The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER XXVIII.

So one autumn day Sir Basil strolled over to Rosewalk. He told Leah that he was going for a long ramble; but he did not ask her to accompany him. There was in his mind no direct thought that he was going somewhere clandestinely. He climbed the steep hill once more, and there before him lay the pretty town of Southwood. He saw how it seemed to wind up the hill, beginning at the foot with humble cottages, and ending with handsome villas as it approached the summit.

He saw near the brow of the hill a pretty green lane with tall hedgerows, and he decided that that must be Rosewalk. In the midst stood a small cottage, half buried in foliage. He did not know why his heart beat fast when he saw it. A sudden fit of timidity came over him. What if he should see the beautiful singer, or if from one of those flower-wreathed windows, he should hear her voice?

After walking so far his courage had failed him; he passed through the lane, and did not even look at the cottage he had come to see.

He felt ashamed of himself, and went back again—the lane was a long one. When he returned he found that an elderly man was standing watching the passage of a ship at sea. The scene was so beautiful that he was charmed with it—the blue waters, the white-sailed ship, the grassy hill, the

BABY BYRNE.

Has Never Caused One Disturbed Night.

27, York Street, Scarborough, Durham.

Dear Sir,
I am sending a photograph of my baby Alice, aged 12 months, who has had Virol since birth. Though very tiny at birth, and artificially fed since two weeks old, she has never required medical advice, nor given me one disturbed night. Her weight is now 22½ lbs., and she has nine teeth, which she has cut without trouble. She is a most lovable and happy baby, and I am very grateful for the great benefit she has derived from Virol.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) Mrs. M. BYRNE.

"You are plain spoken," said Martin Ray.
"I believe in truth and plain words," replied Sir Basil. "I have heard that you are out of health, and that of late you have not been fortunate. I hope it is not so."

"It is quite true," was the answer. Martin Ray was beginning to like this handsome, frank young man who was evidently interested in him. If any one had whispered to him that this was caused by the fact that he was Hettie's father, he would have scouted the idea. "My health and strength have failed me," he said; and there was a certain dignity in his pathos. "I am a dead lion; and every one knows that a live dog is better. Time was when my 'roar' struck the ears of hundreds—now it is not heard. I have outlived myself. I had great hopes once, great ambitions. I must have been mad when I dreamed that I should be the elected leader of a free people."

"All Englishmen are free," said Sir Basil.
"Ah," he cried, with sudden energy and fire, "but they have not the same freedom that I would have given them; I have been mad all my life, I believe; but I have had dreams of a grand nation, a grand people, free from taxes and national debt—free, and led by me. There have been times when I have seemed even to myself, by the splendor of my own dreams, more than human, more than man. Now my dreams, my pride, and my very life almost have come to an end."

"I cannot quite see the sense of your argument," said Sir Basil. "If a people are to be led, what does it matter whether they are led by a high-souled, generous king, by a noble woman like our queen, or by a man like yourself, whose rule would of necessity be inferior, because your education and learning must be inferior?"
"I will answer that question another time," replied Martin Ray, with a nod of dismissal. "Come and see me again. You have raised an old pain in my heart. Good-bye."

And without another word Sir Basil retraced his steps to Dene Abbey, thinking the whole way of the man he had just left.

THE STRANGER.

There's a stranger—Do you know him? Waiting for your son, to show him things perhaps he shouldn't see; There's a stranger who may be just as clean and good and true, Just as fond of him as you, But are you content to stay Just his father day by day, Trusting to some stranger's whim To be guide and friend to him?

There's a stranger always near Whispering stories in his ear. Maybe sharing in his play, Maybe leading him astray, Maybe to your own disgrace, Slipping slyly in your place; It is simply that he May a friendly tutor be, But can you be sure at night He will teach him what is right?

You are busy through the day And you have no time to play, But the stranger, good or bad, Seem to find each little lad, Seem to have the time to spend, Posing as a youngster's friend; Always there is one or more Waiting just outside your door For your boy to come and play, When you bid him go away.

Can you trust your son to him, To some stranger's passing whim are you sure that he will fare As he would if you were there? He is your boy, Will a stranger Be so quick to try from danger? Will he learn what's good to do As he would were he with you? Can you look him in the face While some stranger fills your place?

Dizzy Spells

Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, there is not enough lubricant produced by your system to keep the food waste soft. Doctors prescribe Nujol because its action is so close to this natural lubricant.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot grip. Try it today.

A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to show you how to end film. See below.

Five Quick Effects

When you brush teeth in this way

This new way of tooth brushing brings five desired effects. Some are immediate, all are quick. A ten-day test, which costs you nothing, will clearly show you what they mean to you.

Leading dentists everywhere advise this new-day method. Millions now employ it. You see the results in glistening teeth wherever people gather. Now let your own teeth show them.

You must fight film

Brushing does not save the teeth if you leave the film. That's why well-brushed teeth so often discolor and decay.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not end it, so very few people have escaped its damage.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So dental science has in later years sought ways to fight that film.

Scientific methods

Efficient methods have been found. Able authorities have proved them by many careful tests. The best dental opinion endorses them.

These methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And to let all know its benefits a 10-Day Tube is being sent to everyone who asks.

A 10-day test is free

Pepsodent quickly proves itself. The results are unique and conspicuous. And a book we send tells what each one means.

One ingredient is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. The saliva's alkalinity is multiplied also. That to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily adhere.

Pepsodent, twice daily, attacks the teeth's chief enemies.

Send the coupon for this 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

The results in ten days will amaze and delight you. Make this test now. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

THE ART OF CHEWING.

Your whole system depends for its health and strength on the stomach. The stomach, in turn, depends on the teeth. The very foundation of health is therefore laid at the first step in food conversion—the act of chewing. Food improperly chewed enters the stomach in a wrong condition, and it brings about a wrong fermentation which causes first, indigestion, then kindred ailments. The proper chewing of the food will prevent these things. Chew your food plentifully.

But I pass the churchyard wall and exclaim, "May it be long when those lads I lie. It must be rotten to be dead, and planted here outdoors, no more to paint the village red, or read the baseball scores." Yet I am but a gloomy wreck of what I used to be; I have nine boils upon my neck, a spavin on my knee. I've just recovered from the flu, which racked my weary frame; and I have aches in every thw, and I am, woe, and lame. And yonder sleepers have no ills that torture flesh and bones; they do not have to live on pills until the spirit grows. They're done with every kind of pain, and every throb is gone, and in the sunshine and the rain they slumber calmly on. Oh, every morning brings new grief to this sad life of mine, and all day long I sit and weep beneath my fig and

Our Local Peppys

HIS DIARY.
 May 1.—Up betimes and to the office. A fair day but cold. Meeting Mr. H. Anderson, that is here on a visit. I did shake him by the hand, and he calls me Mr. Peppy and compliments me on this, my journal, whereas I might be pleased, nor would have it otherwise. To the Board of Trade and Peppy tells me how the courier did go to Sir R. Bond yesterday, and would have him come to the city to address a public meeting. I hear a strange thing from Mr. L. Earle, being that a cow which he owns, did bring forth four calves on Saturday, and all of them dead. And this all the more amazing, seeing how it did not happen on the Model Farm with Government stock. The House in the afternoon, on the business of the tax on news sheets, which the Opposition protest against, and rightly so. To the Club, and play in a card tournament, with but fair success. So home and to bed.

Not Worth a Dollar.

(From the Northern Magazine.)
 A woman employee of a paper manufacturing company, tired of hearing men boast of their importance, dug up the fact that, according to scientific investigation, the ingredients of a man, plus water, are as follows:
 Fat enough for seven bars of soap. Iron enough for a medium sized nail. Sugar enough to fill a shaker. Lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop. Phosphorus enough to make twenty-two hundred match tips. Magnesium enough for a dose of magnesia. Potassium enough to explode a toy cannon. On several occasions during the past few years been washed into the Atlantic before they were ready to take to the water.
 In size, the grey seal is a very much larger and heavier animal than the common seal. The old bulls (as the male seals are termed) are very much bigger than the females, and a specimen weighing no less than 600 lb. has been shot. A large common seal, on the other hand, is not more than 100 lb. in weight.—Daily Mail.

Gunning Accident.

VICTIM IN HOSPITAL.
 As a result of a gunning accident, which occurred yesterday afternoon, Mr. Gus Chafe of Petty Harbor now lies at the General Hospital in a precarious condition. The young man, who is a son of Mr. A. Chafe, was out shooting with a couple of friends and in going through the woods stumbled, and the trigger caught in some undergrowth, with the result that the gun went off and the charge entered his left side near the hip. The unfortunate man suffered great pain, and his companions immediately hurried him to his home where a doctor was called, who ordered him to Hospital. He was driven to the city at 6 p.m. Last night, after the wound had been dressed, Mr. Chafe was resting easily. It is not thought that the accident will prove fatal.

CHILD RUN OVER.

A three year old girl named Meyers was run over on Water Street West yesterday afternoon by a horse, driven by a man named Brien. On being picked up the child was brought to Dr. Tall's surgery on Patrick's Street, where an examination disclosed that though suffering internally her injuries were not serious.

The Great Grey Seal.

Around the British coasts two species of seals have their home—namely, the common and great grey seal. The common seal is considerably the smaller of the two and is by far the commoner species. It is found in the sheltered bays and sea lochs; into the open ocean it rarely ventures far. The great seal on the other hand, is a lover of the heavy Atlantic rollers, and the surf that almost always breaks loudly and with immense power around the isolated skerries which lie off the western coasts of the British Isles. It is chiefly along the Atlantic that the great seal has its home; indeed, it is sometimes known as the grey Atlantic seal. Along the eastern coasts of Britain there is but a single breeding ground of the species.
 The grey seal is unique among British mammals in producing its young at the fall of the year. It is curious that it should bear its pups in October and November. The wild weather of the whole winter is often experienced about this time, and the seal pups lie about the rocks exposed to bitter winds, with no ray of sunshine to warm them for days on end.

The common seal, on the other hand, produces its young in May and June, at the finest season of the year. Whereas the young common seals are able to take to the water within a few hours of being born, the young grey seals for the first month of their lives remain high and dry above high-water. But often a gale of south-west wind brings in from the Atlantic such a heavy sea and high tide that the youngsters are swept from the rocks.

From a certain uninhabited and storm-swept isle where, with every autumn, numbers of grey seals assemble to breed, the youngsters have on several occasions during the past few years been washed into the Atlantic before they were ready to take to the water.

Assassination of the Shah of Persia.
 On May 2, 1920, the world was startled and shocked by the news that the Shah of Persia had been murdered. Some years previously he had expelled from the country a Persian named Jamal-ud-din, who had made a name for himself in Europe and elsewhere as a Mussulman preacher and reformer. One of this man's disciples, deeply impressed by his teaching and wrings, had determined to kill the Shah, and taking advantage of His Majesty's visit to a mosque near Teheran, he shot him through the heart, as he was about to kneel in prayer. Nasir-ud-din cried out "Al Khodai" (Oh God!) and fell forward dead. The Sadr Assem (Prime Minister)—Asghan Ali—who was with him, at once had the body carried to a closed carriage, and giving out that the Shah was only slightly wounded, drove back to the Palace at Teheran. From there he sent word to the British and Russian representatives who soon afterwards joined him; and with their help arrangements were made for the succession of the Heir Apparent—Musafer-ed-din—who, according to custom, was at Tabriz, as Governor of Azerbaijan. It was a critical moment, for there were at the capital several regiments of troops who had received no pay for years, and had lately shown a threatening spirit. One of the Shah's sons was Commander-in-Chief, but in the emergency he refused to take any action, and applied for protection to the British and Russian Legations. The Prime Minister, however, acted with spirit and promptitude. Money for the payment of the Persian troops was supplied by the British Banks, and distributed immediately; the Cossack Regiment under its Russian officers, was called out to patrol the town; and in the morning, when the news of the Shah's death became known, all was in order.

Making Air-Flying Easy.
 The day is apparently at hand when the navigation of an airplane will require no more skill and self-reliance than does the driving of a motor car. A flight has recently been made from London to Paris and back, during which, for two consecutive hours, the pilot was enabled to depend entirely upon an automatic mechanical control for everything but the actual direction by means of the steering wheel.
 More recently a French inventor has produced a mechanical pilot by means of which all control except the actual steering is done either automatically or by readily made adjustments. The device has attracted a great deal of attention in England, where elaborate tests are now being made at both government and private airdromes.
 The machine is so arranged that the pilot can retain personal control of the ailerons and elevator, as well as of the engine plant and rudder, as long as he likes, and also has the means, whenever he desires, to turn over to the automatic system the control of the ailerons alone—but not the elevator alone—and in addition he can cut out both automatic controls, and use indicators that are installed on the dashboard of the airplane cockpit as an index as regards horizontality.
 It is more than a means of relieving the pilot from fatigue, for, when flying through clouds or fog he used no longer fear that he is "banking" unintentionally, while for landing, the control can be set so that the machine will descend at a predetermined angle, thus removing one of the dangers of night flying.

The form of notice closely reproduces the warnings sent during the British occupation to prominent Unionists who, as supporters of the Government, were held responsible for acts of violence by Crown forces. These Unionists in many cases had their houses burned as reprisals.

Lame Ducks.

Mr. George Gosse is a very estimable gentleman, who represents the important district of Harbor Grace in the House of Assembly, having been elected thereto, with two other colleagues in November, 1919. In that district there is the enterprising town of Spaniard's Bay, which place, if we mistake not, is the birthplace of the Mr. Gosse referred to, and also the town which he honors with his presence as a resident and business man.

Amongst others, in the Spring of 1920, the firm of Messrs. G. and M. Gosse, of which Mr. George Gosse, M.H.A., for Harbor Grace, is senior partner, received a guarantee from the Government on account of Fishery Supplies, which amount on a fifty-fifty basis was to be given out in outfits to the fishermen of Spaniard's Bay and vicinity.

Ducks," who subsequently sold their fish to others under his very nose. The consequence was that when they did not pay him, he could not pay the Government. Perfectly correct. But did the firm of which Mr. Gosse is senior partner issue the full sum of his guarantee to none others but those he styles "Lame Ducks?" If so then he must certainly have been very kindly disposed toward the men to whom he applied that epithet in the House on Friday last, by giving them outfits for which he did not expect they would ever pay.

"The Chimes of Normandy."

OR THE BELLS OF CORNEVILLE. Color and action, costumes and setting, music and dance, singing, dialogue and acting, all completed the ensemble of Pianquettes' celebrated opera "The Chimes of Normandy" as presented by the pupils and ex-pupils of St. Patrick's Hall and Holy Cross Schools at the Casino Theatre last night under the direction of Professor Charles Hutton, before a capacity audience.

These men have no means of reply directly at the moment. The press can only afford them an opportunity indirectly. But there is the assurance that ere long the sturdy citizens of Spaniard's Bay will be in a position to prove to Mr. Gosse that his unwarranted statements, made under privilege, will be resented in the only manner in which he can be made feel the unworthiness of his expressions.

CONDITIONS IN POLAND.

Poland is in a terrible condition economically, said Mr. Sheffman. Production had not started to any extent and as Polish interests were still identical to Russia, there was no hope of assistance from that quarter. The Polish mark is worth about forty to the cent and it is almost impossible for the common people to live, although to the outside living is extremely cheap. The Polish Government appears to be well established, but there is always the danger of internal strife. Over 85 per cent of Polish imports come from Germany, practically the only country from which the Poles are allowed to buy. Mr. Sheffman left Poland three weeks ago and passed through Belgium on his way home. This country now shows few signs of the terrible devastation of the war. He arrived in St. John's on Saturday on S.S. Digby.

Clever Smuggling Schemes.

HOW VALUABLES ARE TAKEN ACROSS BORDERS.

KOVNO, LITHUANIA. (Associated Press)—A solid gold kettle, hanging from a stick over the shoulder of a ragged refugee who recently passed into Lithuania, has caused several customs inspectors to receive sharp reprimands from their superiors in Moscow. The kettle was dented and covered with tin and its owner was seemingly so impoverished that the inspectors allowed it to cross the border without bestowing more than a casual glance. Many clever schemes to smuggle valuables from Russia are revealed after their authors have themselves safe in Kovno. One traveller succeeded in passing the inspectors with diamonds and other precious stones valued at thousands of dollars concealed in sandwiches. When he reached here he threw the dried bread and meat which had screened his jewels to some hogs. A few hours later he discovered that one of his most valuable stones was missing. Ten hogs were killed before the diamond was recovered.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

DOES IT MEAN ANYTHING?

GENOA, May 2. Vice-Premier Barthou, head of the French Delegation at the Economic Conference left for Paris at 11.15 this morning for a conference with Premier Poincare and the Cabinet. He is expected back on Sunday or Monday morning. He conferred with Premier Lloyd George before leaving.

COMPULSED SURRENDER.

KENNEBEC, WEST MEATE, May 2. Regular troops, last night, surrounded a barracks here occupied by irregular forces, and forced their surrender under threat of immediate attack.

FREE STATES ASCERTAINING THEMSELVES.

GALWAY, May 2. All positions occupied by Republican forces here were seized last night by members of the regular army, representing the Free State Government. They met a little opposition. The principal barracks and Government offices were taken over without disturbance, the only opposition being at Renmore Barracks.

FRENCH PREMIER MAY ATTEND.

GENOA, May 2. Premier Poincare may come to Genoa for the closing sessions of the Economic Conference. The most important question to be talked over by M. Barthou and his chief, it is understood, is France's attitude of the Non-Intervention Pact proposed by Lloyd George. Numerous drafts of such a Pact are said to have been composed by various delegates and these drafts "have all been put in the pot and are being boiled together," as one English leader describes it.

DE VALERA OBJECTS.

DUBLIN, May 2. De Valera has issued a proclamation, declaring Collins' proposal for a plebiscite on the question of acceptance or rejection of the Treaty as one for the stone age machinery. De Valera objects to plebiscite or election, except for all-Ireland, also to existing voters register. He further declares the proposal is a breach of the Sinn Fein Convention agreement that not only the Treaty but the constitution in its final form should be put before the electorate.

MAURETANIA MAKES NEW RECORD.

SOUTHAMPTON, May 2. The Cunard Liner Mauretania, from New York, on April 25, steamed at the rate of twenty seven and a half knots per hour, during part of the voyage and established a new record. The old record was 27.4 knots set by the Mauretania in January 1911. The ship was converted from a coal to an oil burner last year.

NEEDED ACCOMMODATION.

DUBLIN, May 2. Irish Republican Army irregulars, last night, seized a large building in Westmoreland Street, occupied by the Port Authorities and the well known Kidare Club. The raiders smashed windows, which were then barricaded with furniture and sandbags. Rory O'Connor, head of the irregular forces, in an interview, said the building had not been seized for any specific object, but merely because he needed accommodation.

BRITISH WHEAT CROP.

WASHINGTON, May 2. A favorable outlook for the wheat crop in the British Empire, as a whole, is indicated in the latest United States Department of Agriculture reports on world crop prospects.

The Revenue officers have been on the watch some time and were aware that the vessel was at St. Pierre. The Daisy was despatched from here on Saturday morning to intercept the contraband craft. The following message concerning the capture was sent to Deputy Minister of Customs, LeMessurier from Inspector De: "Captured schr. Lettie B. Carey, of Cape Broyle, master, Daisy towed schooner into Ferryland. The goods taken consists of 57 kegs containing 500 gallons of rum, 100 cases liquor, 42 lbs. tobacco, one small case cigarettes and some loose bottles."

BOYS' WEEK INAUGURATED.

Boy's Week was officially inaugurated at today's luncheon of the Rotary Club. All members in the city were present and Mr. G. E. Hunt occupied the chair. Four short addresses were made on matters relating to Boy's Week. Rev. B. Power spoke on the Church, the Boy and his five minutes talk was brimful of interesting matter coupled with several excellent suggestions for the proper spiritual guidance of the youth of the city. Mr. R. R. Wood, B.A., principal of Bishop Field College, spoke on the School and the Boy. He dealt briefly with the education of the youth and surveyed educational conditions at present existing. Rotarian T. M. Michael, M.D., gave most excellent advice in his address on "Health and Safety," in which he showed the necessity for cleanliness and offered suggestions which the Boy's Work Committee might find means of enforcing in their campaign for the betterment of boy life in the city. Rotarian A. Mews, C.M.G., spoke on the Parents' Duty to the Boy. His address was followed with the greatest interest. The Chairman summarized the remarks of the various speakers and referred to the Boy's Week campaign which had really begun yesterday when Rotarians Burke, Horwood and Gardner had addressed the pupils of the Holy Cross and Christian Brother Schools. At the House.

NEWSPAPER TAX DISCUSSED—MINISTER OF POSTS BECOMES FACETIOUS.

The newspaper tax was discussed in the House yesterday afternoon and the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, who appeared to be in humorous vein, made some astounding statements. The member for Burin was severely criticized for his remarks on the fishery supplies question in the House on Friday. Questions were not productive of any interesting information.

AN UNWISE POLICY.

The Income Tax Resolutions were referred to a Select Committee. The Postal Resolutions were introduced.

Mr. Higgins said it was an unwise policy to tax individuals who sent newspapers to their friends. The revenue the tax would bring in did not warrant its imposition. The Minister had drawn an analogy between this and other countries. This was an unfair comparison. Abroad, every small town had its own newspaper or at least, a public news service which was really informative. Our news service was anything but ideal and the only purveyors of news to the outports were the St. John's papers. It was most unwise to prevent the sending of these papers. The tax would mean that they would cost the outport subscribers far more. If the Government, by means of this tax, debarred the sending of papers to the outports, they would be putting an undue hardship on the people. It meant depriving them of their only source of news of the outside world. One thing our people suffered from was consummate ignorance of outside affairs.

LIGHT IN SUBSTANCE.

Mr. Moore supported Mr. Higgins. The Governments of the past had always tried to get cheaper papers for the outports. The Minister would be well advised to consider the matter carefully. Their newspapers were the only comfort which the fishermen had when they came off the fishing grounds.

The Minister of Posts attempted a reply in the course of which the Advocate was mentioned and referred to as "being light in substance and heavy in weight."

Mr. Hallyard's chief contention was that his department could not afford to send newspapers through the post for nothing. The chief use for papers in the outports was for lighting fires, he said. This particularly applied to a certain section of the press.

Naturally this remark again brought the name of the Advocate into prominence.

Those who required newspapers, said the Minister, should be prepared to pay for them. He suggested that it would certainly be alright to tax papers to such an extent that the papers could not be sent out.

Mr. Higgins suggested that the Minister was referring to the Advocate.

The Minister's reply contained so many "butts" that it was reminiscent of the famous quotation from Shakespeare.

Mr. Higgins said that he had been amused to hear the Minister condemn his own bible.

Mr. Hallyard—"It is not mine."

Mr. Higgins said that was even worse. The Minister even repudiated it. The time was when the Advocate was such a doughty paper that the followers of the new Moses held strictly to its gospel.

SHOULD BE SUBSIDIZED.

Mr. MacDonnell was amazed at the prehistoric and antediluvian ideas of the Minister. He did not seem to want any such thing as the press, no criticism, no news, more than that he did not appear to want what the people to know anything. He did not think this was a matter over which Mr. Hallyard could afford to be facetious. If the people were not wanted to read the papers why should there be any necessity for a large vote for Education purposes. If the people were not intelligent enough to read, why have schools at all? Why send out letters, if they go to people who cannot read them. It would be much more advisable to "subsidize" newspapers instead of taxing them. To paraphrase a statement attributed to Mohammed, it appeared that the Minister thought there was no party but the F.P.U. and the Advocate was its prophet. Mr. MacDonnell declared that the public news service was frequently doctored and put out to give a wrong impression.

REPLIES TO CRITICISM.

Mr. Walsh referred to the remarks made by Mr. Cheeseman on Friday in connection with the District of Piacentia and St. Mary's and fishery supplies. He regretted he had not been present when the speech was made so that he could have replied to them. Piacentia and St. Mary's did not get the whole amount of the fishery supplies guaranteed, but other districts which wanted supplies did not have the courage to ask for them. With reference to Burin and supplies, Mr. Walsh said he had discovered that Hon. S. J. Foots had obtained $10,000 for the Marytown Trading Company. Apparently this was done without Mr. Cheeseman's knowledge. He said there were scores of fishermen in Piacentia owed money by Burin merchants. With reference to Kemp's banker, he said that Capt. Kemp had stopped at St. Lawrence on his way home from the States, and several men, in a deplorable condition, asked to be taken to the fishery. He took them aboard but found later that he could not get supplies. The condition of these men was so bad, said Mr. Walsh, that Kemp had to help them. The criminal interference by the Government with the trade, and their great extravagance was causing all the trouble at present. In conclusion, Mr. Walsh said if his district were ever attacked, he was always prepared to defend it.

Mr. Cheeseman said he had no intention of slandering any district. He merely wanted to place himself on record as being against the guaranteeing by the Government of fishery supplies.

Sir Michael Cashin referred to 400 men who had left Burin this spring to make a living outside. When had such a thing happened before? He also referred to the Burin firm which had asked for $500,000 to enable them to supply. Sir Michael closed his remarks with a reference to the many scandals for which the Government is responsible. Part of the resolutions were passed and one section was deferred. Supply was briefly discussed and the House then adjourned until to-day.

Wedding Bells.

PILOT—GAINFORT.

The wedding of Miss Anne Pilot, daughter of the late Canon Pilot, D. D., D.C.L.L., F.R.G.S., to Mr. B. H. Gainfort, of Georgetown, British Guiana, took place at C. of E. Cathedral on Saturday afternoon. The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, performed the ceremony, assisted by Canon Fevers. The bride, who was charmingly attired in a gown of pale grey, Canton crepe draped with silver lace and white fox fur and black picture hat, carrying a bouquet of white carnations and stocks, entered the church leaning upon the arm of Sir William Horwood, Chief Justice of Newfoundland. The Hon. R. Watson acted as best man. The bride-maid was Miss Vivian Whiteway, daughter of the late Sir W. V. Whiteway and Lady Whiteway, and cousin of the bride. Whist Master Gerald Winter and Miss Peggy Knowling adorned the offices of page and flower girl respectively. The organist of the Cathedral, Mr. F. J. King, played appropriate music before the service began, and at the close the Wedding March. When the register had been signed the bridal party were driven to "Riverview," the residence of Lady Whiteway, where a splendid reception, which included many friends, took place amidst universal congratulations. The health of the bride and groom was toasted by the Lord Bishop and that of Lady Whiteway by Sir William Horwood. Many messages of congratulations were received. The honeymoon will be spent at Donovans, from where the happy couple will leave for Canada and New York. They expect to arrive in Demerara in August.

A Wind Instrument.

A Dublin physician, attended by a number of medical students, was making the round of his ward, and stopped beside a bed whereon lay a man with a very prominent chest. The physician, having elicited from the sick man the fact that he was in the habit of playing a wind instrument, went on—"Yes, yes; all that puffing and straining is most prejudicial to the lungs, most prejudicial. What wind instrument used you to play?" he asked, addressing the patient. And to the huge delight of the students, the patient replied: "The concertina, sir."

AN EASIER WORLD FOR WOMEN.

Did you ever wander about an old burying ground? I mean a really old one where the stones date back to the 1600's and the lichens hide the letters and the hand of time has not yet got out the graves until their moulds have completely faded.

And the feeling of peace in such a place. I think one can get a sense of the unimportance of one's small troubles better than in almost any place. I have gone a mile to escape going to a modern cemetery with all its modern gravestones, and the suggestion of the fumes and trappings of death, and to walk a mile for the sake of an old burying ground. And then, too, I love the peace of the life of the old days as they get through those old stones.

For the Anthologist. I get a bit here and a bit there and a bit there and a bit there. Here is a stone to the memory of a beloved wife of the Rev. So-and-So, who died at the age of 17, according to the Rev. So-and-So's record. We find that he must have been born in the year 1700, and that the event occurred and that she died at the age of 17, and by referring to the headstone at the foot of the grave we find recorded the date of her death as 1717, which is a nutshell that gives us a clue. How often one reads similar records. To be sure, the death of a wife and mother at 17, is an unusual record, but over and over one finds the wife dying in youth while the husband lives to a comfortable old age, leaving another wife, perhaps a year or two later. In a small burying ground in which I browsed while on a little New England trip, I found two or three who died between 20 and 30, and a half dozen who died between Truly the world is a much easier place for women than it was in those days.

Conditions Reversed.

Indeed, I wonder if the student of the headstones of our age may not find the condition reversed. As I looked at the old headstones I saw another picture. I saw various Inns and Hotels at which I have stayed, where a large part of the clientele is made up of elderly women, mostly widows, portly, silk-clad and bediamonded, living evidently on the incomes their hard working husbands had laid up and had not themselves lived to enjoy.

I should like to get figures from an insurance agent as to whether the balance of greater longevity has not swung from the male to the female sex. My mother's father was a Methodist minister. He worked hard himself but his wives worked harder, and two of them died before he was 50, with the strain of moving every year or two years, being president of the Ladies' Aid, and helping with the Sunday School and the choir, and bringing up four children and sending one to college, all on a salary of $10 a week. I suppose histories similar to that lie behind many of those headstones to "Prudence, beloved wife of Lemuel, died at 77," or "Emily, loving wife of John, aged 41. She rests in Heaven" (and mighty glad too, doubtless).

A Message to News Carriers.

WORK THAT IS WORTH DOING IS WORTH DOING WELL.

From "Newspaperdom" of date April 13, we clip the following message to news carriers and news boys taken from the official programme of an annual celebration given by the Lowell (Mass.) Courier Citizen and Leader on March 25, at which banquet Hon. James B. Casey was the principal speaker. The message appeals not only to news carriers, but to all who are employed in that mighty work of the age, the publication and circulation of a modern newspaper. Here is the message:

"Any work which is worth doing at all is worth doing well. The reason for doing any work is that it serves some useful end--an end important enough to warrant the work being done and being paid for. Delivering newspapers is an exceedingly important work, upon the well doing of which the daily happiness of many thousand people depends. Also upon the fidelity and regularity with which this work is performed depends a large part of the success of these newspapers. You who daily carry our publications to the homes of their readers, are as vital in your way to the success of the business as are those of us who write and print the paper. We are all parts of a great machine, every part of which has got to work in efficient harmony with all the other parts if the maximum of good service is to be rendered. Your job of carrying newspapers has been done by a great many men--some of them later very well known and successful men--during their boyhood. For most of them it was the first paid job they ever had. You will find that those who made good later also made good in their first work on the route. They are proud to look back on it--and so will you be when the time comes. Good-luck to you all!"

And so say all of us.
Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Sire, I have used your Minard's Liniment for the past 25 years and whilst I have occasionally used other liniments I can safely say that I have never used any to equal yours. If rubbed between the hands and inhaled frequently, it will never fail to relieve cold in the head in 24 hours. It is also the best for bruises, sprains, etc.
Yours truly,
J. G. Leslie,
Dartmouth.

About Toast-Making.

SOME USEFUL HINTS.

Toast-making sounds such a simple process that it is usually thought even an inexperienced child can do it successfully. But, nevertheless, there is toast and toast, and well-made toast is not often encountered. Toast is often too thick--and underdone in the centre of the slice--or else too thin and brittle.

Often when the toast is left to be done by the cook it is made much too soon and has lost all its warmth and freshness by the time it is eaten. This, of course, is hardly the fault of the cook, who has many other things to attend to apart from toast-making. For this reason I always make the family toast myself by the gas-fire in the breakfast-room. There are also various electric toast-makers, which make excellent toast and may be used on the breakfast table.

The Secret of Success.

Toast to be perfect should be made from bread that is cut neither too thick nor too thin, and the whole secret of a successful result lies in slow toasting and quick eating after toasting.

During the toasting all moisture should be drawn from the bread, and this cannot be done if the slices are held close to the fire right away as this has the effect of browning the outside of the bread quickly and leaving the inner portion underdone and damp.

As soon as a slice of bread is toasted it should be immediately placed in the rack. Slices of dry toast should never be placed on top of one another. In the case of hot, buttered toast, however, the butter should be spread evenly over the toast to the entrance edges, and one slice should then be placed upon another and the whole cut into convenient fingers and arranged on a hot plate, which may be placed over a basin of boiling water.

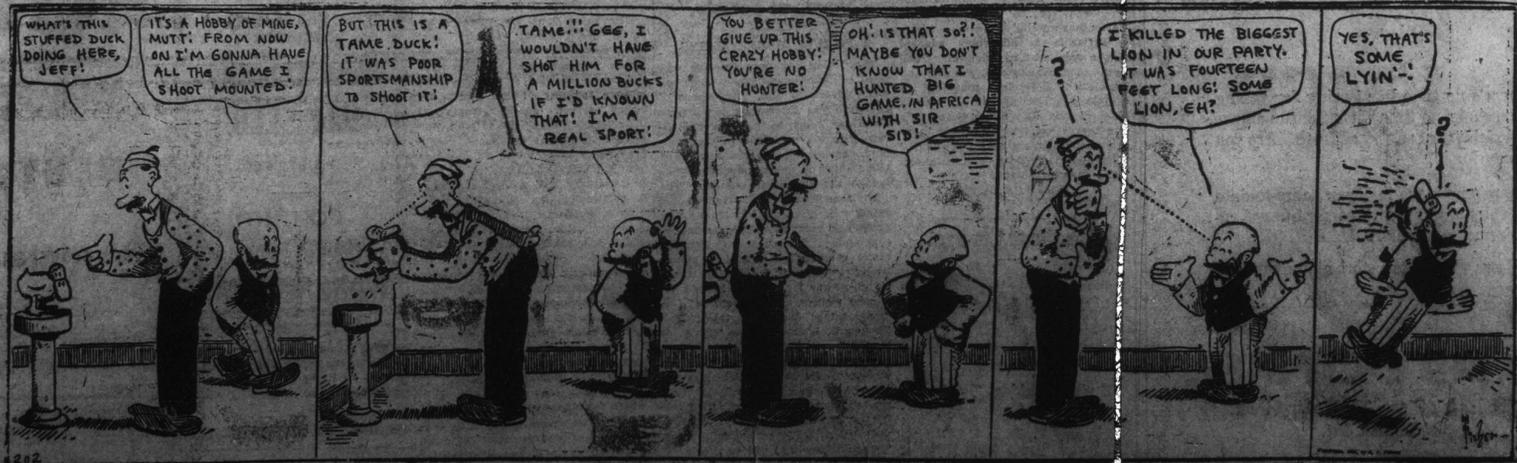

When dry toast is ordered for an invalid it is specially necessary for it to be free from all moisture contained in untoasted bread. Should the invalid not benefit from a toast diet, it is usually because the bread has been toasted much too quickly, and therefore retains a certain amount of moisture.

STILL KEEP COMPANY. "They kept company for a long time before they were married, didn't they?" "Yes; and they've kept company most of the time since. All her relations seem to live with them."

—By Bud Fisher.

Obituary.

MRS. ALFRED A. MARTIN.

Many friends will regret the passing hence of Mrs. Alfred A. Martin, yesterday afternoon, but rejoice, that after many months of suffering she has fallen asleep in Jesus, and gone to be with Him who said "because I live, ye shall live also." For a great many years the deceased lady was a teacher in the Sunday School, member of the choir, and actively interested in the various duties which the ladies of Wesley Church engage in, particularly the Women's Missionary Society of which for many years she was the Treasurer. The loss of her eldest son, Eric B. who fell with so many of our brave boys at Beaumont Hamel, greatly impaired her health, in fact she never rallied from that severe blow she so deeply grieved about him. She leaves to mourn the loss of a devoted and loving mother, Mrs. Peter Thompson, now of Montreal, Maine at home, and Walton employed at Reid Nfld. Co. Her husband who has to suffer an inestimable loss has been foreman of the Machinery Dept., Reid Nfld. Company for over thirty years. Funeral tomorrow, Wednesday, from "Cross Lea," Hamilton Avenue.

Turned Out the King of Sweden.

One Sunday a scholarly looking man plainly dressed, went into a church in Holland and took a seat near the pulpit. In a few minutes a lady approached the pew, and, seeing a stranger in it, curiously asked him to go out. He took one of the seats reserved for the poor and joined devoutly in the service. When the service was over one of the women's friends asked her if she knew whom she had ordered out of her seat. "No," she replied, "but it was only some pushing stranger, I suppose." "It was King Oscar of Sweden," replied the informant; "he is here visiting the queen. The only point was this: that the woman forgot to carry her 'company manners' to church.

REPAIRS DIFFICULT.—It is expected that the S. S. Oxonian will berth at the Furness Wharf pier tomorrow when a further survey of the damages done the ship will be made. "Cotton's Patch Located"

AT ST. JOSEPH'S HALL.

A very large audience attended the presentation of Mr. John Burke's Original Comedy, "Cotton's Patch" at St. Joseph's Hall last night. The play was a scream of laughter from start to finish. The dramatic elements were not wanting and an exciting climax concluded the first act. Mr. Burke's description of the course to be followed in locating the famous patch is a classic. Through devious ways, and in past the Lunatic, the course must be carefully followed until the patch is finally found according to instructions. Amongst the songs which infersprayed the comedy were "The scramble for the teapots at the L. S. P. U. Hall Fire," "The Girl from Grate's Cove," "Cotton's Patch," "We are all on the Water Wagon Now," and Mr. John Burke as Larry Shute was alone worth the price of admission, but when he combined with his own part the duties of promoter he brought down the house. Mr. Charles Wiseman as Jerry Houlahan, Mr. Will Myler as Major Cotton, "Annie Squires as Mrs. Houlahan, could not be improved upon. The other roles were also well sustained by Miss Josephine Squires (Sue Shute); Miss Lizzie Earles (Bella Shea); Miss Marshall (Emma Ingersoll); Mr. M. Murphy (a stowaway who sang a song descriptive of his trip to the ice); Mr. W. Dooley (Luke Flavin); Mr. John Malone (Jim Dillon), both did bit parts and whose roles were side-splitting. M. L. Morrissey, danced excellently. The work of Misses Annie and Josephine Squires and Misses Lizzie Earles and Marshall in choruses and dancing, was rewarded with loud applause. Mr. Green sang and Mr. Malone recited, both admirably. Mr. James Wilson did not sing but made a fine curtain speech which was well received. Mr. Carter's work was also favorably commented on. The show is being repeated to-night.

Tarvia Prevents Dust; Tarvia Preserves Roads.

In the United States and Canada Tarvia is the standard by which all other road-builders and preservatives are judged. Tarvia is made in three grades—"Tarvia X" for road construction, "Tarvia B" for preservation of road surface and "Tarvia K-P" for repairing roads. Both "Tarvia B" and "Tarvia K-P" have been used in St. John's Municipal works for several years. "Tarvia B" actually enters the road surface, acts as a cement and resists the tear and wear of traffic. By cementing together the dust particles "Tarvia B" prevents the formation of dust.

After the application of "Tarvia B" to a road surface a thin layer of sand should be applied to take care of the excess liquid and to prevent tracking. This layer of sand will prevent horses from slipping and Automobiles from skidding and will prolong the life of the road surface. Broken stone is not as satisfactory or as economical as sand for this purpose.

A road after being treated with "Tarvia B" does not become muddy in rainy weather, but sheds the water and dries off quickly after the rain, leaving the road in admirable condition while untreated roads are still deep with mud.

"Tarvia B" surfacing should be applied annually but only when roads are in good condition and free from surplus dust. All holes and depressions should be repaired with fine broken stone and "Tarvia K-P."

When "Tarvia B" is applied by mechanical sprinkler, care should be taken to have men with brooms and hand sprinklers go over the ground so that excess "Tarvia B" may be brushed out and not allowed to run waste and so that bare spots be treated and the entire road surface secured.

A loose, "happy-go-lucky" application is sheer waste of time and money, "whatever is worth doing, is worth doing well."

"Tarvia B" is admirably adapted to the treatment of sidewalks and walks in parks, hospital grounds and cemeteries. Wooden planking of bridges will last longer if treated with "Tarvia B." Fence posts, stils and houses etc., will be greatly benefited by treatment with "Tarvia B."

Further particulars will be gladly given upon application to COLIN CAMPBELL, LTD. may2, eod, f.

Commendation and Appreciation.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—As a reader of your paper I wish to thank you for publishing, and Mr. Ernest H. Small, of Lewisporte, for writing, a most sane and reasonable letter, having for its object the cultivation of public order and sanity. I wonder how many of your readers have read, marked and inwardly digested its contents. It is a pronouncement on present-day matters worthy of the highest authority, and if it emanated from the Genoa Conference could hardly be improved in its precise and sane diagnosis. It would be well if the letter were published in every paper ever day for a week, so that it might properly saturate the public mind. The fact that it was written by one who calls himself "a common labourer" makes it all the more impressive. Economic heresies have had their way too long. Even the dreamer Lentine has wakened from his dream and one of his last pronouncements is "Stop dreaming and theorizing and get to work." When the biggest dreamer of them all wakes up there will be hope for the world. Will you not publish Mr. Small's letter again, so that your readers may have another look at it?

Yours truly, R. F. HORWOOD.

May 2, 1922. (Expressing our thanks to Mr. Horwood on behalf of Mr. E. H. Small, and for ourselves, it gives us great pleasure to accede to the request, and the letter referred to is republished beneath.—Editor.)

A COMMON SENSE VIEW.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—Will you kindly publish in your much read paper a few remarks from a common labourer. Every day one hears the question, what makes the world like it is to-day. Some reply it was the war which upset everything and brought the dark clouds that now hang over us. We all admit the war had a lot to do with conditions, but it is my opinion that sin and laziness played the biggest part in bringing about the poverty and distress apparent. In order that a man should live he must work, and the reasons that so many concerns have gone broke is that many employees tried to get their wages without doing anything in return while the war was on and everything in great demand. Some got the idea into their heads that work was a thing of the past and that most that a man should do was to wait for pay. There are other things too that have brought the world to its present condition, and in order to get things back to normal, every man, woman and child must work. Farmers, Fishermen, Clerks, and all other classes must work full time and the higher the man's position the more he should use his brains. He should ask himself the question, will it pay, is there a more profitable way, is there a quicker method, or is there need of doing it at all? Before concluding I would wish to say, that every reasonable man wants to get money from the Government for nothing, as it not only takes away their independence but it also impoverishes the country. Building useless roads, as was done last year, brings no returns, but if instead men had been put to work clearing land, I think the majority would be satisfied. Anyone that wants to be successful should remember that work is the father of success; the mother, ambition, the eldest son, common sense, and some of the other boys are, perseverance, honesty, truthfulness, foresight, enthusiasm and co-operation. The oldest daughter is character, the other girls cheerfulness, loyalty, courtesy, care, harmony, and sincerity. The baby is opportunity. Get acquainted with the old man and you will be able to get along with the rest of the family.

Yours truly, ERNEST H. SMALL, Lewisporte, April 26, 1922.

"Shams of Society."

A PICTURE WORTH SEEING.

The Majestic picture Theatre was filled to capacity last night when the much advertised film, "The Shams of Society," was thrown on the screen. From beginning to end, the audience's attention was held to the gripping, dramatic scenes which followed one another in quick succession leading to the surprising climax. The plot is unusual. It deals with the young wife of a wealthy man who gives her everything she wants except money. The circle in which she mixes compels her to obtain money by borrowing and finally, by theft. To give away more would be to spoil a good picture. The director of this wonderful production is the famous Thomas B. Walsh, and the "Shams of Society," as his first independent photoplay, is indeed a creditable performance. Barbara Castleton, as the wife of "Herbert Porter," is most realistic and gives a splendid exhibition of her dramatic talent. She is well supported by Montagu Love, "Shams of Society" will be shown for the last time here to-night.

Ask Your DRUGGIST He Knows

If a medicine gives satisfaction he is the first to hear about it.

If it does not possess merit the customer does not come back for more, and the druggist finds his shelves loaded with an unprofitable investment.

No one is so well qualified to tell you which medicines are the good ones, as your druggist.

For over a quarter of a century Newfoundland Druggists have been selling Dr. Chase's Medicines.

Such expressions as "best sellers," "Many repeat orders from some people," "Reliable remedies," "Good Medicines" etc., indicate that the druggists have the greatest confidence in these medicines—a confidence built up on many years of experience, with doctors' prescriptions and proprietary medicines.

In almost every issue of this paper you will find further endorsement of Dr. Chase's Medicines from people who have used them with splendid satisfaction.

DR. CHASE'S MEDICINES. At all Druggists and Dealers. GERALD S. DOYLE St. John's, Agent for Nfld.

Mr. B. Stafford, Druggist, St. John's, Nfld., writes:

"We find Dr. Chase's Nerve Food our best seller, but the other medicines of Dr. Chase sell well too. We consider them a good standard line, and following our custom of always giving people what they want, we keep a good stock on hand."

Messrs. T. McMurdo & Co., Ltd., Druggists, St. John's, Nfld., writes:

"We have been handling Dr. Chase's Medicines for many years, and find them most satisfactory selling remedies, and are still going strong. We would say that since the appointment of the local agent, Mr. Gerald Doyle, it has been even a greater pleasure to handle Dr. Chase's Medicines, as we now receive them in more prompt time than when we had to order them from abroad, and we are in every way satisfied with the service Mr. Doyle gives us. We hope our pleasant relations with the Dr. Chase Medicine Company will long continue."

Mr. T. J. Morris, Druggist, St. John's, writes:

"When I began business for myself a few months ago, the first line of medicines I stocked was Dr. Chase's. I practically had no other but Chase's line the first few days I was open, and my sales were exceptionally good. In every Drug Store I worked in, I always noticed how quickly Dr. Chase's Medicines sold, so naturally, when I opened my own store the first line I stocked was Dr. Chase's. The Nerve Food is by far the biggest seller in my store, though the Linseed and Turpentine is also going well lately. Dr. Chase's Medicines give results to those using them."

Betty Donn Scores Decided Hit.

SINGS "KILLARNEY" AND "KERRY DANCE."

Miss Betty Donn, the versatile artist at the Crescent Theatre, last night scored the biggest hit for the season. Her renditions of "Killarney" and the "Kerry Dance" won the spontaneous applause of the great audience present. For her singing of "The Kerry Dance" Miss Donn was dressed in typical costume, which gave the number added value. Her beautiful voice was heard to its fullest advantage and received the highest commendation of her audience.

Will Rodgers, the well-known character actor, appeared in a new role in his latest picture, "The Gull of Women." The story is vital in motif and so nicely constructed that it provides entertainment that appeals to even the most critical movie enthusiast. Bright subtleties and capable direction assist in achieving harmony and effect. The supporting cast includes Bert Sprotte and Mary Warren, who play suitable roles.

Sir Ross Smith Met His Death.

On April 19th, Sir Ross Smith, a "Viking" amphibious plane, which he was to have attempted to fly round the world, was killed at Brooklands. The chief mechanic, Mr. Bennett, who had accompanied him on the flight, had been killed in a reception by the Vickers Ltd. Dept. of the Press. It was an opportunity of the machine and of wishing to the enterprise. Sir Ross explained his plans to a number of all of us who were immensely impressed by the details of his great man deserved success. It is surely the irony of fate that he should have been killed just as he seemed to promise greater success.

The "Viking" was on its first flight on the morning of April 19th, for half an hour or so, the flying perfectly. Sir Ross was up with Mr. Bennett as he was to make three or four flights with "Vikings" of the earlier type, which naturally were not so well equipped as the "Viking" on the day of his flying had been for the past four years. After flying for about a quarter of an hour, the district around the engine throttled down, and the machine got into a spin. An eye-witness says that he saw Sir Ross's engine with the idea of getting the engine under control, and then he saw again when near the engine, he seemed to be just on the verge of control when the engine stalled.

A possible explanation of the accident seems to be that in gliding down he slowed down too much, and the machine on a spin would be the natural result of the flying boat. The "Viking" the control engine off is not so good as the engine on, when the whole machine is in the air. Moreover, with the engine stalled, the engine tends to push the nose down, and the machine tends to be tail-sitting, and so make a drop necessary in which to control. Also, certain types of engine have a tendency to stall without preliminary warning.

laties of the type which cannot be avoided, and aeroplane designed on such lines--as they must be for certain definite purposes--have to be handled accordingly. It is natural that a pilot who is used to a big, lightly loaded machine should make mistakes at first on a type so entirely different. The tragedy is that so experienced a pilot as Sir Ross Smith should have made that one little error just when it was too late to recover from the consequences. Yet in the history of Aviation there are all too many similar tragedies caused by just such simple errors of judgment.

The death of Major McCudden and Sir John Alcock are only two cases in point among them. Personally Sir Ross Smith was a man who won the respect and affection of all who met him. He made a big name for himself as one of the two Handley-Page pilots who during General Allenby's last great attack in Palestine bombed Turkish Headquarters and so broke up the Turkish telegraph system that the Turks were unable to send orders in time to their forces on the West flank to hinder the great cavalry turning movement. Later on, after the Armistice he went with General Dorton to survey the route to Australia. His flight to Australia with his brother Keith Smith is a matter of history.

Personally the most striking characteristic about Ross Smith was his modesty. Few men with such achievements to their credit and with so many honours showered upon them would remain as he did, and as his brother does, so entirely unpossessed by fame and popularity. Such modesty is the mark of the truly great man to whom fame comes as a right and not by an accident that takes him by surprise. Had he lived he would have gone far. One who knew him well and had worked with him for many months, remarked only the day before his death that Ross Smith did not know what fear was but that he took no chances. That was the secret of all his successes. He prepared for everything, he foresaw all the risks he had to take and provided against them and when in a tight corner he kept his head. That such a man should be killed in a mere aeroplane accident makes the tragedy all the greater. Ross Smith and his friend Bennett deserve to rank with the great pioneers and the great martyrs of aviation. In them we have lost two of the best of the many good men whom Australia has produced for the glory of the British Empire. To Sir Keith Smith one offers all sympathy in the loss of his gallant brother and his faithful friend.

refugees across the frontier into Holland, smashing the high tension electric cable which the Germans had spread across the canal to bar the way. Zilliox was at Liege as a pilot of canals. His zeal for the French caused him to determine to cross over the frontier into Holland, taking with him a large contingent of Belgians. He was then in charge of the tugboat Anna and had a crew of three Germans under him. His boat lay near Vise, close to the Dutch frontier, but the canal was bound at the boundary by a barrier of high-tension cables.

Zilliox began by assembling his refugees, 42 in number, including two women, at midnight in a little cove near the quay. He had previously made his three Germans so drunk that they were sound asleep in the fore-cabin of the tug. The little caravan set out from the cove and crept stealthily down to the tug, led by several resolute young men armed with automatic pistols. The tug pushed off and Zilliox steered down the canal for the Dutch frontier.

Just then a hoarse exclamation of surprise was heard and heavy feet came tumbling up along the deck. It was one of the German crew who had awakened and was puzzled by this unexpected getting under way. Zilliox knocked him down instantly and muffled his cries with a coat. With a pistol to his head, the man was promised his life if he would be quiet till the tug reached Holland, and to avoid further trouble the other two were aroused and the same bargain dictated to them. Three of the refugees dressed themselves in the German uniforms and the journey continued, through the night.

And now ahead the restless search-lights of the German frontier appeared. The refugees lay flat on the deck with pistols ready. Zilliox signalled to his Belgian engineers "full steam ahead." The German sentries, believing the collision was an accident, came hurrying down to the bank. The broken cable had meanwhile wound itself round the tugboat's screw, and she drifted out of control.

The German searchlights were now concentrated on the tug. The vessel was stranded still in Belgian waters and thirty yards from safety of Dutch soil. Fortunately the tug had two boats left, and in these the Belgian refugees were gradually ferried across the stream. When all were at last landed on the Dutch side they danced and sang the Allied patriotic songs in full view of the Germans, who only realized too late that they had been looking on at one of the most daring escapes across the frontier.

son of the murdered Duke of Clarence, and it is commonly supposed he was coached for the part he played by a priest at the instigation of the Queen Dowager. Ireland was fixed upon as the scene of the commencement of the revolt, the Lord Deputy the Earl of Kildare--being one of its chief promoters; but the rebellion was a short-lived one. After the "coronation" the insurgents crossed to England and marched eastwards to York, but a decisive battle was fought at Stoke Bardolph near Newark, which resulted in the total defeat of the rebels, and as it was deemed inadvisable to condemn either Simon the priest, or Simeon the pretender to death, the former was imprisoned for life, and the latter contemptuously taken into the Royal service as a scullion. Deprived of his evil advisers Lambert settled down and was soon after his defeat, promoted to be a falconer.

Bibles Take a Long Voyage.

One thousand Bibles were sent fifteen thousand miles. This was the eighth edition in the Gilbert Islands language printed by the American Bible Society. They were sent to Sydney, Australia, and from there will be reshipped to Ocean Island.

Rev. Dr. Hiram Bingham, the famous missionary translator, gave his lifetime to the preparation of the Bible in the Gilbertese language. Great care was taken at the Bible House in New York to protect these Bibles from destruction by insects by working poison into the covers. Packages of twenty volumes were soldered up in tin boxes to guard against damage by water. The tin boxes were put into strong packing cases to protect them from rough handling. All this care is taken to get the Bible to a little island a mile and a half in diameter, which is five thousand miles south-west from San Francisco. The Bibles landed at Ocean Island will be sent or taken from there to other islands of the Gilbert group.

The reason Ocean Island is chosen for a distributing station is because of its great wealth of phosphite. This brings many steamers to the island, which can carry the Bibles to other islands.

Cremation Becoming Popular in England.

London. (A.P. Mail)--Cremation is increasing in Great Britain, according to figures given out at the annual meeting of the Cremation Society of England. For the first time in its history of over 80 years, the meeting was presided over by a woman, Mrs. Spencer Graves. Last year, 1921, cremations took place at the 14 crematoria in the country, that of Golden Green, in London, heading the list with 893. Among those cremated last year were judges, bishops, surgeons, peresses, members of parliament, journalists, artists, soldiers, sailors and eminent women social workers. The cremation of the late Duchess of Connaught by her specific instructions was an innovation in royal obsequies, but the reform has always had strong supporters among English nobility. The Duke of Bedford, son of one of the founders of the society, has erected a premissory for the sole use of his duple house. The present cost of cremation in England is roughly $30. Urns to hold the ashes are rarely used, the general practice being to scatter the ashes in the so-called "Gardens of Rest" adjoining the crematoria.

Farcial Coronation At Dublin.

A curious scene took place on May 2, 1487, when the son of a baker was crowned King of England, in Christ Church, Dublin, under the title of Edward VI, in the presence of the Lord Deputy of Ireland and several other nobles. It was Lambert Simnel who went through this farce, the unfortunate 12-4 famous historically as having been the puppet leader of one of the earlier revolts against Henry VII--reigning as Edward Plantagenet.
