, and Poor Committees, through their respective chairmen, reported on the expenditures made by the various departments during the month.

Coun. DeWolfe presented the financial statement for November, showing receipts of $2878.56 and expenditures of $5130.25. On November 30th the bank overdraft amounted to $6034.23.

A letter from the representative of an Ontario furnace concern, who was charged a license fee for carrying on business here some time ago, brought up the whole matter of licensing transient peddlars who are not ratepayers of the town. In one case it was pointed out that a person who is so liable had declined to pay the fee because others in the same and different lines were getting off free. It was held that this was not a sufficient excuse and ordered that in this case and others as well the provisions passed by the Council at a former meeting be enforced. This is a matter which has never been very well handled in Wolfville and the Council will have the support of citizens in making an honest attempt to defend local dealers.

An application was received from the Fire Company for half the amount received from Mr. Justin Gates, of Port Williams, for the use of the engine when his garage was burned some months ago. This was discussed at some length and the clerk was instructed to pay to the treasurer of the company the amount asked for, $50.00.

The following accounts were presented by the Finance Committee and ordered paid by the Council:

ACADIA RECEIVES HANDSOME DONATION

From the New England Alumni Association—Annual Meeting of Association was Great Success

Encouraging reports have been received in Wolfville from the meeting of the New England Acadia Alumni Association held at the New Westminster Hotel Copley Square, Boston, last week. Dr. Patterson, president of the University, was in attendance and received a cheque for $1,500 on behalf of the Association from the chairman of the meeting, Dr. E. H. Cohoon. This makes a total of $5,000 received to date towards the Acadia fund from New England Alumni. The speakers of the evening included W. N. Donovan, of the Newton Theological Institute, James H. Morson, of the Canadian Club, Boston; Payson Smith, Dr. A. T. Kempton, Cambridge; and Dr. F. W. Patterson. Over 125 were present.

The officers elected were: President—Rev. W. S. Jacobs, Portland; Vice-President—Rev. Clyde W. Robbins; Secretary—Rev. E. G. Dakin, Chelsea; Treasurer—Austin H. Chute, Allston.

During the evening, Miss Evelyn Duncanson sang and Miss Rosalie H. Wheelock accompanied. Rev. Thos. Roy, of Brockton, led in the singing of Acadia songs.

The success of the meeting was due in a great measure to the energetic work of Dr. A. T. Kempton, chairman of the drive, and Rev. Clyde Robbins, retiring secretary of the Alumni.

ENGLISH CLASS AT ACADIA SEMINARY JOINS THE DICKENS FELLOWSHIP, LONDON

During 1924, the First Year Class in English at Acadia Seminary under the instruction of Miss Rosamond Archibald read the complete works of Charles Dickens. Each pupil selected her favorite scene from her favorite story and illustrated it on the class room blackboard. Mr. Edson Graham made a splendid photograph of this series.

At an evening performance with these same stories originally synopsisized and memorized as to particular scenes a contribution was made by the class toward joining the Dickens Fellowship of London. This Society has reinstated 48 Doughty Street, where the well loved author wrote "Pickwick," "Nicholas Nickleby" and "Oliver Twist," as a Dickens Memorial, and have asked for world wide contributions toward this fund.

This week, Miss Archibald is in receipt of a gracious acknowledgment from A. W. Edwards, Esq., Hon. Secretary, which reads, in part:

"We are indeed pleased to find such interest evinced by friends at such a distance and I congratulate you on the spirit, engendered and given expression to in the delightful series of drawings by your students. We are very pleased to have the photograph you send to be added to our collection and shall be still further pleased to welcome you and your students, on any occasion you are visiting the Motherland."

This is the link formed in the golden chain that binds up the interests of Canada with those of the Empire.

BANQUET TENDERED TO JUDGE WEBSTER

A complimentary banquet was tendered Judge Barclay Webster at the Cornwallis Inn, Kentville, on Thursday evening last. The affair was under the management of the Kentville Board of Trade and the barristers of the county and about eighty-five gentlemen sat down with the honored guest. Mr. H. M. Chase presided and read an appropriate address and speeches were given by members of the bar, officials of the court and citizens of Kentville. Mayor Parker, of Berwick, was also one of the speakers. Judge Webster expressed his keen appreciation of the evidence of friendship and good feeling which prompted the occasion, and Mr. Webster, who was also present added her thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster are leaving in a short time for Bermuda, where they will spend the winter and will be followed by the very best wishes of a host of friends in various parts of the county, who would have been very glad to have joined in doing them honor had they the opportunity of so doing.

If you were far from home at Christmas time, would you like to get one of Graham's pictures of Nova Scotia scenery? Of course you would. Then do unto others, etc., etc.

COUNTRY WEEKLIES DISAPPEARING

THE EDITOR of a weekly newspaper in Maine recently made reference to the disappearance in many cases of the village weeklies of other days. Twenty years ago, he says, there were practically 20,000 of these village weeklies in the United States. Since then 9000 of these papers have been discontinued. Speaking of conditions near at hand he recalled the time when in Somerset county there were nine rural newspapers. Now there are but three. In Franklin county there were seven, where now there is only one surviving.

Philosophising over the changed conditions the Maine editor attributes the disappearance of the country weekly largely to the presence of the rural mail delivery which carries the city daily to the farmer's door. He recognizes, too, the part played by modern transportation agencies in scattering the city publication far and wide. So with incidental allusion to the concentration of country schools, he says: "No demand based on sentiment will ever restore the country school house. No reasoning on sentimental lines will bring back the country weekly in those regions from which it has disappeared."

It may be safely stated, however, that weekly newspapers will continue to be published, especially in shire-towns of the counties that contain no cities, but it is doubtless true that in many regions they will be few in number as compared with those of former years. This is a condition which gives rise to various reflections. It may be said, for one thing, that the passing of the country weekly means irreparable loss to thousands of dwellers in great cities. The papers from the old-home towns have followed them to city homes, where their columns are eagerly scanned for "items" from the north, east, south and west neighborhoods—from "the Corner" and the "River Road". In many cases the reading of the metropolitan daily has been postponed while the city dweller revelled in news of marriages and deaths, of church "socials" and lodge meetings, of the goings and comings of those who are still in a very real sense "the home folks". There are papers in the smaller cities which print correspondence from the villages and towns round about but this falls far short of the complete chronicle infused with the touch of intimacy and friendliness that constitutes the news of the old-time weekly. If it is to fall by the wayside, the village weekly will be mourned in the city as well as along the countryside.

It is, however, in the small town itself, where the value of the weekly paper is most apparent and where its loss when circumstances make necessary its discontinuance is most felt. Very often the difference between a small hamlet and a bustling town is due wholly to the presence of a live local paper. The community owes much to the home paper, and in far too many instances the obligation remains unprovided for. The columns of your home paper reflect the business and social conditions of the town as well as the character and enterprise of its citizens. What is it that it reveals about you?

ANOTHER UNNECESSARY EXPENSE

IT IS NOT necessary to seek far in order to discover instances of the wasteful expenditure of public money going on in this country at a time when the wisest economy is necessary in order that at the very earliest possible date the exhausting effects of the great war may be overcome and normal conditions attained. Business as usual, a slogan introduced at the beginning of the war, is a good one still to follow. Money for the carrying on of the various services of our national life and the development and upbuilding of Canada must of necessity be provided, but its expenditure must be justified by the results obtained. In our governmental institutions and in far too many of the avenues through which the federal and provincial revenues flow, expenses are duplicated with no corresponding returns to compensate for the outlay of public funds.

A case in point is the recent appointment made to the bench of the County Court for this district. Judge Webster, who since 1917 has performed the duties of that position with credit to himself and to the general satisfaction of all concerned, was a few months ago retired to private life on a very generous annuity. This, we understand, was in accord with the law governing such cases, for which we make no complaint. It is the right of certain officials who serve the public in responsible positions for a required period to receive during their remaining years after retirement an allowance from the public treasury. We wish it were possible for all who give honest service to be equally fortunate. In the case under discussion, however, the competency of the incumbent of the office had become in no way impaired, and he was capable and willing to continue to render the same efficient service which has characterized his judicial duties in past years. No real man prefers to lay aside his work while yet qualified to carry it on.

That the change should have been made is only to be accounted for on the assumption that the position was desired by somebody else, and this desire, while a perfectly natural one, imposes a charge on the finances of the country of the salary of two men in place of one. Such doings, we presume, are not limited to any political party. It is no doubt a custom which has prevailed during the entire history of the Dominion, and will continue to exist so long as the people permit. We submit it for consideration not in the heat of a political contest, but at a time when our readers may consider calmly and leisurely a condition which, we make no apology for saying, furnishes food for reflection on the part of the thoughtful citizens of this country.

A WORTHY OBJECT

THE suggestion to raise a hundred dollars in Wolfville by means of dollar subscriptions ought not to be a difficult proposition when the objective is to assist such a worthy institution as the Children's Aid Society. No one will grudge the gift, especially if they realize the splendid work which the society is doing for the neglected and helpless young life of the county. "Charity begins at home", and certainly there are conditions in Kings county which ought to appeal to the generosity of kind-hearted people.

THE NUMBER of automobile accidents occurring almost daily is appalling, and it is only natural that an investigation as to their cause should be demanded by the public. While making no claim as to expert knowledge this journal ventures the opinion that for a very large percentage of these accidents the responsibility must be placed upon the nut which controls the steering wheel.

WHY RATEPAYERS SHOULD VOTE

(From The Financial Post.)
There is a great opportunity for boards of trade and similar public organizations throughout the country to perform a valuable community service in directing the attention of the municipal ratepayers to the importance of exercising their votes. The resolution passed by the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce at the Kingston convention last week, urging the member bodies to make a determined effort, in conjunction with other local organizations, to have a larger vote polled in municipal elections, so that public interests in civic affairs may be stimulated and good men encouraged to offer themselves for election, is very much to the point. It has been estimated that more than $200,000,000 of the $600,000,000 taxes being collected annually in the various municipalities of Ontario are being expended in the field and supporting them. They should also use their influence to discourage those campaigns for local improvement which appeal to the pride of the community, but which are very often beyond its means. It is becoming trite to say that the ratepayers of a municipality are in effect the shareholders of a public service corporation, but there is no more apt way of putting the situation.

CHRISTMAS PUDDINGS

Plum Pudding—1 cup chopped suet, 2 cups bread crumbs, 1 cup citron, 1 cup raisins, 1 cup currants, 1 pint flour, 4 eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cloves and cinnamon, nutmeg, 1 cup milk.
Mix the fruit with a little flour. Put well-beaten eggs, sugar, salt, milk and spices in a bowl and when thoroughly mixed add fruit, bread crumbs and suet. Lastly, add a teaspoon of soda dissolved in warm water, and the rest of the flour. Mix thoroughly and boil four hours.
Sauce—1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup water. Cook until thick and flavor with nutmeg.
If you are of the opinion that a plum pudding is too heavy a dessert after the Christmas dinner, this pudding may suit your taste.
Princess Plum Pudding—1 cup milk, 1 cup cold water, 1 cup hot water, 2 tablespoons gelatin, 1 cup raisins, 1 oz. chocolate, 1 cup cream, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup candied citron, 1 cup nut meats.
Place the grated chocolate in a sauce pan and pour over the hot water and stir until melted. Dissolve the gelatin in cold water and stir into the hot water. Add sugar, raisins, citron and nut meats. APPLES FOR EVERYBODY

(Toronto Globe)
An early frost has cut down or withered the rosy apples which usually cling to the trees in our Canadian autumn, thus depriving us of one of the choice aromas of the season, but National Apple Week has come to remind us of the precious heritage. Not a little of the sunshine of our northern winters is surely wrapped up in the apple, said John Burroughs. "How could we winter without it! How is life sweetened by its mild acids! A cellar well filled with apples is more valuable than a chamber filled with flax and wool. So much sound, ruddy life to draw upon, to strike one's roots down into, as it were."

The apple has followed man wherever he goes, like his dog and his cow. His homestead is no sooner established than the apple is planted, even into the prairies and the valleys of the mountains where ever a hardy variety may survive the frost of winter. And when a homestead passes, and a house is removed, there is sadness for every passer-by on seeing the old apple trees that linger on the spot, yielding their fruit year by year long after the owner has moved to a more prosperous home. Many parts of Canada boast fine apples. Ontario has its McIntoshes and Spys, Quebec its Fameuse, British Columbia its gorgeous-looking Jonathans, and Nova Scotia its famous Gravensteins. The valley of Evangeline's land makes eighty miles of white blossoms in spring, and in autumn the fragrance of the apple orchards reaches far away, thus giving hint of prosperity and happiness where once were struggle and sorrow.

In order to appreciate thoroughly the toughness of dying young, all one has to do is to order Spring chicken at an ordinary restaurant.—San Francisco Bulletin.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF HANTSPORT AND VICINITY

EDITORIAL

While very little has been heard of late regarding the likelihood of Hantsport being selected as the site for the proposed paper mill, citizens will be glad to know that there is still good reason to hope that the industry will come to this place. No other of the locations looked into by the promoters is able to offer anything like the inducements which here are to be found, and apparently this fact is now better realized than it was some months ago. We learn that Mayor Wall, who has been very much interested from the first, had an enquiry some time ago for further particulars regarding the possibilities of electric energy here and that his answer has been most satisfactory to those who are behind the undertaking. We learn also that at an early date engineers are to again visit Hantsport to make further investigation, which is certainly an encouraging sign that the future has something worth while in store for us. The establishment of this industry in Hantsport would mean for the town more than we are able to imagine and such being the case the project is one that deserves the very best encouragement that our citizens are able to give.

HANTSPORT HAPPENINGS

Mrs. (Dr.) J. Ellery Pollard and daughter, Miss Dorothy Pollard, left on Tuesday for Halifax, where they will spend the remainder of the week.

Mrs. (Rev.) W. A. Outerbridge, who was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. F. B. Newcombe, Kentville, last week, was accompanied on her return home by Mrs. Newcombe.

Miss Kane, of Beddeck, C. B., was the guest of Rev. W. E. and Mrs. Outerbridge last week.

Dr. and Mrs. Annand had for their guest last week their niece, Miss Mowatt, of Montreal.

Mrs. Laura Cross, of Kentville, Vice-President of the Rebekah Assembly, paid her official visit to Helping Hand Rebekah Lodge on Friday evening. After the lodge was closed a bountiful repast was partaken of. Mrs. Cross was the guest of Mrs. L. Coldwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Havelock Edwards, of Annapolis, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asaph Newcombe last week.

Miss Osee Barker, of Washington, who has not visited her native county for over ten years, is the guest of Mrs. J. M. Hancock.

Miss Blanche Margeson, of Berwick, is spending several weeks with her friend, Miss Ida Dunlop.

Mrs. A. L. O. Phillips entertained the XII's at her home on Friday evening.

Miss Griffin, of Ellershouse, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Porter.

An enjoyable feature of the Foresters' meeting on Friday evening was a "Jiggs" supper.

The aboiteau has been undergoing quite extensive repairs of late. The high tides have been washing away the railroad bed to such an extent that it was found necessary to put in a breakwater.

Instead of the regular preaching service in the Baptist church Sunday evening, after the reading of the scripture the pastor gave the meeting over to the delegates, who attended the C. G. I. T. conference held in Windsor recently, and the Older Boys conference in Wolfville. Miss Mary Macumber and Miss Laura Newcombe gave interesting reports of the girls' conference held in Windsor, and Messrs. Howard Flemming, Fred Morris and Earl Blackburn gave exceedingly interesting reports of the three days' conference in Wolfville. Miss E. Hume, superintendent of the Sunday School, presided over the meeting.

Reference to the adv. columns of the Hantsport Acadian will show that at least one Hantsport merchant is prepared for Christmas shoppers. In the space at his disposal Mr. Hart gives some interesting facts regarding his stock of gentlemen's furnishings that is deserving of careful attention. Mr. Hart's store is a credit to Hantsport. Its proprietor has a perfect understanding of the needs of good dressers among men and this season he has secured a most tempting array of goods such as one would scarcely expect to find in a much larger town than Hantsport.

CONGREGATION OF UNITED CHURCH HOLDS INTERESTING GATHERING

A largely attended and most successful congregational banquet was held in the United church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25th. The room and tables looked very attractive with their decorations of foliage, the color scheme being carried out in red and green. The Canadian ensign was also used effectively in the decorations. At 6.30 the congregation and guests assembled, took their places at bountifully laden tables, and did ample justice to the good things provided.

Following the supper a short program was carried out, consisting of a solo by Miss Aileen Yeaton and several selections by the male quartette, the personnel of which is Messrs. J. Pulsifer, H. Rolph, J. Folker and W. Pulsifer. Interesting addresses were given by the pastor, Rev. H. T. Gornall, Rev. Dr. Dickie, Dr. Prestwood, Dr. Annand, Rev. W. A. Outerbridge, members of the session, Messrs. W. S. Whitman, D. W. Murray, W. K. Sterling and Dr. Scott also gave short addresses, their remarks being based on Home and Foreign Missions and the Maintenance Fund. After the program an hour was spent in social intercourse. This was the first of its kind since the amalgamation of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, and proved altogether enjoyable.

On Thursday afternoon a banquet of a similar nature was tendered the members of the Sunday School.

WINDSOR MAY GET APPLO-KRISP PLANT

WINDSOR, Nov. 24.—A business proposition which may be instrumental in bringing the Appo-Krisp plant to Windsor and the building up of the industrial life of this town was placed before the Town Council here tonight when E. Collishaw, of Newfoundland, addressed the meeting, and offered to invest $20,000 in the enterprise if the town of Windsor would add to that an investment of $40,000.

This proposition coming as it does at a time when the Appo-Krisp firm is attracting ever increasing interest and publicity has aroused the keen interest of the people of this town and to the proposed plan their careful consideration. Mr. Collishaw stated at the meeting tonight that he has forwarded the offer to the directors of the Appo-Krisp firm. He outlined his plan and the conditions on which he would make the $20,000 investment in the industry. His first stipulation is that this town should invest $40,000 and that the plant should be erected here. He further specifies that the Board of Directors shall be composed of nine men five of whom must have invested at least $10,000 in the firm.

What action the Town Council will take will be known at a subsequent meeting. In the meantime it was pointed out that Windsor has already offered a free site for the plant and has offered other inducements for the erection here. Whether or not a large money investment will be made is arousing much interest among the citizens.

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

April 18, 1851. There was a female prayer meeting at Mrs. Nunn's, then we all went to the schoolhouse and heard Mr. Angel preach from the text, "This is a faithful saying." etc. Truly if we neglect our salvation after such faithful preaching, great will be our condemnation. The ministers and several brethren spoke. I felt as though I could sit all night and listen. There must be a great interest felt in these meetings as the house is filled every night and the roads are so bad. It has stormed every day this week, rain or snow, and the roads are nearly a mire. I feel that I have been blessed while seeking communion with God. O, may I have more faith and fervency!

20th. Cloudy as usual. Mary has gone to meeting and I am taking care of the children. Conference meeting yesterday and a joyful time it was; many backsliders returned with humble confessions and the spirit of God seemed breathed upon us. I felt rejoiced to see my dear parents again come in fellowship with the church. Mrs. Harriet Holmes, Elmira Holmes, Jane Elder and Charlotte Frost came forward, determined to follow the Lord in all his ordinances. I stayed last night at father's. Jeremiah Macumber was there. We had family prayer last night and this morning. I went to the baptizing, there were a great many there. Amelia Frost also came forward with the others. Mrs. Mary Beckwith died this morning. Dear soul, she is now at rest; she has been a great sufferer.

21st. I called at Mrs. Harris' last evening for Rebecca and we went to meeting. Rev. Hall preached. It was pouring when meeting was out so we went to Mercy's and stayed all night. Then came home this morning.

weather is rainy and gloomy yet. 22nd. I went up to mother's before meeting, in company with Mr. Hurd part of the way, he has been there today and returned for the night. He preached an excellent sermon from Hebrews 12:1, 2. Naming several besetting sins, he said we all had some thing peculiar to ourselves to strive against, levity being his, and he had much need of watchfulness. This is a very rainy day and I have no school. We have had the worst roads and weather for the meetings there has been.

23rd. This is the first sunny day for a fortnight. Rev. Hall preached the funeral sermon yesterday from the words of Balaam, "Let me die the death of the righteous". He said the most minute circumstance as well as the greatest event were equally the offspring of the divine decree, which doctrine I do not believe; but with the last, shewing that they who lived the life of the righteous would die their death. I agreed perfectly. Rebecca and Susanna Vaughan came down after meeting. Rev. Hall called in the afternoon; Joseph Marsters was here also. I went to Mrs. Nunn's to an inquiry meeting. Mrs. Abel Coalfleet, Sarah and Susanna Vaughan, Irene Elder, Mary C. and Sister Ann were there, all inquiring after the truth. Mrs. Coalfleet, I believe, is converted; her experience is that of a Christian. I felt my hope to be renewed and that it was good to be there.

ADDRESS ON BURNS AT CANNING LITERARY SOCIETY

The Canning Literary Society held its regular meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. T. C. Crosby, minister of the Immanuel United church, Kingsport, whose subject was "The Religion of Robert Burns". Burns was a man who prayed and prayed earnestly; he was a Christian; and had great thoughts of God and Christ. Prof. Wilson says that Burns was more religious than the ordinary man. In closing, Lord Rosebery's estimate of Burns was given, showing the greatness of his character, influence and power in the world today.

The music by Mrs. (Dr.) Eugene Eaton, Miss Beulah Wry, soloists; and Miss Marion Bancroft, at the piano; all of Wolfville, was of a very high order. About 80 members were present.

The first real cold wave of the season occurred over the week end and came as a reminder that winter is at hand. On Sunday a decidedly cold wind blew all day and during the night the temperature fell to an uncomfortable proximity to the cipher mark. Monday and Monday night were also decidedly cold, but since then the weather has been pleasant and much milder.

DEATH OF ONE OF GOVERNORS OF ACADIA UNIVERSITY

Wolfville people heard with deep regret of the sudden death at Halifax on Sunday last of Mr. E. C. Whitman, of Canso. For many years a member of the Board of Governors of Acadia University, Mr. Whitman was well known here. When a young man he was a student at Acadia for some time, being obliged to give up his studies owing to the illness of his father which required him to succeed to his extensive business interests. While all his life preeminently a business man he found time to devote to educational, church and civic interests and was the first mayor of his native town to which position he was elected year after year by acclamation until he voluntarily retired. He was 64 years of age and was a victim of heart trouble from which he had suffered for some time.

Reports were heard from the retiring president, Mrs. Halle Bigelow, from Mrs. Stanley Spicer on "Public Health," Mrs. M. S. Eaton on "Home and School," and from Miss Marion Eaton on "Home Economics."

The question of supplying milk to the school pupils who had to bring lunches was discussed, and it was decided to provide milk during the winter for them.

VERY SEVERE WINTER IS PREDICTED

Distinguished Meteorologist Says Weather Will be Cold in U. S. and Canada

CAEN, France, Nov. 30.—It is going to be a cold winter in Canada as well as all around the 41st parallel of latitude, as cold as the winter of 1740 in England, when the Thames froze over.

This prediction was made by Abbe Gabriel, France's most distinguished meteorologist and professor in the University of Caen.

All of Canada and the whole of the northern part of the United States will have a bitterly cold winter, which ought to set in about the middle of December or early in January," the priest-meteorologist said.

Abbe Gabriel's prediction is based on the supposed existence of astronomic cycles.

The account now stands as follows: Amount previously acknowledged—$10.00.

THE GREAT TAKU GLACIER

There are many notable sights to be seen by the tourist who has the opportunity to visit Alaska, but none more impressive than the famous Taku Glacier, which lies between Wrangell and Juneau. This is one of the largest ice fields in the world, where the ice breaks off in great bergs that fall into the sea with a roar like a peal of thunder. The glacier is one mile wide and from there it extends ninety miles back into the heart of the mountains that girdle this rich and beautiful land. It is one of the few great advancing glaciers left in North America and it is a sight which impresses itself deeply upon those who are privileged to view it. That number will be greatly increased by the inauguration of a steamship service by the Canadian National Railways from Vancouver and Prince Rupert as far north as Skagway, Alaska, with ports of call en route at Ketchikan, a typical Alaskan town built at the foot of the mountains; Wrangell, a city where bejeweled ladies of the Russian Court danced in rustling silks when other belles were threading the mazes of the minut in towns on the Atlantic Coast; Juneau, the modern and attractive capital of this northern outpost of the United States; and Skagway, the portal to the famous White Horse Pass, whose name is linked forever with the great gold-rushes where men gambled their lives for the sake of hidden gold. Illustrated literature may be had by writing the General Passenger Department of the Canadian National Railways at Moncton, N. B.

Her confession brought her face toward him with a laugh, and suddenly Cal knew it was her eyes that he had seen in that first glimpse through the darkness.

"Let us hope Gander is a good o' oyster," he said, and they laughed together.

CHAPTER SEVEN

Sunday morning was a time for rest, and Cal slept late. It was seven when he awoke from a sleep strangely but pleasantly haunted by visions of a beautiful maiden who had a disconcerting habit of thrusting her stockings feet in the fire. At the cost of shattering some proprieties Cal gently but firmly averted the danger. It was a particularly engaging kind of heroism, this rescuing of silk-stockinged feet with a beautiful maiden attached, and he had something of a grievance at the sunlight when, pouring in through the window, it interrupted his gallant occupation.

Cal drew on his clothes and stretched himself at the granary door. The sunshine filled the yard like a flood, and the air filled his lungs like a bellows. The world was singing a morning spasm of peace, and a lilt in his heart beat of accompaniment. Matronly hens were taking their dust bath by the side of the stables while their younger sisters cackled over belated layings in the hay shed, and as Cal crossed the yard the family sow turned from sunning herself by the water trough to greet him with an amiable grunt. But at the stable Old Jim cast him a look of reproach. For an hour he had been snuffing and nibbling in his empty manger, and he felt righteously aggrieved. It was not until he had been fed and curried, and left unharnessed, that the big bay seemed to remember that day it was, and took to a friendly nodding of a mouth broadly whiskered with hay. Plainly Jim was a believer in Sunday observance.

When he had finished with his horses Cal turned toward the water barrel at the house for his morning ablutions, but in the yard he was arrested by a sound of singing, accompanied by a drone faintly suggestive of distant bagpipes. It seemed to come from one of the smaller stables to which his duties had not yet taken him. After a moment of irresolution he turned toward it, and found an even more humble building than that which housed the horses; the chinks had fallen out in many places and the door hung only by one tenacious hinge. Inside were cows, four of them, with necks bracketed to their mangers, and a girl seated at one, streaming industrious white ribbons of milk into a pail which rang its reverberations now partly smothered in creamy froth. She was singing, and for a moment he did not disturb her. He was watching the rounded, rising muscles of her arms, the quick action of her slender wrists, the warm curve of her ear—

"Music hath charms!" he quoted, manly when he felt that he must announce himself.

She stopped and regarded him for a moment. "Yes, hasn't it?" she agreed, and resumed her milking.

It was true, then, that her hair was bronze; certain audacious threads, peeping out from beneath her milking cap, returned it.

He was wishing he could help her milk. After all, what avails it to write the prize thesis on "The Reaction of Industrialism Upon the Rural Social Atmosphere" if one has not learned to milk? He said so, but not in such language. "I am afraid my education has been neglected," he explained.

"Don't pity yourself," she advised him. "A first-class farm hand never milks."

So he was a farm hand. All right, he was above being hurt by being called a farm hand. Besides, he was a farm hand.

"But why?" he asked.

"Because milking is drudgery. The experienced farm hand always lays it out that he can't milk and has no intention of learning. It's only the neophyte who says, 'No, I can't milk, but I'd like to learn.'"

Evidently Miss Minnie could give on some pointers, and was not averse. "But why? These mid-eyed cows; that creamy pail. Why?"

She was stripping the last drops between finger and thumb. Then setting her pail to one side—he rushed forward to take it from her hand—she arose, wearing a pinned-up skirt, and a fragment of feminine attire commonly regarded as obsolete, lifted up her stool, seated Bossie on the flank, and stepped out.

"There!" she said, as one who had had a considerable weight pleasantly lifted from her mind. "That's that."

"Finished?"

"Finished."

She turned to another full pail, which had not seen. He took up both in his strong arms, never stronger than on his happy Sunday morning, and together they walked toward the house.

"You asked why," she said, picking up the thread of his thought. "I'll tell you. You've seen the film, 'Why Girls Leave Home?'"

"Don't know that I have."

"Why, I thought you city men—been at the Plainville Electric Theatre. Some theatre, let me say. A sort of tunnel with a sheet at one end and a ticket box at the other. Well, I could write a scenario for a film, 'Why Country Girls Leave Home', and I'd use only one actor."

"Who?"

"A cow. A herd of cows. That's why."

Her remark opened up a new avenue of speculation. By no stretch of the imagination had cows, common domestic cows, female Bovina, appeared within the scope of the university curriculum touching sociology. And now—

He had much to say, but before any of it had been said they were at the house.

"What do you do with it now?" he asked helplessly.

"Run it through the separator. You can turn it for me, if you like."

He liked, and a minute later the whine of the cream separator rose above the volcanic bubbling of the porridge on the range and the clatter of Mrs. Stake's fascination Cal watching out of its long slender spout into the receptacle placed for it, while presently his arms cramped to the ache of a strange exercise and the sweat began to gather on his face.

"My land, you might let the man have his Sunday rest," Mrs. Stake protested.

Cal wondered who supplied the horsepower for this machine on week days. Certainly not Gander, nor Hamilton. It boiled itself down to Jackson Stake or his wife. Perhaps, in days gone by, Minnie, the girl was strong of bicep, he could see that.

The men were filling in for breakfast. The slumbering chuckle in Grit Wilson's eyes leaped to flame at sight of Cal turning the separator; then instantly died down again. A new note from the whirling bowl, a sort of throaty growl whine, proclaimed the task finished, and at a signal from Minnie, Cal released the handle, which dropped inert to the lowest point of its circle while the machine itself coasted joyously along, like Antelope with the clutch out on a down grade.

"Thank you," she said, simply, in a voice to reach him alone, and he went to his seat more than repaid. What he cared for the mocking eyes of Grit Wilson? What, indeed! No more than for the peripatetic functioning of Gander's Adam's apple, more obvious than usual against the background of a red neck and a clean collar!

After breakfast they turned the horses free for exercise, and the drove, with Big Jim at their head and Reed and Trixie bringing up the rear, set out on a sedate trot around the pasture field. The trot steadily gathered momentum, and when Grit's big grey thought to slip ahead of Jim on a corner it broke into a gallop, and ended with a flourish of tails and stamping at the pasture gate. Then were many rollings on the warm grass, and heavings of great hoofs and fetlocks in the air, and prodigious scratchings of vertebral ridge-poles on the sandy earth.

The forenoon was spent in congenial laziness. Cal, drawing upon the warm water reservoir at the back of the kitchen range, and requisitioning an iron wash-tub that lay upturned in the yard before fore the house, sought the privacy of his granary for a bath, and marvelled at the evidences of honest toil which the residue in the tub afforded. He shaved with more care than usual, selected clean shirt, underwear, and socks from his somewhat limited wardrobe, parted his hair with military exactitude, and superintended similar operations, says the shaving, on the part of Reed. Then he sallied forth, conquering and to conquer.

There was no sign of Minnie, so he rambled about the stables. On the sunny side of one of the buildings he came upon Grit and Gander lounging in the warm sand.

"We was jus' sayin'," said Grit, through the clenched teeth that held his pipe; "we was jus' sayin' you ought to rig up the old Ford to run that milk buzzer. That shouldn't be hard for a man with a education."

"For a D.D.," Gander expanded the description.

Cal sat down with them, hunched his back against the sunny wall, and got out his pipe. Not until it was drawing well and the peace of tobacco was upon his soul did he take up the theme.

"I'm afraid my education, along practical lines, has been neglected," he said.

"Minnie'll make up for that," said Gander. "She was givin' you a good start this morning. But take a tip from father, don't get mixed up in this choral business. There's nothin' to it."

"That's what she said—or words to that effect."

"She did, eh? Well, she's wise. She knows. An' when a man drives a team all day, an' feeds up at night, I'll say he's done a day's work, an' he's through."

"Same here," Mr. Wilson volunteered.

"Sounds reasonable," Cal admitted.

"And when a woman feeds a herd of hungry men three times a day, a day's work, and she's through, too. Is that right?"

Gander took his pipe from his mouth and held it at a non-committal angle. "What are you drivin' at?" he demanded.

"Well, I've only been here a few days, and perhaps it is too soon to reach conclusions, but my specialty in college was sociology."

"What's that got to do with? Socials, an' free cats? Sounds like a good subject." It was Grit who was commenting. "You'll be ace high when the box social science comes round."

"No, it's not exactly that," Cal continued, husbanding his good humor. "I don't know quite how I'd explain it to this audience. He paused, but his irony was too delicate; it was lost upon them. "But the purpose of all education is to teach a man to observe, to think—"

"Poor business," Grit interrupted. "The biggest trouble I ever got into came from observin'—an' thinkin'." He was for launching into a salacious story, but Cal would not be deflected.

"And my habit of observing and thinking," he continued, "has caused me to take notice that the hardest worked beast of burden on the farm is the farmer's wife. Now that's a tremendous fact. I suppose it has more to do with the movement from the farm to the city than anything else."

A NEW MODEL

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN
Sir.—The following statement which appeared in a recent issue of the Montreal Witness, furnishes food for serious reflection:

"Canada had prohibition operating in eight provinces in 1919, and nine-tenths of the ninth province (Quebec) was dry by local option. Today, after six short years, the trade flourishes in six of the nine. Temperance is being defeated at the rate of a province a year."

This means that we are fighting a losing battle, and it looks as if it would not be long before the enemy would occupy the whole field.

In looking for the reason for this retrogression it is clear that the failure lies in the lack of stamina in the temperance ranks. It is a question of quality rather than quantity. There are a sufficient number of electors in the country to gain the victory, as has been proved by the various plebiscites, but the majority lack the conviction of a William Wilberforce, or a Wendell Phillips.

A striking analogy is presented by conditions in the early stages of the English Civil War of 1642. The historian tells us that until Cromwell recruited his New Model, the raw, untrained soldiers of the Parliamentary army were no match for Rupert's disciplined troops. Observing this defect, Cromwell proceeded to develop a New Model, otherwise called Ironsides, and, as a result, King Charles lost his crown and his head.

This is illustrative of what is needed in our temperance army. Prohibition and Moral Reform are the most important questions in Canadian politics, and they should be made paramount in all elections, Municipal, Provincial, and Federal. To say that they are not issues in any contest is to confess ignorance of what constitutes the country's greatness, and of the means by which that greatness is secured.

The natural recruiting ground for this New Model is the church. By purpose and profession she is designed for this function. Jesus Christ, her Head, came to destroy the works of the devil, and this he purposes to do, directly or indirectly, through his church. Not that the church should organize and direct the forces, but that she should be constantly developing candidates for membership in the New Model, so that when the call comes, she should be able to point to a number of her members qualified to serve.

But here disappointment awaits the recruiting officer. If there were in almost any constituency in Canada a body of two hundred electors from all parties, who were schooled in the principles of Prohibition and Moral Reform; who would be forward in the selection of candidates; and who could not be bribed by a gift, by the promise of emolument, or by the crack of the party whip; it would not be long before these questions would receive the attention, in the country, and in parliament, that their importance demands. Today, in the Federal parliament one independent member has more influence than a score of partisans.

But just here emerges the crucial test. Church members will agree with the Prohibition theory; they will work with others in promoting its interests; they will pass resolutions, and will pray for its progress; but when it comes to sending true and tried representatives to Parliament, they are not willing to make the necessary sacrifice. Hence, one of the most howling farces under the sun is the spectacle of good men and women cancelling one another's influence at the polls. The farcical nature of this performance is finely illustrated by a bit of rhyme, which I have in my scrap-book, and which has done duty on many a platform. May I quote it for the benefit of your gentle readers? It is replete with the philosophy of the situation. The boys should memorize it, so that on election day they may sit on the fence and repeat it as Deacon A and Boozer B go arm in arm to the polls, or as the member of the W. C. T. U. hobnobs in the booth with Boozer B's wife. Here it is:

"Late in November, when cool was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in the box together.
They nestled up close, like brother to brother,
You could not tell one of those votes
from the other;
But they were both rum votes,
Both sanctioned the license plan;

But one was cast by a jolly old brewer
And one by a Sunday School man.
That Sunday School man had always been noted
For fighting saloons, except when he voted—
For temperance, except when he voted—
He piled up his prayers in holy perfection,
But knocked them all down on the day of election,
For they were both rum votes, etc.

That Sunday School man, no man could be truer;
He spent all the summer denouncing the brewer;
But his ardor cooled off with the change in the weather,
And late in the autumn they voted together;
But they were both rum votes, etc."
