Ruled Destiny!

CHAPTER VII.
A ROSE BEYOND PRICE.

"A thousand pardons!" he said, in his quiet way. "I have been detained by a meeting of the committee of the Jockey Club. Sold all your rubbish—I beg pardon—useful articles? Where is Miss Carlisle?" and his dark eyes roved around the stall.

"In side," said Lady Betty. "Now, Bruce, what are you going to buy?" He scarcely seemed to hear her.

"Anything. An antimacassar, pair of slippers—ah, Bertie!" with a nod. "Glad to see you at the good work!" Then, as Bertie made room for him, he bent his head and passed the narrow doorway. "Good-morning, Miss Carlisle," he said.

Florin bowed; she was busy giving change at the moment, and did not look up, so that he did not see the sudden flush which swept over her beautiful face.

Bertie fled and looked around. "I'll go and see to my show," he said, and disappeared.

"I hope you are taking in a great deal of money, Miss Carlisle," said Lord Norman.

"Yes, I think we are," answered Florin, still avoiding his gaze.

"Florin," said Lady Betty, cheerfully, "look him out some pretty, useful things."

"Such as dolls, and tea-cosies, Miss Carlisle, please—"

He went inside, and Florin turned over the things, laughing the while.

For all his declaration of indifference, he was a long while making his selection, and his dark eyes were more often fixed on the lovely face beside him than upon the fancy articles.

"What will you do with all these?" asked Florin.

"Heaven only knows!" he responded. "But I am not cleaned out yet. Is there anything here that you have worked or made yourself?"

"No," said Florin; "Lady Pendleton made them all."

He glanced at a red rose lying on the snow-white kerchief across her bosom.

"There is only one thing I see here that I really care for," he said, thoughtfully.

"Is there? What is it?" asked Florin, innocently looking over the heap.

"I thought I had shown you everything. Is it that writing-case?"

"No, but I'll take that. No, it isn't that, Miss Carlisle; will you sell me the rose you wear?" he asked, respectfully, almost reverentially.

Florin cringed for a moment, and her eyes drooped; then the cold hauteur, which, alas! came so easily to her, overspread her beautiful face.

"It is not for sale, my lord."

"Forgive me," he murmured, penitently. "You are right. It is beyond price—in my eyes, at least."

Obeying a sudden, uncontrollable impulse, she snatched the rose from her bosom and flung it to the ground.

He stooped and picked it up, and held it out to her, with a look on his face that thrilled her.

"Has it become so hateful to you because I coveted it?" he said, sadly.

"Please put it back to show me that I have not sinned beyond forgiveness. I promise not to offend again."

She took the rose, hesitated a moment, then, instead of replacing it in the kerchief, laid it down on the table.

"Some one else might covet it," she said, simply.

He bowed his head, laid a small pile of gold beside the flower, then, without a word, raised his hat and went out.

Florin stood for a moment motionless, her color coming and going, her heart beating fast and furiously, then she took up the rose and thrust it gently inside the bosom of her dress.

Lord Norman strode down the avenue between the rows of shops as if he were making for the door; but as he came opposite the flower-stall kept by Lady Blanche, she came outside and called him.

He stopped and went up to her, his face still dark and gloomy.

"What will you have, sir?" she asked, mimicking the tone of an ordinary shopwoman. "Lilies are very fashionable just now."

"Anything you like. What foolery is it?"

"Isn't it? But it does good, I suppose. Lady Glenloona says that we shall clear four or five thousand pounds. Shall I make you a bouquet?"

"Great heavens, no! What should I do with it? Here, Blanche, I'll give you five pounds if you'll let me off with a single flower."

"Very well," she said; "but don't think you are over-liberal, Bruce. A gentleman just offered me a ten-pound note for the camellia in my hair. A single flower! Bruce, what do you say if I give you my camellia?" and she looked up at him with infinite tenderness in her soft, brown eyes.

"Better keep it for some millionaire who will bid a thousand or two, Blanche," he replied, carelessly.

"No," she said, slowly, "you shall have it, Bruce, and for your paltry five pounds. There it is. Let me fasten it in your coat—do you know that that makes it worth at least twenty? There," and she put it through his buttonhole.

He laid a five-pound note on the stall.

"Bruce"—Very softly and winningly—"you must wear my flower at the ball here-to-night."

"I don't know that I'm coming."

"That is nonsense. Everybody is coming. You will wear it, Bruce?" He nodded.

"If I come, Blanche," he said, and as he strode on, Lady Blanche shot a glance of triumph toward Lady Pendleton's chalet.

CHAPTER VIII. A FAVORITE.

THE fair was over; the amateur showwomen had rolled home in their carriages, the secretary of the Society for the Improvement of the South Sea Islanders had collected the money, some thousands all told—goodness only knows, and no one very much cared, how much of it reached the South Sea Islanders—and an army of carpenters was at work clearing away the chalets to make room for the ball.

Bertie, very tired, and rather hoarse from shouting "Walk up!" outside his show, and singing inside it, had gone off to his club to dress and get some dinner, and Lady Pendleton was lying down, but far too excited to sleep.

"A tremendous success, my dear!" she said to Florin, who was helping Josine to put away the Swiss masquerade dresses.

"Enormous! But what fearfully hard work. I am very glad I don't keep a shop. I used to think it must be quite pleasant to serve in one of the large linen-draper's places, but I've changed my mind now. And you must be tired, too. I wish you'd go and lie down for a little while."

"I am not tired," said Florin, "and I would like to stay and help Josine."

"There is no occasion for mademoiselle to trouble," said the girl, smoothly. "Mademoiselle looks quite haggard with weariness and ennui," glancing at Florin's face, fresh as a flower and as little haggard as a child's.

"My looks do me an injustice, Josine," Florin said, pleasantly; she was always pleasant with the girl, though she had a suspicion that Josine disliked her.

"I think if I had a cutlet and a cup of chocolate sent up I should like it better than dinner downstairs," said Lady Pendleton. "You wouldn't mind keeping Sir Edward company, would you, my dear?"

"Certainly not. Shall I tell them to send you up the cutlet—"

"Mademoiselle need not trouble," broke in Josine, with a jealous flash of her eyes. "I will charge myself with her ladyship's commands."

"No, you see to it, Florin, my dear; will you?" said Lady Betty, with a yawn, and Florin left the room.

Sir Edward came in for his dinner, looking worried and pre-occupied as usual.

"Lady Pendleton played out, I suppose?" he said. "Just what I expected. I am afraid you are tired out, too, Miss Carlisle?"

"No, Sir Edward," said Florin, and he glanced at her cheerful face with an air almost of relief and enjoyment.

"Everybody seems tired out nowadays," he said. "The world is going too fast. You have had a very great success, I hear; I met Lord Clifford on the steps of the club, he says you have netted a very large amount."

"Thanks in no small measure to his lordship," said Florin, quietly. "He has worked very hard indeed."

"Oh, he likes it," said Sir Edward. "He was in the best of spirits. Very different to Lord Norman, whom I saw for a moment."

"Yes?" said Florin, examining the menu card with close attention.

"Yes; the thing seems to have bored him, and put him out of temper. He wanted to quarrel with me for letting my wife and you take any part in it. As if I could help it! Bruce has all the ignorance of an unmarried man. By the way, I see they are putting him in the society papers. I brought a Report home with me—ah! here it is. That is the paragraph. We understand that there is a prospect of a speedy alliance between the noble families of S—y and N—n— Seymour, Lady Blanche, you know, and Lord Bruce. Was she there to-day? Of course, though—"

"Yes, Lady Blanche was there," said Florin, calmly, as she laid the paper down beside her plate, and Sir Edward little guessed the pang which his innocent communication had caused ed her or the shame with which she battled against it.

"Are you going to the ball, Sir Edward?" she asked.

"I am sorry to say I shall not be able," he replied, without any great exhibition of sorrow either in his face or in his voice. "Have got to speak to-night, and must be in my place. I asked Lord Clifford to look after you."

Florin longed to ask if Lord Norman was going, but could not force herself to do so; but Sir Edward's next words made the question unnecessary.

"I don't suppose Bruce will go; he only granted when I mentioned it to him. Do you care about any dessert? If not, and you will excuse me I will leave the table," and with a sigh, the hard-worked statesman trudged off to his study to think out his speech.

Florin went up to her room, and got out the white dress which she had bought for state occasions. It was a very simple affair of cashmere, almost devoid of trimming, save for a line of swansdown at the neck and on the sleeves, and as she looked at it, she murmured, with a smile:

"Miss Carlisle's costume will not attract the attention of the fashionable reporter, at any rate, but though it may be neither rich nor rare, it is I think, suitable to her station."

While she was changing her dress, there fell from it the crumpled flower which she had refused to sell to Lord Norman, and as she looked at it lying on the floor, her face went as red as the rose itself.

How respectfully, almost reverently, he had begged for it, and how coldly she had denied him! Was it possible that her refusal had put him out of temper?

She laughed with self-mockery at the idea.

Had Headache for Two Years.

A Barrie Man Tells of Persistent Headaches and Indigestion—Finally Found His Way to Good Health.

For two long years the writer of this letter was subject to severe headaches. The nervous system got down, digestion failed, and there was continued loss of weight.

The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food changed all this, and now with scores of other Barrie people Mr. Nader is recommending the use of this food cure as the best means of building up the exhausted nervous system and curing headaches, indigestion and all the annoying symptoms of a run-down condition.

Mr. John Nader, 33 Pennington street, Barrie, Ont., writes: "During the last two years I had an attack of indigestion, accompanied by severe headaches. I suffered from loss of appetite, and my system became run down. I also lost considerably in weight. I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and as they helped me I continued this treatment, for some time. My condition is now greatly improved, my headaches are gone and my health in general is much better. I can cheerfully recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to those suffering from nervousness of any kind."

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way. The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigor and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 4 boxes for $2.75, all dealers or Edmanston, Jones & Co. Limited, Toronto.

A novel sleeve is short and loose with two long streamers which are tied in a chic bow at the elbow.

Many a bodice ends in a soft sash which is taken around the waist and tied in a soft bow at one side.

Silk turtlet is used as much as serge or linen and it is suitable for the hottest days in summer.

A COMFORTABLE WORK DRESS.

2477—For this serviceable model one could use galates, khaki, drill, linen, percale, gingham or chambray. The fullness of the front forms a panel plait at the centre, under which the belt is fastened. The belt confines the fullness over sides and back. The sleeve may be finished in wrist length, or in loose style at elbow length.

The Pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 36-inch material. The dress measures about 2 1/2 yards at the foot.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A PRETTY CALLING GOWN.

2480—This model is very attractive for foulard, crepe, satin, taffeta, gingham, organza, linen or shantung. The fronts close at the left side of the insert, under the collar. The sleeve is pretty in wrist-length, and equally desirable in elbow length.

This Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 6 yards of 36-inch material. The skirt measures a little more than 2 yards at the foot.

A FUTILE EFFORT.

LONDON, June 14 (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency). The Germans yesterday continued their westward near Soissons, as they are trying to envelop the 1ere-Coterets forest and squeeze the French who remain north of Aisne. Their effort had little result. They were held on the whole front between Mont Didier and Noyon while between the Aisne and Ville-Cotterets forest they have only pressed about two miles in two days though they succeeded in effecting lodgment at three points north of forest. Such lodgements, however, are of little value in this battle, which the fighting has reverted to primitive stage. Trenches are practically non-existent, the combat being natural cover, creeping trenches and cornfields and even outflanking their helmets with gas and leaves. Such advance as the Germans have achieved has now been uniform and is only effected on the heaviest loss. The latter continues to be the vital factor in strategic situation, together with the fact that the American weight is still dwelling to tell. The correspondents dwell on the difficulty of the enemy reinforcing his front line and filling the gaps in his divisions with men partially recovered from wounds with poor troops withdrawn from Russian front and with miners and workmen hurriedly mobilized. The serious feature is the fact that the Bavarian Crown Prince still retains the bulk of his reserves intact which can be used wherever he likes either in Flanders or east of Rheims. There are thus still incalculable gains in the battle, in which the Germans are fighting against time. The Allies are suffering from a lack of manœuvring room. French experts who loudly praise General Foch's handling of the troops, point out that he, though in much lesser degree, is now enjoying the advantage previously possessed by the Germans, namely, the ability to quickly move troops to different points, as the French in the present battle occupy the interior of the semi-circle.

A FUTILE EFFORT.

LONDON, June 14. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Germans yesterday continued to push westward near Soissons, where they are trying to envelop the Villers-Cotterets forest and squeeze out the French who remain north of the Aisne. Their effort had little result. They were held on the whole new front between Mont Didier and Noyon, Cotterets forest they have only progressed about two miles in two days, though they succeeded in effecting a lodgement at three points north of the forest. Such lodgements, however, are of little value in this battle, in which the fighting has reverted to the primitive stage. Trenches are practically non-existent, the combatants using natural cover, creeping through bushes and cornfields and even camouflaging their helmets with grass and leaves. Such advance as the Germans have achieved has nowhere been uniform and is only effected with the heaviest loss. The latter indeed continues to be the vital factor in the strategic situation, together with the fact that the American weight is beginning to tell. The correspondents dwell on the difficulty of the enemy reinforcing his front line and filling the gaps in his divisions with men partially recovered from wounds, with poor troops withdrawn from the Russian front and with miners and workmen hurriedly mobilized. But the serious feature is the fact that the Bavarian Crown Prince still retains the bulk of his reserves intact, which can be used wherever he likes, either in Flanders or east of Rheims. There are thus still incalculable hazards in the battle, in which the Germans are fighting against time. The Allies are suffering from a lack of manoeuvring room. French experts, who loudly praise General Foch's handling of the troops, point out that, though in much lesser degree, it is enjoying the advantage previously possessed by the Germans, namely, the ability to quickly move troops to different points, as the French in the present battle occupy the interior of the semi-circle.

ENEMY HELD UP.

FRENCH HEADQUARTERS, June 14. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The only enemy move yesterday was an unsuccessful attack on Courcelles. The enemy seems to have accepted defeat along the rest of the line between Mont Didier and the Oise. The German advance during the last five days has been along and east of the Matz valley. They have not only been stopped west of the valley, but in some cases have been driven back beyond their original departure line. Progress elsewhere has been due to topographical conditions favoring the enemy. The decisive episode was the counter attack on our left wing on June 11th, which frustrated the enemy attempt to gain a front line near enough to bombard Paris with their ordinary guns. Their intention on that day was to straighten the line on the right wing between Rezon-sur-Matz and the Mont Didier-Senlis railway. When the news of the successful French counter attack reached the German grand headquarters the same evening, the enemy opened a diversion on the sector between the Aisne and Villers-Cotterets forest. The honor of checking the third, or if the Kempel offensive of April be included, the fourth, enemy effort to obtain a decision belongs to the army and the brilliant soldier who stemmed the first German attack in the last week of March.

GERMANS REPULSED.

LONDON, June 14. Early this morning an attack was made by a strong party of the enemy upon one of our new posts southwest of Merris. It was completely repulsed, a few prisoners remaining in our hands. The hostile artillery has been active in the Villers-Bretonneux sector and in the Scarpe valley. During the night successful raids were carried out by us in the neighborhood of Neuville Vitasse and Givenchy Les-Basses; patrol encounters took place to our advantage southwest of Gavrelle and northwest of Merris. As a result of these different encounters we captured several prisoners and two machine guns.

MAIN ENEMY ATTACK NOT YET DELIVERED.

LONDON, June 14. The German Crown Prince continues his desperate attempts to overcome the difficult forest regions barring his way into the Oise Valley, and, though there has been fighting, as he gets little nearer Compiègne his progress is very slow. Thursday's reports are considered satisfactory on the whole by observers here. The German advance during the last five days has been along and east of the Matz valley; but the French troops are showing such determination and valor in counter attacking, that although reports from Paris intimate it may be necessary to give further ground in face of superior numbers, there exists a spirit of quiet confidence and trust in General Foch's prudence and handling of the situation. Both the French and German communiques indicate the terrible tenacity of the struggle that is proceeding, the Germans having to admit the loss of some guns. The battle is regarded here as a contest between opposing armies. The military experts still maintain the enemy main attack has not yet been delivered. There is much speculation whether the attack will be with the aim of reaching Paris, or what is regarded as more likely, with the object of dividing the Allied armies by a drive for the coast.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 14. (Official.) During the night there were local actions along the front of the German attack. The French made many successful incursions into the enemy line north of Grivesnes and in the region of Courcelles, taking thirty prisoners. Near the Lege farm they also captured prisoners. A German attack in the region of Authueil was completely broken up. Between the forest of Villers-Cotterets and Chateau-Thierry heavy artillery fighting continued during the night. French patrols took prisoners in the region of Buzieres and west of Rheims, in the Champagne battle area.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, June 14. British casualties reported in the week ending to-day totalled 34,171 officers and men. Of this number 4,447 were killed. The casualties were divided as follows: Officers killed or died of wounds, 231; men 4,216; officers wounded or missing, 899; men 28,825.

SHOWED THE WHITE FLAG.

LONDON, June 14. A party of fifty Germans among the troops who attacked the Americans northwest of Chateau-Thierry on Thursday, surrendered under a flag of truce, reports the correspondent of the Daily Mail with the American army in France. All the German attacks failed, and they left behind them dead and wounded.

ANOTHER SUB. VICTIM.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 14. A British steamship arriving here to-day reported that she received wireless messages from the British steamer Keeman last night that she was being attacked by a German submarine. Two hours later word was received from the vessel that she was sinking. The Keeman, a vessel of 5,371 tons, said she was off the Virginia Capes. She was last reported as leaving Manila. Ships ready to sail from here last night and to-day were turned back on reports that a submarine was operating 15 miles off the Virginia Capes.

THE SITUATION SERIOUS; BUT BRITAIN NOT WEAKENING.

LONDON, June 14. Speaking at a luncheon of the Old-wich Club to-day, former Premier Asquith said there was no use cloaking the fact or minimizing its gravity that the Allies had reached a most critical point in the fortunes of the war. But nothing that had happened on the Western front since the last week of March, he added, would in the slightest degree weaken British allegiance to the great purpose for which the British people were fighting, or their determination to press on to the final accomplishment of their aims. Mr. Asquith evoked cheering when in speaking of the strain of the present period he said that this afforded opportunity for the cruder forms of sensation-mongering, which found a ready market among people of low intelligence and high credulity.

PREPARING FOR RAIDS.

NEW YORK, June 14. Siren horns with sounds which can be heard for several miles, were being sent up at intervals of thirty blocks here to-day for sounding an alarm in the event of a raid by airplanes from the German submarines coasting off the Atlantic Coast.

WANTED TO LYNCH HUNS.

YMUDDEN, Holland, June 14. A mob of Dutch fishermen attacked a hotel in which German airmen were interned, as the result of a submarine shelling a Dutch lugger which was sunk without warning on Sunday. The Huns were saved by the police. "While we were fishing on Sunday a German submarine appeared and shelled us without warning," declared the captain of the lugger, Helena. "The firing was kept up while we were lowering the boats and rowing away. A shell killed three of the crew and stove a hole in one boat. We plugged the hole with clothing and kept her afloat. The submarine paid no attention to our plight. The sailors made land after rowing for twelve hours." The sight of the bodies aroused indignation of the fishermen in the town who tried to lynch the interned airmen in retaliation.

MORE ARRESTS IN IRELAND.

DUBLIN, June 14. The police raided a workmen's club last night and arrested from 30 to 40 of the hundred persons assembled. A large and threatening crowd in the street during the raid was dispersed by the police who used clubs. The charge against those arrested is understood to be that of drilling in the hall or club. Those in the club who were not arrested denied there was any drilling in the hall, declaring that dancing chiefly supported the club. A. Kelly, the Sinn Fein representative of the anti-conscription conference, and other Sinn Feiners are members of the club.

PROMINENT OFFICIAL IMPLICATED.

LONDON, June 14. A prominent official of the Government was arrested to-day in connection with the case of former Lord Mayor Sir Joseph Jonas of Sheffield, according to the Evening News.

NOT TORPEDOED.

WASHINGTON, June 14. The Navy Department was advised to-day that the British steamer Keeman had arrived safely at an Atlantic port.

PLANS MISCARRIED.

FRENCH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 14. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The German attack of Sunday last had been carefully prepared. An enormous reserve of artillery and gas shells had been accumulated three weeks before and had been carefully concealed in the woods behind the front. The ground had been carefully studied beforehand by storm units selected to lead the attack, who went into the front line for periods of three days in order to become familiar with the sector. Mininwerfer had been dragged up to the front at night by gangs of men. The attacking divisions discarded all baggage and equipment, not absolutely indispensable. Before the battle the men began carrying only their arms and ammunition, and an iron ration. The objectives of the first two days as previously mapped out, were that on Sunday the Germans were to reach Briquet on the Mont Didier-Senlis railway, Merry and the both sides of the Compeigne road and on the following day were to enter Compeigne. The divisions employed included six, which were entirely fresh. The attack failed because in three days of desperate fighting the enemy was not able to gain the upper hand on the plateau to the west of Matz. Two factors differentiate the battle from the others, first it was no surprise despite the German efforts to concealment, and secondly instead of having our main line of resistance perched on a knife-edge six hundred feet high with a cliff-like drop in the rear to the river, such as Chemin-des-Dames, we were fighting on ground which was properly organized. Given these essentials the successful defence of the French infantry will undoubtedly hold the Germans wherever they choose to attack.

"Under Consideration."

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—For the information of the Civil Service employees, who attended the meeting at the Total Abstinence Hall, May 3rd, in connection with cost of living and wages, I would say that the Colonial Secretary, acknowledging receipt of resolutions, said he would lay them before the Executive. Not hearing further from the Colonial Secretary, I wrote, on June 7th, asking if anything had been decided by the Government, and in reply, under same date, he informed me that it had been under the consideration of the Government, and was still receiving attention. Under the circumstances, after consulting the chairman, Mr. Thompson, and Secretary, Mr. Roney, it is not considered advisable to call another meeting at present, and we should wait a definite decision by the Government before discussing the matter further. I would remind those who are impatient under delay that "great bodies move slowly," and the prob-

THE IDLE RICH.

The idle rich are showing their right to be on earth; to war we see them going, to scrap for all they're worth. Not sullenly or slowly, and not with feet concealed, but with a fervor holy the rich boys seek the field. They're fighting in the navy, and every morn they pray, "Oh, let us knock the gray from some 'fat foe to-day!'" They're training and they're drilling, with patriotic vim, they're full of pep and willing to sacrifice a limb. Their lives at home were sunny, it was their joy and pride to blow in all the money their fathers would provide. They rode in cushioned motors, regardless of the cost, and I and other voters considered them a frost. But now we see them moving where raging armies meet, and they are surely proving that they're as good as wheat. The gilded lads are building themselves a laurel wreath; they've shaken off the gliding, and shown the gold beneath. Their fathers pay the taxes, with smiles serene and big, and they swing battle-axes, and make the Teuton fly. They are so deep in slaughter, they heed not bulls and bears; on land, in air and water, you see the millionaires.

SATURDAY, June 15, 1918.
THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

People of Newfoundland. The Government is taking you into its confidence by the solicitation of your wealth for win-the-war purposes, and your response to that confidence must be prompt and liberal. Next week you will be given an opportunity of investing your savings in Newfoundland's Victory Loan. This is an attractive investment and one well worth your consideration. Whether you have fifty dollars or five thousand dollars to spare or available your duty is to lend your country all you can, and you can best lend by purchasing Victory Loan Bonds. In asking for your financial support in the present crucial moment, the Government relies on your patriotism and loyalty. You are being given a chance for a safe investment, which has never before been offered to you as a community. There is no risk in this. As we pointed out a few days ago, all Newfoundland is your security, and the repayment of this loan, at the termination of the maturity period of ten years will certainly be a first lien on the Dominion's revenues. Therefore there is no risk. The issue is gilt-edged, and the returns of interest accruing are far more handsome than similar Bonds yield. One hundred dollars worth of this stock will return to the purchaser at the end of the repayable period, exactly one hundred dollars. In other words calculated at compound interest on a 6 1/2 per centum rate, any sum of money invested in this loan will return just double to the investor. Need there be any doubt or hesitation? You are asked to subscribe two million dollars as your part of Newfoundland's Victory Loan. You are requested to put money into Empire stock for the purpose of beating the enemy; you are going to become shareholders in the greatest going concern in the world—the British Empire—the dividends from which are Freedom, Liberty, Justice, priceless heritages won for you in blood, and for the continuation and maintenance of which our boys, our friends, our relatives are over there, prepared to lay down all that men value that you and I might be saved from the domination of Kaiserism. And that they may do their part in this struggle, it is necessary that money be spent freely. The silver bullet will find its billet, but first the bullet must be moulded. You are now being invited to aid the process of moulding the bullet of victory. Your money is needed. Remember that there is no description of wealth about this. You are not giving something for nothing. There is a quid pro quo and one which will stimulate you to lend to your country, there is the knowledge that this investment is as safe as the Bank of England and strong as the Rock of Gibraltar. To all then we say, be prepared to put every cent you can possibly spare into this Loan. Look out for particulars next week when the prospectus will be issued. Then be early with your applications for allotment. Strive toward the end to be desired and let the other portions of the Empire and the people of our Allies see that Newfoundland has faith in itself, faith in its resources, faith in its future. The prime duty of the hour is now upon us. Let us meet it squarely and successfully and in no one way can we do our part better than by taking up NEWFOUNDLAND'S VICTORY LOAN.

- Buy Victory Bonds.
And buy some more.
The "stocking" banks yield no dividends.
Victory Bonds will pay 6 1/2 per cent.
And your money doubles in ten years.
Think it over!
And then buy as largely as you can.
They are perfectly safe.
All Newfoundland is the security.
Only two millions this time.
But when more is wanted the cash will be forthcoming.
Win the war and beat the Hun.
The Victory Bond will turn the trick.
Therefore BUY VICTORY BONDS.

The War Week By Week.
By Observer.

Last week, when the first fury and speed of the Aisne offensive, as the third German drive is generally called, had spent itself and a lull had fallen, I ventured the opinion that it would be of short duration and that the Germans would probably turn their attention immediately to the north of the latest battlefield. The prophecy has been fulfilled to the letter. The past five or six days have witnessed some of the most intense fighting of the war. It has raged in the region which I indicated and which all the probabilities pointed out as the one in which the enemy would make his next determined effort. It is too soon to take a comprehensive view of it or to estimate results, but it seems undeniably to have left Paris and London in a confident and optimistic frame of mind.
The object of this last enemy drive, ambitious but perfectly logical, was to link up, as it were, the effect of the Picardy offensive of March with the unexpected and large results of the Aisne success. It was according almost entirely to the plan of the salient running through Mont Didier, Noyon and Soissons. The centre of this irregular arc is Compiègne, a town on the Aisne some twenty miles west of Soissons, to reach and occupy which would give the Germans an inestimable advantage. But they have not reached it. By all accounts they are, after a prodigious expenditure of lives, as far from it as before.

It would serve no useful purpose for me to explain in detail the course of last week's fighting, for to do so would necessitate constant reference to small villages marked only on maps unobtainable by the majority of readers. But in addition to its general effect, which may be described as a great though not complete failure of the part of the enemy, there are some points about it worth noting. Every one will be remarked, in the first place, the instantaneous resistance encountered by the attack, a resistance followed, where it was for a time unavailing, by almost immediate counter attacks by the French of much larger proportions than any previous this year. The reason of this is simple. Not only is the element of surprise no longer available to the Germans here, but the Allies cannot afford to lose territory before Compiègne, or between that point and Amiens, without seriously jeopardising the unity of their whole line. In the second place the strong defensive nature of the lines as well as the compulsory preparation of the week before enabled the French to best of the attacks with gratifying success. The attack did, indeed, progress a short distance in the centre, but stood almost still on the wings. Later the Germans, seeing the danger of the narrow salient thus created, rolled out the northernmost wing in alignment again, but, we can believe, at a terrible cost. The French now claim that their position is stronger than before. Certainly it is hard to see what the Germans gained by the terrific struggle of the past five days at all commensurate with the losses they sustained.

The article from the pen of Mr. Simonds, the American expert, which the Herald printed yesterday, offers an interesting explanation of the German tactics, and a very sound one. He deprecates the tendency to look at the war geographically and to assign definite territorial points as the goals of each successive German attack: the enemy's object, he says, is at present rather to attack one weak point after another that may disclose itself in the Allied line, and in that way to shake the defence so profoundly in time as to allow of the decisive blow which is necessary to him. The history of the past three months certainly lends colour to the view, but if that be the German aim it has compensations for the dangers which it threatens. Though armies are everywhere and places, in comparison, nothing is far more necessary than others to the destruction of an army. To wear the Allies out in this fashion would require an enormous numerical superiority, much greater than Germany for the moment possesses; and if she is going to direct her attention to places where advances can be made but nothing of first value gained, she is only going to fritter her advantage away.

That is largely the case with the last, or Aisne, offensive. In spite of the large bite of territory which the Crown Prince's army took out of the French line, the capture of Soissons, use for the tactical movement of his troops, was about the only gain of real moment which it registered. Another critic thus summarises well that aspect of the matter:
"In its relation to the battle of Picardy and viewed as a great effort to widen out the apex of the salient at Montdidier, the failure of those attacks is a vital matter. As far as we can see, the capture of Paris is a remote possibility, even admitting that it is a possibility at all. Until Paris is reached there is no point which may be truly regarded as vital in the direction of the greatest ad-vanca. Germany would have to continue her march in this line all the way to Southern France before any decisive damage was done. It is the old question, oft repeated, of the relation of geographical locations to the success of the offensive. There is no such relation unless such locations contribute to the destruction of an army, either its complete interference with its supply system or through its division which make it possible to defeat the parts in detail."

When, therefore, the Germans turned the point of their attack to the north, towards Compiègne, they were aiming at a far more vital part. But Foch knew this as well as they, and was prepared. That attack has failed and we can gather great comfort from the fact. But another is certain to follow very soon, the where, exactly, it would be hard to say. It would seem that the sudden transfer of the offensive to a point a long way removed, as for instance back to Flanders, would not only be a difficult undertaking, but would leave the great salient, Noyon-Chateau Thierry-Rheims, as much a danger to the Germans as to the Allies. I cannot help thinking that this area will see a great deal more fighting yet.

Finally, several recent messages have made significant references to the American army. That army must now be at least half a million men trained to a state of efficiency which would fit them for a place in the line; yet, brilliant though it has been, American participation in the fighting has so far been very small. Is it about to be greatly increased? In view of the brigading of American troops with British and French units, the speculation is not at all unlikely. But possibly the "still greater sacrifices" which one correspondent hints at may mean even more than the entry into the fray of a large part of the American army. At any rate we shall soon see.

THE FEAR OF THE HUN.
LONDON, To-day.
Edward Achelis, President of the Bremen Import Association, in a letter to the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, admits the unpleasant character of the weapon which the Kaiser possesses in the shape of an economic war. He says it would be wrong to believe that we can find a substitute for our former world economic position in the form of close union with the countries situated north and south of Germany and Austria-Hungary. It is just as erroneous to suppose that an economic war against a large number of monopolistic military organisations and we must therefore endeavour to induce our opponents to abandon their eventual plans of an economic war. Let our motto be peace or economic war by peace terms."

SOME U-BOAT PARTICULARS.
NEW YORK, To-day.
The Commander of the U-boat 151, one of the German submarines which has been operating off the American Atlantic Coast, has been identified as Capt. Neusidit, and he served five years as a gunners mate in the U. S. Navy, according to affidavits of officers and sailors of the schooner Hattie B. Dunn, Edna and Hauppauge, victims of the submarine. The documents were brought here to-day by naval reserve officers arriving from Cuba. The submarine is manned by a crew of 75, is 210 feet long, 28 wide, has a shell of three-quarter inch steel, two 5.9 inch guns, mounted fore and aft, is equipped with two periscopes, one over the conning tower, and the other aft, has four stationary rapid firing guns on deck and below deck in American 100 rapid firing rifles and had aboard 18 torpedoes, according to the affidavits. Captain Neusidit told his captives, they said, that his vessel left Kiel, April 14th, and up to June 2nd had sunk 15 ships, six of which were American. From the schooner Isabel G. Wiley, the Commander declared, he took enough food to provision his craft for six weeks. The U-boat skipper professed reluctance to sink American ships, but said he had no alternative, as he had been ordered by wireless from Kiel to get busy or come home.

STAGE SET FOR NEW ACT.
WASHINGTON, To-day.
The present lull on the battle front in France, only presages a new and more violent storm of attacks on the Allied lines, is the military opinion here. The depression is rapidly strengthening that the stage is almost set for a removal of the German main thrust at the British army, around Amiens, with the Channel Coast as the objective. Relief has been never wavering among the majority of officers here, that the real purpose of the German general staff has been from the first to cut the Allied army apart by a drive that would carry them to the Channel and that having arrived at that goal, massed attacks would be hurled against the northern sector for the purpose of destroying the British Army, while a strong defence was maintained against the French to the south. The thrusts at Paris have been looked upon as well planned and executed at points designed to weaken the northern front before the final effort could be made there. By no other theory, can these observations explain, the sequence of the German operations in the great battle, and on no other basis they say, can the campaign of defence waged by General Foch be understood.

BERLIN REPORTS GAIN.
BERLIN, To-day.
Heavy attacks by the French against the Germans between Voormezeele and Vierstraet, southwest of Ypres, have been sanguinarily repulsed, according to the official report issued to-day. The statement reports: Only light fighting on the remainder of the west front. There is nothing new to report from any of the fronts.

REVIEW OF OPERATIONS.
The attempted drive, by the armies of the German Crown Prince toward Paris, seems to have been checked with thousands of their men having been fed to the guns on the Mont Didier-Noyon and Soissons-Villers-Cotterets sectors, in the mad rush to pierce the Allied lines in these regions, and thus gain a fairway to the French capital. The manoeuvres of the German commanders apparently have brought to the enemy nothing more than the obliteration of the Noyon salient, and the capture of a few unimportant positions southwest of Soissons, near the outskirts of the Villers-Cotterets forest. Thus the sixth day of the offensive between Noyon and Mont Didier witnessed only small local actions, the depleted German forces evidently feigning again to test the mettle of the French and Allied troops, whose guns, machine guns and

THE FEAR OF THE HUN.

LONDON, To-day. Edward Achelis, President of the Bremen Import Association, in a letter to the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, admits the unpleasant character of the weapon which the Hun possesses in the shape of an economic war. He says it would be wrong to believe that we can find a substitute for our former world economic position in the form of close relations with the countries situated east and southeast of Germany and Austria-Hungary. It is just as erroneous to suppose we shall protect ourselves against an economic war by establishing a large number of monopolistic military organizations, and we must, therefore, endeavour to induce our opponents to abandon their eventual plans of an economic war. Let our watchword be "overcome the economic war by peace means."

SOME U-BOAT PARTICULARS.

NEW YORK, To-day. The Commander of the U-boat 151, one of the German submarines which has been operating off the American Atlantic Coast, has been identified as Capt. Neustidt, and he served five years as a gunner mate in the U. S. Navy, according to affidavits of officers and sailors of the schooners Blatte B. Dunn, Edna and Hauppauge, victims of the submarine. The documents were brought here to-day by naval reserve officers arriving from Cuba. The submarine is manned by a crew of 75, is 210 feet long, 29 wide, has a shaft of three-and-a-half inch diameter and is equipped with two periscopes, one over the conning tower, and the other at the bow. It has stationary rapid firing guns on deck and below deck in racks, carries 100 rapid firing rifles and had aboard 18 machine guns, according to the affidavits. Captain Neustidt told his captives, they said, that his vessel left Cuba April 14th, and had made 23 and 15 ships, six of which were American. From the schooner Isabel S. Wiley, the Commander declared, he took enough food to provision his craft for six weeks. The U-boat skipper professed reluctance to sink American ships, but said he had no alternative, as he had been ordered by wireless from Kiel to get busy or come home.

REVIEW OF OPERATIONS.

The attempted drive, by the armies of the German Crown Prince toward Paris, seems to have been checked with thousands of their men having been led to the guns on the Mont Didon-Noyon and Soissons-Villers-Cottreux sectors, in the mad rush to pierce the Allied lines in these regions, and thus gain a fairway to the French capital. The manoeuvres of the German commanders apparently have brought to this enemy no more than the obliteration of the Noyon salient, and the capture of a few unimportant positions southwest of Arras, near the outskirts of the Villers-Cottreux forest. rifles had worked such havoc among them. Less than three days was required by the Allies to bring the enemy to a virtual halt south of the Aisne. The feeling still prevails, in military circles in France, that the main effort of the Germans has not yet been launched, and speculation is rife as to when it will come, and what the general object will be—whether Paris or the Channel ports. It is known that the enemy still has large effectives available behind the lines, thousands of them being brought from the Russian front. The armies of General Foch, however, everywhere are watchful and direct, and are good morale, as to lead to the belief that no matter where the enemy chooses to oppose them, they will be able to give a splendid account of themselves. Seemingly it is not improbable that Field Marshal Haig's forces will be asked again to measure their strength against the Germans, and that the territory near Arras or in the Scarpe sector, or before both positions, may be chosen by the enemy as the theatre. In both these sectors the German guns again are working with the violence that generally presages an attack. At last accounts, however, the infantry had not been unleashed in the Marne sector though there is almost continuous artillery activity in the region of Chateau-Thierry, where American troops are fighting beside the French. On the other sectors of the front comparative quiet prevails. American troops are French airmen continue to carry out their operations, above and behind the enemy lines. Fights in the air are numerous and large quantities of explosives daily are being dropped upon military positions as far beyond the battle area as American airmen have participated in the bombing assaults and returned safely to their stations, although they were heavily shelled by anti-aircraft batteries. As yet the Austrians have failed to start their expected offensive against the Italians though several fresh attacks have been made against the lines in the mountain regions, but the Italian war office announces that they were repulsed.

COUNTIES UNDER SPECIAL LAW.

DUBLIN, To-day. The Dublin Official Gazette proclaims the counties of Wick, Carlow, Galway, Kerry, Limerick, Longford, Mayo, Roscommon, Sligo, Tipperary, Tyrone and Westmeath, King's County and Queen's County, under special law providing for change of venue and trial by special jury. All the counties named except Tyrone and Wick in the western and central parts of Ireland.

Saw Enemy Plane Fall.

Mrs. Mary Badoock, of Taylor Place, Boston, has received a letter from her son, Thomas Badoock, of the 101st Field Artillery Supply Company, in France. He writes as follows: "Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and in good health, hope you, pa, sis and Hazel are the same. I have changed my station and am now on the front and it is good and quiet over here. I saw a few German planes fly around, but they do not stay, as they are in a hurry to get back to the place from which they come. Sunday, while I was working in the afternoon, I was watching a German plane in the air. It stayed up quite a while and it was having a good time flying round only that a French plane had to come around and break up the party by sending him to the earth and breaking his new machine. It is the first plane I have seen fall since I got on the front and I would like to see good many more. It sure did seem good to see the enemy fall to the earth. I received a letter from Jack Richardson Monday and he is in good health and told me that he sends his best regards to all at home."

In Loving Memory.

OF PTE. JOHN SQUIRES, KILLED IN ACTION APRIL 12, 1918. Another soldier lad laid low, Another home made sad, A mother's head is bowed in woe Weeping for her brave lad, For Freedom, Right and Liberty, John bravely gave his life, That you and I might still be free, He has fallen in the strife, In the bosom of earth he's calmly sleeping Free from sorrow, grief and pain, While at home loved ones are weeping For the boy the Hun's life slain; God comfort them and bless them, The mourners left at home, Grant them to meet their boy again Around the heavenly throne. And mothers who have sons out there, Men that are brave and true, This prayer to heaven will ascend "God bring them back to you." Faithful all on land and sea, From me my love is taken, Yet in my sorrow look to Thee With a faith that's still unshaken.

PARIS, To-day.

ANOTHER SUPPOSED TRAITOR ARRESTED.

LONDON, To-day. (Bulletin.) Charles Vernon who is said to have been employed in an important capacity in the Ministry of Munitions, was charged in Bow St. Court to-day with conspiracy with Sir Joseph Jonas, former Lord Mayor of Sheffield, who was recently arrested on the charge of having communicated information useful to the enemy. The case was adjourned until Wednesday next when the two prisoners will be arraigned together.

That Politiness Explained.

(From the New York Sun.) The unusual polite behaviour on the part of the German U-boat commanders is not so puzzling now. Upon hearing the stories of the Americans who came ashore from the first half dozen ships bombed in these waters, it was suggested that the Prussian system of politeness might have been reformed for political reasons, or that the captures had been made by one or two German commanders different from other Germans. These were but optimistic whispers of fancy. The Germans scorned to waste their precious horribleness on hardened freight skippers and their more calloused crews. But when they got the Carolina, a passenger ship, they forced its people, women and children, into open boats and left them 150 miles from land. In civilized warfare, when the captured cannot be taken aboard the submarine, either the ship is not sunk or the wireless is used to summon help for the victims. German chivalry—that returns a strong man's umbrella and leaves a woman to die in an open boat!

Preferred the Cemetary

The following, showing how an American boy put it over the German censor, comes from Washington. Some idea of the treatment that American soldiers are receiving in German prison camps may be gathered from a letter received by a boy's parents at Minneapolis: "We are having the very best treatment," he says. "The Germans provide us with the best of everything. There is only one thing we could wish, and that is to be at Lakewood Park." Lakewood Park evidently impressed the German censor as a pleasure resort. It is a cemetery.

"Fuddyduddysms."

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

As you grow older do you find that you grow more "Fuddy-duddish"? A friend of mine declares that is the one thing he is afraid of in old age—that he will let petty notions, small fixed habits, foolish little fears, grow on him until he becomes what he characterizes by that highly expressive word, "As people get older," he said, "their bodily muscles are likely to get stiff and so are the muscles of their minds. Fuddyduddysms is the rheumatism of the mind."
Then, at the request of one of his listeners he went on to give us a concrete example.
He had to sit in a certain seat in the trolley car every morning. The third from the front on the left hand side. I told other people about it and began to take quite a pride in the fact that I was upmost if it was taken, and then one morning I came to and I said to myself "Tommyrot." You're making yourself an old man at forty by deliberately coddling such fool notions. Don't you ever sit in that seat again. Or better still, don't notice what seat you are sitting in."
Fired by this example the rest of us took stock of some of our fuddyduddisms.
One of mine in that I can't write a word unless I have a certain kind of a pencil.
I Can't Bear the Blankets Out at the Feet.
Another is that if the blankets are the least bit out at the bottom, I don't sleep (even if my feet aren't cold) I am terribly disturbed.
Another (which I am proud to say I have gotten rid of) was that I couldn't sleep after sunrise unless the shutters toward the east were closed. For a year I used to go through the rigmarole every night. Then one summer I went to a house where I couldn't close them, and got cured.

Arnold Bennett has another name for the fuddyduddist. He calls him the "complete fusser." Perhaps you read his essay on the subject. He tells of a woman who is miserable all through her week end at a lively country house because she has forgotten to bring her special brand of cigarettes and can't get hold of any. He declares that, blindfolded, the woman would probably not have known that brand from a similar one, but that she has made a fetish of the notion that she must have just that and has gotten herself into a mental state where her peace of mind depends upon it.
Multiplying The Requisites For Peace of Mind.
That's what the complete fusser or the fuddyduddist is always doing—multiplying the trivial things on which his peace of mind depends. And the more numerous the small things on which your peace of mind depends,—well, the rest is obvious. The time to nip fuddyduddysms is the traditional season for all nipping. Have you any to nip?
At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp held at Tasset Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and tooth-ache.

Every little while something happens which is in the making of history such as coronations, inaugurations, great discoveries, the death of some famous man or woman, etc.
An excellent way to keep the children interested in current events is to provide them with a generous size scrap book in which may be pasted newspaper and magazine clippings of happenings which are of sufficient importance.
To keep such a book will teach the children to think over what they read and to value it correctly.

EXERCISES FOR THE MIDDLE AGED.

Have you ever seen a group of children playing at jump rope in the streets? Have you noted the color in their cheeks, the luster in their eyes and their breathless haleness? Have you ever seen sailors when on an ocean voyage, jump rope? Skipping rope is one of the healthiest exercises if not carried to excess. Whether you live in a two-room apartment in the city or a twelve room house in the country or suburbs, it is quite possible to indulge in this childhood pleasure if you are sincerely in earnest in wishing to keep your figure supple and your face girlish.
If you are an apartment house dweller there is bound to be a roof or place where the clothes are hung out on washdays, or perhaps a back veranda. Some apartment houses furnish laundry rooms in the basement that are quite well ventilated, or there is always a yard at the back of the house, should you happen to live in the country, there are boundless opportunities for exercising to restore your youth.
Select an ordinary piece of rope the right weight to swing well in the breeze. At first you may find that your efforts are only breathless efforts of forgotten childhood but you will soon conquer the skipping knack. Never jump more than twenty times before pausing for breath.
Deep breathing is, of course, the best of all exercises but skipping rope is a close second. It wakens the sluggish liver, strengthens the weak muscles and cause them to become youthful again, brings color to the shallow cheeks and luster to the eyes. Once more the pulse will bound, once more the heart will be light, and laughter will burst from the lips that have almost forgotten how to smile, if you only skip rope.

German "Honor".

The Boston Transcript very truly remarks that a "human understanding" with the Germans is a good deal like an arrangement for mutual prayer-meetings between Beelzebub and the saints. Beelzebub will take advantage of the compact to capture the souls of the saints if he can. The understanding with regard to bombing raids on cities outside the zone of hostilities on Corpus Christi Day was religiously respected by the Allies, and the devout population of Cologne and other cities of the Rhine marched in their processions unmolested. But all the time the German long-range guns, which destroyed the Church of St. Garvins on Good Friday—a day which in the annals of the church is certainly as sacred as Corpus Christi—kept on shelling the city of Paris.
The Germans, who are always ready to take advantage of any logical loop-hole, will respond to this criticism that the arrangement referred to air raids and not to the use of siege artillery. But the dropping of bombs on churches is manifestly a thing one in its character and effect however it is done, and to continue to bomb Paris churches when Cologne churches might not be bombed was plainly a treason to the plight of the Eucharist. And as a matter of fact, the Germans sent an air raid against Paris at midnight of Wednesday. It was repulsed by the French aircraft, but the "all safe" signal could not be sounded until after midnight, and if the French had not succeeded in driving the German planes away, they would have undoubtedly prolonged their destructive operations into the hours of the celebration of the Eucharist. These occurrences prove that absolutely no dependence can be placed upon what remains of the "German honor."

The "jumpiness" of the Rhineland nerves over the Allied air raids at Cologne and Mannheim plainly suggests the desirability, as the Transcript urges, of continuing these exercises, and of bombing the Rhine cities with increased activity. Cologne, by reason of its possession of that proud monument of Teutonic taste, its cathedral, and of the assimilation of its populous conditions to those of the crowded districts of Paris and London which the German airman so delight in bombing, offers itself as a particularly fitting scene for the Allied aerial activities. Every little while the Kaiser congratulates his people on the immunity of their cities, their churches, their town halls and their homes from the destruction which he is constantly wreaking on the people of France and England, and which his Austrian slaves are wreaking on Venice, Padua and Vicenza. Pictures are displayed all over Germany showing the ruined cathedrals and public buildings of France and Belgium, followed by the words, "This we have saved you." If there is any means by which this insolently displayed immunity may be belied, they should be employed effectively and promptly. It seems that the German nerves do not readily withstand the warlike means by which they ravage the homes of their enemies. They carry to Rome their clamor against the partial reprisals thus far visited upon them and avail themselves religiously of a day's respite on religious grounds, in the meantime violating this holy truce themselves. What course could be more clearly indicated as desirable than the continued exacerbation of their nerves in this manner?"—Halifax Chronicle.

Everyday Etiquette.

I have received the announcement of a wedding but am only acquainted with the groom. What is the proper thing for me to do?" asked Francis.
"Write the groom a letter congratulating him on his good fortune and wishing him many years of happiness," replied her mother.

The Floating Unit.

Quite a number of fellows from here who have been accustomed to absent themselves in the U. S. and Canada for periods of two or more years at a time, and who were forgetful of the fact that they had wives and children to support in Newfoundland, have returned home since Conscription has been enforced in those countries. Some, however, have not received the welcome they hoped for, nor has the fatted calf been killed on their return. There are a few of those drifters going around town at present and as they are of no value to the community they should be made to join the Army or move on.

Yesterday afternoon a prominent gathering of citizens met at Government House by invitation, when Dr. Grenfell gave an interesting address, lasting over one hour, on "Twenty-five years' hospital work in Northern Newfoundland and Labrador." The meeting was presided over by His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris, and among those present were His Lordship Bishop White, Rev. Dr. Bond, Hon. Sir P. McGrath, Hon. W. J. Ellis, Hon. W. Halfyard, Major Gosling, Hon. T. Cook, Hon. John Harvey, Hon. R. Watson, Dr. Grievé, Capt. A. Kean, Hon. A. Mews, Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., Mr. R. B. J. Mr. H. R. Brooks, Mr. J. Brown, Capt. Campbell, A.D.C., Lieut.-Col. Knox-Niven, C. T. James, Miss Armstrong Harris, Mesdames Browning, Gosling, Harvey and a number of other ladies. The speaker was introduced by His Excellency, who took occasion to state that formerly he had neither believed in nor supported the Grenfell work, but having made a careful study of it broadly as well as in detail he had become a convert and considered it to be a duty to assist in its advancement. It was a great pleasure to him to have made the acquaintance of Dr. Grenfell, and to have won his friendship.
Dr. Grenfell, who was received with applause, thanked His Excellency for the kindly references made, and at once began with a resume of the work of the Grenfell Mission on Northern Newfoundland and Labrador. He referred to the misunderstandings which had arisen with regard to the work and operations of the Mission and the unjust criticism to which it had been subjected, as well as to the charges of wrong-doing which had been freely circulated, and which had culminated in the appointment of an investigatory Commission the finding of which had been an absolute victory for the Mission and a complete refutation of the absurd and injurious accusations which had been made. In the early days of the Mission's establishment, great hardships existed particularly regarding the supply of medical attendance and medicine to the thousands of fishermen along the coast, but as time advanced he saw the Mission grow, and the people realize and appreciate the benefits of its service. DR. W. T. GRENFELL, C.M.G., AD- DRESSES REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING.

Yesterday afternoon a prominent gathering of citizens met at Government House by invitation, when Dr. Grenfell gave an interesting address, lasting over one hour, on "Twenty-five years' hospital work in Northern Newfoundland and Labrador." The meeting was presided over by His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris, and among those present were His Lordship Bishop White, Rev. Dr. Bond, Hon. Sir P. T. McGrath, Hon. W. J. Ellis, Hon. W. Halford, Mayor Gosling, Hon. T. Cook, Hon. John Harvey, Hon. R. Watson, Dr. Grievie, Captain A. Kean, Hon. A. Mews, Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., Mr. R. B. W. Mr. H. R. Brookes, Mr. J. Brown, Capt. Campbell, A.D.C., Lieut-Col. Ross-Niven, C. T. James; Miss Aronell Harris, Mesdames Browning, Gosling, Harvey and a number of other ladies. The speaker was introduced by His Excellency, who took occasion to state that formerly he had neither believed in nor supported the Grenfell work, but having made a careful study of it broadly as well as in detail he had become a convert and considered it to be a duty to assist in its advancement. It was a great pleasure to him to have made the acquaintance of Dr. Grenfell, and to have won his friendship. Dr. Grenfell, who was received with applause, thanked His Excellency for the kindly references made, and at once began with a resume of the work of the Grenfell Mission on Northern Newfoundland and Labrador. He referred to the misunderstandings which had arisen with regard to the work and operations of the Mission and the bitter criticism to which it had been subjected, as well as to the charges of wrong-doing which had been freely circulated, and which had culminated in the appointment of an investigation Commission the finding of which had been an absolute victory for the Mission and a complete refutation of the absurd and injurious accusations which had been made. In the early days of the Mission's establishment, great hardships existed particularly regarding the supply of medical attendance and medicine to the thousands of fishermen along the coast, but as time advanced he saw the Mission grow, and the people realize and appreciate the benefits of its service. Hospitals are now established at St. Anthony, Battle Harbor, and Harrington (Canadian Labrador), the latter on the advice of the Canadian authorities, and a mission steamer was now being put up and down the coast, having on board a doctor who attended to the sick at all points, sometimes using the steamer for a hospital ship, and in cases of serious illness conveyed patients to one or the other of the hospitals named. He had introduced into the island reindeer from Lapland, principally for the benefit of the people on the N. E. coast, but the venture was not, unfortunately, successful, though through no fault of the mission. The hospital at St. Anthony is an institution of very wide scope and all the time had on the staff some of the leading physicians and surgeons of Canada and the United States. Patients from all parts of the Dominion travelled to St. Anthony for treatment, and the splendid results told its value. At St. Anthony there was also a school and an orphan asylum. All along the coast a doctor was at all times available, and a steamer went far north with medical aid during the season that the fishermen were on the coast, so they could always get proper treatment. All this, however, cost money and some extra effort would have to be made to finance the Mission more liberally than it hitherto had been. The establishment had justified itself and went a long way to reducing the hardships of the Labrador fisheries. The Mission is now an International concern with a Board of Directors chosen from England, Canada, the United States, and Newfoundland, under whose control it is now conducted. The lecturer also referred to the King George V. Institute, which is another branch of the Mission, and in conclusion pointed out that though it was the hope to continue the good work without faltering, funds were required and he thought that the Government should increase the grant which it now makes toward the movement. Following Dr. Grenfell: Mr. John Browning, Hon. W. W. Halford, Mr. W. G. Gosling, Hons. John Harvey, F. MacNamara, Dr. Grievie, Mr. H. R. Brookes congratulated the speaker, and paid a high tribute to his work. A vote of thanks was proposed the lecturer by His Lordship Bishop White, seconded by Rev. Dr. Bond, and supported by Capt. A. Kean. After this had been put and tendered by His Excellency, those present adjourned to the dining-room where tea was served, and a very enjoyable afternoon terminated.

Our Baseball Column. PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

All communications in connection with this Column should be addressed "Baseball Editor, in care of Evening Telegram." JARGON OF THE DIAMOND. Next Wednesday afternoon. St. George's Field. Opening Baseball Game, Wanderers vs. Cubs. Entire proceeds for the W. P. A. Miss Amorel Harris will formally open the Baseball Season; by throwing the first one over the "plate." Help the cause. Every little helps! Baseball is easily the most popular of all sports because of its honesty, its inherent uncertainty, and the fact that it appeals to all classes. In one form or another, the spectator or the player, it affords recreation to countless thousands. As eager statisticians grope Amid the records and the dope, Each one will loudly brag, And show you figures by the team That prove conclusively his team is sure to win the flag. Demon Dug says—"To be a successful baseball player one has got to be full of spirit." Whatdaya mean, spirit? These are prohibition days. Now come the melancholy days The saddest of the year; The manager he up and says "We'll win this flag this year."

Don't forget to "do your bit" with the Victory Loan. A pitcher can't go to the well once too often, but not a baseball pitcher. If you can't go to the game next Wednesday be a sport anyway. Buy a ticket and give it to a kid and let him have a good afternoon's fun. Give your Mon To beat the Hun. In order to pitch a no-hit game it is necessary to put a lot of stuff on the ball. But what does it profit a pitcher to put a lot of stuff on the ball and fall to get by the Umpire-in-Chief. Help to make a $500.00 gate on Wednesday next. Every cent goes to the W. P. A. for the boys "Over there." All the four clubs,—Wanderers, B. I. S., Cubs and Red Lions, are in fine fettle, and this year's series will be the liveliest since the inception of the League. JACK—"You promised me a kiss if our team won?" BETTY—"All right; but a first class ball player like you wouldn't find any satisfaction in merely TAKING one. Stand off across the room and I'll THROW you one.

Exemption Tribunal.

On Thursday thirty-seven applications for exemption were considered by the Military Tribunal. Twenty were granted, four were disallowed, four were postponed; one was deferred until to-day; one was withdrawn; two were ruled out, and three were absent. MILITARY SERVICE ACT, 1918.

EVERY MAN in Class I, that is all unmarried men between the ages of 19 and 25 inclusive, must report to the Registrar at the Militia Building, St. John's, on forms provided, before the 24th day of May, 1918, or send an application for exemption. Report and application can be sent through the Post Office or may be made personally at the Militia Building to the Registrar. Claims for exemption must be made on the following grounds: (a) That it is expedient in the national interest that the applicant should, instead of being employed in military service, be engaged otherwise. (b) That he has one or two brothers and one of them is serving, or has served, in His Majesty's Naval or Military Forces during the present war. (c) That he has three or more brothers and two of them are serving, or have served in His Majesty's Naval or Military Forces during the war. (d) That he has persons mainly dependent upon him for support, such as parents, brothers or sisters and. (e) Ill health or infirmity.

TOBACCO NOW A Military Ration.

The War Department has decided that henceforth it will itself issue tobacco rations to our soldiers. This surprising news has been received by our soldiers, as reported from the front, with "a wave of joy." Its realization has been long hoped for by them and recommended by all officers up to General Pershing. By this step, tobacco products are placed by our Government on the same footing as foodstuffs. It becomes herewith one of the war necessities. For, henceforth, soldiers will no longer have to rely for their smokables on provisions made for them in cantonments. They will no longer have to purchase their cigarettes, smoking tobacco and cigars nor pay varying prices for their indulgence in tobacco. They will be furnished all kinds of tobacco products gratis by the Government the same as food and clothing and as all other war necessities for keeping the soldier in good fighting trim. Naturally, the official inclusion of tobacco products as an obligatory army ration is bound to solidify the public's heretofore diversified opinion as to the value and essentiality of tobacco products. It must convince even those reactionary minds and prejudiced fanatics, who ranked tobacco as a poisonous substance. (Extract from the United States Tobacco Journal, May 25, 1918).

MAN SEEKING EXEMPTION

or on his behalf by his employer, or business partner or near relative. Application forms will be found at all Post Offices as soon as they can be printed and hurried there by mail. REPORTS will also be found at all Post Offices. When Report is filled out hand to the Postmaster or Clerk and get a receipt. Any man in the class called up failing to report is subject to a penalty of five years. IMPRISONMENT. All who have received REJECTION BADGES must fill out Report for Service form and send same through Post Office or deliver at Militia Building to Registrar or make application to Tribunal in St. John's or to Commissioners (Magistrates) in outposts for exemption. The TRIBUNAL sits daily in the Supreme Court Chambers, St. John's, and the Commissioners outside St. John's at the most convenient centres. Issued by Military Service Board. may21, eod,tf

Will Celebrate St. Bonaventure's Day.

The members of the St. Bon's Association are now finalizing measures for the due celebration of St. Bonaventure's Day, July 14th next. As the Association this year has lost by death an unusually large number of members, the celebration will take the form of a solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of the souls of all the members, especially those who "died at the front" and in the Florist disaster. Besides those, there were several of the oldest ex-pupils, including late James P. Howley, Esq., and M. K. Greene, Esq., and J. T. Fitzpatrick, Esq., who were prominent in the Association, and who were amongst the very first students of the College. The old St. Bon's boys take great pride out of their Alma Mater, and turn up in large numbers every year, and this year the attendance is expected to be larger than usual, on account of the solemnity of the occasion, as nearly every one has lost a relative or close personal friend, who will be fittingly remembered on the feast day of the College.

Should Baseball be Played This Season?

In certain circles there is some criticism, or apparent apathy, as to advisability of playing Baseball this season in view of the tragic and momentous times through which we are passing.

We think the best answer to this is to point out to our readers:—

That over 100 baseballers are in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.

That nearly eighty per cent. of those playing this year offered their services voluntarily but were not accepted.

That the remaining twenty per cent. comprise those whose family obligations, or age, will not permit them to join up.

That since the inception of the League in 1915, all the net proceeds of baseball games have been devoted to patriotic and charitable purposes, amounting in all to $2,000.00.

That in this respect the contributions to the various patriotic funds last year were well over $700.00 and $180.00 to charity.

That it is the aim of the players and officials of the League, who are obliged to stay at home, to swell the "war funds" by not less than $1,000.00 and to assist the City orphanages to the extent of $500.00 by their season's work.

Of course, it will be readily seen that without the moral and financial support of all lovers of clean manly sport such could not and will not be feasible.

It may be of interest to the public to know that the baseballers offering last year were so generous that they are beginning the season with less than a hundred dollars in their exchequer to offset positive obligations of not less than five hundred, which it will cost to play the season's schedule. Yet, the aim of the players is $1,000.00 for the various patriotic funds and $500.00 for the Orphanages. And surely it cannot be gainsaid that their endeavours deserve the wholehearted support of the whole community.

The opening game will be played on St. George's Field, on Wednesday afternoon, next, the entire proceeds of which will be devoted to the W. P. A. at the suggestion of Miss Armored Harris. This is the fund of all the War Workers' branches which needs the most urgent replenishing. Miss Harris has graciously consented to open the season by throwing the first ball over the plate, and in view of the worthiness of the object we feel that we need make no apology to the public generally on behalf of the League, in announcing that the admission fee (for the opening game only) will be 20 cents.

Richard White vs. E. J. Wornell, J. P.—This is an application for a writ of certiorari. The case was set for hearing on June 22nd.

The St. John's Daily Star Publishing Co. vs. William Grimes, John Byrne and Patrick O'Neill.—This is an application on the part of defendants for leave to appeal. His Majesty in his Privy Council from the Interlocutory Judgment delivered on June 6th instant, and that in the meantime further proceedings be stayed. Conroy, K.C., was heard in support of the application. Howley, K.C., was heard against the application. The Court takes time to consider.

William Davis vs. Smith Co., Ltd.—This is an appeal from a judgment by Mr. Justice Kent in favour of the plaintiff. Mr. McNelly, who appeared for the appellant, the Smith Co. Ltd., was heard and the Court adjourned until this morning at 11 o'clock.

Smith vs. Davis.—In the case of Smith vs. Davis in the Supreme Court this morning, which was continued from yesterday, Mr. L. E. Emerson was heard in favor of the appellant. McNelly was heard in reply. At the conclusion of the latter's address, the court arose and will take time to consider.

Witches' Warning.

Famous Prophecies That Have Come True.

The Empress Eugenie probably often recalls in her sad and aged old age the prophetic words of a dervish whom she visited, veiled and disguised, more than half a century ago, when she was in the full bloom of her loveliness, the happiest and most enviable woman in Europe.

To her amazement the dervish greeted the veiled stranger with the words, "Welcome to my humble dwelling, O Empress!" and after Eugenie had expressed her astonishment that he had so easily discovered her identity, he continued:

"At your birth the stars foretold for you great power and greater sorrow, for your happiness will be only temporary, but your sorrow will last forever. You are doomed to lose your throne, your husband, and your son, and to wander alone through the world like a lost star. These events, however, will not happen at once, for the blow would kill you. To you, as an Empress, it will not be permitted to enter the land of your husband and your son, except by permission. You will have to seek a home with strangers, and the dress of woe will never leave your form; your jewels will be but tear-drops."

With what terrible accuracy every word of this prophecy has been fulfilled, the world knows.

Her Husband's Cruelty.

When the beautiful young Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria visited a village fair some seventy years ago in disguise, and in the company of her father, a gipsy woman revealed her future to her.

"I do not know who you are, young lady," the gipsy said, "but you will one day, and before long, wear the crown of an Empress. You will be one of the greatest and most envied women in Europe, but your happiness will not last long. You will have many, many years during which you will walk alone in the shadows; one great trouble will follow another until—but no, I will say no more, except that you will wear a double crown, that of an empress and a martyr."

Within four years Elizabeth had married Franz Josef, the young Emperor of Austria, and within another year her young life was laid in ruins. Her husband's unkindness and infidelity had driven her in despair from Vienna, to begin the long period of exile and sorrow and pitiful loneliness to which death at last put a merciful end when the assassin, Luccheni, stabbed her to the heart.

Horror and Tragedy.

The ill-starred career of the late King Alexander of Serbia was foretold before his birth by an inspired peasant of Krema.

"The child who is about to be born," the peasant declared, "will have a far more turbulent reign than his father, will marry a woman from the people, and in his twenty-seventh year will cease to be king, his dynasty perishing with him."

How exactly this prophecy was fulfilled is known to the world. Alexander lost his head and heart to Draga Maecin, the beautiful widow of a drunken engineer, and married her in spite of the strong opposition of his parents, ministers, and people, and his foolish act was swiftly followed by that night of horror and tragedy in 1902 when a band of conspirators broke into the palace, slew both the king and his low-born wife, and hung their mutilated bodies out of a window.

Early Farming
 in Newfoundland.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent of last evening, writing on farming, presents views of the future with an optimistic eye. He thinks that with more energy, Terra Nova shall in the future become more productive in agriculture. Let us hope so. This is the wish of all true lovers of our island home. If you would grant me space, I will give your readers a short history which Mr. Ruby—whom I presume was the forerunner of the present respected Ruby family—gave some half a century or more ago on his entry into farming pursuits; great grit and determination, with unswerving industry and tenacity to the object he had in view may be seen in his statement. He said: "I have been in the country twenty years, was a day laborer seven years, thirteen years since I took a farm; at the time of taking it, it was a wilderness. I was a poor man then without a shilling. Besides paying for my grant, I borrowed fifty pounds, I paid 5 per cent interest for it; after four years I paid off the principal at the rate of ten pounds per annum, beside the interest. I built a tilt the winter previous. I cut wood, and made brooms and sold them to the merchants during the winter. In clearing my land I left sufficient woods for shelter round each field.
 The second year I cleared but little ground having to go to work gardening and farming to earn some money for myself. I obtained four shillings per day for my labor. Laborers on the wharves obtained but three shillings generally. I only set about three barrels seed potatoes the second year. For eighteen months I had to take everything on my back, for half a mile before there was a road near my house. The third year I used to work about my ground only at intervals and used to come to town to work. My sons were now growing up and gave me some assistance. I had no assistance from the Government during the time. I have now about 10 acres of land in a good state of cultivation. I had about 13 tons of hay last year, which I sold for £5-10s. a ton. I sold about 60 barrels of potatoes at an average of 7s. 6d. a barrel. During the past four years I gave a great deal of my time in making my house more comfortable and built a stable with stables and covered it with rinds and sods. I have now a good house which will cost £200 with a good walled cellar underneath and a good well. I have also bought 50 acres of land each for my two sons from the Government, paid 2s. 6d. per acre."
 The above may interest those favorable to farming pursuits. It goes to show what a man with energy may do.

Yours truly,
 JAMES MURPHY.

Resolutions by Request.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In the eleventh and twelfth issues of the Advocate I notice letters in big type one signed by Walter Watton, on behalf of the Islands Local Council, and another from Uriah Peckford, the man we all know well. I have not the slightest doubt that the Council sent this letter to the Advocate through the invitation of the redoubtable William, who is beginning to realize that he has seen the best of his days and that the people do not place the same confidence in him as they did a few years ago when he was looking for their money and offering them nice dividends which they thought they would always get.

To read these articles in the Advocate signed on behalf of the Council, one would first be inclined to believe that everything is running as usual, but, Mr. Editor, I have known things of this nature put through with only twenty members present, and out of say three hundred members, it is possible, under present conditions unfavourable to Mr. Coaker, that two hundred would be against it, leaving eighty more with money in the Trading Company who may or may not vote with the twenty present. We understand, Mr. Editor, that ordinary business, whatever is passed, allowing that there is only twenty members present the rest must abide by the decision of the Council, but when it comes to twenty men voicing the opinion of three hundred men and perhaps not a meeting called at all, and the chairman taking the responsibility upon himself, it is grossly unfair and in no way expresses the opinion of the members of that Council, and if they realize what has been done, they would demand from Walter, who is always a bit rash and hot-headed, an explanation of why they should be used in such a way when not consulted.

Things at Change Islands are not running anything too smoothly, and in view of that place being always recognized as one of the Coaker strongholds, Mr. Coaker is beginning to realize that he has fooled some of the people all of the time and have fooled most of the people some of the time; but the day is passed when he thinks he can fool all the people all of the time. Uncle Uriah apparently is trying to boost Mr. Coaker, too, of course Mr. Coaker has his money, and thinking it would be safer with him than buried in a can on Fox Head, he says some nice things about him.
 Uncle Uriah ends his message by saying that it is well that the twenty-five thousand fishermen is not living in the city, if so, his (Mr. Squires') tall would soon be cut; but, Mr. Editor, Uriah would cut the tail of every fisherman on Change Islands, if he thought that by doing so he would get an extra dollar, and every right thinking fisherman will agree with what I say. Uriah doesn't need me to tell him that Change Islands has not nor ever did have any great use for him, and he is one of those selfish Coakerites that want all and would grasp at the shadow of what he did have like the dog with the bone.

Thanking you for space,
 Yours truly,
 ONE WHO KNOWS THEM.

That Flag Incident.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In connection with the flag incident and the correspondence published by you on Thursday last, I beg to inform all concerned that in communicating to His Excellency the Governor I stated that I was writing as the Representative of the Supreme Grand Lodge of the Sons of England, and I desired it to be understood that the Subordinate Lodges in this City, or any member thereof had anything to do of say with my action in this particular case. I assume full responsibility. Under the Defence of the Realm Regulation 25C, published in the daily papers of May, 1917, the Sons of England Society were debarred from flying or using the White Ensign, which flag has been the official flag of the organization since 1895, and when the Regulation came into force the Sons of England, by order of the Supreme Grand Lodge, had to discontinue its use and adopt for the time being the St. George's Cross instead. I therefore, in the interest of the Supreme Grand Lodge, took the stand when reporting the matter to His Excellency that the rule should apply to the general public all round.

Thanking you for space, I remain,
 Mr. Editor,
 Yours truly,
 THEO. F. THOMPSON,
 D.D.S.P.
 St. John's, Nfld., June 14th, 1918.

 and wear smaller shoes. Use "Tiz" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel.
 Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" now at any druggist or department store.
 Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. A year's foot comfort

The Work of the Transport Officer.

The transport officer can never count on his work being finished. His day starts with a stroll round his lines, to see if anything of importance has happened during the night—if any man or animal is sick. He then finds out what the quartermaster's requirements are, and arranges for the proper number of limbers. The T. O.'s thoughts then turn towards his tub and his breakfast. These disposed of, he takes his parade at nine o'clock. After the parade, he sees defaulters in his hut.

Dodging the Shells.

A little later the veterinary officer comes round. Another inspection of animals follows. Perhaps there is an "evacuation" to a mobile veterinary section; perhaps there are remounts to draw. If the T. O. is a keen man, he goes to the remount camp himself, as even the best N. C. O. can get put off with what they choose to give him. This duty may take everything up to seven hours' riding.

Say it is his night for going up with the rations to the battalion. On returning to his lines, he sees his sergeant, to find out what limbers are required. He is told what time the rations must reach the dump—say eleven. The start is made at 7.30, for it is a bad road. The T. O. listens for shelling along this shell-pocked route. Away about a mile ahead he first hears, then sees, a 5.9 arriving suspiciously near the road he must traverse. Soon, looking keenly ahead

and listening for the shell whistles
 with all his might, the T. O. is timing arrivals, and in a few moments
 is able to assure himself that all he need fear is a salvo. The transport turns the last corner.
 "Halt!" shouts the T. O.
 The next shell screams along. There is a violent explosion some fifty yards
 to the left.

On the Qui Vive.

"Trot!" yells the T. O. And they do trot, for they know that they haven't much time to pass that target before the next little present comes along. They keep moving fast for about a furlong, hearing with great thankfulness the next shell burst well behind them.
 From there to the dump there is an uneventful crawl, but one is ever on the qui vive, for one never knows.
 Arrived at his dump, it is very necessary for the T. O. to keep alert.
 Some quartermaster-sergeants are a great nuisance at dumps if they get the chance. Speed is everything in clearing away from shelled dumps.

Cause of
 Early Old Age

The celebrated Dr. Michenhoff, an authority on early old age,
 says that it is "caused by poisons generated in the intestine."
 When your stomach digests food properly it is absorbed, without forming poisonous matter. Poisons bring on early old age and premature death. 15 to 30 drops of "Selge's Syrup" after meals makes your digestion sound.

and listening for the shell whistles
 with all his might, the T. O. is timing arrivals, and in a few moments
 is able to assure himself that all he
 need fear is a salvo. The transport
 turns the last corner.
 "Halt!" shouts the T. O.
 The next shell screams along. There
 to the left.

There is always a sense of relief
 when finally the transport corporal comes along to report all cleared.
 Then follow the orders "Stand by your horses!" "Prepare to mount!"
 "Mount!" and the final "Walk march"
 finds everyone almost cheerful.

When the Worst Happens.

Frequently an excess of cheerfulness is cut short by a blinding flash and a roar, and a shell drops right in among them. Then, if he is among the unhurt, the T. O. sends on all sound vehicles, men, and horses out of the danger zone, while he, with some picked men, remains behind.

Leaving dead animals, he strips off what he can of their harness. Badly wounded horses he shoots at once.
 Animals lightly wounded should be taken along. Perhaps he is working under pressure from further bombardment. No matter; he clears what he can, and then he and his little party clear off themselves.
 Perhaps he is back by 1 a.m.—
 perhaps hours later.—Answers.

The man who tries to sell you something "Just as good" when you ask for a standard article, is a fraud. He is cheating you and cheating himself. He is cheating himself, because he destroys confidence—the foundation of sound Business. He is cheating you—because he tries to rob you of the right to use your own Judgment. Imitations only disappoint.

Accidents Will Happen.

Yes, and you never know when. If they should and you got killed (some people have) would not a few thousand dollars greatly benefit your wife and little ones?

Or if you were badly hurt, and compelled to stay in bed, would you like to have 10, 20, or more dollars a week coming to you, to help pay the Doctor's bill and other expenses?

Well, you can!

Just send a card to

GEO. P. BARNES,

P. O. Box, 168, St. John's, or Phone 244
and he will tell you how. Costs nothing to know.
P.S.—Your wife, mother, daughter or sister insured while travelling without extra charge.

TORIC LENSES

ARE MORE BECOMING THAN FLAT LENSES.

The edges of Toric Lenses do not show as prominently as those of flat lenses. They fit in close to your eyes. You will find Torics much more becoming and useful. They give you a wider, clearer field vision. You should know about Toric Lenses. Let us explain them.
