Mr. H. H. HALLADAY (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, to my mind, this is one of the most important motions that has come before the House this year, because on the success or failure of our educational system depends the success or failure of ourselves as a nation. Education is to-day a matter of provincial jurisdiction, and rightly so. But to my mind the Government would be well advised to start a federal Department of Education for the purpose of bringing together the heads of the Departments of Education in the different provinces and formulating, if possible, some uniform plan. The curricula in the different provinces vary almost as much as the systems of education in some of the foregn countries. Pupils who move from one province to another find the systems so changed that they are sometimes put back two grades. If a Department of Education were established in Ottawa we could get these educational men together and bring about some uniformity in that regard. We could also correct a fault which is found in all provinces, and which I call the one-man system. Under our present educational system, every student who enters school and does not complete his course must struggle through the same routine as that which applies to the man who reaches the top. In fact, we are educating the graduate but not the multitudes who never become graduates. Of the thousands who enter our public schools, from fifty to seventy-five per cent never enter High School; of the thousands who enter High School very few pass on to the university, and of the thousands who enter university many never graduate. Our system is so set that the multitude must struggle along the same route which is followed by the man who completely finishes his educational course. If we had a Department of Education at Ottawa, with the proper man at the head of it, we could start a system throughout Canada which would tend to develop in the body who leaves public school an idea of what kind of work he ought to engage in. Not one in a thousand men finish their careers in the line of work upon which they first started out; they stumble along from year to year and from job to job, and sometimes they finally land in the job that the good Lord intended them for. I believe that we could establish a system under which we could develop in the boy who leaves school the tendency towards a particular line of work—his ability to saw to a line; to use a square; to weld a piece of iron; to use—in a simple way, perhaps—a surveyor's instrument; to keep books; and so on. In that way he has some idea or his parents have some idea of what work he is best fitted to do. Our girls, too, would know more about the work that God intended them to do.

Then, we have another difficulty which to my mind is worse than the one I have mentioned. Up to the age of six or seven years our children are told every day to go out and play; their whole education up to that time consists in what they get from play. But when they go to school they are put in a straight row of seats and if they attempt to move or to speak to their little companions on their right or left, they are immediately corrected. The strictness of our discipline takes the individuality from the child. It is true that we must have discipline, but in our method of enforcing discipline we are taking away the child's individuality. I believe that these little children could sit around the school room in moveable seats and their education carried on in such a way as not to do away with all the benefit they have received through their play in the days before they started going to school. The child must know what discipline is, but he must still have that freedom, that opportunity for his love of play, that individuality, which have been instilled into him up to the time when he first enters school. For these reasons I think that the Dominion Government would be well advised to exercise some supervision over our educational system through a Department of Education at Ottawa.

Mr. H. C. HOCKEN (Toronto West): Mr. Speaker, the House and the country are indebted to the member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) for bringing to our attention a question which is, to my mind, of very great importance. The motion deals with something which this Government should have taken up long ago. In the past the Governments of the day have been satisfied to bring people to Canada from Central Europe, set them in colonies, and leave them there. They have treated them about the same as we might treat imported horses or cattle which were brought here to perform agricultureal work and receive no further attention. The Governments of the past have failed to realize the necessity of Canadianizing these people, and on that account they deserve strong condemnation. But the leaders of these people who have been neglected by the Government have in their own colonies carried out a policy of segregating their followers from Canadian-born citizens for the purpose of exploiting them in elections and otherwise, and the result has been very serious to the foreign-born population of our country. I understand that throughout the Northwest to-day you can find large numbers of people who have been in Canada many years, yet who do not sufficiently understand the English language to carry on business. This segregation of the foreigner from the native-born citizen of Canada has enabled the foreigner's selfish leaders to develop prejudices that are very difficult to remove and which are often carried on to the second generation. Unless some steps are taken by this Government—steps that are beyond the reasonable responsibilities of Provincial Governments—this condition of affairs will not be improved with any rapidity, and the state of things which we find to-day will be perpetuated. So that the member for South Perth has made a distinct contribution to the work of the session by bringing this matter forward. Most of the provinces have done something, but the Federal authority has entirely neglected its responsibilities in this regard. The first really effective measures which have been adopted in any part of Canada for Canadianizing the foreign-born are to be credited to the Government of Manitoba, and the success that that Government has had in its new school legislation with respect to the Canadianizing of the foreigner warrants us in believing that similar measures adopted in other provinces with assistance from this Government in other directions would produce the quickest and most important results. What Manitoba has done is having its effect in the other provinces of western Canada, and it will not be very long before Saskatchewan and Alberta will follow the example of Manitoba, because force of public sentiment will compel them to do so. Already those provinces have gone a considerable distance in that direction, and the Governments of those provinces are showing their sense of responsibility. In the United States it has been recognized that the Americanizing of the people of foreign birth is a proper federal responsibility. That opinion rests on sound ground, and the Canadianizing of the foreigners of this country is likewise a federal responsibility. It is necessary and wise that the provinces should co-operate in this work. The authority they have in regard to schools places the provincial power in a very strong position ot assist in this work; but I do not think that this Government has done its share; it has certainly never taken any initiative in inaugurating and carrying through a broad policy in this direction.

The Canadianizing of the people of Canada is perhaps one of the most important thiugs that this Government has to do. It is fundamental in a new country like this that the people should understand our institutions; that they should learn our standards of living and understand something of the fabric of our society. This country to-day is in the making. If we allow those who have come to us to go on as we have been allowing them to drift in the past, without proper instruction as to our institutions or the character and duties of our citizenship, and if we add to them other hordes of foreigners who may come to this land in the years that are approaching, we shall have no ground whatever to anticipate that we shall have anything like a unified country in this Dominion. Unless those hundreds of thousands who have come in and those who may come in are Canadianized, we shall have in this country a serious situation, and with every year the problem will become more difficult of solution. Already this is a problem of very great magnitude in Canada. We have it in our large cities to a limited degree, but it is much more serious in the wide agricultural areas where the people are isolated and segregated into communities of their own race and speech. And every year that passes adds to the difficulty of a final solution of this question.

In may sections of Western Canada the electors of foreign birth are in control of local affairs; they exercise a great influence on provincial policies at the present time, and they form an important element in deciding the policies of the Dominion. It seems to me that it should be very plain to every man who has the power to think that the education and instruction of those people is one of the first and primary obligations of this Government. It is bad enough to have a big foreign population in a city, but there they have an environment that assists very materially in giving them information and instructing them in our principles of government. Their children go to public schools where they mix with children of British parentage; they are surrounded on every side by those who understand our institutions; they see the standards of living that have been set up, and little by little they are inevitably influenced thereby. But in those sections of the West where they are segregated into isolated colonies, they have none of this environment; they have extremely limited opportunities of studying Canadian ideals, and it is not surprising that they should be slow in acquiring anything like an adequate knowledge of the duties of Canadian citizenship. My judgment is that Federal aid should be given in generous measure for the purpose of instructing the adults of foreign nationalities who are in or who may come to this country, both in the language of the country and in the principles of citizenship of this country. This is a responsibility which rests primarily upon this Government and upon this Parliament. When this work is added to that done by the schools conducted by the provincial authorities, it would be possible to have every member of a household of foreign birth being instructed at the same time in those things that make good Canadian citizens. In my limited association with foreigners in our city and elsewhere I have found that they show profound appreciation of the kindness of those who take an interest in their welfare. They are most responsive to kindly treatment, and they are quick to take instruction when it is offered to them by those who, they have reason to believe, are not serving any selfish purpose. But, unfortunately, so little interest has been displayed by the Dominion Government and such scant consideration has been shown by society at large to the problem of bringing the foreign-born citizen up to the standard set for the native-born, that we have made very little progress in that direction. Progress has been made by the slow process of example; and while I admit that it is potent, something more than that is necessary in order that results may be achieved in a short period of time.

This response to kindly treatment is illustrated in a very special and remarkable way in Manitoba. The Manitoba Government under the Premiership of the Hon. T. C. Norris, has been able to convince the Galicians, Poles and other foreigners in that province that by insisting upon their children going to school, the Government is doing them a great kindness. It has taken a little while to convince them of that, but since the Act was passed three or four years ago the great majority of the Galicians and Poles and other foreigners in Manitoba have been brought to see that the measures enacted by the Provincial Government for the instruction of their children give them a better chance to compete in every walk of life, add to their prosperity and help to bring them up to the same level as the native-born in business and social intercourse. These people place a very high value upon this instruction, and the parents who are unable to converse in the language of the country take great pride in their children being able to do so. They have found that by taking their children who have learnt the language of the country with them when they go to market or to the store, they make very much better progress in their dealings, and they are naturally proud that their children can take their part in ordinary conversation wherever they may happen to be. This is a most gratifying feature of the Canadianizing efforts that have been put forward in the province of Manitoba, and it should encourage this Government to take this question under very careful advisement to determine just what steps can be taken by this Parliament to supplement what is being done by the provincial governments, particularly in the West, where the work has been done to the best advantage, and where it most needs to be done, because of the isolation in which many of these people live. The time has passed when this country can bring in Mennonites, Doukhobors, Galicians or any other class and after planting them down in a wide agricultural area, say to them: Now, we have no further interest in you. You cannot make a country in that way. The character of a country depends upon the character of its people, and if we leave these people to themselves we cannot expect to build up in Canada the kind of a country we are capable of building up by intelligent effort. I remember a time when even the British-born newcomer to Canada found himself isolated in this country, and in the city of Toronto we found it necessary to organize a league, which we called the British Welcome League. We had a building open to receive men and women of British birth the day they reached the city, and they found friends at once in the officers of the league who would advise them where to go, when to go, and what to do to get a start. That is what should be done with every man and woman of every family that comes to Canada, whether they be British or Galicians. It would start them off with the idea that they had come to a country where they were welcome. I hope that every man, woman and child who comes to Canada in the future will be welcomed in that way, and will be instructed as rapidly and as fully as possible in the requirements of good citizenship. We must, of course, insist upon obedience to the laws of this country, and that of course means that we must instruct the newcomers as to what the laws of the country are. We must teach them in the kindest and the most efficient way what they must do to perform their full duty beside the native-born citizens.

I agree with the mover of this resolution (Mr. Steele) that in the future we must deal with our new citizens very differently from what we have done in the past. I believe this is a matter of self-preservation. I believe it is also a plain duty that we owe to those who come here to make their homes in this country. We in Canada have the greatest opportunity that has ever been given to any people since history began. My vision of Canada is that at the end of this century she will be one of the greatest nations in the world, one of the most populous, most powerful, and most prosperous nations in the world. Canada enjoys the finest climate that can be found anywhere, and advantages of soil and climate and natural resources that make it possible for us to build up in this country the most virile race that can be found in any part of the globe. But those who come to us not understanding our institutions must be instructed and educated and inspired with the high ideal of service to this country as Canadian citizens, and it is the bounden duty of this Government to take the initiative in this work .

Mr. F. B. STACEY (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) deserves the congratulations of this House for bringing before us the subject matter of his resolution. I think that is due him because primarily his resolution has to do with the social and mental and moral life of citizens, and indirectly with their economic welfare. It requires no argument to-day, I am sure, to prove that men are worth a great deal more than money, that boys are infinitely more valuable than business, and that girls are to be considered before goods,—in a word, that people are of vastly more significance than either their possessions or their politics.

The resolution speaks of alien immigration, and the proper education of alien immigrants. The immigration question is not a new one, but, as has been pointed out, any education looking towards citizenship on the part of these people is practically a new thing so far as this and 5 p.m. other Parliaments of Canada are concerned. The war has taught us among other things that the quality and character of our citizenship has a great deal to do with the spirit that will be manifest when the nation is in danger—the spirit that is necessary for the perpetuation of our national life. In the closing years of the last century, and indeed until the war began, it would seem that the only consideration in immigration was the question of numbers; how many can we induce to come to the Dominion of Canada? I think to-day we are not emphasizing quantity; the tendency is rather to emphasize quality.

In order to understand the matter aright it seems to me that we should be agreed at any rate upon one thing, namely, the viewpoint from which this whole subject of immigration should be considered. In a word, what is the ultimate object in securing immigration to this country? What have we really in mind? What is the goal in view? In the last analysis we might agree that the national welfare is the fundamental consideration and that any policy that has to do with immigration should have in view not sectional welfare or local interest but the national welfare and prosperity. If that be so, and I think possibly we could agree upon that, our aim in the securing of immigration will become somewhat clearer. We will realize that it is not necessary to relieve the old nations of any surplus population which they may have. It may do that and from their standpoint they will certainly favour a policy which will relieve them of their surplus population. They would like to have their social problems solved but I claim it is not our business to undertake an immigration policy that necessarily solves the social problems of other nations which are the result of conditions attributable to their own management or mismanagement as the case may be. They must solve these problems themselves.

Our policy must not be on the other hand the result of any false philanthropic spirit. Sometimes the idea is advanced that this country should be a home for the vast numbers of sufferers in foreign lands, the vast numbers of people in foreign countries who are in want, in trouble and are suffering from social conditions which are of a very sad and serious character. That may be so but not because of that should we open our doors to foreign citizens. Why should we do so? I believe for the reason that has been, I suppose, the motive assigned in past days. We do so because we think we need them. We believe that we need these men. If so it would seem to follow that our policy should run along the line of restricting admission to those whom we do need and of prohibiting the admission of those whom we do not need. We need those who will make some contribution to the national life either from the economic, the mental, the moral or the social standpoint, and whose presence is a distinct advantage to the community and will conduce to the national welfare. I want to emphasize this idea because if we desire to have immigrants who will make a distinct contribution to the national life of this country it follows that we must reject those who are either physically, or mentally, or morally, or socially, unfit to make such a contribution. That has been, I believe, the recent policy adopted by the Government of Canada. In view of the fact that there are large numbers in our country who were admitted when this restrictive policy was not in operation but rather when the doors were wide open and who came to Canada in response to a sort of blanket invitation; in view of the fact that there are many of these men at the present time in this country, there arises the necessity for the consideration of the question that was presented to us this afternoon. There is need for some kind of education. Admission to this country does not necessarily mean—and I agree with the hon. member who presented that idea—enfranchisement. It may mean that; we trust it will mean that, but it should not necessarily follow that because a man comes to Canada he will become an enfranchised citizen of Canada. That should depend upon himself, upon his conduct, upon his giving evidence that he is qualified to assume the highest position a citizen can hold in this country—that of exercising the franchise.

Our past policy has not been free from criticism. We brought great numbers of people into certain portions of the country, they have been housed together, they have been segregated and the results have not been at all satisfactory. The practical results in certain portions of Canada have not conduced to the welfare of this great and growing nation. I believe it is true that we have not less than 100,000 illiterates in the three prairie provinces. In those three prairie provinces there are at least 75,000 children living in homes where the English or French language is never spoken. The war revealed to us the fact that there were large communities that were absolutely un-Canadianized, communities consisting of men and women who were living the identical life which they had lived in the old country and the life which we supposed they would leave behind but which, on the other hand, they have brought with them and which has been perpetuated for one generation, and perhaps in some cases two.

If it is true that some of our foreign element did not give us the co-operation that we expected during the war is it after all to be wondered at? Have we real ground for surprise? Whose fault is it? —largely our own fault for we took very little if any means to Canadianize the people who came to us from foreign countries. I believe that while we cannot undo the past it should hereafter be recognized as an essential of our immigration policy that certain basic principles must be accepted by every man who comes to this country. First I would give him to understand that he must accept the fact of a Canadian school system; that while he may not be able to speak English or French himself his family must attend such a public school in the community and learn to speak either one of the official languages of the nation. There must be no exemption from the public school of the country being established in his community and each of the members of his family of school age must take their place in it.

Then again there are certain fundamental laws of this country which we must recognize, and I mean by this, Sir, that there should not be a too narrow interpretation put upon this idea of Canadian citizenship. We are not to take the position that we are the only people in the world and that wisdom will die with us, but that on the other hand, there is a certain ideal of life in Canada—the result partially of our traditional training and partly the result of our experience—which influences us to such an extent that we believe that certain things are essential to the well being of this Dominion and that those who come here must not simply live among us but become part of ourselves—in other words become Canadian people and not simply inhabitants of the country.

Mr. Speaker, what is our conception of a Canadian citizen? I believe that a Canadian citizen is a man who is willing first to live for his country and secondly, if necessary, to die for his country. These two ideas are capable of development and elaboration but I shall not attempt the task at this time. I simply mention these two points to show what a field is open in the way of proper and necessary Canadianization on the part of those who come to us. Now this Canadianization involves education. It necessitates a broad kind of education which need not be undertaken solely by this Government but, as has been pointed out, may be carried out in co-operation with the municipal and provincial governments and other organizations which are seeking to help in this laudable purpose. The result of the experience and of the labours of certain social, moral and religious organizations teaches us that the foreigner is not necessarily opposed to our system. He does not know it, he has not been taught it, and he was never given to understand that he would really have to assimilate himself to the Canadian people. Some efforts, along this line, have been made. After all, Sir, I believe that the fundamental principle, the underlying and perhaps that basic solution, is to be found in the public school system of this Dominion; and there is a great deal of truth in the remarks made by the hon. member (Mr. Steele) this afternoon regarding the necessity of some Federal department of education which need not necessarily infringe upon the rights of the provinces but will give the Dominion the opportunity to make some contribution toward the Canadianization of the citizens of our provinces. I do not think, Sir, that the Canadian people as a whole take seriously as yet the question of the importance and possibilities of its public school system. Quite recently in a local daily newspaper there appeared three Want advertisements. One of them was to the effect that an icecream maker was required at a salary of $2,000 per annum. A second was to the effect that a barber was needed at a salary of $1,500; and the third intimated that a school teacher was required, holding a second-class certificate, at a salary of $950 per year. Now, Sir, if that is any indication of the relative values of occupations of men and women in this country it is certainly a sure index that we need to take more seriously than we have yet done the supreme importance of fundamental education and the value of services rendered in our public school system. Much of the trouble that has come to us in the West has been owing to the fact that there is often a misinterpretation there of the statement that Canada is a free country. Now we in this House may understand that term. We may think we know what a free country means, and doubtless we do, but it does not mean to many of the foreigners what it means to Canadians. Some of them think this is a country where they can come and talk, and generally speaking act as they please. Our conception of freedom does not permit of any such license. We believe that this is a free country, inasmuch as every man and every woman in it is morally bound to develop to the very utmost all the possibilities with which God has endowed him or her, in order that they may make their highest and best contribution to the State as well as to the family which they may have. But when men come to this country with the idea that because this is a free country they can do absolutely as they please, they are distorting the meaning of the word freedom and such a conception of Canadian citizenship, I am sure, will not be tolerated by the people of the Dominion any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Now, Sir, let me discuss for a moment the question of the alien in my own province and I do not wish to do so at any length. If we may base this consideration upon the proposition which I laid down at the beginning—the Canadianization of the immigrant, his contribution to the national welfare, and the necessity of his becoming a part and parcel of our Canadian life, then, Sir, I fear and believe there has to be taken into very serious consideration the question of further permitting of the immigration of the Oriental. I do not forget such contribution as Orientals may have made to the life of our country. I am well aware that they have performed that type of work which is required from those who do manual labour only. But if you enlarge that question and consider the future place of the Oriental in the province of British Columbia you are beset with very grave difficulties and very serious problems. In considering this question we must remove it from the realm of sentiment and place it upon a big, broad, and national basis. As I see it, Sir, the question in the last analysis amounts to this: Is British Columbia to be maintained for a white Canadian citizenship, or is it to be held in reserve for an Oriental population? if the former is conceded then the influx of Orientals must be restricted; and another great question in that province to-day, coming to us from all kinds of organizations, is along the line "Shall we any longer permit land to be held in fee by the Oriental or shall he even be allowed to lease it?" I recognize the fact that the settlement of this question may involve somewhat serious international complications. Probably it does, but so far as our province is concerned the question is one which must be faced, and faced bravely and fearlessly, in the very immediate future, so that we in the far West may be able to make some provincial contribution to the Canadianization of our entire citizenship. At present there is no prospect whatever of our being able to do that if any large immigration on the part of settlers and residents from the Orient is permitted. Again I wish to say that I am exceedingly glad that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Steele) has introduced this resolution which has primarily to do with the social, moral, and mental life of our coming citizenship, and I congratulate him upon his course.

Mr. JOHN W. EDWARDS (Frontenac): I do not intend to occupy more than a few minutes this afternoon, Mr. Speaker. I merely rise to add my commendation to that which has been already tendered to the member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) for his most interesting and instructive speech, and to say that I place myself in accord with his resolution. I shall refrain from making any extended remarks, for the reason that I have a motion on the order paper which I hope to bring up after the Easter recess, and which necessarily follows to some extent along the lines of the argument which has been advanced this afternoon. However, I did not want any hon. member to understand that I was withdrawing my motion, because it seems to me it is somewhat different from that now before the House in proposing means to bring about the same ends which my hon. friend has in view. I shall therefore wait until that occasion to place before the House some arguments in favour of a Federal Bureau of Education, which I think is essential in the interests of the country.

[Mr. Stacey.]

Mr. JOHN H. BURNHAM (West Peterborough): Mr. Speaker, this is probably the most important question that could be brought before the House of what one might call "indirect nationality." I regret very much indeed, Sir, that the Opposition seems to take no interest in this important question.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh yes, we do.

Mr. BURNHAM: The afternoon has worn itself away and the discussion seems to be drawing to a close, yet none of the oracles of wisdom on the other side of the House have ventured on this important question to make a remark which would be of the least benefit to the country at large. We expected something from them; perhaps we expected too much. They stand excused if they have not any ideas, but I did give them credit for having at least one idea on this important subject.

But what am I to say about the Farmers' Party? They seem to be absolutely oblivious of the whole matter. They represent primarily the West, but they have not even awakened to the fact that there is discussion proceeding on this subject. This is, to my mind, the saddest feature of all, and it shows that education in this country above all things must begin at home. Let us begin here in this House and educate hon. members who sit opposite us up to the high possibilties of their station.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. BURNHAM: If we do not place before our aliens the civilization which we wish them to adopt when we invite them to this country, then we have merely transplanted from the anarchy of Eastern Europe anarchists to repeat the same anarchy in this country. And we have had some fair samples of it. We do not wish to bring from the countries of Europe Russians, Ukrainians, Poles, Esthonians, Lithuanians, Galicians, Czecho-Slavaks, Hungarians, Germans, Austrians—I might name a number of others—and after placing them in a sort of hodgepodge in a seething cauldron as it were, expect them to settle down and be nice, good citizens. We do not show very much intelligence in permitting existing conditions in this respect.

Perhaps when we appreciate the fact that the Federal authorities really have no jurisdiction over education, that any proposition to that end is futile while the provinces control education, we may adopt different methods. For example, we might construct some sort of microcosm, so to speak, at Quebec or at some other port on the Atlantic and along the shores of the St. Lawrence, and also at Vancouver on the Pacific, so that when these people come to Canada they may see in small what it is they have got ahead of them, and what is expected of them.

I would show them the genius and the spirit of the institutions of this country. First of all, I would take the House of Commons, and I would have the hon. members or their representatives show these people what the House is like, how it conducts itself, how hon. members accuse each other of being the greatest blackguards in the world! That would be the first illustration to show the foreigner that he is in a country in which one-half of the people believes the other half is the worst in the world! Having accomplished that, we might show to him our religions, we might show him that he may have any kind he likes—"you pays your money and you takes your choice";—but you pays your money anyhow.

Now, it must be remembered that the foreigner comes to this country relying upon British institutions. He has heard about the wonders of the West, he expects great things, and he finds that, after all, every thing is in an inextricable mess. He finds that the people of the country are fighting like cat and dog—nothing more and nothing less. He hears advice given to him to be good and let who will be clever, and to comport himself as becomes a great and noble citizen like ourselves—who are not. These contradictions no doubt impress him as they would impress anybody who for one moment pondered them and exercised his common sense.

If we show the strength of a good example and the belief in our own destiny that we ought to show, we would very soon impress the foreign element. But what is bothering them most and injuring them most in Ontario at any rate is a laxity of the enforcement of the laws and a disposition on the part of some of our people to take away the liberties of their fellow citizens, utterly regardless of the fundamental principles of liberty and simply because they think they ought to have their own way. In them rises and falls the moral law —and I agree that it certainly falls.

The way all these things are set before them furnishes the mainspring of the fact that it is very difficult to hold these foreigners to their contracts. The greatest curse of Ontario to-day is that in commercial affairs the great bulk of the foreigners pay no attention whatever to their engagements in matter of employment. They are engaged, furnished with money, utensils and implements, but because there is no means of punishing them or bringing them to a sense of their duty, they walk off with these utensils and implements and equipment, engage themselves to someone else, get a fresh advance of pay, and then walk off again. In a word, they become like gypsies wandering over the face of the land. It is well known, Sir, that a great portion of Northern Ontario is in a very serious state from this failure on the part of foreigners to appreciate the solemnity of a contract, and whatever the blame upon the foreign-born may be, the blame upon the Canadian citizen, upon the provincial Governments and also upon the Federal Government is quite plain. First of all, we have not shown them anything like a reasonable example. Having brought them here, we should as one gentleman said, at least tell them what the laws are; and having told them what the laws are, give them to understand that those laws must be obeyed. You cannot expect that this country will become better—it must become worse—if we do not improve ourselves and our method of dealing with these people. It is a most serious thing to contemplate if the prophecy of the mover of the resolution is correct that we may become a nation of twenty or thirty millions by 1940. If we do, largely from immigration, this country will be a seething hot-bed of anarchy, and it will not be worth living in for any civilized Christian if things are allowed to drift as they are drifting at present. We must surely bring ourselves to some great comprehensive understanding of the question. First of all, having established a basis of liberty, we must pay some attention to it, and having invited these people to Canada and having required certain things of them, let us instruct them what to do and make them obey. If we do that we can possibly realize a condition in the future which ought to be realized; otherwise we shall only drift on as we are doing at present.

Mr. J. A. MAHARG (Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Burnham) expresses great surprise that the members from the West who have a particular interest in this matter have not seen fit to take any part in the discussion. Well, though we were not taking any part in the discussion we were indeed much interested in what was going on. Hon. members must have noticed the attitude of gentlemen on the other side in regard to this particular question. We have not in the past heard very much from the hon.

gentlemen by way of suggestion or assistance to the foreigner in Western Canada. Only a few months ago a plea which I made for a little more toleration toward the foreign element in the West was immediately followed by a remark which was thrown across the floor of the House,—I am not going to repeat the words; but they were such that you, Mr. Speaker, asked the hon. gentleman who uttered them to withdraw them. It has hardly been safe for a member on this side of the House to show any inclination to express even a slight measure of appreciation of the foreigner; if he did so he would be treading on very dangerous ground. Only a few days ago the word "traitor" was hurled across this floor because an hon. member had asked for a little sympathy and tolerance in respect to the foreigner when the matter of the franchise was under discussion. Now, we who come from the West are glad indeed to see the interest that is being taken in these people by members on the other side. I too wish to commend the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) for introducing this question. I only wish that it had been introduced three or four Parliaments ago; if it had, things might have been very different. However, better late than never.

Now, I want to mention one or two things in connection with the foreign element in Western Canada. It seems to have been the opinion in this House, as expressed on former occasions when the matter was discussed, that these people are very undesirable citizens; that they are not the class of people who would build up our country along proper lines. Well, I have lived very closely in touch with these people ever since I first came to Western Canada. I have had probably as much to do with them through our large farmers' organizations as any one else, and I know that it is the exception, not the rule, to find among them those who are not desirous of becoming good Canadian citizens. We have just as good and loyal citizens in Western Canada among those who have come from alien enemy countries—not alien countries, but alien enemy countries— as can be found anywhere. They have conducted themselves just as well as, in some cases a little better than, many who could not under any construction be termed aliens, but who have come from other lands. If we but treat these people fairly and squarely, we do not need to worry, but if we treat them with suspicion we shall not get the best out of them. To treat them with suspicion seems to be the only thought in the minds of a great many people, and this they resent very much. They are not simple-minded people, as seems to be the opinion of many. They have a conscience; they have, just as we all have, a spirit which is susceptible of being wounded by slight or what might be termed insult. In that respect their spirit is just like the spirit of good Canadians. Now, we have to treat these people on terms of equality with other Canadian citizens. There may have been a time when it was necessary to adopt some restrictive measures. Please note, Mr. Speaker, that I say "there may have been" a time; I do not say that there actually was. Our experience in Western Canada would not lead us to the conclusion that such measures were absolutely necessary. But if there ever were such a time, it has passed and if we are to get the best out of these people we must treat them with generosity, sympathy and tolerance. True, they are not familiar with our ideals—that is, as we express them—but not by any stretch of imagination could I say that they are lacking in ideals. These people have just as high ideals along certain lines that are fundamental to good citizenship as the people of any other race. We have seen that demonstrated more than once in Western Canada. They are not to blame if they have fallen by the way. Nor is the trouble all on the prairies; it has been accentuated in our cities. Let me give you an illustration by citing the experience of a gentleman known as a social worker of the best standing in one of our largest cities. During an election a foreigner came forward to register his vote. Of course, they told him that he was not a Canadian. "Oh yes," he said; "me good Canadian." "Oh no, you are not a Canadian;" and they undertook to explain to him why he was not a Canadian. Then the foreigner replied "me good Canadian—me smoke; me drink; me swear; me good Canadian." Now, that was his conception of a good Canadian, that was the ideal that had been held up before that man in one of our large cities. They do not get that out on the prairies, by any means; that is not the education they get from us. A few years ago, speaking before the Presbyterian Synod assembled in Toronto, a gentleman of high standing, one who had charge of religious work in Western Canada for many years, said from the platform that the farmers' organization in Saskatchewan was doing more to socialize and assimilate the foreigner into the community than was the Church of the Living God. All we ask is that we be given an opportunity to say conscientiously to those people: We are going to give you a square deal. That is what they are looking for, and they resent it just as much as any one else when they think they are not getting a square deal. From now on let us forget the trouble we have had and let us give them a square deal. Let us not treat these people with a spirit of suspicion; let us not give them to understand that it is going to take them ten or twelve years before they can become full-fledged citizens and able to enjoy all the privileges of citizenship. The desire is expressed that those people should be assimilated with our own; but hon. gentlemen opposite are retarding assimilation just as much as they possibly can when on the statute book of our country we say to the people with whom we would like them to assimilate: These people are not your equal; we are not going to take any chances with them for at least ten years from the time they enter this country. There is not much encouragement for a policy of assimilation if that is the attitude we are going to take.

It was not my intention to take up any of the time of the House; but I just wanted to let the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Burnham)—I think this is the second time he has given us the idea that he or they should instruct us as to what subject we from the West can speak on—know that we are probably quite able to decide amongst ourselves just what questions we wish to speak on and what questions we do not. We may also be credited with a little political sagacity, as I believe the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) gave us credit for in this House the other night. We may possibly be allowed at least to act on our own dictates in the matter of what subjects we wish to speak on and what we do not. Apart from all this, it is not always a lot of talk that counts; people can talk a whole lot and say very little at times, and we do not want to be accused of talking too much, in case somebody might say that we had talked a whole lot but said very little. We are working our way along; we are not a very large group; but there is a long time ahead yet; there is a large future before this country of ours; and, as the hon. gentleman said, inside of twenty years we might have a population of twenty million in Canada, so that it is not necessary to attempt to revolutionize and to force your ideals all at once. It is better to attain one's ends by a process of evolution rather than by revolution.

A six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. H. P. WHIDDEN (Brandon): Mr. Speaker, in rising to continue the discussion of the resolution moved by the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) I desire to express my appreciation of its importance, and to give expression at the same time to two or three ideas that have been in my mind for a number of months. In the first place, while the problem of immigration is closely related to the resolution submitted to us, it is hardly contained in that resolution. It would seem that this resolution is an attempt to get at the problem of assimilation. It deals more particularly with the foreigners we already have in this country. With that in mind, is it not well for us to recognize the fact that we have a considerable body of foreign-born people in this country, and that these people may become a great liability, or a great asset? Much depends upon how we treat them, what we do with them, what we make it possible and necessary for them to do with themselves. I do not believe that we can Canadianize a million and a half of foreign-born people by mere mechanical processes. If they are to live with us, we want to make it possible for them to become part of us. If we do not want them to live with us, the sooner we get rid of them the better. While, personally, I have fairly strong convictions with regard to the need of a rather severe immigration policy, and while I am satisfied we should see to it that naturalization laws of a strict character are put into force, I am inclined to think that with regard to the better type of foreigner living in Canada we cannot coerce him into the possession of the Canadian spirit. We can show him with all seriousness, and in a very definite and positive way, what the laws of the land are; we can explain to him the difference between our institutions and the institutions that he was glad to escape from on the other side of the Atlantic; but with it all, I am inclined to believe, we must in some way or other, as a nation, as communities, and as individuals, endeavour to make use of a broader and a deeper socializing process than can be contained merely in legislation. All the legislation that we have in connection with the admission of foreign-born peoples I think I believe in, but now, what are we to do with those who are here? Has not the Federal Government some responsibilities in connection with the problem of initiating the foreign-born people into real Canadian citizenship? They brought these people to Canada. Surely this is more than a provincial problem. The fixed educational institutions of our country are provincial, that is, those that we call educational institutions; but I am inclined to think that the educational process is a much greater one than is usually considered to be linked up with, and the purpose of, the so-called public school. I believe, as every member of this House doubtless believes, that at the centre of the Canadianizing process for the foreigner there will always be the public schools; but there are other influences at work, and there should be still other influences, operating to the end that these men and women who have come to our shores may come to understand what Canada is, and what it is to become a Canadian. The hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Hocken) urged, all too briefly I think, the importance of the education of the adult alien. Merely giving attention to the training of the child in the school will never enable us to overtake the problem that is on our hands. There are the grown-up boy and the grown-up girl, who will never go to school again and who have never gone to school in this country. There are the impressionable young man and young woman and there are perhaps a very few of the older foreigners who are susceptible to instruction along the lines that will make possible their understanding of the simple fundamentals of Canadian history, Canadian institutions, Canadian customs, Canadian laws and Canadian community life at its best. The details of any such programme certainly are not for us to consider here to-night, but I am yet to be convinced that it is impossible to help, especially in the cities, a larger number of the grown-ups by evening classes, and by the use of moving pictures of the kind that will make them understand. I have been informed on good authority that in our greatest city, the city of Montreal, out of a total foreign-born population of 105,000, only 6,000 are reached through social educational classes at the present time. Is it not possible also to reach the grown-up foreigner in rural Canada? The mothers are being reached in many western communities through instructors who go out at the direction of the Health Departments of the provinces. Mothers' clubs and similar groups have been organized with splendid results. But this does not of necessity make for Canadian citizenship. It appeals to the mother, let us say; the teaching she gets makes it possible for her to conduct in a more modern way the little new home, so that there will be fewer deaths of young children in that home. But is there not possible this larger recognition of the opportunity—yes, of the necessity—that lies right at our hand at the present time of telling these people in such a way that they cannot mistake what it means to live in our country. I am interested in the double column printing of many articles in the non-English periodicals of Western Canada. I believe that for certain articles there should be in parallel columns an English translation, but I submit that merely legislating into the foreigner's press a translation is not sufficient to Canadianize him. I look upon their papers as a necessary evil for the time being. I think they should have them if they are conducted along right lines. I am of the opinion that some of them are not conducted along right lines because in some of them I have had the honour to be accused of being very much opposed to all foreigners in western Canada. But why could we not have the non-English press —the foreign press, if you will—of Canada publishing weekly or monthly articles in the language of the majority of the readers of these papers, conveying to the minds of these poor Canadians in some cases,—non-Canadians and new Canadians in a great many others—what is in the mind and in the heart of a sympathetic Canadian-born citizen who appreciates the foreigner in the land. Syndicate these articles if you will, in the less formal sense; let these people know, week after week and month after month, something of our past history; make it possible for these adults to read this in their own homes. They are not going to school. In the rural districts they will not go to the night schools, where there are night schools, for many weeks in the year at any rate. There are scores of different ways whereby we might touch for their betterment the lives of the foreigners who would be Canadians if we would give them all the opportunities that are possible.

I do not wish to convey the idea that I am among those who believe that all the foreign-born in Canada have the right spirit. Nor yet should any of us be so foolish as to think that all the foreign-born are not going to be good Canadians. There were some of the neutral aliens and some of the friendly aliens who were very far from being with us during the period of the war. We simply have to take them as we find them. Those who are the most impressionable we will teach in one way; those who are the least impressionable we will try to get at in another way; and those who are not impressionable at all should not be allowed to continue in Canada.

May I, before resuming my seat, illustrate what I mean by referring to a question asked by a Ukrainian. Many of us think that Ukrainians and Ruthenians are pretty much the same. The young man to whom I refer insists that he is not willing to join a Ruthenian club but has become a charter member of a Ukrainian club. He understands the difference if we do not. This is the question that he put to me: "What do you Canadians think of us people anyway?" My answer was: "John, it depends very much on the Canadian who is doing the thinking and on the foreigner that he is thinking about." That has always been so and I suppose it will be so more or less to the end of the chapter. But I found in that man's mind, and in his heart too, questionings and desires that proved conclusively to me that he for one was anxious to know how to be a good Canadian. The first man to leave his work on the morning of armistice day, after he had secured permission, in order to get into the hall where there was to be a celebration, was this same Ukrainian.

But in Canadianizing him or any of his class are we to think that we can for one moment make Anglo-Canadians of them? Their viewpoint, their temperament, their disposition, their fibre, are different from ours. I do not want to see them hyphenated Canadians. I am not so much afraid of the word "Ukrainian-Canadian," as I am of the hyphen in the thing. It is the hyphen that is the menace, Mr. Speaker, and we must have none of it. But taking it for granted always that there will be a difference in the outlook and in the conception in regard to many things, is it not in the letter and in the spirit of this resolution, is it not in the heart and in the minds of the majority of the members of this House of Parliament, to make it more easily possible in future than it has been in the past to speed up the process whereby we can help the best of these foreigners in our country to become intelligent and thoroughgoing Canadians? For the old people, they will always see some things differently from the Canadian-born. For the children who are in the schools now, and for the children who are yet to be born, I think we can reasonably hope that they will become, if educated, if socialized, if assimilated in ways that are fair—that are strict, or exacting, if you please, but nevertheless fair, and consistent—a part of the very best sections of the body politic. I believe in the resolution of the hon. member for South Perth.

Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Minister of the Interior): Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that this resolution has come on in the absence of my hon. friend the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) whose duty it would have been, had he been present, to speak to the resolution from the standpoint of the Government. It concerns a subject the administration of which until 1917 was under the Department of the Interior but has since passed under a separate organization and a separate minister.

The character of the immigration that has come to Canada in the last years is pretty well reflected in the census figures of 1911, but as to Western Canada is more closely reflected in the census of 1916. It is a matter of major consequence to this country that in these western provinces there lives to-day a population forty per cent of which, speaking roughly,—much larger in Saskatchewan and smaller in Alberta and British Columbia—is non-Anglo-Saxon-born and very little relatively French-Canadian. To say that that percentage is not Anglo-Saxon-born is not to express the whole truth. A great proportion of the balance is of those born in the United States of America. These two classes of immigration have been so great that we find two of our western provinces to-day populated to the extent of virtually seventy per cent, and more in one case, by non-British born.

This is a consequence of the rapid development of the provinces; it could scarcely have been otherwise. Had those provinces waited for their growth until the overflow from the more populated regions of the East should have achieved that result, the growth would have been exceedingly slow, the development exceedingly tedious. On the whole a fairly useful class of citizens has come into that land. The emigration from countries who were the enemies of the British Empire was large and constituted, I should say, over half, much over half, of the non-Anglo-Saxon population. I have no comment to make on those references in the debate to the conduct of that portion of the population during the progress of the war.

These people were in this respect at least much like others—they differed very very widely according to the place to which you went and according to the men you met. Nevertheless it is abundantly evident that we would have had a more spontaneous and a more practically useful war result from those provinces had the population all been Canadian or all British born. That was only in the nature of things; that is the only result one can expect, having regard to considerations of sympathy and of blood. That Canadianization of the immigrants in Canada is a necessity, all of us frankly and enthusiastically admit. We would all subscribe to the doctrine, too, that no matter what the country's effort may be, no matter what means it may adopt or what propaganda it may carry on, no matter what money it may spend, to Canadianize an immigration of that character, it can only absorb and take care of a certain number, proportionate to the already Canadianized population year by year. The body politic can only digest a certain proportion of the foreign born immigrants. Only by slow degrees can our foreign-born population grow to the full stature of Canadian citizenship. We cannot possibly take care of more than a certain flow of immigration. We are all ready to admit now that in past years the doors have been opened too wide, that we have not sufficiently considered our capacity to bring the principles of Canadian citizenship home to our population in deciding what should be the extent of immigration we should welcome here. In recent years the attitude of the Government has been to contract and to select, rather than to follow the open-door policy of days gone by.

I join in the commendation so generously given to the hon. member (Mr. Steele) in raising a discussion which impresses upon Parliament and, through Parliament, upon the country, the necessity of bringing, as I expressed it previously, our immigrant population to the full stature of Canadian citizenship. Very many ideas have been brought forward upon which we can with advantage reflect. There have not been a plethora of concrete suggestions as to what functions could be adequately or efficiently discharged by the Federal Government in taking care of this work. Not only is the House indebted to the hon. member for South Perth, to those on this side, and one hon. gentleman in the third party, who have contributed to the discussion, but I am sure all will join with me in a word of encomium upon the valuable contribution to the debate that has come from the official Opposition. It would really appear—having in mind the keen solicitude of hon. gentlemen opposite in the debates of two and a half years ago and of two and a half days ago on the subject of the foreign visitors to our shores—that they would have been keenly interested in the problem launched for discussion this afternoon. That they have very carefully and sedulously refrained from taking part may perhaps be an indication that after all their chief interest in the alien, naturalized and unnaturalized, is in his vote.

The task of Canadianizing the foreign-born is fundamentally and solely a question of education. The provinces, under the Canadian constitution, have jurisdiction in matters of education. Not only have they jurisdiction but their authority is exclusive on that subject: Section 93 of the British North America Act gives them distinctly exclusive jurisdiction on all educational matters. It is true that a Federal administration may come to the assistance and work through the medium of the province in advancing any educational programme. We have availed ourselves of that opportunity in the policy of the Government on technical education. We have done likewise in matters of agricultural education. But in all matters that are essentially educational, the direct and immediate jurisdiction and machinery must constitutionally be provincial. I am not finding fault with the efforts put forth and the provisions made by the provincial legislatures of the Dominion toward this end. It has not been at all times what we would like it to be, but it has improved with the years, and I believe there has been marked improvement of late, particularly in Western Canada. It has been for the provinces a question not easy to solve, a question surrounded with many and great difficulties, but they have attacked it, and they are, in the main, discharging that obligation well.

Now I should speak with considerable circumspection for the reason that I am not the minister in charge of the department under which this matter comes, nor am I aware of just what the mind of the minister is in this regard. I believe though—indeed I know for that matter—that he has given considerable thought to the problem, and I do not believe I exceed the mark when I say that he has more or less definite plans in mind for dealing with it. I cannot go further at the present time. I do feel justified, however, in bringing this consideration to the attention of Parliament: If the Dominion moves along the lines suggested it means federal assistance to the provinces in discharge of distinctly provincial obligations To take that course would by no means unprecedented; in fact, it would be following a procedure that in my judgment has been too often followed in this Dominion. The federal Government and Parliament have on repeated occasions stood behind provincial governments and legislatures and have come to their aid with federal funds for the advancement of policies the control of which and the responsibility for which were essentially and solely provincial. So long as the federal treasury is in a position to take care of that extra responsibility the same objection cannot be urged. But it has always appeared to me somewhat unreasonable that avenues of taxation which have all along been open to the provinces and adopted by them to get revenue, should be invaded and taxes duplicated by the federal authorities for the sake of collecting through the same means and from the same people more revenue, and then paying it back to the provinces on account of obligations which were essentially their own. The wisdom of procedure of that kind always seemed very doubtful to my mind, and it does appear manifest, to me at least, that now at the close of a great war, with the financial obligations of the war centred on the back of the federal authorities, and with the necessity of stretching out the hand after various sources to get revenue to meet and discharge those obligations,—it does seem to me that if we are to get those revenues from provincial channels and by the duplication of provincial machinery, it would be wise to reflect whether it would not be better to leave the provinces full responsibility for obligations which are distinctly theirs, and at the same time leave them means for providing the revenue to meet those obligations, we confining ourselves to our own sphere, which we all confess is wide enough and big enough to meet the most ambitious schemes.

I simply mention that consideration in passing—not that it has any particular reference to the suggestion embodied in the resolution before the Chair, but on the question of federal policy with regard to matters that are provincial and that have been in past days helped out to a very substantial extent from the federal treasury, I believe it has distinct relevancy, having regard to the whole principle of the obligations of this Dominion in that field.

Now, as to the resolution itself, it emphasizes a very important matter as regards the duty of the individual citizen, as regards the duty no doubt of the provinces fundamentally and primarily, and possibly in some degree as regards the duty of the Dominion itself. I have not given sufficient thought to the subject to even indicate upon what lines money might profitably be spent and effort expended by the Dominion authorities to achieve the end desired. I say again I have no objection to the resolution passing. I believe that some proposals —I would expect limited in scope—may be made in this regard in the not distant future. But anything in the nature of a definite and official statement on the subject should await the return of the minister who is responsible for the administration of the department.

Mr. ANDREW R. McMASTER (Brome): Mr. Speaker, the subject before the House this evening is one of the greatest interest to all of us, because upon a proper consideration of the subject, and upon proper means taken to arrive at the desirable end outlined in the resolution, depend in very large measure the success of the Canadian nation.

The problem, Mr. Speaker, is no small one. We people of English, Scotch or Irish blood and of the English tongue have no necessity to voice the Scottish mother's prayer that the Lord would give her children a good conceit of themselves. We have that without any divine aid. We are accustomed to regard ourselves as an English-speaking, Anglo-Saxon nation. We are nothing of the sort. I suppose English is the native tongue of barely a little more than half of our population, and the rest of the population is composed of people whose tongues are almost as numerous as those spoken at the building of the Tower of Babel.

The minister who after some kindly words directed at this side of the House—quite in his usual manner before he resumed his seat, said that in the past we were all agreed that the doors had been opened too wide. I do not know whether we are all agreed in that. I do not know whether the people who have come into this country in the past fifteen or twenty years have not been on the whole good citizens and done a great deal by their labour, mental and intellectual, to build up the Canadian nation. But I would say, Mr. Speaker, that after they got here quite possibly we did not do as much for them as we should have done.

I know that in the city in which I live during the last fifteen years numbers of these people have come from Central Europe,—largely Hebrews from Roumania, Russia and Poland,—and I am afraid that we have not been as careful as we should have been to see that they lived in as healthful physical surroundings as were essential to their proper development. But we have done something to educate them, and some of our schools in Montreal are almost entirely attended by the boys and girls of these newcomers. And, Mr. Speaker, it makes one's belief in the innate goodness of humanity—in spite of the remarks made by the Minister of the Interior who has just taken his seat—to see how these people quickly respond to education. An old college friend of mine, a principal of one of our city schools, assured me that in these families one saw a remarkable difference from the eldest child to the youngest who had attended school, and that in the course of one short half a generation the improvement was most strongly marked.

Out in the West I cannot speak with any degree of authority, but I remember an address delivered to this House last year by the hon. member for Centre Winnipeg (Mr. Andrews), if I mistake not, in which he said that in many places the folks out there had more or less shown the seamy side of the West rather than the best to the newcomer. The story which I once heard rather illustrates this point. A man was asked whether he was a Doukhobor, and he said, "Oh, no, me smoke, me drink, me swear—me a Canadian." I am afraid that very often it has been the seamy side of our life which we have shown to the newcomer.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what do we need to do in order to make these people good Canadians? First of all, we have to give them an example of Canadianism; we have to be Canadians ourselves. We have to do less talking about the Empire and more talking about Canada. The member for Brandon (Mr. Whidden) made a very just and true observation when he said that if we attempted to make Anglo-Canadians out of these people we attempted an impossible task. The ideal we have to hold up before these people is the ideal of Canadianism. We should have our own flag in order that the children in the school-houses all over the country might learn to honour and salute the flag that belonged to us—just as Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa have their own flags. It is not that we love the Union Jack less, but because we love the Canadian ensign more.

And the next thing we should show them is a Canadianism which is a kindly Canadianism. We want to get away from the spirit of bitterness and into that spirit which was so well exemplified by the Acting Prime Minister (Sir George Foster) the other day in this House when he pleaded that we get together. We want to get away from that spirit exemplified so amply in the House to-night by the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Meighen), one of whose purposes in intervening in a non-contentious debate is that of insulting the Opposition. We want to choose the better and leave the worst part. They are there, both before you; you will choose.

Next, if we want to have a good Canadian sentiment; if we want people to love our country, we must make our country lovely. That is something which Parliament cannot do, though it may help; something which provincial legislatures cannot do, though they may help. But it is something which individuals can do. After all, it is easy enough to talk high sentiment, but it is much harder to live in accordance with high ideals. We have to see to it that we who belong to the larger families of the Canadian people, we English-speaking folk and French-speaking folk, have the proper attitude toward each other as well as to these men and women who from other countries have come here to seek a larger freedom and better living conditions. We have to see to it that these people find Canada a kindly place to live in. We have to see to it that we regard them as our fellow-citizens, just as dear to us as our own folk, and to whom we shall extend the same even-handed justice as we extend to our own folk. We have to see to it that our national thought runs along channels which will appeal to the newcomer and which will be as deep and as wide as humanity itself. We have to develop a broad and a generous spirit in Canada; and I believe we can do it.

I find myself in entire agreement with the Minister of the Interior, when he suggests that it is unwise for the federal Government to collect from the Canadian people sums of money and then hand them over to the provinces to be expended. I would, as far as possible, put upon the provinces who have the responsibility for spending the money the onus of raising it. That, I believe, is sound economics, sound constitutional practice, something we should cleave to as far as possible. A great deal can be done by public bodies and by private agencies to bring together men and women of different races and different beliefs.

If a mistake has been made in the great West, it has been perhaps, in allowing groups of these people to settle together. Of course, there are two sides to the question. These people come to this country, to them a foreign land; they heard only a tongue which was foreign to their own, and it was natural that they should want to group together. Why, it is said that if two Scotchmen were left on a desert island they very soon would form a Caledonian society. That spirit of clannishness is a natural spirit; it has its good side, though it has also its dangerous side.

Work has been done among the new Canadians by many people in Canada. I hold in my hand a work by Mr. Alfred Fitzpatrick who has made up a book which is a partly historical, partly geographical, partly a pictorial way of teaching the English language. This shows that men are at work on this important matter.

After all, there is little that is controversial in this discussion. Appropriate measures should be taken,—I would rather say by "Government" than by "this Government," because, after all, this Government is only indirectly and in a very slight degree involved in the question of education, and it is of doubtful wisdom for us who have a very large field for our endeavours to trespass on the field occupied by the provinces. So, if it could be understood that this resolution is to be regarded as meaning "Government" rather than the federal Government, I believe I could give it my hearty support and approval.

Mr. R. C. HENDERS (Macdonald): Mr. Speaker, the resolution presented this afternoon opens up for consideration one of the most important questions, I think, that will come before Parliament this session. Not having been here during the afternoon I do not know what ground has been covered by preceding speakers, but at the risk of repeating some of the statements made during the afternoon I desire to express in a few words the view that I hold in regard to this importaant matter.

If anything of value is to grow out of this discussion we shall have to get down to particulars and apply the principles laid down in the resolution in some way that will bring practical results. The government of our country naturally divides itself into three different departments, municipal, provincial and federal

In the discussion of this question it would be well for us to keep in mind that each department of government makes its contribution to the building up of citizenship in those who are to live in this country. And as we bring people into this country expecting to make citizens of them, each of those departments of government must make a contribution towards the education of those prospective citizens. Hitherto, we have been, in a large measure at least, vague and indefinite in our method bringing in of the foreigner and in the invitation we extend to immigrants to come to our shores. We have sent out immigration officials to different countries of the world, and particularly to the old world, and our ambition has been to induce men and women to come to Canada. Our success has been measured by the numbers we have succeeded in bringing into this country, and we have put a financial value, perhaps, on the number in proportion to the largeness of that number; but we have not selected as carefully as we ought, and after they have been brought to our shores and have taken their place among us as citizens of this country, we have done worse than that; we seem to have treated them much as Topsy was treated by her friends; we have just left them to grow up. We have paid very little attention to them after we have brought them here except perhaps at election time when, if we thought we could make a good Tory or a good Grit vote, we might interest ourselves sufficiently to secure their naturalization and their registration. But we have not approached the question with the idea of placing before those foreigners as they come to our country, the responsibility of citizenship and the honour that should attach to the privilege of being a citizen of Canada. I was thinking about that the other day and this incident came to my mind. There was a time in the history of the Christian church when conflict arose between the followers of Christ and some of the church officers with regard to the views they held on certain questions, and one of them was arraigned before a court for trial. It was learned that he was a Roman by birth and when he appeared before the court, the officer of the court said to him: "Art thou a Roman?" He replied in the affirmative: "With great price have I obtained this citizenship" said the officer. He felt that it was an honour to be a Roman citizen and he was prepared to pay a price for it; he was proud of his citizenship. We have failed on this point, in that we do not place before these people as we ought to the responsibility and the honour of citizenship in this country, and the privileges that go with that citizenship.

Canada is a confederacy and we have Dominion Day as the great day on which we celebrate Confederation. It seems to me that Confederation Day ought to afford us a great opportunity in connection with the development of citizenship, not only in the children that are growing up, but in the foreigners that are coming to our land. If we would properly use that day, we could make it a day that would be educational in its value and influence along this line. I had in mind an arrangement something like this. It is thought that perhaps we should extend the terms of residence in this country before we would grant full citizenship to the foreigner who comes to our shores. We could use this terms of years in an educational way to great advantage to those foreigners. Upon reaching our shores, the immigrant makes a certain declaration and assumes certain responsibilities—declares his intentions. Supposing we start in on the first Dominion Day after the immigrant reaches our shores by saying to him: On Dominion Day, we shall expect you to appear with the multitude of the people who are gathered for celebration on that day, and one hour of the day of celebration programme shall be devoted to education on citizenship. Somebody should be present to speak on the flag and what it stands for; somebody else should be there to speak on the institution and laws of our land. Then I would say that an opportunity should be given to the candidate, after having heard those explanations, to declare himself publicly whether he desired to proceed further and at a later date, enter into citizenship in our country. A splendid opportunity would be given to lay all the advantages of Canadian citizenship before the immigrant and also to place before him the honour of becoming a Canadian citizen. I would follow that course until the first three years had passed, and then I would say to him: Now you have proven yourself worthy and we believe that the time has come when we can entrust you with part of the responsibility of citizenship. Government might be divided into three departments, viz: municipal, provincial and federal. You as a candidate having signified your desire of becoming a citizen; having lived amongst us so long, and during that time having proven yourself worthy. Therefore, we give you the first step towards citizenship in this country, and by this ceremony we publicly give you the right to vote in municipal affairs. In connection with this ceremony—I would explain all about our municipal institutions and laws, the privileges and the responsibilities connected with municipal life. After the expiration of the second term of years he would again appear before the properly constituted board and publicly be instructed with regard to the duties and responsibilities of provincial citizenship. Having satisfied the board that he understood what was involved in such an examination and having publicly declared that he desired to proceed further, I would confer on him the right and responsibility of a provincial voter. Then at the end of the term he would come up for full citizenship.

9 p.m. At that time I would have the meaning of federal institutions, federal laws and federal responsibilities explained to him, and he would then publicly declare himself as to his desire to enter into full citizenship. If we adopted this course, we would not have so many mistakes made by these people afterwards, nor so many misunderstandings in regard to what it means to be a citizen of our country. We would have a citizenship that would be intelligent, that could not be played with, and that would be able to understand public questions as they came up from time to time. I am glad that the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Meighen) called attention to the fact that the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) is not here and I hope that when definite action is taken he will be present to give us the benefit of his thinking along these lines. I believe the problem of what we are to do with the non-English and non-French speaking aliens who are coming to this country to assume citizenship will be solved by our taking them into our confidence and explaining to them our institutions and our laws. Let us talk these matters over with them and mix more freely with them. Let us play with them more, let us sing with them more, and then we shall bring them to feel they are one with us, and I do not think we shall have any trouble in making them good citizens.

Mr. S. F. GLASS (East Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, the object of the resolution before us, to create and develop a better citizenship amongst the foreign-born in this country, is certainly to be commended, but that the responsibility should in a large measure devolve upon the federal Government, as is intimated in the resolution, is a conclusion with which I am unable to agree. The hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) in introducing the resolution this afternoon drew attention to the fact that from 1906 to 1915 some two and a half million immigrants came to this country. Going into the figures a little more closely, I might point out that from 1910 to 1914, 1,662,025 immigrants came to this country, and of that number 1,270,000 and more came from the British Isles and the United States.

Just here I wish to express my pleasure at the remarks made by the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Henders). He is really the first member of the House speaking to this resolution who has given us any constructive programme by which the object of the resolution might be attained. I also wish to say that notwithstanding the criticism that has been levelled at the hon. member for Maple Creek (Mr. Maharg) I know from experience that what he suggested this afternoon, that we should assimilate these people by getting them into community circles and clubs and making them feel they are at one with the citizens of the surrounding district, would go a long way towards establishing proper assimilation and promoting a good understanding and feeling amongst these people. It has been a gross error in the past that so little care has been taken in the proper examination of these people before they were admitted into this country. I do not mean a perfunctory examination at the border, possibly sometimes by an inexperienced or inefficient member of the Immigration or Health Department, but their whole record in their own country should have been closely inquired into before ever they were allowed to set foot on a steamer sailing for these shores. If we had taken that precaution in years gone by, instead of herding them here like so many cattle, we should not have had so much misery and suffering, nor so much of that element that has been a disturbing influence to our social and moral fabric. I can speak to some extent from experience on this question because in the country of Middlesex, and it was also done by our friends in the county of Lambton, in the year 1912 we organized a publicity association to bring immigrants to that district. We published a pamphlet of forty-eight pages, very nicely illustrated, describing farm and city life in that community, and we endeavoured to have only honest statements made to these immigrants so that when they arrived they would find nothing misrepresented. We also sent over an immigration agent from the county whose duty it was to go into the rural communities in these different countries and personally select for farm life in this country men who had been trained to agriculture, men of character, good morals and of sound health. Farmers in the community from which I come were ready to advance the money to bring these men out, and when they did arrive we went one step further. After we were satisfied that these men would fulfill the duties of citizenship in this country, we raised a fund and advanced money to them to enable them to bring their families out so that they could settle here and be happy and contented.

I do not at all doubt that the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) intends to make ample provision for a proper examination of every immigrant who is allowed to sail for this country, and that the intending immigrant's record will be known before he leaves his native country for his destination in Canada. This work devolves, I understand, not only on the Department of Immigration and Colonization, but to some extent also on the Department of Health, of which my hon. friend the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Rowell) has supervision. I saw not long ago in the Civil Service sheet that is sent out, advertisements calling for efficient and capable men to go to the border and to seaports to examine immigrants coming in; and here the old trouble comes up again. How are we going to get capable men for this work if we do not pay them the salary to which they are entitled? Colonel Amyot, the head of the Health Department, is a most capable and efficient man, and if he has at his disposal a sufficient sum to meet the requirements of proper supervision in this matter, I have no doubt that as regards the physical health of the immigrants we shall get a class of citizens whom we shall be glad to welcome. It is an old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and I do not know of any matter requiring our immediate consideration to which that saying is more applicable than the subject now under consideration. If we take proper precautions to guard against admitting undesirables into this country we shall get the kind of people we can welcome. I happened to pick up since dinner a pamphlet published in April by the Commission of Conservation in which reference is made to the character of some of the immigrants who come to this country not long ago. It says:

> Dr. C. K. Clarke, medical director, Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene, points out in the Toronto Globe of January 27, 1919, that out of nineteen girls introduced into Canada by one society, eighteen were mothers of illegitimate children—that was the case in one community. Out of four hundred admissions to jail in one western province, only 23 per cent were of Canadian birth. The Austrians contributed 33 per cent, although their normal proportion should have been 8 per cent. Of 266 cases of unmarried mothers, which passed through one Ontario hospital, 191 were feeble-minded, 4 were insane, 42 were border-line cases, and only 26 were classified as normal.

In Manitoba and Ontario the proportion of unmarried mothers was but slightly over 25 per cent Canadian.

It is not necessary to refer to statistics; there can be multiplied a hundredfold and on every hand evidences that the type of immigrant we admitted to our shores in the past has been an injury to the moral and physical health of our people. I would just urge again that the Department of Health which exercises supervision over the admission of immigrants will see that only men of probity, efficiency and ability are entrusted with checking the inflow of immigration as it reaches our shores.

Mr. STEELE: Mr. Speaker, I wish to offer just a word in closing this debate and to express my very great satisfaction at the interest that the subject has aroused in this House to-day. A few things have been said which I would like briefly to reply to. Emphasis has been laid on the question of this being a matter of education and, that being so, the federal Government should not interfere. It seems to me that it is not absolutely a question of education. The federal Parliament decides what immigrants shall come into this country and it decides who shall be kept out of this country; we define what each applicant for naturalization must comply with before he can become naturalized; and surely it will be inconsistent to take the ground that, when the federal Government has done all this, and with a perfect right, it should in no way whatever take action in regard to training the newcomers to be intelligent citizens upon naturalization.

If we take the narrow view of education as we commonly speak of it, perhaps there would be some strength in the argument; but if we take the wider view, that the diffusion of any and all knowledge is a process of education, where do we land ourselves? What could we do in our Agricultural Department in the way of sending out information to our farmers? Surely that is educative. The federal Government does that. If we argue that this Canadianizing of immigrants being a question of education we should not interfere, the reply must be that neither should we interfere with educating the farmer in proper methods of farming. I do not admit that at all. I believe that the federal Government is doing a good work in the education of the farmers, and I believe it ought to be doing a good work in the education of foreigners for citizenship, not for the purpose of simply giving them an "education" as we usually speak of it.

I do not know that I could entirely agree with the hon. member for Brome (Mr. McMaster), when he expressed the opinion that a mistake had been made in the West in allowing the foreigners to group together. If we are going to continue to show the indifference towards foreigners that we have done in the past, I would be inclined to agree with him; but if we as a federal Government are going to take the interest in the foreigner that I think we ought to take, probably it would assist our efforts to Canadianize him if those of a class are allowed to settle in groups. If that effort is made to Canadianize him it can be more effectively made when these foreigners are settled together and we can reach them through their own leaders, schools, churches and social organizations.

I do not think there would be any objection by the provinces to the federal Government taking part in this work. In fact, I noticed that when the National Conference on Character Education was held in Winnipeg last summer, most of the Western Provinces, if not all of them, and some of the Eastern Provinces were represented. That conference passed a very strong resolution calling upon the federal Government to assist with this work. I am not aware that any province made any objection to the passing of the resolution. I should think that the provinces would welcome the aid of the Government. We know that in Saskatchewan last year 750 teachers were called for more than could be obtained. Do you pretend to say that the provinces would not be glad of the assistance of the federal authorities in providing teachers to assist foreign groups and communities in securing not only education through the public schools, but also education in citizenship, civics and all other matters which are necessary in order to make them good Canadian citizens?

Some criticism was also offered that no constructive programme had been suggested except by the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Henders). I do not think that this is the stage for suggesting definite programmes. What we are concerned more about here to-day is to get this federal Parliament interested in the great question of Canadianizing the foreigner. When the interest of Parliament is secured there will be some way of deciding what method shall be adopted in order to give effect to the expressed will of Parliament; definite methods will come later.

I was struck with one or two of the remarks made by the hon. member for Maple Creek (Mr. Maharg). He was glad to see, he said, the interest being taken in this matter by members opposite, referring, I presume, to the members on this side of the House. At that time the hon. member for Brome and no other member on that side of the House had spoken; so I presume that the member for Maple Creek could feel like Pollyanna; he was glad also because of the interest that was being taken in the subject by members on the opposite side of the House, and he had two reasons for his gladness. But, in his succeeding remarks he expressed regret that this resolution had not been introduced three or four years ago.

Mr. MAHARG: Three or four Parliaments ago.

Mr. STEELE: I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon?

Mr. MAHARG: I had no reference to this House; I said it should have been introduced three or four Parliaments before.

Mr. STEELE: I stand corrected; I quite agree that it might have been better if it had been introduced at any time in the past. The hon. gentleman referred also to the point that we should not treat foreigners with suspicion. Now my impression of the foreigner is that suspicion is not one of the qualities of his mind, and that any suspicion which develops there is the product of the seed which is sown, generally by Canadian citizens who do it largely with a selfish purpose. If the foreigner becomes suspicious it is not because he is naturally inclined that way; it is because he is led to become so from the seed that is planted in his mind.

Mr. MAHARG: I would like to be sure that the hon. gentleman does not misunderstand me. When I mentioned suspicion I had no thought whatever of suspicion in the mind of the foreigner. I said it was we who were treating him with suspicion. The reference I made was to our own attitude and not that of the foreigner.

Mr. STEELE: In that case I would still disagree with the hon. gentleman in his belief that we are treating the foreigner with suspicion. I would like the members of this House to be given credit for being sincere when they discuss questions relating to the foreigner. I do not think it is at all necessary that the members of this Parliament should be accused, every time that questions relating to the foreigner come up, of having ulterior motives in the discussion. Many of the questions relating to our foreign population are great national questions and fraught with the greatest importance to the future of this country. While members on one side may differ from those on the other, and even members on each side may differ among themselves, as to what is the proper policy to pursue towards the foreigner, I should think we might each give credit to the other for being at least sincere in the ideas we entertain and the policies we advocate. I therefore trust that the word "suspicion" will be omitted when we are discussing what our treatment of the foreigner should be. I know very well how easy it is to create suspicion in his mind. Very often all that is necessary is to tell him that the Parliament of Canada, or some one else, is looking upon him with suspicion. That is sufficient to develop in his mind suspicion of this body or that person. I am very glad indeed that this resolution has been accorded such a favourable reception, and that its presentation has led to such a wide and interesting discussion.

Motion agreed to.

FISHERIES OF CANADA.

MR. DUFF'S RESOLUTION IN FAVOUR OF IMMEDIATE DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. WILLIAM DUFF (Lunenburg) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, fish being a highly nutritious and palatable article of food, greater production is most desirable, and as the fisheries of Canada are capable of much greater development, which can be best carried out by an aggressive policy on the part of the Fisheries Department of the Federal Government, in co-operation with the fishermen and others interested in this great industry, it is desirable that the Government take immediate steps to formulate and put into effect a vigorous policy so that the fisheries of Canada may be prosecuted to the utmost possible extent.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this resolution is one which contains truths which are of vital importance to all Canada at the present time. In view of the fact that the nations of the world are desperately in need of food products I feel that it is incumbent upon me at this time to endeavour to place before this House reasons why the Government should in every way possible develop one of the major and great industries of the country.

The fisheries, Mr. Speaker, is not a new industry. It is as old as the world itself.

If you will turn to the book of Genesis, you will find it says there in the 19th and 21st verses of the first chapter that "it was the evening and morning of the fourth day and God created great whales and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind. And God blessed them saying 'Be fruitful and multiply and fill the waters of the sea.' " Again in the same book, when the flood was to be sent upon the earth, and Noah was warned thereof, and when he was told to take into the ark every clean beast by sevens and every unclean beast by two, including the animals of the earth and the fowls of the air, no mention was made of the fishes of the sea, I presume for the reason that the waters which were to cover the earth could not affect the fishes of the deep. But we also find that when the waters had subsided and the ark had rested on Mount Ararat, the same book says that God blessed Noah and his sons and said unto them "Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth." And he further said "And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth on the earth and upon all the fishes of the sea, into your hand are they delivered." So we see that in the olden times the fishes of the sea were put there for man's use.

Coming further down the ages, we find in the New Testament that the Sea of Gallillee was a very prolific fishing ground and that when the Saviour of the earth desired disciples to do his bidding he went to the fishermen of the Sea of Gallillee and commanded them to follow him and he would make them fishers of men. We all remember that beautiful chapter in the gospel of St. John where Peter said unto his brother disciples "I go a fishing." They also said unto him, "We go with thee." We remember the story goes on to say that they entered into a ship and that night they caught nothing, but when the morning came the Master stood on the shore and said "Children, have ye any meat?" They answered him "No," and He said unto them "Cast the net on the right side of the ship and ye shall find." They cast therefore and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes."

The same is true to-day as it was then, that despite the quantities of fish taken from the sea and the sums of treasure derived therefrom, that if we cast our net on the right side of the ship we will bring it back filled with a multitude of fishes.

[Mr. Duff.]

Coming to more modern times let me say, Mr. Speaker, that our fisheries have the distinction of being the only Canadian asset which was tendered even a passing notice by ancient historians, one of whom avers that five hundred years before Columbus started on his eventful voyage of discovery, Norwegian and Icelandic fishing fleets operated in the bays of Newfoundland and along the coast of Labrador, whilst by the recorded correspondence of diplomats and treaties drawn by French, American and British statesmen, it is made positively clear that as early as 1450 Portuguese and French fishermen pursued the codfish on the Grand Banks. John Cabot justifies this contention when in 1497 he reported to his Government that on arriving at Newfoundland he found foreign fishermen operating in the waters surrounding that island.

As early as 1632, when Nova Scotia was under French rule, two cargoes of fish were shipped from Lunenburg county to Portugal, and whilst describing the fisheries of Acadia as they were in 1699, Villebun, the French historian wrote as follows:—"If rightly managed this Province is a Peru." If more be necessary to show the antiquity of this invaluable asset of Canada that more is set out in detail in an international record covering the negotiations between Great Britain and the United States, when they entered into their first fisheries treaty. It is a well known fact that for years the British Government spent large sums of money to retain the Atlantic fisheries and that for many years American and French had no rights there.

Coming to the present age it is my desire to give facts and figures to show not only the value of the Canadian fisheries, but to give figures of the value of the fisheries of other countries so as to make comparison and to show what they are doing. I also intend to place on record some information which I have gathered from time to time as to what the other countries of the world are doing to encourage and help this great industry. My only regret is that I cannot devote sufficient time to properly give to you, Sir, and the House, all the information which I have accumulated in many years of experience of this business. I have therefor to apologize not only to the House, but to the fishermen of Canada and the others with whom I have been closely connected during my whole lifetime.

I desire first to place on record some figures with regard to the fisheries of Canada and the various other countries of the world which place fishing in the forefront of their industries. In giving those figures it will be noticed that most of them are for years previous to the war. My reason for doing this is that Great Britain and the countries adjacent to the North Sea were greatly handicapped in their fishery operations from 1914 to 1919, due as we all know to the fact that these countries were engaged in the great struggle which convulsed Europe and the world.

The value of the fisheries of the whole Dominion of Canada for the three years, 1910, 1913 and 1917 is as follows: In 1910 the total value was $29,965,433; in 1913 it had increased to $33,207,748, and in 1917 the value had jumped to $52,312,044. The increase in value for the year 1917—and that also holds good for the three years previous for which I have not given figures,—was not due to the increased quantity of fish caught, but was entirely due to enhanced prices which were obtained during these years. Owing to the fact that other countries were not producing as much fish as usual, and owing to the further fact that all other commodities increased in value, prices of the different classes of fish also advanced in some cases 50 per cent, in some 75 per cent and in others 100 per cent. If time permitted I would like to give detailed figures of the fisheries of the different provinces, but this would take too long and is not really necessary for my present purpose. However, I would like to give to the House a synopsis, first of the value of fisheries in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Quebec for certain years, and also the value of fisheries of Ontario, Western Canada and British Columbia.

For the eastern provinces the value of the fisheries in 1900 was $14,283,679; in 1910, $17,099,570; in 1913, $15,737,207 and in 1917, $25,812,094. For Ontario and the western provinces, including British Columbia, the value in 1900 was $6,353,560; in 1910, $12,747,498; in 1913, $17,402,276 and in 1917, $26,432,549. The value for Eastern Canada as given for 1910 is probably over a million dollars too high, as it is well known that the accuracy of the annual departmental report for that year of the dry cod returned was greatly doubted.

It should be remembered, Sir, in comparing the value of the Canadian fisheries with that of other countries that the Canadian value is given as the value of the product prepared for market, with all the expense of curing and packing added to it. In European countries and in the Atlantic coast districts of the United States the value quoted is the value of the fish as landed by the fishermen. Reckoned on the same basis as in Europe, therefore, the value of our fish in 1917 for example would not be more than $34,500,000, and of course the value in other seasons would be relatively less than the value shown. The increased value, as I said before, during the war years is due to higher prices caused by the shortage of European supplies and is not due to development.

In comparison I would like to place on Hansard the following statistics and information with regard to the quantity and value of fish landed in the chief fishing countries of Europe, which will give an idea of the increase from 1907 to 1913, the year before the war.

	1907.		1913.
	Cwts.	Value.	Cwts.	Value.
Norway	9,308,840	$12,152,250	14,630,500	$15,585,750
Sweden	1,821,120	3,102,250	1,456,640	4,521,750
Denmark	911,840	3,890,000	1,288,600	4,980,500
Germany	2,582,380	7,236,250	3,627,980	11,589,250
Holland	2,561,480	7,577,250	2,941,140	11,216,500
Belgium	223,920	1,375,000	262,460	1,196,500
France	3,818,020	20,841,500	3,863,000	26,529,750
Great Britain	24,150,580	58,692,250	25,050,080	73,464,750

The above figures are very illuminating and show to what extent these countries were endeavouring to develop an industry which meant so much for the health and prosperity of the people. Let me say here, in case I might miss it later, that one of the greatest competitors which the fish merchants or the fisheries of Canada have in their dry cod is Norway and Sweden,—or I might more truly say they had this competition previous to the war, as in the years previous to the great war Norwegian fish were sent to New York and Cuba in great quantities and came into competition with Canadian Atlantic cod, which had to find a market in these places. Let me also say that this competition was very serious in view of the fact that the Norwegian people paid more attention to the curing and drying of their fish than our Canadian fishermen did. I am pleased to say, however, that soon after the war started, when it was practically impossible for the Scandinavians to send their fish across the Atlantic, our merchants on the Atlantic coast, principally at Yarmouth, Lunenburg and Halifax, erected artificial dryers, and in these dryers they are able to hard-cure their fish for the Cuban and New York markets, with the result that Canadian Atlantic cod is practically to-day supplying the whole demand of those great markets to the south.

It will be noticed from what I have just given you, Mr. Speaker, that Great Britain's fisheries did not increase to the same extent proportionately as those of Norway. The reason for that is the very high state of development which has been already reached by the British fisheries, whilst those of continental Europe were in a backward state and their people had only awakened to the great asset which they had in the seas adjacent to their coast line. It is interesting to note here that most of the fish caught by the countries mentioned a few minutes ago were caught in that little strip of water called the North sea, and despite the fact that day after day and year after year the fisheries are prosecuted in this small body of water with the utmost vigour, yet the sea is still teeming with food for the nations. I might also say, Sir, that during the last two years, since the British people have built larger vessels, they go further afield, and to-day during some seasons of the year they are fishing as far north as Iceland and Greenland.

More than sixty per cent of the fish taken from the North sea consist of herring, fourteen per cent of haddock, and about eight per cent codfish. Of the herring taken from the North sea, more than fifty per cent are landed by British fishing vessels known as drifters—and let me say here that there is no good reason why our herring industry in Canada cannot be developed in the same way. At the present time our fishing for herring is done mostly by nets, anchored in the sea. It would be a good policy for the Government to give to the fishermen of the Atlantic coast the trawlers and drifters which were in service during the war and which are now anchored and out of commission, so that they could further develop the herring fisheries by this method, a new method to Canada, but a method which has brought such great results to the fishing industry of Great Britain and other continental nations.

As an example of the growth of this industry in Great Britain, let us take the landings of herring at one port, that of Yarmouth, England. In 1890 there were landed at this port 575,640 cwts., and in 1913, 3,122,280 cwts. The neighbouring port of Lowestoft, where the landings were almost as great, shows a similar advance. Steam herring drifters were first introduced in 1900 and motor drifters in considerable numbers in 1910. The number of steam and motor drifters operated in 1913 from certain countries bordering on the North sea was as follows: Norway, 202; Germany, 65; Holland, 67; and Great Britain, 1,774. The greater proportion of such fish as cod, haddock, etc., landed in countries surrounding the North sea, excepting cod in Norway, is caught by steam trawlers, commonly called beam or otter trawlers. Steam trawlers were first used in the early eighties of the last century, and the number in operation in the North Sea countries in 1913 was as follows: Norway, 3; Denmark and Iceland, 24; Sweden, 58; Germany, 256; Holland, 158, and Great Britain, 1,677. These steam crafts use a large net which is dropped over the stern by the fishermen, and sinks to the bottom of the sea. The vessel keeps steaming ahead until such time as the skipper thinks or feels by the ropes attached to the net that he has a catch, when the steamer is stopped, the net hauled on board, and the fishes taken from it.

As an example of this branch of the fishing industry in Great Britain, let us look for a moment at what is being done at Grimsby, England. In 1890 the fish traffic amounted to 1,427,640 cwts, in 1910 to 2,576,820 cwts., and in 1913, 3,595,840 cwts. To appreciate Grimsby's huge fishing industry it has to be borne in mind that its fleet of steam trawlers in 1913 numbered 650, the value of which alone amounted to over $26,000,000. I might say here that within the last month I received from a young fishing captain from my own county, who is at present in Grimsby, England, learning the business of steam trawling, a number of photographs showing the city of Grimsby and the fishing fleet tied up at the docks. The photographs certainly picture a remarkable scene, as at the time the views were taken the fishermen were asking for better terms and consequently the great fleet was not in commission. I am glad to say that the fishermen and the fish merchants amicably settled their differences and that the Grimsby fleet is again plowing the North Sea. The landings of this fleet are mostly consumed fresh throughout England, the number being so great that ten special fish trains are dispatched from Grimsby daily all the year round.

As is well known, Mr. Speaker, cod constitutes our main fishery in Eastern Canada, whereas the proportion of cod taken from the North Sea amounts to only 8 per cent of all fish taken therefrom. It is interesting, therefore, to compare the landings of cod in Canada with those of certain North Sea countries. The following are the quantities landed in European countries in 1908 and 1913:

	1908	1913
Norway	4,534,060 cwts.	7,184,980 cwts.
Germany	333,400 "	626,760 "
Great Britain ..	2,810,460 "	3,962,660 "
France	2,116,252 ',	1,924,570 "

It is important for Canadians to note that of the total quantity of cod landed in France in 1908, no less than 1,644,996 cwts. or quintals were taken from the Banks near the Newfoundland and Canadian coasts. At least as large a proportion of the 1913 catch was taken from the sea on the western side of the Atlantic. France, as is well known to us all, Mr. Speaker, owns the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, which are adjacent to the south coast of Newfoundland and close to the fishing grounds, and each year French fishermen in great numbers are sent out in large fishing schooners to prosecute the fisheries there during the summer months.

The quantities of codfish landed in all Eastern Canada and in the years 1908, 1911, 1913 and 1917 is as follows: 1908, 2,149,611 cwts.; 1911, 2,072,195 cwts.; 1913, 1,635,379 cwts; 1917, 2,215,455 cwts. Compare the figures of 1908 with 1917, and you will see that there was practically no increase in the catch.

Now, for a few moments I will take you to the adjoining Dominion of Newfoundland, where the fisheries are the principal industry and where, perhaps, fishing is done more intensively, considering the population, than in any other part of the world I might, perhaps, be a little personal here, Mr. Speaker, and say that this is the country where I learned the difference between the different kinds of fish and where I received my early training in the fish business.

As an illuminating example, the increase in the valuation in Newfoundland's staple fishery exports for the period ending June, 1918 and June, 1919, is worth noting. In 1918 there was shipped from that country 1,821,306 dry quintals of cod valued at $18,829,560, and in 1919, 1,894,023, valued at $25,860,112. In 1918 there were shipped 216,048 barrels of herring, valued at $2,067,697 and in 1919, 211,555 barrels valued at $2,429,403. In 1908 there were shipped 4,327 tierces of salmon valued at $91,805 and in 1919, 4,111 tierces valued at $112,442. The Newfoundland fishermen do not confine their activities to the waters adjacent to the coast of Newfoundland. A migration of many fishermen and their families to the rock-bound coast of Labrador starts in the early days of June. There they fish until the month of October, when they again return to their homes in Newfoundland. I had the privilege of watching the fishermen on the coast of Labrador during two summers, catch and dry their product for market, and it was an experience which was of great value and which gave me an insight into the life and work of these people.

Another great fishing industry in the Dominion of Newfoundland is the seal fishing. The seal fishery has shown a decided drop for the last few years. The total catch for 1918 was 151,431 seals valued at $863,552 and in 1919 the total catch was 81,293, valued at $278,145. This is a decided decrease from previous years. I am told that only ten ships prosecuted this fishery in 1919 and only thirteen in 1918. This is a great falling off, Mr. Speaker, from the years I remember, when some 25 steamers left the city of St. Johns and the town of Harbor Grace on the eastern coast on March 10 and prosecuted this great industry. I had the privilege of spending two springs at the seal fisheries. I saw about 250,000 seals on ice at one time—an experience which only few in this world have had, and one which I would not have missed for a great deal. A little seal fishing is carried on in Canada, but not very much. However, for a number of years a steamer has been leaving Halifax every spring for the purpose of engaging in the seal fishing business. For several years the "Harlaw," owned by J. A. Farquhar, prosecuted the seal fishing industry. During the last few years, the same firm have sent out the steamers "Seal" and "Sable." Fishermen on the Magdalen Islands and around the Cape Breton shore sometimes get a few seals, but as I say, the industry is not very largely carried on so far as Canada is concerned.

The Newfoundland fisheries, in addition to finding employment for the Newfoundland people and providing food for numerous foreign countries, is also a great benefit to Canada. It is almost impossible to realize what would happen the great Lunenburg fleet, which operates from my own county, if it were not for the fact that during the summer months the Newfoundland harbours are teeming with bait fishes known as caplin and squid. Then, a great many Canadian schooners manned by Canadian seamen—who by the way are some of the best in the world—are chartered by Newfoundland merchants to proceed to different ports in Newfoundland and there load codfish for Europe, West Indies or Brazil. I might say that throughout the whole of the war, vessels belonging to Nova Scotia were chartered to Newfoundland merchants and took the Newfoundland fishery catch to Europe in spite of the submarine menace.

A number of vessels are sold each year to Newfoundland merchants. These vessels are sometimes four or five years old, and in other cases the Newfoundland merchants make contracts with New Brunswick or Nova Scotia builders for new vessels, so that the fisheries of Newfoundland are a great benefit to a part of the Canadian people.

The United States authorities do not issue annual statements of the quantity and value of fish taken all over the country. The Bureau of Fisheries at Washington, however, collects and publishes the annual statistics regarding the landings of fish at the chief Atlantic ports, at Seattle on the Pacific, and Alaska. The quantity of all kinds of fish landed at Boston and Gloucester in the years 1910, 1913, 1917, and 1918, was as follows:—

1910	1,622,629	cwts.
1913	1,448,364	"
1917	1,567,850	"
1918	1,836,515	"

From these figures it will be seen that the United States is not making as rapid progress on the Atlantic coast, notwithstanding its recent adoption of the steam trawlers, as several European countries. The Alaskan fisheries, however, are developing rapidly. In 1917 there were 21,491 persons employed in the Alaskan fisheries, and the value of the product when prepaired for market amounted to $51,466,980. That was a record up to that time. But in the year 1918 a much higher record was established, when 31,213 persons were employed and the value of the product amounted to $59,154,859, which was a sum nearly eight times the purchase price of the territory fifty years ago.

The country which has perhaps shown more rapid progress in the years immediately preceding the war than any American or European country is that of Japan. For a number of years the Government of Japan has sent its scientists and experts to the different fish producing centres where a great deal of valuable information with regard to our fisheries has been gleaned. This information, which no doubt is afterwards returned to the Government, has been taken advantage of by this wide-awake little nation across the Pacific. In the year 1907 only one steam trawler was operated out of Japan. In the following year there were two at work, in the next year thirteen, which was followed by 23 in 1910, 76 in 1911 and 110 in 1912; which shows conclusively that Japan is in earnest with regard to the development of her fisheries. The value of Japanese fisheries ran from $33,177,750 in 1908, to $45,063,250 in 1912, and to $48,295,250 in 1913. The disturbing feature with regard to the situation is that dry codfish from Japan has now definitely entered into competition with the product of Canada and the United States. The Japanese have studied the Canadian and United States markets and have given closer attention to the best methods of curing and handling the fish than we have. In 1918, 40,000 cwts. of Japanese fish were brought into San Fransisco, and up to the end of October of last year 20,000 cwts. had been brought into Seattle, whilst as many more were on the way. This competition is a very serious menace to the dry fish trade of this continent, by reason of the fact that the cost of production is so much less in Japan on account of smaller wages and lower standards of living.

10 p.m.

The Fishing Gazette of New York, which has a wide circulation and which represents a large fishing clientele, sounds a warning note about Japan codfish entering the American market. In its issue of November 22, 1919, it prints full particulars and gives reasons why Americans should wake up and endeavour to combat Japanese aggression.

I think this shows conclusively that if we are to compete in the markets of the world with the fisheries of other nations we have to pursue a much more progressive policy than we have in the past.

Mr. PECK: I should like to ask the hon. gentleman a question before he proceeds with the question of the fisheries of Japan. Could he give us the number of other nationalities who operate the fisheries of Japan, in comparison with the number of Japanese who operate the fisheries of Canada? I am not saying this in any spirit of criticism.

Mr. DUFF: I have not those figures. I would presume that the Japanese fishing vessels are operated by Japanese only.

Mr. PECK: Hear, hear.

Mr. DUFF: Is that right?

Mr. PECK: Yes.

Mr. DUFF: I see that the hon. member refers only to the men who fish in Japanese boats. It is only Japanese that sail on Japanese fishing vessels.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like, for a few minutes, to speak of what has been done in other countries to help this important industry. With the exception of the help given to the herring fisheries in Great Britain over 100 years ago in the shape of bounties on properly cured herring and some assistance to outlying poor districts in the shape of loans to secure boats and the building of piers and shelters, the great fishing industry of Great Britain has grown up practically without direct Government assistance. The reason for this is found in the fact that the business has been a highly organized one for such a long time that private capital has always been freely procurable for putting into practice advanced ideas and for developing the industry generally. As an instance, all the harbour, docks, and fish markets in Great Britain have been built either by private companies, such as railway companies, with a view to reaping an increased traffic or by city or town corporations who levy dues on the landings for maintenance purposes.

Just before the outbreak of the war, however, fishing vessels grew so much in size and number that the Government, through what is known as development commissioners, gave grants of money in aid of harbour extension works, especially at the smaller ports. But be it said to the credit of the British people that the greater part of the cost in each case is borne by the town or community by borrowing at a low rate of interest from the Government. Since the war, the development commissioners are assisting demobilized fishermen with loans to secure new motor fishing boats and to instal motors in existing boats, and trawlers and drifters are being made available to demobilized fishermen or groups of fishermen on very easy terms of payment. This is one way in which Canadian fishermen or Canadian young men can be encouragd to go into the fishing business, namely, by the Government helping them in the manner just mentioned; and as there are a number of small steamers owned by the Government now out of commission, it would be good business to endeavour to induce fishermen to take them over and operate them. Both in England and in Scotland attention has been given to the education of fishermen for a number of years. At several centres and in many of the public schools, courses of instruction in navigation, net making and mending, cooking and coopering, have been provided. I was very much interested in a booklet which came into my hands a few days ago and which is worth putting on Hansard; but as it is rather long, I will quote only a few paragraphs from it. This pamphlet was issued by the National Sea Fisheries Protection Association of London, and the first thing it says is that the fishermen of Great Britain catch 7,500,000,000 fish dinners each year. The next heading is:

Why we demand a Ministry of Fisheries.

The Prime Minister's pledge. The Prime Minister has stated:—

"We must see that the national resources are developed to the full, and that the State renders all the assistance in its power for the attainment of that object."

Then it goes on to say:

Our fisheries are to-day the greatest of our potential national resources. Very few people realise this. But it is true. One hundredweight of fish will give a meal to 150 people. Before the war British fishermen caught more than 24 million hundredweight of fish a year (3,600,000,000 square meals). We exported ten and a half million hundredweight, and imported about three million hundredweight. The country consumed 16,500,000 hundredweight. The fishing industry provided:

2,400 million meals for Britons.

1,500 million meals for foreigners.

During the war our 50,000 best fishermen and 3,000 best fishing steamers were busy hunting mines and submarines. The old men and the boys and the unfit men in old fishing boats contiued to fish. They caught on the average 8,000,000 cwt. a year. The German Navy sank 672 fishing vessels, and killed 416 men while they were catching this food for us. Many hundreds were wounded and taken prisoner. They never shirked their job. They often fought and defeated U-boats.

It goes on to say:

On our fisheries we depend:

(a) For a supply of the finest seamen in the world.

(b) For a supply of the most wholesome form of flesh food. In fact:

(a) Without the fishermen we should not have been able to defeat the German U-boat in four years. Because no other seamen are trained from boyhood to hunt their prey under water.

(b) We must now either eat fish or become (very largely) vegetarian. Why? Because even before the war (since 1900, in fact) the population of the world has grown more quickly than the beef herds. The population of the eleven chief cattle raising countries had risen by 20 per cent before the war; their herds had decreased 4 per cent. This shortage of beef will be much more marked after the war. In fact, the development of the fisheries is as important a factor in the food problem as the development of agriculture.

There are a number of other important statements in this booklet which was published by the British Admiralty in November shortly after the armistice was signed, but I shall content myself by just quoting the statement on the cover:

Our Debt to Fishermen.

In all their varied work round the coasts of the United Kingdom, in the North Atlantic, on the African Coast, in all parts of the Mediterranean, and in Egyptian waters, the auxiliary patrol service have shown an adaptability and readiness both for hazardous deeds, and for steady arduous effort.

That is what the Admiralty says of the work the fishermen did during the war not only in catching fish, but on the patrol boats that operated in the North Sea. The same thing might be said of our Canadian fishermen. While, of course, they did not have to undergo the same risks as the British fishermen, not for one minute did they stop their work on account of the German submarines when they were on this side of the Atlantic.

Now let us see for a few minutes what Continental Europe has been doing to cultivate this great industry. In Norway a number of schools have been established and subsidized by the Government at suitable localities on the coast, where fishermen are instructed in navigation chiefly. Some attention has also been given to the instruction of cooks for the larger fishing boats; to instruction in the use of motors on fishing boats. Also in three special schools instruction has been given in fishery legislation, fishworking, and the natural history of important sea fishes. Funds have been created at various times for provision of loans to fishermen, to aid them in obtaining large vessels for deep-sea fishing, and installing motor engines in sail boats. The funds were pooled in 1907 and amounted to $275,000. There is also a separate fund amounting to $50,000 for the provision of decked boats in Finmarken, the most northerly and poorest province of Norway. The Norwegian fishery is largely an inshore one, in sheltered waters. For that reason loans were not extensively used to provide large vessels and steamers for deep-sea fishing; but for the inshore fisheries loans have been very freely used in securing larger boats with oil engines.

The deep-sea fisheries of Germany are carried on by steam trawlers and herring luggers and steamers. The vessels belong to joint stock companies. No particular state aid had been given to trawling companies, but up to 1910 an annual bounty of $1,500 was paid to herring companies on each vessel built and sent to the herring fishery. After that year, state aid took the form of a guarantee of 5 per cent dividend on the capital invested in the companies. In 1911 the Imperial Government voted $175,000 for the development of the herring fishery and the other deep-sea and inshore fisheries. In that year also the city of Hamburg voted an annual sum of $75,000 for three years to provide loans, under easy conditions, for the inshore fishermen of the lower Elbe, to enable them to purchase boats and gear of an improved type. In the Baltic, state aid was given in the form of a loan without interest for an amount up to three-fourths of the cost of a boat and engine.

In the matter of education, fishery schools or classes have been established since 1895 by the German Sea Fisheries Society, acting for the Government, on the following general lines: (1) That a school be set up in every fishing centre so long as the cost of instruction compared with the number of pupils is not too high; (2) Instruction to be free and all costs paid by the society; (3) Instruction to be arranged to suit the particular industry of the locality. In 1910 there were 23 such schools or centres. The instruction given consisted (1) of navigation and seamanship; (2) construction and use of marine motors; (3) the natural history of important sea fishes; (4) instruction on improved models of boats and vessels, improved fishing gear, preservation and handling of fish on board and on land.

If our fisheries department at Ottawa had arranged some years ago to carry out just such a programme, this would have done away with the difficulty we have today of getting certificated masters and mates to man our ships; as, had these schools been established in every large fishing centre, the fishermen when at home during the winter could have attended them and passed the necessary examinations. Lectures are also given once or twice a week during suitable seasons on all matters connected with the fisheries. Another feature of the educational facilities provided in both Norway and Germany is the fishery museum established at various centres, in which are displayed models of boats and vessels, and specimens of nets, traps and other fishing gear used not only in Norway, but in other countries as well. There are also collections dealing with the treatment and curing of fish, including models of fish and smoke houses and the utensils used in curing and canning various kinds of fish. Since the war, the Germans are striving to supply themselves with a greater proportion of the fish they consume. To that end companies have been and are being formed which aim at building and outfitting additions to the trawling fleet that will bring it up to 400 vessels at once, while fishing harbours are being extended and new ones planned. At Cuxhaven $1,750,000 is being spent in extending the fishing port. Large sums are also being spent in the same way at Hamburg, Altona and Geestemunda.

It should be noted that schools and lectures, whilst they are doing good for navigation, are not bringing about the desired improvement in the treatment of dried fish in Norway. However, we on this side must admit that Norway fish are far better cured than some of the fish caught on the Atlantic coast and make serious competition for us in the foreign markets. I might say that the best fish we have in Canada is the Gaspe cod, cured along the St. Lawrence shore.

The Government of Norway are evidently not satisfied, and recently they appointed a commission to investigate and prepare a plan and finance proposals for state aid for teaching fishermen and curers the best methods of curing split fish, and also to inquire and report whether a system of official inspection and marking of the fish would be desirable.

Of all the European countries France gives the greatest amount of financial aid for the development of the sea fisheries. The amount spent by the Government in 1911 was $1,125,000, and by the way this amount should be carefully noted and compared with the sum spent annually in Canada, as well as the different manner in which the amount is spent.

Of that sum $980,000 was expended as bounties for the encouragement of the deep sea fisheries, $90,000 was for equipment and $66,000 was spent on the product itself. The balance amounting to $145,239 was expended on the coast fisheries, on superintendence research work and experiments. Regarding the bounty granted to the French fisheries, it is to be noted that the bounty is paid per quintal and amounts to 10 francs or $2 on each quintal caught. We, in Canada, are paying our Atlantic coast fishermen, both deep sea and inshore, the paltry sum of $160,000 and the amount does not really come out of the Canadian people, as it is the interest on five and half million dollars paid by the United States Government some years ago for certain privileges which the British Government on behalf of Canada gave them.

As a result of the aid which is given the French fleet it is fitted out and sent across the Atlantic and fishes on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and the fishing banks off the island of St. Pierre on Bank Quero and the Middle Ground. This French fleet has increased from 178 vessels in 1905 to 254 vessels in 1912, some of them being steam trawlers. A new policy has been adopted by the French Government lately, and as they cannot build sufficient ships themselves they have placed contracts in a number of shipyards in the county of Lunenburg and in Queen's and Shelburne for the building of large numbers of wooden fishing vessels of 400 tons which will be used to prosecute the fisheries on the Grand Banks and will be manned by French fishermen. These ships come across the Atlantic in April and return in October and November. They have mother ships which lie at anchor in St. Pierre until the fishing vessels come in from the Banks to that port with their catches, which are put on board the mother ships, and when they are loaded they return to France, and the fishing vessels then again proceed to the fishing grounds. Their last trips are taken home in their own bottoms.

Now let us take, for the sake of comparison and to show what Canada is doing for the fishermen, the amounts paid out in the last ten years by the Federal Government.

1910	$ 760,734
1911	843,856
1912	921,953
1913	1,229,519
1914	1,465,360
1915	1,115,241
1916	1,053,155
1917	1,111,277
1918	1,031,767

These amounts are exclusive of $160,000 which was paid to the fishermen of the Atlantic coast each year as a bounty. That amount, as I said before is derived from the interest on the fisheries award which was made at the Halifax conference some years ago and was paid for certain fishing privileges. Consequently this cannot be put down as an expenditure of this Government towards fisheries.

Since 1909 what is known as the fisheries protection service, carried on by the larger vessels, such as the Constance, Canada, Curlew and Petrel has been charged to naval expenditure. Since 1911 what is known as the fisheries patrol service carried on by the smaller craft, mostly gasoline boats, has been charged to fisheries expenditure. There should be charged to the amounts which I have just given the sum of $200,000 per year which is an additional expenditure and does not appear in the statement. I have to say however, that a great deal of this money spent on small patrol boats is absolutely wasted and it would be good policy on the part of the department to sell the boats and pay off their crews.

For the sake of comparison I would like to give to the House the amounts voted by the Government for aid to agriculture, since 1910.

1910-11	$ 988,507 75
1911-12	1,220,099 91
1912-13	2,276,172 31
1913-14	2,879,861 22
1914-15	3,190,465 27
1915-16	3,257,992 66
1916-17	3,522,859 82
1917-18	3,777,882 75
1918-19	3,975,919 53

I have no fault to find with this large expenditure; in fact as long as we are obtaining good results and the farmers are being helped and more people are being encouraged to settle on the land I would not object to further expenditure.

In past years large amounts have been spent on agriculture, and it is also a fact that the provincial governments are helping the farmers in a great many ways by establishing colleges and experimental farms and doing a great deal of work necessary to promote a knowledge of agriculture. This Government has also granted $5,000 under the land settlement scheme, to each soldier who is willing to settle on land with which to purchase his land and also $2,500 to purchase the materials necessary to enable him to go on the farm. In addition to that they have established credits whereby the farmers are enabled to sell their products to foreign lands. If I am rightly informed credits to the amount of $300,000,000 have been established by this Government in aid of agriculture.

It will be remembered that a few years ago the Government voted a lump sum of $10,000,000 towards the encouragement of agriculture and I might here say that a smaller special grant should have long ago been voted towards fisheries to help in their development. Most of the expenditure on fisheries at the present time is for salaries, patrol service and hatcheries and there is very little of this amount spent in either scientific or practical work for the encouragement and development of the great industry.

[Mr. Duff.]

Some years ago the Government built two dogfish plants, one in the eastern end of the province of Nova Scotia at Canso and one at Cape Sable Island. Two or three years ago the Fisheries Department decided to abandon the work of exterminating the dogfish pest and sold the plants. This was a great mistake, as instead of selling the two plants already established, it should have been the policy of the Government to place additional plants along the coast of Nova Scotia and give a bounty to the fishermen to exterminate the pest which interfers with their work during the summer season. It is quite true that these plants did not pay their expenses or make any money for the Government, but it is not usual for plants erected for the assistance of the people of the country in any industry to pay dividends or interest on the investment. But I will say this, that if these plants had been kept going for the last two or three years, owing to the prices which would have been received for the oil and the fertilizer, the Government would have received a handsome profit on the investment, and with proper business management, these plants could also have taken care of a large quantity of the offall and by-products of the fisheries.

In the March, 1919, issue of the Canadian Fishermen, several recommendations were put forward for the reconstruction and development of the Canadian fishing industry. Many of the recommendations will necessitate the expenditure of a good deal more money, and as money is a somewhat scarce commodity and rather hard to secure in these days, the question should be first considered of turning the amount at present voted for fisheries administration to better use.

It should be clear to any one who intelligently studies the departmental blue books —and the more they are studied, the clearer becomes the fact—that a large sum of money is positively wasted annually on the artificial propagation of fish. Especially so in view of the much larger sum spent in the shape of salaries and travelling expenses for the maintenance of an army of outside officers, numbering nearly 1,000, besides 40 permanent and 18 hired patrol boats with their crews, whose main duty is police work, i. e., enforcing the observance of close seasons and other restrictive measures for the protection, chiefly, of the very kinds of fish that are artificially propagated at such enormous expense in our numerous hatcheries. Any sane man is bound to conclude, if he looks at the thing below the surface, that either the enormous expenditure on fish protection, or that on fish breeding, should be largely reduced. There is neither room nor necessity for both expenditures on a large scale at the same time. With such a huge output of fish fry from the hatcheries, the protection afforded by close seasons, and the elaborate system of licensing and controlling in vogue, one would naturally expect our fisheries to have been showing, years ago, a very greatly increased annual production. But what has actually occurred? The lobster fishery we know is barely holding its own, notwithstanding the output of hundreds of millions of fry from the hatcheries annually, especially in the last ten years; and now all the lobster hatcheries have been closed up as useless.

The Fraser river as a producer of salmon on the Pacific is played out, notwithstanding artificial propagation of millions of fry annually, mainly as a result of over-fishing by Americans at sea and in Puget Sound, and can never be restored except by the proper regulation of the means of capture and the season for fishing in salt water on both sides of the international line. The artificial propagation of a species of fish like the Pacific salmon, which has to be maintained in such enormous numbers to keep the canning industry going, as a means of restoring this fishery, is about as futile as pouring a bucket of water into the Pacific ocean with a view to swelling it a little.

A glance at page 102 of the Census of Industry, Part 3, Fisheries Statistics for 1917, shows clearly that the total quantity of salmon canned in British Columbia from year to year is being maintained by the very kinds, such as pinks and chums, that are propogated artifically in very small quantities; while the sockeye, the kind that is produced in the hatcheries in enormous quantities, has been decreasing.

Leaving out the Fraser river altogether, and taking the figures for the rivers in the north, that are far removed from the destructive operations of American trap fishermen, we find convincing proof for the statement just made. The pack of the various kinds in the different districts was as follows for the years named:

SALMON PACK—NORTHERN RIVERS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

NAAS RIVER.

	1908	1912	1917
	cases.	cases.	cases.
Sockeyes	27,584	36,037	22,188
Pinks	6,612	12,476	44,568
Chums	.....	3,245	24,938

SKEENA RIVER.

	1908	1912	1917
	cases.	cases.	cases.
Sockeyes	139,846	92,498	65,760
Pinks	45,404	97,588	148,312
Chums	.....	504	21,516

RIVER INLET.

Sockeyes	64,652	112,884	61,195
Pinks	479	8,809	8,065
Chums	.....	3,845	16,101

OUTLYING DISTRICTS.

Sockeyes	48,367	79,464	32,902
Pinks	23,538	128,296	112,209
Chums	.....	37,734	112,364

The figures which I have given prove beyond question that the pinks and chums which were propagated in small quantities increased much more rapidly than the the sockeye salmon.

Now take the case of Atlantic salmon—

Mr. PECK: Do I understand from the hon. gentleman's argument that pinks and chums were not propagated in hatcheries but that they increased more rapidly than the sockeyes and the cohoes that are propagated in hatcheries?

Mr. DUFF: The chums and pinks were propagated in small quantities and the sockeyes in large quantities. The pinks and chums increased very much more rapidly, or more of them were caught, than were caught of sockeyes. The catch of sockeyes decreased and the catch of pinks and chums increased.

Mr. PECK: Do I understand the hon. gentleman's argument to be that the hatcheries were not beneficial?

Mr. DUFF: Yes, that is what I am trying to prove. Take the case of Atlantic salmon, of which also millions have been propagated annually for very many years, from ten regular hatcheries and six subsidiary ones. This fishery is scarcely holding its own as may be seen from the following figures which show the annual catch on the whole Atlantic coast, from 1913 to 1917:

Atlantic salmon fishing catch.

1913	40,237 cwts.
1914	38,202 "
1915	39,805 "
1916	41,801 "
1917	39,865 "

The catch for 1918 is believed to have been very considerably less than for 1917, while that for 1919 was practically a failure.

Compare this with the salmon fisheries of Scotland, for example, the perpetuation of which has depended altogether on restrictive measures as to fishing periods and the strict enforcement of such. In round figures, the blue books show that the weight of salmon carried by rail and steamboat in Scotland, the produce of Scottish salmon fisheries, prior to the war, was 40,000 cwts. annually. There are only two small private hatcheries for salmon in the whole of Scotland. Both are maintained by the proprietors of the rivers on which they are located, with a view to increasing the salmon supply therein. Neither of these rivers, however, has shown any better results than those that have been without hatcheries. In fact I believe one of the two hatcheries was closed recently. The superintendent of Scottish salmon fisheries, who is an expert in his line, said in 1916: "We in this country do not rely on artificial hatcheries for the upkeep of the stock of salmon. We have magnificent natural spawning grounds in our Scottish rivers and we prefer to rely upon the process of nature for the replenishment of the stock." The point is this: The few comparatively small Scottish rivers, without the aid of hatcheries, maintain a yearly production of salmon rather greater than that of the whole Atlantic coast of Canada from the Bay of Fundy to the Labrador, with its many huge natural salmon rivers into which are dumped annually the output of no less than sixteen hatcheries.

What of the Great Lakes? Eight hatcheries in the province of Ontario have been turning out many millions of whitefish and pickerel fry annually for a number of years.

Mr. PECK: Is the hon. gentleman comparing the propagation of whitefish in Canada with the propagation of salmon in Scotland?

Mr. DUFF: No I have been comparing the propagation of Atlantic salmon with the propagation of salmon in Scotland.

Now for a few minutes let us consider the following figures which show the quantity of fry liberated in the lakes from Lake Superior to Lake Ontario since 1911.

	Whitefish Fry.	Pickerel Fry.	Herring Fry.
1911	146,200,000	56,549,500	.....
1912	64,000,000	42,000,000	.....
1913	140,000,000	40,000,000	.....
1914	175,490,000	54,000,000	.....
1915	281,620,000	95,550,000	.....
1916	178,288,000	128,833,000	39,585,000

Here let me give the House the quantity of these fish taken from those lakes annually since 1912.

	Whitefish. Cwts.	Pickerel. Cwts.	Herring. Cwts.
1912	58,897	26,656	170,677
1913	52,263	26,564	130,718
1914	57,964	39,173	91,474
1915	67,100	26,718	115,715
1916	60,711	20,029	106,872
1917	49,498	19,569	201,801

The great increase in herring in 1917, could not have been due to artificial propagation, because 1916 was the first year in which the fry of such fish were liberated and they would not have reached a catchable size in the following summer. The increase is attributable rather to the fact that this fish is more abundant than the others and that the high prices of 1917 impelled the fishermen to make greater efforts at catching and landing them.

Further comment as to the uselessness of fish hatcheries from a commercial standpoint is unnecessary; all the figures bearing on the matter proclaim it loudly. These are facts that cause thinking men to marvel greatly at the stupidity of permitting in a comparatively new country with a sparse population, and with what are practically virgin fisheries in lakes and rivers of huge dimensions, the expenditure of so much money on the artificial propagation of fish for so long, without question. Even casual observers, however, are now beginning to doubt the wisdom of spending large sums on this service.

In the United States artificial propagation of fish has been conducted on a great scale for many years. Yet Canada relatively has been doing far more than the United States in this line. In 1913 Canada had 61 main and subsidiary hatcheries, while the United States had not any more. But, as the United States authorities do not regularly collect statistics as to the catches of the various kinds of fish throughout the country, they cannot determine the results of their fish cultural work. As proof of this, let me quote the Commissioner of Fisheries at Washington, who, in a recent report, says:

> The Bureau has given greater attention to the collection of fishery statistics which afford the only reliable basis for determining the condition of the fisheries, and indicating the need for and results of fish cultural work.

Even in the United States, however, where fish culture has been looked upon as a kind of fetish, its value is now being questioned.

In the report of the Bureau of Fisheries for 1916 the following occurs:

> In some sections an almost idolatrous faith in the efficiency of artificial culture of fish for replenishing the ravages of man and animals is manifested, and nothing has done more harm than the prevalence of such an idea. While it is an exceedingly difficult thing to prove, the consensus of opinion is that artificial culture does considerable good, yet the very fact that this cannot be conclusively proven ought to be a warning not to put blind faith in it. The best way in which to conserve the fisheries of the coast is by enacting and enforcing laws, making a close season, under which a certain proportion of the salmon runs will be enabled to reach the spawning beds. If this is done there can be no question of the perpetuation of the industry.

This good advice from Washington, Sir, should be followed by our officials.

The report of the Bureau of Fisheries for 1919 intimates that lobster hatching in the United States has practically been abandoned.

The great development of the fisheries of Norway is sometimes quoted as an example to this country, but the Norwegians place no reliance on artificial propagation of fish and do not waste money on it. One small hatchery, and no more, has been in existence at Flodevig since 1882 for hatching and distributing cod along the nearby coast. It is supported in part only by government funds. Its practical usefulness was so frequently called in question owing to the difficulty of proving any beneficial effects from it, that a commission was appointed in 1910 to investigate and report as to whether it should be continued. The commission consisted of scientists, a majority of whom, largely from a scientific view point, recommended its continuance. No one, however, believes it is of any benefit to the fisheries, and no doubt if practical men had been on the commission they would have recommended its abandonment.

The sum spent for the protection of the fisheries in Canada, in the shape of salaries to fishery officers and the maintenance of patrol boats is a huge one. According to the blue books it amounted to over $400,000 in 1913. That, for negative work, is surely much too much. But when to that large sum is added $400,000 more for artificial fish breeding in that year, without the slightest visible sign of the supplies being increased thereby, the thing to any one capable of understanding the figures dealing therewith assumes something of the character of a scandal. Perhaps no one in particular is to blame for this condition. It has evidently grown up under the system of administration past and present, which has blundered along guided by impracticable theorists. If the bull were now taken by the horns, so to speak, and the artificial propagation of fish and police work reduced to their fitting place in the scheme of reconstruction, hundreds of thousands of dollars would be available for more useful and necessary work without Parliament being asked for an increased vote.

Amongst more useful work might be classed the maintenance of a completely equipped steamer, like the "Michael Sars" of Norway, for scientific investigation of all kinds at sea bearing on the fisheries; also the establishment of what may be called fishery museums or schools at centres on both coasts and inland, in which models of all modern fishing crafts and appliances used throughout the fishing world would be on view, together with models of modern fish-curing, smoking, and canning establishments and the implements used therein. To such museums or schools fishermen and those directly concerned might be taken periodically to listen to lectures on and explanations of the various exhibits, by duly qualified experts, and to witness practical demonstrations in fish-curing and barrel making.

Money would be well spent in periodically sending a duly qualified expert or experts to cured-fish consuming centres abroad to study their desires and report to the trade. The money spent in the shape of bounties, amounting annually to $160,000, should be increased. Under the present system of distribution, the owner of a boat under 13 ft. keel gets $1; a boat fisherman gets about $4; owners of vessels of from 10 to 80 tons get $1 per ton, and those of vessels over 80 tons get $80 and vessel fishermen about $6.50. The aggregate sum paid is large, but the amount in each case so small as to make the avowed intention of the Act, namely "to encourage the development of the sea fisheries and the building of fishing vessels," a huge joke. How far, for instance, would an $80 bounty, which is the limit, go on a vessel costing say $30,000? A decent sum would help shipbuilding as well as fisheries. How much encouragement for the building of bigger and better crafts is there in the payment of $10 or $20 to the owners of small vessels of 10 to 20 tons, of which there are a great many on all parts of the coast? The other payments to boat owners and to vessel and boat fishermen are simply doles and can not be looked upon as encouraging the development of the fisheries.

Then money should be spent on improving the quality and consequently the value of all cured fish, by setting up a standard of quality and paying a substantial bounty on all fish and packages found after proper inspection, up to that standard. No amount of lecturing and demonstrating could compare with this as a means of encouraging and developing our fisheries.

It is not for lack of money being spent by the Canadian Government on Canadian fisheries that they are not progressing as they should. It is rather due to the money being wrongly expended. The total expenditure on fisheries services in Canada in the year 1913 (all such expenditures were of course more or less curtailed during the war years) amounted to $1,229,518, including the bounty. Now, we have seen that the expenditure of France, which spends more on its fisheries than any other European country, amounted in the year 1911, to not more than $1,125,000. But, whereas Canada on the one hand spent over $800,000 of the total on superintendence, policing and fish breeding, and only $160,000 on bounties, France on the other hand, spent $980,000 on bounties for the encouragement of its deep sea fisheries and only $145,000 on superintendence, research work and experiments. These comparisons are very striking and should lead to a call for radical and sweeping changes in Canada.

There is not much hope for real practical assistance being given, however, as long as the administration of the fisheries services of Canada remain as at present, both inside and outside, almost entirely with a few notable exceptions in the hands of men who may be good clerks, but are, through lack of a working acquaintance with the industry, incapable of sizing up its real needs or of directing any practical efforts towards its development.

The further development of our fisheries is dependent upon several things:

1. An increased demand for fish at home.
2. An increased demand for our cured fish abroad.
3. Increased production.
4. Utilization of all by-products.
5. A fisheries department, manned by practical business men, and scientific experts.
6. Sufficient moneys to carry on necessary development.

The first can be brought about only by supplying the consuming public with real fresh fish in the shortest possible time after it is taken from the water. The quality of such fish would be their own best advertisement and would very quickly lead to greater consumption. No amount of lecturing nor of newspaper or other advertising will induce people to continue the use of fish or to increase their purchasing when as at present, they frequently find them so long out of the water as to fill the house with an offensive odour when being cooked. This was made clear in the evidence of inland dealers at the inquiry in 1916, as to the spread in prices. In Ontario the chief demand is for lake fish, because if its much fresher condition when offered for sale.

Sea fish can never be delivered in prime condition in the interior markets of Canada until a refrigerator or chilled car is made available on express trains, for all sizes of shipments; not once a week or three times a week, but every day of the week. The trade is not of sufficient volume at present to warrant the provision of such a daily car at a rate that would make it possible for shippers to make full use of its without assistance. But if adequate financial aid were provided by the Government for the operation of a daily refrigerator express car service, concurrently with a publicity campaign, the business would very quickly grow large enough to justify special express facilities without governmental aid. Until some such plan is adopted I have not much hope of seeing a great expansion of our fresh and semi-fresh fish traffic. It will, of course, be more expensive than the method of subsidizing fish shipments hitherto in force, but the importance of the industry and the results that are bound to follow are sufficient justification for any increased expenditure for a limited period.

The second is, perhaps of more importance than the first, for this reason: that the export trade in cured fish brings money out of the pocket of the foreigner and puts it into that of the Canadian, whereas the home trade in fresh fish largely consists of a transference of money from the pocket of one Canadian into that of another Canadian. Like the first, the second can only be secured by improving the quality of the product. Especially is this so in view of the efforts of other countries to increase their output of cod and other salt fish to markets which are common to all fish-producing countries.

Efforts to persuade fishermen and curers by mere lectures or by written articles are not sufficient to bring the required improvement. That method is too slow. While waiting the results from such efforts we may wake some day soon to the fact that our competitors, by giving more attention to this quesiton of quality, have ousted us from the very markets we hitherto had looked upon as peculiarly ours. Such action as will be more quickly effective is therefore necessary. Here again the Government should come to the rescue with financial assistance for a time.

A standard should be established for all cured fish, and after adequate inspection. If necessary the Government should appoint cullers in all the principal buying sections of the country and pay them so much per quintal for culling fish of different qualities. There should also be paid on each of the various units of quality which conform to the fixed standard a sum sufficient to encourage fishermen and curers to turn out standard products. After a few years of such encouragement, with rigid inspection, followed by instruction where necessary, our salt fish producers would undoubtedly find themselves in a position to meet all competition unaided.

With an increasing demand for fish at home and abroad would come a demand for increased production. To meet such a demand individual fishermen or groups of fishermen should be encouraged and assisted financially in securing such crafts as may be deemed most suitable. This is no more than the governments of other countries have been and are doing to advance their fisheries. To this end a fund should be created from which loans—not gifts—at low rates of interest could be made to approved persons or groups of persons to enable them to buy or build approved fishing crafts of all sizes.

While this suggestion is applicable in some measure to the Pacific coast, it applies mainly to the Atlantic where a much greater number of people are engaged and a much smaller sum is earned by their labour, which is performed under more severe conditions. The salmon fishery has been pretty well exploited and developed on the Pacific, and now that the salmon canning monopoly in the shape of protecting canners by limiting the number of cannery licenses has been ended recently, the provision of loans to white fishermen who are British subjects to enable them to secure boats for the halibut fishery—fully half the quantity of halibut landed at Prince Rupert is landed by American vessels—and the salmon fishery is perhaps the most effective way in which to help forward the Pacific fisheries. The increased production is bound to follow if the fishermen are encouraged to prosecute the industry. For the large fleet of trawlers which operate from Lunenburg county and proceed to the different banks where they fish from March to October, one or more hospital ships should be provided, so that fishermen will know that if they get sick they can be properly looked after.

Then to encourage men to engage in this industry, a scheme of state insurance, both life and accident, should be inaugurated. It would not cost a great deal of money to insure the fishermen during each season for an amount from $1,000 to $5,000, so that in case any of them lose their lives during the voyage their families would be looked after. If you will look into the statistics you will find that although their calling is a very hazardous one, yet the fatalities are a small percentage of the number of men engaged in the industry.

I also think that some state provision either of insurance or otherwise, should be made for men who get hurt and also for those who, after serving a certain number of years have to give up fishing, either on account of ill health or old age.

Bait freezers should be established at not only different parts of the Nova Scotia coast, say at Lunenburg, North Sydney and northern Cape Breton or Prince Edward Island, but also at three or four important places in Newfoundland, as during certain seasons of the year bait is scarce and our vessels have to lay sometimes from one to four weeks waiting for bait. If these freezers were established and bait put in them from the previous season the fishing fleet would not be delayed and consequently would catch a great deal more fish. Last year, notwithstanding the handicap under which the fishermen laboured, the fleet caught some 30,000,000 pounds of fish. Had they been able to get bait, and get it without waiting for it, they would have caught at least fifty per cent more than they did.

The fishermen should also be encouraged by having a lower tariff on all they eat and wear in their homes, and what they use either in the building or outfitting of small boats or large vessels should come into the country free of duty. They have to go into the open market to sell their product and take what they can get for it, and to properly encourage them they should be allowed to purchase anything they require without the barrier of a protective tariff.

The by-products of the fish should be taken care of. Plants should be erected to take care of the heads, guts, skins and other offal of the fishes. This would serve a two-fold purpose, as fertilizer for the farms could be made from the bones and offal, oil would be extracted from the livers of the fish, and glue made from the skins. The Government would therefore kill two birds with one stone.

We also need in this country a new fisheries organization. The present department at Ottawa is ashamed to be known as the Fisheries Department, as a few years ago they changed the name of that department from "Marine and Fisheries" to "Marine and Naval Affairs." Why this was done passes all understanding, as the fisheries is of sufficient importance to be designated by the proper title. Looking over the Routine Proceedings and Orders of the Day, I notice a resolution under the name of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. This resolution states that it is necessary to amend a certain part of the Canada Shipping Act relating to the inspection of hulls, boilers and machinery of vessels. It is quite right that that resolution should be under the name of the Minister of Marine, but I cannot see what the Fisheries Department has to do with the inspection of boilers. Immediately below that resolution there is another standing in the name of the Minister of the Naval Service, and having to do with a proposed amendment to the Fish Inspection Act regarding pickled herring, ale-wives, and mackerel. Now, I do not know whether they are going to supply pickled herring, alewives and mackerel to the Canadian Navy, but it certainly seems ridiculous for a resolution of that kind to be in the name of the Minister of the Naval Service.

What we want is a new lock, stock and barrel in that department, with practical men in charge, and until we get this we cannot expect very much to be done to encourage or promote this great industry.

Some money should be spent to encourage the immigration of fishermen to this country. I think I am safe in saying that I could pick from the Lunenburg fishing fleet at least one thousand men who are capable of taking charge of fishing vessels, although at the present time they are fishing in dories from other vessels, but I feel quite confident that if the Government would encourage the immigration of capable fishermen to this country these men would be able to get vessels of their own, which would greatly enlarge the present fishing fleet. If the Government would provide the men, I feel quite confident that the people of Nova Scotia, especially the people of my own county, would see that vessels are built and the fleet enlarged.

I trust, Mr. Speaker, that my remarks will not fall upon barren ground, but that the Government will take steps to encourage the proper development of this great industry. The men who are prosecuting it at the present time are not only the salt of the earth, but they are the salts of the sea. Their calling is an arduous one; they risk their lives every hour of the day and every day of the year; they are brave and daring and are not daunted either by the winds or the waves or by storms or fogs. Such men as these who go down to the sea in ships and do business on the great waters should receive every consideration and every encouragement from the Government of this country.

Mr. C. W. PECK (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, While I do not agree with a great many of the conclusions of the member for Lunenburg (Mr. Duff) I think that we owe him a great deal for introducing this question into the House and that we must respect his great grasp of the fishery situation. When I have occasion again to speak on this subject, I purpose proving that the minister who is at the head of the Fisheries Department (Mr. Ballantyne) is doing a great deal, in our part of the country at least, to develop the very principles for which my hon. friend stands. My hon. friend speaks of the Atlantic fisheries; I speak of the Pacific fisheries, and I will say this, that of all the Ministers of Fisheries we have had there has been no other minister who has at all approached the Minister of Fisheries of this Government in regard to his policy in developing the fisheries of British Columbia. I came from a fishing country, namely, the province of New Brunswick, and I live in a fishing country, in northern British Columbia, one of the greatest fisheries in the world, and I certainly look on fish as one of the most delicious products. The whole question in regard to its production and also in regard to it from an appetising standpoint, is very interesting. At this hour of the night, however, I do not think that our hardworking members of Parliament who labour for the very large sum of $2,500 a year, should be delayed in order to discuss this subject.

Mr. McKENZIE: My hon. friend should move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. PECK: I am going to do that in two or three minutes. I hope this debate will be resumed at an early date. If it is not, I mean to take up the subject, which is very controversial and bitter in British Columbia, of the destruction of the cannery monopoly. I have taken a part in that question and I am deeply interested in it. I wish to prove, in my humble way, to the Parliament of this country that the minister has proved himself to be the strongest minister we have had in regard to that question and that he has not hesi-tated to play the part of a strong and disinterested man in destroying the cannery monopoly. I see some of my hon. friends opposite smile, and, I presume, in derision, because they were the people who introduced this cannery monopoly which has been the cause of so much trouble in our province.

I want to speak of the question of the returned soldier. I have been an advocate of the policy that the Government should assist in establishing the returned soldier in the fishing business. I can say honestly that I think the minister and his officials are quite in sympathy with that policy, and I commend that to the consideration of the House. If you can re-establish men in farming, while I realize that you cannot re-establish them in every walk in life, there is one business in which you can re-establish them, and that is the fishing business. Therefore, I hope this debate will be resumed at an early date, and if it is not, I purpose taking up the whole question of the salmon fisheries of British Columbia in a most interesting and entertaining manner. I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

On motion of Right Hon. Mr. Doherty the House adjourned at 11 p.m.

Tuesday, March 30, 1920.

The House met at Three o'clock.

TRUST COMPANIES ACT, 1914, AMENDMENT.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON (Minister of Finance) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 38, to amend the Trust Companies Act, 1914.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Explain.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: The object of the Bill is to provide for an inspection of these companies, there being none at present. There is a provision in the existing Act under which the Minister of Finance may, if he so desires, have an inspection made of any particular company. He is not in a position, however, to know what companies should or should not be inspected; and complaints are not made about companies until something is wrong with them, when inspection is generally too late. Trust and loan companies will both be made subject to inspection because I shall introduce in a moment another Bill dealing with the latter class. The new legislation will place both trust and loan companies in exactly the same position as insurance companies. An annual inspection is provided for because only by an annual inspection is it possible for any one to tell when special examinations ought to be made.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

LOAN COMPANIES, 1914, AMENDMENT ACT.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON (Minister of Finance) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 39, to amend the Loan Companies Act, 1914.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT—STEAMBOAT INSPECTION.

Hon. C. C. BALLANTYNE (Minister of Marine) moved that to-morrow the House do resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider a proposed resolution to amend part VII of the Canada Shipping Act, chapter 113 of the Revised Statutes relating to steamboat inspection.

FISH INSPECTION ACT AMENDMENT.

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE (Minister of Marine) gave notice that to-morrow he would move in Committee of the Whole a resolution to amend the Fish Inspection Act, chapter 45 of the statutes of 914, extending the provisions of the Act to pickled herring, ale-wives, mackerel, and salmon, other than mild cured salmon, and the containers in which such fish are packed and marketed, etc.

THE ARMENIAN PEOPLE AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. I. E. PEDLOW (South Renfrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Government a question of supreme importance at the present time. I noticed in a recent issue of the Toronto Globe a reference made to some correspondence that had passed between the Acting Premier of the Dominion and the Premier of Ontario regarding certain representations forwarded, on behalf of the Armenian people, by the Canadian Government to the Imperial authorities, and by the latter to the Supreme Council of the League of Nations. I would like to know the tenor and nature of the representations made and which, according to press reports, have been endorsed by the Premier of Ontario.

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER (Acting Prime Minister): I may say to my hon. friend that the general tenor of the representations made to the Supreme Council of the League of Nations through the Imperial Government was along the lines of securing by the making and operation of the Treaties of Peace, immunity for Armenian communities from oppression and massacre and the elimination of Turkish authority as far as they are concerned.

Mr. McMASTER: Hear, hear.

CONDITION OF IRELAND.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. PEDLOW: I would also like to ask if it is the intention of the Dominion Government to make similar representations through the Imperial Government to the Supreme Council of the League of Nations with regard to the deplorable conditions which, according to press reports, obtain at the present time in Ireland, and if not, why not.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I may say that on the grounds stated by the hon. gentleman in his question, as to whether it is the intention of the Government to make similar representations to the same authority, that taking into consideration the essential difference between the two cases, both as to the conditions and jurisdiction, it is emphatically not the intention of the Government to make such similar representations.

ST. LAWRENCE SHIP CHANNEL—ICE CONDITIONS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. JOSEPH ARCHAMBAULT (Chambly-Vercheres): I regret to have to again call the attention of the House to a most important and urgent question, I refer to the ice jam on the St. Lawrence river. On the 9th of March I drew the attention of the Minister of Marine to the condition in question; stating that I had been informed from reliable sources that there was imminent danger of floods. The minister then answered to the following effect:

> I am afraid that the information that has reached the hon. member is not accurate.* * * With no ice bridge formed at this point, there is no fear of disastrous floods occurring above. The channel is now clear of ice up to a point near Portneuf, 35 miles above Quebec, where the Lady Grey is working to-day, and is making good progress. * * * I do not anticipate any serious results from floods this spring—no one can accurately tell—but I am pleased to say that the Lady Grey is working so well and that the ice bridge is broken.
>
> [Mr. Pedlow.]

I have no doubt that the minister was sincere and in earnest in his statement but I believe he has been wrongly informed. In the Montreal Gazette of Friday, March 26 it is stated that at Three Rivers the ice barrage is still solid and trouble is feared as the water continues to rise gradually in the St. Lawrence. It is also reported that the ice barrage at Three Rivers is still solid clear across to the South shore, and that the Lady Grey will not be able to break through the ice that blocks the river for miles above this point.

In the reports of the Press yesterday—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. The hon. member is bringing to the attention of the House a matter of undoubted public importance, but he is proceeding to make out a case which he ought not to do upon the Orders of the Day. The hon. member can summarize his question so as to get the answer he desires without going into the matter by way of argument.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I bow to your decision, Mr. Speaker. I was going to state that the report I read was dated Friday, and on Monday we had some further reports in the Montreal Gazette and the Montreal Star to the effect that the ice barrage was worse, that the water was rising, and that there was even—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: —and that even some of the Government shipbuilding plants were carried away by the flood. I would like to know if the minister, (Mr. Ballantyne) is informed of these conditions, and if he intends to do anything to relieve them.

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE (Minister of Marine): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member for Chambly-Vercheres (Mr. Archambault) I cannot to-day give him information very much different from that which I furnished him a few days ago. I took occasion this morning to inquire of the officers who have charge of the ice-breaking operations how the ice-breaker Lady Grey was getting on, and I was informed that she is now up the river quite a distance this side of Portneuf, and that the river was quite clear of ice from Lothbiniere down to Quebec. Of course, I cannot state definitely that there will not be a flood, but forming my opinion on what has occurred in previous years, neither myself nor the officers connected with ice-breaking think there is any imminent danger of floods occurring this year.

The hon. member has referred to the height of the water at Three Rivers. As a matter of fact it is not very much higher than what it has been in former years. The particular shipyard that he refers to, that of the Tidewater Shipbuilding Company, is located at a spot which is always flooded in the spring. So far as I can prophesy, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that people along the South shore need be unduly alarmed as to the possibility of a great flood.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: If the hon. minister would permit me, the report also states that the Lady Grey has had to go back to Quebec for repairs.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The news I got about two hours ago was to the effect that the Lady Grey was at Portneuf.

CANADIANS IN THE IMPERIAL SERVICE—CAPT. JOHN A. BARRON.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. H. B. MORPHY (North Perth): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. POWER: Mr. Speaker, in view of the very interesting discussion in regard—

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member for Perth has the floor.

Mr. MORPHY: I desire to bring to the notice of the Government, Mr. Speaker, a despatch appearing in the Citizen of Saturday morning last, entitled "Canadian in Berlin." It states:

> The continued disturbance in Germany, more particularly in Berlin, as a result of the revolutions and counter revolutions, have a decidedly local interest to Stratford, inasmuch as Captain John A. Barron, R.A.F., son of His Honour Judge Barron, is now and has been for some weeks at Berlin, the chief centre of the disturbances. As one of the entente officers selected by the allies to adjust certain claims upon the Germans, in relation to Zeppelins and airships, he was required to meet with German officers, and it is seen by the press that the reception by the latter was far from cordial, in fact at times it assumed the shape of aggressive force, and one at least of the French officers had died as the result of these attacks, and others have been injured. For some time Captain Barron has not been heard from by his friends in Ottawa.

I would like to ask the Government two questions: (1) Has the Government any system of keeping tab upon Canadians in the Imperial service? (2) Has the Government received any report in regard to the dangerous situation in which this Canadian is placed?

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER (Acting Prime Minister): The first question, as I understand it, is as to whether there is any system by which the Canadian Government keeps track of Canadians in the Imperial service. That is looked after by the Imperial authorities themselves, and information can be got by application from Ottawa to the authorities in London with reference to any particular case. The second question I did not hear.

I am informed by the Minister of Militia (Mr. Guthrie) that a cable has been sent to the Imperial authorities for information, but that no reply has yet been received.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): Mr. Speaker, some days ago I drew the attention of the leader of the Government to the fact that a mass of information moved for at the last session by members of the Opposition have not been furnished. I was asked to furnish particulars. I have looked over the records and I find forty-eight motions were made by members of the Opposition last year that have not yet been complied with. I handed the list to the leader of the Government and asked him to put the matter in the hands of the proper officer for action, as some of these returns are urgently needed by members of the Opposition.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I think I said to my hon. friend when he put the question before that if he would send me a list I would look into the matter. I have since had that list. I would beg hon. members to be a little merciful and patient considering the shower of orders for returns and questions for information that are being received. It is a hard tax on the resources of the departmental staffs, but the arrears are being overtaken as quickly as possible.

CLOSING OF DISTRICT PENSION OFFICES.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. NEWTON W. ROWELL (President of the Privy Council): The hon. member for Quebec South (Mr. Power) inquired on Thursday last as to the accuracy of the rumour that the district Pension Office at Quebec and at certain other cities had been or were about to be closed, and I promised to secure information on the subject. I am now advised by the Chairman of the Board of Pension Commissioners that the board has decided to close the district Pension

Office at Quebec and some fourteen other district offices throughout Canada. The statement by the Chairman of the board is as follows:

District Offices were originally opened for the purpose of investigating applications for pensions made by dependent parents. There was no thought in the beginning of performing any medical work in connection with the District Offices. The medical work was all performed by military Medical Boards. After the armistice the cases of dependent parents for investigations immediately became very few in number but the medical work in connection with demobilization became very heavy. The medical work was, therefore, taken out of the hands of the military Medical Boards and doctors were sent from head office to each of the district offices to make medical re-examinations, etc. At the present time a district office exists mainly to re-examine disability cases from time to time.

About eight months ago it was realized that District Offices would eventually have to be closed and in order to make this possible a scheme of travelling Medical Boards was originated to re-examine pensioners in all centres where a number could be brought together at a particular time, that is to say in towns of a population of two thousand or more. This travelling medical board scheme is now in operation in the Eastern Provinces and is ready to be put into operation in the Western Provinces. The result is that pensioners attached to the Charlottetown and Sydney District Offices are being re-examined by travelling Medical Boards from Halifax; those attached to Quebec by travelling Medical Boards from Montreal; those attached to Kingston and North Bay by travelling Medical Boards from Toronto; those attached to Windsor by travelling Medical Boards from London and those attached to Port Arthur by travelling Medical Boards from Winnipeg. Travelling Medical Boards will also, in the near future, deal with pensioners attached to Regina, Saskatoon, Victoria, St. John and possibly Hamilton. As soon as these travelling Medical Boards have been in operation for a month or two the necessity for keeping offices open in all the smaller cities will no longer exist.

At the present time there are twenty-one District Offices which cost this commission an average of over one hundred thousand dollars a month, that is to say more than two-thirds the total cost of administration. Of course the smaller District Offices cost this commission proportionately less in accordance with their size but the closing of each of these offices will result in a saving of not less than five thousand dollars a year for the smallest District Office, namely Charlottetown, and not less than thirty thousand dollars a year for some of the medium-sized District Offices which it is proposed to close.

It is estimated that the closing of offices which can now be dispensed with will mean an annual saving of between $400,000 and $500,000 in the administration of the Pensions Board.

With reference particularly to the Quebec District Office, this office has, from the time it was opened, has been extraordinarily expensive when its size is considered. There are less than one thousand pensioners resident in the Quebec district which takes in the north shore of the St. Lawrence from Three Rivers and the south shore from Levis east. The office has been reorganized on two occasions but is still the most expensive of this commission when its size is considered. For the eleven months just past the expenditure in connection with this office has been about $23,000. By closing the office and doing the re-examinations of pensioners by the travelling Medical Board from Montreal it is thought that at least three-quarters of this expenditure can be saved and the service to the pensioner will be quite as good.

The same thing, although perhaps to not as great an extent, can be said with regard to the District Offices which it is proposed to close.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the statement of the Chairman of the Board of Pension Commissioners as to the action which the Board has taken and is about to take and the reasons therefor. The Board is convinced that by adopting this course efficient service can be given to the pensioners and at the same time the very large sum mentioned can be saved annually to the country. Members of the House know that the Board is constituted by statute and that its members are carrying out their duties under that statute.

ICE JAM IN THE ST. LAWRENCE.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. C. G. POWER (Quebec South): In view of the discussion with regard to the ice jam on the St. Lawrence and the apparent impossibility of navigation about Portneuf, may I ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if he intends to look into the request of the Quebec Board of Trade with reference to loading with Canadian grain and foodstuffs the four Government boats now lying in Quebec harbour?

Hon. C. C. BALLANTYNE (Minister of Marine): The operation of the Government boats is under the management not of the Department of Marine but of Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Limited. The Government in no way interferes with or exercises authority over the routes followed or the cargoes carried by these boats. I am sorry that I am not in a position to give the hon. member any information.

Mr. POWER: May my question be directed to the Minister of Railways?

Hon. J. D. REID (Minister of Railways): The same answer will apply.

HOUSE OF COMMONS OFFICIALS—ORGANIZATION.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. A. C. ETHIER (Laval-Two Mountains): I understand that Mr. Speaker is to report to the House a plan of re-classification of the staff of the House, including the translators, who, I gather from the discussion which took place last week, are under the control of Mr. Speaker and the Debates Committee. May I ask whether you intend, Mr. Speaker, to submit that report some time this week?

Mr. SPEAKER: It was my purpose to have brought down the plan of organization during the latter portion of last week, but after a conference with the member for Wright (Mr. Devlin), it was thought better to defer it until Tuesday of this week. So far as I can give an assurance at the moment, it will be brought down to-morrow without fail.

Mr. ETHIER: Is it the intention to refer that plan or that report to a Special Committee of the House or to the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. SPEAKER: On two previous occasions the matter was dealt with through a motion placed upon the Order Paper by the Prime Minister. I do not know that any advantage can be gained by referring the matter to a special committee, but of course that is a question entirely for the House to decide.

Mr. ETHIER: I suggest, if I may be permitted, that a committee be appointed to report upon the matter to the House.

Mr. SPEAKER: That can be dealt with when the organization scheme is before the House.

OVERFLOWING OF THE RIVER ST. PETER.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. D. A. LAFORTUNE (Jacques Cartier) (translation): Mr. Speaker, may I be permitted to ask the Government whether they have been informed that the floods of the river St. Peter are a cause of serious loss to the inhabitants of that part of the constituency I represent. I have just learned from a large number of my constituents that the river is overflowing at the present time, flooding many a hundred dwellings. Two or three feet of water cover the ground to the great injury and discomfort of the dwellers. I understand that the river is under the care, supervision and jurisdiction of the Dominion Government. If that be true, I would suggest to the hon. minister in charge of that department the desirability of losing no time in safeguarding the interests of those constituents, landlords and tenants. Mr. Speaker, your humble servant would pray for an immediate answer, even if it be in English.

The right hon. C. J. DOHERTY (Minister of Justice): I was surprised to hear the hon. member from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Lafortune) state that the river St. Peter is under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government. I have no knowledge that the supervision of water courses was one of the many attributes of the Government. If I am correctly informed, what is known as St. Peter's river is rather a brook which at times overflows. I shall inquire whether the waters of that small stream are under the jurisdiction of the Government or not and if it is within our powers to prevent their overflowing. The hon. member may rest assured that I shall inquire immediately into the matter.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY SYSTEM.

ANNUAL STATEMENT BY THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS.

On the motion for Committee of Supply Hon. J. D. Reid (Minister of Railways and Canals) moved:

That the Speaker do now leave the Chair for the House to go into Committee of Supply.

Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING: I do not desire to delay the House going into Supply, but I should like to point out to the Government that the explanatory details which are usually given in regard to civil government have not yet been brought down, and until they are, I think we should defer taking up that part of the Supply.

Hon. J. D. REID: When we are in Supply, I shall not ask the committee to take up Civil Government to-day, but I shall be pleased to take up some Estimates other than Civil Government.

Mr. Speaker, when the House resolves itself into Committee of Supply to-day, it is my intention to take up the Railways and Canals Estimates. It has been the custom to present an annual statement as to the operation of the Canadian Government railways. In presenting the Estimates of the Department of Railways and Canals for the forthcoming fiscal year, I desire to place before the House a statement dealing with the operation of the Canadian National Railways for the calendar year 1919. The Canadian Northern was merged with the Government railways in December, 1918, so that we are now in a position to review one completed year of operation under non-political and purely business auspices. The National system, with which we are now dealing, comprises the following lines:—

	Miles.
Canadian Northern railway system	9,479
Intercolonial	1,592
Prince Edward Island	278
National Transcontinental	2,002
Branch lines	376
Total	13,727

It is unfortunate that abnormal economic conditions, the disturbing effects of which are world-wide and beyond the control of any railroad management, whether public or private, should have prevented a better showing for the first year of large scale national operation, but the result, when closely analysed, is not without hope for the future of Government ownership and operation.

More Revenue but Greater Operating Costs.

Briefly stated, the National system comprising

The Canadian Northern,
The Intercolonial, and The Transcontinental, earned $94,000,000 during the year, or almost $12,000,000 more than during 1918. But even with the $12,000,000 increased earnings, the operating loss is $14,000,000, made up as follows:

Canadian Northern	$6,500,000
Intercolonial and Transcontinental	7,500,000
	$14,000,000

The explanation of this is that during the year the operating expenses advanced from 84 to practically 108 millions, an adverse increase of nearly 24 millions. For the most part, this was due to advances in wages under the McAdoo award and supplements thereto, which were not offset by corresponding increases in rates. There was no rate increase during 1919. Given the same operating costs as 1918, the earnings for 1919 would have taken care of them and provided in addition the tidy sum of nine millions towards meeting fixed charges. These interest obligations in themselves amount to nineteen millions, and, singularly enough, a comparison of the payroll of the National system for the two years shows an increase of practically nineteen millions in wages alone during 1919.

The operating loss of fourteen millions, and the consequent failure to provide for fixed charges, is really a reflection of conditions which obtain all over the world as a result of the war. Comparisons are seldom conclusive, but sometimes they are illuminating, and in passing, I am reminded that in the United States, where economic conditions so closely approximate our own, the lines taken over by the Government for operation during the war are reported to have failed in two years by over seven hundred millions to earn the net revenue which the Government guaranteed them when taken over by the United States Railroad Administration.

More Passengers but Less Freight.

Although the freight earnings of the National system show an increase in excess of two and a half millions for the year, there was a falling off in freight handled amounting to three million tons. This was due in part to the stoppage of munition shipments on cessation of hostilities, and four-fifths of the decreased tonnage was on the old Canadian Government system, which formerly handled so much war business. There was a noticeable falling off also in westbound business, due to unsettled conditions in the period of transition from war to peace. That there was an increase in freight earnings at all is attributable to the increased rates put into effect during 1918, to which I shall refer more fully later on. Had the volume of freight handled during the preceding year been maintained, the increased freight earnings would have amounted to seven and a half millions instead of two and a half. Thus the return of the world to a peace basis may be said to have cost the National system five millions in freight revenue during the year 1919. But no one will say it was not worth while.

The National system carried eleven and a half million passengers during the year, an increase of about one and three quarter millions. Additional services and the return troop movement helped to swell these figures. Total passenger earnings increased from fourteen to a little less than twenty-two million dollars. About a million and a half of this increased revenue is attributable to the 10 per cent increase in passenger rates granted during 1918, and in effect for the first time for the full year. The coupling up of the Canadian Northern and the Canadian Government railways has, I may say, resulted in an increase in better paying long-haul business, and the management has every expectation that this business will be maintained, notwithstanding the completion of troop movements.

Operating Costs.

I shall try not to weary the House with an endless procession of figures, but as briefly as possible call attention to their significance, and then append to this verbal statement detailed statistical information, which, with the permission of hon. members, could appear as appendices to these remarks, and thus receive the leisured scrutiny which their importance warrants. The tables to which I refer differentiate between Canadian National and former Canadian Government lines, and, as well, give the totals for the entire system, with which I have been dealing. They do not, however, include the Grand Trunk Pacific, which, pending the taking over of the Grand Trunk system, has been operated as a separate entity. As receiver for the Grand Trunk Pacific, I intend in due course to present a detailed report of the operation of that line for 1919, though I shall refer briefly to the results of that operation at a later stage of my present remarks.

The operating revenue of the National system as already stated, was more than ninety-three million dollars. The wage bill for the year exceeded seventy-three millions, having, owing largely to the McAdoo series of advances, jumped from fifty-four millions in 1918. In other words, out of every one dollar of revenue earned, seventy-eight cents passed directly, by way of wages, to the employees.

Labour Conditions.

The cessation of hostilities appreciably relieved the labour situation and enabled a start to be made on overtaking considerable maintenance of way and equipment work which had been deferred under war conditions. An extra large number of tie renewals were made, which, at the higher price and higher cost of labour, made a large item. Also relaying of rails which could not be gone on with during the war, added to operating expenses. Special locomotive, car, and work equipment repairs were undertaken with a view to keeping in service as much equipment as possible so as to avoid purchase of new units at the extraordinarily high prices to which I shall refer later.

It is to be remembered then, in dealing with the operating expenses for the year under review, that such deferred maintenance work as has been done, amounting to over five million dollars, is included in the year's operating expenses, and to that extent has increased the deficit. There is still a large amount of deferred work to do, which will add to the operating costs for the year nineteen-twenty, but it is satisfactory to know that all the work which is being done is increasing the physical value of the property, as well as making for higher efficiency and economic operation.

The position of the 55,000 employees of the National system was materially improved during the year. They worked on the average a shorter day, and capital expenditures for the year included large items for the improvement of their housing and working conditions. In 1914 the average wage per year of the railway employees of Canada was $700; in 1919 on the National system it was $1,447.

The relations between the management and the employees have been very satisfactory. Since Canadian Railway Board of Adjustment No. 1 was established in September, 1918, Canadian railways have been remarkably free from serious labour troubles, and although the National system then comprised 35 per cent of the mileage in Canada, the grievances arising therefrom amounted to only about 16 per cent of the cases before the board. It is hoped that this board, which is comprised of six representatives of the large railway labour brotherhoods and six railway officers, will be maintained so that differences of opinion may continue to be settled by round table conference rather than by more expensive uneconomic and inconvenient methods.

Betterments.

Important progress was made during the year in improving the transportation plant of the Government-owned lines. The aim of the management is to bring the lines up to the standard which existing traffic justifies, and to improve these standards as traffic increases, and finally to reach the position where the facilities will provide a slight margin over the immediate traffic requirements, so that when emergency traffic develops there will not be congestion. With respect to many sections of the main lines this margin of capacity now exists, but expenditures are required on various sections, and at terminal and other important points where limiting conditions now restrict the economic handling of traffic. To improve track conditions, 625 miles of new 85 pound rail were laid, and on 130 additional miles of track the existing rail was replaced with heavier section, this being largely good 80 or 70 pound rail released by the first item. The balance of the released rail was used up on the construction of 64 new passing tracks, and the extension of 35 others; also 44 transfer, storage and other tracks, and 46 private and industrial tracks. This additional trackage will greatly facilitate the handling of trains and switching in yards.

About $1,200,000 was spent on ballasting. Over 100 trestles were replaced with permanent structures, and many other bridge improvements were made, a large item being $267,000 expended on the St. Charles river bridge. Good progress was made on the important work of providing a second track where in previous years serious congestion has occurred on the Intercolonial railway. The points where double tracking is being undertaken are between Ste. Rosalie and Charlotte, Truro and Belmont, between Springhill Junction and Maccan and also out of Moncton. Over a million dollars was expended on the work during 1919. The double track between Drumheller and Munson Junction, Alberta, has been completed, thus greatly facilitating the handling of coal from the Drumheller mines. In the case of the Drumheller work the grouping of 23 mines in one locality and the attendant mining conditions make the handling of the traffic practically a limiting factor in production; the movement, too, being crowded into a relatively short season, makes it imperative that good facilities for handling be provided. These expenditures to improve operating conditions produce in many cases a much greater return on the investment than equal expenditures on new lines, as not only are additional earnings secured, but operating expenses are reduced, greater use of equipment is obtained and better service to the public. In line with the management's policy of improving existing facilities, many new structures have been erected, among these being 16 water tanks, 11 coal handling plants, 2 coaling trestles, 26 stations, 12 station shelters, 13 freight sheds, 4 express buildings, 64 single section houses, 10 double section houses, 36 bunk houses, and 8 workmen's cottages. Such expenditures eliminate train delays, effect labour saving, add needed facilities, provide housing and tend to the welfare of employees.

Additions and improvements to round houses, machine shops and other mechanical facilities accounted for $125,000. General improvements included considerable ditching, widening banks, removing sags preparatory in some cases to ballasting. Some diversions to reduce grades, to give better alignment, or eliminate bridges were completed and others are under way.

The rebuilding of the Canadian Northern line between Cap Rouge and Portneuf, washed out by the tidal wave in 1918, was almost completed.

On Prince Edward Island, where the lines are narrow gauge, a third rail has been laid from Charlottetown to Summerside, and from Port Borden to Emerald—60 miles in all, which enables standard gauge rolling stock to be interchanged by car ferry, greatly facilitiating the handling of traffic to and from the Island.

New Construction in 1919.

In submitting the construction programme for 1919, the directors recommended that the work to be undertaken should be as closely as possible confined to completing branch lines which were under construction in Western Canada at the outbreak of the war. Following this policy, work was done on various lines, among the more important being the extension of the Hanna-Medicine Hat line to Red Cliff, and the St. Paul de Metis line in Alberta, and the Humboldt-Melfort connection and Duck Lake branch in Saskatchewan, and in British Columbia the Kamloops-Kelowna line. On Vancouver island, twenty-eight miles of track were laid on grade previously constructed, and forty miles of ballasting completed. The Vancouver passenger station was completed and opened for traffic.

Shortage of labour and disturbed industrial conditions during the summer prevented the expected completion of certain Western branches, but the work on these will be vigourously pushed this season.

At Toronto, the Leaside terminal yard was further developed. Most of the facilities at this point are now utilized and are proving of great value in handling the business on the lines in Southern Ontario.

Betterments Proposed for 1920.

The following general improvements are recommended by the directors as being among the most pressing requirements of the system:

Canadian Government Railways.

The relaying of about 200 miles of track with heavier steel, and the utilization of the released steel for additional passing tracks, spurs and sidings.

The completion of the 20 miles of double tracking already referred to and now well under way. Improvements to or replacing of over 200 bridges, trestles and culverts, including filling and other permanent work.

The construction of 25 stations and freight sheds, 7 coaling plants, 7 water stations, nine buildings for the mechanical department such as engine houses, machine shops, etc., 58 buildings for housing employees such as section houses.

Provision will be made for the general improvement of track conditions, and at St. John an extension of the yard trackage is required to relieve the congestion at that point.

Canadian Northern Lines.

The construction of branch line mileage in Western Canada provides an opportunity to replace steel now on main lines with heavier section, the steel taken from the main lines being serviceable for branch line traffic. The additional traffic being provided by the branch lines is enabling heavier train movements to be made, and the present demand for all-steel passenger equipment requires the utilization of very heavy power, making it necessary to continually improve the standard of main line roadbed, track and structures.

The programme in respect to rail replacements covers the relaying of 350 miles of new steel on main lines; 331 bridges, trestles and culverts are to be replaced, filled or renewed, involving the replacing of many temporary structures by permanent work. The completion of additional mileage in the Prairie Provinces has necessitated the construction of many new buildings, a large item being 68 new stations and freight sheds. There were also built 22 coaling plants. The present price of labour necessitates the adoption of labour-saving devices of this kind. There are also listed 20 new water stations. The mechanical department's facilities will be improved by the construction of new engine houses, machine shops, etc., 19 in all. Some of these are required at the end of new branch lines. Additional lines also account for a number of the 134 section houses required.

A large appropriation is required for general road-bed and track improvements and increasing traffic warrants improvements and revision of the main line between Montreal and Quebec.

A greatly needed improvement is the stringing of an additional copper and steel wire between Montreal and Toronto and Winnipeg to provide through wires between these important points, the present wires being required for local business and train despatching. The new wires will also enable new through business to be handled by the G. N. W. through Canada, whereas the company's through business now goes via United States connections.

Construction Programme, 1920.

It is again proposed to confine new construction in Western Canada to the completion of branch lines on which work is well under way. The programme includes work on 16 branch lines in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. The principal items of track-laying will be from Eston south-easterly 35 miles; Humboldt-Melfort line, 32 miles; Melfort north-easterly, 32 miles; Oliver north-easterly, 22 miles; Peace River line, 32½ miles; Swift Current line, 18½ miles, and Jackfish Lake branch, 27 miles. In British Columbia it is proposed to grade 40.4 miles to complete the Okanagan branch. In all, 349.6 miles of track is to be laid and 123.4 miles of line to be graded. The extension of other lines and the construction of additional branches is very strongly urged, and while certain of these projections are fully justified on traffic considerations, their construction has to be postponed on account of the financial situation, labour shortage and high cost of material and supplies.

In Eastern Canada there are several very important connections which can be regarded as essential to economic and unified operation with other lines of the National system, but which must also be postponed until the financial situation improves. Among these may be mentioned the Long Lake connection between the National Transcontinental and the Canadian Northern main lines which, when completed, will give the Canadian Northern railway the short route between Winnipeg, Montreal and Toronto.

Rolling Stock Situation.

During the year 1919 the following rolling stock was ordered for Canadian Government railway:

25 Pacific type locomotives,
25 Switching locomotives,
13 Compartment observation cars,
18 Standard sleeping cars,
9 Dining cars,
30 Baggage cars,
130 Colonist cars,
20 Tourist cars,
20 Mail cars,
550 General service or coal cars,
500 Flat cars,
750 Box cars,
250 Ballast cars,
800 Stock cars,
150 Refrigerator cars,
25 Cabooses.

This equipment has been delivered except seven of the standard sleepers, the observation cars, diners, first-class coaches and mail cars, all of which it is expected will be in service at an early date.

Passenger earnings have shown such a good increase that 30 additional heavy passenger locomotives are required, and 50 additional passenger train cars.

On account of the very high unit prices of rolling stock, the requirements have been kept down to the lowest point consistent with traffic conditions. This is very necessary in view of the fact that locomotives suitable for our purpose which could be purchased for $24,000 in 1914 cost $62,000 now; first-class coaches have increased from $16,000 to $38,000; dining cars from $28,000 to $46,000. The increase in price of freight cars range from 144 per cent for refrigerators to 170 per cent for steel frame box cars.

The equipment to be ordered is as follows:

Locomotives.

20 Pacific type—medium weight.
10 Pacific type—heavy weight.
25 heavy freight locomotives.
20 switching locomotives.

Freight Cars.

3000 40-ton box cars.
500 refrigerator cars.
650 50-ton coal or general purpose cars.
350 50-ton ballast cars.
100 cabooses.
6 snow ploughs.
150 stock cars.

Passenger Cars.

20 baggage cars.
18 standard sleepers.
12 standard diners.

Mr. CHARLES MARCIL: Were all these cars purchased in Canada?

Mr. REID: All that could possibly be obtained in Canada were purchased in this country. I will give the details of the contracts when the House is in committee.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I must remind hon. gentlemen that the House is not now sitting as Committee of Supply and that these questions can be more properly asked when that stage is reached.

Mr. REID: I will be glad to give any information that is desired as soon as we are in Committee of Supply.

The Question of Rates.

The question of rates is one which will bear careful examination. No system can indefinitely stand the relationship at present existing between earnings and operating expenses of the National, but before proceeding to a consideration of future rates, it may be well to review what has taken place in recent years in that connection. Hon. members will recall the agitation, extending over a period of years, for a reduction of rates in Western Canada, by many urged because it was felt one railway at least could well afford a reduction. Just a few months before the outbreak of war this western rate case was finally decided. The judgment involved a comprehensive reduction in rates in territory west of the Great Lakes, and very seriously affected the newer lines. Then came the war and with it undreamed of problems of transportation, and the railways began to feel the effects of war conditions. In 1916 what is known as the Eastern rates case provided for a five per cent increase in tariffs of Eastern roads, both Canadian and American, but it did not apply to the West. In 1918 there were two rate increases, the March order, commonly called the 15 per cent increase, and the August increase of 25 per cent (so-called) which accompanied the first of the McAdoo series of wage increases. There was this difference, however, between the rate increases and the wage increases: the latter were retroactive the rates could not be retroactive; and, in addition, it was found that the rate increases, when finally applied, did not produce anything like the increase in revenue hoped for. The first mentioned (15 per cent) netted only seven per cent on the National Railway system's passenger revenue and ten per cent on the system's freight revenue, or nine per cent on the gross. The second increase was on freight only, and was less in the West than in the East, owing to the equalization of eastern and western rates involved. For instance, in Western Canada the 25 per cent increase wiped out the previous 15 per cent increment. Taken together, these two rate increases are estimated therefore to have approximately only 30 per cent instead of considerably more than 40 as they would have had they been imposed upon the other.

Now, there are only two ways by which a railway's revenues may be increased. One is by increased rates and the other is by increased business. The Canadian National railways, should—in view of the resumption of trade and immigration, in view of the strengthening of weak spots by the inclusion of Grand Trunk lines, and especially in view of the traffic possibilities of the sixty steamships, the freight of which will come to National railways,—commence to show a steady increase in business, but the management has, in the course of public utterances, called attention to the necessity for increased rates if operating expenses are to be met out of earnings. There are and will be various opinions as to this, but it behooves us to give careful consideration to the viewpoint of the management. They point out that Canadian roads are closely bound up with American roads, in proof of which witness the application of the McAdoo awards to Canada. Not only do we pay the same wage schedules and apply the same working conditions, but, generally speaking, freight rates are the same on both sides of the line. In the United States the roads are being handed back to their owners in groups, and the legislation provides that they be allowed to earn 5½ per cent on their investments, with an additional half per cent construction betterments. During the war the American roads were guaranteed a certain return which was made up from the Public Treasury. Now that this guarantee no longer applies, either an increase in rates will be necessary or the American Government must continue to implement the earnings of the weaker roads. It is estimated that a rate increase of 26 per cent would be required to put the American roads on a paying basis. An increase to that extent, if applied to the earning of 1919 on the National system, would have produced a revenue of a little more than one hundred and ten millions, which would have left a surplus of net earnings of over two millions. That, of course, does not take the fixed charges into account. The management, therefore, feel that, both because we have the same expenditures to meet and must compete with each other all along the line, whatever freight increase is permitted in the United States ought also to be applied to Canadian roads. As Minister of Railways and having asked the management to operate on a business basis, I am bound to present the management's viewpoint for the consideration of Parliament.

I have, however, a larger responsibility as Minister of Railways, having, as such, to do with all Canadian roads, and answerable, in the final analysis, to the people, who at present find the cost of commodities sufficiently high. The railway situation in Canada has undergone a marked change, the entire mileage being now controlled in two great groups or systems, the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific. In Canada the mileage of the latter road is 14,824, but there are 4,948 of owned or controlled lines in the United States, so that the system mileage aggregates 19,772. Including the Grand Trunk lines, the Canadian National system will comprise 22,356 miles, of which 2,093 miles are located in the States. These two great systems are, from the mileage standpoint, at any rate, fairly evenly balanced, and it is unnecessary to point out to honourable members that any increase in rates granted the Canadian National system would equally apply to Canadian Pacific lines. No doubt, honourable members read in the newspapers recently the annual statement of this immense corporation, which showed that, notwithstanding the disadvantage of increased operating costs and charges common to all roads, the Canadian Pacific railway had been able to pay a dividend of seven per cent on their railway operation and three per cent on their outside operations, or in all their usual 10 per cent dividend on last year's operation.

Now, the argument has been advanced that it would be possible to tax out of the Canadian Pacific Railway any increase in earnings which might be permitted them in common with the Canadian National system. I have my own opinion as to the fairness of such a proposition, but, in any event, I personally feel that such a proposal, even if fair from the standpoint of competition, would not be practicable, for the simple reason that you could not prevent the Canadian Pacific from spending their revenue legitimately on the improvement of their property, and if, at the end of the year, we found that the increased earnings had gone into betterments, how could we tax it out of them?

My own feeling is that the Canadian Pacific are entitled to a rate sufficient to earn 7 per cent on their railway investment, and this they appear to be able to do, notwithstanding present abnormal conditions. The question resolves itself, therefore, into the following proposition:

Shall Canadian freight rates be increased generally for the particular purpose of enabling the Canadian National system to meet its operating expenses and fixed charges, or would it be better to go on with the present rates, giving dealers no additional excuse for increasing the cost of living, and trusting to increase in business, the economies it should be possible to effect by co-ordination, and the return of normal conditions to gradually reduce these deficits until the day (which I personally feel is not far off) when the revenue will prove sufficient to pay for operation and, later, also to take care of fixed charges?

Should this latter suggestion prevail, it would require to be thoroughly understood that the Minister of Railways, no matter who he may be, must come down next year with a deficit, and the next year with a deficit, and so on for a few years until we shall have turned the corner.

The earnings of the Canadian Railways last year were 350 millions, made up as follows:

C.P.R.	177	millions
Canadian National	94	"
G.T.R.	68	"
G.T.P.	11	"

A 25 per cent increase on these earnings would approximate $88,000,000, the greater part of which would be earned in Canada. Whether we shall take 88 millions in increased freight fates out of the people of the country next year in order to show a surplus for the National system is a question as to which I myself am not prepared to take the responsibility of deciding either one way or the other at the present time. I leave it to the consideration of the House and of the people of Canada as a whole, and shall be glad to elicit representative public opinion in the matter, so that the Government may be in a position to give this important question the best possible consideration.

Bringing in the Grand Trunk.

The current year will witness the rounding out of the Canadian National Railway system by the acquisition of the Grand Trunk and its subsidiary lines. With these added, it is estimated that over 50 per cent of the domestic freight traffic of the Dominion will be found to originate along Government railways. The connecting up of the Grand Trunk lines will give direct access to eastern industrial centres, especially in Ontario. Western Canadian business originating on Grand Trunk lines will no longer require to be split into three but can go forward in one long haul over all-National lines, and, vice versa, the Grand Trunk will benefit from a large amount of additional business from our Western lines which it could not obtain except as a member of the National system.

Fear has been expressed that Halifax and St. John might suffer as a result of the Government taking over the Grand Trunk. The people of Eastern Canada need have no fear of this for the reason that these are the terminals of our immense railway systems and have been for many years. They have been greatly improved, and in the operation of our National system, more especially in view of the ocean tonnage we now control, these ports will become increasing, rather than diminishing, factors in the Canadian railroad situation.

The connecting up of the Grand Trunk lines will mean that 52 per cent of the entire railway mileage of Canada will have passed under Government control. This will permit of economies in operation where the two systems have been maintaining parallel lines and duplicate staffs, and, as already pointed out, there should be compensating advantages to the Canadian Northern, the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk as well. I wish to point out, however, that, in speaking of advantages, I am referring to the Grand Trunk lines only, not the Grand Trunk Pacific or the Transcontinental Railway systems. These last named colonization roads, built as part and parcel of the Grand Trunk, are bound to be unprofitable for many years to come. The loss on operation of the Transcontinental last year was $2,735,000. This was included in the Canadian National figures already referred to. But there is also the Grand Trunk Pacific, which the Government found on its doorstep in March of last year, and as to the operation of which I shall have to make a separate report, as the figures form no part of the National system figures with which we have been dealing. But to make my present statement complete, I desire to point out that the Grand Trunk Pacific for the year ending December 31 last showed an operating loss of five and a half millions. To this must be added fixed charges of eight and a half millions, making a total deficit of fourteen millions, an increase of three and a half millions over 1918. The reasons for this increase was set out in a communication from the General Manager to myself as Receiver, and these will be dealt with at the proper time.

Personally, I do not think it will be possible for many years to make the expenses of operating these colonization roads, nor do I think it fair that they should be expected to make the showing we look for from the Canadian Northern, the Intercolonial or the Grand Trunk proper. Therefore, I think the annual loss on these railways should not be added to the net deficit of the Canadian National railways for purposes of comparison, and I have instructed the management that the operation of these systems must be shown separately at the close of each year, so that when comparisons are made between other systems and our Government system, the comparison may be a reasonably fair one.

Hudson Bay Railway.

There is one more railway which was commenced and which has not been completed, which is known as the Hudson Bay railway. For the information of the hon. members, I may say that the Government has decided that no more work shall be done on that during the coming year. It is the intention to use every effort to extend branch lines into districts where settlers are much more in evidence and in much greater need of railway communication. The Hudson Bay Railway will therefore stand until financial conditions will permit of its resumption.

In conclusion let me say there was a time, not long ago, when the Government system was largely a local carrier getting the short end of business that goes with the short haul. The longest haul it could hope for was from Halifax or Sydney to Montreal, and vice versa. And in competing with the Grand Trunk for Montreal business offering to the seaboard, we could charge only the Portland rate, though the Intercolonial mileage to Halifax was 841 as against the Grand Trunk's 297 to Portland. Similarly, the Canadian Pacific railway had the advantage of its comparatively short haul of 481 miles to St. John, and for business originating at the Intercolonial chief terminal, Halifax, it had to compete with this same highly organized and stronger competitor, whose agents were always active abroad and whose ships were ever on the seas. But a change has come over the scene. Now the Government system itself bestrides the continent, with branches reaching for the first time into productive centres and with terminals upon both Eastern and Western oceans. The story of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine has been told by the proper minister, and at last we also have our ships upon the seas, and our agents abroad will actively compete for international trade. Keen competition, "adroit, persistent, aggressive and fair," is promised by the President of the Canadian Pacific, who expresses the hope that both their own systems and the National may in future work in common for the advancement of the country. He says there need no longer be controversy, but that there will always be keen competition. That is what the management of the National system expects and welcomes. I am told that the nationalization of the Canadian Northern has made no difference in the morale of the employees of that road, that they are as keenly alert as ever and "on their toes'" to make government ownership and operation a success. We expect the employees of the Grand Trunk systems will co-operate with equal loyalty, and the Government in turn will spare no effort to build up a great National railway system able to compete with and maintain the high standard of transportation efficiency reached by the Canadian Pacific. That road may well be the standard against which we may measure the success of government ownership and operation. I say "success" because I am not prepared for one moment to contemplate any other possibility. The National lines, with the Grand Trunk included, will comprise a system which will serve every province in Canada, which is identified with every progressive community, and must continue to perform the major part of the transportation service of the entire Dominion. We have taken steps to remove the Government's lines from political interference. Experienced railway men are in charge; they are being given money to improve the roadbed, to buy the best equipment to enable the greatest tonnage to be hauled in a single train. It is the greatest encouragement towards expansion to have this great National system ready and equipped to handle additional traffic as it develops—and it surely will develop. If we imagine Canada to have reached the maximum of development then we shall have planned foolishly, but I, for one, have the faith to feel and the vision to prophesy that this great transportation system is not being prepared to perform this splendid transportation service in vain.

I would like, Mr. Speaker, to hand in these schedules to be inserted in Hansard so that hon. members may have before them all the details I have mentioned.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

Comparative summary of operating results—12 months ending December 31, 1918-19.

Operating Revenue.	1919.	1918.	Increase.	% Increase.
Canadian Northern	$53,562,177.57	$47,310,011.91	$ 6,252,165.66	13.22
Canadian Government ..	40,179,380.93	34,636,484.67	5,542,896.26	16.00
Canadian National	93,741,558.50	81,946,496.58	11,795,061.92	14.39

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—Con.

Comparative summary of operating results—12 months ending December 31, 1918-19—Con.

	1919.	1918.	Increase.	% Increase.
Distribution.
Passenger	21,837,744.47	14,327,355.63	7,510,388.84	52.42
Freight	63,154,773.39	60,550,011.42	2,604,761.97	4.30
Other	8,749,040.64	7,069,129.53	1,679,911.11	23.76
Operating Expenses.
Canadian Northern	60,034,023.92	44,062,949.94	15,971,073.98	36.25
Canadian Government	47,728,205.73	40,028,099.35	7,700,106.38	19.24
Canadian National	107,762,229.65	84,091,049.29	23,671,180.36	28.15
Distribution.
Mtce. of Way and Str.	28,476,450.66	19,266,424.83	9,210,025.83	47.80
Mtce. of Equipment	19,950,409.17	15,792,342.10	4,158,067.07	26.33
Traffic	1,478,372.41	1,291,721.00	186,651.41	14.45
Transportation—rail	52,914,891.80	44,406,311.93	8,508,579.87	19.16
Transportation—water	782,316.69	319,857.23	462,459.46	144.58
Miscellaneous	1,877,168.08	1,162,311.69	714,856.39	61.50
General	2,282,620.84	1,852,080.51	430,540.33	23.25
Operating Ratio.
Canadian Northern	112.08	93.14	18.94	20.33
Canadian Government	118.79	115.57	3.22	2.78
Canadian National	114.96	102.62	12.34	12.02
Operating Loss.
Canadian Northern	* 6,471,846.35	3,247,061.97	* 9,718,908.32	*299.31
Canadian Government	* 7,548,824.80	* 5,391,614.68	* 2,157,210.12	* 40.01
Canadian National	*14,020,671.15	* 2,144,552.71	*11,876,118.44	*553.84
Mileage Operated.
Steam	13,601.75	13,451.16	150.59	* 1.12
Electric	125.60	62.00	63.60	*102.58
Total	13,727.35	13,513.16	214.19	* 1.58
Revenue train miles	29,633,398	28,555,928	1,077,470	3.77
Earnings per R.T.M.	3.09†	2.82†	0.27	9.58
Expenses per R.T.M.	3.57†	2.91†	0.66	22.66
Loss per R.T.M.	0.48†	0.09†	0.39	433.33

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

	1919.	1918.	Increase.	% Increase.
Operating deficit	$14,020,671.15	$ 2,144,552.71	$11,876,118.44	553.84
Canadian Government rentals	697,384.22	692,400.00	4,984.22	7.20
Miscellaneous income	*961,665.21	*298,075.67	*1,259,740.88	*422.62
Def. St. John and Quebec	187,269.97	142,941.87	44,328.10	31.01
Net deficit excluding Can. Northern fixed charges and miscellaneous income balance	$13,943,660.13	$ 3,277,970.25	$10,665,689.88	325.38

Traffic—Passengers carried (exclusive of electric lines.)

	1919.	1918.	Increase.	% Increase.
Canadian Government	6,697,232	5,779,085	918,157	15.89
Canadian Northern	4,910,160	4,114,965	795,195	19.32
Canadian National	11,607,392	9,894,050	1,713,352	17.32

	1919.	1918.	Increase.	% Increase.
Canadian Gov't. Railways	11,108,391	13,476,755	2,368,364	17.57
Canadian Northern	12,822,444	13,699,345	876,901	6.41
Canadian National	23,930,835	27,176,100	3,245,265	11.93

Train mileage—Passenger.
Canadian Government	4,744,179	3,946,703	797,476	20.21
Canadian Northern	5,829,184	5,043,098	786,086	15.58
Canadian National	10,573,363	8,989,801	1,583,562	17.62

*These figures denote decrease or deficit.

†Electric and water lines excluded.

Statement excludes income and equipment items and branch line rentals.

[Mr. J. D. Reid.]

CANADAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—Con.

Mixed.
Canadian Government	1,182,041	1,205,829	* 23,788	* 1.97
Canadian Northern	1,841,603	1,788,536	53,067	2.97
Canadian National	3,023,644	2,994,365	29,279	0.98
Freight.
Canadian Government	6,199,775	6,986,399	* 786,624	*11.26
Canadian Northern	9,788,782	9,545,329	243,453	2.55
Canadian National	15,988,557	16,531,728	* 543,171	* 3.29
Work.
Canadian Government	547,594	492,558	55,036	11.17
Canadian Northern	1,505,543	1,108,625	396,918	35.80
Canadian National	2,053,137	1,601,183	451,954	28.23
Total.
Canadian Government	12,673,589	12,631,489	42,100	0.33
Canadian Northern	19,012,946	17,525,622	1,487,324	8.49
Canadian National	31,686,535	30,157,111	1,529,424	5.07

*Decrease.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

Comparison of pay-roll—12 months ended December 31.

	1919.	1918.	Increase.	Per cent.
Can. Government railways	$31,545,481.18	$24,980,155.59	$ 6,565,325.59	26.28
Canadian Northern railway	41,620,133.30	29,269,906.70	12,350,226.60	42.19
	$73,165.614.48	$54,250,062.29	$18,915,552.19	37.87

Explanation of Increase.

	Canadian Government.	Canadian Northern.	Total.	Per cent.
Increase due to G.O. 27	$2,499,353.28	$ 3,218,339.56	$ 5,717,692.84	30.23
Supplements	3,749,029.92	4,827,509.34	8,576,539.26	45.34
Deferred maintenance and increased service	316,942.39	3,456,199.97	3,773,142.36	19.14
Back time 1918	.....	84,177.73	84,177.73	.....
Total	6,565,325.59	12,350,226.60	18,915,552.19	100.00

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the House unanimously consent that the schedules mentioned be inserted in Hansard.

Consent unanimously given.

(The figures in the subjoined comparative statements are not final and are subject to slight modifications as complete returns become available):

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

REVISED ESTIMATE OF WAGES FOR 12 MONTHS AT PRESENT RATES.

Showing increase under McAdoo Award, Supplements and Collateral Increases down to and inclusive of 4c. increase to Shopmen. Based on number of hours on duty for all employees for year ended June 30, 1918.

Class of Employees.	Compensation prior to G.O. 27.	Increase under G.O. 27.		No.	Increase under Supplements.		Estimated Wages 12 months under existing rates.	Total increase over 1917.
		Amount.	%		Amount.	%		Amount.	%
	$ cts.	$ cts.			$ cts.		$ cts.	$ cts.
Maintenance of way	10,686,978 83	2,837,304 88	26·55	8	4,701,487 53	43·99	18,225,771 24	7,538,792 41	70·54
Maintenance of equipment	9,595,877 56	2,921,562 96	30·44	4	3,163,022 42	32·96	15,680,462 94	6,084,585 38	63·41
Enginemen	5,334,427 54	611,870 90	11·47	15	636,986 23	11·94	6,583,284 67	1,248,857 13	23·41
Trainmen	6,323,329 91	673,679 16	10·65	16	392,532 24	6·21	7,389,541 31	1,066,211 40	16·86
Agents and telegraphers	2,468,844 39	177,110 04	7·17	13	956,310 93	38·74	3,602,265 36	1,133,420 97	45·9
Clerical and other station forces	6,199,273 57	1,195,561 46	19·28	7	1,970,280 30	31·79	9,365,115 53	3,165,841 76	51 07
Various (not distributed)	1,381,846 26	261,059 04	18·89	Var.	830,981 46	60·14	2,473,886 76	1,092,040 50	79·03
Officers	1,275,303 73	.....	.....	Coll.	361,353 81	26·33	1,636,657 54	361,353 81	28·33
Grant total	43,265,881 79	8,678,148 44	20·06	.....	13,013,954 92	30·07	64,956,985 15	21,691,103 36	50·13

TORONTO, February 24th, 1920.

(Sgd.) E. P. MALLORY, Statistician.

Mr. FRANK CAHILL (Pontiac): Mr. Speaker, the hon. minister's address will, I think, confirm the opinion generally held throughout the country that the Government have absolutely no railway policy. He has just stated to us, if I caught his figures correctly, that we made a loss on operation of $14,000,000 and a loss on interest charges of $19,000,000, or a total loss of $33,000,000, and that no provision whatever for maintenance is included in these figures. So that he comes down to us to-day with a statement showing that if we had maintained the road properly we would have sustained a loss this year of not less than $60,000,000; and he tells us also that this loss is to be continued for one year, perhaps for two or more years, perhaps for many years to come. He states in his usual way that he has no policy as to what is to be done about this deficit: Whether he is going to ask the people to continue to pay these heavy losses out of the treasury of the country or whether he is going to adjust his management so that the road will earn the revenues that it should earn. The minister did not say a word, so far as I heard, about the management. Apparently he is quite satisfied to let the Mackenzie and Mann crowd go on tapping the treasury of Canada indefinitely. He is not prepared to tax the people who are using the service; he is quite willing that the Mackenzie and Mann crowd should go on spending this $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 a year without giving any information whatever to this House or to the country. The amount that the minister mentions is only the deficit; no account is taken of expenditures necessary for maintenance or for betterments. During the past two or three years we have spent huge sums on this system, and all that we can get from the minister to-day is that we may expect to go on spending forty, fifty, sixty or more millions per annum until these railroad barons, these Canadian robbers, shall have exhausted the treasury of this country.

The minister stated that colonization roads were not paying. I am glad to see the leader of the Government (Sir George Foster) in his seat, because I wish to direct his attention to a matter with regard to colonization roads that is of prime importance to every Canadian. We have developed in the northern part of Quebec a railway system and we have settled in that country upwards of 15,000 of the best colonizers that can be found anywhere in the world; they are the only people who will ever colonize the northern part of our Canadian domain. They are not like the people who were being taken out of Kapuskasing during the last few months; they are doing successful work in the district in which they have settled. The only drawback is the lack of railway facilities. I wish to read an affidavit which I received from there a few days ago. It is signed by Frank Blais, and reads as follows:

I, the undersigned, Frank Blais, lumber merchant, of the village of Amos, make oath and say:

1. There is actually at the different sidings between La Reine and Nottaway—

That is a very short distance in that country.

—on the Transcontinental railway, more than 60,000 cords of pulp wood piled up ready to be shipped.

2. There is also in this same district 20,000,000 feet of sawn lumber ready to be forwarded which was left in the yards from 1919 on account of the shortage of cars, and there will be about 60,000,000 more manufactured during next season.

3. It would need about 6,500 cars to ship the lumber and pulp wood already piled up ready to be forwarded.

4. The authorities of the Transcontinental have only placed at the disposition of the owners of the pulp wood and lumber about 50 cars during the whole month of February, and about the same proportion during this month of March.

5. When the cars are loaded and moved from our sidings, they only reach their destination point after a delay of six or eight weeks, and often more.

6. The employees of the railroad will not take the trouble of placing the cars on the sidings in the proper way to be used conveniently by the shippers, and the engines used do not seem to be in the proper state to give satisfaction in moving the cars.

7. The whole Abitibi region is suffering heavy losses from the facts above mentioned.

And I have signed:

FRANK BLAIS.

Sworn before me at Amos this 22nd day of March, 1920.

C. A. LAFRANCE, N.P.,
Com. Supreme Court, District of Quebec.

Now, there is the condition of the road that the minister states lost traffic last year on account of the war being over. He says that the earnings were decreased because the railways did not have the traffic; yet here is traffic lying right at hand that has not been moved. I want to read the letter accompanying the affidavit, because it throws light on this subject, and there is a good deal of truth in it. It reads:

Again we have to apply for your protection and to ask you to take our interests in hand. I am writing in my own name, but I will send you declarations by other lumber merchants and pulp wood dealers, which shall prove to you that the same unfortunate situation exists all over the Abitibi region. We believe this state of affairs could be improved with your help, by putting the case before the authorities of the Federal Government, which has full control over this situation.

You are perfectly aware of the fact that the pulpwood and lumber trades are the only sources of revenue for this part of the county. To take advantage of this industry we necessarily need cars for the transportation of the lumber and pulpwood, and we actually have no cars of no kind for that purpose. We are asking such cars through all the officers of the railway, with no result.

I have myself over 15,000 cords of pulpwood, at a cost of more than $120,000, and I can get no cars to forward the same. I have made a demand for 30 cars a day, and I received an average of one car per day. In two months from now all that wood we own will be exposed to burn in the bush fires, and we could not sustain such a loss. The money has been advanced by the banks, who are helping us to buy that pulpwood from the settlers, who have no other means to support their families. It would also be a total loss for the paper mills, that are already blamed on account of the high price charged for their paper. We have been compelled to stop buying any pulpwood, not being able to ship what we have on hand, and there is still a great quantity for sale by settlers, who are waiting on such sale to support their families.

There is in the Abitibi region about 55,000 cords of pulp wood to be shipped before the bush fires become a danger and it would need about 4,000 cars.

There was about 20,000,000 feet of lumber left from 1919 on account of the shortage of cars and there will be about 60,000,000 feet more during next season, which will need about 5,500 cars for expedition and we are wishing that you would ask the Federal authorities to prepare for such expedition of lumber and to provide for the actual need of cars for pulp wood.

You will probably have as an answer that there is no cars to be had, but I can assure you the contrary and as an example let me tell you that in February last, at Hearst, west of Cochrane, there were enough cars loaded there to force an embargo on the shipments of pulpwood from that place and there were more cars loaded than could be received; while in that same month of February my requisition was for 30 cars a day and all I had during the whole month was 6 cars.

I believe the officers of the railway in our region are doing their best to help us, but their instructions come from a higher source that does not seem to sympathize with our requirements.

Every year there are thousands of cords of pulpwood burned by the settlers who cannot sell such wood on account of the shortage of cars. This is a serious loss and we believe that the situation could be very much improved if the Federal authorities are willing to do so.

Mr. Speaker, the intimation in this letter is that the Federal Government are deliberately trying to kill settlement in the Abitibi district. It is well known that the members of the present Government who were in Opposition when the road was built opposed its construction, and it is well known that they have since taken every means of opposing the development of that country. I want to ask the leader of the Government—I am tired asking the Minister of Railways and the Department of Railways for help in that district—if it is the studied policy of the Government to choke that district off; if it is their determination to see that the settlers have no means of subsistence? Or will the Government see that these people get relief? The railways of the country cannot possibly succeed if this kind of management prevails throughout Canada. We are told by the minister that they do not succeed. Well, scarcely any person expected anything else. Having regard to the present system of no management for the railway and no railway policy on the part of the Government, how can we hope that the Canadian National railways will succeed?

I shall not take up any further time until I have had an opportunity of studying the minister's statement. But I do hope that before this discussion proceeds the minister will lay down some definite policy for the management of these railways.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East): If the minister will answer definitely a question which I have put to him by correspondence and on the floor of this House, I will refrain from laying my grievances before the House on this occasion; otherwise I propose to make my speech. When will the Oliver-St. Paul de Metis railway be completed so that a service may be afforded to people who have been suffering from lack of railway facilities since 1909?

Hon. J. D. REID: I will have the particulars when we get into committee and will be able to give the information then.

Mr. W. H. WHITE (Victoria): I also would like to ask the minister a definite question.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member would not be in order in putting a question to the minister. The hon. minister has exhausted his right to speak and is, therefore, precluded from giving a reply.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: I do not wish to extend my remarks very much if the minister can give me the information I desire. I am interested particularly in one branch of railroad. As to other matters—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: That information can be given to the hon. member in Committee of Supply, but it would be absolutely out of order for the minister to give it now.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: If my hon. friend will allow me, he will receive an answer to his question almost immediately if he allows the House to go into Committee of Supply. These questions cannot be put and answered on the motion for Committee of Supply. We always like to get into Supply as soon as possible so as to give hon. members an opportunity of putting questions and having them answered.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: I thought perhaps if I mentioned what I was going to take up the minister would be able to say whether he was going to deal with that question or not; and if not, I was going to make a complaint on account of a promise made by the minister last year. I do not know whether I am in order or not. I wanted to make a statement as to what I wished to complain about. If the minister is going to deal with that question, I am quite willing to wait until the House goes into Commttee of Supply.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member is quite in order in making any statement upon the motion to go into Committee of Supply. It may relate to this or any other matter which has not been previously debated during the present session or which is not already inscribed upon the Order Paper.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: Last year before the Railway Committee the minister promised, at a time when the Canadian Pacific were applying for a charter for a line parallelling the line of the Canadian National railway, that if they would withdraw, and the committee, instead of supporting the charter of the Canadian Pacific for a line to parallel the line of the Canadian National railway, would give the department an opportunity, they would guarantee to build a road from Whitford to Bruderheim. The Canadian Pacific had arranged to extend their line from Cutknife to Whitford and wished to extend it to South Edmonton. I may say, in passing, that Whitford is an old thickly populated settlement, a settlement that has been in existence for some thirty-five years. Every odd or even section is under cultivation in the whole district, and a delegation came here, sent by the people from that district, they naturally being very anxious to have railway facilities. There were present that day in the railway committee Mr. D. C. Coleman, Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, and Mr. McLeod of the Canadian Northern, and it was arranged amongst them that day that the Canadian Pacific would be allowed to extend their line through Lloydminster to Whitford and the Canadian Northern would extend on their old charter from Whitford to Bruderheim, thereby relieving the people in that section of the country. The minister at that time promised that the railroad would be built last year. I might say that at that time Mr. McLeod stated that the line of the railroad had been graded some four miles. I took the opportunity then to point out that the grading had been started, but that very part of the road that he claimed was under construction was now being farmed and under crop. The minister, however, promised that that extension would be constructed to relieve those people, but not a sod has been turned and nothing has been done along that line. That is why I rose to ask if any provision was made in the minister's programme that the construction of that road should go on this summer. That is what I wanted to bring before the House and the minister.

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I quite understand that we have some latitude when we come into committee and deal with specific items. Nevertheless, the minister himself found it necessary to make his statement while you, Sir, occupied the Chair, and when we have a wider range of discussion, as he might possibly find any particular item too narrow for the statement which he found it necessary to make. In like manner, I presume that private members of the House will find it necessary, in order to deal in a general way, with the statement made by the minister and the matters of policy which that statement contains, to deal with this question perhaps a little more at length while the Speaker is in the Chair and the matter is before the House as such.

For the last number of years we have heard a great deal about railway policies, railway ownership, private ownership and public ownership. I have been following the different changes that have been taking place in this House and in the country with regard to railways for some twenty years past; and the Government of the day and the party behind it take much glory to themselves because they say that they are big Canadians in connection with railway policies, and that they have a big policy in connection with railway matters. Speaking for myself, I have always contended and I still contend that the proper way to do railway business or any other business that can be left to a private concern, is to have it done in that way. I have always contended that, whatever the reason may be, it is impossible to get out of men and measures and policies in the hands of Governments the same satisfactory results as we get from private ownership and enterprise. This country of ours is the same from coast to coast, it is the same from the American boundary to the north for everbody that is in it; at least, we hope that that is the case; that there is no discrimination; that there is no favouritism. We hope that there are no shackles thrown around the neck or limbs of any person who is in business. We find in this same Canada a corporation, to which reference has been made to-day, doing splendid business, extending their lines, keeping their lines in first-class shape with everything going along well, and in the adverse conditions with which they have had to deal within the last year, they come down with a dividend of 10 per cent upon the operations of the year. That is private business, that is the management of some 22,000 miles of railway in the hands of private men, men who have grown up in the business, men who are trained, men who have nothing else in view but the business of the company, and the company is making money. That is one side of the matter; that is the side which I have always advocated, the side that I stand by. It was flung at us last year by hon. gentlemen opposite that we were the enemies of the country because we did not jump at this idea of Government-owned railways and Government management of railways in this country. If any evidence were required to show that Government management of and Government enterprise in railways in this country are a huge failure, we had that evidence in the most conclusive manner from the statement in its very best form that was given to the House to-day. The statement made by the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) to-day bears at every line, at every turn and at every page, the earmarks of the special pleader, the preparation, not of the minister, but of those who are under him, those who are trying to make the most of a bad bargain, and to make appear in the very best light the jumble of figures, the jumble of lines, the jumble of management which is foisted upon this country and which burden we have to shoulder. If I wanted to present the worst example of Government management of a railway or any other enterprise, I have it here. We are told that there is a deficit of something like $95,000,000 or $100,000,000, but that figure merely touches the fringe of the truth, as we should find if we had it. There is nothing said about what must be expended on these lines to put them in such shape that we can compete with our great competitor in this country. What can one say? What can one suggest? I would say to the Canadian people, if it were possible; get from under this burden as quickly as you can. Get it in business-like shape as soon as you can. Get it under proper management and try and make it work its way along; let one hand wash the other, so to speak. That is what any sane person with any sense of responsibility would say, if there were any means of bringing it about. I presume, however, that having been exploited for the last twenty or twenty-five years by private owners, who have kept running to their friends in this House and in this Government and have been getting all the money they required to make millions for themselves, the roads are in such a condition to-day that no private enterprise would take this monstrosity off our hands on anything like fair terms. We, therefore, have to make the most of the situation, and try and get the enterprise into business-like shape, putting all our energy behind it. It is now some two years since we were rushed here to pass an Act of Parliament for the purpose of creating some corporation that was to take hold of these roads. Politics were to be thrown to the winds, we were told. There was such a rush to get that legislation through Parliament that before the Bill was printed closure was applied in this House. You will hardly believe it, Mr. Speaker, but five pages of printed matter were added to the Bill after the closure had been on for twenty or thirty-six hours. The enterprise was so big, and the responsibility so great and pressing, that the Government could not wait one minute to put these roads into the hands of this corporation that was to be created. Well, the legislation passed. Summer came, then winter, then another summer and winter, and now I think we are getting near the close of the third year since that Bill was passed, and yet no action has been taken by the Government under that legislation. Nobody has been appointed, and things are pulling along just as they please. We are supposed to have a business Government, a business Minister of Railways, a business-like management all around. We are told we have these things, but what do we find when we look in the next? It is very nice, if a man is running a hennery, to have fine hens, but you want to look in the nest to find if there are any eggs, to see what results these birds of beautiful plumage which you are feeding, and feeding highly are giving. When we look at the nest in connection with this railway we find it is like Mother Hubbard's Cupboard—always empty. We are feeding it highly, but the balance is always on the wrong side. We get no results. How long is this to continue? I appeal to my hon. friend the Minister of Railways whether he is satisfied with this condition of things. I do not think he is. I think he says to this management from year to year, before presenting his statement to Parliament: Prepare this monstrous nightmare yourself. It is bad enough for me to be obliged to read it, but I will go into the House, supported perhaps by a glass of whiskey or something, and I will read it.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Take it back.

Mr. J. A. CURRIE (North Simcoe): This is a dry country.

Mr. McKENZIE: Perhaps it is. It was certainly a dry statement. There is nothing personal, however, to be said in connection with this undertaking. It is too crushing a load to be put on the back of any one person. I appeal to the people of this country and to the management of this system, if there is anybody responsible among them, to see if something cannot be done to take the enterprise along lines where there will be a show of daylight at some stage. The Minister of Railways tells us we are going to get around the corner. That is a wonderful sort of corner. It reminds me of the fool jackass that had a tuft of hay put on the end of a pole tied around its neck with a rope, so that the tuft of hay was always ten feet ahead of him. We seem to be getting further away from this corner all the time instead of approaching it, and we are spending millions upon millions of the people's money in the process, without any hope of ever getting it back. That is the position to-day. Without going into details just now, let me hope that there may be a prospect of reaching this corner, which seems to be so extremely difficult to get at. It took Moses forty years to get to the Promised Land, and it looks as if it was going to take us an equal number of years to put our hands on this corner which the minister is holding out to us, where better things will be in prospect for the people of this country.

We were told that the railways were to be taken clean out of politics, that politics was to have nothing whatever to do with them; but what was the statement made to-day? The minister says that the management have no policy, they cannot determine what should be done. We must do one of two things, he says. We must continue to plunge into the pockets of the Canadian people, or we must dig into their pockets in another way by increasing the freight rates. The management, he says, have not got a policy; they have not the punch or the backbone to decide for themsleves, and so they ask me to decide. But I will not decide. I do not know what is to be done, so I will bring the matter back to this old political court, and you can do as you please about it. Is that getting away from politics? Are we not getting the railways back into politics worse than ever before? We were told that it cost this country some millions of dollars every year while we were trying to get the roads away from politics, and that in future politics would have nothing whatever to do with the roads. I say, Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend from Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) told this House last year and the year before, it is impossible for any road or any property that is owned and managed by the people of this country to get away from political influences. Even if it were possible, I would not be a party to it. So long as the people of this country are putting their money into any enterprise or are being taxed for the maintenance of any undertaking in this country, they should have an opportunity through their representatives in this Parliament of having something to say about it. To suggest that we can spend hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money every year without the people having anything to say about it, is a most absurd and unworkable proposition, and the sooner we get back to rock bottom, and understand that the people of this country have a right to know what is being done with their money, the better. If we appoint a management to look after a railway or any other enterprise, that management must be answerable to the people of this country. This Parliament should have something to say about their appointment, and the Government should be perfectly frank and open with us, so that we may at the earliest possible moment know precisely what may be expected to be done. We cannot go on in this way, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that on either side of the House the minister could find wisdom, experience and the faculty of direction that would materially help him if he would only seek for these qualities.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think that at this stage it is perhaps in order for me to point out to the minister that the people in the part of the country from which I come think themselves entitled to at least fair consideration in matters of transportation. The section of the country which I have the honour to represent in this House is the oldest part of this great Canada of ours. In my county is the spot where Cabot is supposed to have landed some two hundred years ago, and it is a matter for surprise, and some indignation, on calm reflection, that the splendid people in that part of Canada are 110 miles from the nearest railroad. The people are adept fishermen and successful farmers, but they lack transportation facilities. In 1911 the sum of $100,000 or thereabouts was placed in the Estimates in order to provide a start in railroad building down there, but when this Government came into power they wiped that Estimate out. They declined to do anything in the matter, promising instead to consider the situation at a later date. In 1914, the minister being in the House, I introduced a resolution to the effect that the time had arrived when something should be done to furnish with proper facilities the good people in the Island of Cape Breton, in the county of Victoria. My good friend accepted the resolution in 1914; but, the war intervening, I deemed it proper, in the national interest and in view of the exigencies of the crisis which had suddenly burst upon us, not to press my resolution at that time or during the war. Last year, however, I moved another resolution in the House expressing the view that, in the opinion of the House, the time had come when my former resolution of 1914 should be implemented, and urging upon the Government the imperative necessity for action. That resolution was accepted by the minister and the Government, but I regret to say that nothing has been done, not even a survey having been undertaken. I find that my hon. friend is extending lines west, buying new lines, and doing sundry works in various parts of the country for the purpose of improving the railway facilities of Canada. I have no fault to find with this programme, but I do say that it is now away past the time when the Government should implement its promises and carry forward a policy that was intended by previous Governments to be fully prosecuted. It is not to the credit of this Government that part of the railway policy of the Laurier Government in 1911 was ignored to suit their purposes. Every Tory road that was in contemplation at that time was built; but because this little road of mine in the good old county of Victoria happened to be in the constituency of an Opposition man, nothing has been done there. I submit that the good peole of my county should not be punished and deprived of railway facilities simply because, of their free will and in the exercise of the franchise, they sent to the House of Commons a representative who does not happen to be sitting on the same side of the House as the Government. That should not be the policy of any Government; least of all should it be the policy of the Union Government. The policy of the Government should take cognizance of the best interests of every part of the country regardless of the political procliviities of any community. At a later stage, Mr. Speaker, I may have something further to say on this point.

I had the pleasure of meeting the minister in my own town of North Sydney some two years ago, when the hon. gentleman had an opportunity to see the congested condition of the chief terminus of the Intercolonial railway in Eastern Nova Scotia. He saw that the wharves were not large enough and that there was not enough space. There were more steamships in than there was space to accommodate them; and ten cars were ready to be pushed on the wharf where there was room for only one. Through that point goes out the immense traffic that Canada has built up with Newfoundland, and the minister was impressed with the great necessity that existed at that time, and that still exists, for attention to that terminus. Nothing has been done, however. As I heard the minister reciting the various improvements and extensions of facilities which are contemplated, I was astonished to hear nothing about this terminus at North Sydney. Probably it is not a matter of very great concern to us as to what are the requirements of the Dominion of Newfoundland, although we should have at heart the interests of every part of the Empire to which we belong. But at the same time the trade that has been built up between all parts of Canada —Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto, Halifax, etc.—with Newfoundland is immense, and if we desire to maintain that trade and traffic we must have proper facilities at the terminus at North Sydney, so that people will not have to wait two or three months before getting freight through because of a lack of accommodation. It is not a matter of personal interest to me whether or not the trade goes through that point, but it is in the interest of the whole of Canada that we should hold on to the enormous traffic which has already been built up. It is not always gratifying, although it sometimes affords a bit of satisfaction, to find one's prophecies and predictions fulfilled as time goes on. But I have always, in the face of opposition and of threats from hon. gentlemen opposite, maintained, as is apparent now, that the best way in which to deal with questions of a large character, such as the management of railways in this country, was by private enterprise if private enterprise were willing to take hold of the business. In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me read a statement that was made by Lord Macaulay as far back as 1830, and which applies to this question of State ownership as compared with private enterprise. Lord Macaulay said:

> Our rulers will best promote the improvement of the nation by strictly confining themselves to their own legitimate duties, by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair prices, industry and intelligence their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment, by maintaining peace, by defending property, by diminishing the price of law, and by observing strict economy in every department of the State. Let the Government do this; the people will assuredly do the rest.

Although there were at that time few Government-owned railways, or indeed railways of any kind, there must have been other enterprises whose conduct led Lord Macaulay to make this wise statement, which is more or less prophetic in its application to present day conditions. I submit to the best judgment of the Government this advice which the great British statesman gave so far back as the year 1830, and hope that the Government will do one of two things: Either organize some concern that will take this business out of their hands; or, if they will not do this, see to it themselves that proper management is put in charge of affairs so that we may have an institution that will at least pay its way, although it could not pay any interest on the huge sums of money which the people of Canada have invested in the enterprise with which we are now dealing.

Mr. ROBERT H. BUTTS (South Cape Breton and Richmond): I wish merely to contribute one or two observations to this debate. Listening to the speech of the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat I was struck with the remarks he made with respect to railroad matters chiefly, and particularly in regard to Mackenzie and Mann. I would like to remind my hon. friend that the eggs that hatched out Mackenzie and Mann were hatched out in a Liberal nest; that the eggs which hatched out the Transcontinental railway were hatched out in a Liberal nest; and that the two knighthoods that were bestowed on Mackenzie and Mann likewise emanated from a Liberal nest. My hon. friend's remarks might come with very good grace from almost any member on this side of the House, but it ill behooves any hon. gentleman opposite to make such comments and remarks as my hon. friend has indulged in. Let me say in this connection, there is an old proverb that it is a dirty bird that soils its own nest.

With respect to the question of the terminals at Sydney and the facilities for handling the Newfoundland trade my hon. friend is perhaps as well, if not better, acquainted with conditions there than any one in this House. He says that hardly a day goes by that he does not pass those terminals, hardly a day that he does not find there, to a greater or less extent, a congestion of trade. That is true, but that congestion of trade is owing to the fact that the Reids' have never performed their end of the undertaking. They have got a narrow-guage railway from Port aux Basques to St. John's and it takes their express train, if she runs on time, 28 hours to cover that distance. Now, you can imagine, gentlemen, if you were operating a line of boats that were able to carry away all the freight that goes to North Sydney how you would feel upon reaching Port aux Basques to discover there is not at that place room for its accommodation. I have been to Port aux Basques and seen the existing wharves and sufficient ships cannot be docked there to carry away the freight that is brought in the fall of the year, when the maximum amount of congestion occurs. Consequently the Reid people are obliged to put on extra boats. Those extra boats come directly from North Sydney where all the freight for Newfoundland is handled, but they do not go to Port aux Basques; they go to Placentia and St. John's directly, because the Reid railroad is not capable of handling all the freight that offers. Therefore before any complaint can be made against the railway and terminal facilities on Cabot Strait we should require the Reid-Newfoundland company to provide facilities for handling it on the other side. What is the use of taking freight down to Port aux Basques, when in the first place you can only dock your ship if the pier is vacated by the Reid-Newfoundland boats, and then only one at a time. And even if you could dock your ships fast enough there is not sufficient storage room nor wharfage to take all the freight offering. Even if there was sufficient dock accommodation there is not a railway capable of carrying the freight from there to Placentia or St. John's. Such are the actual conditions at the present time. I have hinted at the desirability of improvements at different times to the Minister of Railways, and I hope he will take those hints into consideration, and that the day is near when instead of relying upon the Reids', the Canadian Government will take over the control of the facilities themselves, handle their own freight, and as far as possible their own passenger boats, running directly from Sydney harbour to Placentia or St. John's, and act independently of the Reid-Newfoundland company. Then gentlemen, we will have a solution of the problem which awaits settlement down there. Until some action of that kind is taken no remedy will be afforded. Imagine a railway running from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Port aux Basques, through a territory of 520 odd miles and taking 28 hours to cover that distance, having to traverse a narrow-guage road so exposed at certain points that freight cars were blown off the track in the month of November.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. BUTTS: It is not a thing to be laughed at, gentlemen, the incident which I have mentioned actually occurred. These are the conditions that the Government have to face, and if the terminals at Sydney harbour are not large enough the best thing to do would be to cease relying upon the Reid-Newfoundland company and let this Government handle the traffic running directly from Sydney harbour to Placentia or St. John's, Newfoundland.

Mr. P. F. CASGRAIN (Charlevoix-Montmorency): I am very pleased to have had the privilege of listening to the address of the Minister of Railways. It is always a pleasure for me to hear him, because he reminds me that whenever an advocate has a bad case if he speaks sufficiently loud and sufficiently long he can make that case appear somewhat presentable. The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) has described that policy as a little nebulous and I am inclined to think that was an appropriate characterization. Under the terms of the previous legislation the Government has acquired most of the Canadian railways with the exception of the Canadian Pacific railway. In the statement which he has presented to-day the minister told us that he puts the Grand Trunk Pacific and Grand Trunk to one side because they do not show any profit on their operations. He says that this year and next year, and perhaps for two or three years, he will have to come to Parliament and ask for a vote of some millions from Parliament to cover probable deficits resulting from the operation of these railways and provide for the improvements which they may need. The minister, however, does not give us any indication as to these amounts which it will be necessary to provide from the Dominion Treasury. There is another point which impressed me very forcibly this afternoon, and that was when I heard the Minister of Marine reply to the hon. member for Quebec West, with respect to the loading of certain ships at the port of Quebec. The minister said: "We have nothing to do with this matter, it is in the hands of the Canadian Government Mercantile Marine Company." Practically the same reply was made by the Minister of Railways on the same subject. In view of this attitude on the part of members of the Government we have this situation: That although we are the shareholders, and are supposed to be the owners and stockholders of the Canadian National Railway System, members of the Government come here and declare that they know practically nothing about the operation of ships belonging to the Canadian people because the management of these vessels has been turned over to a limited corporation which alone is going to deal with the matter.

There is another point to which I desire to draw the attention of the House and it is this: Some days ago we heard that the president of the Canadian National Railways, Mr. D. B. Hanna, for whom I have a great respect, had stated in the course of an address at a certain meeting—I think it was reported in the press—that the Government should keep their hands off the Canadian National Railway and its administration. The Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid) has said the same thing, and hon. members on the other side of the House said the same thing when the Canadian National Railway Company was being incorporated. Whenever any of us have occasion to discuss any matter with the directorate we are told that the administration of the railway is in their hands, and that inasmuch as the people have placed them in control they—the directorate—are clothed with all the necessary powers in regard to operation and improvements. I object to this principle, Mr.

Speaker, as I objected last year when the Canadian Northern Railway Bill was before the House. We then protested against that policy, because it was equivalent to taking away from the people the right of being consulted as to the manner in which public money should be expended.

Although I may be called somewhat too parochial, Mr. Speaker, I hope that I may be allowed to discuss, while the policy of the Canadian National Railways is before the House, certain matters which particularly concern the constituency which I have the honour to represent in this House, the county of Charlevoix-Montmorency. Some years ago the Government passed legislation for the acquisition of the Quebec and Saguenay Railway from a certain point in the county of Montmorency to another point in the county of Charlevoix. Last year the completed portion of the railway was operated from the first of July until November. Murray Bay, or as it is called "La Malbaie," is one of the greatest summer resorts in Canada, and at once a large freight and passenger business was opened up, with profitable results to the railway. But for one reason or another, in the month of November all of a sudden I heard that the Government had decided to discontinue the daily train service and run only three trains a week. I inquired of the minister the reason for this change, and was told that it was in the best interests of the country as the service was sufficient for the locality. All the local public bodies as well as the big industrial companies settled in that part of the country protested against the change, and I hold in my hand petitions, letters and other documents of protest which were at that time lodged through me with the Minister of Railways and the president of the Canadian National Railways. I also wrote to these gentlemen, and in reply was told that the action complained of simply had to be taken.

Mr. Speaker, it is not very often that I congratulate the Gvoernment, but they are entitled to my congratulations on the service they maintained until the month of November, for the trains were well operated and were profitable to the Government. But from the first of November up to the present day only a restricted service has been continued, with the result that all the good effects which followed from the daily train service are not in evidence to-day. I bring up this point in the hope that the Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid) will evolve a new policy in regard to that train service from the first of May until at least next winter, by which time I trust the railway will be finished and completely equipped to run throughout the year.

In connection with the same railway, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say something further to my hon. friend the Minister of Railways. Last year a request was made,—not by myself but by a big industrial enterprise in the county, the American Titanic Ore Company, the owners of a big mine,—for a branch line to be built nine miles north from Baie St. Paul to St. Urbain at a cost of $50,000 or $60,000, which would be a good feeder to this new railway. At the time the minister told me that a survey would be made and men would be sent to inquire about the possibilities of such a venture; but nothing has been done.

Another project has been brought before the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, and it is being supported by the people of my county and of the county of Chicoutimi, having in view pushing the same railway northward from Murray Bay to Chicoutimi. May I be permitted to say to the hon. Minister of Railways that I have not looked into this matter, but engineers of his department —men whom I know he holds in the greatest esteem—have told me that if this extension were made it would certainly bring a lot of business to the Quebec and Saguenay Railway, and the profitable traffic would be quite sufficient to pay the interest on the capital expenditure. I may add, Sir, that the projected extension would reduce the distance from Chicoutimi to Quebec by about forty-five or fifty miles. This district contains great lumber industries as well as manufactories of different kinds, so that such a line would at once get a great deal of traffic and at the same time act as a stimulus to local industry.

When the management decided last fall to take away the daily train service, I was assured by the Minister of Railways that the Government would sooner or later take over the entire railway and operate it as part of the Canadian National system. Later on I was told that this policy was not carried out on account of a certain little accident that happened on the railway. I have inquired from many people in my county if such an accident ever took place, and they have told me that this was not the case, and they are most reliable people. While the engineers and contractors are still engaged in completing this railway I would urge upon the minister to come down and see that part of the country and meet the people, and I am sure that if he does so he will on his return take the necessary steps to have these two branch lines immediately constructed.

The Minister of Railways towards the end of his speech pointed out that in a few years to come the Canadian National Railway system will in his opinion, be able to show a surplus. As the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) has well said this afternoon, there is freight in abundance everywhere in the province of Quebec, as well as in the other provinces, and the only thing the Government has to do is to go where the freight is available and so secure a good revenue. But, Mr. Speaker, I have one thing to object to in regard to the Canadian National Railway management—it is that men from the province of Ontario, such as Mackenzie and Mann, or, if they are not themselves in charge of affairs, their own agents and right bowers like Mr. D. D. Hanna and Mr. Mitchell, and others connected with them, are still in control of the system. I do not believe that people from other localities who are not at all conversant with the needs of a special district can themselves without personal inspection acquire a knowledge of its needs, and the president does not carry conviction by issuing orders from the province of Ontario or from the city of Ottwa and saying, "All goes well because I say so, and I am correct because I am paid a salary of $25,000 a year."

The minister has said that the rates charged by the Government railways were all right; that they might be increased a little later, but that they would be the same as those charged by other railways. I may be mistaken, but I have always thought that the rates charged by railway companies were fixed by the Railway Commission. Replying to a question which I put some time ago regarding the rates prevailing on the new railway in my county, the Minister of Railways informed me that these rates had been fixed by the officials of the Canadian National Railways. I am informed upon good authority that these rates are higher than the rates charged upon certain other railways for the carrying of goods over the same distances. For instance, $15.66 is charged for carrying fifty bags of cement which, carried over the same distance on other railways, would cost 10 cents per bag. Ten cents per 100 pounds was charged for one carload of hay shipped from Montreal to Quebec, a distance of 180 miles, whereas 14 cents per 100 pounds was charged for the same load from Quebec to Baie St. Paul, a distance of 60 miles. The charge for carrying a barrel of apples from Quebec to Baie St. Paul is $1.70; I believe that is too high.

Last fall I took up with the Minister of Railways the matter of remedying the conditions existing through the lack of adequate railway facilities between Quebec and Murray Bay, and also the Railway Commission. I was informed by the Railway Commission at that time that they had no control over the railway operating between these points because the Government had not taken official charge of it. On the other hand, I was told by the minister a few days ago that the officials of the Canadian National Railways had themselves fixed the rates charged on this railway. I would like to know what is the position in regard to this railway. One day we are told that the Government owns it, and then when we try to avail ourselves of that very fact and endeavour to have certain conditions remedied through their being brought before the proper board, we are told that the board has no jurisdiction.

The Minister of Railways spoke also about certain improvements made at Quebec and at certain other places. He said, for instance, that a huge sum of money had been spent at Quebec and on the St. Charles river. I was at the city of Quebec some time ago, and I do not believe that the Government have done all that they should have done at that place. As another hon. member dealt with this matter a few days ago I shall not go into it on this occasion, except to point out that this district seems to have been entirely neglected. Last autumn I was at Levis, right opposite Quebec, and I found that no station had been built there or even commenced. During the last five or six years the people of that place have only a kind of shack to serve as accommodation while waiting the arrival and departure of trains. I am told that there is a great need of repair on that part of the Canadian National Railways which is known as the Intercolonial. I travelled a good deal last year on the railway between Riviere Ouelle and Montreal; never in my life have I known the trains on that line to be on time.

I do not believe that the Government Railways can compete with the Canadian Pacific. The servants of the Government will always be the servants of the Government; we shall never be able to get from them the same service that is rendered by the employees of private concerns.

I wish to call attention also to the fact that there is no decent, safe and adequate station accommodation for those who use the Canadian National Railways at the city of Quebec. I put a question on the Order Paper the other day inquiring of the minister whether the Government had considered the advisability of taking over the Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix railway and linking it up with the Canadian National Railways, the old Canadian Northern, and with the Quebec and Saguenay. He told me that this was still the intention of the Government; I hope that it will be done as soon as possible. I was told that negotiations had been carried on for the acquisition of this railway, but for one reason and another it has not been acquired. It is not for me to dictate the policy of the Government, but here we have a condition where the Government operates a railway out of Quebec a certain distance, and from Quebec to St. Joachim, a distance of thirty miles on that line, they are not the owners of railway serving that district. So far the acquirement of part of this line Quebec and Saguenay was a good step, but the Government should do better and acquire the rest of the line in order that they may have a direct line from Quebec to Murray Bay.

I directed the attention of the Government to the need for the building of stations along the line between Quebec and Murray Bay, and they said that they would inquire into it. As is always the case when that reply is given, we heard no more about the matter. We are always told that the Board of Management of the Canadian National Railways will give attentive consideration to any representations made to it from different parts of the country. But I have found that it sometimes takes three or four months to get an answer to letters which I have sent to them concerning railway matters. I do not know how the system is run; whether there is a head office in Toronto, in Ottawa or in Quebec. But I do know that in Montreal there is a gentleman named Mr. Brady who represents the department and very often when I send him a communication I receive a reply to the effect that he will communicate with Ottawa or with Toronto; and I hear no more about it—that is the end of it.

I will not detain the House much longer; but in connection with the present policy of Government ownership of railways, I do not believe it is feasible or possible at present to bring under decent control and management all the different railways which the Government has acquired, unless absolutely right away, immediately, all the people from near and far who had anything to do with the Canadian Northern railway before, are done away with. We heard that Mr. D. B. Hanna is the greatest railway man and exponent of railway problems. I believe what the Government may say; but if up to date, Mr. Hanna had been so big and great as that, he certainly would have been retained by other big railways in the United States, as was the case with Mr. Gutelius who was manager and chief engineer of the Canadian Government railways previously. I do not really believe that the employees and the men who are at the head of this famous Canadian National Railway Company to-day are up to much, and we should immediately pay the best salaries possible, without looking at the amount, in order to get the most efficient men and the most efficient management.

Motion agreed to, and the House went into Committee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY—RAILWAY ESTIMATES.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY—RAILWAY ESTIMATES.

Railways and Canals, chargeable to collection of revenue—Canadian Government railways, toward deficit of working expenditure for nine months ending December 31, 1920, the management of the railways being hereby authorized to apply the receipts and revenues toward payment of the working expenditure, $5,000,000.

Mr. ROBB: Before we take up this Estimate, I should like to ask a question of the minister. There is a statement made that on the 1st February, the number of Canadian freight cars in the United States was forty thousand odd and on the same date the number of United States freight cars in Canada was 24,000 odd, leaving a surplus of Canadian cars in the United States of 16,109. On the 1st March, the number of Canadian freight cars in the United States was 59,000 odd and the number of United States cars in Canada was 40,000 odd, leaving a surplus of Canadian freight cars in United States of 19,084. I understand that while the United States Government is giving back to the railways the control of their roads—the United States Car Service Commission continues to administer the service of freight cars until the 1st May. If that be true, it seems to me that the Canadian Government should be able to represent to the United States Government that we should have a fair reciprocity in freight cars. I am sure the minister will agree with me that it is very necessary at this time that we should have cars to move Canadan products.

Mr. J. D. REID: Everything that I personally or the Government or the railway companies could do to try to get our cars back, has been done. Through the British ambassador at Washington, we have urged the United States Government to give us back our cars; the Canadian Railway Association at Montreal have done everything that they could possibly do, and the heads of the different railways have been pressing the United States to return their cars. We have, however, so much to ship out that as fast as the United States railways return the cars, those cars are moved back into the United States and are retained there. There is a great shortage of cars in the United States at the present time, the railways in that country being short from 100,000 to 150,000 cars, and they will not let us have their cars. Nothing more could be done than has been done by the Government through the ambassador and by the railways acting through their organizations.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I want to ask the minister a question in reference to a clause in the Grand Trunk Bill which was before the House last session and a clause which appears in the agreement between the Grand Trunk and the Government. At the last session of Parliament when the Bill was before the House, the following clause was in the Bill and was subsequently stricken out when the Bill was in committee:

> The Government may lend to the said Committee of Management, upon the notes or other obligations of the Grand Trunk, such sums as the Government may from time to time deem necessary to the carrying on or operation of the Grand Trunk system.

Exception was taken to that clause on this side of the House, and the minister consented to its withdrawal. In the agreement there is a clause which is not in exactly the same words, but which seems to have very much the same purport, and it reads as follows:

> The Managing Committee may, with the consent of the Governor in Council, borrow from the Government on Grand Trunk notes, or other obligations or securities approved of by the Governor in Council, for the carrying on of the operation or improvement of the Grand Trunk system.

In the opinion of the minister, is there any difference between these two clauses, and if so, what is the nature and extent of the difference?

Mr. J. D. REID: I am hardly in a position to give the hon. member an answer, because that is more of a financial question, and the Minister of Finance, if he were in his seat, could probably give a better answer than I could. As I understand the matter from reading this clause, that was intended to assist in financing the Grand Trunk railway, but the assistance is to be given only after the money is voted by Parliament. As I understand it, no money has been voted by Parliament for that purpose, and, therefore, no action has been taken up to the present time as regards giving any money to the Grand Trunk railway under that clause.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Do I understand from the minister that under this clause in the agreement between the Government and the Grand Trunk, no money will be advanced to the Grand Trunk unless an appropriation is first made by Parliament for that purpose?

Mr. J. D. REID: That is the way I understand the matter. Of course, I am speaking subject to correction pending discussion of the matter with the Minister of Finance.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I suppose we may refer to the matter again when the Minister of Finance is in the House.

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes.

Mr. DEVLIN: I want to call the minister's attention to the statement which he made when the hon. member for Chateauguay-Huntingdon (Mr. Robb) raised the question about Canadian cars being held in the United States. If I understood the minister aright, he stated that the Canadian authorities had done everything possible to get those cars back, but that they had not succeeded. If a person, having got property legitimately at first, holds it against the owner's consent illegally and without the intention of returning it, he is subject to being accused of theft.

Mr. J. D. REID: But he is not holding it illegally. There is an international agreement that where a car is on a foreign road, that road pays a per diem allowance for that car until it is returned to the original road that owned the car.

The American railways are not holding those cars illegally, but it pays them to pay that per diem allowance rather than return our cars. The British Ambassador and Mr. Mahoney, who is connected with the Board of Commerce at Washington, are making the strongest possible recommendations to get the cars back.

Mr. DEVLIN: Is there any understanding between the British Ambassador of Washington and the American companies as to a limit within which these cars shall be returned?

Mr. J. D. REID: No.

Mr. DEVLIN: Would the minister be willing to place on the Table all the correspondence that has taken place between the British Ambassador and the other parties relative to the steps that have been taken to get back Canadian cars?

Mr. J. D. REID: I have no objection. The American Government has been urging the railways to return the cars, but the companies keep passing them from one road to another. No one road keeps the cars for a great length of time, but altogether they remain over there a long time. When they get the cars there they keep them. The trend is more from Canada to the United States.

Mr. DEVLIN: People want cars in this country, and the minister has to furnish them. If the minister could get back the Canadian cars on the other side, would that save any part of this item of $5,000,000?

Mr. J. D. REID: No. We have another item providing for the purchase of new cars. If we got 14,000 cars back we would not require to order so many new ones. But the products of Canada must be got out. The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) was complaining because he could not get cars to take pulp-wood from the Transcontinental to the other side. If we allowed these cars to go over there, we would not get them back.

Mr. DEVLIN: If the minister could get back these 14,000 cars it would effect a great saving to the Canadian people. Is there anything in the form of an agreement by which the Canadian people will be compensated for the holding of these cars on the other side?

Mr. J. D. REID: All we get is a per diem allowance, just as we have to pay a per diem allowance on American cars, but our railways get more revenue from this source on account of the adverse balance.

Mr. ROBB: The minister has just told the hon. member for Wright that the reason why the people of the Abitibi district are not supplied with cars to move their freight is because it is the deliberate policy of this Government not to supply cars that would go to the United States, because they would not get them back. Is that the policy of this Government in connection with all business in Canada, as regards grain, for instance? Let us follow the minister's statement to a conclusion. The hon. member for Pontiac this afternoon made the statement, supported by affidavit, that there were up in the Abitibi country 6,500 carloads of freight ready for the railway. The minister himself has told us that there are two ways of getting increased revenue for the railways; either by increased rates, or increased business. In this case the business is there. According to this statement, supported by affidavit, there are approximately 200 trainloads of freight waiting for transportation. The same condition exists all over the country. In Western Canada the grain is ready to be moved. Is it the deliberate policy of this Government not to supply cars for carrying wheat, oats, lumber, hay and other products of this country to the United States?

Mr. J. D. REID: No. Our policy is to serve Canada first; in other words, to look after interprovincial traffic. We require a certain number of cars for our own needs in Canada, and if there is any surplus we use them for international traffic. What we have been urging the United States Government and the United States railways to do is to let their cars come over here and get this traffic. The hon. member will see that it is absolutely necessary to have a certain number of cars in Canada for our own business. If we were to act on his suggestion we would not have any cars in Canada at all.

Mr. ROBB: Why?

Mr. J. D. REID: If you send these two hundred trainloads—

Mr. ROBB: Does the minister claim that all this traffic in the Abitibi district is intended for the United States?

Mr. J. D. REID: If it is not, there is no trouble about cars. If we were to look after international trade, we would not have sufficient cars to take pulpwood, for instance, from some part in Canada to the mills where it is manufactured; we would not be able to take paper from Chicoutimi to Montreal. We have to protect first our own people in Canada, and use whatever surplus cars we have for international traffic.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: The minister claims there is no trouble within Canada. Let me tell him that cars shipped with wheat last November were not reported in Winnipeg on the main line of the Canadian Northern when I came down here on the 26th of February. In the period between November 1 and February 26 the cars had not arrived at Winnipeg, and that is the condition everywhere in the West. I pointed out to the minister the other day that of the few cars we had available in the Peace River country, 76 were standing on a side-track, of the Canadian National railways, for some three months and have never been moved in that time. I know that for a fact. Owing to the lack of cars we were unable to get out our grain. Some of us were lucky enough to secure cars last fall, but we were not able to get the grain transported even to the nearest point of inspection at Winnipeg. I know several cases of that kind. Furthermore, in the Edmonton district I have been unable to sell one bushel of grain since last fall for the simple reason that the elevators were filled at threshing time, and they were unable to get cars to relieve the congestion. The elevators were still full at the time I left. I do not think that bears out altogether the statement of the minister that there is no trouble at all if the cars are not going to the United States. The trouble is on the main line, and the minister can very easily obtain information on the matter. We have had no markets along the line of the Canadian Northern in Alberta because the elevators have been filled and cars have not been available to relieve the congestion.

Mr. J. D. REID: This is the first complaint I have heard this winter with reference to the operation of this railway. There may be other complaints, but they have not reached me.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: The primary cause of the trouble was that the elevators were filled at threshing time and transports could not be obtained to relieve the congestion.

Mr. J. D. REID: The hon. member will see that the congestion begins at the seaports—Halifax, St. John, Portland or New York—and keeps backing up, with the result that the elevators are filled. It must be obvious that we could not supply cars to be used for storage purposes.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: I was answering the point made by the minister that there was no trouble except one of an international character.

Mr. J. D. REID: The point I wish to emphasize is that there is a great quantity of produce that has to be moved backwards and forwards between the provinces, and we try to protect that traffic first by having sufficient cars to move it.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: Probably the reason why the minister has not received more complaints is the statement of the railway authorities that they could not give cars to relieve the congestion owing to the feed shortage in the South, which called for the use of cars for transporting feed thither from the North. We accepted that statement, considering that, in view of the seriousness of the situation, it was perhaps only right that the live stock should be saved.

Mr. ROBB: Before six o'clock I want to put a question on record. What is the per diem rental charge on cars between different routes? How long is the contract made for, and when does it expire? Further, is the rental based on an estimate sufficiently high to cover reasonable interest on investment?

Mr. J. D. REID: Ninety cents a day is charged on each side forty-eight hours after the car has arrived, and that is unlimited. We cannot force a car back.

Mr. ROBB: Is this arrangement from year to year?

Mr. J. D. REID: The rates are revised from time to time.

At six o'clock the Committee took recess.

After Recess.

The Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN: When the Committee rose at six o'clock we were considering item No. 335, a vote of $5,000,000 for the Canadian Government railways. Shall the item carry?

Mr. CAHILL: The minister stated before six o'clock that the Government had done everything in their power to get cars returned from the United States. About a year ago I brought this question up in the House, and the Government then promised that they would undertake to make some arrangement whereby these Canadian cars would be brought back from the other side of the line. During the past year the United States Government had control of all the railways in that country, and I would like to know if there has been any attempt on the part of this Government to arrive at an understanding with them—an understanding between the two Governments rather than between individual railway companies—as to an exchange of these cars, and whether the Canadian Government will take the responsibility of seeing to it that Canadian cars shall be returned to this country.

Mr. J. D. REID: Perhaps the hon. gentleman was not in the Chamber before six o'clock when I made a statement on this matter. The Canadian Government communicated with the British Ambassador at Washington with a view to his taking the matter up, and he is doing all that he possibly could. In addition to that we have a representative of the Board of Commerce in Washington who has been endeavouring to arrange the matter with the railway organization at the United States capital. Likewise, our railway association at Montreal, together with President Beatty of the Canadian Pacific railway, and President Hanna of the Canadian National Railway system, have been using every effort to bring about an improvement of the existing conditions, to say nothing of messages which the Minister of Railways and other departments have been forwarding. I promised to get all the correspondence and lay it on the Table. The Deputy Minister of Railways has already received instructions to obtain all the information available in order to show what efforts have been made to get the cars owned by Canadian railway companies back into Canada.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: Seeing that we have 4,000 cars in the United States, is it not possible to have the per diem allowance increased, and have it not only doubled, but trebled? The cost of cars has increased three or four times over what it was a few years ago, and surely there ought to be some way of making the allowance for these cars three or four times more than it is to-day. The nominal sum that is at present charged is a snap for the United States companies that are using our cars; but if the allowance were increased three or four times it would in all probability produce better results.

Mr. J. D. REID: The per diem charge was formerly sixty cents and it was increased to ninety cents.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: That is of no avail.

Mr. J. D. REID: Suppose we were to say that we would charge $5 a day?

[Mr. Cahill.]

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: I would suggest $2 or $3 a day.

Mr. J. D. REID: In that case how would you collect the amount from the companies over there? They have the cars and we cannot get them back until they are prepared to return them. For our railway companies to start quarrelling with a company on the other side would, I am afraid, result in complications that would not be to our advantage in the long run. I think I am quite safe in saying that the Canadian Pacific, the National railways, and the Grand Trunk, are all just as anxious as they can be to get the cars back, and they are making every exertion to do so. The fact of the matter is that the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National railways are compelled to buy more cars because of the shortage in Canada caused by Canadian cars being in the United States. The Government and the Canadian railway companies are doing all they can, and I do not think that any further effort can be made beyond what is being resorted to up to the present time.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: This matter has been going on for several years. The sum of sixty, or even ninety cents, per diem, is such a small amount in comparison with the capital invested in a car that the authorities on the other side of the international boundary line should not be annoyed if they are charged $2 or $3 per diem in respect of cars that are not returned. With such an allowance as that Canadian railway companies would be in a position to possibly pay the interest on the cost of building cars in this country.

Mr. J. D. REID: In that case the United States railways might say: We will not exchange cars; if you are going to charge that rate we will not tranship your cars on our road. Suppose a dozen cars arrived at Niagara Falls, New York, and we said to the American company: The per diem charge for those cars is $3 or $4 a day; they would simply say: If you do not want to comply with the rules in the United States we will not take your cars. In that case what could we do?

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: Is the minister taking up with the American authorities the question of increasing the allowance to $2 or $3?

Mr. REID: The railway companies themselves have taken it up and we have discussed every phase of the matter with them in the hope of getting the cars back. It is the interest of the railways and the public that guides us as to what is best to do.

Mr. BELAND: This is a very serious question indeed. The trade figures show that Canada has imported in the past year about $300,000,000 worth more than it exported. That would in itself indicate that there should be many more cars in Canada from the United States than there are Canadian cars in the adjoining republic. May I ask the minister whether it has not been the policy of the Canadian railway companies, or of the Government National railways, to hold in Canada as many cars coming from the United States as possible in view of the fact that United States companies were retaining Canadian cars on the other side? In view of the trade figures I cannot understand why we should have fewer American cars on this side than they have of Canadian cars in the country to the South.

Mr. J. D. REID: The hon. gentleman will realize that it takes more cars to carry Canadian products such as pulp, and lumber, which are bulky in their character, to the other side.

Mr. BELAND: But we import coal; we imported $40,000,000 worth. Then there are automobiles.

Mr. J. D. REID: We are not holding any more cars to-day than are required for our own trade. However, this is a very important question and if hon. gentlemen agree I would like to have a day set apart for its discussion by the Railway Committee. If satisfactory to hon. gentlemen, I will arrange to have the railway representatives there to explain the situation and also present such information as can be got from the Railway Department. I can only repeat that the Government and the railway companies are making every possible effort to get our cars back, and we cannot put forth any more exertions than we are already doing to bring about that result.

Mr. BELAND: I do not wish to controvert the minister's statement. I think the Canadian National railways, the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk have tried all they can to get their cars back to Canada. However, can we not say of the Canadian National railways that they have been more lenient than American companies in that they have allowed American cars to go back to the United Statets whilst their own Canadian cars were retained in that country?

Mr. J. D. REID: What the hon. gentleman means is that we should hold more American cars in this country?

Mr. BELAND: Certainly.

Mr. J. D. REID: How are we going to ship pulp-wood to the United States if that is done? The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) has complained about pulp-wood along the Transcontinental railway remaining unshipped. We must send the cars back to the United States.

Mr. BELAND: You must reverse the situation. How can the Americans ship large quantities of goods to Canada unless they have the cars? Because the minister must remember, they export to this country $300,000,000 more than we export to them. And these goods are not in the shape of diamonds or gold rings, which require but a small amount of car space. For instance, besides coal we import $40,000,000 of automobiles and $30,000,000 of machinery, traction engines, etc. This freight requires spacious cars.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: I would like to know if the minister is prepared to answer the question that I put this afternoon but which was ruled out of order at that time; that is, with respect to the extension of the Canadian Northern from Bruderheim to Whitford, Alberta.

Mr. J. D. REID: My deputy tells me that we have no item in the Estimates for that work so far this year. However, the matter does not arise under this item, and before the item passes I will obtain more information. I have a memorandum before me and we will ascertain from the management of the Canadian National railways in Toronto if any further information is available. The hon. gentleman stated this afternoon that I made a promise at the meeting of the Railway Committee. It is hard to keep all these matters in recollection. but whatever promise I made would be on the strength of information given by the officials of the Railway Department at that particular time. I shall draw their attention to the statement now made by the hon. gentleman and before the item passes will endeavour to obtain whatever supplementary information is necessary.

Mr. W. H. WHITE: My reason for pressing the question at this time is in view of the promise which was made. A delegation from the district was here at the time and the matter was fully discussed in the Railway Committee. The people of the district have been looking forward to the department making good that promise that was made, and I was asked to bring the question up and remind the minister of it. The people of that part of Alberta expect to get some definite information as to whether they may expect to get the railway extended into that section this year. The minister says there is no item. Am I to conclude from his statement that nothing is going to be done with the road this year?

Mr. J. D. REID: Before giving a positive answer I would like to have an opportunity of further consultation with the management to see if I have overlooked it in their statement. I will give my hon. friend an answer later on.

Mr. CAHILL: Before we get away from the question of car exchange I want to ask the Government if they have any policy in regard to the exchange of cars between the United States and Canada. A few years ago we sent a deputation to Washington to negotiate a treaty, not through the British Ambassador, but directly on behalf of Canada. Is it not possible to negotiate another treaty with regard to the exchange of cars? There is no question that this car shortage is going to continue, for we must export goods to the United States until at least we have balanced the trade situation. If the Government is not in a position to negotiate with the American Government, we must expect a continuance of the same confusion. The people I spoke of this afternoon, in the Abitibi district, will get no relief until this situation is cleaned up, and if they are not going to obtain relief they might as well know it and get out of the country.

There can be no question about the United States Government legislating so that arrangements may be made to get these cars back, and, of course, the Dominion Government has the same power to legislate for the return of American cars from this side. The minister points out that if you make the per diem charges $4 or $5 the American roads will not accept the cars. But there is no necessity to make that charge apply at once; it can be arranged to become effective after a certain lapse of time. But there must be some arrangement whereby Canadian and American roads will exchange cars on a more satisfactory basis than obtains to-day. It is not for the Railway Committee to negotiate between several hundred lines in the United States and in Canada; it is a question to be settled between the two Governments. I pointed that out last year, but apparently the old condition of affairs still exists. The minister says: Let this question be settled by the Railway Committee. It is not a question for the Railway Committee to settle; it is a question for the Government of this country to negotiate with the Government of the United States to see if they cannot come to some arrangement whereby a settlement can be reached.

Mr. BUREAU: I see that the item is:

Canadian Government Railways, toward deficit of working expenditure for nine months ending December 31, 1920.

That is next year. May I ask the minister what that working expenditure is based upon? I understand that this year we are having a deficit of $30,000,000, and from the newspapers I find glowing accounts of the progress our railway system is making, and the hopes entertained that our railway revenues will lift the entire burden of taxation from the shoulders of our taxpayers. Of course, I quite appreciate that the minister cannot answer every question of detail which may be put to him, but on the other hand these are supposed to be Government railways, and still more are they supposed to be Parliament railways. The Government do not hear as much about bad operation of any of their railways as the individual member of Parliament through whose riding the railway runs, and the only case where the member can put his grievance before the authorities is here. Therefore I think that a field day in the Railway Committee will not amount to much, because we will merely get very glowing accounts from Mr. Hanna and the other officials—I do not blame them—to assure the people that their railways are being operated efficiently and to encourage their patronage. First of all, I want to know what to-day constitutes the Canadian Government Railways.

Mr. J. D. REID: The Canadian Northern system, the Intercolonial railway and the Transcontinental railway. Answering the other question, how I arrived at that $5,000,000, the loss for the past fiscal year ending March 31, was $7,500,000. Now we are bringing the Transcontinental and the Intercolonial fiscal year to an end on December 31 the same as the fiscal year of the Canadian Northern and all other railways. So we estimate $5,000,000 as being the deficit for the year.

Mr. BUREAU: While I am on my feet, Mr. Chairman. The other day I put some questions to the Minister of Railways—very simple questions that could have been answered yes or no, or very shortly. The minister, as was his right, moved for a return. I got the return to-day. I am not going to deal with it in detail, but I will merely state the questions I put. They were:

Has an Order in Council been passed entrusting the said company—I was talking about the Canadian National Railway Company—with the management and operation of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Intercolonial railways?

The answer is no. The second question I put was:

If so, what is the date of the Order in Council?

Naturally, there is no date. No Order in Council was passed. Then I put this other question:

If an Order in Council was not passed, why was such an Order in Council not passed?

There is no answer. I have this to complain of, Mr. Chairman. You can sue the Canadian Northern railway before the courts of your province and bring the case to trial; but if you try to sue the Transcontinental you find that it will take you a year to get a fiat—and I am speaking from experience. I understand the situation perfectly well. The Secretary of State sends the petition to the Minister of Justice; the Minister of Justice cannot pass on the facts unless he has them before him; therefore he sends the petition back to the Minister of Railways; the Minister of Railways sends it to Toronto, and those in authority in Toronto sends it down to Leduc or to some other headquarters of the Transcontinental, where they ask a man who knows something about lumber to cruise certain territory which has been burnt by the railway and make a report; the man makes his report, sometimes it is unsatisfactory, and a second report is called for; the report goes to Toronto, from Toronto it is sent to the Minister of Railways, and he sends it to the Department of Justice. In two instances, I do not know whether the reports were lost or what happened, but the cases did not go any further. I know of a case where the petition of right was served in July and the report was made in the following February. The cruisers went through the bush in February where the fire took place the preceding June. I admit the winter season is a better time for tramping through the bush on snowshoes and traversing the frozen lakes and rivers, but in my experience up the St. Maurice river I never heard of a cruiser going out during the winter, especially when the snow is high, to see what damage had been done by fire.

I want to find out why the Transcontinental railway is not put in the same position as the Canadian Northern Railway system so that a man who suffers damage from negligence or any other cause whatever can go before a tribunal in the locality where the damage was caused and where all the witnesses live and have his case tried the same as if he was bringing an action against the Canadian Northern railway which is also a government railway. The Government has no more interest in the one railway than in the other, and I do not see what reason they can have for putting a litigant to all the trouble of waiting five, six or seven months before getting a fiat to bring his case before the Exchequer Court.

Mr. J. D. REID: The reason is that the Canadian Northern railway is an incorporated private company, of which we are the stockholders. The hon. member will remember that we passed a Bill in a previous session whereby we are going to transfer them all——

Mr. BUREAU: Yes, I well remember you passed it by the use of the closure.

Mr. J. D. REID: That is the reason it was such a good Bill.

The intention is to transfer all these railways to the Canadian National Railway Company, and then, of course, if there should be considered cause for action against the Transcontinental, such action could be brought just as can now be done in the case of the Canadian Northern. The hon. member is right in saying that every facility should be afforded to those who have just cause for action against the Government railway. Possibly there may have been delay in the case referred to; if the matter had been brought to my attention we would have facilitated the proceedings in every possible way. The delay in connection with the Grand Trunk acquisition has prevented us from taking the necessary steps to bring these lines under the Canadian National Railway Company, but ultimately the Canadian Northern, the Transcontinental and the Intercolonial will all be subject to the one law so far as the bringing of action against them is concerned.

Mr. BUREAU: I do not think that the minister expects me to take that as an answer or as a reason for the course that has been followed. The object of the incorporation of the Canadian National Railway Company was to put under one system of operation and make subject to one law all the railways operated by the Canadian Government. Now, here is an anomaly; an Act is passed for the special purpose of bringing under one management the Transcontinental and the Intercolonial; yet neither of them is brought under that management. To say that you are waiting for the Grand Trunk is no excuse; you might as well say that you are waiting for the Chaudiere Falls Railway or for the St. Maurice Valley Railway. I do not want to be understood as criticizing the department, because I understand the difficulty that is encountered when reports pertaining to such matters as this have to go from the Secretary of State to the Minister of Justice, from the Minister of Justice to the Minister of Railways, from the Minister of Railways to the Toronto office, or to Moncton in the case of the Intercolonial, and so on. I simply want to point out how unfair it is to the man who suffers damages alleged to have been caused by a Government railway when he has to deal with two Government railways, one operated by the Canadian National Railway Company and the other not so operated, although it should naturally form part of the Canadian National system. It is true that the letters "C.N.R." still appear on the sides of the cars forming part of the equipment of the Canadian National Railway System; but let that pass. If we are going to have operation of Government railways by an incorporated company, let us have it for the whole system, including the Intercolonial and the Transcontinental. Great damage was caused in the St. Maurice region last year through the alleged negligence—as to that the courts will decide—of the Transcontinental; millions of feet of timber were burned because of that negligence. While on this question of operation let me refer to a condition which exists on the Canadian Northern line between Montreal and Quebec at a place called Glenada, where there is no agent. The next station is Grand'Mere; at that point there is an agent. As I came upon the train to-day it was directed to my attention that an unsatisfactory state of affairs prevails at this point. Ste. Flore, with a population of 3,000 people, is at the door of Grand'Mere, and the nearest point from which they can ship their freight is Glenada, but as there is no agent at Glenada, they have to ship to and from Grand 'Mere. But the Canadian Pacific station at Grand'Mere is on the level, and the Canadian Northern station is at the foot of the hill. If a man has to order a car of freight, instead of having it shipped on the Canadian Northern he gets it by Canadian Pacific in order to avoid the haul up the hill. If we had an agent at Glenada, we would get all that traffic and prevent it from being diverted to the Canadian Pacific. These things ought to be inquired into. I was told to-day that carload after carload of freight was being lost to the Canadian Government Railways because of our having no agent at Glenada.

[Mr. Bureau.]

Mr. J. D. REID: I shall see that the attention of the management is drawn to my hon. friend's statement.

Mr. PARDEE: The minister told us this afternoon that the loss on operating expenses is $14,000,000 and interest charges $19,000,000, making a total deficit of $33,000,000. What have these roads cost the country by way of deficits during 1919? By deficits, I mean outgo less income. What I want to get at is this: The Government had adopted the policy of Government ownership of railways. Having regard to the fact that in past years we have put up large sums of money for the Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk Pacific, and so on, will the minister say whether the present state of affairs is less costly to the people than the system previously followed?

Mr. J. D. REID: Does my hon. friend want the gross earnings?

Mr. PARDEE: I want to know how the loss on Government operations compares with the result from private operations prior to 1919.

Mr. J. D. REID: My hon. friend has the figures correctly. The loss on operating expenses was $14,000,000; the fixed charges on the Canadian Northern about $19,000,000. I mentioned also in my statement this afternoon that the loss on the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is not a part of the Canadian National railway system, was $5,000,000, to which should be added $8,800,000 for fixed charges, making a total of $14,000,000 on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. PARDEE: That is, $14,000,000 must be added to the $33,000,000?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes; that includes the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Transcontinetal, the Intercolonial and the Canadian Northern. I gave all the figures this afternoon.

Mr. PARDEE: What was the total cost to the people of Canada?

Mr. J. D. REID: The loss was $47,000,000 during the past year.

Mr. PARDEE: Does that include maintenance?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes, and includes also some $8,800,000 of fixed charges on the Grand Trunk Pacific and $19,000,000 of fixed charges on the Canadian Northern.

Mr. PARDEE: So that the people of Canada paid out during 1919 on account of the public ownership of railways, maintenance included, $47,000,000. Am I right in that?

Mr. J. D. REID: No, that is hardly a fair way to put it. Of course, during 1919—

Mr. BUREAU: Put it, "for the luxury of operating railways."

Mr. J. D. REID: During 1919 the cost of operation of the Government Railways was increased by $19,000,000 for wages alone, and there were no increases given. Therefore, it is not fair to compare 1919 with the previous year, because in 1918 some increases in rates were granted. But if we take the situation as the hon. member has stated it, he is correct; those railways lost $47,000,000 last year.

Mr. DEVLIN: Is that the total loss?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I do not think the minister is putting the case strongly enough, because we are face to face with another rise in freight rates. It is not more than a year or two ago since the first increase in freight rates was made. I think there was an increase of five per cent in 1916, a second increase of fifteen per cent, and later on a further increase of twenty-five per cent. My recollection is that the rates have increased forty-five per cent already, and it looks as if we shall have another increase in order to meet the deficit. Therefore, public ownership is going to give us a deficit of $47,000,000 which the ratepayers of this country will have to shoulder, and in addition to that we are face to face with an increase in rates which will also be a burden on the people of Canada. I would advise the minister to increase the rates so that those people who are shouting for public ownership will understand what it really means, because they will have to pay for it. I do not see why the ordinary taxpayers of this country should be called upon to pay deficits incurred in the running of our railroads. The people who use the railways should pay for the railways. Why should a man who lives twenty, thirty, forty or sixty miles from a railway, as is the case with many people in my constituency, have to pay for accommodation received by people in the larger places? It is not fair that this large deficit should be levied upon the general taxpayers of the country. The railways should bear their own burden, the rates should be put up in order that the bills may be paid. And after a while people will find out what public ownership is. Public ownership has been a failure in the United States; it has been a failure in Great Britain; it is a failure in Canada; and the sooner we come to learn the lesson, the better.

There is another matter which I want to bring to the attention of the minister and it is this. I listened carefully to his statement this afternoon, but I have no clear idea as to how we stand on this railway question. I suppose the minister has; but it will be necessary for him to prepare a statement such as is prepared by a joint stock company at the end of the year, showing his assets and liabilities, and his profit and loss account, and give it to the members of this House, so that we may know where we stand. The minister says that he has a deficit of $47,000,000, but that does not give us any information. We want to know where that money has gone; we want to know what assets we have, and the only way in which that can be put before us is by a regular statement like that prepared by a joint stock company. If the president of a joint stock company were to come before his shareholders with a story like the one the minister told us to-day and say that he had operated the business for a year and had a deficit of some $47,000,000, why, he would not be elected again, I am quite sure of that.

An hon. MEMBER: Neither will Union Government.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The minister must give a summary, of course; but when he gives us a regular bookkeeping statement, showing his assets and liabilities and his profit and loss account, we shall be able to judge for ourselves. As the matter stands to-day we are not able to understand him.

Mr. J. D. REID: The hon. member will probably find all that he has asked for in the statements that I did not read out to-day, but that will appear in Hansard. If he does not, I shall be glad to furnish any further information that may be required. With reference to public ownership, the Intercolonial railway, which is publicly owned, lost $7,500,000 last year in operation. Does the hon. member want to suggest that that road should be handed over to a private corporation on account of its losing $7,500,000? The Canadian Northern lost only some $6,000,000 in the operation of its whole system, whereas the Intercolonial lost $7,500,000 in addition to the interest on a capital of $125,000,000. What private corporation could we hand the Intercolonial over to now? The Grand Trunk Pacific was handed over to us; we could not help taking it over; what could we do with it? We could not close it down; no private corporation would take it off our hands, and we are compelled to operate it. When it was built we were responsible for it; we guaranteed the bonds. Therefore, it is impossible to hand back the roads that are really losing the most. No private corporation wants the Grand Trunk Pacific, and I do not think the people in the Lower Provinces would agree to handing over the Intercolonial to a private corporation even though it has lost $7,500,000 plus the interest on the capital. For myself, I would not want to hand it over; it was built to connect the Eastern Provinces with the Western Provinces, and I want it kept in the name of the people of Canada.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The minister need not try to frighten me with the Intercolonial because I have no doubt that if the Intercolonial were put into the hands of a private company, it would do better than it is doing to-day. The Intercolonial was one of the bargains entered into at Confederation; it was one of the terms on which the Maritime Provinces came into this union. If the Maritime Provinces desire to keep the Intercolonial as a government owned road and to compel the Dominion of Canada to live up to its bargain, I will not object to that; but no enterprise of this kind pays and it is impossible to make it pay under Government ownership, because it is inherent in the management of railways that men have to act quickly; they have some times to take chances; they have to conduct business in a way that it is not suitable for a Government to do. The Intercolonial has not always paid in the past; but I know a few occasions when it did pay under good management, and it should have paid better during later years than it has done. I do not know that I can point out the reasons why it has not paid, but the minister ought to know why it has not paid better than it has.

Mr. J. D. REID: The reason last year was on account of the increase in wages, which added a large amount to the deficit; and during the war the increased cost of operation was on account of the increase in wages and rates were not advanced in a corresponding ratio.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I understand that the rates in Eastern Canada are higher than those in Western Canada. If I remember aright, when the rates were raised in 1916, the increase applied only to districts east of Port Arthur; the rates in Western Canada remaining the same. If it be true that the eastern section of the railway is on a higher scale than the western section, that is a reason why the minister ought to have made the eastern section pay better than it has paid. I have no doubt whatever that the money has been wasted. The minister has not told us that a profit and loss account would appear in Hansard. If it does, we shall be able to examine it to-morrow morning; but if there is not a straight bookkeeping account for us to examine, the minister should not ask us to pass this item until he submits a statement of that kind.

Mr. J. D. REID: I think my hon. friend will find the information on Hansard. If not, of course, I will give him any information he wishes. The hon. member, I think, stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway gave a statement of their earnings weekly. The Canadian National Railways have been doing the same thing. Their earnings are published in the trade papers. The Canadian Pacific, I believe, send a card showing their earnings to all their shareholders.

Mr. CAHILL: What amount was paid out of earnings on account of maintenance and upkeep?

Mr. J. D. REID: According to the statement I submitted, the operating expenses were $60,034,018.

Mr. CAHILL: That is not what I want. According to the minister's statement, the deficit on account of interest charges and operating expenses amounted to $47,000,000. Now if there is a deficit in operation you could not, of course, take any money out of earnings and put it into maintenance of way or upkeep.

Mr. J. D. REID: If the hon. member wants the items under the heading of Maintenance alone, I cannot give him those figures this evening.

Mr. CAHILL: Let me put my question in another way. There is such a thing as the maintenance of way of railways. The roadbed has to be kept up to a certain standard; new ties, new rails and fittings have to be put in. In the statement of the Canadian Pacific, for instance, I find that for the year 1918 they paid on account of maintenance of way, new structures, and so on, $28,000,000, and on maintenance and equipment $22,000,000, making a total of $50,000,000 spent out of earnings. After deducting this amount from their net receipts, there is a surplus of $24,000,000. The receipts are not considered as earned until they have maintained the road in an efficient condition. The minister stated this afternoon that 78 per cent, I think, of the receipts on the Government railways was paid out in wages. The railways must also consume coal, for instance, and if 78 per cent of the receipts was paid out in wages there would be very little left for maintenance of way. What I want is a bookkeeping account, to show where this money that was received went to.

Mr. J. D. REID: I would ask my hon. friend to let his question stand, and I will get the details a little more fully.

Mr. CAHILL: I am quite willing to do that provided the minister will report progress.

Mr. BUREAU: The minister ought to know under what heading maintenance expenses are charged. Are they charged to capital or to operation? Such items as maintaining the roadbed, for instance?

Mr. J. D. REID: Any expenses in connection with renewing or repairing the old roadbed would be charged to operation, not to capital.

Mr. BUREAU: Were such expenses charged to operation in 1919?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes. Those expenses are charged to operation before we get the net receipts.

Mr. DENIS: Referring to the question of maintenance, I should like to supplement the statement made by the hon. member for Three Rivers (Mr. Bureau) a short time ago. He stated that on the Canadian National between Montreal and Quebec there were stations without agents.

Mr. BUREAU: And agents without stations.

Mr. DENIS: More than that, there are stopping places, which should be stations, where absolutely no shelter for freight or passengers is provided. In the county of Joliette, for instance, there is a stopping place called St. Pierre, which is situated in a very densely populated section. There is no shelter of any kind there, and up to last fall there was no road provided by the Government to the place where the train stops. I have been corresponding with Mr. Hanna in regard to this particular place for about a year, but have had no success whatever. I would ask the minister to see that some shelter is provided for the public in places so thickly populated as the county of Joliette and at such stopping places as St. Pierre, which is about nine miles from the city of Joliette. How can human beings be expected to stand out in a field, in the open, at all seasons of the year, and especially in the winter months when the temperature is sometimes thirty below zero, waiting for the Government train—and unfortunately these trains are very often late? We are all aware that the trains of the Canadian National between Montreal and Quebec are running late most of the time, especially in winter, and you can easily imagine the plight of these people standing out there in an exposed place without shelter. I hope this will strike the minister as being a proper and a reasonable representation to make, and I should like him to give me the assurance now that something will be done to remedy the situation.

Mr. J. D. REID: I shall bring this matter to the attention of the management. Of course, I have not the power to order the erection of shelters wherever they are asked for, I can only lay the matter before the management. I am sure, however, they will consider cases of this kind favourably provided financial conditions warrant the expenditure. I think from what I have learnt from hon. members and the public generally that there has been a great improvement during the past year along the whole system. The management are doing all they can to remedy as quickly as possible conditions such as my hon. friend has mentioned.

Mr. BUREAU: So are we.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: This afternoon the minister commented rather favourably on the widening of the gauge of the Prince Edward Island Railway between Charlottetown and Summerside. I should like to ask if it is the intention to proceed with the widening of the gauge over the entire system.

Mr. J. D. REID: We shall not proceed with that work during the present year. By standardizing the gauge between Charlottetown and Summerside we can take care of about 75 per cent of the trade of Prince Edward Island. As soon as financial conditions will permit standardizing the gauge of the rest of the railway on Prince Edward Island that work will be proceeded with, but not this year.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: It is an expense that is inevitable, and there would seem to be very little ground for not proceeding with it now. At present 25 per cent of the Island is without the accommodation it should have. That means a double shipment of all freight carried over the narrow gauge. I would strongly urge the minister to reconsider the matter and see if it not possible to proceed with the widening of the gauge over the entire system.

Mr. J. D. REID: I am afraid we cannot consider this proposal this year. The other parts of the island have the narrow gauge system, and the only inconvenience is involved where there is trans-shipment. This, however, is not so serious because it is done by the railway officials at Charlottetown and Summerside. The widening that has been so far done is of great advantage, and I quite appreciate the necessity for completing the work over the whole system as soon as possible. But financial conditions, we felt, would not justify our doing it during the present year. Now, Mr. Chairman, as I have an important appointment which I should like to keep, and as the Minister of Naval Service (Mr. Ballantyne) is prepared to go on with his Estimates, I should be glad if the Committee would pass this item.

Some hon. MEMBERS: No, no.

Mr. BUREAU: We can report progress, and the minister may leave.

Mr. J. D. REID: I move that further consideration of the item be postponed.

Item stands.

GOVERNMENT SHIPBUILDING PROGRAMME.

Amount required for the construction of vessels in accordance with Government programme, $20,000,000.

Mr. POWER: May I ask the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) to remain during the discussion. We found him so useful to us on the last occasion that we would appreciate his advice again.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I should like to refer again to the law of the country and the way in which these contracts have been awarded, but I desire to do so in the presence of the Acting Prime Minister (Sir George Foster), because I think the matter is important enough to call for a statement from the leader of the Government himself.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I think I can satisfy the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mackenzie King), as well as other hon. members in this matter. I fully explained the other evening the reasons why we let the contracts in the way in which we did; and with particular reference to the legal phase of the question, I showed that where an emergency exists the Government are justified in placing contracts in the way they did in connection with our shipbuilding programme. I am sure hon. members will agree that there was a two-fold emergency. In the first place, the war was on and the Government were anxious to get the ships; secondly, we were exceedingly desirous to keep men employed in the various yards from Halifax to Prince Rupert. I announced the other night that the Government shipbuilding programme was at an end, and in connection with any further contracts that may be let we shall follow the law and call for public tenders, as no emergency now exists. I am quite sure that this explanation will satisfy my hon. friend.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: This item involves a sum of $20,000,000 which is a very large sum, and I would ask the minister if it is not possible, in connection with any portion of this amount, to call for tenders for the work that is to be done. Twenty million dollars is a big proportion of the total estimates for public works, and I might point out to my hon. friend that the total expenditure on this single matter is something like $70,000,000, an amount equal to the total expenditure of Canada only a few years ago. That all of this work should be done without tenders being called for in connection with a single contract, when the statute expressly provides that no contract exceeding $5,000 in amount shall be awarded unless public tenders are called for, seems to be a serious violation of the law of the land and one which even the minister himself will find it difficult to justify.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I was under the impression that I had fully covered the ground the other night, but I shall be glad to do so again. As I said a moment or two ago, the war was in progress and Canada wanted ships badly, and to have called for public tenders at that time would have meant that two or three yards might perhaps have quoted at a lower rate than the other yards throughout the country; and if the Government had placed an order with, say, three yards that had only six berths, there would have been a serious delay in getting the ships. Furthermore, there was the labour situation to be considered. After all, however, the paramount question is this: Has the public interest been as fully safeguarded by the system which the Government adopted during the war and the reconstruction period as if public tenders had been called for? I take it that this is the question which the leader of the Opposition has in mind. I assume that he desires to be assured, and to have the public assured, that these ships were ordered at as low prices as if public tenders had been called for. Well, let me assure the hon. gentleman as well as other members of the House that no lower prices could have been obtained had public tenders been called for in the usual way. Indeed, I will go further, and say that these ships were ordered at lower prices than if tenders had been called for. Hon. members who come from cities where shipbuilding yards are located know full well that I did not accept the first price that was quoted me by any of the shipyards. I had prices checked up as to cost, and exercised all the business ability of which I am possessed, whatever it may be worth, as well as the ability of the technical officers who were associated with me, in order that we might reduce the prices to as low a point as possible. I made as close a bargain for the people as I possibly could, and I am thoroughly satisfied as a responsible minister that these ships have been orderd at lower prices than if public tenders had been called for. I have fully explained the reason for the deviation from the law. The emergency existed; it was imperative that the ships should be turned out; we were in a hurry for them; and if I had followed the advice which has been proferred by the leader of the Opposition the Government would not have to-day thirty ships in commission. By following the system which we adopted we got the ships in half the time that would have otherwise been required. Furthermore, the yards employed 25,000 men, and we wanted to distribute the contracts evenly amongst all the yards throughout the country. I am sure that hon. members will agree that the emergency, and the war conditions that existed at the time, as well as the desirability of giving employment to all of these 25,000 men, most of whom are returned soldiers, justified the Government in seeing to it that the shipbuilding programme was evenly apportioned. I have no regrets as to the manner in which the contracts were placed. I think they were placed properly in the public interest. Our programme, as I stated the other night is now finished. Any further orders that the Government may have to give will certainly be awarded in accordance with the law, and after public tender. I am quite satisfied to do that, I wish to follow no other policy. The law is there, and if there is no emergency I must follow the law. The Government must also observe that course. I am thoroughly satisfied that if we were ordering more ships and do so by public contract, the people of this country would pay more for those ships than was the case under the system of ordering which the Government adopted.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I realize that no good purpose can be served in a discussion of what was done during the period of the war. The war is made to cover a multitude of sins, and so far as the Government's violation of the law of the land in awarding these contracts is concerned, I am quite prepared to allow the minister to use the war as an excuse as regards any emergency that may have existed at that time. But the war has now been over for sixteen months, and I am not sure from the minister's statement that contracts have not been awarded since that time. The point I am particularly anxious to make at the moment is, that we are asked now to vote another $20,000,000 not for any expenditure to be incurred as the result of an emergency, but for expenditures to be incurred during the coming year. I would therefore like to know from the minister if it is not possible, with respect to any part of this $20,000,000, to follow the law as regards the inviting of tenders for the work to be done under that expenditure?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: In answer to the leader of the Opposition I might frankly state that all contracts have been placed subject to Parliament voting this amount of money. The urgency existed to keep our returned soldiers employed, and the Government are anxious to get the ships just as quickly as they possibly can; so all the contracts have been placed. I mentioned the figures involved the other night and perhaps I had better state them again. The total payments up to April, 1919, amounted to $19,510,322.35. The total payments from April, 1919, to March 1, 1920, amounted to $24,194,639.78. The total payments on account of the Government's shipbuilding programme amount to $43,704,962.13. The balance available on March 1 from the vote for the current year amounts to $15,505,361.22. In addition to this balance that is available, the Government are now asking for another vote of $20,000,000, part of which is a re-vote from last year.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I have noticed a reference that my hon. friend has made to the conditions under which these contracts have been awarded, that they are subject to Parliament voting the amount. That is what we are doing at the present moment. What I would like to ask the minister, while we are voting this amount, is, can we not in some way incorporate the condition that the amount shall be voted and expended in accordance with the provisions of the law of the land? Let me read from the statutes of 1906, part 2, chapter 39, the section which governs this matter:

> Whenever any works are to be executed under the direction of any department of the Government, the minister having charge of such department shall invite tenders by public advertisement for the execution of such works, except in cases:
>
> (a) of pressing emergency in which delay would be injurious to the public interest; or,
>
> (b) in which from the nature of the work it can be more expeditiously and economically executed by the officers and servants of the department; or
>
> (c) where the estimated cost of the work is less than five thousand dollars and it appears to the minister, in view of the nature of the work, that it is not advisable to invite tenders.

Now the amount in this case is not less than $5,000, it is $20,000,000. That being so, I am asking the minister: Is it not possible—if not in regard to the whole of the $20,000,000, at least in regard to some part of it—to invite tenders in accordance with the provisions of the statute which I have quoted?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I can only answer to the leader of the Opposition that these contracts were placed quite some months ago, with the exception of one or two on the Pacific coast which latter that we were holding up because the department over which I preside and the ship-builders out there could not agree on the cost of changing from coal-burning to oil-burning. Aside from that, however, the contracts were placed some months ago, and there are no further contracts now to be awarded.

Mr. DENIS: Are we to understand that the contracts were awarded before the money was voted by Parliament?

[Mr. Ballantyne.]

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The hon. member probably heard my statement a few moments' ago that there was still a balance available on March 1 of $15,505,361.22, which has not yet been expended. In addition to that we are now asking for a vote of $20,000,000, part of which is a re-vote from last year. The hon. member will therefore see that the money has not, as yet, been expended.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: How many contracts have been awarded since the Armistice and what is the total amount involved?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Eighteen contracts have been let since the Armistice was signed. If any hon. member wishes to refer to these contracts or any of the correspondence, I will be very glad to Table the documents. There is nothing that I wish to hide, or the Government either.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: That question is very important because while there might be some justification for violating the well-known law of the land prior to the Armistice, there was none whatever after the Armistice had been signed. The law should be respected and the minister has not given any fair explanation as to why that law was not observed. It is very distinctly and clearly laid down in the statute that where the amount involved is over $5,000 tenders must be invited. The reasons that the minister gave for not observing that course are not sufficient to my mind. He said there might be too many contracts in one place. But the minister was not bound to accept the tenders; he could find out by calling for tenders the lowest price at which the work could be done and could then give an opportunity to everybody in the vicinity to bid. In that way he would be able, in all probability, to bring down the price. Notwithstanding what the minister has said about the favourable price obtained for the building of these ships I am not inclined to agree with him. I think that these ships could have been built for a less price than the minister paid. The minister, if I remember aright, told us last year when he was asking for this estimate that the average price for the building of ships was $195 a ton in the case of the contracts that had been let prior to that session of Parliament. I understand that he has since made contracts in some cases at $167 and in others at $180. But these are all very large and abnormal prices. Steamships of that description could be built for $50 and $60 a ton prior to the war and were built for those prices.

My friend the deputy minister has studied this question, and I have a great deal of confidence in his judgment. I read a speech that he delivered before a club in the city of Ottawa a few weeks ago, in the course of which he stated that ships of this class could be built in Europe for £33 10s a ton. In the same paper in which this speech appeared, the Montreal Gazette, the exchange for a pound sterling was placed at $3.63—and if my friend were buying a ship built in Europe he would have to take the rate of exchange into consideration. According to the figure given by the deputy minister, and taking the rate of exchange at the time, he could have saved $70 a ton, by my calculation, by purchasing ships on the other side of the Atlantic instead of building them himself.

I find in a financial paper called "The Boston News Bureau," one of the best authorities on the subject on this continent, the following paragraph, under date of January 31, 1920:

> The British shipyards are now asking prices considerably below their American competitors. They are now asking £30 a ton, which at the rate of exchange on this side is $105 a ton.

So my hon. friend will see that he could have purchased the ships for a very much lower price. I quite understand that he wants to build ships in Canada—and we all want to do so if it can be done without paying a profiteering price.

My hon. friend calls this a shipbuilding policy. To my mind it is not a policy, it is simply building ships at a profiteering price, and nothing more. Anybody can do that. If you give the chief messenger of this House leave to go out and pay $195 a ton for ships, he will get you the ships just as readily as will the Department of Marine and he will make a millionaire of himself in the bargain. This is not a policy, because apparently the minister has not given any attention to the question of inducing our capitalists to put their money into the shipbuilding business; that would be what I would call a shipbuilding policy; if you can accomplish that you will be doing something towards establishing shipbuilding in this country. But buying or building ships at a very high price is simply discouraging the private investor and driving him out of the business.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Might I ask the hon. member a question? Do I understand him to say that to-day in England, Ireland or Scotland ships of the same type as the Government has built can be bought at $105 per ton?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I understand that the British Government is selling ships at the present time at less than $100 a ton.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: That is not an answer to my question. Did I understand my hon. friend to say that ships of a type similar to those that are being built in our Canadian yards can be built in any yards of the United Kingdom at $105 a ton or at any lower price than what the Canadian Government is paying?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I have given my hon. friend an extract from a well-known financial paper to the effect that at the present time ships are being built in the yards of Great Britain for £30 a ton, and considering the rate of exchange when this paper was issued that figure comes to only about $105 a ton. That is one authority. The hon. minister will not deny that the British government are to-day selling ships for less than $100 a ton to private individuals. The American government, I believe, are doing the same thing, arrangements having been entered into with certain owners for them to take over ships built for the United States government during the war, at a figure of about $100 a ton. Whereas my hon. friend is going on building ships at a much higher price than that, expecting them to compete successfully with these lower priced ships.

I said that this was not a policy, and I want to press that home on the mind of my hon. friend, because I think he honestly believes that it is. If Sir John Macdonald at the time he introduced the National Policy had started to lay the foundation of cotton factories and steel works at the expense of the people he and his policy would have been the laughing stock of Canada within five years' time. That was not his policy. His idea was to devise a policy that would induce our people to embark in the manufacturing industry. My hon. friend is not doing that. He is driving our private investors out of the industry and building ships at an enormous price with the public funds, and expecting them to compete with ships that are built and bought at a much lower price. A ship doing the business that my hon. friend expects to do has to compete with the whole world. A cargo of lumber or of wheat is put on the board in the shipping exchange in London or in New York, and the man who will carry that cargo for the lowest rate will get the business.

My hon. friend has got that competition before him; all the ships on the sea are competing for that one cargo. And my hon. friend has told the House over and over again that he is charging the market rate. Now, I want to know what benefit it is to the farmer of Canada if his wheat or his cattle is carried to the Liverpool market at exactly the same rate in a Gavernment ship as in a private ship? And what can be the benefit to the taxpayer if he has to pay the deficit that my hon. friend is bound to have to make good when he enters into competition with those ships that were built at a lower price? It is a very simple calculation. I have stated that a large number of ships with which my hon. friend is competing are ships that were built before the war at a price of from $50 to $60 a ton. Great Britain, at the time the war broke out, had some twenty million tons of shipping on the seas, and a large part of that tonnage was built at those low rates.

Very many of those ships are still on the seas, and my hon. friend when the times get hard—and they are getting harder now for shipping owners, ships are idle to-day in the harbours of New York and Boston because they cannot find business—will have to meet close competition. Let us make a comparison between the conditions pertaining to the building of a ship, say, at Halifax and those prevailing in connection with the building of a similar ship in the Old Country. My hon. friend, I understand, is having two ships built at Halifax at the rate of $195 a ton. At this rate, one 10,000 ton ship will cost him $1,950,000. The insurance on that ship cannot be less than three per cent of the value of the hull; the cost of insurance, therefore, when he starts the ship in business will be $58,500. He must allow five per cent for depreciation if he expects to continue in the business and get his capital back; that will be $97,500. He tells us that he is making five per cent interest on his money; that is another $97,500. The total amount of fixed charges, therefore, on the ship is $253,500. Now, let us take a ship built on the Clyde prior to the war at $60 a ton—a 10,000 ton ship of exactly the same type, with which my hon. friend has to compete. The cost of the ship in the first place would be $600,000. The insurance on the hull at three per cent would be $18,000; depreciation at five per cent, $30,000; interest at five per cent, $30,000; in all $78,000. These two ships are competing for the same business; one has a fixed charge of $253,500; the other a fixed charge of $78,000, so that the handicap against my hon. friend's ship to begin with is $175,000. That is to say, he has to earn with his ship $175,000 more than the other man earns before he can begin to pay a profit. When times are hard and freights are low, it will be impossible for him to do that, and the business must end up with a very heavy loss to the people of this country.

I drew the attention of the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) this evening to the fact that he had not given a bookkeeping statement with regard to this business of running the railways. I want to make the same remark to the Minister of Marine. He has not given a statement—

Mr. BALLANTYNE: It is here.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: You can read his speech very carefully without finding any statement showing assets and liabilities. My hon. friend is a business man; he knows what I want. If he was giving the financial statement of a joint stock company in Montreal of which he was director or president, he would show all his assets and all his liabilities; he would show also his profit and loss account; and he would place it in such shape that a business man could take up that piece of paper and see whether the shareholders were making or losing money. He has not given us any such statement. He told the committee the other night that he had somewhere a million and a half dollars in cash and in Victory bonds. Well, I quite believe he has, but in the other pocket he may have bills amounting to a million and a half that are not paid. I do not know what his liabilities are; nobody knows; nobody can tell from the statement that he has given. If we are going into the business of running ships; if we are going into the business of running railways, we must be business men and treat the people of this country as the president of a company treats his shareholders,—that is, give them a fair statement showing just how we stand. Does any one in this country know whether or not my hon. friend is making money in this business? I am quite willing to take his word for it, but he would not need to make a speech to convince me if he gave a proper statement from which I could see for myself. I was unfortunately absent when he made his speech the other day, but I read it over very carefully and it looked to me as if he was making an apology for what he was doing. I have a suspicion that he himself has not very much faith in this scheme and that he already sees the end of it. He does not say that he is going to continue it.

The Minister of Railways came to the rescue of my hon. friend the other night by saying that we must have ships in order to carry on the business of the country; we must have them in order to compete with the Canadian Pacific. The Canadian Pacific, he argued, has ships; therefore the Government of Canada, if it is to prosecute the business of running a railway, must also have ships to carry the traffic from Canadian ports and route it through to its destination. Now, that might be true if the Government were establishing a line of ships on the Atlantic to carry passengers and freight across to Liverpool or other ports. That would be business. But that is not what the Government are doing; they are sending their ships all over the world. And I challenge my hon. friend to show where he is going to get his return cargo. Suppose he sends a ship from St. John down to the river Plate with a load of lumber. When he gets there, there is no return cargo to bring to Canada. What will he do? Will he buy coal at an enormous rate at the river Plate, where it costs three or four times as much as it costs up here, and will he fill his ship with that coal and steam all the way back to St. John with nothing in the hold? He will not do it if he is a business man; so that if he is going to continue the operation of his tramp vessel he must send it somewhere else. Well, the chances are that he will find a cargo of cattle or of wheat for Liverpool; nothing else will pay him. What will he be doing then? He will be developing the trade of the Argentine and competing in the Liverpool market with the Canadian farmer. That is the kind of liner he is going to run; he cannot avoid it if he continues to do business as he is doing it now. He is not bulding liners; he is not establishing any line of ships. The Minister of Railways need not worry over making terms with outside steamships to carry his traffic across the Atlantic. Dozens of steamships which cross the Atlantic from Montreal, Halifax, St. John and various points in Canada will be glad to connect up with the Canadian National railways and carry their traffic to the other side on easy terms. My hon. friend would have no trouble in making a good bargain, because there are many of these ships and they would all be competing for the business. It is idle to say that you cannot carry on a railway business without having ships to carry your produce across the ocean. Very few railway companies in the world have their own ships. England and Scotland send out as much produce as any other country in the world, but the railway companies of these countries do not, as a rule have their own ships. Very few of the United States railway companies have ships; it is very easy for them to make arrangements for the routing of their traffic through to destination. That argument, therefore, does not hold, though it was the chief argument advanced by the Minister of Railways the other night in defence of my hon. friend's policy.

I do not wish the Minister of Marine to think that I am opposed to Canadian shipbuilding, for I am not. No man is more anxious than I am to see the Canadian flag on the Seven Seas, and anything that can be done in that direction I shall support. But my hon. friend will never see that until he reduces his tariff. No protective country has ever been able to build up a great mercantile marine. For many years past no country would have been better able to do it than the United States. But it was a reproach to the United States, and they felt the reproach, that their passengers and their freight were carried in British ships across the ocean; that only some 12 per cent of their trade was carried in their own ships. It was a reproach to the people of the United States, and they would have overcome it if they could, but they could not overcome it and at the same time maintain their high tariff. Similarly, we cannot build up a mercantile marine and at the same time maintain our high tariff. If hon. members will look at the tariff schedules, they will find scores of articles that enter into the construction of ships that are made more expensive by the tariff. The only other way of assisting the shipbuilding industry will be by a bounty, and personally, I am not in favour of a bounty; I think the only effective step is a reduction in the tariff if the minister expects the Canadian people to continue in the shipbuilding industry. We have a good example in the province from which I come. Many years ago, Nova Scotia was one of the greatest shipbuilding countries in the world, for its population. That is a big statement to make, but I make it advisedly. Fifty years ago, more or less, no other country in the world had as many tons of shipping on the sea as Nova Scotia had in proportion to its population; it had a ton of shipping for every inhabitant, for every man, woman and child in the province, and that figure has not, I believe, been reached by any other country. Great Britain has a very large fleet of ships, as hon. members know; the minister told us that when war broke out she had over twenty million tons of shipping; but Great Britain at that time had a population of over 40,000,000 people, and she was the only country that could compete with Nova Scotia in tonnage. Nevertheless, in proportion to population, Nova Scotia had double the tonnage that Great Britain had. How did we get that large tonnage? We got it under what was practically a free trade policy. We had a 10 to 12 per cent tariff in Nova Scotia at that date. The ships were wooden ships. They were built from the wood of Nova Scotia; work was done by the people of Nova Scotia, the hulls were built of wood and also the fastenings, and when a hull was finished some merchant in Glasgow or Liverpool advanced the builder the rigging, sails and other material, and that was admitted into the province free. That was practically free trade, and that was the way in which Nova Scotia made such great progress in wooden shipbuilding. I quite understand hon. members will say that when iron replaced wood we could not carry on the industry; but I can assure my hon. friend that we did carry it on under a low tariff, and we carried it on successfully. I may also make the statement to him that no country in the history of the world that maintained a high tariff ever had a great mercantile fleet. Therefore, to my mind, there is just one solution and only one. I am distinctly opposed to Government ownership. It is not the part of this Government to play the game; the Government should referee the game and let the people play it. Let my hon. friend produce some kind of a policy by which the people of this country can embark in the shipbuilding industry and he will have my hearty support.

Mr. M. CLARK: Before the minister concludes, I should like to be permitted to say a few words on this vote. I think the House and the country are indebted to the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mackenzie King) for having held the vote over. We are getting a little more daylight on this question than we did the last time it was debated in this House.

An hon. MEMBER: Louder.

Mr. M. CLARK: Does my hon. friend mean that? It may be his hearing and not my voice that is wrong. I am, however, very glad to accommodate him. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. J. H. Sinclair) has just delivered a speech of very great political wisdom and importance, and I am personally gratified to have support from him for views which I modestly put before the House last week when this subject was under discussion. His voice on this question is a weighty voice, because no other hon. gentleman in this House knows about the shipping question better than the hon. member for Guysborough. I can only hope his reward will be better than mine was for having given sound views on political economy. When I tried to preach the same doctrines, my genial and eccentric friend the hon. member for Cape Breton South (Mr. Butts) was put on his feet to ask me if I ever heard of Christopher Columbus. I am glad to see my hon. friend in his place and to relieve his anxiety about my historical knowledge; I have heard of the gentleman, but I have not quite the opinion that my hon. friend appears to have of him as a discoverer. I came to America much later than Christopher Columbus, and I found things here that Christopher Columbus never dreamed of—my hon. friend, for example.

I find nothing that reflects on myself in the first part of the speech of the hon. member for Guysborough. He uses stronger language than I care to use—I am well known to be a man of moderate views and studiously and carefully guarded language. Therefore, when the minister came with his shipping projects before the House about twelve months ago, I expressed fear that he had entered into what was an unprofitable contract. The hon. member for Guysborough changes the words slightly, and he boldly charges my hon. friend with a profiteering contract. I judge my meaning was the same, but I always like to be careful in the use of language. With regard to that, I must repeat that I think these contracts have not been profitable. I must say, when I raised this question first, I did not get the support I expected from the official Opposition of the day. The occasion was a somewhat famous one, and my hon. friend, the then leader of the Opposition (Mr. McKenzie) made it the occasion of a declaration, which I believe was a very serious declaration for himself. On that occasion he stated, with that honesty and courage which are characteristic of him, that he was a protectionist, and I am afraid that that declaration cost him the leadership of the party. I always hate to see any hon. gentleman suffer for his honesty. Sitting where he does, it is all right for one to entertain protectionist views, but it is very wrong to avow them. But my advice will be of no use to my hon. friend now. I say that I did not get the support I expected on that occasion from the official Opposition. I am all the more glad to see my old and honoured friend, the member for Guysborough, strike out from the shoulder in the way he did to-night. I am deeply grateful to him for enforcing my views on political economy as I expressed them last week.

I did not rise to delay this vote, but I understand that we have the assurance of the minister that this is to carry out contracts which have already been entered into, and that after that he and the Government are retiring from the shipbuilding business. I understand that is the position at which we have arrived on this question. If I am not right, no doubt the minister will put me right when he rises to reply presently.

While I am on my feet, I wish to make reference to another matter which arose in this debate last week, and I do so for the purpose of making the position of this party in this House and in the country very clear upon a subject which, I understood from the minister, the Government have under their consideration, and that is the subject of possible subsidies to ships. I understand that the minister will finish these contracts and go out of what, according to my hon. friend from Guysborough, has been a profiteering business. I do not know that we should be surprised that it is such a business. My hon. friend the Minister of Marine comes from Montreal, and his deputy comes from Nova Scotia. Well, coming from the West as I do, I, a priori, have arrived at the conclusion that this is not a very good combination with regard to shipbuilding for the rest of Canada,—my hon. friend from Guysborough is an exception, of course, to certain tendencies in Nova Scotia, he still retains the free trade instincts of his family, but I am afraid there are very strong protectionists among the Liberals of Nova Scotia besides my hon. friend the late leader of the Opposition. However, the profiteering business is to be stopped, and the Government are considering the question of subsidies. Now I do not know whether my hon. friend from South Cape Breton was speaking in favour of subsidies or not; I am not at all sure that he knew himself. He said some things, nevertheless. He is always interesting to listen to, and thoroughly good-natured as a rule. I do not know that he was so very good-natured when he disavowed his Irishism and proclaimed himself a Canadian. I presume he meant by birth. I think I knew the meaning of his strong expression as well as of the enthusiastic cheers which accompanied that avowal of his nationality. All I have got to say upon that is this, that in opposing subsidies to British companies if they are going to make profiteering contracts or plunder the taxpayers of Canada I am a better Canadian and am less of an Englishman than my hon. friend if he supports the subsidies. It is only a poor type of Canadian in this House who does not feel it his duty to look after the cash of the people whom he is sent here to represent, rather than to allow those people to be rooked by companies, let those companies be from England or wherever you like.

I did not last week get the unanimous support I should have liked from the Opposition on the question of subsidies. Indeed, the two official sides have a very strong resemblance to one another on all these questions. There are hon. members opposite who come from the farming districts of Ontario who have very little use for subsidies, just as there are in the official Opposition hon. gentlemen who come from agricultural areas, who have very little use for subsidies. On the other hand, just as my hon. friend from Toronto spoke strongly in favour of subsidies, so my hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Duff) seemed rather in a receptive mood, and he said, that if such things were going round and there was money to provide them, he would be there with his hand out—so I understood him. I do not know that my hon. friend from Three Rivers (Mr. Bureau) if he were present, would deny that he himself would look for a subsidy for shipping if such things were going. The hon. member for Cape Breton too I think would have an appetite in that direction. So we see, Mr. Chairman, that in regard to the two official sides of this House there is not very much difference between the two parties, any more than there was a year ago, in regard to this profiteering contract, between the then leader of the Opposition and the Minister of Marine.

But I want to say that there is a party in this House, which is much larger in the country, and behind which there is a swelling tide, which is absolutely at one both on profiteering contracts and on subsidies. We here, to a man, are opposed to subsidies and bounties on principle. We say they are unjust, they are bad political economy, they are wrong, and we oppose them, we care not what riding wants them. We are looking after the interests, the broad interests of the whole Canadian people. When you pay a bounty to Dominion Steel, or a subsidy to shipbuilders, to placate the electors of a certain constituency, where do you get the money? Some one addressed that question to the minister the other day, and in the innocence of his heart he said, "I think we will get it from the bank." When you get money from a bank, the bank is not acting like the Good Samaritan—the money has to be paid back. Where does the money come from for all these doles? It comes from the brawn and sinew of the labourer, from the twelve hours' day of the farmer, from the worker in the factories. It comes out of the blood and bone and muscle of the people. We say it is a wrong thing to spend in bounties and subsidies money that has been got in that way. So we are opposed to subsidies on principle, and we are so opposed to a man.

I want to make one more point in this connection before I sit down. We are especially opposed to subsidies at this time because of the financial conditions of the country. I am trying to give the Government some grounds on which to come to a wise decision on policy, which we have been told by the minister is to be communicated to us when the financial statement for the year is brought down. The Government has no money to throw away in subsidies at the present time. The Government are living on borrowed money. They have just taken $700,000,000 from the people of this country, and the Lord only knows in His dwelling place when they will be able to pay it back unless we change our fiscal policy. They have neither moral right nor financial status to give subsidies of this kind. What the people of this country want is honest housekeeping. They want their money taken care of, and it is only by taking care of it and by arranging taxation on a proper basis that we shall alter the exchange against us in the United States, reduce the cost of living, and make Canada a fit country for heroes to dwell in.

I have one more ground supplied to me by my kind and genial friend from South Cape Breton. He told us in his address last week that they got the cheapest ore from Newfoundland that is to be found on the face of the earth. I do not think I misrepresent my hon. friend—the cheapest iron ore in the world.

Mr. BUTTS: What I did say was that we were capable of producing on the shores of Sydney harbour the cheapest pig iron in the world.

Mr. M. CLARK: From the splendid ores of Newfoundland they are capable of producing on the shores of Sydney harbour the cheapest pig iron in the world. Capable? Then capable men do not want subsidies. That is the argument. If you have the cheapest ore, and you are capable men, then take the advice of my hon. friend from Guysborough: Go to it and build ships in competition with the world.

Mr. BUTTS: I might tell my hon. friend from Red Deer, as he comes from a farming country, that we do not build ships out of pig iron.

Mr. M. CLARK: I might tell my hon. friend, though I come from a farming country, that he cannot build them without pig iron. Does my hon. friend wish another exchange? Mr. Chairman, I am a Canadian, and I wish to induce Canadianism, but not of the puny kind that comes to this House seeking subsidies. I want to produce Canadians who can stand four square to all the winds that blow, as their forefathers did in the Islands of the North sea, and as their brothers did in the trenches in Flanders. I want Canadians who in the trade and manufacturing world can stand four square to all the winds that blow, and say to competition, let it come from where it will: We are capable men; we have the material and we can produce the goods. That is the kind of Canadianism I believe in.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I am greatly surprised that the member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) and the member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark) should charge this Government in face of the information I have placed before the House, with having placed profiteering contracts. I take issue squarely with both hon. gentlemen and aver emphatically that not one profiteering contract has been placed. It is all very fine for hon. members, possibly for political reasons, to level such a serious charge against me as a responsible minister, and against the Government. But before this House and the public of Canada will accept the allegation that profiteering contracts have been placed by this Government, these hon. gentlemen must adduce more substantial proof than merely making the charge and letting it go at that. The hon. member for Guysborough did me the honour to confess that he had carefully read every word of my speech, and then alleged that profiteering contracts had been placed, stating that ships could be built in the United Kingdom at lower prices than those at which the Canadian Government had placed their contracts. I am sorry to take up the time of the House, but in view of the first charge of dishonesty that has ever been levelled at this Government or any member of the Government, I wish to quote again the figures I quoted the other day.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: I rise to a point of order. Nothing I stated could be construed into a charge of dishonesty against the minister. When I talked of unprofitable contracts I meant the profits which the Government should have saved for the country went to those who sold steel plates at a dearer rate than that at which they should have been sold. That is not a charge of dishonesty against the minister. I had no such thought in my mind, and no word of my language will bear that interpretation.

Mr. CASGRAIN: It is bad business.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I am glad to hear the statement of the hon. member for Red Deer. I certainly understood him to say that profiteering contracts had been placed for ships, but if I am wrong I accept with very good grace the hon. gentleman's assurance that he did not intend to convey the impression that profiteering contracts had been placed by this Government.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: My hon. friend must not misunderstand me. I endorse the position taken by the hon. member for Guysborough, but a distinction must be made between profiteering by contractors with whom the minister does business, and profiteering by the minister himself, which would be the only thing that could justify a charge of dishonesty.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The minister evidently misunderstood me. I did not allege that he had made a personal profit out of the ships, for nothing was further from my mind than such a thought; and probably the word "improvident" would have been the better adjective by which to describe the conratcts. I am convinced, however, that some one made a big profit out of the contracts, and the question which the minister will have to settle with the country is, why he let the contracts at such high prices without calling for public tenders.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The hon. member for Guysborough has only confirmed what he said a moment ago. I have the facts to disprove his assertions. No profiteering or improvident contracts have been placed by this Government. I have stated before on the floor of this House, and I state again, that ships of a similar type have been built, and are being built, in the Canadian shipyards throughout the country at as low a price as can be obtained in England, Ireland or Scotland. The other day I stated that we had figured out the sterling price at $162.50 per ton. The hon. member for Guysborough goes back to pre-war days, but I am not dealing with conditions as they existed before the war. I affirm that since the Government let the contract for the first ship there has not been a time when ships of a similar type could be built in any of the yards in the United Kingdom at lower prices than those at which the Canadian Government placed their contracts. A week ago to-night, when speaking on this subject, I stated that notwithstanding the very large emergency fleet contracts placed by our neighbours to the south of us, they paid $25 per ton more than was paid by the Canadian Government. I also informed the House that not so long ago there was ordered in the United Kingdom a cargo ship of eleven knots, oil fuel, to be engaged in trans-atlantic business, at a price of $220.35 per ton, and that the Imperial Munitions Board were placing contracts for ships. I find no fault with the Imperial Munitions Board, and do not want it to appear that I am criticising them, because I think they placed their contracts well. But during the war they ordered forty-four steel ships to be built in Canadian yards at £39 10s. per ton, the net price per deadweight ton being $190. I also informed the House when speaking a week ago that sixteen wooden ships were built for England at a cost of $204 per ton; that England had ordered thirteen steel ships in the United States at a cost of $200 per ton; nineteen steel ships in Japan at $214 per ton; and three steel ships in China at $199 per ton.

Mr. JACOBS: During the war?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: During the war. Most of our contracts had been placed during the war, and since the Armistice was signed the Canadian Government ordered ships at $167.50 per ton; and I say from my place in this House that for a similar type of ship placed at the same time no one could have obtained in England, Ireland or Scotland a lower rate than $167.50.

Mr. MURPHY: Has the minister any figures to substantiate that statement?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Certainly. The figures I quoted just now are the official figures of the Committee on National Expenditure of the British Government. That is my authority.

Mr. MURPHY: Were these contracts placed during the war?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I presume the orders for these ships were placed during the war.

Mr. MURPHY: If the hon. gentleman will permit me. Earlier in the evening he mentioned that contracts for eighteen of these ships had been awarded since the signing of the armistice. Has the hon. gentleman any figures to show the price per ton of other ships, the contracts for which were given about the same time?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I will be very glad to give the information to the hon. gentleman. Since the signing of the armistice we placed contracts at $167.50 per ton. The British sterling price was £33 10s. per ton. The English sterling price would be close to our figure of $167.50.

Some hon. MEMBERS: No, no.

Mr. McMASTER: What was the rate of exchange?

Mr. DUFF :At what date?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: May of last year.

Mr. MURPHY: Can the hon. gentleman tell the committee the price per ton in the case of any contract for ships placed by well known private corporations, for instance such as the Canadian Pacific Railway, about the same time as he placed these orders for ships?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I will not give the name of the firm that ordered the ships because I do not think I would be right in doing so. I can say this, however, that Norway has placed orders for ships with one of our yards in this country within the last three months, at $170 per ton, and France has also placed an order at $170 per ton. I can say further that the Canadian Government have been offered not only the price that we are paying for our ships but more if we choose to sell them.

Mr. MURPHY: Then the hon. gentleman has no figures with respect to orders given by Canadian firms upon which to base a comparison?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: No, I do not know anything about the orders given by any Canadian firm, but the very fact of Norway and France placing orders in Canada within the last three months at prices higher than the Canadian Government are paying, is, I think, conclusive evidence that ours are not profiteering contracts.

[Mr. Ballantyne.]

Mr. POWER: Is the $167 per ton the lowest price, or the average price, of the 18 ships referred to?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The lowest price.

Mr. POWER: What was the highest price?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: For what period?

Mr. POWER: I would like to know the highest price at which contracts were let for any of the 18 ships since the signing of the armistice.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Shortly after the signing of the armistice a contract was placed at $170 per ton and that is the highest price that has been paid for that type of ship—that is the largest type, of 8,400 tons deadweight. Most of these orders were placed at $167.50 per ton. I also stated last week that the firm of Skinner and Eddie, of Seattle, are constructing standard vessels of 8,800 tons. Mr. Skinner, when giving testimony before the United States Senate last month, declared that these vessels were being constructed at the present time at a price of $185 per ton. Now, I think, Sir, that I have proved my case, that no profiteering contracts have been let. I have also proved that the United States, their programme being much larger than ours, have paid $25 per ton and upwards more than we have paid. I have shown the price that the Imperial Munitions Board have paid for steel ships, and for wooden ships, and I have shown the price that Great Britain has paid for steel ships during the war. I have stated what the price is to-day for similar ships built in the United Kingdom and built here. I have given all these figures, which are absolutely accurate and official, and neither the Canadian Government nor this Parliament should be ashamed of the prices at which we have placed our contracts. Let me repeat again, there is no justification for the charge that has been made as to placing profiteering contracts.

The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) stated that he has some doubts as to the net profit of $1,406,000 that I stated a week ago resulted from the operation of the 19 ships that were in commission last year, some of which had only made one trip. The hon. gentleman states that as a business man, before making such a statement to the House, I should be prepared to lay before it the usual business statement showing assets and liabilities. I am glad to tell the hon. gentleman that I have that very statement here. The current assets are as follows:

Cash in banks	$432,576 13
Victory bonds	504,583 33
Accounts receivable	492,247 75
Outstanding freight	71,411 05
Material and supplies	1,668 87
Total	$1,502,487 13

The total assets of the company are $2,024,537.40. The liabilities are as follows:

Accounts payable	$627,701 52
Open voyages account	340,068 50

The profit account is $1,056,767.38, and the total net profit, as I stated before, $1,406,000. If the hon. member for Guysborough doubts that statement, I would like, with the unanimous consent of the committee, to place on Hansard a statement of the gross and net profit of each one of these ships for each voyage.

Mr. DUFF: Hear, hear.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: These profits, as I have already stated, were arrived at in the same way that any business house would arrive at profits. After providing for organization, overhead expenses, depreciation, interest on the ships and insurance, the net profit has been arrived at, the amount being as stated.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. J. H. Sinclair) takes a more gloomy and pessimistic view of the Government ownership of ships than I do. I am a thorough believer in the Government ownership and operation of ships. Where would Canada have been during the past year if it had not been for the Government ships that brought a vast amount of tonnage of raw sugar from the West Indies to the sugar refineries of Canada at Halifax, St. John and Montreal? There would have been an actual sugar shortage in this country. Where would the people of British Columbia have been with respect to the large amount of lumber that they had in that province if it had not been for the Government ships which carried that lumber to England, to Australia and to New Zealand?

It has been stated by the hon. gentleman that ships operated by private ownership are going empty either one way or the other. I am happy to tell the hon. gentleman that the Government ships have full cargoes both going and coming on the various routes on which they are operating. I do not wish to unnecessarily occupy the time of the House, but let me cite the case of the Canadian Pioneer that runs to Buenos Ayres. The gross earnings of that vessel on the outward voyage were $174,961.17. On the return voyage the gross earnings were $292,000.

Mr. DUFF: What cargo did she bring back?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Hides and other goods. I cannot give you the precise details of the composition of her cargo.

Mr. DUFF: Did she bring that cargo to Canada?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Some of it here and some of it to New York. But that does not make any difference. What I am trying to refute is the statement of the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) to the effect that these vessels did not have return cargoes.

Mr. DUFF: He did not say that. He said they did not bring return cargoes to Canada.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Most of these ships did bring return cargoes to Canada, but part of this particular ship's cargo was destined for the port of New York.

Mr. DUFF: What did she bring to Canada?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: If the hon. member will wait until I get through I will be glad to give him any information he wants. The total gross earnings of the "Canadian Pioneer" for that one voyage from Montreal to Buenos Aires were $466,961.17, and the net earnings were $214,828.27. As I stated, I have in my hand the gross earnings and the net earnings for the open voyages and for the closed voyages, and I will be very glad to hand it to the hon. member for Guysborough, or if the House prefers I will place the statement on the pages of Hansard.

Mr. DUFF: Has the minister got a statement there of the steamer "McKee"?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: That is not a ship that was built under the Government's shipbuilding programme, she was bought several years ago and operated by the Railway Department. I have none of these old ships in my statement, only the new ships that have been built and operated under the Government's shipbuilding programme.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Was she not bought with money voted by this Government for the purchase of ships two or three years ago?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I can only say that such purchase has not been out of any votes that have been put through the House for the Government shipbuilding programme since I have had the honour of being Minister of Marine. Before I resume my seat I want to say that with our large transcontinental railway system of 22,000 miles this House would be ill-advised, in my humble opinion, if it did not endorse the Government ownership and operation of these ships in order to compete with the Canadian Pacific railway. Not only do these ships make the profit that I have stated, but co-operating with them our railway system makes a profit also on the long haul.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I will put it in another way that probably will better please hon. members opposite. I want to say that the deficits on railway operation would have been even greater than what the hon. Minister of Railways has stated to-day did we not have these ships working in co-operation with our railway system.

Mr. DUFF: Absolutely not.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Well, I differ from my hon. friend there. I am quite willing to adopt the policy of the Canadian Pacific Railway. There is no better managed corporation than the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and if the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have seen fit to operate a large fleet of cargo and passenger ships in conjunction with their railway system, and to keep their marine accounts separate from their railway accounts in order to be able to tell what profit each branch is making, the Government of Canada cannot be wrong in following that policy. It has come to my notice since I have been minister, and I knew it before, that all transatlantic steamers are controlled by pooled rates. As a result Canada has been discriminated against time and again. How can we expand our export trade to South Africa, the West Indies and to other countries unless we own our own ships? Even if Canada did not make a cent on her ships, —I will go further than that and say, even if she made a loss,—the Government would be fully justified in carrying out their programme of owning and operating these ships. From what I have seen of the advantages of these ships in extending Canada's export trade, and also of the benefit accruing to our railway system from their operation, I am convinced that when the days of keener competition come, if those engaged in farming, mining, lumbering and manufacturing, either directly or as middlemen, find they cannot compete with other countries on account of our freight rates being a little high, I for one would think the Canadian Government Merchant Marine would be fully justified in lowering those rates in order that the products of our farms, mines, forests and factories could be delivered in any foreign countries on a basis that would enable our exporters to compete with the rest of the world. Therefore I will say as I take my seat that not only do I believe enthusiastically in the Government shipbuilding programme, but, without wishing to assume the role of a prophet, I also believe that if we are spared to meet here a year hence we shall be able to show a very much larger profit statement than the one I have already submitted to the House.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I differ from my hon. friend in his statement that we cannot build up an export trade without owning a merchant marine. He has made that statement constantly, and, in my judgment, it is without foundation. It is low freight rates that give a country a chance to build up an export trade, and you do not get low freight rates under government management. At the time the ships came under government management in Great Britain, the freight rates went up something like 58 per cent, and in some cases as high as 85 per cent, and when the same ships went back into private ownership the freight rates dropped again. That is what happened in England. Low rates will give you a chance to export; high rates will cripple you. Surely the Government of Great Britain is just as anxious to build up export trade as is the Government of Canada at the present moment, yet what is the Government of Great Britain doing? It is selling every ton of shipping it owns and putting the ships back into private hands, and it is selling them at a price a little more than one-half of what my hon. friend is paying now for the ships he is building to compete with those very ships for the export trade. The Government of the United States is just as anxious to build up an export trade as my hon. friend can be, but what is that Government doing? It is making arrangements to transfer all the ships it holds into private hands, and the price is mentioned at about $100 a ton. When my hon. friend says that export trade cannot be built up by a country without the Government owning the merchant marine, I want to tell him that it has been done. No country in the world has built up such an export trade as Great Britain, it has beaten the world in exports, and imports as well, and while doing that it did not own one ton of shipping. My hon. friend will have to revise his information on that question before he is very much older.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: Mr. Chairman, I just want to confirm in two words what my hon. friend (Mr. Sinclair) has said about Great Britain. I daresay many hon. members read the very informing article in last nights' papers from an American correspondent in London pointing out that Great Britain since it parted with its government ships and sent them back to private ownership has exported more goods in the month of February just past than it had exported in any given month since the beginning of the war, that is, since the year 1914, and that those exports were going up every day. That is the condition of affairs under private ownership in Great Britain, which country, after all, does know something about shipping and cuts quite a figure in the shipping world.

But my main purpose in rising was to deal with a much more important statement of my hon. friend. A week ago he stated that the money we are voting now was to end existing contracts, and that on their completion the Government was going out of the business.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: That is right.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: Then I need say no more. I hope my hon. friend does not misunderstand me.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: If the hon. member will allow me, I made the statement before, and I make it now, that the Government has finished its shipbuilding programme. I presume that is what my hon. friend refers to.

Mr. M. CLARK: I am very glad to hear that assurance; it simplifies the proceeding of getting this vote through so far as I am concerned. But in his speech to-night I certainly understood my hon. friend to express a very enthusiastic opinion in the direction of the Government's continuing this business, and I thought that statement not consistent with the interpretation, which it appears was correct, which I had put upon his statement when this matter was previously before us.

Mr. DUFF: I understood the minister to say last week that as the result of the operation of these nineteen steamers he had $1,500,000 cash in bank and Victory bonds. He told us also that there was a net profit of $1,400,000. To-night he tells us that he has only $432,000 in the bank and $504,000 in Victory bonds, a total of $936,000. There is a discrepancy which I should like the minister to explain.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Accounts receivable are also considered as cash; these amount to $492,247.75. Outstanding freight is also included.

Mr. DUFF: I admit that I am not much of a business man, but I never heard tell of accounts receivable being put in the bank as cash. If that is the way the Minister of Marine does business, the quicker he sells his ships the better. Accounts receivable are not cash, therefore the Minister of Marine deliberately misled this committee when he told us that he had $1,500,000 by way of cash in the bank and Victory bonds.

The CHAIRMAN: I must ask the hon. member to withdraw the words "deliberately misled."

Mr. DUFF: Well, unintentionally misled the committee. There is no question that there is not $1,500,000 in the bank. The minister also told us that there were liabilities of $627,000 and outstanding accounts payable amounting to $340,000, a total of $967,000. According to these figures, instead of having $1,400,000 to his credit, the minister has only $500,000. Then, he does not allow for depreciation. If he can offer an explanation of that I shall be glad to hear it.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I have said on more than one occasion that the net profits were arrived at after providing for operating expenses, overhead, depreciation, interest on cost of ships, and insurance. If the hon. member wishes me to read the figures again I will do so, but they are as I gave them a moment ago.

Mr. DUFF: I would like to have the thing explained so that the committee will understand it.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Very well. The current assets of the company are as follows: Cash in banks, $432,576.13; Victory bonds, which are the same as cash, $504,583.33; accounts receivable—I said, not that they were cash, but that they were equal to cash—$492,247.75; outstanding freight, $71,411.05; material and supplies, $1,668.87; a total of $1,502,487.13. Equipment, $8,502.03. Deferred charges: insurance, $505,284.27; advance wages, etc., $8,263.97; grand total of assets, $2,024,537.40.

Mr. DUFF: What does equipment, $8,502.03, mean?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I assume that it would mean office furniture, and so on.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Has the minister a list of the contracts that have been awarded since November 11, 1918, and their amounts?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: My deputy will get the information and I will give it to my hon. friend when it is ready.

Mr. MANION: Frequent reference is made in the House to the wonderful advances of British foreign trade, as if the British people were the only people who carried on any foreign trade. Nobody disputes that Britain has made wonderful advances in foreign trade but it is a fact that in the period of twenty-three years between 1890 and 1913 the foreign trade of the United Kingdom jumped, in round figures, from £748,000,000 to £1,403,000,000, an advance of 87 per cent, while in the same period the foreign trade of the United States jumped from $1,647,000,000 to $4,278,000,000, an advance of 160 per cent, nearly twice as great as the percentage of increase of British foreign trade during that period. The foreign trade of Germany between the years mentioned increased from £419,000,000 to £1,070,000,000, an increase of 155 per cent. The increase of the foreign trade of Germany and the United States was, therefore, twice as rapid as that of Great Britain. United States and Germany have subsidized their steamships; at any rate, they have been protected countries and have subsidized nearly everything.

Mr. DUFF: Did the United States have a government-owned mercantile marine?

Mr. MANION: I am not discussing the subsidies to vessels; I am referring to the suggestion which is frequently made that Great Britain has passed all other countries in the matter of foreign trade and pointing out that according to these figures, which are absolutely reliable, the United States and Germany have surpassed Great Britain in percentage of increase of foreign trade.

Mr. DUFF: Without any government mercantile marine?

Mr. MANION: I was not arguing my point regarding that, but they subsidize nearly everything. I think Germany subsidized her mercantile marine. I will give another set of statistics that might be of interest to the committee along the same line. In the thirty year period from 1875 to 1905, the foreign trade of the United Kingdom increased from £655,000,000 to £972,000,000, or an advance of 48 per cent, whereas during the same thirty year period the foreign trade of the United States, that highly protected country that is so often abused because it is protected, jumped from $1,046,000,000 to $2,636,000,000, or an advance of 151 per cent, or proportionately over three times the advance made by British foreign trade. I thought that perhaps, in view of the fact that here and elsewhere Free Trade Great Britain is so often quoted as being the only country that has made any advance, it would be interesting to the committee to know what some other countries that are protected have done.

Mr. McMASTER: Referring for a moment to the interesting figures placed before the House by the hon. member for Fort William and Rainy River (Mr. Manion), I wish first to say that he is using the very unsound percentage comparisons which were the fundamental unsoundness of the abortive campaign for protection which Mr. Joseph Chamberlain carried on in England some fifteen or eighteen years ago. Of course, the percentage of progress made by people who come into a race later than their competitors who have been in the race for years, is bound to be much greater than the percentage of progress made by the latter. For instance, let us imagine that Nova Scotia had a fleet of 1,000 vessels and that Prince Edward Island had a fleet of four vessels, and that in one year the fleet of Nova Scotia increased to 1,500 vessels, which would be an increase of 50 per cent, while the Prince Edward Island fleet increased to eight vessels, or an increase of 100 per cent. According to the arguments of my hon. friend across the way, the progress of Prince Edward Island would have been twice as great as that of Nova Scotia. That is precisely the basis of his interesting figures placed before the committee.

To return to the subject matter of the debate of to-night, I am going to make a last appeal to the minister to get out of this business when he can do so with a profit. The minister is in a peculiar position to-night. He has told us, with one breath: I believe in government ownership and operation of vessels, and again in reply to a question asked by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. M. Clark) he has, if I mistake not, said that after these ships are built, the Government is at the end of its shipbuilding programme, and—I presume he will correct me if I am wrong—its ship-operating programme.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: If the hon. member will allow me, I did not make any statement about the operation of the ships other than that they were operated and managed by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. The reason the Government have ceased placing contracts for freight ships is because we consider that with 63 steamships with a net tonnage of 380,000 tons, we have ample tonnage to take care of whatever export trade the ships might be called upon to carry or whatever other service they might be called upon to perform in conjunction with the government railways.

Mr. McMASTER: First, as to the statement that it is the Canadian Merchant Marine Limited that carries on the business, that is merely a naval uniform for the Government. The Government will be and will remain, in the eyes of the people responsible, and I should like to know—the minister, I am sure, will tell me—whether it is the intention of the Government, once they have finished their shipbuilding programme, to go on with a ship-operating programme under the guise of this company.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes.

Mr. McMASTER: That places the matter before us fairly and squarely. I think the Government, in this policy, is making a grave error which, in the long run, will cost the taxpayers of this country large sums of money. The first reason for my belief is this: The ships have been built at very high prices. Before I touch on the question of price, I wish to revert for a moment to this situation, that 18 contracts which were let for the building of 18 ships, were let illegally and improperly. I want that fact to sink into the consciousness of the Canadian people. What has the minister said in defence of this irregularity? He has said: I was very careful in letting those contracts, and I saw to it that the price was a fair one; I drove a hard bargain with people on the other side. With all respect, I wish to tell the minister that that is no answer. It is not for the Minister of Marine, nor for anyone in charge of a Government department to say: I am above the law; the law, it is true, lays down certain rules for my guidance; but I thought that I could, for the benefit of the country, depart from those rules so laid down. That was improper conduct on the part of the minister, and I trust the people of Canada will take note of it.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Will the hon. member allow me a question? I think the hon. member heard his leader read the law?

Mr. McMASTER: Not only did I hear my leader read the law, but I read the law myself to the House.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: If my hon. friend will allow me, when the armistice was signed, a great emergency existed in this country—

Mr. McMASTER: We are getting at cross purposes. I am not complaining as to the building of these ships before the armistice; I am complaining about the building of ships after the armistice. In my opinion, no such pressing emergency existed once the armistice was signed as warranted the minister in departing from the law.

The next point I wish to make is this. The minister has said: I know that I did not let the contracts at too high a price, because during the war contracts were let at a very much higher price. That is not an answer. The minister might have said: Since the armistice has been signed, Great Britain, in her shipyards, has built on government account ships at so much per ton; the United States since the armistice has been signed, has built in her shipyards on Government account ships at so much per ton. The minister has not done that; he has, in order to justify his action, compared post-war prices which he granted after the armistice with prices which were granted while the war was on, and that is not a fair comparison. The point which I wish to make is how unsafe and unsound it is for any minister to depart from what I regard as the plain letter of the law.

What is the present situation? We are asked to vote money to build ships at about $195 per ton, when ships with which these ships have to compete are being built or at least are being sold—and it makes very little difference whether they are being built or sold in Great Britain and in the Untied States at roughly half that price. In an article taken from an English paper I read the other day that there are as many ships in the world to-day as there were at the outbreak of the war. Now, if that statement is correct, and I believe it is, the minister will very shortly have to compete with ships as numerous as those before the war, and a great number of these ships will be pre-war ships which were built at $55 or $60 a ton. The reason why high rates are still being earned is that many of the harbours of the world are overcrowded, and ships have therefore to wait for cargoes, and we have not the free circulation which we otherwise would have. But freights are dropping every day, the practical mariner from Lunenburg (Mr.

Duff) assures me. I am glad the minister has made money for the Canadian people so far, if he has made it—other experts say he has not—but, anyway, so far he has got along without a severe loss, and I am glad of it because the Canadian people need every red cent we can lay our hands on. But the point I want to make is this—I have made it before, and I do not wish to labour it—the operation of tramp steamers is not a proper function for a Government department. All we do require is the initiative and the liberty which private ownership will give.

The minister has called to his aid the Canadian Pacific. He tells us that the Canadian Pacific own ships on the sea. Yes, they own the big transatlantic and transpacific liners for the purpose of rounding out their transcontinental system. But that is not the sort of boats the minister is building or proposes to build. If he was proposing to build 14,000-ton or 15,000-ton liners there would be something in that argument, but as he is building only tramp steamers of 8,000, 6,000, 4,000 and down to 2,200 deadweight tonnage, his argument falls to the ground. We have had an example both in the United States and Great Britain of government ownership of steamers. These two great nations have seen fit to return to private ownership. Is their example worth nothing to the minister? I venture to assert that there is hardly a shipping man in Montreal who agrees with the proposal of the minister and with the policy he has adopted.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Hear, hear. Not one.

Mr. McMASTER: I suppose the minister will say that is merely selfishness on their part. The minister has already said his line is subsidized, that if it does not pay for itself the deficit will be made up out of taxes. I wish to take emphatic issue with the minister there. A public service, whether it is publicly or privately owned, should pay for itself and stand on its own feet. The proposal that you should take certain activities of the Canadian people and socialize them, and then ask the whole Canadian people to make up the loss in operation is, I think, unjust. I believe it will not work. I believe experience has taught us that it has not worked in the past, and I believe it will not work in the future. We are dealing with vast sums of money in this matter. I presume that the minister will be able to get his vote through, in view of the large majority of members of this House who sit behind him, but I wish to raise my voice in protest against a grave mistake and a deep wrong to the Canadian people, and I only hope and wish the minister will heed my words.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The hon. member for Brome (Mr. McMaster) has pleaded eloquently and well for the agents of private steamship companies in the city of Montreal, from which city we both come, but that does not alter my opinion nor the opinion of the Government. Although my hon. friend heard the law quoted by his leader, he still says that contracts for 18 ships were illegally let. I repeat again, a great emergency existed. After the signing of the armistice we were bringing back hundreds of thousands of our returned soldiers.

Mr. McMASTER: How many returned soldiers were brought back in Government ships?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: None, but that does not alter my argument. The leader of the Opposition has cited the law, and within the confines of that law the Government ordered these eighteen ships. There was an emergency at that time. The whole country was upset. Thousands and thousands of men were out of work after the signing of the armistice. Hundreds of thousands of our brave men were returning from the front, and aside from the need for ships, which I claim the Government needed badly, a responsibility rested on the Government of providing work for the thousands of men who were out of work in this country at that time and for the large number of soldiers who were returning from day to day.

Mr. JACOBS: How long would it have taken to call for tenders in the ordinary way, assuming there was an emergency?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I have already gone over that ground several times, and I do not think it is necessary for me to go over it again. However, I do not want to be discourteous, and I will explain in a few words. With seventeen yards calling for public tenders and six out of the seventeen quoting lower than the balance of the yards, how could we have kept the whole seventeen yards employed to relieve the unemployment situation? I say that the Government kept within the law in placing these eighteen contracts since the armistice was signed.

Mr. DUFF: Was there an emergency in January and February of this year, when I believe some contracts were let?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes, I will come to that later. The hon. member for Brome apparently did not hear what I stated. He says that I only quoted pre-war prices.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not want the minister to take me up wrongly. I said that the minister compared the prices of vessels ordered since the armistice with the prices of vessels built during the war, not before the war.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I still state that the hon. member for Brome could not have listened to what I stated. Let me compare the prices paid by the Canadian Government for ships since the armistice with the prices paid by other countries. I have already given this information, but I have no objection to repeating it. A well-known steamship company in the old land that has a line of steamers running to Montreal paid, when the rate of exchange was at $4.80, the price of $216 per ton as compared with Canada's price of $167.50. France paid $170 per ton since the signing of the armistice, Norway paid $170 per ton, and the United States paid $185 per ton.

Mr. DUFF: Will the minister inform us in what way the idle situation constituted an emergency that could justify the placing of the contracts without tenders being called for?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I am sure that the hon. member (Mr. Duff), who lives by the sea where there are not so many unemployed men as there are in other parts of the country, must be aware that the idle situation was one of the most serious problems with which the Government had to deal after the signing of the armistice. It was a matter of providing help for unemployed men, particularly returned soldiers, and under the law cited by the leader of the Opposition, a real emergency existed when such a large number of men were out of employment, apart altogether from the pressing need of getting the ships.

Mr. POWER: Is it not a fact that the Government voted for out-of-work soldiers a sum of $40,000,000 of which only $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 was expended. I can hardly see where there could have been such an emergency, if among the class which might have been expected to be unemployed, we did not find it necessary to spend more than one-tenth of the amount voted for the purpose of meeting unemployment.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Does the hon. gentleman argue that there were not thousands and thousands of men out of work in all the large cities and towns throughout Canada after the signing of the armistice?

Mr. POWER: I am speaking of the months of January and February this year.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Well, does my hon. friend say that in January and February of this year there were not thousands of men out of work in all the large centres?

Some hon. MEMBERS: No, no.

Mr. POWER: Apparently, from the Government returns there were not. If I remember rightly, during the month of January there were very few men out of work, at least if we accept the Government returns as given by the press. In any event, there was not sufficient unemployment to constitute such an emergency as would make it imperative that contracts should be given without tenders being called for.

Mr. JACOBS: Can the minister give us a statement as to the number of returned men employed in these shipyards?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I cannot give the hon. member the exact figures. There were twenty-five thousand men employed in the shipyards in Canada, and an equal number were employed in the allied trades, such as the manufacture of marine engines, boilers, winches, chains, etc. I do not know, of course, exactly what percentage were returned soldiers, but I think I can safely say that the returned soldiers comprised a very large percentage.

Mr. JACOBS: Is the information available?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The only way in which we could obtain that information would be by writing to each of the shipyards.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The minister promised to give us a list of contracts.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes. There were forty-five contracts placed before the signing of the armistice, and the contracts that have been let since then are as follows: Canadian Vickers, 4; Tidewater Shipbuilders Ltd., 2; Port Arthur Shipbuilding Co., 5; Harbour Marine, Victoria, 2; Kingston, 2; Coughlan and Son, 6; Halifax Shipbuilders, 2; Nova Scotia Steel Co., 3; Prince Rupert Co., 2; British American Co., 2; Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., 3; Midland Shipbuilding Co., 1; Wallace Shipyards, 2; Dominion Shipbuilding Co., 2.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: These contracts were for the construction of ships. Do they include the entire equipment and furnishings of the ships as well?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The whole thing is awarded in one contract; there is no separate contract for furnishings?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: No. The Government lets the contract at so much per ton, and its designs and specifications have to be followed. The shipbuilding company who get the contract have to place orders for the engines, boilers, and all the equipment that goes into the ship.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Is there any specification requiring the boilers, etc., to be purchased in Canada?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Are copies of the contracts available?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Certainly.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I understand that a ship called The Recruit was lost in the St. Lawrence. Has the minister received the insurance on that ship?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The Canadian Government Merchant Marine, who operate the ships, insured this vessel, the cargo of which was also insured. She is lying at the mouth of the Saguenay river, and will be salvaged without difficulty. For the information of the hon. member I may say that the Canadian Government Merchant Marine places the insurance on vessels and looks after all matters of that nature.

Mr. McMASTER: She is abandoned to the underwriters?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes.

Mr. DUFF: The Government is not interested in the cargo?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: No.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Has no money been received yet on account of the insurance? In the statement which the minister has given us has he taken this wreck into account? Is it a loss, or how does it stand in the statement?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The Canadian Recruit, which was wrecked by heavy ice, does not enter into the statement I have presented to the House. I inquired of Mr. Hanna whether the ship and cargo were fully insured, and he informed me that they were. The ship has been abandoned to the underwriters, but whether or not they have paid any money to the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, I cannot say.

Mr. DUFF: What interest has the Government or Mr. Hanna in the cargo of the ship? I may be wrong, but I understood the minister to say that the cargo was insured by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. What interest can the Government have in the cargo?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The shippers insure the cargo.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: A few days ago I made certain inquiries regarding a ship called the A. J. McKee, and the minister informed the House that at 31st December last there a balance against that ship of $269,254. Has that been charged against the profits of the operation of the ships during the year?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The statement I have given to the House does not include the steamship A. J. McKee, which was an old ship purchased by the Department of Railways and Canals before this Government was elected; and the answer to which the hon. member now refers was not given by me but by the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid).

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: That ship, while it was purchased prior to the election, was acquired for the purpose of carrying freight, and was a part of the Government's policy. The fact that the ship was purchased in April, 1917, which I understand is the date, cannot affect the result. The minister, I think, should have charged that loss against the account, and should have given us a full and fair statement as to how the account stands. It occurs to me that it is not fair for the minister to give a statement leaving out the ship which made a large loss and putting in the vessel which made a profit.

Mr. ROBB: Before the item carries I want to get some information from the minister which may be of interest to the shippers of this country. I met only to-day the representative of the largest firm of cattle shippers in Canada who told me that during the winter they were compelled to ship cattle via New York because there were no ships calling at Canadian ports that were equipped to properly store cattle for shipment across the Atlantic. I want to know from the minister if he proposes to so equip the Canadian Government vessels that they can take care of the Canadian livestock trade. Another matter upon which I want to get some information is this: He made the statement that heretofore Canada had been discriminated against in the matter of ocean transportation. It has been a complaint of the manufacturing interests of Canada that ocean freights discriminate in favour of the raw material and against the manufactured product; that is, that raw material oftentimes is carried at a cheaper rate than the equivalent of that material when manufactured. I would like to know from the minister what will be the policy of the Government in future in the matter of rates as between the manufactured product and the raw material. For instance, will wheat be carried cheaper than its equivalent number of bushels if put into flour? I think it would be only fair for the minister to make a statement on these matters at the present time.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: In answer to the hon. member I beg to say that the gentleman to whom he refers in speaking of shipments of cattle called upon me to-day. I told him that I knew of no reason why the Canadian ships should not be fitted up so as to carry cattle, and no later than this morning I referred this gentleman's letter to the manager of the Canadian Government Mercantile Marine at Montreal. I hope that the manager will take steps to see that the ships are so fitted as to enable them to carry Canadian cattle. The other questions to which the hon. member referred—

Mr. ROBB: Before the minister gets away from that point, is the statement correct that Canadian cattle had to be shipped all the winter from New York because of the lack of shipping facilities from Canada?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I am sorry that I cannot definitely answer that question until I hear from the management of the Canadian Government Mercantile Marine. The other question the hon. member has put to me is rather a difficult one. I know of course the broad policy of the management of the Canadian Government Mercantile Marine. There is so much freight offering now that they are charging the same rates as any other company for similar freight. What they may do, however, when competition becomes keener, I do not know. Still, I can say this: That while not interfering with the company in any way at all, I suggested that when they found they could help Canadian shippers, no matter what the product shipped might be, by quoting a lower rate, I thought they would be justified in doing so.

Mr. McKENZIE: I see around me a great number of hon. members who come from the West and from the important province of Ontario where a campaign is in progress having for its object retrenchment and the exercise of care in the expenditure of every dollar of public money. When the minister is putting through this large item of $20,000,000 I observed that the representatives of the West, all along the line, were lustily cheering him and saying in effect: Well done, good and faithful servant, you have thrown the law to the wind, you have constituted yourself the high priest of patronage and you have during the last few years acted regardless of the requirements of the law. I wonder what the careful people and the careful farmers of Ontario and the West who want to know what becomes of their money—and they are right in being cautious and careful in such matters—would say to their representatives here who are almost jumping over their desks in their anxiety to pass this item of $20,000,000 without the slightest attempt to see that we are getting market value for that money. What an enormous amount of eloquence, ingenuity, and physical strength the minister would have conserved if he had simply complied with the law in this matter. When we are endowed with a great deal of ingenuity, eloquence and a capacity to get around things we perhaps depend too much upon such qualities. The minister is particularly talented in that direction and I am sorry that he has been put almost to the breaking point and compelled to use to the utmost the ingenuity and talent that he possesses when the very simple process of complying with the law would have avoided the whole of it. In the matter of building the ships there were, I take it, sixty-three separate and distinct contracts; perhaps there were, perhaps there were not; at all events there were sixty-three separate and distinct entities, drawing the long bow or going beyond the bounds of ordinary imagination for me to suppose that there were sixty-three different contracts. These contracts, I presume, were ratified by the Government by sixty-three separate Orders in Council. Now although the Minister of Marine has raised this controversy by asking for this appropriation from Parliament he is no more responsible for the passage and the ratification of these contracts than my good friend the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Rowell) who presided over the deliberations of the Cabinet when the Orders in Council referred to were presented. The President of the Privy Council is a lawyer but the Minister of Marine is not, and the latter in the innocence of his heart perhaps never heard of the provisions of the law which have been quoted to-night until they were brought squarely to his notice by hon. gentlemen on this side. But the President of the Privy Council cannot plead ignorance of the law because he is in the happy position of being a member of the bar.

Mr. DUFF: What bar?

Mr. McMASTER: The bar of Ontario, of course.

Mr. McKENZIE: The President of the Privy Council must have read this law several times and therefore cannot plead ignorance of it. Now, if the Minister of Marine wants to be open and above board with the committee he will table these Orders in Council and show the reasons advanced in those documents upon which the contracts in question were ratified. In doing as he did he was getting away from the law and he must have had to advance sufficient reasons to justify a departure from the statute. Therefore, if the Minister of Marine in respect to the sixty-three contracts which were presented to the learned presiding genius of the Privy Council satisfied his colleagues that his reasons were good, he is no more to blame than the rest of the Cabinet who made a mistake in that connection.

I think my hon. friend the minister (Mr. Ballantyne) could have avoided all these difficulties by having all those Orders in Council brought down and saying: Here are the reasons I gave the Government; those reasons were good enough for the Government, and I am no more responsible for the policy adopted than are my colleagues. But I rather fear there are no such reasons, and that no business course was followed by him. I am inclined to believe that he had with him an aggregation of gentlemen just as willing to partake of the advantages of this patronage as he was himself—not personally, of course, but we know what are the advantages to a Government of such fat patronage as the millions that have been spent in this connection. I would advise the minister that in future it will be easier for him and for his successors to follow the law and let us have competition in every line of business, rather than constitute himself the dispenser of patronage among a few chosen concerns. It is not business, and I venture to say that he met but very few returned soldiers in the emergencies and necessities he imagined.

The hon. minister has not been in this House as long as some of us. During 1910, 1911 and 1912 we were told by his leader—not the acting leader but the Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden—that it would take us fifty years to have anything like a decent knowledge of shipbuilding, that we had no men here who could build ships, and that there was not a particle of God's green earth in this country strong enough to hold up a ship. But now we have this changed condition of things, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries can take sixty ships in his hands, throw them around, and call upon returned soldiers just as they land, and, without the slightest training along these lines, place them in shipyards, and away they go as first-class shipbuilders! What a wonderful transition has taken place, and what a magic wand my hon. friend wields when he can shake it over those fellows and immediately they are transformed into first-class designers, shipbuilders, and riveters,—taken right from the trenches with the mud still on their boots—men who can do anything from the keel to the masthead! These are wonderful days! Let me say again to the minister that he made a great blunder in trying to get away from the law even at the advantage of giving work to the returned soldiers—and so far we have had no evidence that those men received any such benefit.

I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without reminding the minister that there is something else behind this shipbuilding programme which has escaped the notice of himself and of other hon. members around him. I remember, Sir, when I was going to school long ago one of our books contained an article about a boy called "Solomon Slow," who was said to be the son of a gentleman. I have no doubt that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is "the son of a gentleman" and also more or less of a Solomon Slow. It will be remembered that in 1909 this country adopted a naval and shipbuilding policy. We could have built ships at that stage for $50 a ton, whereas we are now paying nearly four times that sum. But for political purposes—and this is what I want to bring home to the minister and to the people of this country—the party which sits behind the minister and this Government—because, after all, it is one and the same Government—abandoned the naval policy and abandoned also the shipbuilding policy we then adopted. As any person will see on perusing the speech of the Right

Hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) who spoke on that resolution on the 29th of March, 1909, the very policy now being pursued was then outlined in his speech and in the speech of the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier; in fact, everything we are doing now was contemplated at that time. After hon. gentlemen opposite came into power we did all we could to impress upon them the necessity of getting to work at once and building ships, but year after year went by, the war came, prices went up, and what could have been obtained for $50 a ton at the time we were urging action is now costing them $190 and possibly $200. I think it is only right to bring to the notice of the country that this dilatoriness and the hope of gaining a party advantage by refusing to accept our policy have landed the country in the expensive program which is being carried out to-day.

I wish to pay some slight attention to my hon. friend from Red Deer (Mr. Clark) in reference to the plate mill at Sydney. He finds fault with the building of that mill. I took issue with him on that point when it was discussed last summer. He says that on account of the attitude I then took I lost the leadership of my party. I would say to my hon. friend that if the two things were put up to me: McKenzie, you are going to lose the leadership; or the plate mill is going to be built at Sydney, I would say every time: Let me lose the leadership, and let the plate mill be built. I am satisfied, Sir, that the course I took on that occasion was the proper course, and that the building of the plate mill will be one of the best things that ever happened for this Dominion. Some hon. gentlemen are very much opposed to subsidizing the building of ships. I never had occasion to consider the question, and therefore I am not going to commit myself one way or the other.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Mr. McKENZIE: Some hon. gentlemen say ironically "hear, hear." I have been quite a long time in this House and I have never yet hedged on anything.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. McKENZIE: When I had to do a thing I did it right square up. If I have to put myself on record about subsidizing the building of ships, when the occasion arises I shall not have very much hesitation about it one way or the other. But I do say to you, Sir, and to hon. gentlemen, that if the question of subsidies is such a frightful thing, it ought to be equally bad in all respects. I would like to ask hon. gentlemen from the West, and particularly my hon. friend from Red Deer, if he is opposed even to-day to the subsidizing of the building of the Canadian Pacific? Is he opposed to the subsidizing of the building of railways in every part of Canada, particularly in the West? Subsidies are necessary for railways to encourage their building and to give railway facilities in places where the roads would not otherwise be built. If that is a good thing,—and nobody in this House would contend that the subsidizing of railways was a mistake, —what is wrong with subsidizing steel, as we had it done in Sydney, or subsidizing the building of ships, if we cannot get them built otherwise and the progress and development of the country require their building? I see very little difference between one and the other, and although we have paid hundreds of millions of dollars by way of subsidies for the building of railways throughout this country, I do not think any hon. member would take the responsibility of saying that those subsidies should not have been granted.

Now, we have not yet reached the stage of finally passing judgment upon whether or not subsidies for shipbuilding shall be granted, but if the subject should come up I am sure, Sir, it will receive careful and deliberate consideration, and whatever is regarded as in the best interests of the country will be done. I hope that my hon. friend, who has got himself into so much trouble in connection with these contracts, will in the future, in connection with shipbuilding or any contracts that he may have to deal with, himself look up the statutes, even though he is not a lawyer, and not depend for everything, his shorter catechism and all the rest, upon the uplifting influence of my good friend the President of the Council.

Mr. MAHARG: How many of these boats were in service in inland waters during the last season?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: None have been placed on inland waters as yet, but now that we are getting from the yards a large number of ships which are of lake size I should think that a good many will be placed on the Great Lakes shortly.

Mr. MAHARG: The minister can do nothing better than place as many of these boats on our inland waters as it is possible to place there. So far as transportation is concerned there has been operating in our inland waters the octopus of high rates, whose tentacles have stretched out to such an extent that we are now paying freight rates three or four hundred per cent higher than we were paying a few years ago. The minister has a splendid field there, a good, profitable field. He may encounter some little opposition; I venture to say that had his programme been primarily intended for the inland waters he might not have received the support that he got a few days ago from some members representing constituencies particularly interested in inland water transportation. However, he may rest assured that he will have strong support from Western Canada if he will undertake to deal with this octopus which has been operating in our inland waters.

Mr. DEVLIN: I do not wish to delay the passing of this item. The matter is one of considerable importance; it involves the payment by the taxpayers of Canada of several millions of dollars. I assume that the Minister of Finance will find some way of getting the money, and then the taxpayers will have to pay the bill. However, what I particularly wish to discuss is the statement made by the minister a moment ago that now that we are getting so many of these ships, some of them will be operated in inland waters. For several years there was discussed in this House the advisability of utilizing the great natural waterway of the Ottawa district right up to the head of the Lakes in order to enable Western Canada to ship its grain to Liverpool with only one transshipment, and that at Fort William. That could easily have been done. It would have cost a few millions, but Governments a very few years ago were wary about spending millions even for the purposes of such great utility. The present Government, for reasons best known to themselves, thought it wiser to expend millions in the building of what is to-day known as the Welland Canal. I am not going to criticize the Government for the building of the Welland Canal. I have always been in favour of extending our water transportation, for it is the cheapest means of enabling our farmers to get their products to the markets of the world. But, Sir, the Welland Canal is becoming a very expensive institution. This year the poor Finance Minister will be called upon to take a few more millions out of the pockets of the people to be expended upon that project, and I do not think any member of the Cabinet can tell us when that expenditure will cease. Will the minister make a statement to-night whether in putting his boats on the inland waters he proposes to take such steps as will enable the Western country to send its grain through Fort William to the markets of the world via the Ottawa district waterway system? When I speak of the Ottawa district, I speak of it as extending all the way to Fort William. I do not want to intrude upon what the member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) has so ably advocated in the House on numerous occasions, but among the districts served by the utilization of this water route would be the New Ontario section and the Timiskaming section, on the Quebec as well as on the Ontario side, a district abounding in lumber and pulpwood. Will the minister give our mines, the richest in all Canada, a chance to be developed?—and when I say mines, I include the iron ore that is to be found in great quantities within reach of Ottawa. Will he give those who wish to take that iron ore from the ground a chance to ship with only one transshipment? Will be give to the farmers of that great section extending to Fort William a chance to ship conveniently their products out to the markets of the world? Is it the intention of the minister, when placing these boats on inland waters, to place them on one of the greatest waterways that Nature could give to any country? I speak of the Ottawa waterway known to most members of this House, in its immediate vicinity, known from say Deschenes right outside of Ottawa city to the Chats Falls, a distance of twenty-five miles, without a perceptible current, without the necessity of putting a lock or a dredge on the river and with a deep channel, perhaps, with a few locks higher up and a few more higher up still. The West will benefit; the East will benefit, Ontario and Quebec will benefit; my hon. friends from Nova Scotia will benefit, because when the ships come back after they have been unloaded, they will be able to bring to the people of Ontario the coal and steel of Nova Scotia. It is a well known fact that coal cannot very well go past the city of Montreal to-day on account of the high railway rates and on account of its bulkiness making it difficult of transportation by rail. It is, however, the easiest thing in the world and the cheapest way to transport it by water. I know the minister might say to me that the building of such works is dependent upon the Public Works Department; but I ask him on account of the statement he made to-night, if, in connection with the ships that he has built, he will advocate my suggestion with his colleagues in the Cabinet, with the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Rowell), with the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton), who has a happy way of finding millions of dollars. Formerly, we were shy when we asked for a few hundred thousand dollars to expend on this system; aye, a million or two was a big amount; but to-day, if a man speaks in the millions, he is hardly understood.

The CHAIRMAN: I regret very much to have to call the hon. member to order, but this is not only a passing reference to the construction of the Georgian Bay canal. He has already admitted that it is not relevant to this item.

Mr. DEVLIN: I comply with your ruling. I do not know if I mentioned the Georgian Bay canal; I mentioned the Welland canal, and perhaps I was out of order. I know, however, the rules of the House and I do not wish to appeal from your ruling at all. I simply wish to ask the minister to make a statement whether, when he is putting the boats on the inland waters, he will consider placing them on the Ottawa river higher up.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I shall be very glad to bring the hon. member's proposal to the attention of the management.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: May I be permitted, as the Minister of Finance is in his seat, to ask him if the Government considers that it is going to be possible to meet this expenditure of $20,000,000 and other proposed expenditures that have been brought down without a further loan, or whether we may expect a loan in the course of the next fiscal year.

The CHAIRMAN: I am very sorry to say to the hon. leader of the Opposition that his question is not in order at the present stage. We are now in Committee of Supply, and it could only be asked in Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I bow immediately to your ruling Mr. Chairman, nevertheless this question has a very important bearing on whether or not we should vote such a large amount as $20,000,000. Before we do so, we should know where the money is to come from. It is one thing to vote $20,000,000 out of current revenue, and it is another thing to be asked to vote that sum to be met by a further loan. For my part, I prefer to hold the Estimate until we get from the Minister of Finance a statement in that connection.

The CHAIRMAN: I may assure the hon. leader of the Opposition that the money cannot be expended until it has been provided by the Committee of Ways and Means. When the House sits as a Committee of Ways and Means, the hon. member's question will be perfectly in order.

Mr. ROBB: With all due regard to your ruling, Sir, it is very important that the committee should know where we are to get this money from.

The CHAIRMAN: I have already decided when the question may be asked and when it must be answered. If the hon. member wishes to appeal from my ruling, he has, of course, an absolute right to do so.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Probably, if you are willing, Sir, the Minister of Finance might make a statement.

Mr. POWER: Am I to understand that the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) is to make a statement.

The CHAIRMAN: I have ruled three times that the question is out of order, and I hope the committee will abide by the ruling.

Mr. POWER: I asked the question simply because I thought the Minister of Finance wished to speak. I should like to ask the minister a question with regard to a question which I put to him this afternoon when the Orders of the Day were called. I drew his attention to the fact that there were four ships belonging to the Canadian Merchant Marine at present lying in the harbour of Quebec, and that cargoes could be provided for them by utilizing the Canadian National railways. We have been told again this evening that one of the principal reasons for creating our merchant marine was that it should work in conjunction with the Canadian National railways. There are, however, four ships now lying in the harbour of Quebec; the river is open; the port authorities at Quebec, the Board of Trade, have, I understand, requested the minister to load these ships and to send them to sea; and when I asked a question in reference to this matter this afternoon, I was told that that the minister had nothing whatsoever to do with the matter, and I was referred to the management of the Canadian Mercantile Marine. Surely, the minister who gives us a report as to its profits and loss in a year's operations, should be interested in knowing whether or not his hirelings, his employees, are conducting the affairs of this mercantile marine properly. It must cost some money for ships like those lying in the harbour of Quebec to remain there for some time when cargoes could easily be obtained. Why does the minister not inquire from his officials, from those under his jurisdiction, or rather under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Railways and Canals? I may say in passing that before we opened this discussion, I had thought of asking this question, and that is why I asked the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. J. D. Reid) to remain in the House. Some hon. gentlemen thought it was a joke when I requested him to remain here and that I was trying to be satirical and ironical when I referred to the valuable contribution he had made to the debates last Tuesday. I had no such intention; I simply wanted the Minister of Railways to tell us why he permitted ships to remain in harbour when they might obtain cargoes. Since he is not here, I shall have to ask the Minister of Marine to give me some information with regard to the matter.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The answer is a very simple one. Those ships were not ready to go to sea before the ice formed so thick that it would be impossible to send them to sea. There is a second reason. All the ships at Quebec at the present time are having tween-decks put in them.

Mr. POWER: Was not this work performed during the winter? In the past considerable work of that nature has been done at the port of Quebec, and elsewhere, I suppose.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: This work has been carried on during the winter.

Mr. POWER: Then why are not the ships ready for navigation in the spring?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: They will be ready when navigation is open.

Mr. POWER: Navigation is open now.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I am sorry I must differ with my hon. friend.

Mr. POWER: A boat, The Labrador, left Quebec not ten days ago for the north shore and back. It went as far down the river as there was any likelihood of meeting serious trouble from ice or from the climatic conditions at this season of the year. In other years boats have left for Gulf ports during the months of January and February. I find that boats have left for the Gulf ports on March 16, 23, 24, 26 and 31. A boat left on March 28 for the Gulf ports one year and returned on April 6, so there is no great exaggeration in my statement that navigation is open. In any case, if navigation were not open at this very moment, it seems to me it would be the duty of this Government and of the company which undertakes the operation of these boats to have a cargo ready for them. The minister will surely not suggest that navigation will not be open from the port of Quebec to the sea long before it is open from the port of Montreal to the sea. So I think it would be well to arrange for cargoes at Quebec in order to utilize these boats. I think the minister ought to give some other explanation than the one he has given. I do not think it will be satisfactory to the seafaring people of my constituency and of the district of Quebec, who know something about climatic and navigation conditions at this time of the year. I think the minister owes it to his own reputation, to the port of Quebec and to the country, to see that proper precautions are taken to see that these boats are not laid up a long time, and that the best possible service is given by the boats under the control of himself and his colleague.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Have any contracts for ships been given out since the first of October last?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Yes.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: How many?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Seven or eight contracts have been actually signed since then, but they were agreed upon considerably prior to October.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Were there any contracts agreed upon after the first of October?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Two ships with the Coughlan Shipbuilding Company of Vancouver, and two with the Wallace Shipbuilding Company. The reason for the long delay in signing contracts with both companies was because of a difference of opinion as to price, owing to a change in the ships from coal-burning to oil-burning.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Do I understand the minister to state that a contract was agreed upon after the first of October?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I do not know the exact date, but I should say, yes.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Mr. Chairman, I think we have here a clear example of the danger of letting contracts without tender. In the month of September last I had an interview with a high official of the Department of Marine, and I inquired from him whether the Government was going to let any more contracts for ships. Some clients of mine from British Columbia had asked me to get this information. I was assurred then by this high official that no more contracts would be let. That was in the month of September last. Now we have the admission of the minister——

Mr. BALLANTYNE: May I ask a question? There are only two steel shipbuilding companies in Vancouver, and contracts have been placed with both of them. Will the hon. member give me the name of the firm he represents?

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Never mind the name now. I do not think any hon. member will doubt the truth of my statement. I repeat, I had an interview with a high official of the Department of Marine regarding contracts for ships, and his statement was that the Government programme was completely filled, and that there would be no more contracts let. That was in the month of September last. Now we have the admission of the minister that there were four contracts given for ships after the first of October. I submit that was a clear case of patronage. I submit that it is a very dangerous thing to depart from the law which compels the calling for tenders for any item over $5,000.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: When I asked the question a moment ago, I was endeavouring to facilitate the passing of this item, and unless means can be found whereby the Government can state its position in the matter of a further loan to-night, I would ask the minister to allow the committee to rise and report progress—it is about midnight—so as to give the Government a chance to bring down a statement.

Some hon. MEMBERS: No.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I might make our position perfectly clear so far as we on this side of the House are concerned. We believe that the people of this country are not prepared to vote millions of dollars as a result of only a few hours' discussion, without knowing where the money is to come from to meet those expenditures. We believe the people of this country will want to know whether these expenditures will be met out of the revenues the Government believes it is going to be possible for it to get in the regular way, or whether they are to be met out of further loans. That reaches the very foundation of the Estimates the Government is going to bring down. I might as well inform my hon. friends opposite that we on this side of the House will continue to press for a knowledge of the Government's position on that matter. I certainly do not feel like voting $20,000,000 for the purpose that is suggested here to-night, until I know whether the Government is going to demand a further loan out of which to meet the expenditure. I feel in exactly the same position in regard to most of the other items that have been brought down in the Estimates. So I say to the Government, they will facilitate the business of Parliament if they make a statement on this point at the earliest possible moment, for until they do I should not like to see another item carried.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: The hon. gentleman must surely know that the methods of raising money that the Government proposes to adopt are not disclosed until the Budget is brought down, and it is entirely improper and irregular to make any reference to Budget proposals before that occasion. Further than that, we cannot go. I am perfectly willing, however, to tell my hon. friend that at the moment I certainly have no idea of another popular loan.

Mr. DEVLIN: The Minister of Finance has just made a statement which would have been sound and would have held sway in this House some fifteen or twenty years ago. But to-day the people of Canada are not so much concerned about formality and the technicalities of the rules of this House in the consideration of the taxes which they have to pay. My hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition, in the stand which he has taken has simply stated that we on this side of the House, who claim to have some responsibility to the public—and hon. gentlemen on the other side will readily agree with me that we have some responsibility, because we do represent some of the taxpayers of Canada—are not in favour of the practice, which seems to have been in vogue during the last few years, of having expenditures of millions of dollars foisted upon the Canadian people by a system of Orders in Council or by the mere statement of a minister who gets up and says: I assure you it is all right, and we need the money. I say with all deference to my hon. friend, the Minister of Naval Service (Mr. Ballantyne), that I for one should not like to be a judge of any man on either side of this House. I should not like to be charged with the keeping of any other conscience than my own; but I do say that it will facilitate and shorten the labour of the session, and help the work of ministers, if they would give all the information sought by the people through the requests made by the Opposition. If they would do this they would find that it would be cheaper in the long run. I readily agree with what the Minister of Finance has said, that it is usual to wait for the Budget speech for a statement as to the country's finances and how public needs are to be met. But, Mr. Chairman, the minister will readily understand that when it comes to consideration of an item which carries with it the expenditure of millions of dollars, neither he nor I, nor any of the taxpayers of Canada who will be called upon to pay this sum of money, will be satisfied with a simple statement that the time to give information as to whether we shall meet this money by a loan or otherwise, will be given in the Budget speech.

Mr. ROWELL: I must ask my hon. friends to accept the ruling of the Chair. My hon. friends know perfectly well that the ruling which the chairman has given is but the statement of the invariable practice of the House. What my hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mackenzie King) is suggesting at the close of the day, when it was understood the item would be disposed of—

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: There was no such understanding.

Mr. ROWELL: At the end of the day my hon. friend raises a question which he knows is contrary to the whole practice and procedure of Parliament since Confederation. Supply has never been held up pending the bringing down of Budget proposals, and there can be no new statement by the Minister of Finance as to general sources of revenue until the Budget is brought down. If my hon. friend wishes to take the responsibility of seeking to overturn the whole parliamentary procedure and practice in connection with the voting of Supply he is quite entitled to do so, but he cannot rise and say that so far as he is concerned the business of the House will be held up on that account, or intimidate the Government by any such statement. The Government is anxious to proceed. For two days full information has been given on the item, and all questions have been answered and now my hon. friend says that unless the Minister of Finance will rise and outline the financial proposals of the Government in reference to the raising of revenue, then the Opposition will hold up this item. The position, I say wth great respect to my hon. friend, is wholly unwarranted and unprecedented. The Government could not possibly accede to any such proposal as he has suggested, that the Budget speech should be anticipated on a question like this in Supply. All I ask my hon. friends to do is to recognize the ruling of the Chairman, who has but stated the invariable parliamentary practice in this House.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: I desire to say that I have given frankly and fully every bit of information which it was humanly possible for me to give to hon. members. I could not have given it more fully if the members were ordinary shareholders in any large corporation. I appreciate very much the attitude of the leader of the Opposition and hon. members on the other side. They were quite within their rights in asking the questions they asked, and I am only too glad to have been given an opportunity to answer them as fully as I did. Now that that has all been done. I hope the leader of the Opposition and those associated with him will allow the item to pass.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I should wish to be the last to delay the proceedings, and, as I said a moment ago, I had in view only the facilitating of the passage of this item. The President of the Privy Council is entirely unwarranted in the statement that I am trying to change the procedure and practice of this House. It is no fault of the Opposition that we are now at the Easter recess and the Budget has not been brought down. I will point out to my hon friend that since Confederation there has been an understanding, in regard to the voting of Supply, that the revenues would be raised in the regular way. The irregular practice of the financing of loans was not a consideration formerly; to-day it is the biggest consideration in this country. I contend that there is no question in which the people of Canada are as vitally interested as the question of public expenditure and the taxation that may be necessary to meet it. It is quite impossible for us on this side of the House, who recognize the obligation we have to the people of the country, to be indifferent to the question whether or not further loans are to be raised in Canada to meet public expenditures, and what particular taxation the Government intends to resort to. To give point to what I say, let me repeat that I think it would be well for the minister to bring down the Budget at a very early date and, before proceeding much further with the Estimates, to inform the House how soon we may expect it. Because I may tell my hon. friends opposite —not in any spirit of intimidation, but solely for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the Canadian public—that the stand that we intend to take on this side of the House with regard to public expenditures will depend very much upon the nature of the Budget which is presented. I am glad the Chairman raised the point he did because it will enable us—and perhaps will enable the Government also—to see where we stand in the matter of further discussions on the Estimates. I cannot make it too plain that, until we get some intimation from the Government as to how it purposes to raise the revenues, it will be difficult for us to say whether particular items shall or shall not pass.

Mr. JACOBS: Before the item passes I wish to say that I am much disturbed in my mind as to the position in which the Minister of Marine finds himself owing to the fact that these contracts have been let without tender. If I remember well when the matter first came up the minister told the House that the contracts were of such a nature that it was impossible—having regard to the business of the country and the business of the department—to have tenders called for, that the nature of the business did not permit of the calling for tenders. Now, as I understand it, to-night the minister has changed his view. He says that an emergency existed and that consequently the rule requiring the calling for tenders had to be suspended and done away with. I do not agree with him, Mr. Chairman, and I wish to record my protest against the action of a responsible minister of the Crown in ignoring the solemn text of the law as its exists in this case. If the ministers of the Crown, if the keepers of the King's conscience, do not obey the law, how can you expect the rank and file to do so? Never was there a clearer case made out against the Government and a minister than has been made out here, and it seems to me that some action ought to be taken by this House and by the Government to protect the minister against proceedings which may be brought against him—probably in the nature of impeachment, or otherwise; I am not here to suggest what the proceedings should be or what the minister has laid himself open to. But it does seem to me that when a Minister of the Crown wilfully disobeys the law in the manner in which the Minister of Marine has done, surely the arm of the law is long enough to reach that minister.

What I particularly object to to-night is the fact that the minister should have shifted his ground. We went away last week comfortably believing that the minister in his wisdom was right when he said that the nature of the business did not permit of the calling for tenders. He explained why and gave us the details. Why is it that the minister has now changed his view? I think it ought to be made clear to him that in matters of this kind the law ought to be followed, and that for every ship there should be a tender.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: In view of the statement which the Minister of Finance has made that at the present time he does not contemplate another loan, so far as I am concerned I am quite prepared that this particular item should pass, but I wish again to repeat what I have already said, that the sooner the Government can see its way to bring down the Budget the better it will be for expedition of business in many directions.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall the item carry?

Some hon. MEMBERS: No.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Yes

The CHAIRMAN: In my opinion yeas have it. I declare the item carried.

Progress reported.

On the motion of Hon. Mr. Ballantyne the House adjourned at 12.10 a.m. Wednesday.

Wednesday, March 31, 1920.

The House met at Two o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill No. 40, respecting The Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Davis.

Bill No. 41, respecting The Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Nesbitt.

Bill No. 42, respecting The Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company.—Mr. Clements.

Bill No. 43, respecting The Kettle Valley Railway Company.—Mr. Green.

Bill No. 44, respecting Montreal, Joliette and Transcontinental Junction Railway Company.—Mr. Denis.

HOUSE OF COMMONS OFFICIALS—ORGANIZATION.

Mr. Speaker laid on the table of the House letters from the Clerk of the House submitting a plan of organization of the staff; and also a plan of organization of the Joint Distribution Office.

BANKRUPTCY ACT (AMENDMENT).

Mr. S. W. JACOBS (George Etienne Cartier) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 45, to amend the Bankruptcy Act.

An hon. MEMBER: Explain.

Mr. JACOBS: Mr. Speaker, this Bill is introduced to amend the Bankruptcy Act in several particulars. Section 1 amends the first two lines of section 20, and provides that a trustee shall deposit in a separate bank account the respective proceeds of each estate which falls into his hands.

Another section provides for the payment of an indemnity to inspectors for the services which they render to the bankrupt estate. Under the present law inspectors are not entitled to any remuneration or indemnity.

Finally, we ask for the striking out of section 97 of the Bankruptcy Act, which declares that any person who maliciously makes a petition in bankruptcy upon another is liable to two years' imprisonment. We objected to this section last session, but it went through as drafted. I may say that the Bankruptcy Act has been carefully studied by the mercantile and financial interests of the Dominion, and the suggestions in orporated in this Bill have been made by the British Export Association of Canada—an institution which has in its membership about three hundred of the largest exporters of merchandise from Great Britain to Canada—at whose request I introduce this Bill.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

SOLDIERS' WIDOWS AND CHILDREN.

Mr. MACKIE (Edmonton):

1. Have the widows with children or orphans received any share of the forty million dollars voted by Parliment last session?
2. Do widows with children or orphans get anything from the Canadian Patriotic Fund?
3. Do said widows receive as much assistance as if the father had returned?
4. Do they come within the scope of any scheme for re-establishment such as: Vocational Training, Special High School or College Training, Agricultural Training, Hospital Accommodation, Sanatorium Accommodation or Land Settlement?

[Mr. Speaker.]

Rt. Hon. A. L. SIFTON:

1. No.
2. Widows with children, or, orphans, are assisted by the Canadian Patriotic Fund when they are ineligible for a federal pension and when the man has seen service overseas. Under certain conditions assistance of an emergency character is sometimes rendered to widows even if they are in receipt of federal pension.
3. It is impossible to say if widows receive as much assistance as if the father had returned, as there is no way of telling the amount that he would have been able to provide in that event.
4. When necessary, and under certain conditions, the Canadian Patriotic Fund pays for hospital or sanatorium treatment.

SUPERANNUATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

Mr. BURNHAM:

1. Is an employee of the Government superannuated when so entitled, according to age or according to capacity?
2. Does this apply only to those who pay into the Superannuation Fund or does it apply to those in the Government's employ who do not so pay?
3. What body administers the superannuation or discharge of Government employees?
4. Is that body authorized to set aside at any time the provisions of the rule or law governing the discharge or superannuation of Government employees?
5. If so, by what provision?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1, 2 and 3. The Governor in Council may grant a superannuation allowance to any person who has served in an established capacity in the Civil Service for ten years or upwards and who has attained the age of sixty years or becomes incapacitated by bodily infirmity from properly performing his duties, provided that said person has contributed to the Superannuation Fund in accordance with subsection 17 and 18 of Chapter 17, R.S.

The superannuation of every civil servant shall be preceded by an inquiry by the Treasury Board:

(a) Whether the person it is proposed to superannuate is eligible within the meaning of the Act; and,

(b) Whether the superannuation of such person will result in benefit to the service, and is therefore in the public interest; or,

(c) Whether superannuation has become necessary in consequence of the mental or physical infirmity of such person.

No civil servant shall be superannuated unless the Treasury Board reports that he is eligible within the meaning of this Act and that such superannuation will be in the public interest.

Retirement shall be compulsory on every person to whom the superannuation allowance is offered, and such offer shall not be considered as implying any censure upon the person to whom it is made; nor shall the person be considered as having any absolute right to such allowance, but it shall be granted only in consideration of good and faithful service during the time upon which it is calculated. Nothing in the Act shall be understood as impairing or affecting the right of the Governor in Council to dismiss or remove any person from the Civil Service.

4 and 5. The Treasury Board simply makes recommendations to the Governor General in Council in accordance with the terms of the Act.

CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE.

Mr. CANNON:

1. How many vessels were built by the Canadian Merchant Marine?
2. Where were they built?
3. By whom were they built?
4. How many trips were made by each of the vessels of the Canadian Merchant Marine during last year?
5. What is the revenue of each of these vessels?
6. What is the cost of maintenance of each of said vessels?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. The Government contracted to build 63 vessels of which 19 have been delivered to the Canadian Government Merchant Marine for operation during 1919.

2. The vessels delivered to the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Limited, were built at the following yards:

Seven built at Montreal by Canadian Vickers, Ltd.

Four built at Collingwood by Collingwood S. B. Co.

Four built at Port Arthur by Port Arthur S. B. Co.

Three built at Vancouver by Wallace Shipyards Ltd.

One built at Three Rivers by Tidewater S. B. Co.

3. Answered by No. 2.

4. Voyages were completed and accounts closed during 1919, as follows:

Vessel.	No. of trips.
Canadian Voyager	4
" Pioneer	1
" Warrior	3
" Ranger	3
" Recruit	3
" Volunteer	2
" Trader	3
Canadian Sailor	2
" Trooper	1
" Seigneur	2
" Signaller	2
" Miller	1
" Adventurer	1

Balance of boats delivered late in year and did not complete trips by December 31, 1919.

5. Total Gross Revenue, $3,448,030.25.

6. Total operating expenses, $2,041,262.87.

It is not considered to be in the public interest to publish the results of the individual vessels.

Mr. CANNON:

1. What is the surplus or the deficit of the last year's operations of the Canadian Merchant Marine?
2. What are the names of its vessels?
3. Who is responsible for the choice of these names?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. Nineteen boats in service, many of which were delivered during latter part of year and the results therefore cover portion of year only; surplus, $1,406,767.38.

2. Canadian Voyageur, Pioneer, Warrior, Ranger, Recruit, Volunteer, Trader, Sailor, Trooper, Seigneur, Signaller, Miller, Adventurer, Gunner, Aviator, Sower, Navigator, Settler, Spinner.

3. Department of Marine and Fisheries.

STEAMER CHAMPLAIN.

*Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. Has the Department of Marine and Fisheries given any contract for uniforms for the officers and employees of the steamer Champlain?
2. If so, to what company was the contract awarded?
3. Were contracts given for winter and summer uniforms?
4. Were the contracts given privately or by tenders?
5. If by tenders, what were the names of tenderers, the price paid by the department for said uniforms, and when was the contract awarded?
6. When, where and by whom were the measurements taken?
7. Are the uniforms finished and have they been given to the officers and other employees of the C.G.S. Champlain? If so, when? If not, why?
8. Is it true that the Government intends to deduct the price of each uniform for winter and summer from the bonus which these officers and employees are entitled to receive for 1919-20? If so, on what authority is the Government acting in such manner?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. Yes.

2. Summer uniforms: Faguy Lepinauy & Frère, Quebec. Seamen's trousers: H. B.

Simard, Quebec. Winter uniforms: The Christie Clothing Company, Montreal.

3. Yes.

4. Summer uniforms and trousers by tender. Orders for the winter uniforms were placed after a satisfactory price was arranged for a suitable quality of material.

5. Names of tenderers: A. Donati, H. B. Simard, Theodore Godbout, Jules Gauvin, F. Simard & Cie., Faguy, Lepinay & Frère, P. E. Gaulin, Syndicate de Quebec, F. A. Anctil & Cie., J. F. Belleavance, Napoleon Jacques. The prices paid were as follows: Summer uniforms, $27.50 per suit; trousers, $6.75 per pair; winter uniforms, suits, $45 per suit; long overcoats, $44 each; reefer overcoats, $42 each; peajackets, $39 each; trousers, $6 per pair; $1 per man extra allowed for taking measurements. Summer uniforms ordered 20th August last; winter uniforms, 17th December last.

6. The measurements were taken by representatives of firms making the uniforms. The information as to when and where is not available.

7. The uniforms are finished. The summer uniforms were issued to the Champlain on 24th October, 1919. Winter caps, mitts and mufflers issued 19th December, 1919.

8. No.

ST. LAWRENCE NORTH SHORE MUNICIPALITIES.

*Mr. SAVARD:

1. How many municipalities are there on the North shore of the St. Lawrence from Tadoussac to Esquimaux Point?

2. What is the population of each of these municipalities?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. The erection of municipalities comes under provincial jurisdiction. The Government has no record showing the number of municipalities between Tadoussac and Esquimaux Point.

2. Answered above.

UNITED GRAIN GROWERS LIMITED.

*Mr. SUTHERLAND:

1. What was the value of the several lines of agricultural implements dutiable and free, imported into Canada by the United Grain Growers, Limited, for the year ending March 31, 1919, and what was the amount of duty collected on each of the several lines?

2. What was the value of said implements imported by said company for the six months prior to June 5, 1919, and what was the amount of duty collected on same?

3. What was the value of the several lines of agricultural implements held in bond by the Customs Department for the said company on June 5, 1919?

4. What was the value of the agricultural implements imported by the United Grain Growers, Limited, dutiable and free, for the six months immediately following June 5, 1919?

[Mr. Ballantyne.]

Hon. Mr. BURRELL: It is contrary to the practice of the Department of Customs and Inland Revenue to give information which would disclose the business of an individual importer.

DOMINION GENERAL ELECTION.—LOST DEPOSITS.

Mr. DENIS:

1. How many candidates in the last Dominion General Election lost their deposits?

2. How many in each province?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. 169.

2. Ontario 51, Quebec 54, Nova Scotia 5, New Brunswick 9, Manitoba 12, British Columbia 18, Saskatchewan 11, Alberta 9.

ANALYSES OF STOCK FOODS.

Mr. SUTHERLAND:

1. How many samples of each of the following named stock foods or feeding stuffs have been analysed by the Dominion Analyst with a view to determining as to whether they comply with the Acts relating thereto, since June 1, 1919: Grain Products, Commercial Feeding Stuffs and Re-cleaned Elevator Screenings (Standard Stock Food)?

2. How many convictions have been secured for violation of the several Acts referred to?

3. What have been the penalties imposed, if any, the amount of fines paid, and by whom?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL:

1. On 6th October, 1919, the Dominion Analyst wrote Inspector Maisonneuve at Fort William for representative samples of Elevator Screenings. Three samples were furnished on the 15th October, classified as (1) Original Screenings, (2) Standard Stock Food, (3) Refuse Screenings. These samples were analysed with the following results:

(a) Hulls and dirt	30	per cent
Wild oats, black bindweed, snall wheat	20	" "
Mustards	15	" "
Lambs quarters	20	" "
Field pennycress	10	" "
Foxtail grass	4	" "
Stick weed, thistle, etc...	1	" "
	100
Feed value—Fibre	16.1	per cent
Fat	5.9	" "
Protein	15.2	" "
(b) Hulls and dirt	40	per cent
Mustards	15	" "
Pennycress	15	" "
Lambs quarters	18	" "
Foxtail	9	" "
Others	3	" "
	100

Feed value—Fibre	15.3	per cent
Fat	5.3	" "
Protein	13.8	" "
(c) Black bindweed	80	per cent
Wild oats, flax and wheat	15	" "
Mustards	3	" "
Others	2	" "
	100
Feed value—Fibre	7.3	per cent
Fat	3.9	" "
Protein	13.2	" "

Registered Feeds:—Bulletin No. 438, dated February 12, 1920, period August to December, 1919.

204 samples reported.

Shorts:—Three samples in February, 1920.

Stock Feeds:—Three samples in June, 1919.

2. and 3. Seventeen convictions have been secured and penalties to the amount of $506.30 have been paid; seven cases are still pending.

Bran and shorts have not been largely dealt with during the period named, because an extensive inspection of these forms of feed had just been completed, and published as Bulletin No. 422 in June, 1919, and the staff of analysts has been so much depleted by resignations and by death that the whole force has been fully occupied in the routine work of the department.

Bulletin 422, dealing with bran and shorts covers the period July and August, 1918; represents 165 samples of which eleven were penalized, with fines amounting to $342.20. The names of those penalized under cases referred as above (Bulletin 438), are as follows:—

Sovereign Poultry Supply House, Edmonton; G. Harris, Dorchester, Ont.; G. A. Morris, Dorchester, Ont.; W. A. Blyth, Ottawa (paid by manufacturer); Crampsay and Kelly, Toronto; Canadian Feed Mfg. Co., Toronto; Wm. Hamilton & Son, London; Chisholm Mfg. Co., Toronto; Faramel Limited, Toronto; Campbell, F. M., Toronto; United Grain Growers, Vancouver; J. A. Beckett, Smith's Falls; W. A. Blyth, Ottawa (paid by manufacturer); Canadian Feed Mfg. Co., Toronto; Shand Brothers, Windsor, N.S.; Canadian Feed Mfg. Co., Fort William.

HISTORY OF CANADIAN BATTALIONS.

Mr. BOYCE:

1. What was the cost of printing Les Poilus Canadiens, Le Roman du Vingt-deuxieme Bataillon (Canadian-Francais)?

2. What was the total edition?

3. Is it the intention of the Government to issue a similar history of all the other battalions which went from Canada?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL:

1. $3,838.75.

2. 50,000.

3. Histories of a number of Canadian battalions were published by the Canadian War Records Office, but following the signing of the Armistice the publication of these histories was discontinued.

UNOPPOSED MOTION FOR PAPERS.

Mr. CHISHOLM:

For a copy of all correspondence, reports and other documents in any way referring to a proposed change in the site of Beatonville Post Office, Inverness County, N.S.

THEFT OF $50,000 FROM EDMONTON POST OFFICE.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East) moved:

For a copy of all correspondence, letters, telegrams, reports by detectives and others, and other documents relating to the theft of fifty thousand dollars from the post office in the city of Edmonton, and to George Armstrong, postmaster of the said post office, as well as to all employees in the said post office so far as all these may relate to the said theft of fifty thousand dollars.

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: Before the motion is adopted I have one observation to make. If any of the correspondence referred to is such that its being made public might lead to a disclosure of the plans of the police in connection with the apprehension of the criminals, it should not be brought down, but generally, I think, the correspondence might be brought down.

UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING AND SERVICE—MOTION BY MR. MOWAT.

Mr. H. M. MOWAT (Parkdale) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, it is expedient that the men of Canada between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five, other than those who are crippled and infirm, should receive physical training, to increase their ability in civil and industrial life, and to fit them to defend their country against invasion or aggression, and that for this purpose the Department of Militia and Defence should organize training schools and camps so that all such men should have an opportunity of putting in four weeks' time annually for training for seven years, with the option of increasing the yearly period of training in any year so long as the training does not exceed twenty-eight weeks of a man's life.

And that in the opinion of this House national service should be universal in a democracy and not left to whim or preference and that a volunteer system tends to produce class feeling and is unfair.

And that it is expedient to curtail the customary expenditure for military purposes and that the Government of Canada should, as soon as may be, cease to employ or maintain a permanent or standing army, and that when a sufficient number of young men have been trained they be formed into a reserve for defence purposes, and that no pay be given other than for subsistence and separation allowances, together with a reasonable sum for pocket money and comforts in the field.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this resolution brings up for debate in Parliament the important question of national defence, which has already been settled by our sister dominions the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

I know that there are some who dislike even the discussion of the question of physical training and measures of defence; who think that any such discussion is the thin edge of the wedge of militarism But there are few—none in this House, I should think—who will say that Canada, now a nation, should have absolutely no means of defence. We must, therefore, consider from time to time whether we have the right kind of defence; whether we have paid too much for the system that we have employed in the past and whether we can with advantage improve it.

If this motion is carried it will affirm three principles: First, that it is important to improve the physique and morale of the younger men of the country; second, that volunteer training in time of peace is unfair, because the burden should rest on all instead of a few; third, that it is desirable to replace when the time arrives a permanent army with a trained unpaid force. It is needless to say that the motion refers to conditions in peace time, not in war time. Not long ago the country differed sharply on the question of compelling men to go to war. That question is not touched by this resolution; it is covered by the Militia Act, which, I suppose, will now take the place of the Military Service Act, 1917. So that the question of conscription or the question whether we shall or shall not take part in outside wars has nothing to do with this motion.

As to the improvement of the physique of our people, I think I had better leave that phase of the subject to some other members who desire to speak with regard to it and who will be better qualified to do so than I. But it is important to remember that when our young men went up for examination with a view to taking part in the great war, sixty per cent of them were found physically defective and ineligible for enlistment. They were found to be defective in eyesight, to have defective teeth, to be defective in limb and in heart action—all these things which prevent a man from being in a perfect or even an ordinary state of physical health and fully equipped to cope with the world and make his living. So I leave that question to others, hoping that they will deal with it.

Then, there is the question of the morale of the people. Morale, as I understand it, is that indefinable influence which makes for efficiency, fraternity and cheerfulness under adverse conditions. I am sure that Canada would be none the worse if these desirable qualities were obtained. Morale includes discipline. When one speaks of discipline one arouses the ill temper of the individualist who says that his son is not, if he can help it, going to be made to obey or to salute another man's son. That class of person, on account of unfamiliarity with training, does not understand what discipline means. Discipline is the bringing about of that state of mind which makes a man willing to submit his general conduct for the time being to those whom he acknowledges to have the right to impose their will upon him for the purpose of attaining an object admitted to be beneficial to all. Faithful performance of duty is the joint product of patriotism and self-respect. Some think that there is a lack of discipline of mind in Canada and that consequently our ways could stand improvement in that respect. It is more than doubtful whether we are happier because of the scarcity of that kind of discipline. Discipline produces respect for elders and for women; it produces self-respect tempered with considerateness. If these desirable qualities can be obtained by universal training, then we cannot too soon commence going about their attainment. One speaks with some consideration for those men whose environment and habits of mind have produced a prejudice against discipline, order, mutual action and unity of effort. But the trouble with such citizens is that they are useless to the State in time of peril. These clog their protests against compulsory training with a tyranny of words such as "slavish," "un-English," "militarism," "coercion," forgetting that the Allied nations were not the creatures of kings and autocracies, but were democracies and had to pay for their democracy by providing strength to enforce its principles.

On this feature of the question I should like to quote from a speech made by the Hon. H. S. New, of Indiana, in the United States Senate not many months ago, in moving that his Bill for universal training rather than a large permanent force, be referred to the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate. He said:

> What is true of the men of Pennsylvania is equally true of the troops from other states. Few of them had ever seen machine-guns until they were forced to face them, so that it was pathetic. It was the inevitable consequence of our smug complacency. It could have been prevented in this instance; it must be in the next, if there is to be a next, and no idealistic dreams of leagues of peace and the brotherhood of man convey guarantees that there will not be. Unless occasion comes, the citizen army need never be mobilized, but its members will have the benefits that accrue from judiciously applied physical training, of discipline and the improved conceptions of the obligation of citizenship that military training brings.

I think that is a fair statement of the view held by a very large number of men in both countries who believe in a change in the system of defence.

The motion involves the declaration that voluntaryism, which we have had so long, is unfair. Voluntaryism leaves the work to the few, those who may have a liking or think they have a liking for physical training, and it allows to escape all those who are indifferent. It tends to build up a class or a caste in the country, and that is certainly not for the benefit of Canada. Compulsion, of course, is always looked on, especially in Anglo-Saxon countries, with some aversion, but we all know that we must have it in order to carry on with our ideals of Government. We must have compulsion, most people think, in education; we cannot leave it to the parent to say whether his child shall be educated or not, because there must be the education of the whole community to conduce to the greatest good. That principle was first advocated in 1845 by Lord Macaulay, and now there is no nation of any pretension to civilization that does not require compulsory education. We have compulsion in the matter of taxes. It is not left to the whim or the dislike or the preference of the individual whether he shall pay taxes or not pay them. He may thoroughly disapprove his municipality; he may disapprove his Government, and he may think that the best way to exhibit that disapproval is by refusing to pay his taxes; but no country could get on under such a system, and so the payment of taxes is compulsory. Some men object very much to paying the income tax and the excess profits tax, but these taxes must be paid. In the matter of health, there must be compulsion to aid the efforts of the officers in forcing certain men to do certain things. A man is sometimes quarantined for weeks at a time, although he may think that very unnecessary, in order that the health of the community may be protected. His business suffers; his state of mind is rebellious against the Government because its will is imposed upon him, but this must be done. The rule of the road is a compulsory thing. Many men think that in the central parts of Canada we should have the rule of the road which exists in the coast provinces of Nova Scotia and British Columbia where the people drive to the left instead of to the right, and many people think that is the correct thing, but the rule of the particular province must guide, and there is compulsion to make a man take a certain direction. Therefore, it is unfair that the argument that this measure is compulsory should militate against it.

It is unfair that the defence of the country should rest entirely upon the ardently patriotic man and good citizen, leaving the slothful or indifferent man to do nothing but make money and indulge in his private affairs. That produces a class. We all know that the militia until now has been looked upon by large portions of the community as a class or a caste, and the militia themselves get to feel that they are such; all of which militates against good citizenship. If we could have a force which would get the rich man's son and the poor man's son living together for some weeks, we would produce a good feeling between the classes which would redound to the common well-being. Each would be performing a national duty, and it would affirm the principle, with which I think nobody will quarrel, that all obligations in a democratic country should be borne equally. There are many authorities for universal service which have perhaps been lost sight of, as we got so accustomed to having the small voluntary militia, but it may not be out of the way to refer to one or two historic instances. Let us take Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States, who was regarded as the greatest exponent of democratic simplicity who ever was produced in that country. He was in favour of universal citizen service, and in 1813 he wrote to Mr., afterwards President, James Monroe:

> We must train and classify the whole of our male citizens, and make military instruction a regular part of collegiate education. We can never be safe till this is done.

Also, in a letter to J. W. Eppes, in 1814, he said:

> I think the truth must now be obvious that our people are too happy at home to enter into regular service, and that we can not be defended but by making every citizen a soldier, as the Greeks and Romans who had no standing armies; and that in doing this all must be marshalled, classed by their ages, and every service ascribed to its competent class.

In his "Fifth Annual Message" to Congress, in 1805, he wrote:

You will consider whether it would not be expedient, for a state of peace as well as of war, so to organize or class the militia, as would enable us, on any sudden emergency, to call for the services of the younger portions, unencumbered with the old and those having families.

It is contemplated by this motion that only young men of from eighteen to twenty-five years of age—and I think they should be single men—should shoulder the burden of defence now that we have given over 500,000 men to the war. Some say: What is the use of defence now? We have all these young men who were at the war. But that suggestion is grossly unfair; these men have done their bit, and it is now only proper that the younger men coming on should assume the responsibility.

Going back further, we have the statement by no less a statesman than Demosthenes, in 380, B.C., who, because the Athenians had failed in their wars by reason of depending on mercenaries, addressed them thus:

Yet, O, Athenians, yet there is time! And there is one manner in which you can recover your greatness or dying, fall worthy of your past, and the manner of it is this: Cease to hire your armies. Go yourselves, every man of you, and stand in the ranks; and either a victory beyond all victories awaits you, or falling, you shall fall nobly, and worthy of your past.

Coming to later times, I might quote what Theodore Roosevelt, who I suppose was regarded as the greatest citizen of our neighbouring country to the South, said to his son, Col. Roosevelt, who mentions it in his book just published. "Ted," said Theodore Roosevelt, "every man should defend his country. It should not be a matter of choice; it should be a matter of law. Taxes are levied by law. They are not optional. It is not permitted for a man to say that it is against his religious beliefs to pay his taxes."

Canada's military force since 1855 and up to 1917 was entirely a voluntary one. The active militia was said to consist of 46,500 men. These figures are obtained from the report of General Sir Ian Hamilton, who had access to all the records of the Department of Militia and Defence in making his report. Of these 46,500, I would say that no more than 6,000 could be considered as even fairly well trained for a campaign of modern warfare. About 15,000, or one-third of the whole, who attended training camps and parades were more or less ardent military men. The rest were attracted by the pay and the opportunity for obtaining an enjoyable twelve days' holiday with their fellows. In other words, Canada did not take its defence seriously, and there was little of the spirit that makes for a respected force. Outsiders looked on joining the Militia as a sort of game. Men who made a hobby of golf, football, lacrosse or hockey did not realize that training was a national duty as well as an individual pleasure. We might very well consider whether it might not be better to go back and adopt the example of Nova Scotia, which up to Confederation had a universal training law, as my hon. friend from Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) well remembers. In 1865 Nova Scotia with its small population trained 58,760 men. Perhaps all these men were not fully trained, but at all events they had to answer to their names on muster. It is a great question whether we should ever have done away with the old system, when every man in the country was a soldier. That was given up, weakly, most people think, in 1855 and until the necessities of the war demanded a change.

The proposal in this resolution is first of all that men between the ages of 18 and 25 should submit to an obligatory annual training, thereby getting rid of the optional element which is the basis of our present system. The resolution asks that a universal training law should be passed as soon as possible. It may be said that this is not an opportune time to bring this matter forward, that we have just gone through a great war and are war-weary, that the clash has been so great that we shall never have war again. That, however, is a question, and it is also a question whether it is not at the time of the greatest weariness that we should look to the future. The man who has undergone the greatest fatigue from frost, for instance, wishes to lie down in drowsiness. That is the dangerous time, and his companions on the march or in the Arctic regions have to rouse him and keep him going or else he will perish. I am not going to give my opinion as to whether this great war, because it happens to be called great, is the last war. Others, however, do not think it will be. Marshal

Foch, whose sagacity is incomparable, said in January last:

> Who can say that Germany, whose ideas of democracy are recent and perhaps quite superficial, will not rise rapidly from her defeat and in a very few years will not try a second time to destroy us.

Mr. J. M. Keynes, who was a delegate to the Peace Conference which our ministers attended, and who is one of the principal financial men of Great Britain, in his book, "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," which is of a most interesting character, and which is now being read so widely, in the United States at all events, where they are making the Treaty a political football, says that the Treaty itself is more fruitful of the possibilities of future wars than if it had not been drawn. I do not dare to give my opinion as contrary to the two authorities I have cited.

As to the statement that the introduction of such a measure would mean militarism or produce the habit of mind of militarists, I do not agree with that. It seems to me there is nothing beyond that mere statement by those who think it would have that effect. Those who have studied the question do not agree that it would have the effect feared. I urge that educationalists in Canada are in favour of such a measure. They have studied the aspirations and needs of youth, and that alone is a good reason for introducing such a measure into Parliament at the present time. A commission of prominent educationalists from the provinces of Canada met not long ago and studied the question thoroughly, and we cannot afford to ignore the conclusion which they came to. This commission was composed of Dr. Burwash of Victoria College, Dr. Gordon of Queen's University, Dr. McKay, Superintendent of Education of Nova Scotia, Dr. Cody of Toronto, Dr. MacMillan of Halifax, Colonel Dauth of Laval, Rabbi Jacobs of Toronto, Principal Hutton, and others. Referring to the training of coming citizens, they made this statement:

> Genuine patriotism is developed by it. Not in an arrogant or offensive consciousness of national importance, but of faith in himself and his country that is one of the basic elements of a strong and balanced moral character. Drill defines in a boy's mind the need of active co-operation with his fellows and gives him a greater consciousness of his own individuality.

The next point which I wish to draw to the attention of the House is the necessity, which I quite admit, of having organized labour behind this measure. Unless they approve of it, it would not likely be enacted and could not be effectively enforced. I am convinced that when organized labour studies the measure in the light which has been thrown upon it by their leaders for many years in all countries, they will not oppose such a measure, although I know it is the popular impression that they would. Labour has made many mistakes, as they will be the first to admit, in the last thirty or forty years. They have discarded some tenets which they formerly held most devoutly, and I am inclined to think that if there are in the ranks of labour those who are opposed to such a measure, they must in time see that it is for their own protection. The unthinking man, if I may put it in that way, in the ranks of labour who has not thought or read much, looks upon an armed force as something which would impede his effort to get his rights by strikes. But that is due to the fact, in Canada at any rate, that there has been a caste or class, the militia, which has been called out to interfere with the actions of the men when on strike. That is the very thing I wish to avoid in asking that this measure be enacted, because, if the proposal were adopted, the very ranks of the militia of Canada, which I have hope will be the only military force, would be filled with organized labour itself. The trouble with labour, since we have had organized labour, has always been the failure of strikes, except in rare instances, because they have not had the discipline necessary to carry them on, nor have they had the willingness to obey the leaders. The consequence has been that, without proper discipline and training, any organized strike has soon become a mob, and has been unable to effect by force what it has desired. Let me say that the leaders of labour are in favour of this measure. One of their principal representatives is J. Ramsay MacDonald, at present not a member of the House of Commons in England, but soon to become so, I should imagine. After reading the French author, Jaures, he was opposed to this principle, having a lurking idea that he might interfere with the right of labour to strike. I think he reveals not only his own mind, but probably the opinion of the vast majority of British organized labour, when, speaking of the late war, he makes use of the following language in a book which he has written on the subject:

> The country has been grievously misled by a kind of pious pacifism which lulled it into a false sense of security, which refused to face the truth, which allowed it to drift into war while it was preaching peace, and which, when war broke out chirped about this being the last of the wars, and linked its aims in those of war as the saviour of society and the herald of peace. The character of our present alliance is lucky for us, but it would be indeed a foolish nation that would trust everything to chance because it was once favoured by good fortune.

Ramsay MacDonald recognizes the risk run in being unprepared to combat such a scientific enemy as our late foe, and we members of this House of Commons heard Mr. Samuel Gompers after a session of the House last year, when that gentleman himself stated that at one time he was a pacifist but that, in view of the danger to organized labour that lurked in the national passion and prejudice of an enemy, he had been converted into what he described as a first-class fighting man. Some one has said that labour has no country. This cannot be asserted in view of the efforts and accomplishments of labour in the last war. There is implanted in the minds and hearts of men of moderate means and income, an attachment to race and country which does not exist among capitalistic or aristocratic classes, for the reason that the workingman depends upon the security of his home to a far greater degree than do the affluent and leisure classes. The workingman cannot travel or set up establishments in other countries than his own, as the wealthy can do; as a result of his nomadic life the wealthy man is apt to become denationalized. We all know such people, and we know what nuisances they become. The man who travels incessantly, staying in his own country only part of his time becomes a cosmopolite on whom you cannot rely. But it is only because such a man has ample opportunity to travel that he loses the deep interest in his own country which every citizen should cherish. Jean Jaures is indisputably a leader in the ranks of labour, and in his book "Armee Nouvelle" which, translated into English is "Democracy and Military Service," says at page 77:

> Leaving this formidable monopoly—
>
> Meaning a standing army.
>
> —to paid troops is repudiated. . . . . The whole instinct, the whole thought of the working classes in every country goes in the contrary direction. It is the workmen and socialists who demand military service for all. The people's one chance of avoiding the oppression of the army is to make that army their own. If democracy will only come to grips with militarism she will prove the stronger power.

At page 78 he says:

> If a nation is found bent on following a policy of peace and justice, why should it hesitate to call on every man for the common good.

It may be said by the unthinking in the ranks of organized labour that it is a capitalistic idea to have a large force. But I would ask, if labour in Canada were represented in the army, how could it be possible to call out that army to suppress labour troubles?

Australia has passed an Act such as I am now advocating and pleading for, and it was passed at the instance of labour. Oh, it will be said, that is because they wished to keep out the Asiatics, who they fear will bring down the price of labour. That may be so; but suppose that is the reason for their passing the law, are we exempt from the same menace in Canada? We know what a strong feeling exists in the minds of Canadians in the western coast province that they must keep their province intact in the matter of labour. Such a nation as Japan, powerful and wealthy, or China, may insist that it shall not be treated in the way in which it has heretofore been treated. I am not of course stating this as a matter of probability, but let us suppose, rightly or wrongly, that either of these nations should insist upon different treatment from that which has been accorded it in the past. Where, I ask, is the force among the labouring people of British Columbia to insist on their rights? They would be helpless. They might argue and resolute, but they would have no force worth speaking of to maintain the rights which they now claim. It therefore behooves labour, for whom I am now speaking, to see to it that the strength of the force of Canada shall not be altogether composed of the class that may be opposed to their interests, but that they shall enter that force themselves.

Then, in regard to the historical interest of the subject, I appeal to my hon. friends here, who come from the province of Quebec, to give the matter their favourable consideration. The province of Quebec gave us our present defence system. The militia originated in French Canada, and as a fact of historic interest, I may be allowed to say that it dates back to 1649, and was intended at first to be a protection against the warlike Iroquois. It was reorganized in 1676 by Frontenac, and remained up to 1760 under the form given to it by that pro-consul. The British authorities adopted the plan of the French and maintained it for nearly a hundred years; it was a universal service allowing, in its letter, no favouritism or individual preference. It received no pay or equipment, each man furnishing his own piece. The parishes were responsible for units of varying size. The captain of militia was a man of influence and ability. He co-operated with his seigneur and the curé and he had a special banc d'honneur in the church. Training in camp and organization, transportation, etc., were unnecessary as they were in the blood, and the habitants training was confined to practice at the target.

I am relying for these facts upon the papers and books of that capable writer, Mr. Benjamin Sulte, who is now enjoying an honoured old age in this city and whose capacity to deal with historical matters of that sort will not be disputed. The old militia was governed by ordinance up to 1777 and in 1808 an Act 48 George III was passed in Lower Canada known as the Militia Act, the preamble of which is as follows:

Whereas a well regulated militia is of the utmost importance to the defence of this province; and

Whereas the laws now in force for the training thereof are in some respects defective.

It enacts:

3. That every male inhabitant, from sixteen to sixty years of age, shall be deemed capable of bearing arms and shall enroll his name as a militiaman on the first training day x x x be under a penalty for neglect of a fine of ten shillings.

This was the Militia Act for Quebec and that with the Act of Upper Canada which followed gave us the militia which we had for so many years. It was an obligatory militia. Nobody complained of it and if those who were parliamentarians in 1855, when that system was changed, so that training became optional, had been far-sighted enough the obligatory system would have been maintained to the present day. Any way the fact that the militia was constituted as it was and that it practised rifle shooting with assiduity shows

3 p.m. that when it was called upon to defend the Canadas from the invader it was there and the record of the stubborn resistance and heroism of the trained men of the citizen army displayed at Chateauguay, Queenston Heights, and Lundy's Lane, will forever remain. But for the militia, assisted, it is true, by the loyal Indians, Canada undoubtedly would have been lost.

The Act of 1855 was continued until the Union of the different provinces in Confederation. The Act of 1868 remained until 1904 when a revision of the statutes was made by 4 Edward VII chapter 25. Then the salutary and comprehensive provision that all men of fighting age should compose the militia was cut down and was made to read that they should be liable to serve in the militia. Instead of the authorities being able to reach out for the men needed there would have to be some legislative Act carried and perhaps only after a long and protracted debate could the men be procured. If the militia law that had existed for 200 years was a good thing for Canada my plea is that this provision should now be restored.

We have, in addition to the eminent educationalist of Laval University that I have referred to, an opinion expressed less than a year ago in this House by the hon. member for Gaspé and for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux). He says this:

I said a moment ago that I am not a militarist, but I believe, especially after the magnificent part Canada played in this war, that we should be proud of our militia and that we should maintain, within proper limits, a militia organization on a sound footing. In order to perpetuate that organization I think we should begin at the beginning. After all it is a manly sport. Reviewing my college experiences, I have observed that the students who turned out best were those who had joined the cadets and had done their part as good boys in the cadet corps. Just to give an example, I was reading some statistics on Sunday in a Montreal daily. The minister knows that possibly the best cadet corps in Montreal is that of the Mont St. Louis College. Because of the organization which has been maintained for years and years, and which has been a source of pride to the citizens of Montreal, during the war, from that institution alone, 325 boys joined the colours. I attribute that to the fact that they were trained as cadets in that institution. As much as possible in our colleges, academies and high schools all over the country, without spreading any militaristic spirit we should have cadet organizations in which the boys would take pride and which would give them an opportunity of taking part in a manly sport.

I find much to commend in the Swiss system. In Switzerland every man knows how to handle a gun, and we had evidence of that during the war. Although Switzerland was not engaged in the war, from the end of July, 1914, the whole Swiss army, which means practically the male population of age, was under arms in order to guard the boundary of Switzerland. In Switzerland, from the earliest moment of a man's life, he is called upon to practise all the military exercises. Yet it is a democratic country, probably the most democratic in Europe, and the entire organization is carried out with little expenditure. I am not for a carnival of expenditure in what I am propounding this evening; I think with a minimum expenditure you can have our young men fairly well instructed in their country's defence. I think the militia organization should be maintained on a proper basis, because it is a school which will bring the best results to our young men.

I also find in a newspaper published in the sister province, L'Evenement, the following:

On our side, we would ask the younger French Canadians to take a greater interest in the militia. Not only is there a very honourable career open to our young men if they will but profit by the advantages which are offered to all who wish to enter into that profession, but it is manifestly to the future interest of French Canada that we should not leave this vast field of activity exclusively to our compatriots speaking another language.

I hope my hon. friends who have come from the province of Quebec will not think it invidious if I refer to that province especially; they will understand that I do so because of the frame of mind which they seem to get into in regard to conscription for war. Of course, this has nothing to do with war at all but when we recall the history of the past and see what they have done in military matters, they should be the first to welcome such a movement as this. I have looked through the Militia List and I have seen that there are a great number of pages containing the names of cadet corps organizations in schools and colleges. You will find that in Quebec there are more cadet corps to population—and I am quite sure most of them are efficient—than in any other province of the Dominion. It must be that they have found it an advantage, just as has been said here by the hon. member for Maisonneuve that the training of the young men is a good thing for the country.

In coming to a decision as to what is to be done by ourselves it may be interesting to know what has been done by other Dominions and by the United States. I will conclude with a short resumè of the legislation in the other Dominions and in the United States. For twelve years a universal service law has been in force in Australia and for quite a number of years in the Dominion of New Zealand. I have the Acts of these different Dominions and of different provinces in these Dominions and I shall be glad to show them to anybody who cares to see them. In the Union of South Africa there is a universal training law and it has been found a very good law. If that has been the case why should we hesitate to put on the statute books a law with which they are perfectly satisfied and which conduces to patriotism and a feeling of national strength and self respect in those Dominions? Mr. Massey, the Premier of New Zealand, in making a speech in Canada in May, 1917, pleading that the state was entitled to demand the defence of all its citizens said:

In New Zealand it has proved a splendid success and has made it possible to have the whole manhood of the country (it exempts none) qualified to take up arms in defence of the Empire. Even if war were abolished compulsory military training for all men in the Empire would be an enormous physical benefit for the British race.

The Bill was carried in the House of Parliament by a vote of 65 to 4, or practically unanimously. Commenting on this a New Zealand paper states:

It is seldom that a principle so novel and so drastic can command so overwhelming a majority, but we believe that the proportion of twenty to one represents pretty accurately the feeling of the country.

Passing to our own continent, we find that this question is being debated with great vigour in the United States. In the Empire State of New York on May 6, 1918, after a long and deliberate debate—and we all know that the House of Representatives and the Senate of that State are composed of men holding diverse opinions on religion and politics—a law was passed making it compulsory for young men of sixteen and under nineteen to take training for forty-one weeks. To show how severe they made the penalty for refusal, that law provides that boys who have not certificates of attendance at training camps cannot remain at school, nor can they be employed by any person or corporation, and any person or corporation contravening the law in that respect is also subject to a penalty. Training camps are provided for summer training, and suitable buildings are made available for winter training, so that the ordinary work of the young men is not interfered with.

I hope we will adopt a similar plan in this country, which would easily give us at least 100,000 well trained men, and, as I will show in a moment, such a force would be vastly cheaper than the 4,000 men we maintain under our present system. The training could be taken up at different times to suit the convenience of the community. For example, a farmer might very well take up his training in the winter when his work is not so engrossing as it is in the summer time; while a young city man would do very well if he went to camp in the summer time. Apart from the physical benefits resulting from such training, the young men would also gain the advantage of making life long friendships, the dull monotony of their lives would be relieved, and in ten or twenty years with proper medical treatment—which I hope some other member better qualified will speak about—we will produce a race of men equal to any in the world and of whom we will be justly proud.

My remarks would not be complete without a further reference to the Republic of Switzerland, where the system I am advocating has been reduced, so to speak, to perfection. Switzerland has a population of about 3,000,000, and for many years it has enjoyed immunity from aggression by its powerful neighbours, solely by reason of the fact that all its men are trained in defence of their country. But compulsion is not necessary because every citizen welcomes the opportunity to serve his country. It is considered a disgrace there if a man by reason of physical disability or of his habits of mind is not capable of entering the militia, and even then he must pay a certain sum in lieu of service. It is said on good authority that the disgrace of having to pay is very keenly felt.

As we all know, Sir, Switzerland is composed of three races—the Italians in the south, and the German and the French in the north, and the parliamentary proceedings are conducted in three languages. The Swiss are a proud and self-respecting people, and during the greatest war of history they were able to maintain their independence and prevent invasion by their northern and eastern neighbours solely because those neighbours were afraid to overrun a country where every man was trained in military defence.

Mr. BELAND: Does my hon. friend believe that the Swiss army was more formidable than the Belgian army, which did not save Belgium from invasion?

Mr. MOWAT: Yes, undoubtedly, if my opinion is worth anything, and recognized authorities say so too, for the reason that every Swiss knew something about soldiering, whereas only a certain portion of the Belgians were trained as regular soldiers, and they were recruited from men engaged in industrial life. What did Switzerland do two days after the outbreak of war? In that short time the republic mobilized 526,000 men fully armed and equipped. Just think of the difference between Switzerland and this country in that respect, and of the painful efforts we made, extending over years, to raise a force which was not equal to the Swiss. The Swiss mobilization took place quietly and efficiently and without panic, for their system does not take their men away from industrial pursuits but simply makes them better citizens, and although they have no regular troops, they were in two days able to put themselves in a formidable state of defence. The permanent force of Switzerland is but a mere corps of instructors numbering 276. The Swiss does not want liberal pay for his militia service, he takes pleasure out of the early training. He gets nothing more than some comforts, tobacco, cigarettes, and so on, and sixteen cents a day, out of which is kept back two cents for a company fund, to which the Government contributes five cents. If we can obtain this boon it is to be hoped that similar principles will prevail here.

I look upon the pay system of the Canadian militia as a great evil; it holds up to a man the hope of getting some money out of the country, and that idea may be more emphasized than the idea of service. I sincerely hope that our men will not insist upon being paid for their services—and I am sure they will not, when the matter is properly put before them—during the few weeks that they spend under training each year for their country's good.

The question arises, does this universal military service in Switzerland interfere with the standing of Switzerland as an industrial nation? Does it take away from its ability to produce and be prosperous? Mr. Coulton, an Englishman, has written a very fine book entitled "The Case for Universal Service." Mr. Coulton addressed a questionnaire to one hundred business firms in Lausanne, taken at random from the directory of the city. Forty-six firms replied—a pretty good average, because it was no business of theirs, of course, to reply to this stranger's inquiries. These forty-six firms employed 9,263 persons. To the question, "Do you judge compulsory military service to be disadvantageous to Swiss trade and commerce?" forty-five answered "No;" many gave an enumeration of causes which more than counterbalanced the small loss of time involved; one returned a doubtful answer, but did not say "Yes." The concensus of replies was that the training engenders habits of discipline, cleanliness and efficiency which could not be brought about in any other way; and that is a cheap price to pay for training which makes a man a more efficient worker and a more useful citizen for twenty years thereafter.

I have some notes here with regard to the results of an inspection of the Swiss system by prominent labour men in the Old Country. Mr. John Ward, Labour member in the Imperial Parliament, who had made a visit to Switzerland, said in the House on one occasion:

I can give the House an illustration of what conscription means in one little State. Recently I was engaged in making some investigations in Switzerland; and I went into a big engineering works at Zurich. I asked the manager what position he occupied in the Swiss army, and he replied that he was a private. I said, 'What! a man of your ability and education a private in the army?' He answered, 'Yes.' I then inquired, 'How is that?' and his reply was, 'I cannot shoot. I have always failed at shooting, and as that is considered an important item in the advancement of the Swiss officer, I am only a private.' Then I inquired, 'Who is the officer in command of your battalion?' and he told me he was a fitter in his shop. There you have a country where an opportunity is given to the workingman to be an officer over the manager of his works when they happen to be out for training. Of course, such a thing as that is opposed to all our ideas of exclusiveness. Aristocratic ideas are gradually encroaching upon the military organization of the country, as is the case in other branches of our national life.

About the same time, Mr. Seddon, another Labour member of the British House, said:

In visiting a continental country where they have a citizen army, what struck me most was the fact that many of the officers who were at the manoeuvres were the servants of the soldiers who were there as well. I had one concrete case where a major in the Swiss army was giving orders to a non-commissioned officer, and it turned out that the major was a commissionaire at the bank and the non-commissioned officer was the manager of the bank.

I now come to the United States. The month before last, two committees, one of the Senate and one of the House of Representatives, reported a Bill for universal military training in the United States. The Bill is No. S-3792, section 51 of which reads as follows:

All male citizens of the United States (excluding residents of Alaska and the insular possessions), and all male persons who reside therein and who have declared their intention to become citizens, other than persons excepted by this Act, shall, upon attaining the age of eighteen years, or within three years thereafter, be subject to military or naval training, and shall be inducted into the army or navy of the United States.

And so on. It may be said that that Bill will not pass. I do not know whether it will pass or not; I am not sufficiently familiar with American politics to be able to express an opinion. But although it has passed both committees, it has not been before either House. The Democratic Party met in caucus and came to the conclusion that as there was to be a Presidential election this year the time was not ripe for the adoption of such a measure; it would be unpopular with certain of the electorate. President Wilson, who is in favour of universal military service, wrote to them asking that they not take such a proceeding, having regard to the importance of the measure and the necessities of the case. However, they ignored him, as they seem to be ignoring him in some other things, and apparently the Bill is halted by the action of one party. Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, who was formerly an ardent pacificist, is now in favour of a measure of universal military service and has so expressed himself. In view of these facts, and of the fact also that New York State has passed such an Act, the matter is of vast importance to Canada. If our friendly neighbours to the south see the absolute importance of providing a system of universal military training of young men between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five and act accordingly, how are we to hold up our heads if we do not do something of the same kind? It is perfectly obvious that the United States has conclusively made up its mind that its mission in the world as one of the chief democratic nations requires it to become and remain a nation of military power. It took the United States a year to prepare for the war; such a risk will never again be taken by that country. We should be, and, I think, will be, too proud to give our neighbour to the south any concern that she may be called upon to afford protection to us. Our pride should be sufficient also to cause us so to train our manhood that Canada may be regarded not only by the United States but by all other countries as no mean ally.

The matter of the expense of carrying out such a system is important. We have a permanent force in Canada to-day of about 3,700 men. These men are taken out of industrial life and are therefore a loss to the country, and the cost of maintaining each is about $1,300 a year. For that amount we could train thirteen citizen soldiers; for I think $100 a year would cover the cost of maintaining a man in camp or barracks for one month each year. So that by adopting this system we should benefit in the ratio of 13 to 1. I grant that a man so trained may not at first be as efficient as the regular soldier, but in a few years the difference would not be so very great. Anyway, if we got into trouble we would have the citizen-soldier, with his keen feeling of patriotism and desire to serve his country, to offset to some extent the superior training of the regular soldier.

A comparison with Switzerland as to cost is interesting. According to the last figures available before the war, it cost Canada to maintain a peace army in 1913, $10,272,000, or $220 per man. It cost Switzerland $8,500,000 to maintain an army of 500,000 men.

Think of the difference--500,000 men as against 46,000 men and the former better trained than our men, except the regular soldiers, were. These figures work out that Switzerland, by definitely and earnestly taking up this question, as I say we should take it up in Canada, is able to maintain its soldiers at $17.30 per head as against our $220. We spent $10,000,000 in 1913 on our militia; this year our Estimates are $13,000,000, and although the particulars have not yet been brought down, I venture to say that that does not include the training of infantry in Canada this year. If it did, the amount would be very much greater.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East): In the resolution the hon. member has moved, he speaks of training for four weeks a year for seven years. Has the hon. member any figures as to the number of men who would be in training during the seven years? The resolution calls for a reserve for defence purposes. What would be the number in reserve; how many reserves are there to be, and what would be the cost?

Mr. MOWAT: I should be very willing and glad to answer the question, and I think I could, but my answer would not be authoritative. After we have adopted the principle, then it could be worked out by those who understand such matters, but I understand that the number of men of this class, who were found by the registration of two years ago to exist in Canada, was 336,000. A large number of these may be excused, and while I do not know how that would work out, I should be inclined to think that you would find 200,000 young men, practically boys, for the force. If you called out 100,000 the first year so as not to make the thing too expensive at one time and took out 25,000 of these each time at different periods of the year, you would have a sufficient force to make a test whether this scheme was going to be a success or not. As regards the reserve, after the young man has completed his training and become a fairly efficient soldier, then he is put into the reserve and will not be called on again. I make the option, which I think is a wise one, that if a young man wants to do all his training at one time and get rid of it in order to go into business, or whatever his motive for doing so, may be, he can do so. But I am inclined to think that many, if not most young men will desire to have the annual training because it will give them freedom and a holiday which they will all enjoy. If the instructional staff which we shall have in Canada under such a scheme as this will be anything like the instructors in artillery, engineering, rifle shooting and infantry training which they have in Switzerland, we shall not be at all ashamed of the force that we shall have in Canada. The figures are startling, showing that we are wasting—that is not to strong a word to use—money upon the force as we have it at present, and if Switzerland can raise 500,000 men in two days at a less sum than that at which we can raise 46,000 men, and then have a great deal of doubt as to their efficiency, it is time for the Parliament of Canada to come to some conclusion about the matter.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. A. GRIESBACH (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I do not entirely approve of the terms of the resolution which has been moved by the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Mowat), and which I am seconding, but the main principle of universal service is to be found therein, and for the purpose of bringing that before the House, I have very much pleasure in seconding the motion. In the discussion of this very important question, there are, it seems to me, two aspects of the case for discussion: First, the system which we have and have had and the system which we propose or which we might have. It is an important question, worthy of the consideration of this House, for we have just come to the end of a great episode in the history of this country, which has cost us 60,000 lives and an expenditure of $1,500,000,000. Nothing in the history of this country so stupendous and so far-reaching has ever happened before, and for that reason alone a discussion of our methods in the past and our proposals for the future is a matter which, in my humble opinion, exceeds in importance almost any other subject that we can discuss.

As my hon. friend has pointed out, we have had and probably will have in this country a system of defence which, in previous years, has cost us about $10,000,000 a year. Our paper strength was about 66,000 men and we were usually some 18 or 20 thousand men short; the officers were unqualified; the men had poor, and, in some cases, scarcely any equipment. We were emphatically not fit to take the field, and when war broke out it was six months after the declaration of war before we were able to put a division, 19,000 men, in the field. In other words, we required six months' training, and we asked of our Allies, and particularly of the British army that we should have six months in which to train before we got into the field at all. Two years passed before we were able to develop our maximum strength. We went into this war under this haphazard system, or scarcely any system at all, and we may attribute to our system and to our unreadiness a very large proportion of our expenditure in money and not a little of our expenditure in human life. For one thing, we put into the front line trenches in this war, from the very outset to the last day, all the married men that we could get hold of. We began immediately to pay their wives and children separation allowances, and the Patriotic Fund made tremendous payments. And to-day we are confronted with a tremendous pension bill, a very substantial portion of which may be attributed to the fact that we had no system or method of selection whereby the young active and aggressive men did the front line work and the older married men were put elsewhere or were not called until very much later when they were required. Under the system that prevails and has prevailed, only men with leisure and money can afford to be officers. You will read in the newspapers now, if you are interested, a discussion which is going on about filling positions for commanding officers for units in Canada, and you will be surprised to hear that men who distinguished themselves as leaders of battalions and companies and units generally in France, find themselves unable to accept command in time of peace. Men who served with great distinction are now obliged to refuse for the reason that under the system that has prevailed a commanding officer must spend a great deal of his own money in providing amusement and entertainment in order to make the service attractive. He has to coax men to the defence of their country.

Then there is the argument put forward by some that the question of defence is not a live one in Canada, at the present time at all events, because we have in the country now about half a million men who have received military training, and they are and will be available. That is a fallacy. Furthermore, it is not a policy; it is an expedient. The major portion of the men who served in the front line, that is the men who did the fighting, are to-day between the ages of 22 and 32. In ten years' time they will be between the ages of 32 and 42. Now a man over 33 or 34 is too old for fighting troops. So it comes to this. In ten years' time the half million men that we think we have, or the proportion of them between the ages I have named, and the proportion is not so high as some think, will be over age. We shall not have this reserve, and without the adoption of a policy now we will be worse off then than we are at present. A military policy is like the construction of a building. It must be based on a broad foundation and must grow as the nation grows. You cannot improvise without heavy loss. You cannot improvise officers or material, and if you undertake to improvise an army you must do it at tremendous cost. I sometimes think I should like to see an inquiry set on foot in this country to ascertain precisely what this war has cost us.

In order that people who are interested in this matter may have something to visualize as a system of defence, I may say that last year I brought out and circulated through the press a scheme for the defence of Canada, based upon universal military service. I found in discussing this matter that almost every man who had served overseas, almost every officer who had anything to do with the militia of Canada, and almost every man who had given the matter any consideration whatever, agreed that the old system was a failure, that it was expensive, and absolutely a broken reed to depend on in time of trouble. If the old militia system had any merit or virtue at all, it was that it kept alive in this country the military spirit, upon which we were able to build up an army. It did little beyond that, and when one considers the amount of money that has been spent upon it, one wonders that some better system has not been devised. In answer to that question, in consultation with other people who are interested, I prepared a scheme for the defence of this country which I circulated from one end of Canada to the other, and concerning which I have received a number of very satisfactory replies. Some criticized, some offered suggestions, but there was general agreement more or less.

Let me explain the system. We had in all the provinces, and particularly in the province of Quebec, a cadet system. In some provinces the system is good, and in others it is poor, but we have a system of cadet training from one end of Canada to the other. I proposed that at the age of 12, which is the cadet age, the training should be standardized throughout the whole country, and that the boy of that age should receive medical, dental and oculistic examination, with free medical, dental and oculistic treatment, to be supplied by the State. I proposed that they should receive this medical inspection and treatment throughout the term of their military service.

Mr. BELAND: From the age of 12 to 25?

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GRIESBACH: I will come to that in a moment. My system provided for junior cadets from 12 to 15 years of age, and senior cadets from 16 to 18. In that respect it conforms to the New Zealand and Australian systems. Let me not be misunderstood. I say that the training should be universal and compulsory. The boy will receive his training and his medical treatment by the State. No person shall escape. My proposal was that at the age of 19 the young man should go into a depot and receive three months' training in any one of the four quarters of the year which suited him best. Thereafter he would be drafted to a unit of the Canadian militia, and would be required to do one month's field training with the unit of the service which he selects. That continues to the age of 22. When he reaches the age of 23 he passes to the reserve, and is called up once a year, until he is 30, for medical examination and to fire a course in musketry. In other words, apart from the cadet training I would have every young man in Canada who is medically fit and who is not excused because of certain exceptions which would have to be provided—ministers of religion, judges, and so on—come up for training, and under this system every such young man would give six month's and seven day's military service to the country; three month's at the age of 19, one month at the age of 20, 21 and 22, and thereafter seven day's service in the reserve.

As to the training of officers, when a man had gained the rank of corporal in any formation he would be eligible to take the entrance examination for the officers' class; then after passing take three months' training and a graduation examination. Then for every subsequent step up in rank he would have to take the necessary examination. That would put the rank of officer and promotion within the reach of every man in Canada, with the result that in a future war twenty or twenty-five years hence, every man in Canada, whether he sat in this House or directed some of our great national enterprises, would be a reasonably well-trained soldier, and would be able to give his country a form and quality of service such as was not given to it by the various enthusiastic people who endeavoured to run this war for us in the last five years. I have some figures as to cost which I believe will prove interesting. I am sure that hon. members from Nova Scotia will be interested to know that in the year 1866 there was in that province a militia which might well serve as a model. With a population of 337,600, they had a military expenditure of $114,460. They had a military strength of 58,000, and trained 45,767, and their expenditure per head of population was thirty-two cents. The individual soldier cost them $2.50, and 16.22 per cent of the population were trained soldiers. In 1912 Canada with a population of 7,206,643, had a military expenditure of $9,352,570, as against Switzerland with a population of 3,758,300 with a military expenditure of $8,430,000. In Canada that year, with the expenditure I have just mentioned, we trained 48,000 men, and in Switzerland in the same year there were trained 331,610 men. The expenditure per head of population in Canada was $1.30, and in Switzerland $2.24. The individual soldier cost Canada $193.96, and under universal training the individual soldier cost Switzerland $25.42. New Zealand has the system which I recommend, and the individual soldier cost them in 1912 $94.03 as compared with our $193.96.

I quote from "Canada and National Service" by Colonel William Hamilton Merritt, page 214, a comparison of costs and results in Nova Scotia, Canada, Switzerland and New Zealand, from the years stated:

COSTS AND RESULTS.

	Nova Scotia	Canada	Switzerland	New Zealand
	1866.	1912.	1912.	1912.
Population	337,600	7,206,643	3,758,300	1,100,000
Military expenditure	$114,460	$9,352,570	$8,430,000	$2,560,200
War strength of militia	58,000	66,014	538,610	52,079
Trained militia available	45,767	48,213	331,610	27,225
Militia expenditure per capita of population	$0.32	$1.30	$2.24	$2.32
Militia expenditure per capita of militia strength	$1.97	$141.67	$15.65	$49.16
Militia expenditure per capita of trained militia strength	$2.50	$193.96	$25.42	$94.03

COSTS AND RESULTS—Concluded.

	Nova Scotia	Canada	Switzerland	New Zealand
	1866.	1912.	1912.	1912.
Cost of Headquarter and District Staff	.....	$194,460	$317,177	$82,760
Cost of Permanent Corps (without barracks, maintenance, etc.)..	.....	$2,199,907	$359,763	$568,620
Permanent officers and men, No.	.....	2,280	233	530
Percentage of militia war strength to population..	16.22	0.91	14.33	4.73
Percentage of trained militiamen available, to population..	12.80	0.64	8.85	2.47

There can be no question as to the value of the service; the efficiency of military service based upon universal training admits of no dispute. But an argument is frequently advanced that in such training there is an inherent danger of militarism. Now, "militarism" is a vague word which is veriously defined by those who make use of it. Its definition is very comprehensive, running all the way from the description as a militarist of the man who is a soldier of any sort, to the application of the word to the military despots of Europe. It has been laid down by the most eminent thinkers that in a democracy one of the principal obligations of the citizen is his duty to defend the state. From that duty there can be no escape, and John Stuart Mill says that universal training is the incident of citizenship in a democracy. The Swiss Republic, probably the most democratic country on earth, has for years trained every man to be a soldier, and it is an historic fact that wherever there has existed a small professional army under the control of an autocrat, the people not being trained to arms, therein have flourished rampant autocracy and absolutism, together with an absence of civil and religious liberty. On the contrary, in any country where the people were trained to arms, taking the national defence into their own hands, the freedom of conscience and political and religious liberties progressed. No nation in history has lost its liberties under a system by which the citizens were trained to arms. On the other hand, the nations which have lost their freedom and their rights are those who entrusted their defence either to aliens or to small professional paid armies. It is argued that a system of universal training would be subversive to our institutions and contrary to our principles. Well, at the moment compulsion exists under the common law; it exists under the Militia Act. Compulsion has existed in England since the days of the Edwards, and we resorted to it in the late war. Should we have another war we would resort to compulsion immediately, and we would do so because it is the only efficient method, the only method wherby power is given to the country and certainty imparted to plans of defence. It is the method which best lends itself to the proper disposal of the man-power of the country.

Some figures have been given by the hon. member who preceded me as to the value to the state of medical, dental and oculistic treatment and physical training. Our figures in this respect, in connection with our enlistments in Canada, are poor, but in the United States, of thirteen million conscripts examined for the army, three million of these young men were found to be medically unfit to defend their country. The medical officers who had charge of that branch of the service have expressed the opinion, which is borne out by almost all medical men in Canada, that of these three million men of military age who were found medically unfit, a very large proportion—more than half of them—suffered from complaints which could have been cured by timely treatment—complaints which the men need never have had had they been treated in the earlier stage; in other words, had preventive measures been taken. I venture to say—and in this I am supported by the best medical opinion—that if we had some system of training involving annual medical examination, with appropriate treatment, we could practically abolish venereal diseases in Canada. We could perhaps deal to a large extent with the drug habit which is growing upon our people, and we could deal a heavy blow at tuberculosis. In other words, with such a system of medical, oculist and dental examination, and with physical training we could build up a nation physically superior to almost anything that has gone before.

There is a third aspect of this training to which I should like to call attention. The other day the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) introduced a resolution which attracted a good deal of attention in this House on the question of Canadianizing the alien. Some gentlemen who spoke upon that question commented upon the fact that, whereas many had spoken as to the propriety of doing something to Canadian-ize the alien, nobody had brought forward a concrete proposal as to what ought to be done. Here is a concrete proposal. Let us examine the figures that bear upon the question for a moment to ascertain how important it is. The census of 1901 divided up the population of Canada as follows:

	1901 Per cent	1911 Per cent
British descent	57.03	54.08
French descent	30.71	28.51
Foreign descent	14.46	17.40

British and foreign immigration during the years from 1909 to 1918 was as follows:

	British	Foreign.
1909	52,901	94,007
1910	59,790	149,004
1911	123,013	188,071
1912	138,121	216,116
1913	150,542	151,890
1914	142,612	242,256
1915	43,276	101,513
1916	8,664	39,873
1917	8,282	67,092
1918	3,178	75,896
	730,379	1,325,718

The census for the coming year will disclose precisely how our standing now is but without doubt the percentage of British-born people and of French-born people is sinking slowly but surely and the percentage of foreign-born is increasing equally slowly but just as surely. I know of no other or better system whereby we can reach the alien and foreigner on so broad and comprehensive a plan as by the means of universal military service. I know of no better or other method of mixing the young alien with the native-born, teaching him our language, our laws and our social customs and giving him a conception of the ideal of sound democracy. I say that I know of no other or better system and indeed no other or better system has been suggested. For those reasons, on medical grounds, and having regard for what we can do for the foreigner, I commend this system to the careful consideration of the members of this House.

There is the argument sometimes advanced against universal military service that it may have a very serious effect upon immigration, that people would not like to come to a country where such a system prevails. I find that it does not affect immigration to New Zealand, Australia or South Africa. It does not seem to affect the emigration to the Argentine Republic, a country with less population than we have, a less area than we have and less inducements to people to come. Yet, between the years 1910 and 1913 a comparison of the figures shows that the Argentine Republic is about 26,000 people behind us in total immigration. We received 1,176,547 in the years from 1910 to 1913 while the Argentine Republic received 1,140,862 immigrants.

4 p.m.

Mr. M. CLARK: They have a very low tariff in the Argentine.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GRIESBACH: I am not so sure of that.

Mr. M. CLARK: But I know.

GENERAL GRIESBACH: What they have had is a very severe, very strict and lengthy form of universal military training. The hon. member from Red Deer (Mr. Clark) may prove his point while I prove mine.

I should like to discuss for a few moments the phenomenon of war. Ever since I can remember a man who in Canada suggested, or advocated the desirability of being prepared for that which he believed to be certain to come, was considered to be an amiable donkey who must be tolerated and listened to because one had to listen to him but one in whom no particular stock was to be taken. Within my own lifetime we have had three wars in Canada which taxed our resources and caused us heavy loss in life and money. I have come to the conclusion that even although it may not be popular, even although it may apparently waste the time of some people, it is the duty of those who feel they know something of this subject to at least keep it under the consideration of any one they can reach, because, as I said a moment ago, the last war cost us 60,000 lives and a billion and a half dollars.

The ability of a country to defend itself and take appropriate action in great international difficulties is of paramount importance. Some people are disposed to take the view that war will be abolished as we become more enlightened, more educated, and more civilized. Well, those who study war do not come to any such conclusion. It is true that in the past there were wars based on dynastic causes, or they were the result of irresponsible rulers quarrelling with each other. These causes are now perhaps laid on one side; but the great and underlying causes of war that students recognize have not disappeared by reason of any improvement in education or in general knowledge. On the contrary, these causes still remain, they have become more certain, they operate with greater swiftness and with greater certainty.

If a number of families are crowded into restricted quarters, where sanitary regulations are ignored and disease follows, the unfortunate people are brought before a magistrate and punished for their failure to observe those regulations; but it will be agreed that it was wholly wrong to blame those people, that the cause of that condition goes very much deeper and is to be found in the social and economic causes which contribute to such an unsanitary state of living.

And so it is with war. It is believed by certain people that because an Austrian prince was assassinated in a small town near Serbia armies were mobilized, swords drawn, and the great war started. No one really believes that such a catastrophe as overwhelmed this world could be attributed to any such cause. Other observers go deeper and believe that the war was due to the education and propaganda which had been current in Germany for the last thirty years, and which produced a great army and the war spirit. Well, that is quite wrong; the cause lies deeper still. It was due to Germany's over-population, over-production, and exhaustion of natural resources. All these causes working on one another led to the education, to the propaganda, to the spirit, to the army, and finally to the war.

Now, we have won the war, as we think, but we have not removed the cause. We have not taken any steps to reduce Germany's population and production, nor have we taken any steps to supply her with natural resources. So that the cause of the disaster still remains. We may have arrested for a time the breaking out of these people, but logically, we can do only one of two things to cure them: Give them the natural resources and the room for expansion which they demand; or exterminate them. We have not seen fit to do either. Probably Germany will seek expansion in Russia. If so, it will be at the expense of the Russians; and if not, we may expect trouble again. It will have been noticed that the newspapers of yesterday and the day before continued to chronicle the fact that with all the disturbances in Germany the authorities there had managed to conceal 12,000 field guns which were supposed to have been handed over to the Allies. The Treaty of Peace which we have made with them, running over a period of thirty-five years, will be so fruitful of all sorts of difficulties, that as the Allies cohesion weakens by reason of the diversity of their interests so we shall have Germany reasserting herself.

It is no use to talk about a defence system unless the possibility of war be admitted. Therefore, I want to lay down certain propositions which, in my judgment, govern and lie at the bottom of the wars which have been and of the wars which will be. My first proposition is this: When a nation militarily weak, small in population, occupying a large territory with natural resources greater than its needs, comes in contact with a nation militarily strong, with a large population that has exhausted, or is about to exhaust, its natural resources, war will in course of time ensue.

Secondly: When a nation militarily weak, having vast natural resources and unoccupied territory, denies commercial, industrial and social equality to a nation militarily strong, over-populated, with exhausted natural resources, and pre-eminent in social, commercial and industrial energy, war will ensue.

Thirdly: When a nation sparse in population, great in natural resources, and militarily weak, occupies such a geographical position that its neighbour, militarily strong, cannot expand except at the expense of the weak nation, war will ensue.

The trouble is that most men study history in periods of ten years and do not look at it for any length of time longer than their own lives, forgetful of the fact that six thousand years are recorded in history, and what has happened before inevitably happens again—nothing which now happens has not happened before. It is towards the study of history that I desire to direct the attention of the House for the purpose of showing that the very conditions existing to-day have existed before, and that precisely the same results have come from those conditions.

It is urged as against the possibility of future wars that the League of Nations is an instrument upon which we should rely. Well, the League of Nations is, after all, only a pious hope. Last year when the matter was under discussion the point I made—and I desire to make it again—was that our interest in the League of Nations goes no further than a pious hope that the nations which won the war will hang together long enough to secure as great a degree of compliance on the part of Germany with the Peace Treaty as it is possible to get. Beyond that it does not go; beyond that we should not rely upon it for a single moment.

To summarize, I have said that our present system is, having regard to results, expensive, and, as it is not efficient, it is wasteful. It is undemocratic, since it does not call for equal service and sacrifice on the part of all citizens, but rather lays the burden on such only as are willing to bear it. It is inefficient; it does not give us a force that is fit for anything, either in training or in equipment. The war proved that; all our equipment was scrapped and six months' training was necessary before we could take the field. What right have we to ask or to expect that in the next war the sons of Britain shall make a rampart of their bodies behind which we may take six months to train ourselves? That is precisely what we asked them to do, and they did it.

I will be fair with the present system; it is better than no system at all. It kept alive in this country a military spirit upon which we were able to build up our army. It did give an opportunity in days gone by to men who were willing to give the time and the money to fit themselves as well as they could for the great responsibilities which they had to discharge when the war came—and that in the face of the parsimony of Parliament. When the Estimates of the Minister of Militia come up I shall support them throughout. I should like to point out that the militia Estimates for this year are one-forty-third of the total expenditure, while in 1913 they were one-fourteenth of the total expenditure.

Now, what is it that we propose? We propose that the burden of defence shall be laid equally upon all citizens—equal service and equal sacrifice for all. Is there anything wrong with this principle? If there is, what is it? We propose for the defence of our country that the best brains of our country shall participate in the work. We propose that leadership and command in the defence of our country shall be within the reach of the humblest citizens who demonstrate their fitness therefor. We propose a great annual stocktaking of the physical condition and educational standard of the nation whereby we may almost banish disease and illiteracy. We propose a great, comprehensive and far-reaching system whereby the immigrant, the foreigner, at his most impressionable age shall take his place in the ranks of the citizen army and learn our language, our customs, our laws; where in company with the rich and the poor, capital and labour, urban and rural, he may get the spirit of a sound democracy of equal privilege, equal service, equal opportunity, liberty without license and respect for authority. In other words, we plan a one hundred per cent Canadian nation. It is said that we propose to interfere with the economic life of the nation. To that I say, "No." Our proposal is to add one hundred per cent to the health of the nation; one hundred per cent to the Canadianism of the nation; one hundred per cent to the efficiency of the nation. Should our proposal cost five times our present military expenditure, it would be worth it.

Lastly, our proposal would give us an army—not a paper army, not a camouflage army, but a real army for the defence of our country; and the nations of the world would not pity us for our feebleness, but would respect us for our strength.

I have touched upon the phenomena of war. It is hateful, destructive, and so far as our limited understanding goes, senseless. But war has been, and war will be. Half the world is at war at the moment. We shall have wars. In all history no nation has grown great, no nations have survived, without war. Preparedness does not make war. If it did, nations not prepared would escape war, but they do not.

In that connection I should like to read from a book entitled "Our Military History, Its Facts and Fallacies," by General Leonard Wood, probably the next president of the United States:

> Every dictate of common sense, the teaching of history and the lesson of the moment, suggest strongly and unmistakably the urgent necessity of the organization of the might of the nation, in order that we may be ready to meet force with force, if other means fail. Reliance on peace treaties is not a safe policy. Experience shows they often mean little in the face of a great crisis threatening the life and interests of a nation.
>
> Preparedness does not mean militarism or an aggressive military spirit; it means simply the application to the military questions of the day of something of the experience and lessons of the past as well as those of the present. A man armed against thieves is not prone to become a thief unless he is one at heart. A nation can be strong without being immoral or a bully.

I do not hope that anything we say here to-day will bear immediate fruit. That would be too much to ask. We should not be true to our national mentality if we did not worship our false gods to the end. But I do ask that you will take this great question into your consideration. I ask that when next you send your sons and brothers to war, you give them a chance for their lives—that you send them with proper equipment, with reasonable training, and under skilled officers. If you do that, you will do a great service for Canada. And if you fail, you may live to see our national life go out in overwhelming disaster and bitter humiliation.

Mr. M. R. BLAKE (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, in supporting this resolution in favour of universal military service, I desire to deal with that aspect of the question which relates to the health of the nation as it would be improved by the training and by the inspections that would take place during that training.

Our present system of looking after our men who are at war is well organized; our Army Medical Corps have done their share towards winning the war by keeping up the efficiency of the men. Napoleon could have won out if he had had a well organized Medical Corps to look after his army, but he had not, and we know what the result was. In South Africa a great many more men died as a result of tyhpoid than were killed by Boer bullets. The first really well established medical service in war was that of Japan; the results of the services rendered by her medical officers very greatly reduced the losses and thereby increased the army's efficiency.

It is even more necessary to look after our manhood in time of peace so far as health is concerned, because efficiency depends upon the health of the nation. Our developing manhood has not in the past received as much attention from a national standpoint as it should have received. The best stockman, any man who takes an interest in stock, will look after the development of his young cattle, horses, sheep or whatever it may be, and aid them and in every way bring them along to perfect full-grown animals. The health of the young manhood of our nation can be much improved by training and a better and nobler manhood thus produced. If the stockman finds it necessary to look after the development of his stock, it should be the nation's bounden duty to look after the development of its manhood. One of the benefits of training may be shown in the fact that, while the military regulations required men to have a chest measurement of 34 inches, after the war had continued for a year or two, it was found that the chest expansion under military training and proper exercise developed, so that in the later years of the war, men were taken in with deficient chest measurement, the medical officers knowing that they would develop and come up to the requirements through training. One officer told me that it was a recognized thing that the tunics all became too small after three months' training, so as to necessitate a supply of new tunics. That was not due to the surplus food with which they were being served in the canteen, because I think the people of no nation in the world ordinarily enjoys better food than do Canadians. It might be said of those who come from the slum districts of London that the improvement was due to proper food, and exercise in the fresh air, but that would not apply to Canadians who ordinarily get the best of food and are accustomed to outdoor life. This marked development in the chest and lungs of men on military service proves the benefit resulting from military training. We would not have had so many shell-shock cases or psycho-genetic afflictions if we had had the men trained before the war. Their psychology would have been trained; they would have been used to manoeuvres; they would have been accustomed to cannonading; they would have the military spirit; and with the changed psychology there would have been a great deal fewer of the shell-shock cases, or the psycho-genetic cases that have resulted from the war. I feel that a young man's education is not completed until he has had a good training in discipline. Sir Willian Whyte, who was Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, attributes a great deal of his success in life to the training he had received in the volunteers of Ontario in his early days. Shakespeare has made some reference to the fact that a man's training is not complete until he has learned to dance, and he goes on to say how much better a man is in bearing and deportment after he has learned to dance—all of which may be true. Men who have been trained in discipline are more prone to make a success in the commercial world than those who have not. Many of the homes in our cities are not overburthened with discipline; the children do very much as they like from their ealiest years, and it is lamentable to see in too many of the homes such a lack in this respect. This lack would be supplied by military training, and not only would the health be improved, but the psychology and viewpoint would be changed. Our youth would regard life more seriously, and, when they got a job, they would not be waiting around for five o'clock and pay-day, but they would on the contrary get down to business and produce an honest day's work. Such would be the effect of discipline, and the result would be of incalculable benefit to the nation. The good book says: "He that ruleth himself is mightier than he that taketh a city." Self control, which is brought about only by discipline, not necessarily stern, but firm and kind, is something that will help a man to rule himself in his after years and make him more efficient.

Millions of dollars of this country's money were spent in training men for a while to fit them for overseas service, and then many of them failed either in this country or after they got to England, because they could not stand the strain. When you consider that it cost about $2,000 to send such a man to England, you will realize how much better it would have been had the physical defects been discovered before the man left Canada, and how still better it would have been had disciplinary training revealed the defects at an early stage. It cost us $2,500 to put a man into France, so that you can see what a great sum of money might have been saved to the nation by the proper training of our young men and by eliminating the weak ones.

In the United States, it was found that out of every thousand men examined in the whole of the American army there were 557 defective. These figures are startling, and they show that by preparedness much could be done to offset this unfortunate condition. I am told that Kid McCoy, the great prize fighter, appeared before the military medical tribunal and was told that he was not fit for service. I believe flat-footedness was his trouble. He said: "But I am physically fit; I am very fit. Do you know who I am?" "I do not care who you are," said the medical examiner, "You are not fit for training and I must reject you." He said: "I am Kid McCoy." The medical officer replied: "I do not care who you are; your feet are flat." This deformity does not come on suddenly; it is improved by calisthenic exercises, and most up-to-date orthopedic surgeons agree in giving calisthenic exercises such as standing up on one's toes, to strengthen the muscles and preserve the contour of one's foot. If there had been proper inspection of the youth by medical men and these corrective exercises indulged in during their earlier years, Kid McCoy and thousands of others like him would not have flat feet. Rupture or hernia affected many of the men, and with proper inspection, these cases would have been probably all or nearly all operated on and cured before they were called upon for active service.

In Manitoba to-day 12½ per cent of our deaths are due to tuberculosis. Most people probably do not take a full breath every day and never exercise their lungs sufficiently. The benefit that exercise has upon the lungs may be exemplified by the case of the blacksmith who, with his right hand, is hammering with a heavy hammer and with his left, merely turning over the steel, and the result is that his right biceps is from one and a half to two inches larger than his left. Exercise produces strength and an athlete does not prepare for a contest by lying in bed, but rather by going in for severe and hard training. The same thing applies to the lungs, and men who take physical exercise, who live in the open, who do laborious work, are free from tuberculosis. A friend of mine applied for admission to the flying corps. He was told: "We cannot take you; your chest measurement is deficient." He went home and worked at the dumb bells and practised deep breathing every night and inside of two months he passed a successful medical test for the flying corps. That man's mind had not been directed into the proper channels before; but when he saw the deficiency and was told how to remedy it, he learned a lesson and attained the object he desired. Had this large percentage of 12½ per cent of the population who die from tuberculosis in Manitoba been treated in early or middle life, and been taught proper methods of living, proper exercises of the lungs and the benefits of living in the open, the mortality would not be nearly so great. It is said by the best pathologists that 80 per cent of the population at large have had tuberculosis, have it now, or will have it before they die. When you walk down a crowded thoroughfare and realize that four out of every five people come in one of these three categories you can see what a dread disease is abroad in the land. Only ten per cent of this 80 per cent, that is, eight out of a hundred, die of tuberculosis. If that other eight could be saved, or even half of them, by being taught how to look after themselves, it would be of great benefit to the nation. Many of our youths are never taught at home how to take care of themselves. One of the worst maladies that afflicted our troops was trench-mouth or what is known as pyorrhea, which caused great havoc in the army. Many men went overseas with it before the Dental Corps was thoroughly organized. Later on, they were taught to use the tooth brush, which many of them had never used before. If these men had been taught beforehand the proper protection of their teeth a great deal of the losses due to these causes would have been avoided. Neuritis, rheumatism, trench fever, and kidney trouble are all caused to a great extent, if not entirely, by pyorrhea.

Another thing that would be of great benefit to the nation as a whole would be the teaching of sex hygiene in the camps. This is a matter that is being considered by educationalists all over the country. I have always felt that if we could get the proper teachers sex hygiene should be taught in the higher grades of the public schools. It is a very delicate subject, of course, and would require careful handling, but I think it is a step that should be taken in the matter of education. Young people know nothing of veneral diseases. None of them are warned against them, and I do not know of any better place where young men could be taught this subject than in the military camps, just as our troops were instructed through lectures on other subjects. Then when they had received this instruction in sex hygiene they would be more cautious when the calico looks like silk. There would be more restraint and less loss from venereal diseases. I have not the figures of the losses from venereal diseases, but one has only to enjoy a large practice in any city to see the ravages that are being made upon our young manhood and womanhood by these diseases. I am satisfied that the teaching of sex hygiene could be better done in the military camps than anywhere else, even in our public schools. An army to be efficient must be healthy and strong, and the same applies to a nation. By directing the people along the best lines to produce perfect health would, I think, result in a saving to the nation that would compensate for all the expenditures that have been suggested here to-day, and would develop a more moral and a more noble manhood.

Mr. J. E. S. E. D'Anjou (Rimouski) (translation): Mr. Speaker, I may say at the outset that I emphatically object to the resolution introduced by the hon member for Parkdale, (Mr. Mowat). As I understand it, if it were adopted by Parliament and if steps were taken to apply it, it would lead to compulsory military service. Then it is militarism which is to be foisted upon this country, that same militarism which for five years the Allies have fought against Germany to destroy—I have always been and I am still an anti-militarist. I am not going to change my mind, and, as far as I am concerned, I think that such a resolution should not be voted by this House. It is high time we should cease talking of military organization. The hon. gentlemen who have in hand the destinies of this country say that Canada is now a nation, that she is a member of the League of Nations and that from now on we shall have no more wars. Why then should we establish training camps? Why compel our boys to do military service? It seems to me that it would be more useful for us to take an interest in peace work rather than pass such resolution. Even previous to the war Canada used to expend exorbitant amounts on military camps. Just now, as we are passing through a dreadful crisis, and this country is on the verge of bankruptcy, when there are dificits on all sides, when not later than yesterday the hon. Minister of Railways stated that the Government railways had a deficit of about $50,000,000 for the last year. I think it is more important to economize, to see to the development of our natural resources, to promote agriculture and anything that may ensure prosperity to this country, than to try and establish military organizations.

I do not propose to detain the House much longer, I wish merely to personally protest from my seat against that resolution, because such are my opinions and, also, as representing a constituency which, like myself, is opposed to militarism. I shall have then done my duty toward my electors, myself and my country in stating that I most emphatically take exception to that resolution. Anticonscriptionist I was, anticonscriptionist I am and anticonscriptionist I shall remain.

Mr. J. A. MAHARG (Maple Creek): It seems to me this is rather an inopportune time to start discussing the subject of compulsory military training. True, hon. gentlemen who have preceded me have assured us that this proposal does not contemplate war. That is all very well, and it may be their sincere conviction that military training does not engender a warlike spirit. But you cannot convince the people as a whole that when you undertake a system of universal training you have not in contemplation the possibility of war sooner or later. Whatever hon. gentlemen may think about the matter, the establishment of military training will work its fear on the minds of the people. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that we have had sufficient fighting and military display, at least for a time. We are a war-weary people; we are heartily sick and tired of strife; and almost on the heels of peace—in fact, peace is not yet declared so far as all the belligerent nations are concerned—we are now talking of taking up the matter of compulsory training. I think, to say the very least, we should postpone this subject for a few years. Surely we do not expect to be plunged into the throes of a great war in the immediate future. At least, let us hope not. But is it not a remarkably significant fact that the most peaceful country in the world—at all events, the most peaceful nation that took any part in the great war—was the one that almost always formed the spearhead when any tremendous task confronted the allied armies. Our own country, Canada, was the most peaceful of any of the nations that fought in the war. Yet, on all occasions when there was any severe task to be performed, the little Canadian army was invariably the one that proved the spearhead in the great undertaking. This surely must be an argument that compulsory military training is not indispensable to the creation of an efficient army. Compulsion is not the most efficient force in any work that calls for great and sustained effort. If you have to drive individuals into performing any task you will fail to achieve the best results. There are better means than compulsion, and we have them within our own borders. We are capable of building up the type of people who will make for the maximum of efficiency in war if they should ever be called upon to take up arms. Why was it that our men fought so bravely and won such signal success in the late war? The prime reason, undoubtedly, was the fact that they were fighting in a just cause, and the battle is half won if you have a just cause. The next reason was the loyalty of our men. We have built up in this country, I think, a class of men who have on every occasion proven that their loyalty is sound to the core. We have only to look back over the period of war to find conclusive evidence of this fact. But, apart from all this, I think there is another great reason for the success of our soldiers, and that is the fact that we are a nation of athletes. There is not a single season in the entire year—scarcely one week in the twelve months—when we are not engaged, from one end of Canada to the other, in some form of athletic sports; and it is the athlete that makes the outstanding citizen when it comes to stamina, resourcefulness and efficiency. If you can develop men by friendly rivalry and by the inculcation of a spirit of good fellowship and the ambition for worthy supremacy, you will build up a much more virile and successful people than any military training can produce.

I have much sympathy with some of the arguments advanced by hon. gentlemen who have preceded me as to the effects which military training will have upon the physical development of our men. Unfortunately, however, as it appears to me, at the age of eighteen or twenty is rather too late in the life of a man to undertake physical development. If this Government deemed it proper to spend money for the purpose of physically developing our young men —and, by the way, that is one of the strong arguments in favour of military training— it seems to me that we should also develop our women if we desire to build up a sturdy race of people. But you cannot develop virile men by starting to train them when they have reached the age of eighteen or twenty. I think that a much better plan, if it could be devised, would be for this Government to give assistance to the provinces in such a way that they could begin the physical development of our youth in the primary schools, where, in my opinion, physical training should unquestionably commence. We could also undertake some of the other things suggested as being part of the programme of military training. In regard to the suggestion of the hon. member for Winnipeg, we could provide instruction for our young people in the schools in connection with the prevention of contagious diseases. It is obviously too late in life, when a person has attained the age of eighteen or twenty years, to begin to think of instruction in this matter. In early life, before our youth have become victims to preventable diseases, we should teach them the proper means of avoiding contagion, and it is but a fatal mistake to leave this responsibility until harm has resulted. Someone has said: Give me a group of out-door athletes, and I will pit them against any other class of men, no matter where they may come from; and this opinion I endorse. We have very largely developed into a nation of athletes; we are fond of out-door sports. Why do thousands of people line up to obtain admission to a hockey game during zero weather? They will jostle good-naturedly with one another to secure tickets, and afterwards as good-naturedly shout themselves hoarse for one or other of the opposing teams. It is this love of wholesome sport that makes not only for sturdy athletes but for strong and vigorous people generally, and more benefits than one accrue from the pursuit of healthful and hardy sport.

Another point which I desire to emphasize is the fact that in this country—indeed, for that matter, in any country—we should always bear in mind, in the training of the young, the great spirit of mutual service and helpfulness. If you develop that spirit you need have no misgivings about the spirit which the people will show in the nation's hour of trial. If they have had instilled in their hearts the proper spirit of service, and if they cherish good will one to another, the same worthy spirit will be evident when their country's welfare is at stake. One of the hon. members who have spoken has drawn attention to several of the countries in which compulsory military training has been practised. The hon. gentleman laid particular emphasis on Switzerland, and attributed that country's success in keeping out of the war to the fact that she was fully armed. Now, it perhaps is not a pleasant thing to say, but I think there was a very different reason why Switzerland remained out of the war. I do not think that Germany had very much of a desire to attack Switzerland, and it would have been out of the question for our allies to do so unless Switzerland had given some open and flagrant cause. The hon. gentleman also mentioned South Africa by way of illustration. I do not think any one for a moment will place us in the same category as South Africa. South Africa has different problems on its hands from those which we have here. The people there have to contend with the native element—we have nothing of that kind to contend with here. They have also other things to contend with as was shown in the recent election. Our position is entirely different from that of South Africa. Then the hon. gentleman cited Australia and New Zealand. Here again our position is different from that which they occupy. They are situated out in the southern seas and are open to attack from any quarter whatever. We have lived for over a hundred years peaceably with our neighbours to the south of us. That is the only country which we could possibly develop a military force to combat, and I think we might as well forget it altogether as to attempt to build up an infantry that will be able to compete with our neighbours to the south. In the first place, I do not think it ever will be necessary—we hope not—and even if it were it would not be very successful. The hon. gentleman said that our neighbours to the south were taking up this method of training. That may be but they have not adopted it yet.

[Mr. Maharg.]

We must not forget that we are in the aftermath of the war and that possibly in a year or two, when matters have had time to simmer down, we may change our ideas entirely along some of these lines.

There is another reason that I would like to mention why it is not wise for us to take any action at this particular time. The financial condition of our country, as has been pointed out, is not of the best. Surely at this particular time we should forget, in so far as it is possible for us to forget, the necessity for any expenditure in connection with military matters. I believe we should try to avoid such expenditure for several years to come. I do not think there is very much danger of our being involved in another war in the near future and I think we may possibly take the chance of conserving our finances as far as we can for some time. I was rather struck with the strangeness of the argument in favour of compulsion that was advanced by the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Mowat). He instanced a lot of different methods of compulsion, but if I followed him correctly, in each case that he mentioned in which compulsion had been used it was for the protection and benefit of the people. He holds that up as a reason why we should use compulsion to train our people in order to produce the very opposite effect. It seems a most remarkable and far-fetched argument that because we may have adopted compulsion which says which side of a street a man shall take in order to avoid accidents, or that a man must undergo certain treatment to prevent disease and such like, we should train our people by compulsion to produce the very opposite result—for the ultimate result of military training must be destruction of life and property; it cannot be otherwise. That argument, surely, is a very weak one.

5 p.m.

In conclusion, I would suggest that military training of any kind whatever should be dispensed with just as far as we possibly can for at least a few years to come. We gave our assistance to the minister last year when he asked to be permitted to increase our permanent force but we were given to understand that it did not mean that the force was going to be increased. It was just making it possible in case a contingency should arise that made it necessary to increase the force to about double the number it had been previously. But, it has not been necessary to take that action so far, and things do not point to its being necessary in the near future. My advice in the meantime would be to let the people quiet down. Let us try and get away from this thought of strife for a little while. If we do we will find that we will be able to employ better means. Let us give the League of Nations a little chance and not, while we are trying to form this League of Nations to prevent war, go on and make preparations for war. It has been said that if George Washington had not had the hatchet he never would have damaged the cherry tree. I think we might possibly take a little lesson from that and go along in our peaceful way at least for some little time to come.

Mr. G. W. ANDREWS (Centre Winnipeg): Mr. Speaker, in the first place I desire to congratulate the hon. members for the way in which they have presented their case in favour of military compulsory service. It has been exceedingly well done, and if I thought we were going to have another war within the next ten years I could only support it. But I do not think it is reasonable to expect another war in ten years. The money has been spent without which it is impossible to carry on a war. The youth of the belligerent nations has been largely spent without which it is impossible to carry on a war. Surely we have enough trained men in this country to last for all ordinary purposes for the next ten years. Finally, before preparations be made for the next war, it more befits Canada to do everything in its power for those who fought the last.

Hon. H. S. BELAND (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the hon. mover of the resolution (Mr. Mowat), the seconder (Mr. Griesbach) and also the speakers who have followed them. Although I feel inclined to agree with many of the suggestions that have been offered, especially by my hon. friend, the member for Winnipeg (Mr. Blake), I must say at the very outset that I cannot agree with the spirit or principle of the resolution. The contention has been made in the House to-day that military training for about 360,000 young men was necessary. It was necessary, first, as it was claimed, because we needed it. May I put the question to my hon. friend from Parkdale: How is it that we need in Canada a trained army of 360,000 men? Are we likely to be attacked by any power on land except the United States? The United States have refused, as I understand, to adopt compulsory military training. I will go one step further. Even if the United States did adopt the policy of training their young men in their own country, I would still be opposed to the training of young Canadians, because the north half of the American continent would be the hell which Central and Continental Europe was before the great war.

It has been hinted that we need military training to improve the physical condition of our young people. I am not opposed to physical culture, and, as a matter of fact, we to-day have physical culture in this country. But what is the difference between physical culture and military training? Physical culture is to develop the body, while military training is more than that, it is an attempt to create and develop the spirit of militarism.

I would dwell for one moment longer upon the remarks offered by my hon. friend from North Winnipeg (Mr. Blake), whose medical attainments I am the first to recognize. He submitted as a reason for supporting the resolution that military training might be effective in doing away with venereal diseases. That is the very reverse, Mr. Speaker, of military conditions, if the experience of the last five years is worth anything.

But there are other grounds upon which to base strong opposition to this resolution. One is economic. My hon. friend from Parkdale will concede that the training of all young men in this country between the ages of 18 and 25 will mean that in the course of those seven years 360,000 of our adolescents will be engaged in military training four weeks every year. That means twenty-eight days. If we take 360,000 men away from their economic activities, for each man we take away we deprive the country of at least $3 per day, because the work of a sturdy Canadian between the ages of 18 and 25, I think, fully represents that figure. Now, 360,000 men at $3 a day would mean in round numbers $1,000,000. And if we continue that for 28 days we have an economic loss of $28,000,000.

But that is only the loss we sustain if we deprive the country of the economic activities of these young men. It is pointed out in the resolution of my hon. friend that the country is not going to pay them any indemnity or remuneration. I will accept that statement as a basis of argument. But let us go one step further. Does any one imagine that after a few years we will have 360,000 men training for four weeks each year without our incurring a very large expenditure? Let us figure it out. To have 360,000 men training for 28 days would mean 10,380,000 days. Does my hon. friend think that the actual cost to the country will be less than $2 a day, without any indemnity or remuneration of any kind being allowed? Certainly not. Then if we take 10,380,000 at $2 a day that means in round numbers over $20,000,000. So that economically and financially speaking the cost to the country would be in round numbers $50,000,000 a year to carry out the plan suggested. Are we in a position to bear such an enormous expenditure? It is not for me to say, it is for the hon. the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton). He was in his seat a minute ago. The right hon. acting leader of the Government (Sir George Foster) is in his seat. We have been waiting to know the stand taken by the Government on this important question, but not a word comes from them. Are the Government in favour of general compulsory military training, or are they opposed to it? That is what the country is interested in knowing.

There is another reason for opposing the resolution. We all know that the great war was fought to a successful conclusion by the Allied armies to, in plain words, crush militarism. Had we lost the war I might understand my hon. friend coming forward with his resolution. But we have won the war, and now that it is won what do we see? In England they are resuming their pre-war position militarily speaking. Not only that, but the news has been flashed over the world by Sir Auckland Geddes that they are going to almost cut their naval expenditure in two. Shall we give to the world the spectacle of a country that had no military training before the war, of a country that raised 600,000 young men who distinguished themselves on all the fields of Continental Europe and even in Siberia and Russia—shall we give to the world, I say, the spectacle of that country, after having won the war for the purpose of crushing militarism, being almost the only country trying to develop amongst its population this military spirit which has been the curse of humanity?

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, I am bringing to this debate too much heat. I confess that I do not believe my hon. friend is serious in bringing forward his resolution. The sentiment of the country is opposed to military training not only in the province from which I come—and I am not speaking as a member representing an electoral division of the province of Quebec, I am speaking as a Canadian—but in the whole Dominion it is strongly opposed to such a movement.

I was very pleased to hear the remarks that fell from the lips of my hon. friend for Centre Winnipeg (Mr. Andrews). He is opposed to the resolution,—and he has been on the field of battle. Was there a more gallant soldier than my hon. friend? We are all proud of his achievements, and I congratulate him on his separating his lot, as it were, from that of my hon. friend for Edmonton West (Mr. Griesbach). The spirit of the country is against compulsory military training. And it must be so as a result of the war; otherwise this world would not be worth living in.

Mr. Speaker, these are the only remarks I intend to offer. I think that the Government should stem the attempts of its friends to create such a sentiment in the country. The Government have to face a financial situation which, in the words of the ex-Minister of Finance, "if not desperate, is most serious." We realize that we have to pay out every year $142,000,000 for the interest on our national debt, we know that we have to disburse $27,000,000 more for pensions, not to speak of further disbursements for soldiers civil re-establishment and land settlement, and not to speak of this monstrous figure of $47,000,000 of a deficit in the operation of our national railways which the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) advised us of last night.

In the face of this financial situation are we going to suggest to all the sane people of the earth that Canada has really entered upon a mad race to bankruptcy? That would indeed be the case if we decided to spend $50,000,000 more for military training. The hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Cockshutt) smiles. I do not know what makes him smile. He is a rich man; perhaps he can afford to smile when we talk of spending hundreds of millions every year. But if he were Minister of Finance he would hold very tightly the strings of the national purse; I do not believe that he would decrease the tariff at all, but he would not smile; my hon. friend the Minister of Finance does not smile.

So, I say, let us be reasonable; let us stop this incipient movement towards military training. Let us confine our efforts to physical development through well recognized methods of physical culture. Let us devote our efforts to the development of our country economically and commercially, in all the activities of the human body and human intellect. I hope that the Government will say to the member for Parkdale: "Sit down; go away back with your military training." My hon. friend represents a division of the city of Toronto. The member for Edmonton West (Mr. Griesbach) represents a division of the city of Edmonton. And my hon. friend (Mr. Blake) represents a division of the city of Winnipeg. I am not perhaps, so conversant with the feeling of the people in the cities, but I can assure you that throughout the length and breadth of Canada the rural constituencies are to a man opposed to this proposal of universal military training.

Mr. O. R. GOULD (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I wish to record my disapproval of the resolution proposed by my hon. friend (Mr. Mowat), and in doing so I know that I express the sentiment of the people of the Western plains. I am particularly pleased that representatives of the Eastern districts have also recorded their disapproval of the proposal. The objectionable feature of the proposal is not so much the resolution itself as the fact that certain individuals have conceived the necessity for it and have risen in their places in this House with a view to persuading the rest of the members of the House that what they have conceived is the right thing for every hon. member to believe and to try to make those whom he represents believe.

Since the war broke out there have been many evidences that all the effects of the Allies were put forth to defeat that same militarism which is exemplified in the resolution now proposed. "To make the world safe for democracy" has been upon millions of lips; it has been reiterated thousands of times. Yet some people in this country seem now to visualize another enemy, and they go forth to prepare. They wish to make the yet unborn, for that matter, prepare for this enemy which they see. I have tried to visualize the member for Parkdale as a politician standing in the German Reichstag in the year 1870, after highly militaristic Germany had beaten highly militaristic France—because during the years of the century immediately preceding that year all Europe had been continuously engaged in war. The argument of the nation highly specialized in militarism did not and could not hold good at that time, but because it was the policy of one of the nations to specialize in this particular industry, as we may call it, the obligation was forced upon the others. The result was that more property and more lives were destroyed. And such will be the case if the principle of militarism is now generally adopted. I can picture also the member for Parkdale writing in 1911 the book whose authorship is attributed to General Bernhardi, in which the writer points out how much further Germany must go along the line of militarism in order to make of her a world power. That was militarism; that was the spirit which prevailed in 1870. The Germans had been looking forward to "der Tag," to "the Day." It is because I see something of the militaristic spirit in this resolution that I entirely disapprove of the whole principle of the thing. I cannot see the great big enemy of the future which is so apparent to the hon. gentlemen who are fathering this resolution.

The member for Parkdale used the phrase, "when the time arrives." I quote that to prove that those who are responsible for this resolution and for these proposals see an enemy in the future—not in the near future, perhaps; when they expect that enemy to menace us, we do not know, but they wish to burden this country with a system of taking the youth of our land and training them in camps. As the member for Maple Creek (Mr. Maharg) pointed out, the best athletes in the world are those who go out and compete one with the other; the spirit of competition is most valuable in connection with physical training.

The evils which the member for North Winnipeg (Mr. Blake) suggested as existing in connection with the physical condition of our people are not all real ones. The records of disease contracted by men who went over to the front will prove that in many cases they did not come back quite as free from venereal disease and other disease as they went away, in spite of this new system of chest measurement and the providing of new tunics every three months. I think that could be easily proved, and I may say that I do not want to see my children put in that position. Highly specialized Germany, who broke forth into the world war in 1914, was beaten not by highly specialized individuals such as the hon. member proposes to develop in this country, but by the clerk from the store, the miner out of the mine, the agriculturist from the land—raw recruits. These men, with muscle and sinew, and with the desire to go out and win—these were the men who defeated militarism. It was the principle involved that brought about the winning of the war, not the highly specialized training of the Canadian troops, the American troops, or any other troops. We know that in Great Britain and in France, when the stress of war was the greatest, it was anybody else but the specialized soldier who went out and defeated the hordes of Germany.

I would point out again that the next war, if such a war should come, is not going to be fought with men of the different nations facing each other and firing off guns. It is my honest belief that the fate of the next war will be decided by the scientists, by the most capable men in the offices of the scientists. It is terrible to conceive and believe that such could be, yet the human mind does and will wander in such channels, and I believe that science will and can devise ways and means whereby thousands and millions of acres of crops will be destroyed, and whereby people may be destroyed in the cities. It does not take any longer to kill a highly specialized soldier, a man who can point a rifle straight or throw a bomb, than any other man, and I believe it is all folly to spend time training men in the way it is proposed, when it is a fact that science will dictate the manner in which the next war, if there ever be such a war, will be waged.

Mr. M. CLARK: It will be fought in the air.

Mr. GOULD: It will be fought in the air; it will be fought on the ground, and our crops and everything else will be destroyed. It is my honest belief that all our energy should be devoted to canning this thing; we should put our heels on it wherever it raises its head. I will not take up any more of the time of the House; I am quite sure the sentiment of this House is diametrically opposed to the principles and thoughts involved in the resolution, and consequently it is not necessary to take up time in giving reasons why it is inherent, deeply rooted principle in the minds not only of members of this House, but of the people throughout the Dominion of Canada, that militarism is a thing that should be destroyed.

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER (Acting Prime Minister): I have listened carefully to the debate from its inception until the present time and I have received a good many ideas that I had not before. I have heard arguments and assertions quite as strong as any that I have heard before in this House. But whether they are well founded or not, I am not going to say at the present moment. I am not going to take up the time of the House in speaking on the question. I am going to state just a fact or two and ask the House to take a certain course in consideration therewith. There are quite a number of members of this House who are not present this afternoon and who have expressed a desire to have their opinions stated in the House. For that reason, and because of the absence of others who are particularly conversant with military matters, I think it would not be quite right for so thin a House as this to express itself upon a matter of such great importance. I, therefore, move the adjournment of the debate so as to give an opportunity for a future discussion by members who are not present this afternoon and for an expression of opinion from various hon. members on both sides of the House who, I am sure, are dying to express their opinions, but who are not quite ready yet.

Motion agreed to, and the debate adjourned.

UNOPPOSED MOTIONS FOR PAPERS.

Mr. FIELDING:

For a copy of all correspondence, Orders in Council, reports and all other documents respecting the apportionment of expenses of the League of Nations and the payment of the sum of $64,043.15 on February 13, 1920, as Canada's share of such expense.

Mr. COPP:

For a copy of all letters, telegrams and other correspondence that has passed between one George Carvill, of the city of St. John, formerly city ticket agent for the Canadian Government railway (formerly Intercolonial railway) at the said city of St. John, and any and all others for and on behalf of the said George Carvill and the Minister of Railways and Canals, deputy minister or any other ministers of the Government or any general manager, assistant manager, superintendent or other officials of the Canadian Government railway in reference to the dismissal of the said George Carvill from said railway on the 30th day of April, A.D. 1917, and the request of the said George Carvill for an investigation under oath before an independent tribunal into the causes for his dismissal and the refusal of the management of the said railway to grant such an investigation.

Mr. POWER:

For a copy of all telegrams, papers, letters and correspondence with reference to the application for naturalization of Professor F. V. Richthdorf, alias Frederick Edwards, 205 Scott Block, Winnipeg, also for copies of all correspondence to date with reference to the resignation of the said F. V. Richthdorf, alias Frederick Edwards, from the employ of the Department of State, and in particular correspondence with the President of the Privy Council, Controller McLean and Mr. A. Brophy of the said department.

KAMOURASKA BY-ELECTION.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING: I should like to ask the leader of the Government if the Government have been informed that Mr. Adolphe Stein, Liberal candidate in Kamouraska, has been elected by acclamation.

Right Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I have just heard that from my hon. friend who, I am sure, gave the information with great happiness of heart.

HOUSE OF COMMONS OFFICIALS—ORGANIZATION.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. H. S. BELAND (Beauce): May I ask whether, after you, Sir, have laid on the Table the plan of the organization of the staff of the House, it is the intention that a special committee of this House will be appointed to deal with the matter before it is finally passed upon?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: In reply to the question asked by the hon. member, I can only repeat the answer given yesterday by Mr. Speaker to the hon. member for Laval-Two Mountains (Mr. Ethier), when he informed him that this is a question for the House to decide when the report is considered.

Mr. BELAND: Has the leader of the Government anything to suggest?

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Following the general course, I will move this motion on Tuesday next:

That the organization of the staff of the House of Commons as submitted to the House by His Honour, the Speaker, on the 31st March, be approved and confirmed.

The House will then have an opportunity of discussing the matter and of coming to a conclusion.

QUESTIONS NOT ANSWERED.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE (Cape Breton North and Victoria): I should like to call the attention of the leader of the Government to question No. 8, which stands in my name on page 4 of the Order Paper. I do not think it requires very much or difficult research to answer it. I hope the leader of the Government will call the attention of the proper authorities to it.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I see no reason why it should not be brought down.

Mr. P. F. CASGRAIN (Charlevoix-Montmorency): I should like to ask the Government when I may expect an answer to Question No. 62 standing in my name on to-day's Order Paper? The Questions from No. 62 to No. 132 were passed over to-day.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Yes, we asked that Questions Nos. 62 to 132 inclusive stand when we came to them to-day. They will come up in their proper order next week, so my hon. friend will not be troubled with the information during the Easter recess.

On the motion of Sir George Foster, the House adjourned at six o'clock until Tuesday, 6th April, at 3 p.m.

Tuesday, April 6, 1920.

The House met at Three o'clock.

MEMBER ELECT.

Mr. SPEAKER: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery certificate of the election and return of Adolph Stein, Esq., for the electoral district of Kamouraska.

NEW MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Adolph Stein, Esq., member for the electoral division of Kamouraska, introduced by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Mr. Ernest Lapointe.

PEACE TREATY—BULGARIA.

Hon. N. W. ROWELL (President of the Privy Council) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 46, for carrying into effect the Treaty of Peace between His Majesty and Bulgaria.

He said: The Bill is, in form, the same as the Bill introduced and passed at the last session relating to the treaties of peace with Germany and Austria. Hon. members will recall that the Senate amended the Bill last session so as to make it include other treaties of peace. Objection was taken—and, I think, reasonably so—by members of the Opposition to passing legislation affecting treaties before those treaties had been submitted to the House. It is therefore necessary to have a special Bill to deal with the Treaty of Peace with Bulgaria.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

CIVIL SERVICE INSURANCE ACT AMENDMENT.

On motion of Sir Henry Drayton (Minister of Finance) it was ordered that the House do go into committee to-morrow to consider a proposed resolution respecting Civil Service insurance.

CANADIAN MERCHANT MARINE— BUSINESS STATEMENT.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING (Leader of the Opposition): The Minister of Marine said the other evening that he would have placed on Hansard a business statement of the results of operation of the ships comprising the Canadian Merchant Marine. I am informed that the record does not appear on Hansard, and I would ask the minister to have it placed there if possible.

Hon. C. C. BALLANTYNE (Minister of Marine): Such a statement, if not read, could be placed on Hansard only by unanimous consent. I was not aware that unanimous consent was given on the occasion to which my hon. friend refers; otherwise, the statement would have appeared in Hansard.

ACQUISITION OF LOTBINIERE AND MEGANTIC RAILWAY.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE (Cape Breton North and Victoria): A despatch is going the rounds of the press to the effect that the Government has acquired the Lotbiniere and Megantic railway, which is said to be about thirty miles long. Will the Minister of Railways tell the House whether or not that is the fact?

Hon. J. D. REID (Minister of Railways): An Order in Council has been passed authorizing us to take over the Lotbiniere and Megantic railway. It is a small line, and is being acquired in accordance with an Act passed a couple of years ago in connection with the taking over of the Quebec and Saguenay railway. I do not think that we have actually taken possession as yet, but we are to take possession in a short time.

Mr. McKENZIE: Has the price been settled?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes, the price was laid down in the Act.

BRITISH COLUMBIA INDIANS.

SETTLEMENT OF DIFFERENCES CONCERNING INDIAN LANDS.

The House resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. 13—Hon. Mr. Meighen—to provide for the settlement of differences between the Governments of the Dominion of Canada and the Province of British Columbia respecting Indian lands and certain other Indian affairs in the said province, Mr. Boivin in the chair.

[Sir Henry Drayton.]

On section 2—Power given to Governor in Council to settle differences between Canada and British Columbia respecting Indian matters.

The CHAIRMAN: When this Bill was last in Committee we had reached clause 2, which had been allowed to stand.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The member for Three Rivers (Mr. Bureau) is specially interested in this Bill, and I suggest that the Minister of the Interior agree to either a postponement of its consideration, or the taking up of the third reading on a subsequent occasion when the member for Three Rivers is here.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I will agree to the second proposal.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall clause 2 carry?

Mr. CAHILL: Read the clause.

The CHAIRMAN: The clause was read when the Bill was last under consideration in committee.

Mr. CAHILL: When does the minister expect a final adjustment to be arrived at as outlined in clause 2 ? A lot of money has been spent.

Mr. MEIGHEN: As soon as we can get the British Columbia Government to agree. We know our mind in the matter and have communicated with the British Columbia Government accordingly. We have not been able to get their acquiescence, nor have we been able to get as yet a definite statement of their position in the premises. We intend to address ourselves to a solution just as soon as we have the power to do so.

Mr. CAHILL: How much additional cost will be involved?

Mr. MEIGHEN: None at all. The expenditure was all made long before I took over the department.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The minister stated the other day, when we were discussing the Bill, that the report had been made some time ago. I should like to know if the report is printed and available to the members.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I could not say definitely as to the report being printed, although I am morally certain that it was printed. But I know it is available to members; it was laid on the Table of the House some years ago and may now be found in the hands of the proper custodian.

Section agreed to.

On section 3—power to order reductions or cut-offs from Reserves without surrender by Indians.

Mr. McKENZIE: Possibly it is my fault that I do not know very much about this subject, but perhaps the minister would not mind giving us some explanation as to the extent of land that is dealt with in this Bill and what is included in the purport of this legislation. Although we might have had an opportunity of seeing this report, we did not see it, and the minister might, therefore, give us a brief explanation of the report.

Mr. MEIGHEN: The report, as the hon. member knows, is the report of a joint commission appointed by the Government of British Columbia and the Government of the Dominion of Canada pursuant to Orders in Council passed by the respective Governments, embodying an agreement entered into by Sir Richard McBride and representatives of the Indian Department. The agreement provided for the final settlement of differences that had arisen during a period of two or three decades, having to do primarily with the claim of the province of British Columbia to a reversionary interest in all Indian lands in that province, and to a definition of what reversionary interest, if any such exist, should be, and having to do as well with the areas of Indian Reserves in the province, their sufficiency for the purpose of the various tribes or their superabundance in area for the purposes of the tribes. The commission performed its work extending over a very long period of time and made certain recommendations as to the disposal of the question of reversionary interest, as to delimiting Reserves that were believed to be larger than necessary and as to increasing others that were believed to be smaller than essential. The provision of the report covering the subject of reversionary interest aimed at deciding the question in this way, that where land was to be sold that had already been alloted to Indian tribes in Reserves, the proceeds should be divided equally between the province and the Dominion, the Dominion to utilize its moiety in trust for the purpose of the administration of the affairs of the Indians themselves, the province to be entitled absolutely to its share. The Dominion has not, and indeed the Government of the Dominion as a Government would not have constitutional power to admit the existence of a reversionary interest at all; but the terms of section 13 of the Act of Union and of subsequent Orders that were passed were such that a claim was put forward to this reversionary interest, the same to take effect upon the giving up of any Reserve by the tribe. If a Reserve is given up by a tribe permanently and a new Reserve has to be found, it is essential for the purposes of Indian administration that the proceeds of the sale of the first Reserve should be placed in the trust fund, the same as in the case of all surrenders in the province, for the administration of the affairs of the tribe. The report, as I have pointed out, looks to a settlement of the reversionary interest claim along the lines indicated, and looks to a readjustment of the areas of the various Reserves by means of cut-offs and additions, the amounts being specifically set out in the report. I can give the committee the details as to the amount to be cut off in any special Reserve or as to the amount to be added; the cut-offs exceeded the additions. The principle difficulty involved is in connection with this Kitsilano Reserve in British Columbia. As the hon. member will remember, the Kitsilano Reserve has been taken by the Harbour Commissioners of British Columbia; settlement has not yet been made; but if pursuant to the passing of this Bill we are able to agree upon a settlement in acceptance of the terms of the commission's report, then we shall be able to get the moneys paid by the Harbour Commissioners for the Kitsilano Reserve and to distribute it in pursuance of the terms of the report.

The British Columbia Government has never indicated a willingness to accept the terms of the commission's report. The Orders in Council establishing the commission did not bind either government definitely and absolutely to an acceptance of the report; they bound the governments only to a sympathetic reception of the report and to acquiescence therein to the utmost extent that could be deemed reasonable by each. As a matter of finality that agreement amounted to very little. We have stated our willingness to accept the report in toto; the British Columbia Government made certain tentative suggestions which they afterwards recalled; but they have never placed us in definite and final possession of their views or their position in the premises at all. They, however, obtained from their legislature at its last session, powers to negotiate with the Dominion Government looking to such further adjustments as they think right and to settle with the Dominion Government finally upon the terms of the report as so adjusted. We are seeking similar powers, and if this Bill passes, we shall have them. It will be obvious to the committee that there would be no use in the Dominion Government taking power to settle the terms of the report, and to agree with the Provincial Government thereon, if it were still in the power of an Indian tribe to refuse acquiescence to any single feature of the report. Consequently, in this clause we ask that we be given power to make such cut-offs—there is no need to do so in respect to the additions—as are essential to the carrying out of the report as it may be jointly amended, if it may be at all, by the two governments. That is the whole purport of this legislation.

Mr. FIELDING: I do not doubt that all the objects of this Bill are good, but I cannot help thinking that the clause under consideration is unusually broad. Possibly it has a broader effect than my hon. friend intended. It provides that notwithstanding anything in the Indian Act, the Governor in Council may make agreements to carry out this purpose. That is a very broad statement. You set aside the whole Indian Act and transfer all its powers as regards this transaction to the Governor in Council. That is giving a good deal of power to the Governor in Council, and it seems to me that if it be intended to depart from the Indian Act, the minister should bring down an amendment to that Act dealing with the case. The clause further provides that the Government:

—may carry on such further negotiations and enter into such further agreements with the Government of the province of British Columbia as may be found necessary for a full and final adjustment of the differences between the said Governments.

These adjustments may involve the payment of money. I do not know whether my hon. friend would contend that under that clause the Governor in Council would have the right to pay money. However, my main purpose in calling attention to this is to point out that the Governor in Council are taking to themselves a very, very broad power. I do not question that it is a good one; I am quite satisfied that it is all intended for a good end, but I would ask my hon. friend if he thinks it wise to give power to the Governor in Council to set aside absolutely the Indian Act?

Mr. MEIGHEN: I do not think the clause has the scope the hon. member fears. The negativing of the Indian Act applies only to the extent of not requiring surrenders from the Indian tribes themselves. Clause 3 reads as follows:

For the purpose of adjusting, readjusting or confirming the reductions or cut-offs from reserves in accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission, the Governor in Council may order such reductions or cut-offs to be effected without surrenders of the same by the Indians, notwithstanding any provisions of the Indian Act to the contrary.

It is only to that extent that the provisions of the Indian Act are affected at all. We can only negative the Indian Act to the extent that it always required surrenders. The hon. member will see that surrenders by the Indians are essential before the Indians are substantially affected, or before they can be removed from their reserves, but if surrenders by the Indians are to be required in the case of every little cut-off that is essential here and there, the whole object of the negotiations may be frustrated by the caprice of one tribe. It is only to that extent that the Indian Act is affected, not generally at all. Further than that, we only ask power to effect a settlement in accordance with the terms and principles set up, and modified by the negotiations. It will be our purpose that the modifications will be just as slight as possible. We are prepared to accept the report now; we do not want to modify it at all; so from our point of view the modifications will be as slight as possible. I do not contend or think that the Act would give us power to expend money. We would have to come to Parliament in the case of any readjustment involving the passing of money. I do not think there is any money to pass at all, except in this way, that when a certain cut-off from a reserve is sold, in pursuance of the recommendations of the report, half the proceeds from the sale will go to the province of British Columbia. That is one of the terms of the report which is now before Parliament, and which we must abide by if we accept that feature of the report, as we are prepared to do. The money must come, of course, before it is paid out.

Mr. McKENZIE: I understand that the land is now held by the Dominion Government in trust for the Indians, and that a reversionary interest is claimed by the province of British Columbia. I have not been able to follow the machinery, but, of course, somebody must be put in a position to give title to this land when it is sold. Does the province of British Columbia agree to surrender their title to somebody who with the assistance of this Government will be in a position to give title to the purchaser? Has the minister arranged for the machinery by which title can be given to this land when it is sold?

Mr. MEIGHEN: There can be no difficulty about the title for the reason that section 13 of the Act of Union, of July 20, 1871, provides that the province of British Columbia shall transfer to the Dominion out of its own domain reserves for the Indians. They have done so. Consequently, we assert, and with undoubted right in my judgment, that title is in the Dominion. They contend that we enjoy that title only as trustees for the Indians, and that if we sell, if the Indians move away, the proceeds are theirs. We hope to effect a settlement with them on that point. They can make no claim to title. We say the Indian can make no claim to title, that the title is ours. We will simply grant patent on the sale of any portion or all of the reserve. Of course, the Indians themselves of British Columbia have for a very long time been setting up a claim to aboriginal title in that province, but we cannot dispose of that question in this Bill. The Dominion claims title freed entirely from aboriginal claims, and the Dominion will give patent to these lands when sold. Surely that would be just as good title as the Dominion has been giving for forty years for land in the railway belt and the Peace River District, for example.

Mr. CAHILL: About what is the acreage and value of the cut-offs?

Mr. MEIGHEN: The total cut-offs amount to 47,058.49 acres. We have had two valuations, and according to one estimate, the total value is $1,522,704.72, and according to the other $1,247,912.72. The net increases of acreage are 87,291.17—a great deal more acreage than the cut-offs, but the value is only about one-quarter as much, namely, $444,838.80.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The minister says that the province of British Columbia is claiming a reversionary interest in the proceeds of these land sales. Assuming that they are entitled to reversionary interest, will other provinces have the same rights in relation to Indian lands that are sold?

Mr. MEIGHEN: No. The grounds upon which the province of British Columbia bases its claim for reversionary interest do not exist in relation to the other provinces. They arise by reason of the terms of section 13 of their Act of Union, and orders passed.

Mr. FULTON: Does the province claim a reversionary interest in the reserves of the railway belt?

Mr. MEIGHEN: From memory, I think it does, but of that I am not very certain.

Mr. FULTON: My recollection is that there is a distinction between the reserves in the railway belt and those outside on account of the transfer by the province under the terms of Union. I think the question has been raised, but I have never heard that it has been decided.

Mr. MEIGHEN: It has never been decided, that is certain.

Mr. CAHILL: About what percentage of the Indians have consented to this transaction? Have any of them consented, or are they all opposed to parting with these lands?

Mr. MEIGHEN: The Indians, as Indians, are wards of the Government. They have not been approached with a view to obtaining their assent to an adjustment of claims as between the Dominion and Provincial Governments. I do not think it makes much difference to them. We recognize our responsibility to take care of the Indians as wards wholly.

Mr. LAPOINTE: The wards have rights as well.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Certainly, we take care of all the rights of the Indians as wards; we recognize that duty. As to the matter of a reversionary interest in the Indian reserves, that is a claim of the province of British Columbia. In fact, it does not make much difference what stand any one takes, for it is a matter of the law on the rights of the Government and of the Indians.

Mr. CAHILL: The Indians must be interested in any change taking away from them 47,000 acres of land in one place and giving them instead 87,000 acres somewhere else. But is it not customary for the Government to get the consent of Indians before they ask them to leave any reserve? In this case, have they been consulted?

Mr. MEIGHEN: They are not leaving any reserves except in the case of Kitsilano. In that case they did surrender. Under the Indian Act we must always obtain surrenders before the Indians give up possession at all, or even the right to cut wood upon reserves. But for the purpose of obtaining a settlement—in the finality, not affecting the Indian rights at all, because the Indians are undoubtedly getting every thing that is coming to them—it is absolutely essential that we be able to take proper action and consequently we ask for power to do so without the necessity of surrender. If the necessity of surrender were interposed there would be no way of carrying this out at all, and I am at a loss to comprehend how the question is ever to be settled otherwise. The Kitsilano Reserve is occupied to-day by the Harbour Commissioners and not a dollar is paid for it for the simple reason that there is no place to pay it to. The Indians consequently have not the benefit of the money that is due them because it is not in our hands to give them. It is imperative that we should come to some settlement of this matter if the Indian is not to suffer, and this is the method we are desirous to adopt.

Mr. CAHILL: Does this apply only to the reserves in Vancouver mentioned by the minister? This 47,000 acres is not all in one reserve?

Mr. MEIGHEN: No.

Mr. CAHILL: Are other reserves in a similar condition to that of the Kitsilano Reserve?

Mr. MEIGHEN: The Kitsilano Reserve has been surrendered because in that case the Indians have been moved up to another reserve, Saanich. In the other cases it is merely an adjustment of reserves. Lands which the Indians are not using are being taken over and they are given new lands.

Mr. CAHILL: Are they satisfied?

Mr. MEIGHEN: I do not think their consent has been asked for in this case. We doubtless will obtain it in every possible case, but if it is to be made a condition precedent, then there is no use in passing this legislation.

Mr. CAHILL: The transferring of Indians from one place to another might be an advantage to them in the opinion of the minister, while the Indians might regard it in altogether a different light. The question is, are they satisfied? It is not a question whether the Government is satisfied, but are the Indians themselves satisfied that the transfer should be made, in other cases than that in Vancouver?

Mr. MEIGHEN: Generally speaking, I think they are. I do not know of any specific objections to the action that has been taken. At any rate, I have not heard of any.

Mr. McKENZIE: I take it that the Kitsilano lands were subject to the same laws regarding title as every other Indian reserve. Some years ago we heard a great deal in this House about the Kitsilano incident, and were informed, possibly correctly, that the habitations of the Indians were burnt, everything which they had in the shape of dwellings having been destroyed, with the result that they were forced off the land. I cannot recall what was done in the matter, but apparently, from the words of the minister, possession has been taken by the harbour commissioners. I do not suppose that the harbour commissioners forcibly dislodged the Indians and wrested the title from the trustees; I do not imagine that such a thing would be permitted in a civilized country. I should be glad to know, however, how the commissioners got possession of the land and how they secured title without having paid for it. No doubt the harbour commissioners are a corporate body, and they are in the enjoyment of lands formerly occupied by the Indians, of whom the last we heard was that they had been virtually driven off by force. Perhaps the minister will explain how it is that the Government of Canada surrendered the title and gave patents to this corporation without any money having been paid. What arrangement has been made in the matter?

Mr. MEIGHEN: I can give from memory a fairly accurate account of the Kitsilano matter, from which the hon. member will see just how the harbour commissioners came to be in possession. First of all, let me say that I do not recollect any contention having been raised in this House that the Indians were not well treated. On the contrary, I do remember the contention being very strongly pressed that they were a little too well treated. They had too much money in their own hands, and treated themselves pretty well in consequence. The harbour commission felt that immediate possession was necessary, and the Government of British Columbia, in the interests of the city of Vancouver and the province generally, as well as harbour improvement there, were most anxious that surrender should be obtained. They obtained it, no doubt feeling that they had a certain authority in view of their claim to reversionary interest. At all events, they went about obtaining surrender and claimed to have paid the Indians between $200,000 and $300,000 as part of the surrender value, and the Indians did actually surrender the land. At the same time the Royal Commission that was in operation made an interim report regarding the Kitsilano reserve, recommending that that reserve be temporarily occupied by the harbour commission, and that the Government of Canada and the Government of British Columbia proceed to arbitrate the value of the reserve and the value of the province's reversionary interest therein. The Government of Canada concurred in that interim report, and agreed, by means of correspondence with the Government of British Columbia, that whatever might be the finding of the arbitration as to the value of the province's reversionary interest, British Columbia should in no event receive less than $300,000, that being estimated as the amount to be paid by the province for the surrender, together with interest and expenses connected therewith. The subject matter then went to arbitration and the board of arbitration found that the land was worth—if I remember correctly—$662,000. The Indian Department took exception to the finding, so did the Government of British Columbia; they claimed it was too low. An appeal was entered and went before Chief Justice Hunter of the province of British Columbia, who upset the arbitration proceedings not on the ground that the valuation was too low, or that there had been a failure to take account of relevant evidence, but rather on the ground that the province of British Columbia was not represented before the arbitration board. That simply threw us all back to nowhere. We have no finding. Since that time we have been attempting to settle the matter. We had, as I thought, arrived at terms of settlement once but they were not final in the minds of both parties to the settlement in a way that we could usefully follow out. Therefore, we have not arrived at a settlement yet, and we are still in process of negotiation. The Government of British Columbia insists upon a much higher valuation of the property. The Government of Canada was willing, and is willing yet, that the province of British Columbia shall receive that sum of $300,000 out of the proceeds. I am now in communication with the attorney general of the province and I am in hopes that we will be able to arrive at some settlement of this outstanding dispute as a result. The Harbour Board has evidenced its willingness to pay—I think a figure of—$750,000, that being suggested by way of settlement. No settlement has yet been arrived at but immediately it is we are prepared to carry it out and to provide title and the Harbour Board stands ready at any time to pay the amount.

Mr. McMASTER: Has the Harbour Board still to pay something in addition to what it has already paid to the Indians?

Mr. MEIGHEN: The Harbour Board has not paid anything. The province of British Columbia has paid the Indians between $200,000 and $300,000.

Mr. McKENZIE: I am not quite sure that we should allow this Act to go through without having something to say. It is new law to me, as I am sure it is to the hon. the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Meighen), that a person who claims a reversionary interest has the right to go in and take possession of the property. The reversionary interest goes to the person who really holds it after the person who had held it dies. The land was in possession of the Indians, it was occupied by the Indians and a trust was exercised by this Government. The only right that the Government of British Columbia had was a vague, statutory reversionary interest which had not received judicial interpretation. It strikes me as a very high-handed proceeding that the Government of British Columbia should take possession of the property, deprive the Indians of the use of it and say: "There is a sum of money; take it and get out." It is a most extraordinary proceeding and one which this Government should not recognize at all. They should have dealt with this property from the beginning under the terms of the Act and they should have discouraged high-handed proceeding of that kind on the part of any one.

Bill reported.

THE FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, 1920.

On the motion of Hon. Newton W. Rowell (Minister of Health) Bill No. 27 respecting Food and Drugs was read the second time and the House went into committee on the Bill, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 2—definitions:

Mr. McMASTER: I note that in subsection (c) the word "domestic" is used to qualify the word "animal." The subsection reads:

(c) "drug" includes all medicines for internal or external use for man or for any domestic animal.

Sometimes wild animals are kept in captivity and are possibly treated with drugs.

I do not see why the word "domestic" is put there. It limits the application of the Act. It does not fulfil any useful purpose. In a part of the country which is ably represented in this House foxes are raised for commercial purposes. I presume some of them occasionally get sick. If they are domestic animals I suppose they will fall under this law. If they are not regarded as domestic animals, and I do not think they are, they would not fall under this law. It seems to me that there is no necessity for the word "domestic."

Mr. ROWELL: The Act as it now stands is broadened by this Bill but I see no objection to striking out the word "domestic." The word "animal" will include all animals. I therefore beg to move that the word "domestic" be stricken out in the 16th line of clause 2.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. FIELDING: Paragraph (d) in the definition of food sets forth that it:

> includes every article used for food or drink—

I want to call the minister's attention to that—

> —by man, and every ingredient intended for mixing with the food or drink of man for any purpose whatever;

Now is whiskey a food, and are we committing ourselves to that definition? Because it is a scientific question as to whether whiskey is food or not, and we do not want to commit ourselves to any dangerous admission.

Mr. McMASTER: Whiskey is a poison.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I wish to ask the minister if I am right in understanding that this Bill is brought down as a consolidation of the Acts already on the Statutes.

Mr. ROWELL: The existing Adulteration of Foods Act covers many matters in addition to the adulteration of food. It was passed many years ago and after several amendments the legislation was consolidated in 1906. Since then it has been amended in many respects, and several new Acts have been passed dealing with different subject matters which are covered by the present Adulteration Act, and by reason of there being several Acts relating to the same subject matter there is confusion and difficulty in administration. In the present Bill we have eliminated all those matters that are provided for by other Acts and perhaps I might enumerate them so that the Committee will have these matters before them as we go through the Bill. The former Act in addition to dealing with foods and drugs proper, dealt with agricultural fertilizers. That class of products has since been dealt with by a separate Act and therefore it passes out from the present measure. Proprietary and patent medicines were covered by an Act passed last session, therefore no provision is made in the present Bill for proprietary and patent medicines. Honey was also dealt with by the former Act, but hon. gentlemen will recall that a special Bill was put through the House the other evening in reference to that product. The former Act also dealt with maple products, but a separate Bill is before the House to-day covering that commodity. The old Act also dealt with commercial feeding stuffs and animal foods such as bran, shorts and middlings. Those are all likewise dealt with in a separate Bill now before the House. The present measure is therefore confined to foods and drugs. In that respect it simplifies the situation and will make the administration of the law much easier than it is at present. In addition, the existing law does not draw any clear distinction between the adulteration and misbranding. Members of the Committee will see there is a clear distinction between putting some ingredient in a food —a deleterious substance which may be injurious to health,—and describing an article by some name other than it really is no doubt for the purpose of getting profit. But where the article is itself good for food and the only objection is that it is not accurately described, this Bill draws a clear distinction between the two things—adulterating, putting something in or taking something out which may be injurious, and misbranding; that is describing an article on the package or on the article itself in a way to deceive or mislead the public. The other changes I can perhaps more clearly indicate as we proceed with the Bill. The Act has been under administration for some twenty or thirty years and the proposed legislation embodies improvements which have been found necessary in actual operation by the department presided over by Dr. McGill. As we come to the different clauses I shall indicate as clearly as I can where the changes are made.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: It will expedite discussion very much if the minister will deal with every new point in that way while the Bill is being considered because going through these different Acts is a very laborious business. I would like to ask the minister one other question: a number of representations have been made by druggists from different parts of the country with respect to what they regard as somewhat drastic legislation in the matter of drugs. I presume these representations relate to the Opium and Drug Act and not to the present Bill.

Mr. ROWELL: The representations relate to the Opium and Drug Act and I have intimated that that measure will not be proceeded with until after the Government has heard the representations which those who will be affected by the legislation wish to make in regard to it.

On paragraph (e)—" inspector "

Mr. ROWELL: I move to amend paragrah (e) by striking out the words " appointed by His Majesty " and substituting therefor the words " duly appointed by or on behalf of the Dominion Government ".

This is a suggestion made by the Department of Justice for the improvement of the paragraph as it now stands. In its present form the paragraph reads:

"inspector" means any person appointed by His Majesty or by a municipality for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act.

Mr. FIELDING: Does the language used in the paragraph not always imply His Majesty?

Mr. ROWELL: I should have thought myself the amendment was not necessary, but in going over the Bill the Department of Justice suggested to me that it might be made.

Mr. FIELDING: "By the Dominion Government" is a very unusual expression in an Act. However, we all know what it means and that is perhaps the important feature of any legislation. The whole theory of the Government is that all appointments emanate from His Majesty.

Mr. BELAND: We are now a nation.

Mr. FIELDING: Yes.

Mr. ROWELL: As I have already said I approved of the clause in its present form thinking it was suitable for the purpose designed, but the Department of Justice, in finally passing upon it, suggested the modification in question. I think perhaps "the Government of Canada" is preferable to "the Dominion Government." I would therefore suggest that we change the wording to read "appointed by or on behalf of the Government of Canada."

Mr. McKENZIE: Is the minister giving power to a municipality to make an appointment of this kind?

Mr. ROWELL: We do not give municipalities such power; they appoint their own inspectors. A municipality has the power to appoint inspectors to deal with laws relating to that municipality.

Mr. McMASTER: May I point out before we get away from this paragraph that as the minister proposes to amend it the inspection must be made by an inspector appointed either by the Dominion Government or by a municipality? But if there are inspectors appointed by the province the term "inspector" would not cover such provincial inspection. Perhaps that is the intention; I merely draw attention to that point as it has occurred to me.

Mr. ROWELL: Just before I answer my hon. friend, I inadvertently misinformed my hon. friend from Cape Breton. Section 11 of the Act deals with inspectors appointed by councils. It provides:

The Council of any city, town, county or village or other municipality may appoint one or more inspectors of food or drugs, etc.

These appointments are therefore expressly provided for.

Mr. PEDLOW: Would the minister explain who is to make these appointments? The paragraph says:

"Inspector" means any person appointed by or on behalf of, etc.

Who will make the appointment on behalf of the Government if the Government do not make the appointment themselves?

Mr. ROWELL: All these appointments are made by the Civil Service Commission under the existing law.

Mr. McKENZIE: I should think that the words " by His Majesty or by a municipality " might be left out and the clause made to read:

" Inspector " means any person duly appointed for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act.

Mr. ROWELL: I have no objection to the change; it seems to cover exactly the same ground. I move an amendment to that effect.

Amendment agreed to, and section as amended agreed to.

On section 4—drug, when deemed to be adulterated:

Mr. ROWELL: The present Act refers to a specific edition of the pharmacopœia; which is now out of date. In this Bill the reference is to the latest edition of the British or of any foreign pharmacopœia. Then subsection 2 provides that if it is not specified that the drug is to be judged by some other standard, the British Pharmacopœia shall be the standard by which the drug shall be tested and with which it must comply.

Mr. FOURNIER: What have we to do with any foreign pharmacopœia?

Mr. ROWELL: We have very substantial importations of drugs from France, and we recognize the French Pharmacopœia.

Mr. FOURNIER: The codex.

Mr. ROWELL: Well, it is the standard which the French have fixed for testing the purity of their drugs, and that standard is recognized here.

Section agreed to.

On section 5—food, when deemed to be misbranded:

Mr. NESBITT: Paragraph (f) of section 5 says:

> If in package form, sealed by the manufacturer or producer, and bearing his name and address, the contents of each package are not conspicuously and correctly stated in terms of weight, measure or number, upon the outside of the package.

I have a letter which draws my attention to the fact that many packages of perfectly pure foods which will not be sold within the year do not comply with this provision and would be deemed to be misbranded. What has the minister to say about that?

Mr. ROWELL: I intend before the Bill leaves the committee to move an amendment in this connection. I have not yet decided the exact form in which to submit it, but it will provide either that the Act shall come into force on proclamation, or, as was done in the case of the Patent Medicine Act of last session, that the Governor in Council may make regulations governing the disposal of existing stocks. There is no intention to confiscate property which was legitimately acquired under the existing law.

Paragraph (a) of this section is substantially the same as the provision of the present law; it formed part of the adulteration clause. These words have been added: "and if it is not clearly and explicitly described as an imitation." Hon. members will see the reason for that provision; if it is explicitly described as an imitation, then it is not misbranded. Paragraph (b) is a new clause. Paragraph (c) is also new: "If it is sold or offered for sale by a name which belongs to another article."

Mr. FIELDING: Is that a workable clause? In the case of an article protected by trade mark there would be no difficulty. But suppose two articles of the same nature, bearing the same name but coming from different sources, are offered for sale, which one is the offender, neither being protected by trade mark? Two different concerns might easily produce substantially the same article. No doubt these things have all been carefully considered by the officials of the department. I desire to do no more than call attention to them.

Mr. ROWELL: I think that the subsection is not intended to cover the specific point my hon. friend has in mind, though I can quite see the difficulty which might follow if it did deal with a case of that kind. It is intended to deal with the selling of an article under a name different from the real name of the article—in other words, an article which is misbranded.

Mr. FIELDING: The question is, to which of the two in the case I mentioned does this provision apply?

Mr. NESBITT: This provision goes even further than my hon. friend (Mr. Fielding) suggests. It says: "If it is sold or offered for sale by a name which belongs to another article." The name might belong to another article not at all similar to the article sold.

Mr. ROWELL: I should draw the attention of my hon. friends to the provisions of clause 14 which has a direct bearing on this. Clause 14 provides that:

> The Governor in Council shall have power to make regulations,—
>
> (a) prescribing standards of quality for and fixing the limits of variabilities permissible in any article of food or drug the standard of which is not otherwise prescribed by this Act;
>
> (b) requiring a label to be attached, in such manner as he may direct, to any article of food or drug, and prescribing what the colour, size and contents of such label shall be;
>
> (c) prescribing, in the case of foods in packages, sold at retail in such packages, what the shape and size of such package shall be, and of what material it shall be made.

I think perhaps sub-clause (a) might be made clearer. I understand from the officers of the department that in their view sub-clause (a) covers the matter:

Prescribing standards for and fixing the limits of variabilities permissible in any article of food.

The word "food" would cover the matter. This clause had better stand.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: If sub-clause (c) of clause 5 were made to read:

If it is sold or offered for sale by the name that belongs to it.

That would cover it.

Mr. ROWELL: That would appear to cover it.

Mr. McMASTER: Before we pass from this clause, might I point out to the minister the possibility of confusion, and, I am afraid, trouble with regard to sub-clause (b) which reads:

If it is stated to be the product of a place or a country of which it is not truly a product.

There are in commerce a good many names which have acquired a secondary meaning. For instance, there is Belfast Ginger Ale. I am afraid that some zealous inspector, duly appointed, might possibly think that under sub-clause (b) he would have the right to proceed against some manufacturer who was manufacturing Belfast Ginger Ale. There is a danger in that clause, and I should like to hear what the minister has to say about it.

Mr. ROWELL: This clause is intended to meet cases where a certain foreign product has a well known character and reputation in the market and is bought by reason of that. It is not in the public interest, nor in the interest of people who buy, that other products which are not made in that country and have not the quality, should be sold under that name. For instance, I might mention Java coffee and other commodities.

Mr. McMASTER: Would India curry powder have to be made in India?

Mr. ROWELL: I am not familiar with that particular commodity. If a well known brand of powder of that character is made in India and known in our market, then the product of a similar kind made in Canada should not be sold under the name "India," because that would lead people to believe they were getting the product produced in India.

Mr. DEVLIN: Would Washington coffee have to be made in Washington and Paris Green in Paris?

Mr. BELAND: And what about Hamburg steak?

Mr. CAHILL: Would it be possible under sub-clause (a) to sell oleomargarine as a substitute for butter?

Mr. ROWELL: Sub-clause (a) does not prohibit the sale of oleomargarine if it be described as what it really is.

Mr. CAHILL: If it were described as imitation butter, would it be possible to sell it?

Mr. CROTHERS: I think some alteration should be made in sub-clause (e) of clause 5, which reads:

If false or exaggerated claims are made for it upon the label or otherwise.

In trade what is an exaggerated claim? Supposing for instance, a man is selling soda biscuits, and on the label he has printed: "The biscuits contained in this package are superior in quality to those manufactured by any other firm in Canada." Literally that might be untrue, but the courts of this country regularly recognize what is known as puffing, and they distinguish between puffing and a false statement. For instance, a man has a perfect right under the law to say: "The biscuits contained in this package are the best manufactured in Canada." A man has also a perfect right to say: "That is the best piano manufactured in Canada," although it may be a very inferior piano. That is regarded by the courts as simply puffing, and every man who sells anything has a right under the law to make a general statement of that kind as distinguished from a mis-statement of a fact. If a man says: "The biscuits contained in this package are made from number one hard Manitoba wheat and that was not the case, that is a definite, false statement and is contrary to general law. But in a general sense a man has a perfect right to say that such and such is the best material of the kind manufactured, although that may not be actually true. Under this sub-clause, if it is left as it stands, who is going to determine whether the vendor has exaggerated the qualities of a particular article or not? I think this should be either stricken out altogether or modified to a matter of actual fact capable of being proved, and not a matter of opinion.

Mr. ROWELL: The party to determine the matter would be the magistrate before whom the case came for adjudication, but I appreciate the difficulty of using such a word as "exaggerated." The department has encountered difficulties in enforcing the law, and the officers of the department were very anxious to have something to enable them to reach parties who were real offenders. On the other hand, one can conceive the difficulty that my hon. friend has pointed out, of puffing, which is perhaps not a desirable thing but which is very common, being construed as coming within the provisions of the law. It may be that we go far enough at present if we simply provide:

If false claims are made for it upon the label or otherwise.

I am quite willing to strike out the words "or exaggerated," and try out the provision in the meantime simply on the basis of false claims.

Mr. BELAND: Is the minister going to strike out subclause (c)?

Mr. ROWELL: I should like to let subclause (c) stand in order to discuss with the officers of the department just what effect the change might have. At present I consider the suggestion of the leader of the Opposition would cover the matter.

Mr. CROTHERS: If the words "of fact" were inserted after the word "claims" in clause (e), there would be no question about the matter being one of opinion.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Sub-clause (a) seems to be contradictory. It does not seem to be advisable to permit any article being sold as something other than what it really is, and sub-clause (a) allows you to do that. Why should we allow a man to sell an article that is an imitation? In the first place, the word "imitation" implies that some man is trying to sell something under a guise or a camouflage, if he sells it as an imitation. Why should we countenance that at all? For instance, a man might put on a package of oleomargarine the words "pure creamery butter," and then in very small letters underneath "but really oleomargarine." That would be a perfectly legitimate thing to do. When a man buys a railway ticket a great number of conditions are printed on the back, but how many men read those conditions, or the conditions of a fire insurance policy? Under this clause it would seem to me that oleomargarine could be sold as pure butter simply by putting the word "oleomargarine" in small type underneath. Why should we allow anybody to sell an imitation, even in the case of a necessary article of food?

Section stands.

On section 6—compounds, mixtures, etc., to be labelled as such, and not to be marked "pure," "genuine," etc.:

[Mr. Rowell.]

Br. ROWELL: Let me illustrate the kind of case this clause is designed to meet. An article, take mustard, for instance, may be put on the market and may be quite wholesome but not pure mustard. The mustard may have a certain amount of flour mixed with it. Similarly with many other commodities that are sold on the market. We are providing that if the word "pure" or "genuine" is used, it must be the genuine article. If they wish to sell an article that is not wholly composed of the substances described on the label, they must not use the words "pure" or "genuine." This is simply to prevent the public from being misled by the use of these words.

Mr. DENIS: What objection would there be to having the manufacturers indicate on the label the composition of the article? A druggist never objects to writing the prescription on the label of a bottle of medicine, if requested, but when it comes to food we allow any one to sell any kind of food under a false name. I should like to know if there is any real objection to having my suggestion carried out?

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend will see that there would be serious objection to it in the case, for instance, of commodities which are good articles of food but the composition of which is a trade secret. If there is nothing misleading about the name, there seems to be no necessity for stating the ingredients on the label. My hon. friend is mistaken in thinking that the druggists are required to write the prescription on the label.

Mr. BELAND: He had in mind proprietary medicines.

Mr. DENIS: Where there is no trade secret to be given away, I do not see why the public should not be told what the ingredients are.

Mr. FIELDING: My hon. friend (Mr. Middlebro) will find his criticism respecting the use in large type of the words "pure creamery butter" and in smaller type the word "oleomargarine" covered, I think, by this clause, which provides that:

Every article of food which is a compound, mixture, imitation or substitute shall be plainly and correctly labelled as such; and the words "pure" or "genuine" or words equivalent to these terms, shall not be used on the labels or in connection with such articles, and such articles shall be so packed, marked or labelled as not to be likely to deceive any person with respect to their true nature.

Section agreed to.

On section 7—samples may be obtained:

Mr. ROWELL: Subsection (1) is substantially the existing law. Subsections (2) and (3) are important, and I think should be brought to the attention of the committee. Subsection (2) is rendered necessary by reason of the fact that in cases where an inspector has no reasonable doubt about a certain article being adulterated food, in order to justify his taking action he must take a sample and have it analyzed, and under the law as it now stands it is very doubtful if he has a right to require that the bulk shall be detained until that analysis has been made. As a matter of practice, the department is detaining the bulk until the analysis can be made, but we are advised by our officers that it is desirable that that right should be made perfectly clear, so that in the meantime the adulterated food cannot get out of reach of the department.

Subsection (3) is intended to protect us against the importation of adulterated food. I am advised that in the past there have been many cases where adulterated foods which should not be exposed for sale in this country have been imported from outside. Hon. members will see that the right to examine is limited. The inspector must have the direct authority of the minister before he can examine customs entries and detain food until an analysis can be made. The officials of the department say that both these provisions are very important for the efficient administration of the law and for the protection of the public.

Mr. FIELDING: As the minister has explained, provision is made that an embargo may be laid on imports until an analysis can be made. Then the clause goes on to provide that if "the food or drug is adulterated or misbranded, such food or drug shall not be admitted into Canada for use as a food or drug." For what other purposes than as a food or drug would it be admitted?

Mr. ROWELL: There are a number of uses to which an article may properly be put, and some cases have come up within the past few months in the administration of the department. Albumen of egg, which is not suitable for human food, may be used for tanning purposes, and there are certain manufacturing processes in which commodities such as this may be used. I know that within the past five or six months a large quantity of some article imported into Canada for food was seized by the department. It would clearly have been injurious to health to have that article marketed as food, but it was quite useful in some manufacturing business and we therefore permitted its employment for that purpose.

Mr. FIELDING: That seems reasonable, but has the minister the machinery by which he can guarantee that an article, having been once imported as food, may be used only for a manufacturing purpose?

Mr. ROWELL: In the case I have in mind we took bonds from responsible parties before releasing the article. Whether or not we had the authority to do it we detained the article, a large quantity of which had been imported. The analyst having decided that it was unfit for food, we deemed it wise, instead of detroying the article, to take bonds from responsible parties guaranteeing that it would not be used for any other than specified purposes.

Mr. FIELDING: I quite agree that an article which may be unfit for food may serve a very useful manufacturing purpose, but I think the minister should have some machinery that will insure the safety of the public. Unless there is adequate machinery you may find that an article which is condemned as food, but which is permitted to be used for mechanical purposes, may eventually find its way back to the shop and be exposed for sale as human food.

Mr. ROWELL: I think we have the power under the section regarding regulations. If not, I shall bear in mind the hon. member's suggestion.

Mr. McKENZIE: It is a common practice when goods which are imported for food are found to be unfit for that purpose to deem them as being illegally in the country and to confiscate them. There does not seem to be any power of confiscation here. Suppose a man who imported goods that were found to be unfit should refuse to give such a bond as the minister has spoken of, what would be done in the matter?

Mr. ROWELL: There is a power of forfeiture under section twelve.

Mr. FIELDING: But what about the power to authorize the use of goods for other than food purposes?

Mr. ROWELL: Under sections fourteen and fifteen there is a general authority to make regulations, and subsection "D" of section fifteen provides "for carrying out the provisions of this Act." When we come to that subsection, which is very broad, I shall consider the point raised by my hon.

friend, if there is found to be any necessity for modification.

Mr. McKENZIE: Subsection "D" of section fifteen does not help the minister in making regulations. There must be a previous provision in regard to the disposal of condemned goods.

Mr. ROWELL: Section 12 provides for this.

12. (1) Whenever any article of food or any drug is reported by a Dominion analyst as being adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, the department may order such article and all other articles of the same description which were in the same place at the time the article analysed was obtained to be seized by an inspector and detained by him until an analysis of a sample of the whole is made.

(2) If the Dominion analyst reports to the department that the whole or any part of such articles of food or drugs as have been submitted for analysis by the aforesaid inspector is adulterated or misbranded, the Minister may declare such articles, or so much thereof as the Dominion analyst reports to be adulterated or misbranded, to be forfeited to the Crown, and they shall be forfeited accordingly, and may be disposed of as the minister directs.

Mr. FIELDING: They are disposed of after forfeiture.

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, as the minister may direct. I shall keep my hon. friend's point in mind.

Section agreed to.

On section eight—Inspector has to deal with samples.

Mr. McKENZIE: This section provides for court proceedings and enacts that the certificate of the analyst shall be received as evidence in any proceedings taken against any person in pursuance of this Act. This might be a good way for an officer to get in evidence, but I need hardly remind my hon. friend that evidence of this nature is exceedingly unpopular. The best way to prove a case is the ordinary old-fashioned way of producing witnesses and having the whole matter aired before the court.

Mr. ROWELL: In that respect the law is not materially changed, except that the certificate may be the certificate of a "Dominion Analyst" instead of the "Chief Analyst." My hon. friend will see that this is a case where the government official has no object whatever other than to get at the actual contents of the article examined or analysed. If he makes an examination and finds the article adulterated his certificate is put in as evidence in the case. Having regard to the objects for which the legislation is being enacted, I think it is very desirable that provision should be made to make the enforcement of the law expeditious and convenient. Suppose that the defendant in a case was in a position to show that a mistake had been made, there would be no object in the department prosecuting. All they wish to do is to get at the facts. Section 9 also provides that:

(1) If the person who supplied the article respecting which the certificate referred to in the last preceding section is given, deems himself aggrieved thereby, he may within ten days of the receipt of the copy of such certificate furnished to him, notify the minister in writing that he intends to present evidence in his own behalf to controvert the certificate of the Dominion analyst, stating in full the nature of such evidence. In the absence of such notice the certificate of the analyst shall be taken as final.

He is not precluded from giving evidence but he must give notice beforehand to enable the department to meet the case. Then sub-section 2 of section 9 provides:

(2) Should the evidence submitted by the person above referred to be such as in the opinion of the Chief Dominion Analyst to justify further investigation, the Chief Dominion Analyst may cause the second part of the sample submitted to the Department, as provided in section eight, to be analysed to his satisfaction, and a certificate of such analysis signed by the Chief Dominion Analyst shall be final and conclusive evidence of the facts therein set out.

The sample is taken away, it is divided into three parts and it is only the analysis of the actual sample taken that can be used as the basis of prosecution. Otherwise the man charged might substitute something else and say that that was the article he had at the time the seizure was made. I think ample protection is given by section 9 to meet the case mentioned. I should point out that sections 8 and 9 are substantially the present law with two exceptions. Section 8, sub-section 4 provides, that:

A copy of such certificate shall be furnished by the department to the person from whom the sample was procured within six months of the time of procuring the sample.

There was no provision in the Act as it stood that the certificate should be furnished within any definite time and it is only reasonable that a man from whose goods a sample is taken for analysis should have the certificate furnished within some fixed time. Provision is also made that the certificate of the Dominion analyst may be taken in the first instance rather than the certificate of the chief Dominion analyst. It would be quite impossible for the chief analyst to personally analyse all the samples taken.

Mr. CHAPLIN: Why should a man have to wait for six months to get that certificate.

Mr. ROWELL: He does not have to wait; it is furnished in due time, or as soon as it is available. This is simply a limitation upon the existing law.

Mr. FIELDING: Has there not been found a difficulty in that samples are taken say, from a grocer's shop? He does not make the goods at all; he buys them in good faith and sells them in good faith. Is it the intention to proceed to examine samples of the product of the manufacturer, the source from which the goods come? It does seem a hardship that the grocer who buys an article in all good faith, believing he is getting the correct thing, upon it being discovered that there is some adulteration, must be pilloried before the public through no fault of his own. It may be that there is no other way of getting at it, but I have known cases in which there has been very great hardship.

Mr. ROWELL: I appreciate the point raised by the hon. gentleman and in order to get over the difficulty provision is made to reach the manufacturer and as far as possible to take samples from him. But it has been found in many cases that the only way to reach the trouble has been to go into a store, actually buy an article and take a sample. Provision is made in section 17 for the case which my hon. friend has mentioned where a man might plead want of knowledge and thereby escape the consequences of his act.

Mr. FIELDING: He escapes the consequences in the way of a penalty in the courts but in the meantime a bulletin has been issued by the department which practically blacklists the grocer who has sold that article. It is true the public do not generally see these bulletins; it is a pity they do not in some cases. I know of a case where a gross injustice has been done to reputable merchants who have been pilloried in the bulletins of the department. I am not complaining of the department for doing this; I have no doubt they are only carrying out their duty, but it seems to me a very great hardship.

Mr. NESBITT: I absolutely agree with what has been said by my hon. friend from Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding). Could not the Act be so framed that if an article were seized in a retail store, the manufacturer of the article would be responsible? You might force a manufacturer under this Bill to put his name on the article so that you would know exactly who made it and you could come back at him. I have known of instances where the retail man was just as innocent as a baby in the matter. He did not know that the article that he had sold was not what it was represented to be but still his name went forth to the public. This may hurt a man's business a great deal.

Mr. ROWELL: I may say in answer to both my hon. friends that while I believe in the past the course they have indicated was pursued, it is not now being pursued. No names are published in any bulletin until after a conviction is actually registered. The case that my hon. friends have mentioned would not arise in so far as publication in the bulletin is concerned.

Mr. NESBITT: Is the manufacturer not the man who is guilty and is he not the man who should be punished if there is any deception or wrongdoing?

Mr. ROWELL: I will be glad to discuss the point when we come to section 17, which deals particularly with the matter.

Mr. McKENZIE: If section 8 passes, section 17 will be ineffective. I sympathise very strongly with what has been said by my hon. friend from Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) and my hon. friend from North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt). After all the man who produces the article, puts it in the can and sells it, is the man who knows what the contents of the receptacle are and he is altogether responsible to the public for what he puts up. Within the last few days an action for damages has been tried in one of the provinces. The complainant passed the retailer altogether and brought the action direct against the man who manufactured the goods. This is not a new principle at all as it has been upheld both in England and in the United States. That being the case I should think it would be worthy of consideration by the minister as to whether or not he should always go after the manufacturer, and provide the means of reaching him.

Mr. ROWELL: The change proposed in line 7 of section 8 is merely a verbal one. The reference there given should be to section 15 instead of section 17.

On section 10—analysis may be obtained of any sample:

Mr. McKENZIE: What is really meant by "Dominion analyst"? In my own province the certificate of an analyst in a prosecution under the Temperance Act is recognized as evidence, but I think a certain qualification must be provided for before the certificate of the analyst is accepted. It would not do for everybody to call themselves analysts without being able to demonstrate that they possess the necessary qualifications; there ought to be some definition as to what constitutes an analyst, and how the functionary comes to be possessed of the title.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend will see that is provided for in subclause (b) of section 2, the definition clause, which says:

"Dominion analyst" means any analyst appointed for the purposes of this Act and includes the Chief Dominion Analyst and the Assistant Chief Dominion Analyst.

"Dominion analyst" only applies to an analyst appointed under the provisions of the Bill.

Mr. PEDLOW: I would like to call the attention of the Chairman to the fact that there is not a quorum of the committee at the present time.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend will realize that if he insists upon his objection it means reporting the fact to the Speaker.

Mr. NESBITT: I would like to draw the attention of my hon friend (Mr. Pedlow) to the fact that there is a quorum present.

Mr. BELAND: There are twenty members present, including the Chairman.

Mr. PEDLOW: I admit that it is very desirable we should proceed with the business of the House, but it is also desirable that there should be an adequate attendance of members, and that those hon. gentlemen should take an intelligent interest in the discussion that is going on. I must insist that there be a quorum in carrying on the business of the House.

The CHAIRMAN: If the hon. gentleman insists, it will be the duty of the Chairman to report to the Speaker the point which has just been raised. I will therefore ask the Clerk to make a count of the members present.

Mr. FIELDING: I do hope my hon. friend (Mr. Pedlow) will not press the point. After all this is a Bill of a rather formal and routine character, and I do not think there is any real objection to it. I think it would be a pity, and very undesirable, to have it announced to the public that the House was counted out.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: In addition to that, the procedure will simply use up so much of our working time and nothing will be gained by it.

Mr. NESBITT: There was a quorum when my hon. friend made his objection.

Mr. PEDLOW: I will not press the point. I made it for the purpose of insisting upon a better attendance of hon. gentlemen than we now have.

Mr. BELAND: There are more than twenty members present now.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall clause 10 carry?

Mr. McKENZIE: Just a moment. I was drawing the minister's attention to the question of the qualification of an analyst. It is quite true that the Bill contains a definition of an analyst, but what I maintain is that we should be assured that these analysts have some standard qualifications, that they have taken a degree in some college or are recognized as holding some certificate, and that they are not simply appointees of the Government.

Mr. ROWELL: In answer to my hon. friend I would say that the qualifications for appointment to a position of this kind are determined under the classification of the Civil Service. A candidate for the position of analyst is required to have suitable educational qualifications; he must have graduated from a university or school and possess attainments qualifying him for the position. I have not got the prescribed qualifications under my hand at present, but I shall be glad to furnish my hon. friend with that information.

Mr. McKENZIE: Must we go to the Civil Service Commission to get a definition of the qualifications of an analyst?

Mr. ROWELL: The qualifications are set forth in the classification submitted to the House at the last session of Parliament. When a position is vacant and the Civil Service Commission advertises, the particular qualifications required are specified in detail.

Mr. McKENZIE: Under the provisions of the old Civil Service Act a man could be appointed to a technical position in the Government service without the consent of the Civil Service Commission, but it may be otherwise now. If it is possible for a man without the necessary technical knowledge to be brought into the department without going through the hands of the Civil Service Commission it would be very desirable to have a definition in the Bill of what constitutes an analyst. I would not raise the point were it not for the fact that the finding of an analyst is made evidence in a court of law. The old-fashioned way of having the witness go on a stand has been done away with, and a certificate is now required. Therefore we have the right to know in some way the educational attainments of the man who makes that certificate.

Mr. ROWELL: I shall be very glad, before the Bill leaves Committee, to give my hon. friend the information he desires. I may tell him, however, that the applicant for such a position must be a Master or Bachelor of Science, or a graduate in Arts, who has taken a special course in chemistry. He must be in every way well qualified for the post.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Do I understand from clause 10 that in the event of any one believing that some sample of food has been adulterated, it is necessary for them to enclose a fee in order to have that sample analysed?

Mr. ROWELL: That provision is in the existing law. No change is being made in the law in that respect.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Surely it should not be necessary, having regard to all the facilities at the disposal of the department, for a private person to take proceedings against a vendor for violation of the provisions of this Act. I see no good purpose in compelling any one to pay for an analysis and then to enter proceedings.

Mr. ROWELL: It is true that the department exists for the purpose of enforcing the law and that all complaints made to the department are investigated in due course and prosecutions instituted wherever necessary. But in addition to that, this provision would enable a man who was not satisfied with the action taken by the department to proceed as outlined. It is simply carrying forward into the present Act a provision of the old Act.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: If a man was strongly of the opinion that the department was lax, it would be necessary for him to pay for an analysis of the sample by the department.

Mr. ROWELL: That is the law as it stands to-day.

Section agreed to.

On section 11—inspectors appointed by councils:

Mr. NESBITT: Sections 10 and 11 provide that the offender can be prosecuted as well as the manufacturer, and that raises the question that was brought up by my hon friend (Mr. Fielding).

Mr. ROWELL: As a matter of practical administration I am afraid that we cannot consent to limit the prosecution solely to the manufacturer. The department in every case endeavours to reach the parties primarily responsible. But it is a matter of great importance that adulterated food or drugs which are dangerous to the public health should not be sold; therefore it has been considered necessary that the department should have the right to proceed directly against the parties who sell, leaving it to them to establish their innocence.

Mr. PEDLOW: The minister has stated that the Civil Service Commission would appoint inspectors provided for by paragraph (e) of section 2; but under section 11 the council of any city, town, county or village or other municipality may appoint inspectors. Is there not a conflict of authority here?

Mr. ROWELL: Dominion inspectors will be appointed by the Civil Service Commission. There is also the right on the part of local municipalities to appoint local inspectors. In fact, it is necessary that the principal municipalities at least should do so, otherwise we should have to have a corps of Dominion inspectors wtih a consequent unfair charge against the Federal exchequer. The local municipalities must take an interest in the enforcement of this law; therefore every encouragement is given to them to appoint their own inspectors, to initiate their own prosecutions and to get the benefit of the fines. The inspector has no right to give the certificate. He goes about, inspects and makes seizures, but his functions are quite different from that of the analyst.

Mr. PEDLOW: Will the local inspectors have the same duties as the Dominion inspectors?

Mr. ROWELL: The local inspectors can only exercise the authority that is expressly given them. They may take the sample, but they must submit it to the Dominion analyst, and on the basis of the decision of the Dominion analyst as to the quality of the product a prosecution may be instituted.

Mr. McMASTER: I think it inadvisable to have in a Federal Act a statement which makes it appear that this Parliament is giving to a municipality the right to do such and such a thing. Consequently, it seems to me that the phrase, "The council of any city, town, county or village or other municipality may appoint," and so on, is unfortunate. I do not challenge the object which the clause seeks to attain, but it seems to me that it might better be worded: "Inspectors appointed by the council of any city, town, county or village," and so on. I would not in a Federal Act grant the right to municipal councils to do such and such a thing. This Parliament has no right to direct municipal councils to do or not to do such and such things, because municipal councils derive their power, not from the Dominion, but from the provinces.

Mr. ROWELL: I appreciate the point raised by my hon. friend. But this section has been in the law for over thirty years; we are only re-enacting what has been in the statute for a very long time. Frankly, when the Bill first came up, I was under the impression that all we were doing was recognizing the authority of inspectors appointed by the municipalities, but the Act itself goes further. I do not think any difficulty can arise from this. We are giving these inspectors, after they are appointed by the municipalities, certain powers. It is our function to give them those powers.

Mr. McMASTER: Once they are appointed, I agree with the minister that it is quite right for us to give them the powers, but the legislation goes further than that; it says in so many words: "The council of any city, town or village may appoint." I say that we have no right to say to a municipal council: "You may appoint an inspector." The only power that has the right to say that is the power vested in the province. I am inclined to think the minister will agree with me on that constitutional point.

Mr. ROWELL: I think under certain conditions we have power over municipalities just as we have power over individuals; but I do not think it is necessary to enter into a discussion of that constitutional question at present. The fact is that this has been in the law for thirty years, and the Department of Justice has approved this legislation in its present form. Therefore, I should say we are quite safe in leaving it as it is in that respect.

[Mr. Rowell.]

Mr. McKENZIE: Under this measure will a municipal council have power to dismiss an officer?

Mr. ROWELL: These officers are wholly under the control of the municipalities. I have no hesitation in saying that had I drafted the law originally I should have provided that where the municipalities appointed these officials, these officials should have certain powers. But I do not think any harm can come from leaving this as it is.

Mr. FIELDING: This has been in the Act for thirty years, but does the word "payment" in sub-clause 2 convey clearly what is meant? The clause reads:

> Such Dominion Analyst shall, on payment of the prescribed fee.

That, of course, means on payment to him, the receipt of money by him. As the sub-clause is worded, there is almost a suggestion that it is on payment by him of money. As, however, this has been in the law for thirty years, I suppose that is good authority.

Mr. ROWELL: This is not exactly the form in the original Act, but the difference is not in the point which my hon. friend has mentioned. The Act as it originally stood reads:

> Such analyst shall, upon tender of the fees fixed for the analysis of such class of articles by the Governor in Council, forthwith analyse the same and give the inspector a certificate of the said analysis.

I should think a little more than tendering is required; payment is what is required.

Mr. FIELDING: Payment by the party applying. There is here almost the implication that the analyst has to make the payment. The fact, however, that this has been the law for thirty years, is good authority.

Mr. ROWELL: I should have thought that the fact that this was on payment by the party applying was clearly implied from the clause, quite apart from its antiquity, and that it did not require its age to justify it. The clause reads:

> Such Dominion Analyst shall, on payment of the prescribed fee.

That must be on payment of the fee for the analysis referred to in the preceding sub-clause, sub-clause (1) which says that the inspector may require a Dominion Analyst to analyse any samples of food or drugs procured by him. I have no objection to inserting the words " to him," if my hon. friend thinks that is necessary, but I do not think it is necessary.

Section agreed to.

On section 12—seizure.

Mr. NESBITT: Is the word " description " in the fifth line of sub-clause (1) a good word. The sub-clause reads:

All other articles of the same description.

Should not the sub-clause read:

All other articles of the same kind.

Mr. ROWELL: All other articles of the same character?

Mr. NESBITT: That would do.

Mr. ROWELL: I have no objection to substituting the word "character" for the word "description."

Mr. McMASTER: I do not think that is any improvement. I think the word "description" keeps the matter closer to what is being seized. For instance, one sort of meat might be of the same character as another.

Mr. NESBITT: Articles might be of the same description; that is to say, the labels and all that sort of thing might be of the same description, and yet they would not be of the same character at all. I absolutely disagree with my hon. friend (Mr. McMaster) when he says that the word "description" is better than the word "character."

Mr. ROWELL: I find that in the old Act—and I confess I am not aware why in drafting this Bill a change was made—the words are "the same kind and quality."

Mr. NESBITT: The words "the same kind" would suit me.

Mr. ROWELL: We had better adopt the description in the original Act. I am informed by the officers of the department that the reason for the change was in order to leave out the word "quality," because there might be difficulty arising therefrom. I move that the word "description" in the fifth line of sub-clause (1) of clause 12 be stricken out and the word "kind" substituted therefor.

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

On section 13—reports of Chief Analyst.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: In the fifth line of this clause would not the word "thereon" be better than the word "therein" in regard to misbranding?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, I should think it would. That is probably a clerical error. I move that the word "thereon" be substituted for the word "therein" in the fifth line of this clause.

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

On section 14—regulations by Governor in Council.

Mr. NESBITT: I should like to draw the minister's attention to sub-clause (c). Those of us who are in business in this country have troubles enough without having any more thrown in our way. Why are such obstacles placed in the way of doing business? What is the sense of having the department say what size and what shape of packages food shall be put in? What difference does the shape or the size make or what material packages may be made of so long as they are not made of poisonous material? That is an unnecessary interference with trade, in my judgment, and might cause a great deal of expense to a manufacturer. He is the best judge of the most suitable size, because he has to cater to the trade. No man in the House of Commons, or in the department, would be as good a judge as to the size and shape of the package as the manufacturer, because it is his business to get the trade.

Mr. ROWELL: It has been found in the actual administration of the law that where an article of food put up in a certain sized package or container has acquired a high reputation on the market because of its character and quality, other manufacturers will put up a similar article, but of inferior quality, which they can afford to sell at a lower price, in substantially the same sized container or package, and the public in looking at the two is misled. The view of the department is that in such a case the inferior article should be sold in a different kind of package so that the public will not confuse it with the better known article of superior quality.

Mr. NESBITT: This clause does not touch that at all. The whole Act provides against imitation, but this clause regulates the size of package that all commodities shall be put up in.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not think any special legislation is necessary to cover cases of the kind mentioned, because a man could bring an action for unfair competition or passing off an article as something else.

Mr. NESBITT: I am not speaking of imitation. I say this clause gives power to prescribe the kind of package that every manufacturer shall put his stuff up in.

Mr. ROWELL: This is not a power which the minister is compelled to use. It is only power to deal by regulation with a situation where it is believed that such regulation is necessary. It is not contemplated that there should be general regulations governing all kinds of packages, but it is desired by the department that there should be power to deal with the class of cases such as I have indicated, which have already arisen in the administration of the law.

Mr. ROSS: Does the minister mean that if a manufacturer puts up a certain article in a certain kind of package the department will have power to say that another manufacturer shall not put up a similar article in a similar package?

Mr. ROWELL: No. A manufacturer puts up a certain article of a well-recognized standard or quality in a certain sized container, which becomes known to the public. When the article has become well-known on the market another manufacturer, knowing the reputation it has acquired, may produce a similar article of inferior quality which he can afford to sell at a lower price, and put it up in a container similar in general design and character to the other one, and the public are thereby misled. I am told that is the actual situation which sometimes arises in the administration of the law, and the sole object of the department is to take power to prevent the public from being misled into buying an article of inferior quality, thinking they are getting an article of better quality.

Mr. NESBITT: But the whole Act provides against imitation. This is an interference with trade. Biscuit manufacturers, for instance, from one end of the country to the other put up a three-pound package of biscuits. It is exactly the same sized package all over the country, but they do not pretend for a minute to imitate some other manufacturer. It seems to me utterly incomprehensible to suppose that people would be deceived by articles being put up in a similar package. These packages have to have their own labels on, and by this Act the manufacturer is required to say whether the article is pure or adulterated. I repeat, this clause is an absolute interference with trade.

[Mr. McMaster.]

Mr. FIELDING: I do not think this clause deals with quality, as suggested by the minister. His reasoning in the main is good, but I think it would be stronger if he dealt mainly with the question of quantity. A lady, for instance, buys a certain article by the package; the package becomes a standard article. When you buy a package of this or that you do not make an analytical examination as to the weight. The package has a standard value, and as the minister states, an old established concern may have a reputation for its goods sold in that way, and some other manufacturer may put up another article—not of inferior quality, because I do not think that is touched on by this clause—in a similar package which he can afford to sell at a lower price, and that comes in competition with the old established article. I think in such a case this clause would have a very good effect. Where an article is well known and is sold by the package, without much analysis as to the weight, I think it is right and fair that nobody else should attempt to sell the same article in a similar sized package, and the Government should have the power to regulate the size of the package in which the article shall be sold. We regulate the weight of a barrel of flour. That is just as much an interference with trade, but we do it because the barrel is standardized and no one is allowed to sell, as a barrel, a less quantity than is prescribed. I think on the question of quantity rather than on quality the minister's argument is sound.

Mr. NESBITT: Might I point out to my hon. friend that we have already by this Act provided that the weight shall be put on the package so that the public shall not be deceived. Of course we regulate the weight of a bag of potatoes or a barrel of flour and many other things which are sold by the barrel or bag, but that is a different thing entirely. This clause deals with articles sold by the package.

Mr. PEDLOW: I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Nesibtt). I think that paragraph (c) should be dropped entirely from the Bill. It is absolutely unnecessary. I speak from experience in matters of this kind. If a manufacturer has established a reputation for a certain article and another manufacturer comes along with an imitation in similar package, the first manufacturer has recourse against the other at law and can restrain him from interfering with his rights. This clause means that a manufacturer who produces a new article must come to Ottawa for instructions from the department as to the size of the package in which that article shall be put up, the colour of the label, and all such minor details which he would arrange in his own office to suit his own convenience and to secure the success of his product on the market. I think the committee would be well advised to eliminate this section entirely.

Mr. McMASTER: I would ask the minister to regard this clause exactly as it should be regarded. This is not paternal legislation; it is not even maternal legislation; it is, I think, grandmotherly legislation. It is absurd that a department of government should have the right to say to a manufacturer: "You shall not put up your product in a tin that will hold two pounds, but in one that will hold five pounds; you shall not put it up in a tin coloured red, but in one coloured blue or grey, or some neutral colour; and you shall make your label of such and such material." I would ask the minister seriously to realize that all this interferes with the principles of liberty which people should enjoy in carrying on their business in the way they should judge best so long as they do not interfere with the acquired rights of others. It is a well-known principle of law, with which the minister is no doubt much more familiar than I am, that restraint will be put upon the man who dishonestly endeavours to avail himself of the goodwill or reputation that attaches to the goods of a competitor, and we had better leave the well laid down principles of law to regulate this matter. I see no great objection to subsection "A" of the clause, but I would ask the minister to strike out subsections "B" and "C," for I cannot see that they serve any useful purpose. The explanation given by the minister just shows how unfortunate the exercise of the power in question may be. Let us suppose that there are two manufacturers making a breakfast food, and that the superior breakfast food is oatmeal, which has been put up in a certain package for many years. Some man comes forward with cream of wheat or some other fancy breakfast food and, according to the minister, if he puts it up in a package similar to that which has contained rolled oats he may be told by the department that he has no right to put up his product in this way because it is an inferior breakfast food. The public having been accustomed to buy rolled oats in a certain package, he must not attempt to put up his cream of wheat in the same way. Well, it seems to me that that is reducing legislation to an absurdity. People who realize that oatmeal is an excellent food will buy oatmeal and those who want cream of wheat should be allowed to buy this article, no matter in what package the manufacturer cares to put it up. If there is unfair competition, and an attempt is made by a manufacturer or merchant to pass off his goods as those of another, then the law will restrain him, and this is the principle which I think should apply in this matter. There is a tendency in legislation to try to meet with a special law every specific case that arises. I think this is a mistake. It cumbers our statutes, and justice between man and man is not attained by placing these meticulous enactments upon the statute book.

Mr. ROWELL: The illustration which my hon. friend has given emphasizes the importance of certain foodstuffs in which he is very much interested,——

Mr. McMASTER: Merely as a consumer.

Mr. ROWELL: —his interest being no doubt responsible for the vigour with which he discusses these questions; but it is entirely different from the illustration I gave to the House. I could not give a better illustration than that offered by the hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding), and it is just to prevent frauds in such cases as he has mentioned, and others of a similar character, that the legislation is designed. I am quite prepared to let the clause stand if it can be modified in any way that will protect the public against being misled. There is no desire to hamper business, the sole object being to protect the public. I move that the section stand.

Section stands.

On section 15—regulations by minister:

Mr. FIELDING: The minister is taking large powers to himself. I agree that it is necessary that regulations should be made to carry out the purposes of the Act, but these regulations should be proposed by the minister and have the approval of the Governor in Council.

Mr. ROWELL: Probably it is wiser to put it in that form, and I therefore move to substitute for the word "minister" the words "Governor in Council."

Mr. FIELDING: "The minister, with the approval of the Governor in Council," would do.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: It comes to the same thing.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Why not consolidate this with the previous section?

Mr. ROWELL: I am not sure that some of the details in connection with this section need be published in the Gazette. I prefer to leave the two sections separate. I move that "Governor in Council" be substituted for the word "minister" in the first line of section 15.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. McMASTER: What interpretation does the minister place upon these words: "or otherwise given assistance leading to conviction in the case in question"? If the minister proposes to give half the fine to a witness who testifies, I object to that, as an unfortunate provision. I can understand that the informer should get half the fine. That is an encouragement which is given to informers but which is offset by public disapproval of this brand of gentry. But persons who "otherwise have given assistence" may, under this clause, get half the fine. If that refers to the lawyer who might conduct the prosecution in such a case I would have no harsh words to say to the minister, but I should not like this provision to extend to witnesses, who should be indemnified and not rewarded.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend will see that this is to be covered by regulations which will define the conditions. Of course, it is not intended to give to a witness any compensation that would be improper, but it is necessary, in the adequate administration of the law, that advantage should be taken of information furnished, and where you give a portion of the fine it is an inducement in many cases for people to give information that may lead to prosecution under the Act. The information might come from more than one source. There might be different provisions in regard to the information furnished or the assistance given. That would all be covered by suitable regulations. I do not think there is any danger in that clause.

Mr. McMASTER: With the explanation of the minister before us I do not see any necessity for the words "or otherwise given assistance." The minister takes power with the consent of the Governor in Council to make regulations prescribing that a portion of the fine may go to the informer or to the person who has given information. I have no objection to that, but I cannot see how any one else but the witness and the lawyers would give assistance to obtain a conviction.

Mr. ROWELL: I have no objection to limiting it to "any person who has given information leading to conviction in the case in question," striking out the words "or otherwise given assistance." I therefore beg to move to strike out the words "or otherwise given assistance."

Mr. McKENZIE: I have never come across any criminal proceedings or law cases like this. The minister can find abundant cases where half the fine goes to the informer, but I never saw any legislation going farther than that. That in itself is going as far as it should. We do not want any more informers. I think that provision should be struck out altogether. The question has to be determined by the magistrate who tries the case. If the Act says that half the fines shall go to the informer, it must mean the man who lays the information. There is no difficulty about that, but there may be three or four other people who come before the court and say that they are the people who gave the information that led to the conviction. There are only two halves, and if the court says that half of the fine shall go to the informer there will be no half to go to these other people. This sort of legislation is not very commendable, but when it says that half of the fine shall go to any person who gives information that leads to securing a conviction, it is going to cause a great deal of trouble.

Mr. ROWELL: I have already intimated that I shall be content to move that the words "or otherwise given assistance" shall be stricken out. They were put in for the reason that it was thought they would be of benefit, but I am not going to press the point. Let me give an illustration which has just been given to me from the officer administering the Act. Information comes to the department that a person professing to manufacture a certain commodity is in receipt of large quantities of another material which may be used as an adulterant. That is information upon which an investigation may be proceeded with. It may be that all the informant knows is that the commodity has been shipped in. That does lend assistance to the department in securing a conviction. That is what was in the mind of the officials of the department in suggesting these words. It is not direct information; it is only information with regard to a fact that puts the department in a position to make inquiry; they follow it up and subsequently discover the main offence for which the man is prosecuted.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is that not ususally provided for by some sort of a secret service fund? It should not be provided for by the court. Whether the minister knows it or not, there is such a fund, and moneys of that kind are being paid out from time to time for the enforcement of Acts.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: It would furnish a great fund of criticism for an Opposition.

Mr. McKENZIE: We furnish a great fund of information to the Government, and it is information which they seem to require. If there is any division of the fine to be made, that division must be made by the magistrate. It cannot be made by anybody else. It cannot be divided afterwards by the officer of the department; he has no jurisdiction. The magistrate must say in his conviction where the fine should go and this legislation must be such that the court enforcing it must know what is intended and what disposition shall be made of the fine.

Mr. ROWELL: These words "or otherwise given assistance" are to be stricken out.

Mr. PEDLOW: Before the section is passed, there is another point that I would like some information on. Section 15, says: "Provided that no portion of any fine shall be paid to any Dominion analyst or to any inspector." Does that include inspectors appointed by the council of a city or other municipality? Do they come under that rule as well as the inspectors of the department in Ottawa?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes; they do not get the benefit of that division of the fine. Section 11 provides in case of municipal inspectors that the fine in every case goes to the municipality to be used as the municipality may direct. Subsection 4 says:

> All penalties imposed and recovered at the suit of any such inspector, shall be paid into the revenue of the city, county, town or village by the council of which such inspector was appointed, and may be used in such manner as the council of such city, county, town or village may direct.

They may themselves provide that a portion may go to their own employee, but in so far as this legislation is concerned we provide that the fine imposed as the result of a prosecution by a municipal inspector shall be paid to the municipality to be disbursed by themselves as they see fit.

Mr. HAROLD: I have a letter from a condensing company and they have the impression that it will not be legal for them to sell skim milk even if they mark the packages as skim milk. I would like to have that question cleared up if it is possible at this juncture.

Mr. ROWELL: I do not know of anything in the Act which would prevent selling skim milk as skim milk.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: They must describe it as such.

Mr. ROWELL: They must describe it as skim milk. If they sold it as milk without describing it as skim milk they would be guilty of violating the law.

Mr. HAROLD: Would they be permitted to sell it in the event of their describing it as skim milk?

Mr. ROWELL: I do not know of anything in the law that would prevent them.

Section as amended agreed to.

At six o'clock the House resumed and then took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed in Committee consideration of Bill No. 27 respecting Food and Drugs.

On section 16—sale of adulterated or misbranded article, penalty.

Mr. CAHILL: Will the minister explain the provisions to this clause?

Mr. ROWELL: The clause does not differ in any material respect, from the provisions in the existing law, as I now recall them, except that it makes a difference in the penalty for an adulteration injurious to health—adulteration in which some poisonous substance or some substance deleterious to health is introduced into the food product—and for other violations of the law. Hon. members will see that the penalty is increased. The penalty is a fine not exceeding $500 and costs, and not less than $50 and costs, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment, if the adulteration is injurious to health. If the adulteration is not injurious to health but still an adulteration within the meaning of the Act, or if the article is misbranded, then the penalty for the first offence is a fine not exceeding $100 and costs and not less than $25 and costs, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months. Then, for each subsequent offence the penalty is made the same as in case of an adulteration injurious to health.

Mr. PARENT: Who is going to benefit by the fine?

Mr. ROWELL: If the fine is the result of a prosecution instituted by the Government inspectors themselves, it goes to the revenue of Canada, unless in the cases expressly provided for, where it is as a result of information given that a conviction is secured. Then provision may be made for one-half of the fine going to the party who gives the information. If the conviction is the result of a prosecution instituted by a municipal inspector—an inspector appointed by a municipality in connection with the administration of the Act—then the whole fine goes to the municipality to be disposed of as it may direct.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I would like to point out to the minister that the clause as drafted seems to be very far-reaching indeed. Under it, if I am right, a merchant would be liable to a fine of $250 and costs, or imprisonment, simply for exposing in his window an article that happened to be adulterated whether he knew it to be such or not. There may be a provision elsewhere in the Bill which modifies the clause but as it stands it looks frightfully drastic.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend will see that clause 17 modifies the one we are discussing. The former reads as follows:

> If the person accused proves to the magistrate before whom any prosecution is brought for selling, offering or exposing for sale any article of food or drug that is adulterated or misbranded, that he purchased the article in question for and as an article of the same nature, substance and quality as that demanded of him by the purchaser or inspector, with a written warranty to that effect, and produces the said warranty, or other evidence satisfactory to the magistrate, at the trial, and also prove that he sold it in the same state as that in which he purchased it and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained knowledge of its adulteration or misbranding, he shall be discharged from such prosecution—

And so on. So far as the point raised by my hon. friend is concerned, the provision is the same as it has been for many years. In fact, section 17 is designed to make it a little easier for the innocent party than is the case under the existing law. I should think that in practice very few would secure a warranty with the article when they bought it; under the provision as it stands the person accused must not only secure the warranty but must produce it to the justice trying the case. I should think it would be quite sufficient if he established to the satisfaction of the justice that he bought it as of the kind and quality described in the section; and that he should not be required to have procured a warranty at the time he actually purchased it. When we come to section 17, I intend to propose an amendment to this effect.

Mr. BOYS: When is the notice referred to in subsection 1 of section 17 given? If it is given on the day of the hearing, it would then be too late to obviate the expense of prosecution, and I assume that that is the purpose of that part of the section. It seems to me that if a man is absolutely innocent he should not be called upon to pay any costs. There should be a provision in the section that if the person accused establishes his innocence at the first sitting of the court he should not be held responsible for the payment of costs incurred by the prosecutor.

Mr. ROWELL: The section contemplates not only that the person accused shall give notice of intention to rely upon the defence referred to, but, in subsection 2, that he shall bring before the court the party from whom he purchased the article. The object is that the person who is really responsible shall pay the penalty.

Section agreed to.

On section 17—want of knowledge:

Mr. ROWELL: I move to amend section 17 by striking out the following words:

> With a written warranty to that effect, and produces the said warranty, or other evidence satisfactory to the magistrate, at the trial.

Then the only obligation resting upon the accused will be to satisfy the magistrate that he purchased the article bona fide in the manner provided in the section and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained knowledge of its adulteration, or misbranding; and that he must bring before the court the party from whom he purchased it.

Mr. PARENT: If prosecutions are taken without good reason, it is only fair that the costs should be borne, not by the accused, but by the prosecutor. If the person accused proves to the satisfaction of the magistrate that he has not been guilty of negligence he should not be liable to the payment of costs.

Mr. BOYS: The first day of the hearing is the first opportunity that the defendant has of giving the notice required; and if he does not give it then and proves his innocence, under this clause he is liable for the payment of costs. That should not be so. It should be provided that if the accused brings the matter to the attention of the court at the first hearing and establishes his innocence, he should not be responsible for costs. Of course, if he fails to bring it to the attention of the court at the first hearing, I agree, he should be responsible for the costs, even if the case against him is dismissed.

Mr. ROWELL: Reading the latter part of subsection 1 with subsection 2, the net result is that he may give the notice at any time before the case is disposed of and the third party is brought in. My interpretation of it is that he would not be liable to the costs if he gave the notice and brought in the third party at any time before the court disposed of the case.

Mr. PARENT: In view of what the minister has said. I assume that he would not object to adding to the section a provision that the magistrate shall decide also the question of costs. The minister's interpretation may be all right, but the interpretation of the judge might be quite different.

Mr. ROWELL: I have not the least objection to inserting the words " including the question of costs " after the words "merits of the case," in subsection 2.

Mr. BOYS: As it stands now the provision might lead to serious injustice, although not involving a very large sum. Let us assume that the defendant is in the police court on this first hearing and that, by his own evidence and by that of his vendor, he establishes to the satisfaction of the magistrate that he is not guilty. The case should then and there be dismissed, but as he has given no previous notice whatever, according to the words in lines 29 and 30, he is liable to pay the costs incurred by the prosecutor. If the case then stood adjourned, not as to him, or even as to him, and came up another day, counsel might well argue that he had given notice on a previous occasion that he would rely on the clause, and the defendant should not be held responsible for the costs. But cases which are as clear as that will be disposed of at the first hearing and the costs should not be imposed on the defendant. I do not see how subsection 2 affects the matter in any degree whatever. It gives power to bring in the third party, but the third party is brought in only when it is perfectly manifest that the defendant is not responsible and the case as regards the defendant is at an end. Therefore, something should be inserted to make it clear that if the defendant gives that notice at the first hearing at which he appears he should not have to pay costs, or at all events, there should be a provision that the magistrate should be enabled, even at a later date than the first hearing, to relieve him of costs if he is innocent.

Mr. ROWELL: One of the objects of this clause is undoubtedly to offer some inducement to the man who is being proceeded against to bring in the party really responsible for the wrong, so that the defendant does not become relieved of the costs if he has actually violated the laws unless he does two things; first, unless he gives notice that he intends relying on this defence; second, unless he brings, or takes proceedings to bring before the court the party primarily responsible for committing the wrong. If any accused claims the benefit of this section and applies to have a summons issued to bring before the court the party who, he says, is really responsible for the wrong, the magistrate could not then dispose of the case in the first instance, but would adjourn the hearing until he had all parties before the court and would then deal with it under subsection 2. That would seem to be the logical method of dealing with the case.

Mr. BOYS: That is undesirable, because it simply means bringing all the witnesses back to another sitting of the court and piling on more expense. If an innocent party appears before the court and establishes his innocence, he should not be brought back except as a witness for the prosecution.

Mr. ROWELL: Under section 34 of the old Act, which corresponds with subsection 1, the defendant must procure at the time he purchases a certificate as to the quality in the form prescribed in the schedule. My hon. friend will see that the clause as now proposed is a greater protection to the innocent man, that is, innocent in the sense that he acted without knowledge.

Mr. BOYS: I would suggest that the words:

> Unless he gives notice in court that he will rely on the above defence and calls—

Be substituted for the words:

Unless he has given due notice to him that he will rely on the above defence and has called—

Then, when he is in the court room, his counsel will intimate to the court that he is claiming the provisions of this section and that he has with him or undertakes to call the party from whom he purchased. In that event everybody is protected, and an innocent person cannot be called upon to pay costs or to submit to a second appearance in court with the consequent expense.

Mr. ROWELL: I move that the clause be amended to read:

Unless he has given notice to him or gives notice to the court that he will rely on the above defence and has called or calls the party from whom he purchased the said article into the case as hereinafter provided.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is there any procedure provided in the Bill for the bringing in of the third party? Third party procedure is well known to the Supreme and County Courts, but it is entirely new, at least I never heard of it, in a magistrate's court.

Mr. ROWELL: That is provided in subsection (2). So far as the third party is concerned we are not changing the law in any respect from what it has been for many years. It is quite true, as my hon. friend says, that bringing in a third party is not a common practice in proceedings of this kind, although it is quite common in civil proceedings, but just to meet the class of case we have been discussing this afternoon and evening provision has been made in the Act respecting the adulteration of food and in this Bill for bringing in the person whom the accused declares to be the party from whom he purchased the goods, so that the magistrate may hear all the parties and determine who is responsible. Subsection (2) provides that a summons may issue to bring the third party before a court.

Mr. McKENZIE: But a magistrate has no power to issue a summons except upon a duly laid information. Who is going to lay the information in this case? A magistrate has no jurisdiction to institute criminal proceedings except upon a duly laid information, and if proceedings are not instituted in that way they will not stand at all.

Mr. ROWELL: I appreciate the importance of what my hon. friend has in mind, but if he will look at subsection (2) he will see that the process as against the third party is initiated upon the sworn declaration of the vendor; that is, the man who is charged with the violation of the law must first make a sworn declaration before the magistrate that he purchased the article in good faith and as provided in subsection (1). Upon that sworn declaration the magistrate issues a summons to a third party calling him into the case. When the summons issues and the third party is brought in subsection (2) provides the magistrate shall "at the same time hear all the parties and decide upon the entire merits of the case not only as regards the person originally accused, but also as regards the third party so brought into the case." I do not think that so far any trouble has arisen as to the magistrate's jurisdiction under this section, and it has been the law for a great many years.

Mr. McKENZIE: Does the minister say that the Act provides that upon the sworn declaration of the accused the magistrate shall have jurisdiction to issue the summons?

Mr. ROWELL: That is what I understand the Act to mean. It is not set out in so many words.

Mr. McKENZIE: But the magistrate must have jurisdiction.

Mr. ROWELL: I think this gives him jurisdiction. So far as I am aware, his jurisdiction has never been questioned under this clause and it has been in force a great many years. There is nobody else who can issue the summons except the magistrate.

Mr. McKENZIE: But at common law, and by all the decisions of courts—the books are full of it—the magistrate can only issue a process upon a duly laid information. That is the basis of his jurisdiction. He cannot of his own motion institute proceedings. Suppose a man refused to come to court and that a warrant issues and he is put in gaol. He is brought up under habeas corpus or certiorari and the court would hold that the magistrate had no jurisdiction unless an information of a criminal character has been laid against the man, and the whole thing would go up in smoke.

Mr. BOYS: I think the point raised by my hon. friend is well worthy of the minister's consideration. It seems to me that this is in direct contrast to the practice of the criminal courts. You will observe that the declaration is not in the nature of an information, but it is the sworn statement of the defendant in the case, given on his own behalf, to clear himself from the charge made against him. Upon that a summons is issued. What would the summons be for? Not to answer a distinct charge laid against the third party. It would be issued in the only case pending, namely, against the defendant who gives this evidence and makes the declaration. It is true that this third party might attend and be put in the witness box, not as a defendant or as a witness in a case against himself, but as a witness in the case against the original defendant, and he might claim the protection of the law and refuse to answer on the ground of incrimination. It seems to me that as against the third party the procedure should be very much the same as in liquor cases. A man charged with being drunk is called upon to state where he got his liquor. He gives that evidence, and then a fresh information is immediately laid against the party from whom he got the liquor, and a fresh case is commenced. I think my hon. friend (Mr. McKenzie) is quite right: There should be another information laid against the third party, who should be called, not as a witness, but as a defendant in a case against himself. I do not know what the practice has been in the past so far as this is concerned, but I have had some little experience in criminal law and I never heard of such a thing before. It seems to me it requires careful consideration before such a far-reaching change is made in the existing criminal law .

Mr. ROWELL: I confess I am not quite able to follow the view of my hon. friend on this section. I should think it is quite clear that the third party is not called there as a witness, but as a third party in the case, and that he becomes a party to the proceedings. The procedure is not dissimilar, if one may so state it, to the procedure in civil cases where a third party comes in. In a civil case, if a third party is brought in, he is brought in at the instance of the defendant, who must file his claim over as against the third party. This section provides that he must file a sworn declaration. That declaration must set out that he purchased the goods from this third party, that he purchased them in good faith, that he purchased them as an article of the same nature, substance and quality as that demanded of him by the informant, and that he sold the article in the same state as that in which he purchased it. Therefore, he sets out in the sworn declaration the facts which constitute an offence under the Act. That declaration, I would submit, would be in substance an information of an offence committed under the terms of the Act. Upon that the magistrate issues a summons, not to bring the third party there as a witness, but, as the section provides, to call such third party into the case." He thereby becomes a party to the proceedings. Then the magistrate "shall at the same time hear all the parties and decide upon the entire merits of the case, not only as regards the person originally accused, but also as regards the third party so brought into the case." It would be an adjudication just as we have under the third party procedure in civil cases. I shall discuss the matter further with the Department of Justice, and in the meantime let the matter stand.

Mr. ROSS: If a manufacturer in Quebec sold foodstuffs to a retailer in Ontario and the retailer were prosecuted, how could an order of a magistrate in Ontario be enforced against the manufacturer in Quebec?

Mr. ROWELL: He could be brought before the magistrate in Ontario upon a warrant backed by a magistrate in his own province, as in the case of information laid under the criminal code.

Mr. ROSS: This is not under the criminal code.

Mr. ROWELL: This is a Dominion statute applicable to all provinces. However, I am prepared to discuss the matter further with the department. I agree that there should be no uncertainty regarding the law in dealing with matters that are criminal or quasi-criminal in character, and if there is ambiguity it should be cleared up.

Mr. BOYS: As I read the section, the sworn declaration is really in the nature of an information, and it becomes the duty of the defendant to lay that information. If this "sworn declaration" were made "information," the magistrate on the strength of the information could issue a summons and the same end would be attained.

Mr. McKENZIE: My hon. friend will find laid down in part 15 of the criminal code the provision that before any magistrate can make any criminal motion against a person there must be information.

Mr. ROWELL: I move that section 17 stand.

Motion agreed to: section 17 stands.

On section 18—no certiorari.

Mr. McKENZIE: I hope the minister will withdraw this section.

Mr. BOYS: Does the minister not think it proper to give the appeal in this case to the divisional courts? In most summary conviction cases there is an appeal, in Ontario at least, to a divisional court. The appeal is heard within two or three weeks of the sitting of the police court, and at a very trifling expense. In view of the fact that the fines imposed in this Act run up to as high as $500 it seems to me that there should be some protection against conviction by a justice of the peace in the country, who very often has not very much experience in matters of this kind.

Mr. McKENZIE: This seems to be a crude way of getting clear of the defects contained in section 17. The minister provides an absolutely bad procedure in section 17, and then says you cannot review it.

Mr. ROWELL: I move that section 18 stand.

Motion agreed to: section 18 stands.

On section 19—voluntary payments.

Mr. PARENT: Will any part of the amount voluntarily paid under this section be given to the prosecutor?

Mr. ROWELL: The amount voluntarily paid to the minister will be dealt with "as if lawfully recovered upon prosecution," and that I think would permit of a portion of it being paid to the informant. This does not go as far as the old Act, which provided that, upon examination being made, and the sample being found to be adulterated, the minister might exercise his discretion and simply require the party to pay the cost of procuring and analysing the sample, and not proceed further. We have not continued that provision, but have provided for voluntary payment of the fine which would be imposed, the expense of prosecution in court being obviated.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Is there any section of the Bill which pre-supposes a payment of that kind or makes provision for it?

Mr. ROWELL: The old clause provided, as the present Act does, for taking a sample for analysis, the result of such analysis to be communicated to the party. It then goes on to say:

> The Minister may at his discretion cause the result of the analysis to be communicated to the vendor and require him to pay the party specified in the second schedule of this Act for the cost of procuring and analysing said sample. And should such vendor refuse or neglect to do so, the minister may then cause legal proceedings to be taken against him as hereinafter provided.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

The only penalty you might impose at the discretion of the minister would be the penalty of paying the cost of procuring and analysing the sample. If he did not choose to pay that voluntarily a prosecution might be instituted under the Act. It appeared to the officers administering the department that that was not a very satisfactory provision. If a person is to be let off without a prosecution he should pay the penalty which the law provides, but if the party comes forward and is prepared to pay the fine the minister should not be compelled to prosecute him before the court in order to recover it.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The old law, under which cases had to come before the courts in the first instance, would give greater protection to the accused than this law, would it not?

Mr. ROWELL: No, the old law did not require them to proceed in the manner I have mentioned. An offender might be prosecuted in the first instance, but it gave discretion to the minister to make him pay the cost of procuring and analysing a sample. Under the present Bill the minister may permit him to pay the fine voluntarily without going through any procedure in court.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: If the offender pays the penalty under this clause is he still liable to prosecution in court?

Mr. ROWELL: No.

Mr. McKENZIE: This is a new departure and I think it is a discretion that the officers of the department would do well to avoid altogether. A man comes to court and pleads guilty; a fine is imposed upon him; and that is the end of it. An officer of the Government can state in court the degree of leniency they want to extend to the offender. But it is rather objectionable that the minister should exercise this power in place of the magistrate.

Mr. ROWELL: I am quite prepared to admit that there is a good deal in what my hon. friend has said. I hesitated about the section for the very reason that he has mentioned, but in a case of adulteration the party pays the penalty which the law imposes, and this simply gives power to receive it and deal with it as in a case of conviction. It is for the House to say. I am not disposed to press it. I understand that this is done under the Customs law and is not a new departure. A similar law was administered by the Department of Inland Revenue before, and I am not aware that any difficulty has arisen under it.

9 p.m.

Mr. McKENZIE: There is provision here for a second offence, but if a fine of this kind has been paid to the minister it cannot be regarded as a first conviction and there cannot be a second offence. A second offence means that a man has been convicted, that he is brought up a second time for the same offence, and the record of the court shows that he has already been convicted. The fact that a man had paid a fine would not constitute a record of conviction and a man could never be convicted of a second offence under a procedure of this kind.

Mr. ROWELL: It is quite true that it would not constitute an offence which would lay the basis for a proceeding in a second offence. The three penalty sections might stand and I will give them further consideration.

Section allowed to stand.

On section 20—refusal of access:

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Is that similar to the old law?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, it is practically the same.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The clause is very far-reaching. It would make liable to this penalty any person who had some food or drug in his possession and did not happen to show it when the inspector came. He might have his store full of these commodities, and if he omitted to show every one of them he would be liable.

Mr. ROWELL: It is necessary to make it pretty broad to afford full opportunity for inspection.

Mr. FOURNIER: Why should this clause pass? With all the inspectors that we shall have in cities, towns and municipalities, a retailer would require to have a man whose special duty it would be to show the inspector around. All that the inspector requires to do is to procure a sample and have it analysed to see whether the article is adulterated or not. I do not see why an inspector should be shown around and given access to everything in the store. It is practically impossible. This is an imposition; it is not legislation.

Mr. ROWELL: It is the law as it stands on the statute book now.

Mr. McKENZIE: Why should not the words "or omits" be left out? I understand the purport of the section is that a man is guilty of an offence if he in any way obstructs the officer or keeps him from seeing anything that is in the shop. If the inspector is given full access to the shop, why should it be made criminal if the shopkeeper omits to call his attention to something that he has not specially asked to see? Why not leave out the words "or omits"? Those words in the section, which throw the burden upon the shopkeeper to take the inspector around, should be left out. If the shopkeeper affords full opportunity to the inspector to examine everything in the store that is all that should be asked.

Mr. ROWELL: The clause in that respect is exactly the same as the law that has been in existence for a very long time. No difficulty has arisen in connection with its administration, no charge of any unfairness has been made, and the law having so far worked satisfactorily, I submit we would not be well advised to change it at the present time.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Would it not be well to amend the clause so as to make it apply to any person who "knowingly or intentionally omits," etc. That would be a protection and yet would not deprive the provision of any value that it has.

Section agreed to.

On section 21—possession of materials by manufacturer usable for adulteration.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Is this the same provision as in the old Act?

Mr. ROWELL: The principle is the same but the proposed section is somewhat broader. In the case of intoxicating liquors the present section provides that if any ingredients for adulteration are found in the case then the results mentioned follow. The new section makes the application general both as to food and drink covered by the Act. I will give the committee a concrete illustration of why this section has been broadened. On one occasion the officers of the department went to a certain establishment where, it was suspected, adulteration was taking place. They found a large amount of butter on one side of the room and a large amount of oleomargarine on the other with a mixer in between. What was intended was quite obvious, but not finding the actual adulteration there was no offence under the law. If parties have adulterants on the premises for which they cannot satisfactorily account then they will be held to be in the business of producing adulterated products. That is the object of the section.

Section agreed to.

On section 22—false label or neglect to label.

Mr. JACOBS: I would like to know whether the provision in the first part of the section applies to the owner or to the servant or to both.

Mr. ROWELL: If the employee knowingly attaches a misleading label or mark to any article or package of food or drugs, and thus is a party to deceiving the public, he, as well as the owner, is guilty of the offence.

Mr. JACOBS: A twelve or thirteen-year old boy, in receipt of three or four dollars a week, who is ordered to do this work, would come under this provision of the section.

Mr. ROWELL: I should think that in such a case the boy would not be prosecuted but the owner would. It is not possible to provide for all possible exceptions without weakening the general effect of the law.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: This clause contains the word "knowingly" which I suggested might be inserted in the previous clause. My hon. friend from Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) then asked the minister how he would prove "knowingly." I would like to pass the question on to the minister.

Mr. ROWELL: Let me give an actual case that occurred in the administration of the law, because it shows the purpose of the section. A man was selling a syrup not made of maple syrup but with a device attached showing maple trees with the spiles in them, with the object of making the purchaser think he was buying maple syrup when such was not the case.

Mr. McMASTER: Such a case as that should be severely dealt with.

Mr. ROWELL: In such a case as mentioned no one could doubt that the device was knowingly attached to the container.

Section agreed to.

On section 23—expenses, counsel fees.

Mr. McKENZIE: The subsection as to fees in this clause should be omitted.

Mr. ROWELL: The section in that respect is exactly the same as the existing law. I am free to say that I was surprised when I came across that provision in the law, but it has been the law for a long time. Then, section 47 of the existing law provides for the expenses of prosecution, including the usual counsel fee, in the discretion of the judge. It is also a provision of the present law that if a prosecution is dismissed as being instituted without reasonable and proper cause, the costs of the defence shall be taxed against the prosecutor. If we include the provision regarding counsel fee, I think we should include also this provision for the payment of costs by the prosecutor who is held to have had no just ground for believing that there had been a violation of the law. I therefore move that the following be added to section 23 as subsection (3):

(3) In the case of a private prosecutor, if the prosecution is dismissed as being instituted without reasonable and probable cause, the costs of defence shall be taxed against the prosecutor.

Mr. McKENZIE: Ninety-five per cent of the magistrates in this country have not the slightest conception of what a counsel fee is; yet they are asked to say what shall be a reasonable counsel fee. If the Government engages counsel to prosecute these cases, they themselves ought to pay counsel; that has been the practice all along in every branch of the administration of justice, customs and inland revenue. I certainly did not know that there was such a provision anywhere as this. I hope that the minister will leave counsel fees, briefs and all such things as these to the Superior Courts, where there are competent authorities to deal with them.

Mr. ROWELL: If we strike out that provision we add so much more to the expense of enforcing the law. My information is that the counsel fee is almost invariably included by the magistrate, though in some few cases the magistrate may refuse to fix or to include the fee. Generally speaking, a fee of about $20 is what is usually fixed by the magistrate in these contested cases. Most of the parties who are found guilty under the Adulteration Act have substantial means and can afford to pay this cost of administration; we are anxious not to add to the burdens of the public treasury in enforcing the law.

Mr. JACOBS: Why not state that the fee shall be $20, no more and no less? "Reasonable fee" is a somewhat equivocal term.

Mr. ROWELL: No complaints have been received against the provisions of the old law, and no difficulties have so far arisen in its administration. Perhaps it would be wiser to leave it as it is.

Mr. BOYS: There are too many of these enactments which enable a magistrate to award costs against the defendant when the prosecution is unsuccessful. I have never yet seen the case where a defendant who has had to employ counsel and pay his own witness fees has been able to get any costs awarded against those who brought him there without proper cause. My idea would be to leave the question of counsel fees and costs, except ordinary police court costs, entirely out. But if you make provision concerning them, then if the prosecution is successful let them get costs, and if the defendant is successful let him get costs. Let the costs on both sides be taxable on the same scale.

Amendment agreed to, and section as amended agreed to.

On section 24—other remedies:

Mr. McKENZIE: Where is an offence under this Act made a criminal offence?

Mr. ROWELL: This section simply provides that if a party is liable to a prosecution by way of indictment, proceedings under this Act do not prevent prosecution by way of indictment being taken. One can imagine that several provisions of the Code might be violated by parties violating the provisions of this measure, although I have not any in mind at present. In other words, acts on their part that are offences under this legislation might also be offences under the Code. This clause is simply the re-enactment of the existing section 21 of the present Act.

Mr. JACOBS: I assume that when a party has been proceeded against under this legislation, he cannot afterwards be indicted for the same offence, but clause 24 seems to make that possible.

Mr. ROWELL: I should have thought if a man were proceeded against under this legislation and paid the penalty, he would not be liable to prosecution under the Code for the same offence. We are providing a special procedure for dealing with a certain class of offences, and but for this provision it might be argued that having made express provision for dealing with a certain class of offences, we have thereby taken them out of the purview of the Code. I take it that this clause is intended to make clear that such is not the case and that a man may be proceeded against under the Code notwithstanding the provisions of this legislation. I should think, however, that on the general principles of criminal jurisprudence, you could not prosecute a man twice for the same offence.

Section agreed to.

On section 26—repeal.

Mr. McKENZIE: I notice that in several parts of this measure provision is made for a second offence, but I find no procedure established for obtaining a conviction for a second offence. I think I am safe in saying that in the ordinary proceedings before a magistrate's court there is no provision for obtaining a conviction for a second offence. There is such in temperance legislation. The minister might consult with the Department of Justice as to how he purposes proceeding in proving a second offence.

Mr. ROWELL: I shall take that into consideration.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The minister referred to one or two clauses in the old Act which have not been incorporated in this new legislation. Have any other material clauses in the old Act been omitted from this, and, if so, what is their nature?

Mr. ROWELL: I think I explained to my hon. friend that clauses relating to agricultural fertilizers, proprietary and patent medicines, honey, maple products, commercial feeding stuffs and normal animal feed such as bran, shorts and middlings, have been dealt with in separate Acts. There are certain commodities referred to in the Act, the use of turpentine in paint, white lead for paints, white lead in oil for paint, Paris green as an insecticide, and arsenate of lead as an insecticide, which are dealt with only in a very meagre way, and we are now giving consideration to the question whether it is necessary to introduce a Bill dealing with these or whether we shall suggest that the legislation relating to them is no longer required. I shall be glad to make a statement as to that when the Bill comes back into committee again.

Progress reported.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT AMENDMENT.

On motion of Hon. C. C. Ballantyne (Minister of Marine and Fisheries), Bill No. 21, to amend the Canada Shipping Act (Certificates of Service), was read the second time, and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 1—requirements for certificates of service as masters and mates:

Mr. McKENZIE: How many schools for the training of masters and mates are there in Canada, where are they located, and how many masters and mates passed the requisite examination within the last year? I should like the minister to give us some idea of what is being done in this connection. Is an effort being made to get properly qualified masters and mates without taking extreme measures?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: We have a number of schools throughout Canada, but, I am sorry I cannot give the exact number at the moment, nor can I say how many masters and mates have been granted certificates within the past year. I can only repeat what I stated when the resolution was under discussion, that a real shortage of masters and mates for sailing vessels not over 750 tons does exist, and that during the war I had to take the necessary authority under the War Measures Act to remedy the situation. The shortage still exists.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is it not a fact that in connection with the School of Technology at Halifax there is a branch for the training of masters, mates, engineers and so forth? Has the minister any record of what is being done at that school in this respect?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The hon. member is quite right, there is a school at Halifax; there are others at Quebec, Kingston, and different centres throughout the country. I have not with me the figures as to the number of masters and mates who have qualified, but the object of this Bill is to supply the shortage.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is it the intention of the minister that the test or examination shall be conducted by a shipmaster, or by some proper authority apart from the minister himself? If so, what machinery is provided for the proper examination of masters and mates so that they can obtain the certificate provided for under this proposed legislation?

Mr. BALLANTYNE: The man who wishes to become master or mate of a sailing vessel must have served on a sailing ship for twelve months at some time during the past ten years. He has to appear before the examiners of masters and mates, and pass an oral examination on the rules of the road. He must be able to take observations, read signals, and must know all that is required of any one desiring to become certificated either as master or mate. The only difference between this examination and the one for a competency certificate is that in the latter case the man takes a written examination, and in this case the examination is oral. I think my hon. friend will agree that many excellent men who could not pass a written examination have the necessary training and technical knowledge to pass an oral examination. We are not lowering the standard at all, inasmuch as this is limited to sailing vessels not over 750 tons.

Mr. McKENZIE: The minister says that among the qualifications required is ability to take observations and ascertain his position at sea, his latitude and longitude, and the amount of leeway his vessel may have made during the night, or in a storm, or from currents. I can find no such provision in the Bill. It does not provide that he shall be able to work out chronometer time for instance, or be able to work the sextants and locate the position of the ship. If an examination of that kind must be passed, much of my objection to the Bill will vanish, but I can find no such provision here. I think it would be an extraordinary thing for this House solemnly to legislate that a man can take charge of a 750-ton ship with a crew and valuable cargo, who, if he struck a storm or a spell of bad weather, would be absolutely unable to ascertain where he was. If that is the kind of men we are willing to see take charge of our ships, the House must take the responsibility. If the minister says that they must possess this necessary knowledge I should like to see it clearly stated in the Bill.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: Section 85 provides that the man must produce "satisfactory evidence of his sobriety, experience, ability and general good conduct on board ship; and (c) passes the sight-test and the prescribed examination in signalling." He must also understand signalling and be able to find his position. He must know the rules of the road and everything that a mate or captain would need to know. The examination is along the usual lines. I am only asking that the Shipping Act be brought, not up to date, but from 1870 up to ten years prior to 1920. I can assure my hon. friend that no master or mate will be certificated unless he possesses the necessary navigation knowledge and technical skill.

Mr. McKENZIE: I do not think that any person who has a fair knowledge of the working of a ship and of nautical matters can complain that the requirements to-day are too strict. It is not a very difficult matter to pass the examination prescribed. If it is not the purpose of this Bill to make it still easier, and to open the door to men to take charge of ships who could not take charge of them under the present law, it seems to me it has no purpose at all. I take it for granted that the purpose of this legislation is to lower the qualifications required, and to open the door wide to almost any person to take charge of a ship. A ship of 750 tons is quite a craft, and will have quite a number of men on board. It is not necessarily a schooner, rigged vessel; it may be a square-rigged vessel. The minister will readily understand that there is quite a difference in the working of the two. The handling of a square-rigged vessel, a barque, a barquantine, a brig or brigantine, requires very different handling from a schooner-rigged vessel. The man must know how to set the yards and sails, and send his men aloft on the yards. So far as I can see, this Bill makes no provision for requiring that knowledge before a man can obtain a certificate. Perhaps the minister has in his mind some examination, but I think it is always best and safest for the public to have these things in the Bill when the legislation is being put through the House.

I regret that the minister should take the view that he is bringing this Act up to date by making it possible for a man who served a year on board a vessel ten years ago to obtain a certificate. I have already explained as well as I could why this provision was in the old Act. Formerly a large number of men made their living by going to sea when we had no examinations; and when the Act was passed it was thought hard that such men, although they had no technical education nor book learning, should be thrown out of employment. Provision was therefore made that if they could show that they had done the work and were able to do it they would be given an opportunity to obtain service certificates. It must be remembered that a service certificate is different from the certificate which a man gets by virtue of examination, and now that the law has been in force for a number of years any man who contemplates being a captain should be prepared to comply with that law and give adequate proof of his knowledge. The same justification for service certificates does not exist to-day as existed when the law was first introduced thirty or forty years ago. I protest against this proposal, and I have shown the minister that I am not alone in my opposition to it. The Association of Shipmasters of British Columbia, as well as the Association of the Maritime Provinces, through their president at Halifax, have sent me telegrams protesting against this matter, which I have communicated to the minister. I regret that I do not seem to receive much sympathy in this House in this respect. The shipmaster's profession has always been regarded as an excellent one, but now that profession is to be degraded, and hardly any qualification will be required of a man who wants to take charge of a ship. Any person may command a vessel who has been for a year on board of any sort of craft, no matter of what description; he can come before the minister and obtain a certificate to be the master of a ship of 750 tons. I have already brought to the notice of the minister the fact that certain requirements in our own Act provide for the approval of the Board of Trade in England before our certificates are of any value. This very question has been before Canadian conferences in England, and if the minister will consult an ex-minister who is now a Judge of the Supreme Court he will learn that that gentleman had this question under consideration and endeavoured to obtain from the home authorities full power for this Parliament to abrogate the jurisdiction which the British Parliament has over our legislation in regard to shipping, but that power has never been obtained. Nevertheless we are ignoring the jurisdiction of the British Parliament and taking the whole business into our own hands. There is nothing in the British North America Act giving us control over shipping. We started out in Confederation with the Shipping Act of 1854, and we also had the British Shipping Act of 1894 with its amendments practically all of which applies to this country. However, the minister chooses to go on in his own way and send men across the Atlantic with certificates of the kind to which I have raised such strong objection, and under the British Shipping Act I rather think that these men will get themselves into trouble. Many years ago I discussed this matter with Hon. Mr. Brodeur, who was then Minister of Marine and Fisheries and is now a Judge of the Supreme Court, and on his authority I can inform the House that he had this very question under consideration with the British Government. The question is not settled. If the minister elects to ignore this fact and all the other circumstances to which I have alluded he does so on his own responsibility.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I think my hon. friend (Mr. McKenzie) is putting the case a little too strongly when he says that any man who goes to sea for a year is allowed, under this Act, to take charge of a ship. I do not understand the Act in this way. The Act provides that any man who has acted as master of a ship for a year will be qualified, which is very different from the interpretation of my hon. friend. He must have become a master by some means or other, possibly by permission of the department; but it is necessary that he shall have had one year's experience as a master before he can be qualified. This is a certain amount of experience and ought to weigh with the department. I have not much sympathy with the idea that we should be controlled in our shipping laws by the dictates of Downing street. This is purely a domestic matter. We are discussing the qualifications of captains on Canadian ships belonging to Canadian citizens and registered in Canadian ports, and I do not thnk that the home government should have anything at all to do with such an exclusively Canadian matter. There are certain questions in regard to shipping that refer to the trade of the Empire, matters in which the Board of Trade in England is interested. One case that occurs to my mind just now is the deckload law. I was in the House some years ago when an attempt was made to change the law in regard to deckloads in the lumber trade. The old law permitted a ship to load with, I think, three feet of deckload. The ships after this law was passed were built to contain two decks, and the construction of the law was that this three feet was on the lower deck, so that the shipowner had to leave the rest of the lower deck empty. It was a hardship for Canadian shipowners and merchants shipping lumber, and it took some years to get the matter adjusted. The Board of Trade in England claimed that they had some interest in the matter and that it conflicted with the terms of the Merchants Shipping Act, but then finally gave their consent to an amendment of the law, so that the three feet of deckload could be put on the top deck and not on the second. I do not think we ought to ask the British Government anything about a question of this kind. This is a Canadian question pure and simple. I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. McKenzie) that men ought to be encouraged to pass examinations.

I would like to see a captain carrying his regular certificate issued by a Canadian board or by the Minister of Marine. That would be an ideal system. But captains are very scarce at the present time on the coasts of Canada and it is with great difficulty that captains are found to man the ships we have. Ships have increased largely during the war but the same increase did not take place in the number of certificated men. No later than this morning I received a telegram from a gentleman who has built a ship of 300 or 400 tons in my constituency and who is in trouble about a captain; it is impossible for him to get a captain to take that ship to sea. The ship is ready. He has a competent man who has had twenty years experience as the master of a small vessel —a vessel so small that he did not need under our laws to take out a certificate; consequently he has not the necessary certificate to take charge of this larger vessel. Yet, he is a good enough man, the owner knows he is good enough, and the people who are insuring the ship are quite satisfied with him. Why should he not be allowed to take that vessel to sea? The owner ought to be the best judge as to his competency. I do not think that the danger to the crew amounts to very much in the case of a man who has had that much experience and who is a careful seaman.

My hon. friend knows as well as I do that for many years we did not have certificates at all in Nova Scotia, yet we built up a great mercantile fleet prior to Confederation and something was done in that direction after Confederation. It was experience we trusted and it worked out very well. There is a great deal to be said in favour of that system. The United States came to that conclusion many years ago. They had the same experience and the same development as we have had here. A large number of coasting vessels were built on the coasts of the United States. Seamen were scarce and the Government of the United States, a good many years ago, made a law similar to the one which my hon. friend is now trying to pass providing that ships of less than 700 tons did not require to have certificated captains. That is the law at present in the United States, and it is with the United States that we are competing. There is much to be said in favour of the Bill. I feel inclined to vote for it. I do not see the same danger from it that my hon. friend from North Cape Breton (Mr. McKenzie) seems to see. I think the Bill will be found to be very useful to the trade on the coasts of eastern Canada at all events and I do not think there is very much danger in taking this step, especially as it has already been taken in the United States and our ships in business in South America and the West Indies have to compete with the United States.

Mr. BALLANTYNE: In answer to the hon. member for North Cape Breton (Mr. McKenzie), I would say again that no master or mate can get a certificate simply by reason of having served twelve months on a sailing ship during the last ten years. All have to serve for twelve months and if a man wishes to become the master of a sailing ship not larger than 750 tons he has to appear before an examining board of masters and mates and pass an examination which is much more rigid than that prior to 1870. Prior to 1870, they did not call upon a man who desired to be a master or mate to go through the eye or signalling test. A man can only obtain a service certificate as a captain or a mate if he passes the rigid examination which is prescribed. I find in the memorandum which is before me now that the Masters and Mates Act has always provided for the issuing of service certificates to masters and mates. Under sections 95, 96 and 97 of the Canada Shipping Act a master or mate is properly certificated if he holds a service certificate. Under this Act upwards of 4,800 masters' and mates' certificates have been issued. With all due deference to one of my predecessors, Hon. Mr. Brodeur, I am sorry that I cannot agree with him. With regard to a man holding a masters certificate and going to a United Kingdom port on a vessel not over 750 tons, the master of a Canadian registered vessel is granted clearance from a port of the United Kingdom if he holds a service certificate just the same as if he held a competency certificate. There will be no trouble about a Canadian captain holding a service certificate clearing from any United Kingdom port. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) has pointed out quite truly that our American friends do not ask for any certificates whatever for a master or mate on a sailing ship up to 750 tons. We have to compete with our neighbours to the south and as we are much more careful than they are, for our men have to pass the examination that I have referred to besides sailing for twelve months on a sailing ship; whereas, across the line a man can go abroad one of these vessels as master without any service at all. The British Board of Trade issue masters service certificates without examination to certain officers of the Royal Navy. I think that this House is quite within its rights in granting these certificates to men who have the necessary knowledge and pass the necessary oral examination.

Mr. McKENZIE: If the minister is right that we can branch out for ourselves entirely and make our own navigation laws without any reference to the rules of the road or to British jurisdiction, why not do it? Why not introduce an Act and dispense entirely with any knowledge of the rules

10 p.m. of the road? We cannot, and why not? We cannot do it because of the conference of the maritime countries of the world which have agreed to the rules of the road. These rules of the road are binding on the British Empire of which we are a part and we cannot change them. That is the law that guides us and we cannot change one letter of it. The minister says in one breath that we are absolutely independent of the British marine law and in the next that we must comply with it. He puts in here a provision with reference to the rules of the road. What rules of the road? We have no rules. If we do not come within the British rules of the road and within the British Act we cannot sail ships. We have only one flag. The Canadian flag is not recognized as a shipping flag. Every Canadian ship, no matter where it goes, must have the British flag, there is no other flag of ours that is recognized.

I have received from Vancouver a telegram which it is my duty to read. It is dated 22nd March, is addressed to myself, and is as follows:

> We strongly endorse your stand and support statements attributed to you on Bill proposing inferior certificates Canadian masters and mates.
>
> Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

I have also received a message from Halifax to the following effect:

> Representing the certificated masters and mates of Maritime Provinces strongly protest against Bill granting certificates master and mate sail ships seven hundred fifty tons without duly qualifying. Canadian seagoing certificates recognized in all British ships and possessions. Therefore must equal standard British Board of Trade. Coastwise and lower grades accessible to any man capable of having charge of life and property and standard low enough. Bill gross injustice and should be thrown out or hoisted. If passed will ruin the profession. Shortage of masters exaggerated, and if any primarily due to acting present Government granting permits.
>
> A. W. INNIS, President,
> Shipmasters' Association.

We have only two ocean fronts in this country, one on the Pacific and the other on the Atlantic. On both ocean fronts they have a Masters' Association, and both of these associations protest against this legislation as degrading their profession. All I can do is to bring these communications to the attention of the minister; but if he happens to have some influence brought to bear upon him by people who have ships and who care nothing for the crew of the vessels, care nothing for anything except to make dollars for themselves, and care not whether their masters are qualified or not—if he is influenced by such men, the responsibility is his. That is not my language, that is the language of the Halifax Board, who say that if any person wants to look properly for a qualified master and will give him a proper wage, they can get him, but they cannot secure a first-class master for second-rate pay. The minister seems to be very strong in his conception of the law. I would like him, however, to explain to the Committee and to the country generally the meaning of section 95 of our present Shipping Act, which is chapter 13 of the Revised Statutes, volume 3. As I read that Act, it requires that our legislation shall be approved by the home Government. If that is correct, I still stand by my position that the certificate which we grant—unless the King in Council of Great Britain approves it under the terms of the Shipping Act of 1894—has no effect at all. If this section of our own Act means anything else, I would like the minister to explain it.

Mr. DUFF: I do not wish to discuss with the hon. gentleman (Mr. McKenzie) any point of law, but I notice that in the telegram which he read from Captain Innis that officer does not agree with the hon. gentleman's interpretation of Clause 95 of the Canada Shipping Act. You may have noticed, Sir, that part of that telegram said that Canadian certificates were acknowledged all over the world, practically admitting they were as good as any other certificate. Therefore, the hon. gentleman and the President of the Ship Masters' Association of Nova Scotia are not in agreement as to the meaning of Clause 95 of the Canadian Shipping Act.

My reading of the law is that there are three kinds of certificates which can be issued under Clause 95. For example paragraph (a):

> Of competency or service for seagoing ships appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade from the minister;

That is to say, if I read the subsection correctly, that the Minister of Marine can issue a certificate of competency of service without any reference whatever to the British Board of Trade or the British Government.

Now paragraph (b):

[Mr. McKenzie.]

> Of competency or service for seagoing ships, appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade, from the Board of Trade in the United Kingdom.

That is to say, if I understand the wording of the paragraph, that the Minister of Marine can issue a certificate of competency and it is sent to the Board of Trade in England for confirmation or approval. Therefore, I think, under this Act the minister is perfectly within his rights in issuing certificates of competency with respect to seagoing ships in this country without consulting the Board of Trade or the Government in England.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. McKenzie) also said that at a conference held some time ago of the different nations, rules of the road were agreed on, and consequently we can have nothing to do with the matter. The reason rules of the road were agreed upon by the different nations was, for example, this: A French ship coming into the St. Lawrence river might meet a British or a German ship going out, and it would be necessary for the two ships to know the rules of the road. That is the reason why the rules of the road are international. It has nothing at all to do with the issuance of certificates to masters and mates, and does not affect our position as to whether we can issue the certificates in Canada or not.

I might also say that the British Board of Trade are not as particular as they were a few years ago. They are waking up to to the fact that it is not necessary for a man to have a certificate to sail a ship. A few years ago when Canadian ships, or ships from any other nation, went to Great Britain, the British customs officer would not clear them unless they had a certificated master. I have known a number of cases where a ship from the British Dominions that went into Liverpool or Cardiff, or other ports, had to get an English master to clear the ship, and they put him ashore when the pilot went off the boat.

Last summer a number of masters who were not certificated had charge of Canadian ships which cleared from Canadian ports, and in my opinion these masters were just as good as the certificated men. They took the ships to England, and the British authorities cleared the ships back with the same men on board without even asking them if they had a certificate. The British Board of Trade, therefore, realize that it is not necessary in all cases that these men have certificates. I am just as anxious as the member for North Cape Breton and Victoria (Mr. McKenzie) that masters and mates who have charge of our ships should have certificates. I should be the last to suggest that we should not endeavour whereever possible to make our men get certificates. But I do say that under present regulations it is practically impossible for an ordinary man to pass the examination. I was pleased to hear the member for North Cape Breton refer to the calling of the seamen as a "profession." I will certainly pass that word around when I get home; I will tell my seafaring friends that they are now in a class with lawyers, doctors, clergymen and men of other professions; and they will be proud indeed to hear it.

Mr. McMASTER: How about the officers?

Mr. DUFF: Well, with them it is not a profession; it is a response to the call of the sea. It would require not only a Philadelphia lawyer but a sea lawyer to pass the examination which is prescribed. I cannot take time to read the regulations; they are contained in a book of seventy-four pages. But under the present Act a master has to write a paper on navigation and nautical astronomy, the time occupied in writing the paper to be three hours. If you can imagine an ordinary sea captain or a man who has been going to sea in the forecastle, the second mate or boatswain of a ship, sitting down and writing a paper on navigation and nautical astronomy for three hours, I cannot. The thing cannot be done, except in a very few cases. Then, he has to write a paper on nautical astronomy and trigonometry in two hours; on chart work in three hours; on compass deviation in an hour and a half, and on naval architecture in an hour and a half; and he has to write an essay in two hours. Imagine an old salt, with his hands full of rheumatism, perhaps, sitting down with a pen in his hand and writing an essay for two hours! I say that this examination is altogether too heavy and that only one man in a hundred can pass it. I know that because I have encouraged a number of men to go to Halifax under Captain Simmons, or to Yarmouth under Captain Murphy, and try the examinations, and in a number of cases the men were plucked; they were unable to pass.

As to the matter of safety, not only is the master capable who, without a certificate takes charge of a three or four hundred ton vessel; I have known a number of cases where the mate, who had no certificate, took charge of the vessel in the case of the master's illness or death or absence from some other cause. Practically every man who goes to sea can bring a ship to port if necessary. We have read of cases where the captain and mate have been murdered or lost overboard and a common sailor has taken charge of the ship and brought her to port. It is not hard to learn navigation and to be able to take the sun or a chronometer sight. The member for North Cape Breton talks about risking men's lives. Really I cannot understand why he speaks in that way, because there is nothing in it.

With regard to wages, these men are the best paid men in the country. They get far better wages than are paid on the Government Merchant Marine or than are paid in the Marine Department or the Naval Department. So that it is not because we want to get uncertificated men at a smaller wage that we are trying to get this Bill through. If the Marine Department were to shut down to-morrow and not allow a ship to clear from a Canadian port unless there was a certificated master or mate on board, eighty per cent of the ships sailing out of Canadian ports to-day would be tied up at the dock or lying at anchor.

The member for North Cape Breton quoted telegrams from some guild in Vancouver and also from a gentleman who signs himself as president of the Shipmasters' Association at Halifax. I do not know anything about the Vancouver end of it, but I do know something about the Halifax end. This gentleman who signs himself as "President of the Shipmasters' Association" is a bit of a poet; he has given up responding to the call of the sea and possibly thinks that he will be the poet laureate of Canada. I hold in my hand a book of poems which this gentleman wrote during the war, and I am going to read one just to show that he is an experienced and capable man.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. May I ask the hon. member whether the poem which he proposes to read has any reference to the Bill under consideration?

Mr. DUFF: I think it has.

Mr. FIELDING: Is it a poem of the sea?

Mr. DUFF: Yes.

Mr. FIELDING: Then it has reference to this Bill.

The CHAIRMAN: I am very sorry, but I have to rule that the hon. member may not read the poem.

Mr. DUFF: It is worth reading, Mr. Chairman. I would like you to hear it.

The CHAIRMAN: This is not the time or the place to read it. Shall the clause carry?

Mr. DUFF: Well, if I may not read the poetry I shall have to proceed in prose. My idea is that these gentlemen who compose the Halifax Shipmasters' Association need not stay ashore and send telegrams to Ottawa. If they are capable men and want ships, the owners in Nova Scotia will give them ships. If they stay ashore, it is their own fault.

Mr. PELLETIER: The member for North Cape Breton (Mr. McKenzie) read telegrams from British Columbia, Halifax and Prince Edward Island. It seems strange that these people should send these telegrams; they are well organized and are affiliated with national and international organizations. While in the province of Quebec during the Easter recess I met quite a few masters and mates who are also members of said organization, and they expressed themselves as willing to submit to the examination. If the masters and mates from other districts were opposed to this measure, I should think that the masters and mates from Quebec would also be opposed to it, but they are not. It seems to me that instead of lessening the efficiency of navigation, this measure would increase it. On the last day of the last session I opposed a Bill which had been introduced dealing with this subject on the ground that a man who was not certificated could take charge of a ship, even if he did not know the rules of the road. This Bill is quite different, it calls for efficiency; and I fail to see why it should not pass. In 1906, the Quebec pilots willingly submitted to an examination, and they are submitting to an annual examination for eyesight, hearing and so forth. If the masters and mates are not competent; if they are not holding certificates, what has happened in years past will happen in years to come. When an accident happens, an inquest is held, and, as has happened on different occasions, the captain or master in charge of the vessel who is responsible for the accident, will not be blamed because nothing can be done to him as he does not hold a certificate, but the pilot who is certificated will have to bear the burden. Therefore, I fail to see why this Bill is not a good one, and I believe it will assist in the securing of competent service. Sub-clause (c) states:

> Passes the sight test and the prescribed examination in signalling.

I would suggest that after the word "signalling" the words "and the rules of the road" be added. I believe these men should know the rules of the road as well as be able to pass the other tests.

[The Chairman.]

Mr. FIELDING: Was not exception taken at a previous stage to the words in sub-clause (b) of clause 85?—

> Produces satisfactory evidence of his sobriety, experience, ability and general good conduct on board ship.

I think some hon. member suggested that that implied that a man was perfectly at liberty to get drunk on shore so long as he behaved himself on board ship. There is justification for that criticism. The justification for this Bill must be found in the scarcity of certificated ship masters. All will agree that if we can get men fully qualified under the strictest provisions of the law, we should be glad to have them. If I were asked to state what is the chief product of my constituency, I would say shipmasters and seamen. At least that was the case in the palmy days of wooden shipbuilding in Nova Scotia when we built up that magnificent fleet of which my hon. friend (Mr. J. H. Sinclair) has often spoken in this House. Wherever you had a shipyard in full operation, you had a maritime spirit extending out into the country and the young men looking forward to engaging in the work of mariners, and there grew up in Nova Scotia a great race of people devoted to the maritime industry. No other community in Canada, and I doubt if any other community in any part of the British Empire has produced more seamen and shipmasters, in proportion to its population, than the constituency of Shelburne and Queen's. That was the chief business of the people. There came a time when shipbuilding practically ceased for many years. We have discussed the cause of that change in this House. I do not want to enter upon that aspect of the question; but there was a change; wooden shipbuilding ceased, and naturally enough there was a lack of employment and our young people no longer devoted themselves to the study of navigation. The consequence has been that of late years we have not produced the race of seamen that we did in former times. We have supplied shipmasters to a large part of the United States; many of the men to-day who command American vessels are Canadian shipmasters, Nova Scotians largely. In the progress of time our men have grown old. I believe if there were a supply of competent shipmasters available, I would hear that from my constituency, because that is the place where they breed them. We have many elderly gentlemen who have now retired and who would willingly take up some other occupation on land; but I do not know of any considerable number of young men along that shore who have the qualifications necessary to command vessels, and it is because I believe there is a scarcity of such men that I am going to support the minister in passing this Bill. Every hon. member will at once admit that if we have an abundance of men fully qualified under the severe laws that my hon. friend (Mr. Duff) has quoted, by all means we should use them; but if we have not these men, why do we not do the next best thing and get men who have certificates? My hon. friend (Mr. McKenzie) has pictured the evils that may come from sending out our ships with freight and even with passengers, although I do not believe these are passenger ships, without competent shipmasters. The shipowner is as anxious as anybody else for the protection of his ship, and so is the underwriter; under the existing laws, if there is no such scarcity as is alleged, then without doubt the shipowner and the underwriter will get the competent men and will not take the other men.

Mr. McKENZIE: I have repeatedly asked the minister to give the committee some explanation as to what is meant by the clause in our old law. I can understand the minister and his supporters ignoring the British law and saying: We have nothing to do with the British law and it has nothing to do with us; the shipping law in Great Britain is no good; we shall turn and have truck and trade with the Yankees. That is what we are going to do; we are going to accept their laws; we are going to lower the standard of the good old Mother Country who has been the pride of the sea for a thousand years. We are going to wipe that out and take the regulations under which a few old craft are sent out from Caplin and Gloucester as the standard of our shipping in Canada henceforth. Crystallized, that is the sum and substance of the logic of hon. gentlemen who are supporting this Bill. The minister refuses to give me any explanation of his understanding of sections 95 and 96. It is quite true that he changes two sections of the law which qualify his men; he makes it simple and easy for them to become masters. Has the minister ever come across a man to whom he would offer a certificate of competency in any walk of life and the man would say: I will not take it; I am going to school in order to qualify myself, and I will get the certificate according to law? I would think the man would be likely to take the certificate at once and take chances on making good. That is the doctrine the minister has established and is supporting here. He is saying to the men of this country: You need not go to school; you need not know anything about navigation; you need not qualify yourself as a first-class seaman. the pride of the British Empire; I will give you a parchment which is good enough. I should like the minister to explain whence the call for this change came. Did the Board of Trade of Quebec, or of Montreal, or of Halifax, or of Sydney, or of Vancouver, petition the Government asking for this change in the law? If there are such petitions, they should be laid on the Table or put upon Hansard so that we would have that information. So far the minister has not given one word of testimony from any of those institutions which I have mentioned, nor from any other body of men interested in navigation and trade in this country. If there are such demands, I should be disposed to think I am wrong in taking the position I take. The minister may provide a man with a certificate, but when he comes to sending him to sea he will find that section 95 of the Canada Shipping Act stands in the way. That section provides that:

> No ship registered in Canada, over one hundred tons registered tonnage, shall go to sea from any port or place in Canada on any voyage not being a coasting voyage, unless the master and first mate or only mate thereof have obtained and possess valid certificates either,—
>
> (a) of competency or service for sea-going ships, appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade, from the minister; or,
>
> (b) of competency or service for sea-going ships, appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade, from the Board of Trade in the United Kingdom; or
>
> (c) of competency appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade, granted in any British possession—

Here is the part of the Act which the distinguished marine lawyer who now happens to be at the head of the department ignores entirely. He thinks no attention should be paid to the opinion of a Supreme Court judge who says this law is absolutely wrong; he knows better. It is simply an extension of his doctrine about shipmasters; it is not necessary for them to know anything, he thinks, and so why should it be necessary for a lawyer to have any training? He says: I never had any training as a lawyer but I put my opinion above that of even a Supreme Court judge. A knowledge of the law is all nonsense—that is the position he takes. Section 95 provides that, in addition to the qualifications I have just quoted, there must be added a certificate:

(c) of competency appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade, granted in any British possession, and declared by order of His Majesty in Council, published in the London Gazette, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, or of any Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom containing such provisions, to be of the same force as certificates of competency for foreign sea-going ships granted under the Acts of the Parliament of the United Kingdom relating to merchant shipping.

To get a certificate in the United Kingdom certain requirements have to be met, certain knowledge must be possessed by the candidate, and an examination must be passed. The minister says: I will issue certificates which do not come up to the British standard at all; my requirements will be lower, but at the same time I shall expect the Board of Trade and His Majesty in Council to say that they are of just as high a standard as the certificates issued in Great Britain. If the minister can get His Majesty in Council to do so, that is another matter, but from my knowledge of how things are done in Great Britain I would think that the first thing His Majesty's advisers would do would be to ascertain what are the qualifications required under this new Act and compare them with the qualifications required under the British Act, and then they would advise His Majesty not to give his assent to a proposal that would be a deception upon the face of it. The qualifications required would not be the same.

That is all I care to say about the matter. I still stand by the position I took before, that in education as well as in other matters, we should be advancing not retrograding in this country. The minister will find when he puts his policy before the people and they see that he is undermining ambition and is taking away from young men the desire to qualify for positions in this walk of life, and that in this he has made a mistake. We have a navigation school in my own town, and I know of no one who tried examinations from that school who did not pass; but what encouragement have they to try and qualify themselves now when masters and mates are to be turned out by the minister by the yard, just as if he was measuring off pieces of cloth, without any educational requirements at all?

Section agreed to.

Bill reported.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CORPORATION OF OTTAWA.

On motion of Hon. J. D. Reid, Bill No. 22, to confirm an Agreement between His Majesty the King and the Corporation of the City of Ottawa was read a second time and the House went into Committee thereon. Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 1—agreement confirmed:

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: The minister in speaking to the resolution went pretty fully, I think, into the main features of the agreement, but there was some information he was to give, when the Bill got into committee, relating to the extent of the increased service the city was rendering the Government.

Mr. J. D. REID: The Government have been taking over a lot of property in Ottawa during the last few years, and that means that the city has lost the taxes on those properties. That is one reason why we think there should be an increase in the amount paid to the city. Furthermore, the city are sprinkling water along Wellington street and in front of the Government buildings, and they furnish fire protection to any buildings owned or occupied by the Government. The city also sprinkles the parks and driveways that are maintained by the Ottawa Improvement Commission. All these things represent increased service. The $15,000 that was formerly paid was simply for fire protection alone. The city's claim, I think, is a very good one, because in the last few years we have been taking over a great deal of property on which the city have been collecting taxes. It is not really an increase that we are giving the city in view of the increased service they are rendering.

Mr. DuTREMBLAY: Is it the intention of the Government, when they take over property belonging to other cities, Montreal, for instance, to compensate the city for the taxes they lost?

Mr. J. D. REID: No, we have not been doing that. Ottawa is the seat of Government.

Mr. DuTREMBLAY: The Government does not pay any taxes on property it acquires in the city of Montreal.

Mr. J. D. REID: This is the seat of Government, and the buildings taken over are controlled by the Government.

Mr. DuTREMBLAY: If this principle applies in Ottawa, should it not apply in other cities?

Mr. J. D. REID: In that case we should have to adopt a general policy.

Mr. McKENZIE: What part of this agreement provides for the payment by the Dominion of Canada of taxes, or their equivalent, to the city of Ottawa?

Mr. J. D. REID: The Government does not pay taxes.

Mr. McKENZIE: The minister says that the Government pays something in lieu of taxes.

Mr. J. D. REID: The city in urging its claim for an increase put up the argument that the fire protection which it afforded the buildings of the Government necessitated a larger equipment.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is there anything to show that the Government recognized that as a sound reason for increasing the allowance to the city? It must be recognized as a good argument if the Government is increasing the amount paid to the city.

Mr. J. D. REID: The city claims that they are losing a lot of money by reason of our taking over certain properties. They say that the taxes on the Government property in the city of Ottawa would amount to $483,887. We are not settling for that, but we are allowing for fire protection, sprinkling of the streets and the use of sewerage, which is an important item. The city also estimated that the tax on civil servants would amount to about $60,000. Taking everything into consideration, the sub-committee that discussed the matter with the city council felt that the amount we are now allowing was reasonable.

Mr. McKENZIE: We are to pay more now than before the civil servants became assessable?

Mr. J. D. REID: We paid $15,000 a year, and the civil servants were exempt from income taxation by the city. Now we are paying $75,000, and the civil servants, like any other citizens, will be assessable.

Mr. McKENZIE: Now that the civil servants are being subjected to assessment it must mean a large income to the city of Ottawa. I am not objecting to this at all because a civil servant should pay his way like any other citizen. But we got along with a payment of $15,000 formerly, when civil servants were not contributing anything, and now that they are going to contribute to the income of the city we are raising the city's allowance to $75,000. I do not understand such business, nor can I see any reason whatever for it. We must have been robbing the city to a large extent in former years if it now appears to be necessary that we should increase their allowances by such a large amount. I think the committee requires the fullest possible explanation for this increase from $15,000 to $75,000.

Mr. J. D. REID: The city claimed that $15,000 was not by any means commensurate with the value of the services they rendered the Government, and I think myself that the Government were not paying adequately for those services. The fact of the Government having the use of the sewers was a matter of great consideration. We would have had to build sewers for all Government property, and the interest on that would amount to a large sum; and we would of course have to have our own fire protection equipment, with men to look after that property and be ready in case of fire, which would be an annual charge. Again, we would have to keep the streets in front of our own property properly watered. Taking everything into consideration we considered that the city was certainly losing a large amount of money annually, when it was paid only $15,000. As regards the civil servants, it was arranged many years ago that they should be exempt from income taxation, but we could see no reason why the Government should assume that liability in the city of Ottawa and not elsewhere. Civil servants in Ottawa should be put on the same basis as those in any other part of the Dominion so far as income taxation is concerned. I admit that the increase is a large one, but for many months the city refused to accept even it, and it was only latterly that they came to the conclusion that they would accept it for a term of five years. We thought that it should be for a term of ten years, but eventually we compromised and decided on five years. I do not know that in the increased amount the Government will be paying too much for the services which are rendered by the city.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I think the minister should point out that the Government is also increasing the grant to the Improvement Commission from $60,000 to $150,000.

Mr. J. D. REID: It was $100,000 and we are increasing it to $150,000.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: The Government are getting into the habit of wobbling on this question of the taxation of Dominion Government property. There are two positions to take. One is that we will pay taxes on our property throughout the Dominion and the other is that we will not pay any taxes on Dominion Government property to municipalities. We must live up to one or other of these positions. If we are going to pay the city of Ottawa something in lieu of taxation because it furnishes water and provides sewers, that must also apply to the town in which I live where the public buildings are also provided with drainage, fire protection, and other services. The same principle will apply to every town in Canada. The minister made a big mistake when he capitulated to some of the towns in Ontario in regard to the Grand Trunk. It has brought him trouble already. It has brought him an application from Halifax for a similar concession, and it will bring him applications from all over the Dominion. The country has always proceeded upon the basis that no taxation would be paid and it was so understood whenever a town or city got an expenditure made upon a public building. These public buildings are erected at vast expense to the Dominion, the people are glad to get them, and they have always been glad, until a very recent time, to free them from taxation. Now we are drifting in the wrong direction unless we intend to take the question up boldly and pay taxes all over the Dominion. I do not like to hear the minister say that he is giving this money in lieu of taxes because there are services such as fire protection and sewers provided by the city of Ottawa.

Mr. McKENZIE: There is an advance in one direction of $60,000 and in another of $50,000, making $110,000 of a jump in one year. I hope we will not ratify this contract because it is absolutely unreasonable. For years the city was satisfied with the bargains that we were making. They were getting a little more and a little more every year and things were going along very nicely. We found that there was a payment of $15,000 for one branch of the service. For sixteen years or more, while I was a member of this House, I never heard anybody in behalf of the city saying the thing was unreasonable or that they were not getting enough; it was rather we who were complaining that we were paying too much. Now we find that at one fell swoop when money is scarce we pay an additional lump sum for nothing except what we were getting before for much less. There seems to be no justification whatever for a position of that kind. What would the city of Ottawa be were it not for the public buildings and the Civil Service? They say they are not getting enough taxation out of the sites of public buildings. Take the Hunter building at the corner of Queen and O'Connor streets; that is a magnificent structure. It is full of civil servants who pay taxes. I am sure they would get more taxes from the civil servants, the ministers and their officers who are occupying that building than they could possibly get from the site upon which it stands. You have that magnificent structure full of officers, of excellent citizens, who are paying taxes, a source of revenue that they would not have if it were not for the fact that this is the seat of government. And yet the Government is told that it must pay a fine, or a license for the privilege of remaining in the city of Ottawa. I cannot get it in my mind that there is any logic or reason for the argument at all, and I have as yet heard none from the minister.

11 p.m.

Mr. J. D. REID: I understood the hon. gentleman to say that there is an advance of $100,000 and that we get nothing for it.

Mr. McKENZIE: Nothing but what we had before.

Mr. J. D. REID: Before, we were paying $100,000 to the Improvement Commission, and that amount was expended in beautifying and improving the city of Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion. Fifty thousand dollars of the amount that is being paid is for the Improvement Commission, making $150,000 to be devoted to that work; so that we are getting this increased expenditure for the purpose of beautifying the capital city. I think every hon. member will agree that the capital of the Dominion should be made as attractive as the capital of any other country. The hon. gentleman has asked: "What would the city of Ottawa be without the Parliament buildings"? The Mayor of Ottawa asks: "What would Parliament be without the city of Ottawa"? If we had not the city of Ottawa to make all these expenditures, would we not have to expend a large amount on sewers, waterworks, fire protection, hospitals for our employees, schools, street watering and police protection.

Mr. McMASTER: You have the Dominion Police?

Mr. J. D. REID: That is around our own buildings. There are large expenditures that the Government would otherwise have to make. Taking all these things into consideration I do not think the amount is unreasonable. When the discussion commenced, they wanted $80,000 and that did not take into consideration the Improvement Commission at all. We have cut that down to $75,000 and we are allowing $150,000 for improving the city which, I think hon. members will agree, is a good expenditure to be made in the capital.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Has the minister a statement of the assessed value of the Government property and the tax rate in the city of Ottawa?

Mr. J. D. REID: The taxable real estate in Ottawa was assessed in 1918, for taxation 1919, at $98,983,599.

Mr. FIELDING: Is that Government property?

Mr. REID: That is the assessment on the whole of the property in the city of Ottawa. The Government occupies real estate in Ottawa valued, after deducting the value of local Government institutions, at $21,158,190. The Government leases and occupies in addition premises assessed at $4,025,749, and therefore owns, or occupies on lease, about one-fifth of the real estate of the city.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Did the minister mention the amount the city estimates it lost through the exemption of civil servants from taxation on their incomes?

Mr. J. D. REID: I mentioned an amount in the neighbourhood of $60,000. When the City Council made their claim they estimated the amount at $57,175.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: That makes a total increase of about $170,000 over what was formerly given.

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE: Very valuable property in the city is rented by the Government, and I presume the owners of the property pay the taxes. The few buildings that the country owns in Ottawa should be exempt from taxation. In Halifax, which is not nearly as large as this city, there is far more Government property than there is in Ottawa. The amount of Government-owned property in Halifax, comprising the Fortifications and all the military works in the harbour, is immense, but not a cent of taxes is being paid on that property either to the city of Halifax or to the province of Nova Scotia. Taxes are being paid to the municipality of Ottawa upon Government property, but nobody from Halifax is asking for the payment of any taxes as far as I know.

Mr. FIELDING: There was a deputation here lately asking for the payment of taxes, and they are hoping that their demands will be met.

Mr. McKENZIE: I am not making any argument with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) about what may take place; the Lord only knows what may transpire with this Government, but so far no taxes have been paid to the city of Halifax although there are thousands of dollars' worth of Government property in that city to every thousand dollars' worth of Government-owned property in Ottawa. How can the Government reconcile its payment of taxes to the city of Ottawa when it has not paid a dollar to the city of Halifax? The Government have given out to the world that they are going to pay taxes on the Grand Trunk and Canadian National railway properties, and I suppose when the news went down to Halifax the municipal corporation there said: If the Government are getting so generous as to undertake to pay taxes everywhere, why should they not do so here? I really do not know how the Government can answer the city of Halifax and decline to pay taxes upon the millions of dollars' worth of property they own there while at the same time quite willing to pay taxes in Ottawa and also upon the Grand Trunk and other railway property. I think the principle should be adhered to that Crown property is not taxable.

Mr. J. D. REID: We are not giving this grant in the way of taxes. In the capitals of other countries, notably the United States, grants are made almost equivalent to what the Government's taxes would be in return for the benefits they enjoy, as well as towards improving the city. We get the benefits from the municipal corporation I have mentioned and the amount that we are paying, $75,000, certainly is not any too much. I would not like it to go out to the country that what we are paying is by way of taxes. The hon. gentleman has mentioned the Grand Trunk and the Canadian National railways. These lines have been operated by private companies and should continue to pay taxes when they are operated in competition with companies of that class.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: There is no date mentioned in the schedule, it is left blank. What is the reason of that?

Mr. J. D. REID: I was going to move to amend the agreement so that the date should be the 30th day of March, 1920, and adopt the same date in the schedule.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Are we to understand that the minister has already signed this agreement? If this is a concluded contract, what is the object of submitting the matter to Parliament?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes, I have signed the agreement, but I cannot pay out the money until it is voted by Parliament.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: There appears to be no clause in the contract which recognizes Parliment one way or the other. The minister should have inserted some provision making the agreement subject to approval by Parliament.

Mr. J. D. REID: The deputy minister tells me there is such a provision in the agreement. Yes, I notice it reads that payment is to be made quarterly when due "as soon as may be after the passing of the Act confirming this agreement."

The CHAIRMAN: It is in the first clause of the agreement.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: That has reference to the payment of the $75,000.

Mr. FIELDING: Does not the department pay for water supplied to public buildings in other places?

Mr. J. D. REID: Yes, in accordance with local rates.

Mr. FIELDING: But not taxes?

Mr. J. D. REID: No.

Schedule agreed to.

Bill reported.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill No. 40, respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway—Mr. Davis.

Bill No. 41, respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway—Mr. Nesbitt.

Bill No. 42, respecting the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company—Mr. Clements.

Bill No. 43, respecting the Kettle Valley Railway Company—Mr. Green.

Bill No. 44, respecting the Montreal Joliette and Transcontinental Junction Railway Company—Mr. Denis.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Rowell, the House adjourned at 11.16 p.m.

Wednesday, April 7, 1920.

The House met at Two o'clock.

REPORTS TABLED.

Annual report of the Editorial Committee on Government Publications, dated 1st March, 1920.—Rt. Hon. Sir George Foster.

Report of total costs and general expenses of the Victory Loan.—Rt. Hon. Mr. Sifton.

BANK ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. MARIE JOSEPH DEMERS (St. Johns and Iberville) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 47, to amend the Bank Act.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Explain.

Mr. DEMERS: The purport of this Bill is to fix a minimum rate of interest of four per cent to be paid by the banks on money deposited with them, there being a further provision that in computing the interest they shall take into account the whole time during which the money is on deposit.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

FRENCH PUBLICATION OF BLUE BOOKS.

Mr. DEMERS:

1. Have instructions been given to limit the French publication of public documents and blue books pertaining to the Dominion Government?
2. What blue books were published in 1919?
3. What public documents were published in both languages in 1919?
4. What public documents were published in one language only, and in what language were they published?

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. No instructions have been given to limit the French publication of public documents and blue books pertaining to the Dominion Government. The Editorial Committee exercises a supervision as to what and what numbers of books or documents, either French or English, should be published.

2, 3 and 4. These stand as an order for return.

NATURALIZATION — BELGIANS, FRENCH, TURKS, GERMANS.

Mr. DESLAURIERS:

1. Is it a fact that the Government has refused naturalization papers and the granting of title deeds of property to certain French and Belgians in Canada who, at the commencement of hostilities in the last Great War, had not completed the required five years of residential qualifications, but nevertheless proceeded overseas to join regiments of allied countries in the defense of the flag?

2. If so, to how many of such citizens of Canada have naturalization papers and property deeds been refused during the period extending from the 11th of November, 1918, to this date?

3. Is it a fact that on presentation of a certificate issued by the Secretary of State for Canada certain Turks, Germans and other subjects of enemy countries have been granted property rights and the rights of the franchise since the signing of the Armistice?

Rt. Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. A despatch from the Colonial Office, dated the 21st April, 1915, forwarded a note from the French Ambassador in London requesting that French citizens should not be naturalized during the war. By an Order in Council, dated the 3rd June, 1915, it was directed that in so far as the issue of certificates under the Naturalization Act, 1914, was concerned, the request of the French Ambassador would be acceded to. Similar requests were received from the Russian and Italian Governments. In these circumstances the Secretary of State, in his discretion, decided not to issue certificates of naturalization to allies during the war. However, since the ratification of the Treaty of Peace with Germany certificates of naturalization have been issued to all applicants who have complied with the conditions laid down by the Naturalization Act, 1919.

As to the granting of patent to homesteaders on Dominion lands who left Canada to serve in the forces of allied nations before they had completed the five years required for naturalization, it has been decided in such cases to allow patent to issue without demanding a certificate of naturalization, and in any case where a demand has been made for such certificate of naturalization steps are being taken to proceed with the issue of patent, provided the performance of duties in other respects have been proven in the usual way.

2. In so far as naturalization is concerned, the request of the Allied Powers was complied with.

As to refusal of property deeds, the Department of the Interior is able to trace one case only. It has now been ruled in this case that the issue of patent will not be withheld, provided proof is submitted that the settlement conditions have been fulfilled.

3. Certificates of naturalization have been granted to Turks of Syrian and Armenian origin since the Armistice, but no such certificates have been issued to persons of German origin.

As regards the issue of patents for homesteads, it may be stated that 10 George V, chapter 13, provides a means whereby alien homesteaders, who have completed their settlement duties, but who are debarred from naturalization for a period of ten years from the close of the war, may secure patents by showing that they are qualified for naturalization in all other respects.

BONAVENTURE COUNTY PENSIONERS.

Hon. Mr. MARCIL (Bonaventure):

1. How many residents of Bonaventure County are receiving pensions and allowances?

2. What are the names, place of residence and respective amounts received by said persons?

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER: With reference to this and kindred questions, the Board of Pension Commissioners are constituted according to an Act; they present their reports to Parliament and such information as they bring down will be given then. It would cause an infinity of trouble and expense to get this information now as to the names, place of residence and respective amount of pensions received by persons in all the different localities.

Question dropped.

MR. ELZEAR PICARD.

Mr. MARCILE (Bagot):

1. Has any demand been made to the Government by Elzear Picard, of St. Theodore d'Acton, on account of the death of his son, Prudent, during the month of October, 1918, while in military service?

2. If so, what is the amount?

Rt. Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. No information.

2. Answered by No. 1.

HEARST PUBLICATIONS.

*Mr. EDWARDS:

1. What are the names of the papers and magazines known as the Hearst Publications, which are allowed to circulate in Canada?

2. Is it the intention of the Government to exclude any or all of the Hearst publications from Canada? If so, when will such action be taken and in regard to what papers and magazines?

Rt. Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The Government has no record of the names of papers and magazines known as the Hearst publications which circulate in Canada. At the present time the Government has no legislative power sufficient to enable it to exclude the Hearst publications and magazines. The matter is now and has been engaging the attention of the Government.

ST. JOHN ARMOURY BUILDING.

Mr. LEGER:

1. How much did the Armoury Building at St. John, N.B., cost?
2. How much has it cost yearly for heat, light and upkeep of said building?
3. Is this large and expensive building occupied permanently? If so, by whom?
4. How much rent does the Government pay for the Jones Castle, so-called, Headquarters of Military District No. 7, at 132 Sydney street, St. John?
5. Is heating and lighting included in said rental?
6. If not, how much does heating and lighting for the said building cost the Department?
7. How much does rent, heating and lighting cost the Government each year for the following offices, the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission, 49 Canterbury street, St. John, N.B., the Discharged Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Employment Bureau, 49 Canterbury street, St. John, N.B., the Discharged Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, No. 94 Prince William street, the Discharged Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 76 Prince William street, and the Soldiers' Settlement Board, 160 Prince William street?

Rt. Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. $353,630.75.

2. The average yearly cost is as follows: Heat, $6,444.04; light, $1,606.10; water, $3,244.56.

3. (a) Yes. (b) Militia units—62nd Regiment; 3rd Regiment, C.G.A.; 7th Machine Gun Brigade; No. 7 Canadian Army Service Corps Company; Permanent Force Royal Canadian Army Service Corps Office and Stores; Royal Canadian Engineers Stores and Workshop; Permanent Force Recruiting Office. Miscellaneous—Casualty Company; District Medical Stores; District Stationery Depot; District Dental Clinic Offices and Stores; Caretaker's quarters.

4. $1,000 per annum.

5. No.

6. The average yearly cost for heating and lighting and heating is as follows: Heat. $878.26; light, $175.08.

7. (a) 49 Canterbury street:—An amount of $16.66 was paid by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment for rent of these premises for the month of May, 1919. It was only temporary accommodation occupied by the Information and Service Branch for this month. This branch took up their quarters in 160 Prince William street on June 1. (b) 94 Prince William street:—Rent, $175 per annum; heating and lighting, $108.30. (c) 76 Prince William street:—Rent, $900 per annum; heating, included in lease; lighting, $42. (d) 160 Prince William street:—Rent, $350 per annum; heating, no expenditure; lighting, $65.

[Sir George Foster.]

MR. J. L. McNICHOL.

*Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. Has Mr. J. L. McNichol been dismissed by the Board of Commerce?
2 If so, for what reason?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: In reference to this and kindred questions,—the Board of Commerce is constituted under an Act in which its authorities and duties are laid down. It is in effect a court of law, and the Government has no records of its particular proceedings. It makes a report according to law; that report is in course of preparation and will be before the House in about two weeks when, I imagine, most of the information that is asked for will be found therein.

Question dropped.

NEWSPRINT PAPER.

*Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. When and why was an embargo placed upon the importation of newsprint paper manufactured by some of the mills?
2. Has the Government received any communication, written or oral, from the State Department at Washington or from the Foreign Office in London in regard thereto?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I imagine this question is wrongly put and that the word "importation" should be "exportation." Perhaps, with the consent of the House, the question may be amended by substituting the word "exportation" for the word "importation," and the information will then be brought down.

Mr. SPEAKER: I will see that the change is made accordingly. I believe it is a clerical error.

Question stands.

CHARLEVOIX-MONTMORENCY COUNTY PENSIONERS.

*Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. How many residents of the County of Charlevoix-Montmorency are receiving pensions and allowances from the Government?
2. What are the names, place of residence and respective amounts received by said persons?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The same answer holds good for tnis question as the one I gave to a previous question of like import.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: When will the report be brought down?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I am not certain, but I will make inquiry.

Question dropped.

CANADIAN MILITARY EXPEDITION TO RUSSIA.

*Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. What has been the total cost of the Canadian Military Expedition to Russia?
2. How many officers and men were sent from Canada?
3. When did they leave and when did they return?
4. Were there any casualties?
5. If so, how many were killed and how many wounded?
6. How many died of disease?
7. How many are entitled to pensions?
8. What is the total amount of annual pensions?
9. How far from Vladivostok did the Canadian army penetrate into Russia?
10. By what authority was this expedition sent?
11. What became of the balance of supplies, ammunition, etc.?
12. Were these articles sold by auction or private sale?
13. Who were the purchasers?
14. What amount was realized by said sale and how was it paid?

Rt. Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. The total cost to Canada has been $2,823,960.98.

2. 4,214.

3. (a) Date and number embarking—11-10-18, 680; 17-11-18, 429; 27-11-18, 19; 21-12-18, 880; 26-12-18, 1,805; 10-1-19, 23; 30-1-19, 57; 12-2-19, 314; 27-3-19, 7; total 4,214.

(b) Date and number returning—9-4-19, 88; 5-5-19, 1,077; 21-5-19, 642; 29-5-19, 1,485; 21-6-19, 694; total 3,986; subsequent sailings, 61.

Remained in Siberia—Discharged in Siberia, 72; Imperial instructors, 33; British Military Mission, 26; resigned, 11; deserters, 4; deaths, 19; returned 16-11-19, 1; not accounted for, 1; total 4,214.

4. 19.

5. Accidentally killed, 3; wounded, none.

6. Died of disease, 16.

7. No information is available at present.

8. $3,036 payable to dependents of deceased soldiers. In this connection it should be noted that as there were no "wounded" casualties reported from the Canadian Expeditionary Force to Russia none of the personnel of that force would be entitled to pensions awarded by the Board of Pension Commissioners. It is, however, impossible to state at present whether pensions are being paid for other disabilities which members of that force might have incurred during their military service. Under the Board's present classification of disability pensions a distinction has been made between "theatre of war" and "non theatre" pensioners only, and "Russian" cases would come under the first mentioned category. To segregate the Russian pensionable disability cases (assuming that there are such) would involve the examination of some one hundred thousand files, which would require a considerable length of time to complete.

9. They did not leave Vladivostok district.

10. By Order in Council No. P.C. 1983, dated the 12th August, 1918.

11, 12, 13 and 14. The cost of all supplies, ammunition, etc., (except the initial issue of personal equipment and clothing for the Canadian personnel) was borne by the Imperial Government, which assumed responsibility for same upon shipment from Vancouver, and any balance remained in their hands.

ELECTION PLEDGES.

Mr. CAMPBELL:

1. Did the Prime Minister prior to the election of 1911 make a promise or pledge that if his party were successful in that election that he would have transferred to the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba the natural resources of these provinces?
2. If so, did this promise or pledge contain any stipulation or condition regarding terms under which such transfer should be made?
3. Has such promise or pledge been carried out?
4. If not, why not?
5. To carry out such promise or pledge, is parliamentary action necessary?
6. If so, will parliamentary action be taken at this session?
7. Is this promise or pledge being fulfilled "as soon as possible"?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The present Acting Prime Minister is not aware of what statements were made by the Prime Minister prior to the election of 1911, as asked for by this question. I think the question might be dropped, and if my hon. friend is very desirous of the information the question could again be put on the Order Paper when the Prime Minister is present.

Mr. McMASTER: At the Greek Kalends.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Oh no. Not quite so favourable as that to my hon. friend.

Mr. SPEAKER: The question might stand perhaps till the Prime Minister returns.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: It would get very old.

Question dropped.

BOARD OF COMMERCE PROSECUTIONS.

Mr. PREVOST:

1. Has the Board of Commerce taken charge of the accusations which were the object of criminal suits?
2. If so, what are those accusations, and what has happened to such suits?
3. Has the Board of Commerce taken charge of cases in which excess profits had to be given back?
4. If so, what are these cases, and has restitution been made?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The Government has no record in this matter. The same remarks also apply which I made in answer to the preceding question.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY COMPANY OF CANADA—ASSETS AND LIABILITIES OF SUBSIDIARY COMPANIES.

Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. What are the assets and liabilities of the Bay City Terminal Railway Company, one of the companies directly controlled by the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada?
2. What were the costs of operation and maintenance of said railway for the last year?
3. What is the yearly revenue of said railway?
4. Where is the Bay City Terminal Railway situated?
5. What is the length of this railway?

Hon. Mr. REID: The information asked for by this question and those immediately following up to and including No. 122 on to-days Order Paper will be the subject of investigation by the Board of Arbitration to be appointed under the Grand Trunk Acquisition Act of last session, and it is therefore not in the public interest that it be disclosed at the present time.

LEAF TOBACCO.

Mr. SEGUIN:

1. Is it the intention of the Government to change the law so as to prevent absolutely the sale of leaf tobacco to consumers, or to impose on leaf tobacco the same duties as on manufactured tobacco?
2. If so, before making such change is it the intention of the Government to call a convention of tobacco producers in order to take their advice in the matter?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. and 2. Any change to be made in duties on leaf or manufactured tobacco, will, in the ordinary course, be announced in the Budget speech of the Minister of Finance.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT STEAMSHIPS.

Mr. DUFF:

1. For what steel cargo steamships built under the Dominion Governments programme have settlements been made with the builders?
2. What was the finally ascertained deadweight capacity of each of such ships?
3. What was the contract price per deadweight ton for each of such ships?
4. What was the total amount paid for each of said ships?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. Canadian Voyageur, Canadian Pioneer, Canadian Warrior, Canadian Recruit, Canadian Trader, Canadian Sailor, Canadian Ranger, Canadian Seigneur, Canadian Adventurer, Canadian Spinner, Canadian Sower.

	D.W. Tons
2. Canadian Voyageur	4.575
Canadian Pioneer	8,408
Canadian Warrior	3,995
Canadian Recruit	3,964
Canadian Trader	3,341
Canadian Sailor	3,357
Canadian Ranger	8,382
Canadian Seigneur	8,391
Canadian Adventurer	3,408
Canadian Spinner	8,393
Canadian Sower	3,405

	Per Ton
3. Canadian Voyageur	$207.00
Canadian Pioneer	180.00
Canadian Warrior	205.00
Canadian Recruit	205.00
Canadian Trader	205.00
Canadian Sailor	205.00
Canadian Ranger	188.00
Canadian Seigneur	188.00
Canadian Adventurer	210.00
Canadian Spinner	188.00
Canadian Sower	210.00

4. Canadian Voyageur	$ 948,660.75
Canadian Pioneer	1,519,459.99
Canadian Warrior	819,385.58
Canadian Recruit	812,897.62
Canadian Trader	686,762.88
Canadian Sailor	690,409.84
Canadian Ranger	1,575,816.00
Canadian Seigneur	1,587,643.15
Canadian Adventurer	715,652.49
Canadian Spinner	1,589,700.00
Canadian Sower	715,649.13

NATURALIZATION.

IMPERIAL CITIZENSHIP.

Mr. EULER:

1. Do those citizens who obtained naturalization under authority of laws enacted prior to 1919, automatically obtain Imperial citizenship by virtue of the naturalization law of 1919?
2. If not, may the naturalization certificates issued prior to 1919 be exchanged by the holders for certificates issued under the Naturalization Act of 1919?
3. If so, is this right of exchange open to all citizens naturalized prior to 1919, without exception?
4. If there are exceptions, what are they?
5. Why are the exceptions made?

Right Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. No.

2. Persons naturalized prior to July 7, 1919, may be granted certificates of naturalization under section 6 of the Naturalization Act, 1919.

3. No.

4. Persons of a nationality prohibited from receiving certificates of naturalization under paragraph (b) subsection 4, section 8 of the Naturalization Act, 1919, are not granted certificates of naturalization under section 6 of the Naturalization Act, 1919.

5. These exceptions are within the discretion of the Secretary of State.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION STAFF.

Mr. FAFARD:

1. How many employees are there in the Civil Service Commission?
2. How many receive more than $2,000 yearly, and what are their names?
3. How much has this commission cost since its creation?
4. How much has it cost in 1919?
5. Does the Government intend to put into force the new classification? If so, when?
6. Is the Government satisfied with this classification?

Right Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. 145.

2. Six—William Foran, Charles H. Bland, Elsie E. Saunders, J. R. A. Baril, J. J. McCann, C. V. Putman.

3.

	Contingencies.	Civil Govt. Service.
1908-09 / 1909-10	$ 14,027 65	$ 16,647 77
1910-11	13,495 32	17,850 00
1911-12	14,223 70	22,062 28
1912-13	12,568 65	22,964 93
1913-14	14,613 32	24,225 00
1914-15	15,359 07	26,362 50
1915-16	15,323 65	26,646 40
1916-17	12,974 31	26,447 20
1917-18	13,552 79	30,372 65
1918-19	66,673 26	41,983 84
1919-20	116,594 68	60,015 42
	$309,406 40	$315,577 99	$624,984 39

4. $ 83,455 95 Contingencies.
54,638 55 Civil Govt. salaries.

$138,094 50 (Calendar Year, 1919.)

5. The Civil Service Amendment Act which authorized the classification became law November 10, 1919. It was put into operation forthwith.

6. So far as the classification has been completed it has been approved by the Government.

PAYMENTS TO MORRISON'S LIMITED.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough):

How much money has been paid by the Government to D. A. Morrison, or Morrison's Limited, Amherst, Nova Scotia, for the supply of goods to the military barracks and to the alien enemy internment or detention camp at Amherst?

Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

Justice Department.

Amount paid for supplies to internment camp at Amherst to Morrison's Limited, $64,098.26.

Militia and Defence Department.

The sum of $63,329.69 has been paid by the Department of Militia and Defence to Morrison's Limited, Amherst, and Morrison and Company, Amherst, for the supply of groceries and provisions.

Since the 4th May, 1915, all purchases have been made through War Purchasing Commission.

CANADIAN FREIGHT CARS IN THE UNITED STATES.

*Mr. ARCHAMBAULT:

In an answer from the Minister of Railways and Canals, given at page 331 of the Debates, it is said that on the first of March 1920, there were 59,716 Canadian cars in the United States: Of this total, how many belong (a) to the National Railways, (b) to the Canadian Pacific Railway, (c) to the Grand Trunk Railway, (d) to other Canadian Railways?

Hon. Mr. REID: (a) 10,840; (b) 15,482; (c) 21,028; (d) 12,366.

MONASTERY STATION FREIGHT TRAFFIC.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough):

What has been the amount of freight business done at the Railway Station of Monastery, Nova Scotia, in dollars and tons for each year during the last five years?

Hon. Mr. REID:

	Tons	Earnings
1915	1,333	$2,008.36
1916	2,252	3,056.39
1917	4,376	6,269.11
1918	5,730	9,675.00
1919	4,127	8,816.00
Total	11,818	$29,824.86

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY SERVICE.

Mr. CANNON:

1. Is it the intention of the Government to discontinue the service of the Intercolonial from River Ouelle station, on the main line, to the Wharf station? If so, why?

2. How many passengers were carried last year by the Intercolonial on this branch line?

3. What are the receipts on said line, those of Steamer Champlain included, during last year?

4. What quantity of freight was carried on said line last year?

Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. This line was previously operated to make connection with the steamer crossing the St. Lawrence river from Murray Bay, but was discontinued when boat was unable to make regular trips on account of ice conditions. Service was formerly required for people, living north of river, requiring to travel to and from Quebec, but these people now have direct train service with Quebec since operation of the Quebec and Saguenay Railway was commenced.

2. 8,230 passengers.

3. $14,006.51.

4. 3,936 tons.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—GATEKEEPERS' WAGES.

Mr. LEDUC:

1. What are the wages paid by the Canadian National Railway to the gatekeepers at the level crossings of the Grand Trunk Railway system in the Westmount St. Henry Division?

2. How much time are said men supposed to give for the wages paid to them?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The men are in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway and they advise that they are paid at the rate of 38c. per hour, and they work eight hours a day. The men work three shifts and are relieved one day per week.

2. Answered by No. 1.

FEDERAL EMERGENCY FUND FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

Mr. CHISHOLM:

1. What was the cost of administration of the Federal Emergency Fund for the re-establishment of the returned soldier up to March 1, 1920?

2. What was the cost per month?

3. What was the cost in each province?

Hon. Mr. SIFTON:

1. $81,084.16.

2. December, 1919, to January, 1920—$36,-032. The fund was in operation one week in December, 1919. February, 1920—$45,-052.16.

3. Prince Edward Island, $25.22, (incomplete); Nova Scotia, $1,120.10; New Brunswick, $1,239.42; Ontario, $20,163; Quebec, $20,009.67; Saskatchewan, $1,631.22, (incomplete); Manitoba, $4,454.35; Alberta, $16,-849.83; British Columbia, $15,418.99; Yukon, $172.25.

[Mr. Cannon.]

DOMINION'S ANNUAL FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS.

*Mr. TOBIN:

1. Is the Government in a position to state when it considers that it will be possible to pay the annual obligations of the Dominion upon all accounts out of the annual revenues of the Government without borrowing any further amounts by domestic or foreign loans?

2. If so, when?

3. If not, when will the Government be able to give this information?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. For the past fiscal year our revenue exceeds our annual obligations for usual purposes. The revenue for the twelve months ended March 31, 1920, that has reached the books of the Finance Department amounts to $380,832,507.75, while the expenditure for the same period (not including Capital and War) amounted to $340,880,668.25. This expenditure, however, includes war pensions, interest on war debt and expenditures on account of Soldiers' Land Settlement and Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. The total thus included amounts to approximately $188,000,000 and the liabilities thus discharged are attributable entirely to the war.

2 and 3. As to the future the subject will be dealt with in the Budget speech to the fullest possible extent.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS—UNITED STATES IMPORTATIONS.

Mr. COPP:

1. How much has been paid by the Canadian Government railways for goods, wares, merchandise and machinery imported from the United States and used in the operation of said railway between the 31st day of March, 1918, and the 31st of March, 1919?

2. How much coal has been purchased from the United States during the said period and how much was paid for same?

3. How much has been paid for material mentioned in questions one and two imported from the United States and used in operation of said railway since 31st of March, 1919, to the 1st of March, 1920?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The total amount of purchases made in the United States for Canadian Government railways during the year commencing April 1, and ending March 31, 1919, was as follows:

537,707 tons of coal, $3,069,561.54; equipment, $401,510; rails, $1,208,791; miscellaneous, $663,268.95.

The above, on account of war conditions, were purchased in the United States as same could not be obtained in Canada, on account of Canadian manufacturers being engaged on munition work.

2. Answered by No. 1.

3. Answered by No. 1.

MACKENZIE AVENUE, OTTAWA.

Mr. CHABOT:

1. Is Mackenzie avenue,, city of Ottawa, owned by the Dominion Government?

2. If so, is it controlled by the Department of Public Works or by the Ottawa Improvement Commission?

3. Who is responsible for the present disgraceful condition of the roadway?

4. Does not the Government think that the time has arrived when Mackenzie avenue should be re-paved by whoever is responsible?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON.

1, 2, 3 and 4. Mackenzie avenue, city of Ottawa, was transferred to corporation of the city of Ottawa by Order in Council of May 21, 1897. The Ottawa Improvement Commission have, however, included this avenue in their driveway scheme and have asked the city for co-operation in the improvements that must necessarily be made. It will be necessary in the first instance to obtain from the city a transfer of the avenue to the commission by lease or otherwise so that the commission may be in a position to enforce their traffic regulations. Owing to the erection by the Government of "Connaught Building," the street was closed until late last year and the commission were unable to effect any improvements. The Improvement Commission, if the means at their disposal will permit, intend commencing work on the avenue during the present fiscal year.

QUEBEC HARBOUR COMMISSION STEAM DREDGE.

Mr. BOURASSA:

1. Has the Government permitted the Harbour Commission of Quebec to lend or rent their steam dredge to Price Brothers for certain works to be done on their private property at Chicoutimi?

2. Has any demand been made to the Government to this effect?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. No.

2. No.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY LUMBER SHIPMENTS.

*Mr. CAHILL:

1. Is the Minister of Railways aware that between Nottaway and LeReine stations, on the Transcontinental railway, there are sixty thousand cords of pulpwood along the railway track awaiting shipment, and that there are in the same district some twenty million feet of lumber also awaiting shipment by rail, and that during the course of the summer it is estimated that sixty million feet will be added to this quantity?

2. Is the minister aware that it will require 6,500 cars to carry this lumber to market, that fifty cars only were supplied during the month of February for the purpose of transporting this pulpwood and lumber?

3. If so, is it the intention of the minister to have the matter investigated and to order additional cars to be sent to those particular places to relieve the situation?

4. If so, when?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The Canadian Government railways are aware that there is a considerable quantity of pulpwood and lumber to be shipped from stations between Nottaway and LeReine.

2. The records show that 238 cars were loaded between these points during the month of February.

3. The matter is being watched and everything possible is being done to supply the cars required, but a large portion of this material is for points in the United States for which American cars are required, and the railways cannot allow more of their equipment to go there with shipments of this kind and be held there indefinitely, in view of the number of cars that have been previously sent to the other side of the line. Orders have been placed for all the American cars required to take care of this business, through the Railway Association of Canada, with the Car Service Commission of the American Railroad Association at Washington, which is at present handling car distribution for American lines, and have been pressing them to hurry equipment forward. Additional cars have recently been ordered to that territory both from the Canadian Government line and another railway which participates in the haul and should supply cars.

4. Answered by No. 3.

SOULANGES CANAL ROAD.

*Mr. BOYER:

1. Has the Government taken the necessary steps to macadamize the road along the Soulanges canal during the coming season?

2. Were tenders called for last year in this respect? If so, what are the names of the tenderers and the amount of each?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. No.

2. Yes.

Name of Tenderer	Lower Section with asphalt binder.	Lower Section with tar binder.
J. A. Pharand, Montreal..	$ 87,418	$ 88,822
Quinlan & Robertson, Montreal..	93,918	96,024
Leger & Charlton, Montreal	123,110	123,110
The Elder Ebana Co., Ltd., Montreal..	107,892
Harry L. St. George, Montreal,.	127,156	122,242
J. Kert & Son, Montreal..	251,770	234,220
Phileas Dore, Valleyfield..	119,760	119,760
Theodore Belanger, Valleyfield..	137,040	137,040

SAGUENAY RIVER BUOY LAYING.

Mr. SAVARD:

1. Who is in charge of buoy laying in the Saguenay river?
2. Is the contractor obliged to repair said buoys without extra remuneration?
3. If so, has this always been the custom?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. Epiphan Gagnon, of Tremblay.
2. The contractor must renew or repair at his own expense all wooden buoys in the contract.
3. While the service has been maintained by formal contract the contractor has had to repair or renew at his own charges all wooden buoys, the Department of Marine and Fisheries renewing or repairing the iron or steel buoys belonging to the service.

H. R. ABEY, R.F.C.

Mr. TURGEON:

1. Did H. R. Abey, R.F.C., formerly a prisoner of war in Germany, make application to the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment at Nelson, B.C., for tuition at public expense at McGill University?
2. Was he informed that he was entitled to a year's tuition at $60 per month from the said department?
3. Was his transportation paid from Nelson, B.C., to Montreal?
4. Is it a fact that on his making application to the Montreal office of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment he was informed that the amount promised him could not be paid?
5. If so, why?
6. If so, is it the Government's intention to investigate this matter in order to establish the responsibility for the mistake made with reference to this soldier?

Mr. HUGH CLARK (Parliamentary Secretary):

1. Yes.
2. Yes. It being represented to the department that he had enlisted under the age of 18 years.
3. Yes, inasmuch as he desired to attend the opening of the term at McGill University and there being insufficient time to obtain his birth certificate from the provincial registry office, he was furnished transportation on the understanding that he enlisted at or under the age of 18 years.
4. Yes.
5. The department is authorized only to provide training for: (a) Ex-members of the forces who, as a result of a war disability, are unable to return to their pre-war occupations; (b) Ex-members of the forces who enlisted under the age of 18 years. Mr. Abey, who is not disabled, made application for training as a "minor," but the birth certificate subsequently produced by him and forwarded to the Montreal office of the department indicated that he had enlisted at the age of 18 years and 9 months. The department therefore, has not the authority to provide training.
6. The matter has already been investigated.

HEBERTVILLE AND ST. JOSEPH D'ALMA MAIL SERVICE.

*Mr. SAVARD:

1. What is the cost of mail carrying between Hébertville and St. Joseph d'Alma?
2. Who is the carrier?
3. When did he sign his contract?
4. How many tenderers were there?
5. What was the amount of the lowest tender?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL:

1. $1,017.14 per annum for a frequency of 16 trips per week.
2. L. N. Asselin.
3. 9th March, 1915.
4. 12.
5. The lowest tender received was from M. Jean Cote, at the rate of $365 per annum for a frequency of 7 trips per week. Inquiry elicited the fact that this tenderer was blind and not, therefore, likely to effect the service satisfactorily. The contract was accordingly awarded to L. N. Asselin, whose offer was $445 per annum, was the next lowest received.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INFORMATION.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR:

1. Is there still a Department of Public Information?
2. What has been the total cost of this department from its inception to date?
3. How many employees are at present in this department?
4. What is the total current cost of this department per month?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL:

1. The Department of Public Information was discontinued on December 31, last.
2. $200,986.54, which amount includes the costs of the Department in connection with the publishing of the Canadian Daily Record, and the Canadian Official Record, together with all pamphlets, booklets and other publications printed by the department.

3 and 4. Answered by No. 1.

SALE OF AUTOMOBILE TO Mr. E. RUSSELL.

Mr. PREVOST:

1. Has the automobile (Oldsmobile No. 37), seized for having been smuggled into Canada, and which was to be sold in Montreal on or after the 4th of January, 1920, been sold?
2. If so, by what method was it sold, at what price, and to whom?
3. If not, have certain offers been made, what was the highest, and when will this automobile be sold?

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. Yes.

2. By obtaining of tenders which were submitted to department before acceptance $1,500, the highest tender. Mr. E. Russell, Montreal, P.Q.

3. Answered by No. 2.

WAR TAXES.

Mr. PREVOST:

1. What were, during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1919, the different war taxes collected by the Customs under the 7½ per cent special tax?
2. How much did the Department of Inland Revenue collect as aforesaid in stamps on commercial paper, patent medicines, liquor and tobacco?
3. How much did the Postal Department collect as aforesaid in special stamps?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. Customs war tax at 7½ per cent, $40,580,316.12.

2. (a) War Taxes collected in stamps on commercial paper and patent medicines, $1,327,163.33. As the tax may be paid by means of postage stamps as well as Inland Revenue war tax stamps, it is impossible to state with accuracy the amount of tax collected on patent medicines and commercial papers respectively; (b) Liquor duties, $8,461,289.72; (c) Tobacco duties, $21,510,249.45.

3. No special stamps were issued by the Post Office Department but it is estimated that about $6,838,000 revenue was derived from the war tax of one cent each on letters and post cards.

DOMINION REVENUES FROM ALL SOURCES.

Mr. PREVOST:

1. During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1919, what were the State revenues from all sources?
2. From Customs taxation?
3. From the income tax?
4. From the war profits tax?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. $312,946,747.18.

2. $147,169,187.98.

3 and 4. Total War Tax Revenue $56,177,508.33 as follows:

Banks	$1,099,764.44
Trust and Loan Companies	323,340.02
Insurance Companies	546,113.86
Business Profits	32,970,061.81
Income Tax	9,349,719.80
Inland Revenue Department	11,888,508.40

MR. K. H. PALMER.

*Mr. McMASTER:

1. Has the attention of the Government been directed to the March number of English Speaking World, published at New York, in which an advertisement appears for The Society for American and British Friendship, with the following address: "Box 168, The House of Commons, Ottawa. Canadian Commissioner, K. H. Palmer"?
2. Is the K. H. Palmer mentioned in the above advertisement a member of Parliament, or an employee of the House of Commons?
3. If not, by what right does he use Box 168 in the House of Commons, and publicly advertises that as the Canadian address of a business enterprise?
4. Who gave the said K. H. Palmer permission to use the said Box 168 in the House of Commons?
5. Is the said K. H. Palmer the individual who pressed for the investigation of the Jesuit Novitiate at Guelph?
6. Does the said Palmer occupy a room in the House of Commons?
7. If so, by what right?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. The attention of the Government had not been drawn to this advertisement until, through the courtesy of my hon. friend (Mr. McMaster) it was brought to the attention of the Government in this particular way.

2. K. H. Palmer is neither a member nor employee of the House of Commons.

3. Box 168 is the private box of the ex-Minister of Militia and Defence.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Which one?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The hon. member for Victoria (Sir Sam Hughes).

4. No permission has been given by the Speaker for the use of the said box to K. H. Palmer.

5. The Government has no certain information as to whether Mr. Palmer is the individual characterized in that question.

6. Mr. Palmer does not occupy a room in the House of Commons.

7. Answered by No. 6.

CHARTERED BANKS—ACTS 1912, C. 3, S. 4, SUB-SEC. 5.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR:

How much has been received by the Government from the Chartered Banks under the provisions of Subsection 5, Section 4, of Chapter 3, of the Acts of 1912?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

(Subsection 5, section 4 of Chapter 5, Acts of 1912.)

Fiscal Year.
1912-13	$ 45,479 21
1913-14	26,669 80
1914-15	31,132 23
1915-16	40,285 65
1916-17	58,101 03
1917-18	115,220 95
1918-19	81,712 32

IMPERIAL MUNITIONS BOARD—SHIPS.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR:

1. Does the Imperial Munitions Board own any ships?
2. If so, how many, what is the total tonnage and on whose account?
3. Is the Munitions Board still engaged in the building of ships?
4. How many ships have they built and what is the tonnage?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The Government has no records of the information asked for in question 141. This is work of the board which was operated by and for the British Government.

NEW FISHERIES TREATY WITH UNITED STATES.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR:

1. Is the announcement to the press, that a new fishing treaty between Canada and the United States is in course of preparation, correct?
2. If so, will Parliament have an opportunity of considering the terms before it is adopted?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. A new treaty resulting from the recommendation of the Canadian-American Fisheries Conference is at present under consideration by the governments of these countries.

2. The usual course will be followed. If a treaty is agreed to it will be submitted to Parliament for approval.

NEW PUBLIC BUILDING, OTTAWA.

Mr. DEMERS:

1. Is it the intention of the Government soon to proceed with the erection of a new building on Wellington street, Ottawa?
2. Have the plans been prepared?
3. If so, by whom?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Not at present.

2 and 3. No.

[Mr. J. H. Sinclair.]

CONSERVATION COMMISSION—PAYMENTS TO MR. A. V. WHITE.

Mr. DEMERS:

1. What remuneration, and what expenses, have been paid to Mr. A. V. White, of Toronto, as consulting engineer to the Conservation Commission?
2. What are the details of such payments?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. Salary, $6,000 per annum; expenses, about $1,150 per annum.

2. Travel expenses, about $1,000; sundry expenses, about $150.

CONSERVATION COMMISSION — MR. THOMAS ADAMS.

Mr. DEMERS:

1. Is Mr. Thomas Adams at present employed by the Conservation Commission as an engineer?
2. Is he an architect or a town-planner?
3. Is he recognized by any technical organization in Canada?
4. What technical position did he hold before his present appointment?
5. What salary does he receive from the Government, and in what capacity is he employed?
6. Has he been authorized to indulge in private practice, concurrently with his official duties?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. Yes.

2. He is an expert town planning engineer.

3. Yes.

4. Senior Town Planning Adviser to the British Government.

5. $625 a month during eight months of the current year. Expert town planning adviser.

6. Mr. Adams has not been authorized to engage in private practice during the eight months for which he will receive a salary, but he is at liberty to engage in private practice during the other four months of the year.

AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL POPULATION.

Mr. MANION:

1. How many employees are there in the boot and shoe industry in Canada?
2. How many employees are there in all the manufacturing plants of Canada?
3. What percentage of the population of Canada are dependent upon manufacturing for a living?
4. What proportion of the population of Canada is made up of farmers?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER:

1. There were 13,013 employees in the boot and shoe industry in Canada in 1917 of whom 1,675 were salaried employees and 11,338 wage earners.

2. The total number of employees in the manufacturing plants of Canada in 1917 as at December 15 was 706,456.

3. No information.

4. The census of 1911 showed 933,735, out of a total of 2,723,634 persons gainfully employed, to have been engaged in agriculture. The number of farms in operation in 1911 was 714,646.

Note—In neither case are the families of farmers included excepting farmers' sons giving whole time on farms.

MEDALS FOR WAR SERVICE.

Mr. MANION:

1. Has the Government any information to give to the House as to the medals which are to be given in the late war?
2. If so, what is the intention?
3. Does the Government intend giving any recognition in the form of a medal for service in Canada to those men who did not get overseas?
4. When will a complete announcement be made?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1, 2, 3 and 4. The following medals are awarded for Naval Service during the late war: The 1914 Star granted to those who took part in the operations in France and Belgium between the 5th August, 1914, and midnight 22-23 November, 1914. A clasp to this decoration is awarded to those who have been awarded this Star and who actually served under the fire of the enemy in France and Belgium between the above dates. The 1914 15 Star awarded for service at sea, or on a battle front, between the 4th August, 1914, and 31st December, 1915. Any officers and men eligible for the 1914 Star are not eligible for the 1914-15 Star. The British War Medal for which a minimum of 28 day's mobilized service is required between the 4th August, 1914, and 11th November, 1918, irrespective of where that service was carried out. The Victory Medal or Allies Medal awarded for service at sea or on a battle front between the 4th August, 1914 and 11th November, 1918.

DOMINION QUARANTINE STATION, GROSSE ISLE.

Mr. POWER:

1. How many men are employed at the Dominion Quarantine Station, Grosse Isle, Quebec?
2. Are they supplied with clothing and uniforms by the Government?
3. Have contracts been given out for the supply of uniforms and boots?
4. Were tenders called for in each case?
5. If so, to which tenderer was the contract awarded?
6. What are the names of the other tenderers?
7. At what price was the contract awarded in each case?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL:

1. 57 men, 5 women.
2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. Yes.
5. Cie Paquet, Ltee, Quebec, for uniforms and boots, and Jules Gauvin, Quebec, for uniforms.
6. For uniforms—Fugere, 180 Dorchester street, Quebec; Gardner Clothing Co., 645 St. Valier street, Quebec; Maurice Pollock, 85 St. Joseph street, Quebec; St. Lawrence Clothing Mfg., Co., D. Morgan, Place d'Armes; E. A. Anctil Co., 53 Buade street; Jules Gauvin, Montmagny, Quebec; F. Simard & Cie, Quebec; Syndicat de Quebec, Quebec.

For boots—L'Incroyable, Quebec; P. Turcotte, Quebec; Falardeau & Cie, Quebec; Syndicat de Quebec, Quebec; Au Quincy (Regd), Quebec; Louis Beaubien, Ltd., Quebec; Bertrand & Thibault, Quebec; Onesime Goulet, Quebec; J. B. Drolet, Ltd., Quebec; J. H. Larochelle & Fils, Quebec.

7. For uniforms from Paquet—Officers' uniforms, $50 each; employees' uniforms, $30 each; employees' peajackets, $20 each; white coats, $3.50 each.

For uniforms from Gauvin—Officers' frockcoat uniform, $52.50 each; officers' overcoats, $40 each; flannel shirts, $2.50 each; neckties, $5 a dozen.

For boots from Paquet—Men's leather boots per pair, $8.90; women's, $6.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT STEAMERS — UNIFORMS.

Mr. POWER:

1. During the year 1919 were the men employed on the Canadian Government steamers "Montcalm" and "Lady Grey" in receipt of uniforms and clothing from the Government?
2. Have contracts been given for the supply of said uniforms and boots?
3. Were tenders called for in each case?
4. If so, to what tenderers were the contracts awarded?
5. What are the names of the other tenderers?
6. At what price was the contract awarded in each case?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. Yes.

2. For uniforms, yes. Boots are not issued by the Department to men employed on Government steamers operated by the Marine Department.

3. Tenders were called for the summer uniforms for the "Montcalm." The winter uniforms for the "Montcalm" and all the uniforms for the "Lady Grey" were ordered after satisfactory prices were arranged for a suitable quality of material.

4. The summer uniform suits for the "Montcalm" were ordered from Faguy, Lepinay & Frere, Quebec. The summer trousers from H. B. Simard, Quebec, and all the other uniforms from The Christie Clothing Company, Montreal.

5. A. Donati, Faguy, Lepinay & Frere, H. B. Simard, P. E. Gaulin, Syndicat de Quebec, F. A. Anctil & Cie, Theodore Godbout, J. F. Bellevance, Jules Gauvin, F. Simard & Cie, Napoleon Jacques.

6. Summer uniforms for the "Montcalm": Suits, $27.50; trousers, $6.75. Summer uniforms for the "Lady Grey": Chief Officer's suits, $35.00; Petty, $32.00; trousers, $5.00. Winter uniforms for both ships: Suits, $45.00; long overcoats, $44.00; reefer overcoats, $42.00; peajackets, $39.00; trousers, $6.00.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS — TORONTO EASTERN.

Mr. DECHENE:

1. Was the Toronto Eastern railway electric line taken over by the Canadian Government Railway system? If so, when?
2. Under what authority was this line taken over?
3. What are the conditions of its acquisition?
4. What is the revenue, and what are the liabilities of the line?
5. What are its gross revenue, net revenue, and the length of its line?
6. What amount will have to be expended for its completion?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The Toronto Eastern railway was acquired by the Canadian Northern Railway Company on September 27, 1918.

2. By Order in Council dated September 23, 1918.

3. The conditions were that the Canadian Northern Railway Company would take over the railway at actual cost.

4. This line is not yet in operation. The cost of line was $706,474.04.

5. The length of the line is approximately 30 miles, which has been surveyed and the right of way largely acquired. There are 19.6 miles actually under construction of which 14.5 miles track completed and 5.1 miles graded.

6. It is estimated it will cost $301,240.20 to complete the mileage under construction, including electrification.

[Mr. Ballantyne.]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS — TORONTO SUBURBAN.

Mr. DECHENE:

1. Did the Canadian Government Railway system acquire the electric line of the Toronto Suburban railway? If so, when?
2. By what authority was this line acquired?
3. What were the conditions of its acquisition?
4. What are the revenue and liabilities of said line?
5. What are its gross and net revenue?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The Toronto Suburban railway was acquired by the Canadian Northern Railway Company on September 27, 1918.

2. By Order in Council dated September 23, 1918.

3. The conditions were that the Canadian Northern Railway Company would take over the railway at actual cost, which was $3,352,391.90.

4. The gross earnings for 1919 were $394,514; operating expenses, $352,472.29; net earnings, $42,041.71.

5. Answered by No. 4.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS.

Mr. DEMERS:

1. What blue books were published is 1919?
2. What public documents were published in both languages in 1919?
3. What public documents were published in both languages in 1919?
4. What public documents were published in one language only, and in what language were they published?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR:

What are the details of the expenditure of $1,372,079.82 made in the area covered by both the Antigonish and North Sydney branches of the Department of Public Works during the five years subsequent to January 1, 1912?

UNOPPOSED MOTIONS FOR PAPERS.

Mr. SAVARD:

For a copy of all correspondence, letters and petitions received from the citizens of the Saguenay district and all others in connection with a subsidy from the Department of Trade and Commerce in order to obtain the services of a steamboat ferry between Ste. Catherine and Tadoussac.

Mr. SAVARD:

For a copy of all correspondence, letters and telegrams in connection with the granting of an allowance by the Post Office Department for a regular ferry service by motor yacht between Ste. Catherine and Tadoussac.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT:

For a copy of all correspondence, documents and records, including the evidence and judgments in connection with the trials held by Field General Court Martial of the 259th, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Siberia, on the following riflemen, sentenced on the 28th of January, 1919; Alfred Laplante, O. Boisvert, Edmond Leroux, Joseph Guenard, E. Pauze and Arthur Roy.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM SYSTEM.

MOTION BY MR. SUTHERLAND THAT THE SYSTEM BE EXTENDED IN ONTARIO.

Mr. DONALD SUTHERLAND (South Oxford) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, it is expedient that a more general, equitable and uniform system of Experimental Farms and sub-stations should be established throughout Canada, and that the wholly inadequate and disproportionate number given the Province of Ontario in the system shall be dealt with and provided for at the present Session of Parliament.

He said: Mr. Speaker,, in asking the House to approve of this resolution it is only right that some evidence should be advanced in support of it and, in that respect, I would like to touch upon some features connected with agricultural experimental work in Canada that may not be new to the House. There is nothing indefinite or ambiguous about the resolution. If the allegations contained therein are correct then I think the request is so reasonable that this House will have no hesitation in granting it.

I do not want to be understood as disapproving of the experimental farm system. On the contrary, I believe that there never was a time in the history of this country when research work was so necessary as at present in connection with the agricultural industry, as well as the application of that research work, in order to overcome some of the difficulties with which we now have to contend. This resolution points to what I consider to be a very great injustice to one of the old provinces which entered the Confederation now forming the Dominion of Canada.

It needs no argument to convince the House that a great deal of work must be done in new provinces which the provinces themselves are not in a position to do; and those who were responsible for the consummation of the Confederation of Canada, realizing this important fact, very wisely made due allowance for educational work along agricultural lines both by the provincial and by the federal governments. This matter was taken up on numerous occasions before a final and definite understanding was arrived at, by which both federal and provincial governments have the right to carry on educational work of an educational and experimental nature. In 1886 the first system of experimental farms was established in Canada, and the central farm at Ottawa was intended to serve the purposes of the whole of Canada as well as the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, with the director of the system located there. There were four other farms in addition to this, namely, one at Nappan, in Nova Scotia, for that province and the province of New Brunswick; one at Brandon for the province of Manitoba; one at Indian Head, which is now in Saskatchewan; and one at Agassiz, in British Columbia. These have from time to time been added to by other farms and sub-stations, until at the present time there are twenty-four farms, six sub-stations and forty demonstration stations throughout the Dominion of Canada. The work in the newer provinces has spread very rapidly, and there have undoubtedly been good results from the operation of the system. I have taken this matter up at almost every session since I have been a member of the House of Commons, and to show that the question, so far as the apparent injustice to Ontario of the matter is concerned, is not by any means a new one, I may quote a few paragraphs from Hansard of previous years. In 1912, when the agricultural estimates were before the House, I asked this question of the minister:

Are there any experimental farms being established in Ontario?

The minister replied:

We have not been doing any experimental farm work there for the reason that the Ontario Government have been covering that field themselves. What may be done in future I cannot say, but we hope to go into that matter with the various provinces.

I may say, in passing, that at that time the province of Ontario was compelled to build its own colonization railways without any subsidy from the Dominion Government, and the matter was before Parliament at that session. I referred to the subject, and the question of experimental farms, in these terms:

It is another instance, I presume, of Ontario being compelled to do work of this nature themselves without assistance from the Federal Government, and at the same time assist in maintaining a similar status in the other provinces. I would like the Government to consider the advisability of establishing experimental stations in Northern Ontario, also one in Western Ontario.

Nothing was done. In the session of 1914 when the estimate for the experimental farms were being passed, I said:

When you consider the large amount compared with former years that is being spent for experimental purposes and realize that there are only forty acres and a very trifling expenditure devoted to experimental purposes in the province of Ontario you will come to the conclusion that some change must be made in this respect, and made in the near future.

Nothing, however, was done. In the following year I again brought the matter up on the Estimates:

Session after session I have taken this matter up and have urged upon the Government the necessity of doing justice to the province of Ontario in this respect. I am glad to say that since the last session the Minister of Agriculture has made arrangements to establish a demonstration farm in northern Ontario.

The minister made the following reply:

I desire to say just a word in answer to the remarks of my hon. friend from Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) and the remark of my hon. friend from Muskoka as to these farms in the work of the Agricultural Department generally. I hope that the hon. members understand that there is no east or no west in what we are doing. I happen to be a western man myself, my home being much further west than that of my hon. friend from Moosejaw or the other hon. gentlemen who have spoken. I was also an Ontario man. I think that everybody in this House will agree that what has been done for agriculture should be done so far as possible equitably throughout the country. It is true we are making this initial step in demonstration work in southern Saskatchewan and southern Alberta, but that does not mean that northern Alberta, northern Saskatchewan, Ontario and other parts will be left out. As the work develops and when the opportunities warrant, I shall be glad to keep in mind what my hon. friends have said.

The method I have adopted this session is somewhat different from that which I have pursued in the past. I have moved a resolution which, in view of the situation that confronts the country to-day, obviously proves the urgent necessity for immediate action on the part of the Government in this matter. Let me point out that there were at the outset five farms in the system and while the central farm at Ottawa was supposed to take care of the two provinces of Quebec and Ontario, the work has been extended considerably since that time. As I have said, there are now twenty-four farms and six sub-stations in the system, and forty demonstration stations, and not one of these stations are in the province of Ontario. The work of the central farm at Ottawa is just as much applicable to the province of Quebec as it is to Ontario; for that matter, it applies to all the other provinces. We have in western Ontario, it is true, a small demonstration station, comprising an area of forty-nine acres devoted to the growing of tobacco; and six hundred miles to the north of that farm there is another demonstration farm where the interned prisoners have been employed in clearing land during the past two or three years. This farm will serve a very useful purpose in that northern country, but it by no means represents the agricultural industry of the old settled portion of southern Ontario. The farm at Harrow in the county of Essex is five hundred miles southwest of the farm at Ottawa, and I mention this distance to show the great difference that must exist between that part of the province and eastern Ontario. I may call the attention of hon. members to the products of the province of Ontario and the place which that province occupies in supplying the necessaries of life.

According to the last census of Canada, the population of the Dominion was 7,206,643, of which the province of Ontario had 2,523,274, or a little over 35 per cent of the total. The Bureau of Statistics for the year 1918, the latest available, gives the field crop of Canada for that year as $1,367,909,970, of which Ontario produced $384,013,900, or a little over 28 per cent of the total field crop of Canada. The livestock of Canada were valued at very nearly the same amount as the field crop for that year, being $1,326,766,000, of which Ontario had $369,111,000, or 28.80 per cent of the total for Canada.

With respect to some of the tender fruits —fruits not grown on any large scale at any of the experimental farms, although they are to a small extent on some of the farms in British Columbia—in which certain sections of Ontario specialize in and produce immense quantities of, I would like to point out that according to the census statistics 99.7 per cent of the total grape crop of Canada is grown in the province of Ontario. Without any assistance whatever from the federal experimental farms, but with the aid of the Provincial Government, this production has been developed by the people of the province of Ontario. Then, too, over 90 per cent of the total crop of peaches grown in Canada is produced in the province of Ontario. Of strawberries 70 per cent, of apples 60 per cent; and 99.8 per cent of the total crop of red clover seed grown in the Dominion is yielded by the province of Ontario. This production of clover seed in itself would justify something being done in view of the fact that at the present time the farmers are paying from $46 to $48 per bushel for seed with which to seed their land this spring, a condition of affairs that demands the attention of the Government and of those who are conducting the experimental farms of Canada, because it is a fact well known to every one engaged in agriculture that without growing clover you cannot carry on agricultural operations for any considerable length of time except at an enormous expenditure for fertilizers. There is nothing to equal, and certainly there is nothing as cheap, as clover for maintaining fertility of soil and enriching impoverished land. Yet with respect to that production of 99.8 per cent of clover seed in Ontario, apparently the work is not being developed in Western Ontario by the aid of experimental farms. Again 42½ per cent of the tobacco grown in Canada and 85 per cent of the corn produced comes from the province of Ontario. Now, some one may say that that province is doing this work itself, and that the Provincial Government has been helping greatly along those lines. I grant that, but while it is the case, as far as Ontario is concerned I have never yet heard of any one from that province who took the slightest exception to a generous expenditure for experimental work in the newer provinces of Canada. There is not, nor has there been, any desire on the part of the people of Ontario to in any way curtail such expenditure as would assist in developing and opening up the newer parts of the country. I do not like to make comparisons, but some times it is necessary in order to illustrate the point that one may have in view. The provinces of Ontario and Quebec are contiguous to each other. They contain immense areas of rich and fertile agricultural lands and the conditions in that respect are so similar that it is no wonder that when the Central Experimental Farm was established here in 1886 that farm was deemed sufficient to meet the requirements of both provinces. It is quite true that previous to that time some experimental work had been done in the province of Ontario. The Hon. John Carling, afterwards Sir John Carling, who was Commissioner of Agriculture in the Government of Ontario, in 1874 established the present Agricultural College and Experimental Farm at the city of Guelph. Later on he was Minister of Agriculture in the Federal Government, when the original system of experimental farms were established in Canada. But while we now have these farms, and practically all the provinces have their own agricultural colleges, and experimental farms in connection therewith, the situation at present is so entirely different from what it was at that time that I think I am justified in calling your attention to the fact that Ontario does more than meet the demands of the other provinces for assistance by the Department of Agriculture in that practically one-half of the customs revenue of Canada is paid by the people of Ontario, or 48.92 per cent. Yet she has to undertake and pay for the experimental work done in the province, besides bearing one-half the expense of the work of the other provinces. I have already pointed out that in addition to the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa a tobacco growing station has been established in the county of Essex, and there is also a demonstration station at Kapuskasing, where alien prisoners were interned during the war and towards whose maintenance and payment a considerable portion of the expenditure for Ontario is attributed. But the two stations referred to do not in any sense meet the needs of the great agricultural industry in old Ontario, because tobacco can hardly be considered as one of the necessaries so essential towards answering the requirements of the people under the high cost of living at the present time. Let me point out that in the province of Quebec, in addition to thirteen demonstration farms, there are six experimental farms. In Manitoba there are two, in Saskatchewan three, in Alberta two, in British Columbia four, in Nova Scotia two, in New Brunswick one, in Prince Edward Island one, and finally there is the Central Experimental Farm in this city, which contributes to the demands of the Dominion as a whole.

I might remind the House that a very generous amount has been voted from year to year for the upkeep of these farms. According to the last public accounts I find that the total cost of our Experimental Farms for the year 1918-19 was $1,024,319. The cost of farms in the province of Ontario, excluding the Central at Ottawa, including the clearing of the land at Kapuskasing, was $47,968. In the adjoining province of Quebec, where conditions are very similar the cost was $177,624. I would like the House to note the difference in respect to the amounts spent in those two old provinces where it is fair to make a comparison.

An Experimental Farm system to be effective must be able to demonstrate that agriculture can be carried on at a profit; if it cannot there must be something radically wrong. I do not contend for a moment that a farm system conducted for purely experimental purposes should be expected to show a profit; but I do contend that where you have large farms, such as we have in connection with this system, running from 400 to 1,000 acres, that they should be considered as being conducted on a commercial basis, and under such conditions if they cannot demonstrate what they were founded to inculcate in the minds of the people, namely, the cost of production profit or loss of the undertaking, then I say those farms have failed to function as they were intended to by those who established them.

The cost of our Experimental Farms has been increasing very rapidly during the last few years, labour being one of the principal items of increase. I want to call the attention of the House to the wages paid for labourers on these twenty-four farms—which does not include the forty demonstration stations scattered throughout the country—representing a total acreage of 11,270—quite a considerable area when we recall that food was so essential during the war years. The total amount paid out for farm labour on these farms during the year 1918 amounted to no less than $452,388.58, which does not include the remuneration of the permanent staff—the professors and foremen who were doing experimental work. The amount expended for form labour on the Central Experimental Farm here of 467 acres amounted to $120,525. I have already pointed out that $18,008 was paid out in the province of Ontario Farms for farm labour, and $71,471 in the province of Quebec in connection with the 2,397 acres devoted to experimental work in that province; in Manitoba $21,383; Saskatchewan, $36,000; Alberta, $30,000; British Columbia, $52,000; Nova Scotia, $39,000; New Brunswick, $23,000; Prince Edward Island, $39,000, or a total of $452,388. The salaries under Civil Government of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, including those employed on these farms represents a further sum of $598,433.

Against this expenditure I might point out that the revenue from those farms totalling 11,270 acres amounting to only $102,607.44. It may be urged that a great deal of this work was devoted to experimental purposes. I grant that is so, but there is altogether too wide a margin between the heavy expenditure for farm labour and the small revenue received during the most critical year of the war for it to be passed over lightly. 11.270 acres with a staff of workmen such as apparently was never employed even during times of peace, should certainly show a better return. In my opinion the returns were altogether inadequate compared with the amount of money expended for labour on those farms.

[Mr. Sutherland.]

I want to say with all the force of which I am capable that I believe there is something radically wrong in connection with the whole system as it is being conducted. I believe we have gotten away from the idea which animated those who established these farms, and in my opinion a frank discussion of the situation will bring about beneficial results. It is not a pleasant task for any one to criticize, but I have paid very close attention to this matter for many years and I am forced to the conclusion that the present Experimental Farm system instead of giving a lead to the farmers of this country more often are simply endeavouring to copy methods which have been initiated by our most practical and energetic farmers.

I have already pointed out that the field crop of the Dominion for the year under consideration amounted to $1,367,909,970, and that the value of our live stock industry was about the same figure. I have always believed that the people of a country that exports its raw materials are bound to be hewers of wood and drawers of water. Our exports should be the finished product, and I have not been one of those who have been lamenting the fact that Great Britain, in order to protect her home industry, has debarred the cattle of Canada from entering her markets as feeders. It is in the public interest and in the interest of agriculture that stock of that class should be finished on the hoof in this country before it is sent to the markets of the Old Country, as much as possible of our live stock should be finished at home. I, for one, was delighted to find that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne), who is not in his seat, had been so successful in adopting a system of shipbuilding in this country, by which system we would be enabled to carry and take care of the exports of Canada. On a previous occasion I pointed out that I thought it would be in the interest of Canada if we had some such system as that so that we could give a preference to shipments of flour over shipments of wheat. As wheat is a convenient ballast, it is being carried by shipping companies at a much lower rate than flour. With a Government-owned system, we could reverse the procedure in that regard, and we would not be confronted with the difficulty which we are experiencing just now, namely that the millers have on hand an abundance of flour for which they can get no sale at a price in proportion to that which they have paid for wheat, and that, consequently, it has been absolutely impossible for Canadian stock raisers to procure the mill feeds which are so essential for the finishing of live stock, an industry the immensity of which I have shown by quoting the value of live stock in this country at the present time. This is a matter on which our experimental farms should be able to supply evidence, and they should be able to show conclusively the values of some of the by-products.

I am referring to this more particularly for the reason that some time ago the Government and Parliament turned loose on this country fully armed and equipped what might be fittingly termed as commercial highwaymen rather than by the name under which they have gone. One of the first things they did was to make an attack on those who were endeavouring to carry on in Ontario, and they confined their operations to that province. I refer to the Board of Commerce, so-called, because if there ever was a body of men who were less entitled to be called a Board of Commerce, I do not know where you could find them; they are commerce smashers in every sense of the word. Our experimental farm system has not been able to furnish evidence as to the cost of producing the articles upon which the Board of Commerce were endeavouring to fix prices, and I believe the result will be that inside of six months Government statistics will show that the bacon and pork industry of this country has been reduced by one-third, such result being largely attributable to the rulings of that board. Further, I believe that the dairying industry of this country has been crippled to an enormous extent as the result of one of the first acts of that board. Our experimental farms to which I have been referring should have been in a position to show the cost of producing milk and bacon in this country under present conditions, because we all know that conditions in connection with the feeding of live stock in Canada have not been normal for some time on account of the high cost of feed. But the situation is even worse than that. Some hon. members may have noticed certain questions which I placed on the Order Paper during the past few weeks with reference to millfeed and the by-products of wheat, one question with regard to what is called standard stock feed being answered the other day. The Government have entered into an arrangement with the elevator companies by which the Government purchase their recleaned screenings and, with the approval of those engaged in carrying on experimental work in this country, send them broadcast throughout Canada. This stuff, which has been sent broadcast, unground, is composed of over 10 per cent of the most dangerous noxious weeds of which it is possible to imagine. It is true that it has been stated in the press that the farmers should see that this stuff is ground before it is fed, on account of the danger of the spread of noxious weeds. These are some of the things in regard to which our demonstration or experimental farm system has utterly failed. There should be a stirring up, and I am sure that the present Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Tolmie), who understands so well and is so deeply interested in the live stock industry in this country, will see that steps are taken to remedy some of the abuses that have crept in. But it is quite apparent to any one and every one who drives through any of the old settled districts, yes, and unfortunately the new ones, when the weeds are in bloom, that only a comparatively very small proportion of the farms of Canada are to-day free from noxious weeds. This may seem a trifling matter to some people, and some may wonder why the farmers are leaving the farms and flocking to the cities as they have been doing. This condition is not confined to Canada or to any particular province; it has been a world-wide development of many years growth and I believe that the experimental farms can do a great deal to inform the people of Canada with regard to better methods, and assist in overcoming some of the difficulties and prejudices with which we are now confronted. It is a serious situation when you find that the descendants of the old stock which settled and developed this country are, in many instances, not to be found in the localities with which they were at one time so closely identified, there is a possible danger of our farms being occupied by people who are not of so high a standard as those who occupied them in the past, this would be a most unfortunate condition of affairs. When you allow your mind to review the situation, and when you see the numbers of young men who have been brought up to man's estate on the farms of Canada, who have gone to the towns and cities and entered into professional or business life, you can readily understand that they are a credit to the people who brought them up and to rural life. I for one would not discourage any young man from going from the farm to the city if it is in his interest to do so. I think it is one of the finest things that can possibly be imagined, that we have in this country conditions which enable boys from the farms to go into the towns and cities and make the headway which they can do and have made there without having to go to some foreign country for the opportunities which our large cities and towns offer at the present time.

As to agricultural possibilities of the old settled portions of Ontario not served by experimental farm systems about 300 miles southwest of Ottawa you come to a district, sometimes termed an island, almost surrounded by the greates bodies of fresh water to be found in the world. Draw a line from the Georgian Bay to about Cobourg and you have west of that line a section of country that will compare favourably, I believe, with any similar stretch of country to be found in the world. For the sake of illustration take the county of Oxford, with which I am familiar, as my hon. friend from North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) will substantiate. Agricultural conditions there are a little different from the conditions in a good many other counties. The factory output of dairy products for the whole of Canada for the year 1918 was valued at $93,879,326. In the county of Oxford, which in area is one of the smallest counties of Ontario, comprising less than half a million acres,—489,310 acres, to be exact—the value of the factory output for that year was $4,800,000, or almost equal to the entire output of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia, with a combined area of 260,769,000 acres. These figures indicate what can be accomplished in a small area where scientific methods are followed. In the past year the output for Oxford County exceeded $5,000,000. A very, very large proportion of the factory output came from the constituency I have the honour to represent, because the farmers there do not go in for the finishing of beef animals to the extent that that is done in the north riding of the county. This, Mr. Speaker, is one of the industries that was so very materially affected by the Board of Commerce in its first move, namely, fixing the price of milk, which applied only to the province of Ontario.

It might be asked why it is not possible for demonstrations to be made as to cost at the provincial experimental farm and the Agricultural College. This has already been done, and it was after these authorities had brought to the notice of the Board and emphasized the fact, that milk could not be produced at the price the board fixed, that the price was very materially increased. Notwithstanding that increase I contend that there should be some uniform system in this country in connection with Dominion work covering the whole of Canada, so that no province would be discriminated against. I have several reasons for making that statement, in addition to the one to which I have referred in connection with the Board of Commerce. I must say that there have been other things done by the present Government which have reacted against some of the industries of the province of Ontario to a greater extent than some people realize. If you had seen, as I have seen, cheese factories closed by the dozens all over that part of the province where cheese making was once a flourishing industry, and where the first cheese factory in Canada was established, when you learn that in the surrounding district there is scarcely a cheese factory to be found to-day, and that many farmers are purchasing their butter, you will realize that when I took exception in this House to certain things that were done a year and two years ago, it was not the people of the constituency I represent I had in mind at all. I refer to the permission that was granted to the packing companies of this country to mix butter with oleomargarine and put it on the market in Canada. I did not object to them manufacturing oleomargarine, but I did object, and do object now, and will continue to object, to giving these companies the right to mix butter with any other product and place it on the market in this country. Yet there is no protest or evidence as to the cost of producing butter from any of the experimental farms in connection with this matter. There was also an embargo placed on the export of some products which affected the county from which I come to a very marked degree, but I am happy to say the embargo is not now in existence. I believe that if there had been a proper understanding as to the cost of production in this country, no such embargoes would have been placed on the products of the farm.

There is another question that is going to be of very great importance in the near future, and that is immigration. I believe that the prospects for immigration in this country were never brighter than at the present time, and while I would advise caution in regard to the classes of immigrants allowed to come to this country and become Canadian citizens, I would offer every inducement to good, honest, upright, industrious people to come and settle on the broad acres of Canada. Of what do the natural resources of this country consist?

In the first place we have the agricultural domain. Next we have our great forests, then our mines, and our fisheries. I doubt if ever there was a people of our numbers who had so great a heritage left to them as we have. Is it any wonder, in view of such a heritage, that our young men did not hesitate for a moment to cross the ocean in defence of our rights in order that we might be enabled to live in this country under the conditions which we experience to-day? It is true that we have an enormous debt hanging over us, but when we recall some of the dangers through which we have passed we should be cheerful at least at the prospect we have of working out our own salvation under the natural advantages this country offers. I would ask the Government in dealing with this question not to lose sight of the fact that it must be from the four resources to which I I have referred that we shall derive our greatest revenue. As we develop these resources we shall be enabled to meet the obligations which we have to discharge. I am sorry that the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) is not in his seat, because I would like him to note what I say in this connection. The Government will be inclined to pare down expenditures as closely as possible, and they are justified in doing so. I think that every department of government should be revised, and where there is any inefficiency steps should be taken to provide a proper remedy. This is an opportune time for the Government to set about reorganizing its various departments with a view to seeing that there is no overlapping and that good business methods are adopted. In this way our expenditures would be very greatly reduced. I would caution the Government against any action that might hamper or in any way retard the development of these great natural resources to which I have referred. There is something pathetic about the situation at the present time in Ontario. I happen to know conditions in that province better than elsewhere, and I can assure this House that it is absolutely impossible to secure help on the farms in that province. As a result of this unfortunate condition the farmers, though they are prepared to carry on as well as they possibly can, will not be able to produce to the maximum. They will necessarily have to let a great deal of work go by the board which they carried on during the war when they were endeavouring to meet the stringent necessities that existed at that critical time. The crisis has now passed, however, and the same urgency does not exist to-day, and you will find that conditions will be very difficult during the next year or two unless we have an enormous amount of farm labour coming into the country.

I do not intend to devote much more time to this question. I have no doubt that the need for economy will be one of the arguments that will be advanced in order to put off action at the present time, but I would suggest that the whole experimental farm system of Canada should be thoroughly revised, and where there is any inefficiency a radical remedy should be applied and capable men put in the places of those who are unable to discharge their duties satisfactorily. I would see that the commercial end of these farms receive more attention and that large tracts of land that are under the control of the experimental farms should be used to demonstrate that the methods advocated can be carried on at a profit. I think it is of the utmost importance that we should have a clear, definite statement with regard to the operation of these farms. There is no reason why one hundred or two hundred acres should not be set aside and each farm used as a means of demonstrating to the people what can be done and whether at a profit or loss. There is no one so foolish as to waste a lifetime in any business which is incapable of returning adequate profit, and there should be demonstrations to show the people exactly what can be done on these farms. I would go further than that and would change the present method of the annual reports of these farms. At present there is a small pamphlet which does not give any adequate conception of what is being done on these farms. A few years ago the volume published in connection with the experimental farm system of Canada was at least half a dozen times larger than that which is now published. I should like to call to the attention of the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster), particularly, a monthly bulletin of agricultural statistics which has been published for a number of years past by the Department of Trade and Commerce. It will be found that the statistics are largely compiled from reports received from the different experimental farms in Canada. In some provinces you will see that there are some half a dozen experimental stations, in connection with which reports are published and sent broadcast throughout the country. Herein lies another piece of injustice to the province of Ontario, for there are no reports published in this bulletin of agricultural statistics in connection with the work that is being done in that province outside of the Central Farm at Ottawa. There is another pamphlet published monthly by the Department of Agriculture, a pamphlet that will be found on the desks in practically all the banks and public places throughout Ontario, and, I presume, throughout the other provinces of the Dominion. On its face there is a map of Canada showing the location of the experimental farms and demonstration stations throughout Canada, and the only point indicated in the province of Ontario is the small tobacco station in the county of Essex, the station at Kapuskasing, 600 miles to the north, and the Central Experimental Farm in the extreme east of the province. And yet this pamphlet is headed with the names of the Minister of Agriculture and the Director of the farms. I have in my hand the issue of November, 1919, and the following statement appears on its cover:

> In the above outlined map note the location of experimental farms and stations. The superintendent of the experimental farm or station nearest to you will be pleased to give you any information in his power. Why not communicate with him?

Just imagine! I should like to know with whom the people who are growing grapes, peaches and other fruits to which I have referred, in Western Ontario, are going to communicate—with the director of the tobacco-growing station at Harrow, or the director of the experimental station six hundred miles further north at Kapuskasing where such fruits are not grown? This is a fair illustration of the injustice that is being done to the province of Ontario in this respect. When this farm was established at Kapuskasing one was also established at Spirit lake, a short distance away in the province of Quebec. One station, apparently, would not do up in that northern country where conditions were the same in both provinces. No; Quebec had to have a farm also at that point. But in addition to this, you will find that Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick are dotted with these experimental farms.

Now, we cannot close our eyes to the fact that to any prospective immigrant one of the chief considerations is the possibility of his becoming the owner of some land on which he will be able to make a home for himself and thereby have a feeling of independence which it was impossible for him to have in his native country. He will naturally go to the Canadian Government agents overseas, and to the booking agents, who will have stacks of literature supplied by the Dominion Government giving just such information with regard to our agricultural resources as persons emigrating are anxious to obtain. Well, immigrants will look at this map and will look among the Great Lakes of Western Ontario, and will inevitably come to the conclusion that in Ontario there is nothing but waste land, a veritable desert, where the only oasis is Harrow devoted to the culture of tobacco. These reports undoubtedly have a great influence on the minds of prospective immigrants, for I know the truth of this statement by actual experience. I had something to do with the supplying of literature to prospective immigrants a few years ago, and I know that the reports contained in these pamphlets and bulletins are precisely the kind of information they inquire after; and if the province of Ontario is to be precluded from any possibility of even a fair show so far as obtaining immigrants is concerned, then let us be frank and say so at once.

As to the prospective immigrant, for many years when immigrants were coming into this country Ontario was very badly handicapped, in addition to the absence of this literature to which I have referred, by reason of the fact that we had been discriminated against by the federal Government. I am referring to what took place previous to 1911. So much was this the case that Ontario had to enter into immigration work itself; it had to open an office in Great Britain, send its own agents over there, and the Government at Ottawa refused booking agents the usual bonus of $5 when booking immigrants who were sent to the Provincial Government for farm work. People ask the question: "How is it that the agricultural population of all Ontario has fallen off as it has?" It is a surprise to me, in face of what we have had to contend with, that we have there the population that we have to-day. I maintain that this matter ought to be attended to at the present session of Parliament. You may say: We will endeavour to do something a little later on. I am getting tired of being put off in that way. The Government has been altogether too procrastinating in that respect in the years that have passed. I regret that the hon. Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) is not in his place, because I am firmly convinced that there is no other source of revenue that will respond so generously to well directed efforts along the lines to which I have referred as the province of Ontario. But give her a fair show.

Hon. S. F. TOLMIE (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of pleasure to the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) speaking on the question of experimental farms. I am very glad indeed that he has brought this important matter to the attention of the House. I quite agree with him when he says that there is no possible line along which, under present conditions, this country can expend money with such safety as agriculture.

There seems to be a great deal of misapprehension in some quarters concerning the work of the experimental farms and the great service that they are rendering to this country. In the efforts of those engaged in experimental work upon the farms, they aim to increase quantity in the productions of the soil, to improve quality, to reduce all obstructions to production, to count the cost of production, to minimize loss and increase returns by the employment of better methods. To accomplish this the work on the farms is divided into research, investigation, illustration, assistance, prevention, propaganda and administration. These various branches of course have to work interdependently, one line very much with the other, to accomplish the best results. In research work we find that our plant men at the experimental farms have been able to provide for the agriculturists of this country many new and valuable varieties of grains. They have also done a great deal in discovering diseases affecting plants. They have introduced better farming methods, all of which have resulted in enormous gains to the country.

Take the case of Marquis wheat. Sometimes we hear this laughed at, and it is said that when anybody criticizes the Experimental Farms we always point to Marquis wheat. If we do point to Marquis wheat we are pointing to something that we may well be proud of. In five years it is estimated that Marquis wheat has increased the yield at the rate of over $20,000,000 per year in the three Prairie Provinces alone. This wheat developed at our Experimental Farms is an improvement on the old varieties because it possesses a shorter and stiffer straw and yields from 4 to 6 bushels per acre more than do such varieties as Red Fife.

Mr. BURNHAM: Has the minister entered into the production of a new wheat which is going to double the quantity produced by the variety that he refers to.

Mr. TOLMIE: Is the hon. gentleman referring to Marquis wheat?

Mr. BURNHAM: No, but to a new wheat.

Mr. TOLMIE: Our Experimental Farms are investigating a number of new varieties of wheat. They are keeping in very close touch with that work and as developments occur they will give them to the public. In addition to the Marquise they have developed the Preston, Stanley, and Huron varieties of wheat. It is estimated that these have increased the yields of other provinces to the value of half a million dollars. They have also placed on the market the Daubenay, Victoria, and Banner oats. It is estimated after a careful calculation that these varieties have increased the yields by $9,000,000 per year. They have produced many varieties of new barley, flax, peas, and other grains which have increased the yields to the extent of $3,000,000 a year. Among the new varieties being investigated are Ruby wheat, and Liberty oats, which will also add many millions of dollars to the value of the yields of these crops as soon as the quantities secured are sufficient to enable these varieties to be grown in a commercial way.

The orchard and gardening sections of the Experimental Farms have also rendered very valuable service. They have produced the Melba apple, Early Malcolm corn and Alacrity tomato, all of which are now being grown for the market. They are investigating the production of hardy varities of fruit for the prairie sections of the country. In forage crops they have attained some signal successes such as the production of a perennial variety of clover. Perhaps nobody will realize to a greater extent than the hon. member for South Oxford how valuable it is to have a perennial variety of clover as distinguished from one which is only annual or biennial.

In the division of chemistry, we are carrying on a very valuable work in testing soils as to their productivity and also research work showing the value of clover, alfalfa and other leguminous crops with reference to their ability to extract nitrogen from the air and convey it to the soil. As was pointed out by the hon. member (Mr. Sutherland) it is only by the use of leguminous crops that we can hope very largely to maintain the fertility of our soil. I want to emphasize the importance of the work of the men on the farms who are aiming to conserve the fertility of our farm lands not only for the benefit of this generation but as well for the benfit of the generations to come. We are also in the Chemical Branch carrying on investigations as to the effect of fertilizers. Cultivation, and the conservation of moisture in the soil. Hon. gentlemen know how important this particular line of investigation is, especially in Western Canada where the summers are short and dry, and where it is necessary to conserve every possible bit of moisture to produce a crop.

Live stock and plant diseases are also receiving careful attention. We have the Health of Animals Branch investigating live stock diseases; and we also have the Division of Botany and Entomological Branch. A few years ago we had in Alberta a disease amongst horses known as dourine which caused a loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. Due to the efforts of Dr. Watson and the investigations which he carried on near Lethbridge, Alberta, this disease has been now practically eradicated.

It is estimated that the preventive measures used for the eradication of smut in our grains has brought to us a saving of no less than $16,000,000 per year.

The work that has been done in the control of potato diseases and also in seed selection, represents another $16,000,000 gain.

In the Seed Branch we have discovered methods for the removal of the injurious seeds in what is known as screenings, or the waste from the elevators, and this when ground finely becomes most excellent stock feed.

The annual loss to field crops in this country, due to insect pests, is estimated at no less than $125,000,000, but thanks to the efforts of the Entomological Branch this has been reduced to a very great extent. I might say that in Saskatchewan we have been investigating for a year or two the depredations of the grasshopper. Two varieties manifest themselves in that province, one that winters in the ground and the other whose eggs winter in the ground but do not hatch out until the month of May. A good deal of alarm was recently created in that province owing to the fact that some grasshoppers were appearing but this proved to be the harmless variety that is carried over during the winter. The other variety will be hatched in May and our men are on the ground prepared to combat these pests to the very best of their ability. In this particular, the experimental farms have carried on a very valuable work in looking up and inquiring into the use of insecticides and other remedies for combating these pests.

The experimental farms have done a great deal also in encouraging the rotation of crops in Canadian agriculture. It is estimated that the adoption of this method alone is bringing into Canada a revenue of $32,000,000 per year. The experimental farms were among the first to urge the adoption of summer-fallowing on the prairies and hon. gentlemen from that section of the West will recognize the great value of this method in the cultivation of the soil of our western plains.

Taking it on the whole, the work of our experimental farms and the information they have disseminated among the agriculturalists of this country have practically revolutionized farming in Canada. They have demonstrated the value of improved stock; the wisdom of using pure bred sires; the effect of cross breeding different breeds one with another; better housing conditions on the farm. They have also taken up experiments in connection with steer feeding, so that any one intending to take up that line of work can, either by visiting the farms, or by communicating with the officials, secure most valuable information.

The experimental farms are moreover, dealing with different methods for minimizing the high cost of labour, such as experiments with milking machines and dairy utensils of modern pattern, and they have done some very valuable work in connection with self-feeders for hogs. They have likewise stimulated the keeping of dairy records and the testing of milk. This is a most important work for the reason that very few farmers who do not keep records can tell exactly which is the best cow they have in their herd. They will pick out some nice little red cow which keeps in good flesh but when her milk is weighed and tested for butter fat she is shown to be almost the poorest cow in the herd. The work of keeping dairy records and milk testing is going on all over the country with a view to eliminating the scrubs from the herds and retaining only the very best animals.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I might say that the system of keeping a record of the production of dairy cows originated with the late E. V. Tilson, of Tilsonburg, who had a herd of some sixty-five dairy cows, mostly of Holstein grades, and who brought his average production up to somewhere in the neighbourhood of 12,000 pounds per cow. One cow alone produced about 24,000 pounds and this was such an evidence of the value of keeping records that the system was adopted by all experimental farms and agricultural colleges. The late E. V. Tilson was the man who demonstrated most successfully the value of that work in the first instance.

Mr. TOLMIE: I wish to thank the hon. gentleman for this information. I did not know that the system had originated in Ontario. My first information with respect to the testing of cows had reference to the work carried on in Denmark and in Wisconsin and some of the other states in the South.

In regard to poultry we are carrying on some research work with very excellent results, such as different methods for incubation and different kinds of incubators for hatching eggs. We have one incubator out at the Farm now with a capacity of 10,000 eggs. Work is likewise being carried on with respect to brooding machines and the better housing of poultry. Work is in operation there that any one can benefit by, where the various kinds of poultry houses are found to be in use and their operations so explained that any one interested in poultry can derive the very fullest information. You will be surprised, Mr. Speaker, to know that poultry diseases are responsible for a loss in this country of some seven and a half million dollars per year. We have a man investigating along these lines at the present time and we are hoping to give him an assistant before very long. In addition to increasing our yield both of livestock and crops I believe it is just as important to conserve all we possibly can and stop existing leaks.

In connection with the tobacco industry we are also carrying on investigations with reference to the distribution of seed, cultivation, warehousing, and at the present time we have a representation of our department overseas to get all the information he possibly can with a view to improving the market for the Canadian tobacco producers.

We also do a little bee work out at the Farm in connection with winter feeding, housing, and the development of the honey producing industry in every possible way.

Investigations are being carried on with regard to flax but there is no need for me to dwell on that industry as the subject has been very fully discussed here recently.

We are making every possible effort to reach the people through our publications and through the press. We encourage visits to these farms where farmers can investigate for themselves and where everything is very fully explained to them. In this way I think the Experimental Farms are rendering a very valuable service to this country,—one that we hardly sufficiently realize and one that is certainly not appreciated by the man who is not an actual practical farmer. Only the other day I had a farmer from the old country out at the Experimental Farm. He was very enthusiastic indeed over the system and over the Farm and the opportunities that it afforded the farmer to secure every possible information that can be obtained in connection with this work and at no cost to himself. In such a vast country as ours where the conditions vary very much in different sections, it is necessary that a great deal of experimental work should be carried on, especially in view of the development of our agricultural resources, and I agree with the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) that money is well spent along these lines.

In regard to the resolution, I can hardly agree with the hon. member that there has been any unfairness in the treatment of Ontario. While the Central Experimental Farm here does work that is of value to all the other provinces, still it is rendering a special service to Ontario inasmuch as it is easily accessible to the great majority of the farmers of this province. In locating these experimental farms our aim is not provincial, but rather to meet the varying conditions which are found to exist throughout the Dominion. We expend on experimental farms in Ontario about $409,979 annually, and it will be found that we are expending in that province more money per head of population than in any other province.

The limits of extension of our experimental farm system have not by any means been reached; many sections still require these farms, and I have a great deal of sympathy for the suggestion of the hon. member that an experimental farm is necessary in western Ontario. He was rather a good prophet, however, when he predicted that I would make the excuse of our finances being short this year as the reason for not undertaking any further extension of our system. That is mainly the excuse which I have to offer, and I am inclined to think that if he had had my experience of the difficulties of trying to get money, he would accept my excuse without demur. I feel there is room for extension work not only in Ontario but in many of the other provinces, including northern British Columbia, the Peace River district, southwestern Saskatchewan, and probably the provinces to the east of us.

To give you an idea, Mr. Speaker, of the wonderful variety of the conditions we have to deal with, I may say that on the farm at Sydney, a few miles from Victoria, B.C., we are growing figs and oranges in the open. After my experience of two springs in Ontario I would be very loath to recommend this climate for the culture of such fruits. The contrast is striking, and it well illustrates the necessity for experimental stations all over the country.

The hon. member referred to the very heavy expenditure for wages during the year 1918-19. It will be remembered that a very special effort was made during that year to produce as much root seed as possible, for the reason that before the war we had been depending largely on Germany for our supply, and that source being cut off it was absolutely necessary to produce our seed at home. I am glad to say that many sections took up this branch of agriculture with very good results, and we are now producing seed second to none.

My hon. friend stated that the Board of Commerce paralysed the pork industry. I think that statement needs to be qualified somewhat, because if he had watched the markets very closely he would have noticed that the prices fell in Chicago before the order of the Board of Commerce was issued. As a matter of fact the markets across the water were "plugged," and packers cannot send pork to a market that does not want it. Finding that their output was cut off, the packers promptly began to "shorten up" at this end. No doubt the condition is largely due to the financial situation overseas, where in many instances it is impossible to make arrangements to guarantee payment for what is sold. Under these conditions it was only natural that the packers in self defence and to make themselves safe should limit their purchases of pork.

I would like to say to the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, that I heartily sympathize with his plea for an experimental farm in western Ontario, and I shall be very glad to move in the matter as soon as financial conditions will permit. Therefore I hope he will consent to withdraw his resolution.

Mr. WILLIAM SMITH (Ontario South): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest and pleasure to the speeches of the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Tolmie), particularly so as I am personally very much interested in the subject under discussion. I may be excused if I say that to a certain extent I was a party to the establishment of our experimental farms many years ago, and I do not think any one will take exception to the statement that they were established on right lines and have accomplished a great deal of good.

My only object in rising, Mr. Speaker, is to state that I think the Minister of Agriculture might have gone one step further—and so might the hon. member for South Oxford—for it appears to me that while these farms have accomplished a great deal, what we want to-day is to show the farmer how he can make farming pay. To that end I would like to see the Department of Agriculture set aside in different places throughout the Dominion a certain acreage of land and put a man upon it with an understanding that he must make that farm pay. Then we will know exactly what can be accomplished. Until that is done, all these experimental farms, whilst they are accomplishing a great deal of good, and whilst I value highly their record and believe that they will do a great deal to serve agriculture in the days to come, yet it appears to me that one of the most practical methods to adopt is to prove to the farmer that his farm can be made to pay interest upon his investment.

I realize to the fullest extent that it is extremely hard to make both ends meet, and in view of our present financial conditions I sympathize with the Minister of Agriculture, but it appears to me that as soon as the finances of the country will allow, he should set aside farms of so many acres in one place and another from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and put in charge of those farms practical men, so that they may be able to demonstrate that farming can be made to pay. Then I say that his department will be doing one of the best things that it has ever accomplished for the benefit of agriculture.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. SPEAKER: I must point out to the House that after the mover of the resolution exercises his right to reply the debate will be closed.

Mr. J. E. S. E. d'ANJOU (Rimouski) (Translation): Mr. Speaker, representing, as I do, a division which is essentially made up of farmers, I feel in duty bound to express my opinion on the question so ably submitted by the houourable member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland). I must first congratulate my honourable friend on his persistence in dealing with this matter at every session. Surely, this resolution is one of the most reasonable which have been submitted to the House, this year. Some of the resolutions presented this session did advocate the establishment of systems which would have entailed a fabulous expenditure of money with no practical result in the public interest. The honourable minister of Agriculture concluded his speech by a statement to the effect that new experimental farms would be established in the province of Ontario whenever our financial circumstances permitted of it. I understand that this is the main object of the resolution. But Ontario is not the only province comprising rural constituencies where experimental farms would be of the utmost importance. The county of Rimouski, for instance, would be an ideal situation for an experimental farm. It is settled by farmers, as I have already said, and there are model farmers in that riding who, take the first prizes as against all other competitors, at every exhibition. Therefore, when the Government deems it proper to establish new experimental farms in Ontario, they should see to it that such a farm is also established in Rimouski, and I now rise in the name of the electors of that division to voice such a request. True it is that the present financial condition of the country is deplorable, but it seems that the Government would never be expending too much money to encourage our main industry. If Canada is to come out of the rut and to take her flight towards prosperity, it is necessary that we should encourage agriculture, a source of wealth above all, which will help us, in a large measure, to pay the accumulated debts and the expenses resulting from the war. The Government, levish as they are when about buying railways or granting contracts for millions of dollars without calling for tenders, should not hold out as a pretence that our financial condition does not now allow of increasing the number of experimental farms whether in Ontario or in any other one of the provinces. As was said by the speakers who have preceded me, it is a well known fact that experimental farms do render very great services in the localities where they are established, and such is their importance that the Government should not hesitate to establish some wherever they are needed, especially in the county which I have the honour to represent.

A resolution was moved by an honourable member, the other day, to the effect that we should organize an army in Canada. To my mind, the army which we ought to organize should include but soldiers of the soil and have nothing to do with future wars. I think the Government would be justified in adopting the resolution moved by the honourable member for South-Oxford and carrying it out through the establishment of new experimental farms in the different provinces. They would show, thereby, their desire to promote the welfare of Canada and enable her to pay her debt and to be progressive again as she was from 1896 to 1911.

Mr. CASSELMAN: I move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Mr. Speaker,——

Mr. SPEAKER: This motion is not debatable.

Motion agreed to, and the debate adjourned.

DEVELOPMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

Mr. ROBERT JAMES MANION (Fort William and Rainy River) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, it is advisable that the Government should as soon as possible bring forward a policy having for its object the development of the natural resources of Canada.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I had not intended moving this resolution at this late hour of a sitting which closes at six o'clock; but owing to the uncertainty as regards private members' days in future, I felt that even if some hon. members who intended taking part in this debate were unfortunately precluded from doing so, the subject was perhaps of sufficient importance that it should not be left out altogether. Therefore, even at the risk of some hon. members who may wish to discuss this matter being crowded out, I am taking it up at so late an hour in the afternoon. I dealt with this subject at the first session in which I had the honour of sitting in this House, the spring session of 1918, I took it up again in the spring session of 1919; and I am so deeply impressed with the importance of the subject that I am taking it up again today because I am strongly of the opinion that it is important for this country as soon as possible to work out some policy by which the natural resources of Canada may be developed in such a way as to improve our financial condition. If one may judge by the many orations which have been made by speakers of all nationalities, creeds, and political colours, in this country, in which orations those speakers have eulogised our great natural resources and spoken of the great future which is before this country because of them, one may well be led to believe that the subject is a popular one. But unless some of those orations are implemented by actions on the part of whatever Government may happen to be in power; in other words, unless some policy is worked out whereby those natural resources are developed, then the orations, volumes of them, are of no use to this country. The party which works out that policy will win not only the applause but the approval of the people of Canada. I admit that it is not an easy matter to work out a policy of that kind; but if the best brains of this country are set to the task, the result will be that some policy will be evolved whereby those natural resources will be developed.

Raw materials rule the world of commerce, and the country which possesses them has inestimable advantages over countries which do not. Canada possesses those raw materials in great abundance; and while some of them, such as agriculture, are being worked to a great extent, although not satisfactorily as has been illustrated by the discussion to which we have just listened, others, such as coal, iron, and oil are not being worked as they could be to the benefit of Canada. Iron, coal and oil are three of the great needs of any commercial country; and if you look over the commercial history of England, Germany, France, or the United States, you will find that their commercial development has been directly in proportion to their production of pig iron and steel. During the quarter of a century immediately preceding the war, Germany increased her steel production twelve times; the United States increased hers thirteen times, while Great Britain increased hers only two and one-half times, and all the members of this House know that in that quarter of a century Germany and the United States were rapidly gaining in international commerce and trade upon Great Britain. Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States were the four great leading commercial nations of the world before the war, and they were also the four great nations which were producing the greatest quantity of pig iron and steel. The same statement could be made in regard to other materials that are produced, but this is a statement which has been made by many economic writers, and I have recently read two books on economics by able economists who emphasize that fact.

Iron, coal and oil are the basic elements of commercial progress, and yet Canada, which claims that she possesses within her borders large quantities of those raw materials, imports immense amounts of them. Without going into details, I shall give to the House Canada's importations of those three materials for the fiscal years ending March 31, 1917, 1918, 1919. The figures are as follows:

	1917.	1918.	1919.
Coal, hard and soft..	$ 42,076,426	$ 74,324,941	$ 70,603,005
Iron and steel, including products and machinery.. ..	125,613,617	159,309,323	161,619,059
Oils, mineral, fish and others ...	21,619,694	35,338,137	45,767,021
Total..	$189,309,737	$268,972,401	$277,989,085

These materials have a great effect upon the exchange situation, and we all know that the exchange has been against us, particularly in relation to the United States during the past year. These materials which form such a large part of the imports into this country are the very materials of which we claim we have vast quantities lying dormant in the soil of Canada. I shall leave the question of coal and oil to be discussed by a number of speakers who are to follow me, and shall go a little into detail in regard to iron ore.

In my address to the House in 1918 I went into considerable detail in regard to iron ore, and I quoted many authorities to the effect that Canada stood very high in regard to her deposits of iron ore. One authority even went so far as to say that if a proper record were made Canada would stand very high, if not actually first, among the prospective iron producing countries of the world. In the Ottawa Evening Journal the other day I saw an article by Mr. Kidd, K.C., in which he claimed, and quoted authorities for his claim, that there was lying within a few miles of this city 250,000,000 tons of iron ore which could be developed. Despite all this ore which we have in Canada very little Canadian ore is being used in the blast furnaces and steel plants of Canada to-day. Only four per cent was used in 1917 and 1918, while in 1896 the percentage of Canadian iron ore used in the blast furnaces and steel plants of this country amounted to 67 per cent, in 1897, to 49 per cent; in 1898, 42 per cent; 1909, 17 per cent; in 1916, 11 per cent, and in 1917 and 1918 only four per cent. It may be added, in fairness, that in 1916, 1917 and 1918, in addition to what we used in our blast furnaces we exported an average of 150,000 tons. In 1918, while we used only 4 per cent of Canadian iron ore we imported 2,200,000 tons from other countries, two-fifths of which came from Wabana, Newfoundland, and three-fifths from the United States. It may reasonably be asked why, if we have so much iron ore lying dormant in this country, we import so much. Why is not our own ore used in the blast furnaces and steel plants of this country? The answer is that so far the iron deposits of Newfoundland and of the United States are of a richer grade. That statement was disputed, however, by a mining man to whom I made it, but personally I think that the United States and Newfoundland ores are richer than anything we have discovered so far in large quantities in Canada. Then the ores of the United States and Newfoundland are more easily mined, and there is the further fact that some of our Canadian iron ores contain deleterious substances, such as sulphur which has to be roasted out, which process adds very considerably to the cost. Furthermore, vast American corporations owning their own plants, their own railways and steamship lines, are working their own iron ores in the United States, and therefore it is very difficult for us to compete. It has been stated to me by authorities who have visited both sides of the line that the iron ore formations on the Canadian side are of exactly the same character as the formations on the American side, but the greater amount of exploration and development work that has been done on the American side has brought out richer grades than we have yet discovered because of that lack of exploration and development.

But suppose we admit for the sake of argument that our ore is inferior to that of Newfoundland and the United States. Must we also admit failure in the possibility of developing the ores we have? Must we at the first sign of difficulty throw up our hands and cry "Kamerad"? That was not our policy during the war, and it should not be our policy in commerce. It has been stated by authorities that 33 per cent of iron ore is workable on a paying basis. There have been hundreds of assays made from Nova Scotia at one end of the country to British Columbia at the other, showing iron ores of a very much higher grade than that. I have seen assays that have been made of coal near Ottawa showing as high as 60 per cent, and on the north shore of Lake Superior, both east and west of Fort William and Port Arthur, there have been hundreds of assays made showing very much more than 33 per cent, some of them running up to 60 per cent.

But one of two things is necessary for the development of these ores: Either the giving of assistance so as to put the men who are developing these ores on the same financial basis as the men who are developing them on the American side. Or the other proposition is that this Government should make a thorough investigation of these iron deposits to show investors that our ores possess as great possibilities financially as the ores to be found on the American side and in Newfoundland. A great deal of money has been spent by the Government in investigating the lignites of Western Canada. I believe that we are spending $200,000 this year in briquetting lignites and in investigation work. That is a very proper thing to do. Certainly, neither free traders nor protectionists in this House could object to a thorough investigation along the same lines on the iron ores of this country. Outside of the Geological Survey we have spent practically nothing along this line. Investigation is absolutely the duty of any government. I might interject here that I have not a cent tied up in iron or iron ore; I am speaking on broad Canadian national lines only. I believe that the Government should treat the Department of Mines more generously than it has done in the past. If you will look over the Estimates for the past few years you will find that a number of departments which are not more necessary or important, if as important, as the Department of Mines are getting from two to five times the appropriation of that department. I am not alluding to such large spending departments as Public Works, and Railways and Canals, but to the Departments of Immigration, Mounted Police, Dominion Lands, Indian Affairs, Fisheries, and Penitentiaries. Only a comparatively small appropriation is made for the Department of Mines despite the great mineral development which has gone on in Canada, and despite the vast possibilities which this country has in further mineral development. I think it is false economy which permits a government to pay such meagre salaries to scientific and mining men that 50 per cent of the scientific field men of the Mines Department have resigned in the last year or so and gone to work for private companies. That is not good economy. Only the other day, on February 23, in the British Columbia House, the Hon. Mr. Sloan moved a notice of motion along these very lines, that the Government should spend more in the line of investigating British Columbia mining lands, and the same policy should be adopted in every province of this country. During the war we spent about two billion dollars on destructive processes of war, and it seems that it is but a fair request on the part of the people to ask that we now spend a certain amount of money, as large an amount as we can finance, on the constructive processes of peace. Due to the war our taxes have doubled, having risen from about $175,000,000 to about $350,000,000 or more per annum. That is due to the increases in interest from $15,000,000 to $115,000,000, an increase in pensions from nil to $35,000,000 per annum, and to other expenditures arising out of the war. The only way to lower this taxation is by increasing our population, and an increase in population can be brought about to a certain extent at least by an increase in mineral development. A hundred years ago Canada and the United States were pretty nearly equal in population. To-day Canada has between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 people and the United States 110,000,000. That is partly due to our policy of helping them to develop their natural resources and build up their commerce rather than following the same policy with regard to our own country. It is true that without Government assistance iron ores will be developed in Canada when the depletion of American and Newfoundland ores is a little closer in sight, and it is in sight to-day. But why should we leave the development and the prosperity incident to that development to posterity. In this matter I cannot help saying with Mr. Dooley, "What has posterity done for us that we should do so much for them?" by leaving all these resources to them.

There is another reason why this is important, and that is the railway situation in this country. Due to the lack of foresight on the part of statesmen in this country for half a century of railway building, there has been no definite plan in railway construction in Canada, and the result is that to-day we have duplication and over-development in many sections. For example we have 1,300 miles of railway on three different lines from Winnipeg to Ottawa. We have three lines of railway, the Canadian Pacific railway, the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, and any one who looks over the country must know that two lines would have been sufficient. That, however, is only an example; the same condition exists from Montreal to Toronto, and there is over-duplication in various other parts of the country. In fact, in every part of Canada there is unnecessary duplication. We have in this country 40,000 miles of railway, over half of which is in the hands of the Canadian people, and it might be worth while to compare the figures of the Canadian railway system with those of other countries. Canada has one mile of railway to every two hundred persons; the United States, one mile to every four hundred; Great Britain, one mile to every two thousand; Russia, one mile to every four thousand. Canada has four or five times the mileage of railway that Japan has with a population of 56,000,000; three times the mileage of Italy with 36,000,000. We have a greater mileage than Great Britain with 45,000,000, a greater mileage than France with 40,000,000, and an equal mileage with Germany, which has a population of 65,000,000. These figures illustrate quite plainly the over-development of our railways. In other words, we have not the population sufficient to provide the necessary railway traffic. Mineral development would help to secure this traffic, and it is stated—I think authoritatively—that in the United States forty-seven per cent of the railway traffic consists of the carrying of mineral products. The percentage is very much smaller in this country.

Another important reason why coal, oil and iron should be developed is the fact that they are all exhaustible materials. The time may not be very distant in the future when the United States may consider it sound politics and good business to put an embargo to a certain extent on the exportation of these materials from that country, and it is highly important that we should reach the stage of absolute independence of any action which the United States may feel called upon to take.

An objection has been made that our coal supplies are insufficient for the proper development of such materials as iron; yet

Canada claims to have the greatest coal deposits in the world, with the exception of the deposits of the United States. I admit that our deposits are localized in far extreme points of Canada, but the day is coming, not far in the future, when Canada's coal supplies will suffice for at least her own needs. At any rate, it is to be hoped that they will; and this condition will be brought about by improvements in transportation, particularly water transportation, as, for example, the building of a St. Lawrence canal system or a Georgian Bay system whereby the Great Lakes will be made the Mediterranean of America. When that day comes, Mr. Speaker, I foresee this happy circumstance, that between Winnipeg and Fort William the coal of Nova Scotia will say a glowing good morning to the coal of the Prairia Provinces, and that will be the time when Canadian coal will supply the necessities of the Dominion. Then we have vast quantities of potential electrical power; there are nineteen million horsepower of potential electricity in the waterfalls of Canada, only ten per cent of which is developed. Electricity and coal are our two great sources of energy, but while coal is exhaustible, electricity is not. It is one of the few materials which you can go on using indefinitely without fear of exhausting the supply, and electric smelters will help, and are helping at the present time in Toronto, to develop the mineral resources of the country.

You may wonder, Mr. Speaker, what proposition I am endeavouring to put up to the Government after these preliminary remarks. I am going to offer suggestions which have been put forward by different people, and leave them with the Government for their consideration. The first suggestion which some one has made is that the tariff be raised against raw materials; second, that the Government itself should develop these resources; third, that the Government guarantee bonds of a private corporation and allow that corporation to develop the resources of the country; fourth, that a partnership be formed between the Government and a private corporation such as the shell-oil proposition of Alberta and the Peace River district; fifth, that a bonus or bounty be paid on iron ore raised in the mines of Canada and used in Canadian steel plants; sixth, that a committee or commission be appointed to go into the question and recommend to the Government what should be done. Commissions are not very popular in this country just now, although I think sometimes that the great cries against them are partly due to the fact that there exists an adverse opinion in regard to commissions for commissions have been appointed in this country that have done good work. The seventh proposition is that a thorough investigation by competent mining men be made covering the whole question, and neither protectionists nor free-traders could object to such an investigation. I care not which one of the suggestions the Government might determine to adopt, so long as it adopts one of them. The important thing is that the Government should undertake some policy whereby the mineral development of the country will be extended, as I believe it should be extended, and whereby all the orations that have been made will be implemented by effective action; because, after all, orations are of absolutely no use unless they are properly implemented. Some policy should be adopted to insure the proper development of our natural resources from one end of the country to the other. Let some action be taken, for this is one of the possible methods by which we may increase the population, lessen the taxes, enhance our property, secure a market for our agricultural products, give employment to the unemployed, provide freight for our over-developed railway system, make ourselves commercially independent of the United States, and generally help to give the Dominion of Canada its proper place among the advancing industrial nations of the world.

Mr. W. D. COWAN (Regina): I have much pleasure in seconding the resolution moved by the hon. member for Fort William and Rainy River (Mr. Manion), who I think is quite right in saying that there has arisen an urgent demand throughout Canada for the development of our natural resources. In the part of the country from which I come there has been in the last year or two a strong demand in this respect. Our young men are of the opinion that the natural resources of the country should be developed for the benefit of the Canadian people, and they as workingmen are entitled to the opportunity that would be afforded them by the development of these resources, which would provide abundant employment. At present our working men and women find it difficult to secure employment in Western Canada, and that is one of the reasons why so many of them have left that country and gone to the United States. Now, that is one of the problems which we want to tackle, for this sort of emigration should not be permitted; we should do everything possible to prevent it. There has been in our part of the country a very insistent demand for the development of our natural resources, and so strong has that demand become that in some quarters there is a movement on foot to get the Government to establish a Ministry of Science and Industry, with a minister who will give sufficient attention to this important phase of national work. We do not ask that the number of ministers should be increased, but we are anxious that this matter should be provided for. Wherever we go we find that our best public men are dealing with this question, and recently Professor McLaurin, of Saskatchewan University, speaking in Saskatoon to a body of business men, made statements similar to those quoted by the hon. member for Fort William. In his concluding remarks he said:

> Canada's natural resources are second only to the United States, but up to the present time is considered chiefly in terms of agriculture, but the time has come when industrial development is essential to a permanent system of agriculture and a national industrial consciousness must be created.

I fancy that a number of the wealthier men of Canada, probably manufacturers, will say: Yes, let us develop as quickly as possible a national industrial consciousness; and it is not only among our workingmen and young people that that national consciousness should be developed. It seems to me that our banks, our wealthier men and our governments should realize the importance of this viewpoint.

I am going to read just a few words from a recent interview given by Sir George Bury, upon his return from China where he had been on a business trip, dealing with this very thing. I quote Sir George Bury because I fancy he will not be accused of being an enemy of the manufacturers of Canada. Yet he speaks very plainly and, I think, very properly to them. He recognizes, as I recognize and as I think we must all recognize, that our industrial development depends to a large extent upon the development of the natural resources of Canada. He said:

> Yet, while the United States, Great Britain and all the lesser fry are busy developing trade in the Orient, Canadian manufacturers are sitting back in their revolving chairs doing nothing. I met a Canadian manufacturer in Japan, who was asked to figure on some business. His reply was that he was there for a holiday, and not for business. An energetic salesman in China secured an order for several thousand hand cultivators and tried to get them made in the East. The order was turned down because it involved the expenditure of a few thousand dollars for dies and templates. Those two incidents are characteristic of the attitude of the Canadian manufacturers to Oriental trade.

Then he goes on:

> Our wonderful national resources will be only a mockery to us unless we utilize them for the benefit of the world, and for our own advantage. The world needs the products of our soil, our forests, mines and waters, and we, as the custodians of these great resources have a trust to which we must live up, and for which we must worthily account, or be in default. It is not only a national duty to the world we owe, but a domestic obligation to our own people to provide profitable occupation for all our people.

I quote him because I know that I could not express my view better than, or as well as he has done. It seems to me that a national industrial consciousness is required among the wealthier men of Canada who are in a position to do the developing of these natural resources because our workingmen cannot be expected to do it; they have not the capital and it is only the wealthier men and the Government that can do it. For that reason I think a policy ought to be adopted by this Government not only for themselves to follow but which would induce capitalists and the wealthier men of Canada to engage in these undertakings.

The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Manion) has dealt almost entirely with iron and properly so. He has a great deal of iron in his particular locality. I am not so competent to speak of these things, but when it comes down to the development of our natural resources we are more or less confined to the natural resources which are within our several provinces, because we can best speak of these.

That brings me back to the province of Saskatchewan. As soon as I get there I find myself up against an absolutely impossible condition. The condition is this: Unlike almost every other province of Canada, our province does not yet own its natural resources. They are held in trust, so to speak, by this Government. I confess to believing, and I have no hesitancy in saying, that to-day one of the first complaints our people have is over the question of lumber. Our country is experiencing a building boom such as it has never experienced before. Our building will be limited only by the supply of lumber. Our lumber, it is true, has chiefly come, in days gone by, from British Columbia. It is there yet but we cannot get it. While we are dependent to a large extent on British Columbia the fact remains that in Saskatchewan we have a great deal of lumber which could be made of great benefit to us and which might be used if we only had the means of getting it. True it is not the kind of lumber you find in these panels around this Chamber, but it is lumber which can be used in a great many of our buildings, it is in demand by the American people and a large amount of it is sold to our American cousins across the border. What can we do? Those who have travelled through, as many of you have, on the Canadian Pacific railway, probably have come to the conclusion that as far as timber is concerned our province is a barren country. It is not so, as the following figures with regard to timber lands in the province of Saskatchewan will show:

	acres
Timber area	98,250,000
Wooded area	73,000,000
Spruce	750,000

Present available lumber supply, 7,800,000,000 board feet.

Timber berths, 85.

As far as I have been able to discover, we have only six mills in operation in that entire area. I would like to know how it comes that these 79 timber berths are held without any operations being carried on. I do not know whether they have a right to hold them without doing any work upon them or not. They should not have. But there are six mills being operated and a lot of the timber which they are producing is being sold south of the American line. While lumber is being exported from our own province, a great many people are demanding that an embargo be put upon British Columbia lumber so that they cannot export it. If the Government would hand over the timber limits in Saskatchewan to the Government of that province and let them deal with them the provincial government could, if they saw fit, make such regulations as would give to our own people the use of their own lumber, and in that way a great deal of the discontent would be allayed.

The situation is this. As long as these timber berths are controlled by the Dominion Government there is no development. The provincial government has not the right or the power to adopt a policy for the development of those resources. I saw a question on the Order Paper, which was answered by the Acting Prime Minister (Sir George Foster) about what statement was made by the Prime Minister (Sir Robert Borden) prior to the election. There is no question about it, he promised that these natural resources would be handed over to the people of the province. I myself heard him make that statement. In view of the uncertain conditions which that promise has created, a promise which has not yet been fulfilled and which would involve an entire change in the regulations covering the control of the timber areas, can we expect that the men who own these timber berths, and wealthy men generally, are going to invest their money in the development of these resources? Most undoubtedly not, because if there is one thing more than another that money is scared of it is indefiniteness and uncertainty. The Government, in the interest of the people of Saskatchewan, should end that period of indefiniteness and uncertainty as quickly as possible and hand over to our province these timber resources so that other regulations may be formed to encourage the proper development of these areas and thus give to our people what really belongs to them.

Now there is far more timber than that. I happen to have here testimony on the point from Constable Eaman of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, who has been all through that country and who states:

> Below Lac La Ronge is a great area of splendid timber.

Then again he states:

> In 1916 the value of the cut was $1,226,000. Many of the areas of timber are not yet within reach of a market. For example, there is an area of 13,000 acres at Montreal lake estimated to contain 120,000,000 feet that cannot be reached until communications are established.

All this timber is there, but for the lack of a few miles of railway our people are compelled to suffer and our progress is retarded in the way it is. So much, Mr. Speaker, for that.

We have more than timber in that section of the country, we have a great deal of coal. True it is not the very best, as yet, but it is being developed. The Government have very wisely, as was mentioned by the hon. member for Fort William, embarked upon the policy of demonstrating the feasibility of briquetting the lignites of southern Saskatchewan. A great many complaints have been made by our people that the work is being carried on very slowly but I am not one of those who join in that complaint. It is a demonstration plant and nothing else; and I want to say that I would sooner take a little longer time and have the demonstration made a complete success than hastily launch into something and find that it results in failure. I am glad to know that the Government are taking their time with this demonstration plant and carrying out the experiments properly. So long as they are making substantial progress I will be very content, and I only hope that they will continue the work and get through with it as soon as they possibly can. I am satisfied that as soon as the demonstration plant, which will manufacture some thirty thousand briquettes in one year, has been established and proven to be a success, we will have dozens of these plants established all over southern Saskatchewan and southern Manitoba. But lignite coal is not the only coal we have in southern Saskatchewan;—and I am sorry the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) is not in his place to-day because I would like to have drawn his attention to one peculiarity which he, probably more than anybody else, ought to deal with as promptly as he possibly can. To-day we are bringing all our bituminous coal from Alberta and our anthracite coal from the United States. In the city of Regina we are about six hundred miles from the bituminous coal mines in Alberta, and the city of Winnipeg is about three hundred and sixty-six miles farther away still. It so happens, however, that within the last two years a new coal field has been discovered within two hundred miles of the city of Regina, and within two hundred and fifty miles of Winnipeg. That field is now known to contain at least twenty million tons, and some estimates run as high as sixty million tons. That coal is better coal than any bituminous coal ever yet mined in Alberta. I have a copy of the analysis that was made by the Government and I have seen samples of the coal. It differs in this one respect from the other coal—that while the lignite coal at Estevan is covered with some twenty-five to fifty feet of earth this particular deposit is covered with some two hundred feet. As hon. members can very easily see the increased weight of earth covering it has resulted in greater pressure and thereby given a better quality of coal. In addition to that this particular deposit is perhaps of greater age.

Now what are the conditions? As soon as the farmers in the locality discovered this coal they incorporated themselves into a company and fixed their capital at half a million dollars. They have already spent some $80,000 in sinking shafts and are prepared to go on with operations, but unfortunately they are about eight miles from a railway and the Canadian National railway at that. Last year the Canadian National did undertake to build a spur from Lampman to Peebles which would go directly through this area, and they graded some eight or ten miles of the line from the south. About twelve miles of railway have still to be built before we get the Canadian National railway down there, but as far as I can see there is no intention of building it this summer.

Complaint is being made that we cannot get men to do this work, that there is no labour available. In this connection I will read an extract from a letter received by me from the secretary of the recently organized mining company who, as I have already said, have spent some $80,000 in development work:

> I received your letter to-day and was pleased to get news regarding the railway. I note what you say regarding the labour situation. I have been deluged with requests to obtain work for men and teams on this line. We have been in the dry belt for the last three years and the farmers are only too anxious to get out and make some money with their teams. We can supply all teams and the men to grade this road if the Canadian National railway will lay the ties and steel and oversee the work. Don't let them bluff you on the labour situation on this line.

Now this coal field is within two hundred miles of the city of Regina, and we want to buy that fuel but cannot get it. The city of Winnipeg also would be only too glad if these mines were developed, but it can be readily understood that with the mines eight miles from a railway it is utterably impossible for the company in question to develop them. Yet the mines are right at our doors and we have no means of doing what we want to do. If these mines in Saskatchewan were under the control of the Provincial Government I am quite satisfied that that Government would quickly take the necessary action to place this coal within the reach of the people who want to buy it. Of course, I quite understand that the railway companies do not want these mines opened. They would prefer to collect rates on freight coming six hundred, seven hundred or eight hundred miles away rather than on freight coming a distance of only two or three hundred miles. The former is quite an inducement for them; and that is one of the things we have had to contend with in days gone by to a far greater extent than some of you people in the East have any idea of. I urge the Government to adopt a policy calculated to bring this coal within our reach just as soon as they possibly can.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: What is the quality of the coal that the hon. gentleman has been speaking of? Has he an analysis of it?

Mr. COWAN: The thickness of the seam is seventeen feet but I have not the analysis before me. When this debate is over, however, I will procure and submit the analysis to the hon. gentleman. It demonstrates that this is not bituminous coal such as Alberta possesses.

Mr. MACKIE: I do not want the information personally, I want the country to get it.

Mr. COWAN: I can easily obtain it for the hon. gentleman. My view is this: There is room for the development in Western Canada of every coal mine we have got. The progress of the country has been, and will be, such that it will take everything that every coal mine there can produce to keep up with the demand for coal. If we can make our people generally satisfied and put them into a prosperous condition every mine in the province will have all that it can do.

But it is not merely coal mines that we want to see developed in our country. We want a development policy also with respect to our farm products. So much has been heard about No. 1 Hard wheat that some people think the province of Saskatchewan cannot raise anything but that cereal. There was a time probably when we did not do much more than raise No. 1 Hard wheat, but we are very quickly getting away from that type of farming. I am glad to see it because personally I am one who does not believe in putting all our eggs into one basket. A short time ago I asked the Board of Trade of Regina to give me a statement showing what they thought could be done in the way of industrial development in Western Canada. Now all Boards of Trade are generally pretty sensible bodies of men and when you come to the Board of Trade of Regina you have got something pretty good. The Board of Trade has declared:

> Another very important industry in the development of this country are cold storage and packing plants. Saskatchewan has at the present time 352,989 cows, 926,342 other cattle, 134,177 sheep, 521,240 swine and 8,000,000 chickens. The total value of livestock, including poultry, of all descriptions, is $271,377,044, and not an abattoir or packing plant of any size in the country. It is true there is a small packing plant at Moose Jaw, one at Prince Albert and one in Regina, but these are totally inadequate to take care of the needs of that industry in the province.
>
> In the year 1917, as compared with 1916, Saskatchewan more than doubled the number of cattle marketed. Of cattle, hogs and sheep Saskatchewan marketed 303,254 head, as compared with Manitoba's 229,292 and Alberta's 144,734. Manitoba's increase for the year over 1916 was 33,825, Alberta's increase was 52,361; combined increase for the provinces of Manitoba and Alberta, 85,186. Saskatchewan's increase alone was 93,545, thus, notwithstanding the splendid increase made by Manitoba and Alberta, Saskatchewan did better than either or both combined.

And not an abattoir or packing plant of any size in the whole province! I wish those words could reach a few of our wealthier men, to show them what a splendid opportunity presents itself there for the investment of some of their money. I feel satisfied they would make just as big profits out of plants established in Regina as they do out of many of the plants which they have here.

An Hon. MEMBER: What about Calgary?

Mr. COWAN: I do not care whether they establish plants in Regina or anywhere else so long as they get them in Western Canada. I want to see the whole of Western Canada prosperous by the development of our natural resources. I am sure that Calgary will not object to see Regina prosperous, and I know we are very glad to see Calgary going ahead. I believe Calgary by reason of its splendid situation and its natural advantages—water powers all around, timber within easy distance, and situated on the edge of the greatest market on the continent—I say I believe that Calgary is destined to be one of the largest industrial cities on the North American continent. Provided, of course, that the people of Calgary get busy and take advantage of the opportunities confronting them. If instead of developing those opportunities they sit around idle and apathetic, of course they will not get anywhere.

I have stated why I am supporting the resolution offered by the member for Fort William (Mr. Manion). We have unlimited natural opportunities in the West. Our clays are unquestionably the best in the world for manufacturing pottery of all kinds. If any hon. member doubts my statement, let him read the records of the Department of Agriculture. I remember, a little more than two years ago at a meeting of the city Commissioners of Regina, a bright young man came before us. He told us that he had been for the past three years representing the Dominion Government in investigating the clay deposits of the province of Saskatchewan, and he said: I thought I would come in and tell you that, in my opinion, you have the best clays that can be found anywhere for the manufacture of pottery. I wish to draw the attention of the Government and of the investing public to the fact so that those natural resources may be developed.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I wish to cite the opinion of a geologist in reference to our asphaltum, and I would like it to sink into the minds of hon. members. My authority is Dr. Bosworth, a British geologist, who is now chief geologist for the Imperial Oil Company. He published a brief account of his findings in Northern Alberta in the "Petroleum World" of February 1915, in which occurs the following paragraph:

> "The exposure of asphaltum visible along this river is greater than all the other known asphaltic outcrops, pitch lakes and oil seepages in the world put together."

Yet we are doing absolutely nothing with those resources! That is what I object to. Seemingly we have no policy at all so far as our natural resources are concerned. I urge upon the Government to take this matter up as quickly as they can in order that they may adopt a policy for the development of these great natural resources, or if the Government do not feel justified in developing them directly, I would suggest that they take measures to bring before the investing public the fact that these opportunities are awaiting men of capital and enterprise and will ensure them magnificent returns.

Mr. D. L. REDMAN (East Calgary): Mr. Speaker, I presume I will not be out of order in prefacing the few remarks I have to offer by approaching the subject from the viewpoints of people holding diverse political creeds. I think we can now unhesitatingly come to the conclusion that we have passed the time when individualism was the groundwork of all political policy, and when it was dogmatically said that laissez faire was the only policy for Governments. The last four years of the war unquestionably demonstrated what governments are able to do in some respects. It may be urged that governments in developing natural resources are verging on Socialism, which is the other extreme. It seems to me that such a contention would not be well founded, because the socialistic doctrine as we now have it from one end of the world to the other is based on the form of government at present in control in Russia, and although the advocates of Socialism call it by different names, they all agree on the fundamentals of the Soviet government.

[Mr. Cowan.]

But between those two extremes there is a legitimate field for governmental endeavour. We have seen in the last few years how such countries as Germany and the United States went ahead industrially a great deal faster than Great Britain. In this connection, I may say that I have no qualms of conscience in benefiting from such lessons as Germany before the war was able to give us. While references to the war are perhaps becoming somewhat obsolete, I know our soldiers never hesitated to take from the German soldiers any new fighting wrinkles they might have, whilst giving the enemy some of their own. I believe that if to-day we adopt some such middle course as government supervision or assistance in developing our natural resources, we will be taking a sound course and one which will greatly redound to the advantage of Canada.

Through accident, or it may be through policy, as one may care to view it, we have to-day control of a very extensive railway system and are rapidly completing the building of a magnificent merchant marine. Having got thus far, we must develop our natural resources and our exportable products if we are to make our railway and our fleet pay their way.

We have to-day a further incentive to action in that we have a national debt of over two billion dollars, and it seems to me in no way can we liquidate that indebtedness with greater certainty than by adopting the sound policy of developing our natural resources. I need only point out the example of Ontario, where the stumpage charges are bringing an enormous revenue into the provincial treasury.

With a policy of development, if the work is done under private ownership, the question of definite royalties and payments of that sort arises, and these should bring in substantial revenues to the State. There is no other country in which the natural resources are greater than those of Canada in proportion to population, and therefore I have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that we stand on firm ground when we say that it is a good general policy for the Government to develop its natural resources, to give assistance possibly to private persons who go into that business, and in any event to have a strong policy, a policy which should bring this country to the financial condition to which it is entitled much earlier than would be reached under ordinary conditions. It is true that we have a policy at present; that we have done something. We have the Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial research, which is doing good work so far as it goes. We have the Department of Mines which is doing excellent work, the Geological Survey Branch, the Commission of Conservation and other similiar institutions; but we have never given these bodies sufficient power or scope to enable them to carry on their work properly. I believe I am correct in stating that if any private business corporation owned the resources of this country, they would not have this more or less haphazard and immature policy of development which now pertains in Canada; a private enterprise with these vast resources at their disposal would go at them in a scientific and businesslike way, because we must all realize to-day that one thing which the war has brought forward is this, that the chemists and chemistry in business have come to the front as they never have before. Therefore, the Government would be well advised in bringing forward a definite, firm and comprehensive policy. There may be those who will say that at present, when the war is just over, we should not spend large sums of money on this sort of work; but I do not think that is sound economics, because only by spending large sums can you bring about greater development and get a revenue larger than any sum you might spend. To be penny wise and pound foolish is not good policy.

Then there comes the question which has already been discussed by other speakers, that of handing over our resources to the provinces. I will say, without hesitation, that this is something which should be done. It is something which has been promised, and that promise should be implemented, but I am concerned not so much with that aspect of the question as with the fact that something should be done now. Let some decision be reached whereby either the Dominion Government or the provincial governments will realize their responsibilities and will be able to bring down now a policy for the years that are to come. The point in regard to that question is that something definite should be done now; but as nothing has been done, the responsibility to-day is the responsibility of the Dominion Government, and to that Government we, therefore, address any remarks which we may have to make. If the Dominion Government should, in the near future, hand over to the western provinces their natural resources, there still remains for the Dominion Government a great field in the way of industrial research, of standardization, of exporting the results of these developments, and to all these problems the Dominion Government could very well give considerable attention.

It is natural, in speaking of this subject, that I should refer mainly to Alberta from which I come. It is true that up to date our basic industry has been agriculture; and while I may not have all the facts in connection with this subject at my disposal, it appears to me that the Government must have a policy for exporting our wheat from that part of the country next year. I do not know where that wheat will be sold, except such portions of our high grade wheat as are required in the United States to mix with their wheat, unless it be sold on the continent of Europe, and I do not know of any country there which is able to finance its purchases, except by accepting the very great difference in exchange which now exists and which, as a rule, you will find them unwilling to accept. The Government must realize not only that they will have to handle this situation next year, but that they must take care of the export, of that equally important feature of agriculture, namely, the cattle industry. I can see no fundamental difference between the agricultural industry and the live-stock industry; we can never develop Western Canada as a wheat-growing country alone and at the same time expect that our soil will last for years to come; we must have both the cattle and the wheat. We cannot consume all the cattle which we already raise and the surplus must be exported in some way or another. Whether we shall have to revert to barter and exchange or accept long term notes of foreign governments, we must, if we wish to keep our wheat and cattle business on the basis on which we now have it and at which the extent of our land and the fertility of our soil demand that we carry it, face that difficulty now.

There is also in Southern Alberta the question of irrigation. A large tract of land is there mapped out ready for irrigation, and while I am not prepared at this moment to say what is the duty of the Dominion Government, or the duty of the provincial government in connection with that matter, the Dominion Government should at all times be ready to co-operate with the provincial government in bringing along that much needed development.

What I wish to speak of more especially to-day is the mineral potentialities and possibilities of Alberta. One, perhaps, gets the impression that Alberta and the other Western Provinces are entirely agricultural provinces, but that is far from the truth.

Last year Alberta was the third province in the Dominion of Canada as regards its mineral output, and in 1918, the output of minerals in Alberta amounted to $23,000,000.

It is true that we have had no exhaustive survey of our iron ores in that province, but iron ore indications are in evidence right from the Crow's Nest Pass up through Calgary to the far North where on the lakes large quantities of iron are to be found. It is very possible that we shall find that iron to be of a low grade, and it is for this Government to deal with the question whether low grade iron can be scientifically reduced as a commerical venture. I hope I shall not weary the House if I read just a very few lines from the report of the Honorary Advisory Committee on Scientific and Industrial research in regard to this question. The report states:

> The investigation of the reduction of iron ores by gases, under the supervision of Professor Stansfield, of McGill University, has advanced to a stage which promises important results bearing on the utilization of ores of low grades so abundant in Canada. There is but a small supply of high grade iron ore in the Dominion, which is emphasized by the fact that 96 per cent of all the iron ore smelted in Canada is imported, this importation including, of course, that obtained from Belle Isle, Newfoundland. The total quantity of high grade iron ore on the Globe available is, through its use for producing iron and steel, diminishing at a rate which makes its exhaustion a not far distant event, and in consequence it will eventually be necessary to turn to those of lower grades for the supply of ore for the industry. If the smelting could be effected on an industrial scale at a reduction in the cost which would offset the disadvantages at present attendant on the utilization of these lower grade ores it would make available, immediately or in the very near future, the immense quantities of such ores in Canada. The Research Council regards the solution of this problem as of very great importance to Canadian industry and as justifying a protracted experimental investigation carried on on a large scale.

The reason why I have read this is that I think the Government should make a most thorough survey of the possibilities of iron ore in Alberta. They should not hesitate in aiding scientific men in endeavouring to reduce those low grade ores as a commerical venture, because if that can be done, we have in Alberta coal which is practically illimitable in quantity and easy to mine, but which is now valueless because we have no use to which to put it. Possibly when these investigations proceed further, it will be found that Alberta will be an excellent place in which to put those investigations into operation first, because with coal which is practically valueless and in such abundant quantities that you can go into practically any area of the province and erect your plant, sink your shaft and get your fuel, it is possible that low grade ores can be handled economically as an industrial proposition. The House has heard many times how much coal we have in Alberta. We have in that province one-eighth of all the coal in the world. It is not all lignite; it is anthracite, bituminous and lignite in practically unlimited quantities. Those who are perhaps not familiar with our lignite coal think that it is in the nature of a new experimental substance which one can use for heat, but it is real coal after all.

It is an excellent coal for domestic use, just as good as, and in my opinion better than, any kind of anthracite or bituminous coal. In 1918 our production of coal amounted to 6,000,000 tons, the highest of any province in Canada.

Two things are required in order to increase the development of our coal in the province of Alberta. One is to extend the market area, and the other is to encourage coal using industries in that province. With regard to the extension of our market area, that brings us to the question of our railways. I am not one of those who would be continuously clamouring for reduced rates in order to please the people of this country, but I do say this: When rates can be reduced and the result from such reduction shall be the development of natural resources which will increase the commodities which the railways will haul, I think we are talking pretty sound economics when we ask that such reductions be made. It is true that the railways, requiring traffic westward, desire to bring anthracite coal to Western Canada from Fort William and have wheat as a return haul from the West. It is against that influence that it will be necesary for us to fight. The Drumheller association of coal operators have made a most reasonable request to the Railway Commission lately to this effect: That during the months of April, May, June, July and August, when no wheat is moving, and when cars and equipment are standing idle throughout Western Canada awaiting the time when they will be used for hauling the crop, some reduction be made in the coal rate from Alberta down to Port Arthur. That would serve three purposes. First, it would utilize the railway equipment; secondly, it would enable the mines to run the year round, and thirdly, it would obviate the difficulty which occurs every winter when the whole of Western Canada tries to be supplied at the one time with coal from the mines, and often without success. It has been proven that our coal will stand up for six months, and it seems to me a reasonable and proper policy for the Railway Commission or the Government to reduce the rate during this period in order to get these three excellent results. Our vision perhaps soars to the day when we will supply the country further east than Fort William. If the carbonizing and briquetting experiments which are now being conducted on Saskatchewan coal are successful, they will unquestionably be successful with Alberta coal, and with those experiments a success our coal in the form of briquettes, equal in heating value and every other respect to anthracite would surely come east of Fort William and go a long way towards bridging the great central part of Canada which in 1918 imported no less than $71,000,000 worth of coal from the United States.

In connection with the briquetting process we have the by-products of distillation. We get tar, on which is built up the analine dye industry. In view of the quantity of coal we have in Alberta, if we can get that coal produced, briquetted, and sold, we will have an enormous quantity of this tar base on which to build up our analine dye industry. Ammonia sulphate is also derived in large quantities during this process of distillation, and at the rate we are tilling the soil in the West it will be only a few years before we shall need this excellent fertilizer in that country.

In Alberta we have the Alberta Industrial Congress. It is an association for the purpose of attracting industry to Western Canada. Some may think that we are a little early, but it must be remembered that we have already on the plains of Western Canada about two and a half millions of people, which is a rather good market for young industries to start on. We have coal which is practically theirs for the asking. We have every expectation that our population will not only increase, but multiply itself in the next twenty-five years. I think it should be part of the Government policy to attract attention towards the industrial possibilities of Western Canada. It is true that the Government have voted a sum towards that congress for this year. While on this point, I think we could well afford to have one on the Pacific coast, a Pacific trade commission similar to the trade commission operating on the Eastern coast. I know from personal experience what a great trade could be worked up with the Orient, and I would direct the attention of the Government to those possibilities.

We have cement, water powers, lumber and pulpwood in great quantities throughout that country, but as other hon. members have spoken of these resources I shall say nothing further about them.

Our clay products in Alberta are of the very greatest importance. In 1918 Canada imported $6,700,000 of clay products, and Alberta produced in that year $381,000 worth. I am certain there is a great future for the development of pottery, bricks, and clay products in that province.

Then we come to the question of oil. The pursuit of oil is very similar to the pursuit of gold. It is one thing which seems to stimulate the imagination and energies of mankind more than anything else, and many incidents are bound to happen in the development of an oil field. I believe it often takes from twenty to twenty-five years of prospecting and drilling before an oil field is established. In Alberta we produced in 1918 over $100,000 worth of oil, all of which has been sold. We can say that the indications from one end of the province to the other, starting from the asphaltum sands, and going almost down to the fields of Montana, show that we have enormous oil resources in that country. The Government then can come to the conclusion that they have an oil field in Alberta. What should they do to develop it? Should they endeavour to explore and drill and develop it themselves, and then turn it over to good advantage to private companies? Perhaps that would not be an unwise policy. It is a matter for the consideration of the Government. The Government have already provided that leases shall only be granted on payment of a royalty to the Government. I think the Government made a mistake in not placing a maximum on that royalty. As it is, it is to be fixed by the Governor in Council from time to time as it may determine. You go to a firm and ask them to start work in that country, and they will say to you: Until the amount of royalty is fixed we do not know where we are at. There is no easier way of losing money than by sinking it into holes from which you get nothing. Those who spend large sums of money are entitled to know what royalty the Government intends to take. I want it to be understood, however, that I am thoroughly in accord with the policy of taking a royalty.

There is another matter in regard to oil. Alberta does not participate in the bounty of one and a half cents per gallon which the more favoured oil of Ontario gets. Our oil is of such a superior quality, it is of such low specific gravity, that it does not come within the qualifications set forth in the Order in Council governing the bounty. Though it is true that our oil is worth three times as much per gallon as the oil of Ontario, we are not asking that we be given three times as much bounty, but simply that our oil be not discriminated against, and that in that area which is not yet developed, and where men are needed to go on with the enterprise, no discrimination be made against us.

Natural gas exists in Alberta in unlimited quantities. This is not so important immediately, because it can only be used as the population increases and a domestic market is built up. I might point out that it has lately been discovered that from the Calgary gas field alone a quantity of helium valued at $3,000,000 could be extracted annually. At the present moment this new gas is going up the chimney. The cost of a plant to save this product will, I understand, not exceed $200,000, and the use to which this gas can be put is becoming increasingly wide.

At this point I want to make this statement: Eastern Canada asks us from time to time to buy its produce, probably at a little higher price than the produce of the United States, in order that we may develop Canadian industries, and that the workmen of Eastern Canada may be assured of a livelihood. We may be willing to do this, but at least we ask that if people from the East request these things of us they shall in return assist us in marketing our commodities and extending our coal market, and in increasing the production of the natural resources of our western country. This strikes me as a most fair proposition, and one that is well worthy of consideration by the Government. It is also one that might well be carried out to allay, to some extent, the present feeling that they are being unfairly dealt with, which exists in Western Canada.

In conclusion, let me express the opinion that there are some definite things that could be done. A request was made that a Natural Resources Bureau should be created, a Bureau of Scientific Investigation and Scientific Standards,, similar to that which exists in the United States and largely similar to that in England. It appears to me that the evidence taken last year before the special committee is undoubtedly sufficient to convince us that our industrial development would be greatly benefited by the institution of such a bureau. Some permanent policy of development should be undertaken by the Government and, if necessary, some responsible minister of the Crown should be in charge. I think that we should have a "national consciousness" driving towards the development of our resources, and that our policy should be complete. It should not be haphazard but comprehensive. With that stimulus and inspiration from the Government, private enterprise would feel a great deal safer; and with a sound policy behind it, capital would be disposed to go in for the development of the country's natural resources. Our geological surveys of the various ores and minerals of the country should be more thorough. Our investigations into the briquetting of lignite and the reduction of low-grade iron ores should be exhaustive, and we should not be parsimonious in our expenditures in providing help to our scientists engaged in this work. I believe that if the Government would realize the industrial potentialities of Western Canada and bring down a sound and strong policy, our natural resources would be developed and you would have in Alberta not a one-sided community, not a community with one line of industry alone, but a well-balanced community which would have within itself all those varied lines of endeavour which exist in Eastern Canada. Under such circumstances, you would have a community that would think in the same terms as do the people of Eastern Canada. The day is not far distant when we shall have twenty or twenty-five million people in Western Canada. Immigrants are coming from all parts of the world. We want to be, above all else, Canadians, and the development of the natural resources of Western Canada will put an end forever, I think, to the annexationist and the secessionist, whether he carries on his propaganda under the political or under the economic guise.

Mr. F. H. KEEFER (Port Arthur and Kenora): Permit me to say a few words in support of this motion. I should like, instead of speaking on the matter generally, to confine myself to one particular resource, and that is iron, which is one of the most important basic elements of industry. Let me lay down a few facts. In the first place, we have in Canada an enormous supply of low-grade iron ore; secondly, we have no high-grade iron ore. The last mine we found was the Helen Mine, and the high-grade ore there has been exhausted. Thirdly, of the total amount of iron ore that is used in this country, viz., over two million tons only four per cent is mined here. We might ask ourselves the question, why is it that with millions of tons of iron ore only four per cent is mined in Canada, notwithstanding that private capital and governmental enterprise have endeavoured to get it into the market? The answer is rather simple; it is because our ore is low-grade, and we must do something to raise its metallic content; in other words, we must get it into commercial use. Otherwise, that ore will lie undeveloped until high-grade ores in other parts of the world are exhausted, and in the meanwhile Canada will have to depend upon outside countries for its ores.

The question is, is that advisable? Is it worth while for us to consider the advisability of mining our own iron ore and trying to get the ninety-six per cent taken out in our own country? What are the benefits derivable from the mining of iron ore? First of all, the wages are spent in the country. Probably for every ton of ore mined, three or four dollars is spent in wages and supplies, and to-day that is all going out of this country. Of course, it goes without saying that this state of things is not advisable if it can be remedied. The railway earnings on that iron ore are also going out of the country. How much better it would be if these iron deposits which are known to exist all along the Canadian National Railway system were developed and used, and the Canadian National deficits to that extent turned into productiveness. It is well known that the iron ore railways are the most profitable railways everywhere. Between the passenger receipts and additional freight receipts, the coke and limestone, etc., that enter into smelting, a reasonable amount is always to be estimated as profit where there is an iron ore railway operating. To-day we annually provide for deficits for the railway, and surely it would be better to make these railways earn money by developing the iron in the country.

Another benefit that would be derived from such development would be the increase in population. You cannot mine one or two million tons of ore without having a large number of people engaged in connection with the work, and if we develop the industry that lies at our hand it is reasonable to assume that we could increase the population probably by fifteen or twenty thousand people, who would represent a certain national value to the treasury of Canada. Each person is known to be of some value to the state in the customs duties he pays, and the revenue which the state derives from him. It would pay to subsidize iron ore production in Canada. If we did we would also get a national benefit through increased railway revenues and the general prosperity of the country, and furthermore we would at once remove our present complete dependence on the United States. All of our iron ore in Ontario now practically comes from the United States. We are far from the Maritime Provinces. They get their ore from Newfoundland. Ontario must get hers from the United States. The time is not very far off when they may put an embargo upon iron ore as they have done upon coal, and for two or three years we will be helpless until we develop our low grade iron ore. It seems to me that we cannot be very far wrong in urging the development of our ores now.

Another benefit that would accrue from it would be that which we would derive in connection with the question of exchange. We are paying for this iron ore to come into the country from the United States. We are also paying something like $150,000,000 per annum for steel and iron products from the United States. If as a result of a little inducement, additional to what there is now, to develop our low grade ores, and perhaps thereby find some high grade ores, we get into this country three or four more iron mills operating, increasing the general prosperity in that business and producing that much in our own country, we are benefiting the country and we are not sending out all that money to buy these products.

There is another point that should not be lost sight of. There is a difference between mining iron and mining coal, in that every ton of coal that is mined and used is lost to the country at large except only that which has been used in making something else. But when a ton of iron ore is dug out of the ground and put into circulation the country is that much richer. It does not disappear. It is something which goes on from one form to another continuously until it oxidizes away, which takes a long while. The country is richer for every ton of iron ore that is dug out of the ground and which remains on top of the ground.

We are paying subsidies to almost everything—to railways, cables, zinc, lead, and oil. We are talking about subsidies to flax. We pay subsidies to agriculture in that we maintain experimental farms and spend $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 a year upon them, and rightly so. Surely we could spend a million or two in subsidizing the production of iron ore in this country. If we gave a dollar a ton by way of subsidy for every ton of iron ore that was produced and smelted in Canada we would get it back and we would simply be doing for that industry what we are doing for many others.

I do not wish to take up the time of the House further than to say that I believe that that this is a time when Canada should map out a forward policy in regard to its natural resources and particularly in regard to its low grade iron. We know we have low grade iron. We have not been able to find the high grade iron, but we have hundreds of millions of tons of low grade. The sooner we develop a forward policy (even to the extent of subsidizing), getting that iron upon the market, getting our own people working upon it in our own country and spending what we have here instead of outside, the better it will be for our country. I do sincerely trust that the Government will at this session give this matter its most careful consideration and that it will realize that for every dollar that we spend in benefiting the iron ore industry it will get more than a dollar paid back into its own treasury.

Mr. W. A. BUCHANAN (Lethbridge): Mr. Speaker, the hour of adjournment is near at hand, but I do not want the discussion to close without making some observations on a question which I consider as important as any that we have discussed in the House this session. Any member of the House who may have had doubts about the natural resources of this country should have had them removed as a result of the enlightening addresses which have been made by the members who have preceded me. I am going to confine my remarks to the coal resources of this country. I had intended making a few observations on some other of the resources that exist in the province of Alberta but I do not think I will have time to do so this afternoon. We have been reading in the press lately—and I presume the people who live in the province of Ontario have been reading it with a great deal of fear—about the probable cost of coal in this province next year. The coal supply of Ontario is in the state of Pennsylvania, and there is no doubt that that supply is being gradually and perhaps rapidly, depleted. Ontario and Quebec must look for a new source of supply for coal. I do not know whether the House is familiar with the fact that in the province of Alberta, which is generally known as a wheat growing and stock raising province, we have 87 per cent of the coal resources of the Dominion of Canada, and that it is estimated that that province has within the same area the largest coal resources of any place in the world. I am not advancing that as a promoter of mining schemes; I am simply quoting the facts that are given to us by the authorities in the Department of Mines of the Federal Government.

When we speak of Ontario and its need of fuel we naturally think of Alberta and its great resources. The Government here, and the provincial governments, will have to do something to bring western coal into Eastern Canada. I admit at once that the present price of western coal transported from Alberta into Ontario would be so high as to prevent the people of Ontario from considering its general use for fuel purposes, but I believe it is possible to overcome some of the obstacles that do exist in this regard. I believe that Ontario and Quebec can stave off the possibility of the depletion of their supply from Pennsylvania if they co-operate in encouraging the use in Western Canada entirely of Western Canadian coal. At the present time we know that in Manitoba, Pennsylvania coal is used to a very great extent. If that supply was cut off from Manitoba the western mines could have a market which would help them, while at the same time, it would relieve the consumers in the Eastern Provinces. I have been advised that even the Dominion Government, in asking for tenders for coal for some of their buildings in Manitoba, stipulate that it must be Pennsylvania coal; so that they are not encouraging the use of western Canadian coal.

What does it mean to Western Canada to have the market of the three Western Provinces?—I am not speaking of British Columbia because British Columbia has its own coal. We have been accustomed in this Parliament to hear of of the industrial troubles in the mines of Alberta practically every year.

One of the reasons for our industrial troubles is the lack of a permanent market. As the situation stands at the present time, coal is mined in Alberta almost wholly during the early fall and winter months. When we come to the spring and summer months the mines are closed and the miners have to go out and look for work in other occupations. Under circumstances of that kind you cannot expect to have settled conditions in the industrial world in so far as it concerns the miners. I believe that even with coal mining developed to the extent to which it has been in Alberta—and I may say that under existing conditions there is no doubt that the coal mines have been developed to double the capacity of the market that is offered their output—if the governments, the railways, and the commercial organizations were to get together and try to reach an arrangement whereby the coal produced in Western Canada could be utilized to the greatest possible extent throughout the Western Provinces, the result could not but be beneficial to the country at large. Because if we had the market in Manitoba which at present is supplied by Pennsylvania coal it would help o maintain the coal mines on the prairies in operation during the greater part of the year.

Another matter I would like to emphasize in this connection is, the question of transportation. At present our coal is being mined and shipped at about the same time that our grain is being shipped, consequently the railroads are not in a position to handle coal satisfactorily and cheaply. If we were able to have summer mining of coal in Alberta, the railroads should be in a position to haul the coal much more cheaply than they do at the present time, because it would be a slack season in transportation eastward. All that is necessary in that regard is to educate the consumer and the dealer in Winnipeg and in other western cities to store coal in the summer for use in the winter.

Might I also mention the fact, which has been advanced by people who have investigated the coal industry in Alberta, that if it was possible to operate the mines month in and month out during the year, whereby the miners would have steady occupation and a regular income, it would be possible to produce coal a good deal cheaper than it is produced at the present time.

The points I have urged should be kept in mind: there should be encouragement of the use of Western Canada coal in the West in order to help the eastern provinces in obtaining their supply from Pennsylvania; a solution of the transportation problem should be provided by the operation of the mines in the summer months thus guaranteeing steady employment to the miners; and a campaign of education should be conducted to establish to the people in the extreme parts of Western Canada that the coal produced on the prairies, or at least a great amount of it, compares very favourably with the coal produced in the state of Pennsylvania. I know that from experience because I have lived in Ontario and used Pennsylvania coal. I have been using Pennsylvania coal in this city during the past winter, and I certainly do not consider that the coal mined in the southern part of the province of Alberta takes any secondary place to the coal produced in Pennsylvania. But we must educate the people to the need of using our western coal.

Another point I would like to bring out is this: it would be important, in order to educate the people and get them to use Western Canada coal, to grade the coal because as it is at present all Western Canada coals go on the market and they are considered to be prairie coal and are bought as though they were all alike, and of course that is not the case. Certain of our Western Canada coals are of much higher quality than others and if there was a grading of coal it would be very helpful in educating people to their use.

I presume the Acting Prime Minister is desirous of making some observations on the resolution that we have been discussing this afternoon, and therefore I do not want to unduly extend my remarks although I had intended speaking at much greater length on the question of our resources.

An hon. MEMBER: Move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. BELAND: That would kill the debate, we should never reach it again.

Mr. BUCHANAN: It has been suggested that I should move the adjournment of the debate.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: The hon. gentleman can speak until six o'clock if he wishes.

Mr. BUCHANAN: We are asking this Government to encourage the development of coal and all the natural resources that we possess in this country. I might point out the fact that to-day individuals as well as companies are investing probably all their means in the development of our natural resources throughout Western Canada. Men are going up into the mountains and looking for ore. They are going about the prairies searching for oil. They are investing their money in digging wells in the effort to obtain oil, and in many instances they are exhausting their entire financial resources for that purpose. I think therefore it is only right that we should ask not only the Federal Government, but the Provincial Governments where they are in control of the natural resources, to encourage in every possible way the development of our natural resources.

What is the need of Canada at the present time? We have a great debt in this country. How are we going to meet it? We are told to produce. We can produce in the factories, on the land, and in the mines of this country. We have great natural resources that only need to be developed in order to enrich this country; and if we could only develop those resources to the extent of one-fourth of their value at the present time we would have no trouble in meeting our obligations as a nation. There is no cause for any person in this country to be discouraged about the future of Canada. All we need to do is to move around this Dominion to realize the great resources we possess; and we cannot help but become prouder of our country and cannot help but glory in the fact that in Canada we have as great wealth and as great opportunities as are to be found in any land in the world to-day. What is requisite is to encourage the development of those resources, and give an opportunity to the people to take advantage of the wealth that is in the country, and there will be no need for the Government to worry about the future of Canada and no need for the honest, capable and ambitious citizen of Canada to worry about it either.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Now that six o'clock has been reached, may I ask, what will become of this debate?

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: Government Orders have precedence to-morrow. Under Rule 33 the motion which is being debated shall stand first on the Order Paper under the heading of "Public Bills and Orders," and this debate, which was not adjourned, may be continued at the first sitting of the House at which Public Bills and Orders are called.

At six o'clock the House adjourned, without question being put, pursuant to rule.

INDEX

FOURTH SESSION — THIRTEENTH PARLIAMENT, 1920.

Abbreviations.—1r., 2r., 3r.=first, second, or third reading. Admn.=Administration; Amdt.=Amendment. Com.=Committee. Div.=Division. Dept.=Department. Govt.=Government. M.=Motion. Ques.=Question. Ref.=Reference. Rep.=Report. Res.=Resolution. Sec.=Section.

Abey, Mr. H. R. ques. 1000

Acadia Refining Company, 3226

Acton Vale post office, ques. 1899

Adams, Mr. Thomas, ques. 1002, 3551

Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 11, 47, 87, 114, 161, 181, 231.

Adjournment. See House of Commons

Admiralty. See Naval Service

Admiralty Act Amendment Bill. 1r., 2842; 2r., 3086; com., 3086; 3r., 3086

Adulteration of Food. See Food and Drugs Bill

Aerial Navigation. See also British North America Act
Air Service, 4553
Material, purchase of for, ques. 1359
Tax, suggested, 3592

Age of Consent. See Criminal Code

Agricultural Gazette, 1085

Agricultural Machinery Bill (Standardization of Parts), 1r., 2079

Agriculture. See debates under Canadian Wheat Board; Commercial Feeding Stuffs
Co-operation with the provinces, 603
Dairying industry. See that title
Department, Estimates, 2382
Experimental farms. See that title
Farm labour, ques. 800, 1011, 1220, 1227
Government, and, 610
Improvement in, 677
International Institute of, 2411
Potatoes, exportation, ques. 1360
Statement and review by Minister, 2366

Agriculture and Colonization, Com., 306, 540

Alberta Penitentiary, ques. 2777, 3855

Alcohol. See also Inland Revenue; Opium and Drugs; Proprietary; Prohibition; Special War Revenue
Industrial, 70, 324

Aliens, 150, 155, 229. See also Dominion Franchise; Education; Immigration; Naturalization
Detention camps, in, ques. 314
Enemy, naturalization, ques. 992
Immigrants and Canadian Citizenship, M (Mr. Steele), 812

Allan, Mr. G. W. (South Winnipeg)
Returns to House, 1295

Allies. See also League of Nations
Peace Conference at Ostend, 2476, 2574

Alpine Club, 3288

Alves, Mr., death of, ques. 1463

Amery, Colonel, and Speaker's Chair, 3224

Ames, Sir Herbert B. (St. Antoine)
League of Nations—review and summary, 3961. League of Nations a reality—partisanship in international relationships deprecated—history and description of League—meetings—specific tasks and achievements—permanent institutions designed and prepared for—transit—armaments—mandates and minorities—registration of treaties—emergent measures—duties as financial director—first assembly, November, 1920—the Secretariat an international civil service—Canada's opportunity. Questions answered; for details see League of Nations
Return of to House, 3623

Anderson, Mr. R. K. (Halton)
Brant Military Hospital, ques. 2519
Federal Bureau of Education, 1370
Income tax, errors in returns, 3302
Opium and Drug Bill, 1636-7, 1644-5, 1746
Parliamentary Restaurant—messengers, 3098
Sugar, price of, 1896

Andrews, Mr. George W. (Centre Winnipeg)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 171. Free trade, 171; returned soldiers; true party discipline, 173; going over to cross benches, 174
Budget, 3012. Members' indemnity, 3012; pensions for soldiers and their dependents—war profits, 3013; conscription of financial and managerial ability; Mr. Meighen on Britain and British policy—trust the people, 3015
Canadian Wheat Board, ques. 2182
Canteen profits, ques. 800
Hudson Bay Company lands, ques. 1897
League of Nations and United States, ques. 1118
Oleomargarine, 1869
Pensions, 433, 511
Returned soldiers, provision for, M. for special com. 511
Soldier Settlement, 2135-6
Universal military training, 945

Animal Contagious Diseases Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1622-3; 2r., com., 1839; 3r., 1840

Animals, Feeding of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Annuities. See Government Annuities

Anticosti, North Point light, ques. 1361

Antigonish and North Sydney, Public works, ques. 543, ques. 1004

Appeals. See Supreme Court Act

Apple Barrels. See Inspection and Sale

Appropriation Acts
1. Bill No. 36 (for 1920-1, for $62,900,-986.09), 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 756
2. Bill No. 67 (for 1920-21, for $2,083,-333.33). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 1289
3. Bill No. 166 (for 1919-20, for $3,175,-199.81; and for 1920-1, for $64,984,-319.42 interim). Res., 3215, 3217; 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 3218
4. Bill No. 221 (for 1919-20, for $15,875,-999.03; and for 1920-21, for $321,980,-760.61). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 4587

"Arabic," SS. Loss of Govt. vouchers in, ques., 3489

Archambault, Mr. Joseph (Chambly and Verchères)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 292. Address seconded in English, not in French—proposed general election; reply to Mr. Meighen, 292; reply to Mr. Hocken, 293; dissolution of Parliament, historical review, 294
Auditor General's report, 4276
Bankruptcy Bill, 4263
Budget, 2925. Farmers' delegation on conscription, 2925; increase of public debt, 2926; "advances unaccounted for," 2927; income tax, exemption on account of children, 2928; cost of living—Board of Commerce—profiteers, 2929; Dominion Textile Company—purchases in connection with advances to Greece and Roumania, members of Parliament interested, 2930; new taxes, proposed taxation of war wealth, 2932; food gamblers, 2933; banks and credits for speculation; tariff commission and revision, personal position, 2934; exchange rate and soldiers' pay—withholding of information on public affairs by Gov., 2936
Canteen profits, 709
Chambly fort, 3769
Daylight saving, 1574
Desjardins, "Ti-Noir," ques. 315
Dominion Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2216, 2221, 2243
Liquor on polling day, 1108
Polling divisions, 1517
Proclamation—language of publication, 1834, 2292
Explosive works at Beloeil, 2247-48
Freight car situation, ques. 319; ques. 997
French wine imports, ques, 1627
Gambling, 3428
Grand Trunk shareholders, 3426-27
Greece and Roumania, ques. 415; ques. 2414
Habeas Corpus, 3296
House of Commons
Debates—translation of French speeches, 697, 4587
Income tax
Exemptions on account of children, 2928, 3297-8
Forms in French, 1084, 1573
Inquiry for returns, 618, 4258
International Labour Conference, ques. 803

Archambault, Mr. Joseph—Con.
Kingston harbour works, 458
Kinmel Camp riots, 709
Judges' salaries, 3227
Letter of French Canadian at war front, 284
Militia, 3660-3
Naturalization, Alsace-Lorraine, 3921
Navy League of Canada, ques. 802
Opium and Drug Bill, 1749, 1759
Peace Treaty, Bulgaria, 489
Printing Bureau, Sunday work, 4020
Purchasing Commission—Public Accounts Com., 1474, 4580-3
Racial and religious rights, 489
Roumania, ques. 2413, ques. 3488
Russia, trade with, 4322
St. Johns election, 2239
St. Lawrence channel, 230, 856
Shipbuilding, 640
Contracts, ques. 314, 917
Steel plates for, ques. 706
Soldiers
Cash gratuities, 1084
Payments to in sterling, ques. 2008
Steel and shipping merger, 1953
United States railways and Canadian freight, 1789
Victory loans, ques. 803
Commissions, ques. 320
Committee, ques. 2008
Vimy battlefield, ques. 1358
Washington, Canadian Minister at, 2474

Archibald, Col. Grassie, ques. 2007

Argue, Mr. Ira E. (Swift Current)
Eight-hour day, 449
Experimental Farms, 2389, 3159

Armenians,
League of Nations and, 855, 1465, 3979

Armstrong, Mr. John A. M. (North York)
Franchise Bill, 1067

Armstrong, Mr. Joseph E. (East Lambton)
Budget Speech, copies of, 2626
Car shortage, 884
Daylight saving, 1084
Ethyl alcohol, 3497
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1164
Voters' lists, 2419-20
Grand Trunk strike and pensions, 1129
Illustration farms, 2384
International Parliamentary Conference, ques. 2721

Armstrong, Mr. Joseph E.—Con.
Mines Department, 3803
National defence, 4305
Naval Service, additional appropriation, 4305-10
Newspaper postage, 3349, 3755-8
Oil—Hudson Bay—Great Slave Lake, 3811-2
Royal Commission on Natural Resources, ques. 4502
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3476
Collection, progress of, 3480-1, 3600
Furniture—auctions, 3575
Jewellery, 3579
Musical instruments, 3595
Proprietary medicines, 3600-4
Steel and Shipping merger, 1956
British Empire Steel Corporation, ques. 2777
Vessel Rates
Board of Railway Commissioners, control by, ques. 2414, 2777
Inland and coastwise (Railway Act Amdt. Bill), 160, 1707-27, ques. 2772
Ocean; res., 2013

Armstrong, Mr., Director of Coal Operations. See under Coal Operations

Army. See also Soldiers
Court martial procedure, ques. 1359
Surplus stores, ques. 1229
War Boots and Shoes, ques. 506

Arsenals. See Dominion arsenals; Militia

Arthabaska-Victoriaville, branch line, ques. 4502

Arthur Young Company, 3742. See also Civil Service; Griffenhagen
Wolff, Mr. L. R., ques. 1624

Arthurs, Mr. James (Parry Sound)
Alves, Mr., death of, ques. 1463.
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2231-56
Peace and good order, 1106-8
Voters' list, 2421, 3892
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3936-40
Point of order—militia—relevancy, 3663
War trophies, 4557

Asbestos, 4513. See
Asbestos postmaster, ques. 320

Asiatics in Canada. See Chinese; Japanese; Naturalization; Orientals; Franchise Bill

Assiniboia
By-election. 56, 126, 137, 168, 3473. See also Recall
Expenses of Candidates, 1172, 1174-84
Grasshopper plague, 128
Sessional indemnities for unrepresented years, 129

Atlantic Sugar Refinery Company, 3226

Auditor General's Report, 458, 4276
Fourth volume, 2179, 2390
Publication in French, ques. 1627

Austrian and German Imports, ques. 2416, ques., 3359

Automobiles, 119, 2823, 2815. See also Special War Revenue Act
Imports and excise, ques. 591
Manufacturing plants in Canada, ques. 1201
Smuggled, ques. 807; ques. 1001
Taxes on, 2487

Autonomy of Canada. See Canada's National Status; Bulgarian Treaty; League of Nations; Peace Treaty

Bacon Industry. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Badges, Naval Service, 437. See also Naval Service

Bagot County
Electoral list, ques. 2011
Postal inspection, ques. 2721

Baie de Chaleur Harbours, 2185

Baker, Late Lieut. Col. G. H., M.P.,
Memorial to, 181, 2776, 3557,

Baldwin, Mr. Willis K. (Stanstead)
Budget, 2539. Luxury taxes, 2539; parties and reciprocity, 2540; Liberal party's tariff policy, 2540; immigration and national development, 2541; railways; West Indies, and Confederation, 2543
Food and Drugs Bill, 1262
Opium and Drug Bill, 1755
Scientific Research, 2174
Special War Revenue Bill, 3463
Retailer, effect upon, 3474
Sale (1 per cent) tax, 3467
Stamp taxes, collection of, 1262, 1755

Ball, Mr. Robert J. (Southeast Grey)
Burbidge-Messines, ques. 2721

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C. (Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Minister of the Naval Service)
Budget, 2533. Business profits war tax—tariff and cost of living, 2534; Liberal party tariff policy, 2535; free trade and the farmers, 2539
Buoy Service, 2116
Canada Shipping Act Amdt (Masters and Mates) 406-7, 563, 573-4, 980-3, 1610-2
Canada Shipping Act Amdt (Pilotage) 1839, 1967
Canada Shipping Act Amdt (Steamboat Inspection) 1050-2, 1762, 1776, 2125
Canadian Government Merchant Marine. See also under this title Shipbuilding
Business statement, 950
Operation, 641, 645
Information concerning withheld-policy justified, 1650, 1659-61, 1667, 1681
Steamers
"Canadian Inventor," delay in sailing, 3226, 3360
"Canadian Recruit" wreck of, 649
"Canadian Sealer," 649
"Canadian Spinner," 649
Canadian National Railway, ships and, 904
Cape Race, 2117
Export trade, larger desired, 621
Fish inspection, 1052-4, 4585-6
Fisheries, 3521-3
Overseers and guardians, 3523
Protection and patrol, 3524
Treaty with United States, 1290
Government policy, expected announcement, 583
Government steamers
Buying for, 1610
Wages, 1598, 1600, 1609-11
Halifax marine agency, 2110
Icebreakers, 1598-1612, 2103-7
"J. D. Hazen," 1599, 1602
"Montcalm," 1606-7
St. Lawrence, new vessel for, 1620-1
Uniforms of men, 1603-4
Fair wage contracts, 1608-9
Jellicoe, Admiral, report of, 344
Australia and New Zealand, 1160
India, 1290
Printing, 386
Lighthouse Service
British Columbia patrol boats, 1616
Grand Etang, 2114
Lighthouse Board, 2117-8
Salaries, 2110-4
Liquor Shipments, Ontario-Michigan border, 2108

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C.—Con.
Little Sands, 4580
Live stock shipments inspection, 1615
Lunenburg—registrar, 2108-10
Magdalen Islands, 649, 651, 1601
Relief ships to, 1742
Marine Dept. and members of Parliament, 2121
Marine Dept., services restored to, 3507
Naval College graduates, 4562
Naval Defence of the Empire
Statement on motion for Supply, 3498 Dominion Ministers' memorandum—Lord Jellicoe, 3499. Government's official statement on naval affairs—acceptance of Admiralty's offer of ships—Naval Service Act, 1910, 3500; "Niobe" and "Rainbow"—war, recruiting and casualties—Naval college—distinguished officers, 3502; reorganization—details of ships from Admiralty—Naval estimates, 3503; efficiency of Service—fisheries protection—Navy Leagues, 3504; submarines to be sold—other Overseas Dominions and Great Britain, expenditures, 3505; service on pre-war lines, 3507. See also under this title Naval Service
Naval Service. See also, under this title, Naval Defence
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000—4291-4302, 4314, 4398-4402, 4408-9
Civil Service insurance and, 1779
Correspondence and negotiations, 4408, 4413
Ministerial statement, 707-8
Pre-war lines, 4391
Naval Service Badge, 439-45
Naval Service Dept.
Estimates—agreement as to debate on, 441-2
Salaries, 4409-11
Navigation
Aid and protection, 2115
Schools of, 1612-3
Pardee, Mr. and taxation—Montreal address, 2742
Pictou Harbour Bill, 2184-90; 3491-94
Pilots. See also under this head, Canada Shipping Act
Pensions, 4579-80
St. John, 2119-22
Quebec grain elevators, 657
Race tracks, influence of, 3428
Registration of shipping, 1614
St. John harbour, 2119, 3492-3
St. Lawrence channel, ice conditions, 230, 856-8

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C.—Con.
St. Lawrence dredging, 1616-20
Shipbuilding, 618, 641, 651, 662-9
Canadian-built ships, quality of, 625
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 622, 659
Cattle shippers, and, 911
Contracts, 662-9, 892, 907-910, 916
Georgian Bay Canal, and, 915
Government ownership, 903, 908
Government programme finished, 905-7
Prices, 895, 900-2. See also under this title, Contracts
Profiteering, denied, 901
Profits—financial statement, 902-3
Ship plates, 623
Ships at Quebec, 916
Supply—vote of $20,000,000, 618, 892
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3994, 4001, 4013-14, 4145-51, 4157-68
Unforeseen expenses, 1616
Wharves, 2122
Winter fishing, 1609
Wrecks—investigation, 1612

Bank Act Amdt. Bill (Interest rate), 1r., 992

Banking and Commerce, Com., 306

Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bills.
1. 1r., 920 (Mr. Jacobs)
2. 1r., 2246; 2r., com., 3255; 3r., 3265
Senate amdt. 4263
Trustees, ques. 2414

Banks, Chartered, ques., 591. See also Special War Revenue; Finance
Interest allowed to Government by, ques. 673
Moneys received from, 1001
Shipbuilding and, 4008
Wheat crop and, 4351

Barley. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Barron, Capt. John A., 857

Batiscan Bridge, ques. 317, ques. 1230

Battlefields Memorials
Com. on, 1460, 1738, 2078, 2177
Quebec, fortifications of, 421

Baugh, E. L. and Tapley, W. H., 2015

Bawdy Houses. See Criminal Code

Begin, Cardinal, insult to, 1574

Béland, Hon. Henri S. (Beauce)
Air Service, 4555-6
Ames, Sir Herbert and League of Nations, 3623
Budget, date of, 2247
Butter and cheese, grading, 603
Canada and the Empire, 503
Canada Year Book, 1879
Canadian National Railways
Operation and withholding of information, 1656, 3086
Canadian Trade, extension of, 1883-5
Car shortage, 885
Civil Service
Classification, 4172. See also, under this title, House of Commons
Holidays, 4061, 4261
Retirement, 2179, 4464-5
Conservation Commission, 3286
Demobilization, 4552
Federal Bureau of Education, 1372
Franchise Bill
Proclamation—language of publication, 1834-6, 2272
Voters' lists, posting of, 3910
Franking privilege, 3763-7
Grosse Isle, 3555
House of Commons
Members, attendance of, 445-9
Staff, classification, 949, 1037-9, 4504, 4563-7
Imperial ex-Service men immigration of, 387
Income tax
Canadian Pacific Railway and, 3306
Dividends, when liable, 3305
Indemnity of members, 3242-3
Indemnity of Members and salaries of Ministers; votes of Messrs. Lanctot and Proulx, 4455
Indians, tuberculosis amongst, 3276
Inquiries for returns, 4258
International Financial Conference, 1465
International Labour Conference, 3359
League of Nations
Belgium, Spain, Greece, Brazil, 3978
Canada's status and relations, 352-3, 481-3
Canadian representative in Assembly, 567, 1046
Commercial treaties, 3973
Next assembly of League, 3977
Saar Basin, 3974
United States, 3977
Mint, the, 616
Moving Pictures of Canada, 1882-3
National parks—big game, 3285

Béland, Hon. Henri S.—Con
Naval Service
Estimates, agreement as to, debate on, 4411
Estimates and expenditure, 3508-10
Opium and Drug Bill, 1630-6, 1646-8, 1706, 1752-3
Parliament Buildings, 7
Parliamentary restaurant, 3094-5
Peace Treaty
Belgium, 481
Ratification, 477
Pensions and Re-establishment, 615
Com. on
Recommendations, legislation concerning, 4504
Report not printed in French, 2016
Resignation of Mr. Peck, 2082
Prime Minister, health of, 114
Proprietary medicines, 3603
Purchasing Board, 1468, 1471
Rural mail carriers, 4524
St. Lawrence dredging, 1617-8
Serbia, reported credit to, 567
Soldier Settlement, 2130
Special War Revenue Bill, 3327-8, 3343
Spirits and medicated wines, 3793
Sporting goods, 3571
Universal military training, 945
Washington, Canadian representative at, 1742, 2473-4

Belgium, advances to, ques. 318. See also League of Nations; Peace Treaty

Bell Telephone Company, rates appeal, ques. 2009

Beloeil, explosive works at, 2247, 2314

Bersimis and Rimouski service, ques. 1463

Best, Mr. John (Dufferin)
Civil Service
Classification, salary increases in advance of, 551
Senate staff, 4060
Superannuation, 4266-7
Eight-hour day, 374
Franchise Bill
Assiniboia expenses, 1174, 1183
Deposit, 1095
Recall, the, 2028-9
Returning officers, 1525, 1527-8
Voting on certificate, 1099
Indians, education of, 3280
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4417-22
Oleomargarine, 1852-56
Purchasing Board, 1468, 1471
Rural mail, 4529
Special War Revenue Bill, 3330, 3335-6

Biggar, Lieut. Col Oliver Mowat, K.C. 588, ques. 1462, 4264-9, 4516. See also Dominion Franchise, Chief Electoral Officer.

Bills, Divorce, remission of charges in, 4321, 4413

Biological Board, ques. 2572

Bird, Mr. Eustace G. ques. 1625

Blair, Mr. W. J. (Battle River)
Screenings, ques. 704

Blake, Mr. Matthew R. (North Winnipeg)
Coal operations director, 3179
Indemnity of Members, 4082
Opium and Drug Bill, 1638-9
Purchasing Commission, 1473-4
Universal military training, 940

Blondin, Hon. P. E., 57, 79, 82, 138, 209
Trip to Europe, ques. 541. See also Postmaster General

Board of Commerce, 198, 229, ques. 408, ques. 592, ques. 1740, 1947
Canners, inquiry concerning, 1045
Chairman, Judge Robson, resignation of, 11, 73, 114, 120, 3769, 3863
Correspondence tabled, 85, 4258, 4502-03
M. for papers, 1900
Civil Service Commission, and, 3426
Dairy and pork industry and, 605, 611, 1009, 1017, 1844
Farmers and, 3401
McNichol, Mr. J. L., 994
M. (Mr. Deslauriers) for abolition, 1139
M. for papers, 2015
Murdock, Mr., resignation of, 4170-71, 4466
Letter, text of, 4481
O'Connor, Mr. W. F., K.C., resignation of, 1684, 3685
Prosecutions, ques. 996
Report, ques. 2012
Inquiry as to, 3227, 3426, 3427
Presented, 3358
Resignation of members, 4258-59
Robson, Judge. See title under this, Chairman
Validity of Act constituting, 3685
Wholesale grocers, dismissal of Mr. Arthur S. Porter, 568

Board of Railway Commissioners. See Railway Commission.

Board of Translators. See Criminal Code Amdt. (French Version)

Boards of Trade Act Amdt Bill. 1r., 2r., 4414; com., 3r., 4460

Boivin, Mr. George Henry (Shefford). See Deputy Speaker

Bolshevism, 1495, 3649. See also Criminal Code; Immigration; Industrial Unrest.

Bonaventure
Experimental Farms, ques. 414
Pensioners, ques. 993
Postmasters, ques. 507
Public Works engineer, ques. 411
Wharves, ques. 411

Bonaventure and Gaspe
Dairy products and fish, ques. 587

Bonds. See also Finance; Loans; Victory Loans
Canadian Government, since beginning of war, ques. 2008

Bonus. See Civil Service

Book-making. See Criminal Code

Books
Banned, Regina library, 396
Customs duties, 3110
German and Austrian imports, ques. 806

Boots. See also Special War Revenue
And shoes, army, ques. 506, ques. 1229
And shoes, prices, 3329-30

Borden, Right Hon. Sir Robert (Prime Minister)
Allies conference at Ostend, 2476, 2574
Bankruptcy Bill, 4097
Bill disposed of—question not to be raised during same session, 3426
Board of Commerce
Correspondence, 3426
Murdock, Mr., resignation of, 4171
O'Connor, Mr. W. F., resignation of, 3685
Report, 3227
Resignation of members, 4258-9
Robson, Judge, Chairman
Correspondence, 3769, 4258, 4502-3,
Budget debate, not limited by amdt., 2518
Budget Speech, inquiry for copies, 2626
Canadian Wheat Board, 3561
Civil Service
Grievances—appeal, 3141-2
Holidays, 4061-2, 4259-62
Senate amdts to Bill, 4259
Coal Operations Director Bill, jurisdiction, 3692
Orders in Council, ratification of, 3362-5

Borden, Right hon. Sir Robert—Con.
Coal problem. M. for supply to discuss, 3685-8, 3692
Customs Act (Export regulations) 3620-2, 3690, 3768
Customs and Post Office Departments
Rumoured investigation, 3623, 3941
DeCelles, Mr. A. D., 2968
Departments of Government, reductions of, 4456
Electricity and gas, taxation of, 3106
Fisheries treaties with United States, 3161
French treaty, 4505
Fuel Supply—Special powers for Railway Commission, 4506, 4324-31
United States, attitude of, 4329
See also under this title, Coal
Gauthier, Mr.—complaint of treatment by civil servant, 4097
Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition—Arbitrators, 3490, 3860-1
Health of, absence from Parliament, 9, 18, 31, 38, 49, 51, 114, 199
House of Commons. See also under this title, Indemnity
Adjournments
Empire day, 2574-5, 2625-6
King's Birthday, 3080
Business of the House, 3106, 3957
Honour of—statement by Rev. Dr. Speer, 3490, 3558
Members, attendance of, 4457-9
Saturday and morning sittings, preparedness of Government's legislation, attendance of Ministers, 2778-84, 3684
Two o'clock sittings, 3080
Immigration Act, Amdt of, 3426
Indemnity of Members, 3228, 4076
Illness, 4458
Increase proposed, 4379-80
Round robin, alleged, 2967
Indemnity of Members and Salaries of Ministers
General statement on moving 2r. of Bill, 4427-31
In reply, 4454-6
In Com. on Bill, 4456-9
Inquiries for returns, 3226, 3769, 4258
International Joint Commission, 3986
International Labour Conference, 3359
Judges' Salaries and Pensions, 4425-6
Lachine Canal, 3424
League of Nations—Ames, Sir Herbert, return of, 3623
Militia Pension Bill, 3959
Munitions Resources Commission, 2892
Naval Service
Additional appropriation $1,700,000, 4385
Correspondence with Imperial Gov,. 4503

Borden, Right hon. Sir Robert—Con.
News Service, 4532-3
Newsprint, 2893, 3227
Parliament, two sessions in one year, 4457
Pecuniary Claims Convention, 3857
Pensions Bill, 3959
Widowed mother, dependent parent, 4050-3
Pensions and Re-establishment
Com. recommendations, special facilities for legislation provided, 3957
M. (Mr. Cronyn) to adopt Com. report, 3954
Fisheries and returned men amdt. (Mr. Peck) 3955
Further legislation, 4504
Post Office and Customs Department
Rumoured investigation by United States firm, 3623, 3491
Prime Minister and portfolio, 4456
Printing Com. report, 4503
Private Bills, special facilities, 3957
Race track betting, 3433
Return of to the House, 2315-16
Salaries Act and House of Commons Act Amdt. (Indemnity and Salaries) 4380
Ships from British Admiralty, correspondence, 4413
Speaker's Chair, 3224-5
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. 3321-2
Speer, Rev. Dr., statement by, 3090, 3558
State Insurance for returned soldiers, 3958
Supplementary Estimates, inquiry as to, 3769
Theriault and St. Quentin, N.B.. 3080
War Memorial, 3228
Washington, Canadian representative at, 2451-4, 4538-43
Correspondence, 3081
West Indies Conference, 3161

Border Chamber of Commerce
Vessel rates—resolution, 1733

Boucher, Mr. Philippe, ques. 2413

Boundary Waters, pollution of, 3552

Bounties Act Administration, 1877

Bourassa, Mr. Joseph B. (Lévis)
Boucher, Mr. Philippe, ques. 2413
Chaudière station, ques. 508
Lévis drill hall caretaker, ques. 1360
Printing Bureau employees, ques. 2005
Quebec harbour steam dredge, ques. 999
St. Romuald postmaster, ques. 2005

Boyce, Mr. George (Carleton)
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3405
Eight-hour day, 376

Boyce, Mr. George—Con
Franchise Bill
Debate on, 1837-8
Proclamation, language of publication, 2303-4
Oleomargarine, 608, 1870-1
Rural mail, 4525

Boyer, Mr. Gustave (Vaudreuil-Soulanges)
Lighthouse keepers, ques. 1897
Ste. Anne bridge, 3774-5
Ste. Anne de Bellevue hospital, ques. 1115
Soulanges canal road, ques. 999

Boys, Mr. William A. (South Simcoe)
Food and Drugs Bill, 972-8
Grand Trunk strike and pensions, 1130-6
Icebreakers, 2107
Indian Act Amdt. Bill—enfranchisement, 4029-35, 4176

Bran. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Brant Military Hospital, ques. 2519

Bridges, provincial and Dominion authorities, and, 3769

Brien, Mr. John Wesley (South Essex)
Opium and Drug Bill, 1643

Bristol, Mr. Edmund (Toronto Centre)
Shipbuilding, 628
Steel and shiping merger, 1948
Vessel rates, proposed regulation, 1718

British Columbia
Lighthouse service, 1616
Railways. See Railway Act Amdt.
Water Powers, ques. 1118

British Columbia Indian Lands Bill, 1r. 386; 2r., com., 787, 950, 3r., 1047, 1152

British Empire Steel Corporation, ques. 2777, 4010. See also Steel Industry

British North America Act Amdt. 4379
Aerial navigation, 4169
Motion for papers, 811
Power to amend, 464, 479

British Parliament and Speaker's Chair, 3224

British Preference, ques. 811

Brouillard, Mr. Joseph O. (Drummond and Arthabaska)
Burke, Rev. A. E., ques. 2079
Civil Service Classification, ques. 2181
Parliament Buildings
Commons Chamber floor, ques. 2894

Brouillard, Mr. Joseph O.—Con.
Parliament Buildings—Con.
Cost of heating plant, ques. 2896
Scaffolding, ques. 3079
Tower, ques. 2894
Roy, Mr. Gustave, ques. 1899
Victoriaville-Arthabaska branch line, ques. 4502

Buchanan, Mr. William A. (Lethbridge)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 121. Proposed general election and western representation, 121; personal attitude and Union Government—public unrest, freedom the cure, 122; profiteering—tariff—income tax, 123; national railways—Peace Treaty, 124
Budget, 2762. Tributes to Mr. Rinfret and Minister of Finance—paying war expenses by taxation, 2763; economy—tariff and cost of living, 2765; tariff and development of resources—favours tariff reduction—trade with trans-pacific countries, 2765
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3373-5
Farm labour for spring work, ques. 800
Flour mills, small, ques. 799
Franchise Bill, 1588
Income and business profits taxes, ques. 806
Industrial disputes, 1979
Industrial Survey by Mr. Ponton, ques. 341
Irrigation, 3695-9
Natural resources development, 1032
Newspaper postage rate, 3353
One Big Union, ques. 409
Pensions and Re-establishment, 536
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 395
Rural mail route, 506
Seed Grain advances, ques. 321, ques. 674
Soldiers' settlement, 3223

Buckwheat. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Budget. See also Ways and Means
Debate on, 2495, 2520, 2575, 2626, 2670, 2723, 2786, 2843, 2896, 2969
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) neg., resolution agreed to, 3077-8
Arrangements for, and announcement, 2247, 2318, 2576, 2840, 3026, 3045
Date of, inquiry, 1047, 2126, 2247, 2778
Speech, 2476
Announcement as to date of, 2247
Inquiry for copies, 2626

Budget Resolutions, 2492. See also Ways and Means

Buffalo, Wainwright herd, 3283

Bulgaria. See, also Peace Treaty; Peace Treaty Bill
Peace Treaty, 9, ques. 316, 463
Resolution and statement by Minister, 346; concurrence of Senate in, 1054

Buoys. See Marine

Burbidge-Messines, ques. 2721

Bureau, Mr. Jacques (Three Rivers and St. Maurice)
Admiralty Act Amdt. 3086
Apple barrels—Nova Scotia, 2018
Bankruptcy Bill, reprinting, 3265
Bills—Com.—reading of section by Chairman, 584
British Columbia Indians, 788-95
Business Profits Tax, public utilities, 3232-5
Cabinet changes, 447
Canadian National Railways
Construction and organization, ques. 510
Damage claims, delays, 886-7
Deficit, 886
Operation, suggested improvements, 888
Canadian Northern Railway
Port Arthur terminals, ques. 2012
Capital punishment, 308
Civil Service
Classification—Arthur Young Co. 549
Holidays, 4262
Insurance, 1779
Naturalized British subjects, 510
Retirement, 3826-9, 4460
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3371
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3163
Criminal Code Amdt. (French version) 3082-5
Dominion arsenals, 3717, 3721-2
Eight-hour day, 452-8
Electricity and gas competition and taxation, 3106, 3110, 3113-7
Enterprise Foundry Company, ques. 2415
Export regulations, 3621
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 2000-1, 3874
Aliens, certificate, 2078, 2082, 2217
Canada Temperance Act 3865-6
Debate arrangements for, 1838, 2001
Disqualification of voters
Charitable aid, those receiving, 1814-9
"Election papers," 2023
Indians, 2055-6
Interpretation, 1986-8, 1989-91, 1994
Notices, 777
Oaths, administration of, 779
Proclamation, language of publication, 1829-31, 2273-7, 2281-2, 2291, 2305-6, 2308

Bureau, Mr. Jacques—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Returning officers, 1577-84, 1591-3
Public officials, 1790
Voters' lists,
Copies, procuring of, 2320
Provincial, adoption of, 2347, 2357-66, 3895
Franking privilege, 3763
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1491-3, 1505
Habeas Corpus. See under this title, Labrie
Honey adulteration, 2315
House of Commons. See also under this title, Indemnity
King's Birthday adjournment, 3080
Lobbies, admission of strangers to, 1629
Saturday and morning sittings, 2783
Serjeant-at-arms department, 3094
Staff, classification, 4504, 4563-4
Two o'clock sittings, 3080
Housing expenditure, 3545-8
Icebreakers, 1598
Ile Verte, 2111
Income tax
Absentees, 3303
Indemnity of members, 3242-3
Part payment with return, 3253
Residence or investment outside Canada, 3250
Indemnity of members, 3096, 3853, 4073, 4450
Income tax and, 3242-3
Indian Affairs Dept., 3266-7
Indians
Destitute, relief for, 3275-6
Education of, 3278
Inspection and Sale Act Amdt.—Fruit, 2018
Penalties, 2019-21
Sections repealed, 2016
Judges' salaries, 3851-3
Labrie Brothers, case of, 3296, 3847-50, 3560
League of Nations, 349
Loan Companies Act Amdt., 1776-8
Maple products, 796
Naval Service Dept.
Estimates—agreement as to debate—misunderstanding — compromise suggested, 4412
Opium and Drug Bill, 1621-2, 1630-3, 1636-8, 1703
Parliament Buildings construction, 1419-33
Parliamentary restaurant, 3095-6
Official list, 2842-3
Parliamentary translators, 3093
Petroleum and Naphtha Act Amdt. 1762

Bureau, Mr. Jacques—Con.
Pictou harbour, 2188-9, 3491
Purchasing Commission, 1478, 4583
Questions, inquiry as to, 2126
Questions passed as orders for returns, 1743
Race track betting, 3431-2
Railway Act Amdt. (Jurisdiction), 2413
Registered postal rate, 3732-3
Ross Rifle factory, ques. 1898; ques. 2721, 3722
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3204, 4575
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3989, 4003
Soldier Settlement, 1685, 1702
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. 3337-8
Acetylene gas, 3796
Automobiles, 3597-9, 3793
Bank overdrafts, 3624, 3797-9
"Consumer" how defined, 3794
Debate on Bill, arrangements for, 3455
Refunds, 3629-31
Sales taxes, 3616
Sporting goods, 3571-2
Stamp taxes, 3627
Speer, Rev. Dr., statement by, 3491, 3558
Steamboat Inspection, 1762-3
Stigma on members—personal denial, 547
Supply, interim vote, 754-5
Supreme Court Act Amdt. 2004
Technical education, 1761
Toronto letter carriers, 3424-25
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 585
Yukon Placer Mining Act, 3106-8

Bureau of Statistics, See Statistics

Burke, Rev. A. E., ques., 2079

Burlington, Military Hospital, ques. 2519

Burnham, Mr. John Hampden (West Peterborough)
Adress in reply to Governor General's Speech, 66. Quebec and its "hour"—feeling developed by the war, 67; treatment of returned soldiers—cost of living, 68; farmers and class movement—exchange rate and trade—industrial alcohol, the new motive power, 70; individual liberty—prohibition—drop race and party cries, 71
Agriculture, problems of, 2400
Alien immigrants, 826
Budget, 2611. War policy and peace policy—Liberal party and Farmers' party, 2611; land taxation and security of employment—unrest and how to be quieted, 2612; group government—soldiers and their dependents—the profit system of trade, 2613; the People's party, 2614

Burnham, Mr. John Hampden—Con.
Business profits tax—public utilities, 3235
Campaign Funds, 1182,
Res. prohibiting, 1216, 1224; withdrawn 1228;
Civil Service
Classification, 546
Reduction of pay, 3135-8
Retirement, 3830
Superannuation, ques. 920
Coal operations director, 3178, 3372
Currie, General Sir Arthur, 3652
Demonstration farms, 2391
Eight-hour day, 334-7 454-8
Contractual rights, 373-81
Farm labour, 1220
Farmers' organization, 1219
Farmers' Party and the Dept. of Agriculture estimates, 2399-2400
Federal Bureau of Education, 1389-90
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1162
Aliens, 733, 2211
Contributions, 1182
Disqualification of candidates, 1089
Enumerators, 3900
Notices, 778
Proceeding by information, 776
Proclamation—language of publication, 2286-7
Provincial lists, 3888, 3897
Recall, the, 2040
Fuel situation, 3178
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1487
Strike of 1910, 1540, 1565
Honour of members—point of order, 1186
Income tax
Charities, 3245-6
Exemptions on account of children, 3300
Indemnity of members, 4069-81
Indians—enfranchisement, 4033
Industrial disputes, 2250
Labour—life not arithmetic, basis of reward, 389
League of Nations
Canada's status, 349, 353
Enforcement of decisions, 3975
Militia—cadet service, 3705
Naval service, 3516
Badges, 446
Old-age pensions, 3830
Oleomargarine, 608
Parliament Buildings, 1420
Peterborough, Gov employees in, ques. 542
Postmaster, ques. 342
Prices of fuel and other necessaries; res. to fix time for full discussion, 321, 333
Prohibition, 1218, 1228

Burnham, Mr. John Hampden—Con.
Race track betting, 3427
Returned soldiers, provision for; m. for special Com., 514
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 389
Shipbuilding, 639
Special War Revenue Act Amdt Bill, 3326
Proprietary medicines, 3794
Trent Canal wharves, ques. 586
Wheat, new variety, 1013
Y. M. C. A., 1219

Burns, P. Company, 582

Burrell, Hon. Martin (Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue)
Address in Reply to Governor General's Speech, 273. Parliament Building—congratulations to mover and seconder, 273; Addresses of Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Murphy, 274; absence of Ministers from the House; Mr. Mackenzie King's record—Soldiers' Settlement, 275; Farmers' party—proposed general election, 276; protection and wheat growers, 277; tariff free list, 278; England and tariff, 279; representation of the West, 281
Civil Service, reorganization, 3738-9
Conner, James, dismissal of, 418, 421
Customs Act Amdt Bill (Firearms) 617, 1048
Customs and Excise
Collections, 3859
Estimates, 3858-9
Entomology branch, 2402
French treaty, 4505
Hewitt, the late Dr. Gordon, 2402
Inland Revenue Act Amdt. 3494-8, 3815-21, 4263
Acetic acid, 3497
Alcohol tax, 3496
Methylated spirits, 3497
Resolutions, 3494
Spirits, 3815-8
Evaporation, 3815
Illicit distillation, 3817
Illicit sales, 3498
Malt used to make vinegar, 3818
Warehoused two years, 3816
Wood alcohol, 3820
Tobacco, 3498, 3815, 3818-9
Mines Department—explosives, 3804
Peat, 3807-8
Petroleum and Naphtha Act Amdt. 1762, 1916
Post Office Act Amdt. 3347-58, 4263
Franking, 3356-8
Free matter, 3761-8

Burrell, Hon. Martin—Con.
Post Office Act Amdt.—Con.
Newspaper postage, 3347-56, 3753, 3757-61
Zone system, 3351
Postage stamps for inland revenue, 3737
Registration fee, 3347, 3732-44
Express companies and, 3744
Statutes, proposed revision, 3821

Business Profits Tax 2489. See also Budget; Revenue Bills; Taxation

Business Profits War Tax Act amdt Bill, res., 3111; 1r., 3117; 2r., com., 3229; 3r., 3237

Butter.. See Dairy; Oleomargarine
Cold storage, in, ques. 543, ques. 807
Oleomargarine and, food values, ques. 2720

Buttons, Soldiers', unauthorized wearing of, 4020

Butts, Mr. Robert H. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
Franchise Bill
Contributions, 1197
Conveyances, 787
Provincial voters' lists, 2326-31
Hudson Bay Railway, 4243
Indemnity of members, 4089
Inverness coal, 4241
Masters and mates, 575
Newfoundland, 4242
Trade, and the Sydneys, 876
Prohibition, 102
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3198-9
Shipbuilding, 646
Iron industry and, 900

By-Elections.. See House of Commons

Cabana, Mr., K.C., 3227

Cabinet Organization and Representation, 32, 40-1, 138
Blondin, Hon, Mr., 57. See also that title.
Changes, 447
New Brunswick, 110

Cadet Corps. See Militia

Cahill, Mr. Frank S. (Pontiac)
Appeal from ruling of Chair, 1071; withdrawn, 1072
Auditor General's report, 2179
Bonds, tax exempt, 3338-9
British Columbia Indians, 950-4
Canada Grain Act, 3823
Canadian National Railways; deficit and rates — construction — colonization — townsites — Mackenzie and Mann — contracts for management—equipment —finance—insurance of property, 4181-94

Cahill, Mr. Frank S.—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Coal purchases, 2380, 4251
Deficit, maintenance, 890-1
Estimates, discussion of, 4249, 4257
Extensions, 3380-1
Information, withholding of objected to, 1655, 1669
Insurance, 4257
Ties, 4250-1
Car shortage, 883, 886
Transcontinental, ques. 999
Civil Service, 3140, 3146-7
Bonus, slide masters, 1279.
Holidays, 4061
Colonization, 2399, 4182
Dredging, 1619
Excise tax (10 per cent) 3467
Filing cases, 3155
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1935-43
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, 1071-2
Election expenses, 1932-3
Qualification of electors, 2243
Government annuities, 462-3
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition Bill, 1308, 1486, 1503
Arbitrators, 1047
Branch lines, 1314-7
Hanna, Mr. D. B., suit for libel, 2379
Housing, 3545-52
Soldiers, and, 3545-6
Indians
Enfranchisement, 4038-9
Lands, 3274
Kapuskasing and Spirit Lake, 2398-2401
Militia, 3974-80
Oleomargarine, 959
Ottawa River conservation, 3779
Peat, ques. 671
Penitentiaries, purchasing agent, 3840
Post Office Department, 3740-1
Question—complaint of unsatisfactory answer, 1047
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3203
Royal Military College, 3153
Scottish Canadian Insurance Corporation, 584
Shipbuilding, 645, 3992, 4004, 4010-16
Special War Revenue Act Amdt.
Changes, when effective, 3338
Clothes, made to order, 4290
Statistical department, 3296
Steel and shipping merger, 1956-7, 4010
Timiskaming Lake, wharves, 2187-8, 3493
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 585
Yukon Placer Mining, 3109

Calder, Hon. James A. (Minister of Immigration and Colonization)
Canadian National Railways and Canadian Government Merchant Marine—withholding of information justified, 1671-4, 1683
Civil Service Retirement, 2178-9, 3824-40, 4062-8, 4460-6
Grievances and appeal, 4460
Conner, Mr. James, 419
Distressed Canadians abroad, 4559
Exhibition Commissioner, 4558-9
Franchise Bill
Advance Polls, 1938-40
Ballot boxes, expense of returning, 1927
Provincial lists, 3889
Voters' lists, 2423, 2434-7
Voting notwithstanding disqualification, 1825
Immigrants, landing of at Montreal and Quebec, 3226-8
Immigration and Colonization Department, 4556-9
Imperial ex-Service men coming to Canada, 387
Income tax—charities, 3248
Mennonites, 2179, 2248
Militia, permanent force, 3210
Pensions Bill
Approved by Com. 4041
Canadian in French forces as reservist, 4048
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4045-6
Returned soldiers' insurance, 4054-6
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4012
Soldiers' dependents in Britain, 4556

Caldwell, Mr. Thomas W. (Victoria and Carleton, N.B.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 118. Union Government, 118; Production and Protection, 119; Farmers and Customs tariff—Board of Commerce, 120; Victoria and Carleton by-election, 121;
Budget, 2823. Ford car prices, 2823; Mr. Meighen on the tariff—the farmers' tariff policy, 2826; Mr. Fielding's amendment, 2827; the new taxes—export duty on newsprint, 2827; United States' manufacturers and Canadian prices, 2828; agricultural implements, prices, 2829; direct taxation, 2830; Victory bonds, 2831; St. John and Quebec Railway, 2832; new party, its name and policy, 2834; potato growing, 2835; farmers and prices, 2837

Caldwell, Mr. Thomas W.—Con
Campaign funds, 1222
Canadian National Railways
Damage claims, 4230
Demurrage—"bunched" cars, 4229-30
Maine Central connection, 3376
Rates, 1445
Westfield Beach, ques, 508, 4230
Canadian Pacific Railway, taxation, ques. 1360
Carleton and Victoria election, 121, 1223
Farm labour, 1220
Ford car, 119, 2823
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1933-5
Ballot and counterfoil, 1105
Election expenses, 1931
Election papers, 1928
Indians, 2055
Hours to be open, 1920-3
Residence, 1159
Voters' lists—delay, 3903
Grand Trunk Acquisition Bill, 1305, 1445, Stock, ques. 590, 753, ques. 1362
House of Commons, discussions, difficulty in hearing, 4055
Pensions and Re-establishment, 434, 3942, 4049
Potatoes exported, ques. 1360
Returned soldiers, 515
Pensions, 516
University students, 519
St. John and Quebec Railway, ques. 1036
Soldier settlement, 516, 2136-7, 2150, 3218
Special War Revenue—boots, 3563-5, 3585

Campaign Funds. See also Dominion Franchise Bill, contributions
Res. (Mr. Burnham) to prohibit, 1182

Campbell, Mr. J. A. (Nelson)
Budget, 3045. Direct taxes approved—luxury taxes, fees, 3045; canoes—difficulty of collecting tax—tariff, 3046; tariff situation in England—trade policy for Canada, 3047; farming not to be handicapped, 3048; mining machinery should be free of duty—Prairie provinces and their natural resources, 3049
Canadian motor car plants, ques. 1201
Canadian National Railways
Townsites—equipment, 4191
Western branch lines, 4232
Canoes, tax on, 3588
Economic Development Commission, ques. 1896
Franchise Bill—telegraph, communications by, 1068

Campbell, Mr. J. A.—Con.
Hudson Bay Railway, ques. 806, 4231-3
Completion, Res. in favour of, 2014
Natural resources prairie provinces, ques. 995, 1047, ques. 1461
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3195-6
Special War Revenue—furs, 3792
Trent Canal, ques. 1359
Welland canal, ques. 1358

Campbellton-Cross Point, ques. 411, ques. 1789, ques. 2415
Bridge and ferry, ques. 342, ques. 3490
Steamer service, ques. 588

Canada and United States. See that title under League of Nations; Washington, Canadian representative,

Canada Gazette, ques. 2179

Canada Grain Act Amdt Bill, Res. 3684, 3822; 1r., 3824; 2r., com., 3r., 4459

Canada Highways Act, ques. 1119
Ontario, 1046
Operation of, ques. 802
Payments under, ques. 806

Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bills:
1. Masters and Mates. Res., 406; 562; 569; 1r., 576; 2r., com., 979; 3r., 1047
2. Pilotage. Res. 1405, 1839; 1r., 1839; 2r., com., 1967; 3r., 1968
3. Sick and Distressed Mariners. Res., 1628, 2251; 2260; 1r., 2267; 2r., 3099; com., 3103; 3r., 3105, Sen. amdts. 4056
4. Steamboat Inspection. Res. 855, 1050; 1r., 1052; 2r., com., 1762; 3r., 1776

Canada Steamships, Limited. See Debate on Railway Act Amdt
Hanna, Mr. D. B. and, 1742, 1789

Canada Temperance Act, ques. 807. See also that title under Dominion Franchise
Expenses under, 4559

Canada Year Book, 1879

Canada's National Status, 91, 156, 465. See also League of Nations; Peace; Washington, Canadian Representative at Empire, and, 359

Canadian Council of Agriculture. See also Farmers.
Platform, 125, 2954
Recall, 2052
Tariff, 2907
Vessel rates, resolution, 1717

Canadian Expeditionary Force. See Soldiers; War

Canadian Explosives Company, 2247-8

Canadian Forestry Association, 3285

Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 622, ques. 921, ques. 921, ques. 996. See also Canadian National Railways; Shipbuilding; Vessels.
Annual report, 2311
Answers to questions, 1649
Business statement 903, ques. 921, 950, 1650, 1677, 1681
Captains, ques. 1624
Civil Service Insurance—Naval Service, and, 1779-80
Coal, ques. 1115, ques. 1623
Crews, 641
Earnings, ques., 1359. See, under this title, Business
Freight rates, ques. 2009
Inland navigation and, ques., 2572
Insurance on vessels, ques. 1511, ques. 2011
Loading and unloading, ques. 1623
Operation, 641-5
Freights, 646
Shareholders, directors, investment, ques. 2011
Vessels
"Canadian Inventor," 3226, 3359
"Canadian Recruit," 648, ques. 1199
"Canadian Sealer," 649
Withholding of information debated, 1649

Canadian Government Railways. See Canadian National Railways

Canadian Manufacturers' Association
Appeal to Supreme Court, M. (Mr. Devlin) for papers, 321
Vessel rates, communication on, 1728

Canadian Mission in London, ques. 410

Canadian National Railways. See also Grand Trunk; Canadian Northern
Brudenheim branch, 4250
Canadian currency and United States lines, ques. 341
Canadian Government Merchant Marine. See that title.
"Canadian Government Railways," defined, 4219
Canadian National Railway Company, 345
Car haulage cost, ques. 2313, ques. 2413
Car shortage—Transcontinental—ques. 999
Cars, 4184
Chaudiere station, ques. 508
Coal purchases, 2380
Contracts—details, 4251-6

Canadian National Railways—Con.
Colonization, 4182, 4197
Community centres, 4198
Construction betterments, 4181-2
Construction and organization, ques. 510
Damage claims, delays, 887
Deficits, 4181, 4201, 4203
Demurrage, "bunched" cars, 4229
Duplication, 4196
Earnings, 4185
Eastern branch lines, 4247. See also that title under Reid, Hon. J. D.
Electric systems, ques. 1510
Engine repairs, ques. 3079
Equipment, 4185, 4191
District east of Edmonton, 4250
Express companies and, ques. 801
Finance, 4186
Fire insurance, ques. 1623
Grand Trunk Railway, 11, 37, 92, 866, 4579,
Montreal, improved entrance, ques. 413
Hudson Bay Railway, 4231. See also that title.
Incorporation, ques. 2012
Information, withholding of, debated, 1649, 4195
Insurance, 4257
Intercolonial Railway
Moncton office, 4206, 4220, 4248
Pensions, ques. 313, ques. 509, ques. 589
Rivière Ouelle service, ques. 997-8
Inverness Railway, 4236-49
Mackenzie, Sir William and, ques. 1628
Mackenzie and Mann, 4184, 4191
Management and directorate, 4183, 4189, 4190, 4194
Ministerial statement by Hon. J. D. Reid 859. Passengers and freight, 860; operating costs, 861; labour conditions, 861; betterments, 861; construction programme, 1920, 863; rolling stock, 863; rates, 864; Grand Trunk, 866; Hudson Bay Railway, 867; Operating costs—details, 867-9
National Transcontinental, 4199
Car shortage, ques. 999
Champlain market site, motion, 2015
Rentals, ques. 1461
Official and private cars, ques. 409, 4220, 4247
Operation—goods imported from United States, ques. 998
Orangedale-Cheticamp, 4263
Political patronage, 4194, 4221
Prince Edward Island Railway, 891, 4210, 4245

Canadian National Railways—Con.
Quebec, Oriental and Atlantic, consideration of acquirement of, ques. 507
Rates, 4181, 4187, 4203, 4207
Riviere du Loup workshops, ques. 315
Roadbed, 124
Service, 100
Standard time, ques. 588
Steamships and, 897, 904, 915
Claimed to be necessary, 653, 658. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Ties—list of contracts, 4250-1
Toronto Eastern, ques. 1004
Townsites and subsidiaries, 4183, 4191. See also Cahill, Mr. F. S.; Hanna, Mr. D. B.
Victoria—Arthabaska, ques. 4502
Western branch lines, 4231. See also that title under Reid, Hon. J. D., Canadian National
List of, 4232
Westfield Beach, ques. 508, 4230
Westmount-St. Henri gatekeepers, ques. 998

Canadian National Railways Bill. 1r. 2842; 2r., 3085; com. 3375-9; 3r., 3395

Canadian News Service at Washington or New York, ques. 414

Canadian Northern Railway Company
Bonds guaranteed by province of Alberta, ques. 2180
Liabilities, ques. 2011
Neuville station, ques. 2721
North Bay, right of way through, ques. 3619
Port Arthur terminals, ques. 2012
Private cars
Mackenzie, Sir William, ques. 2572
Mann, Sir Donald, ques. 2183
Quebec lands, ques. 1626, ques. 2008
Report, 2311
Securities, ques. 2006
Toronto Eastern; Toronto Suburban, ques. 2080

Canadian Northern Town Properties Company, 2379

Canadian Pacific Railway Company
Burbidge-Messines station, ques. 2721
Freight tariffs, ques. 2010
Taxation
Business profits, ques. 1360
Special taxes, ques. 1360

Canadian Press Limited, 4532

Canadian Railway War Board, ques. 508

Canadian Reconstruction Association, 178, 677

Canadian Representative at Washington. See Washington

Canadian Wheat Board, 156, ques. 799, ques. 801, ques. 2182, 3402. See also Commercial Feeding Stuffs, Winnipeg Grain Exchange; Wheat; Canada Grain Act.
Continuation of, ques. 3294
Protest against reappointment of, 3561
Young, Mr. F., ques. 2313

Canadian Wheat Board Bill. Res. 3863, 4098, 4323; 1r., 4136; 2r., 4341; com., 4343; 3r., 4358
Cars, 4357
Imports and exports, control of, 4352
Losses, possible, 4325
Mill feeds, 4343, 4353. See also Commercial Feeding
Oats and barley, 4357
Personnel of Board, 4343

Canadianizing Foreigners. See Alien Immigrants.

Canadians in Imperial Service, 857

Canals
Lachine, 3423, 3561
Highway, 3778
Trent, ques. 1359
Welland
Highway, ques. 1200
Work on, ques. 1358

Canners. See Board of Commerce

Cannon, Mr. Lucien (Dorchester)
Appeal from ruling of the Chair, 3664
Canadian Aviation Corps, ques. 1359
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, ques. 921; ques. 921
Loading and unloading, ques. 1623
Civil Service
Bonus, 1284,
Holidays, 4057-8
House of Commons staff, 1042
Retirement, 4063-5
Senate staff, 4058
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. (U.S. Soldiers) 1233
Education, two languages, 287
Food and Drugs Bill, 1257-9, 1266-8
Franchise Bill, 773
Aliens—certificate, 2070, 2083-90, 2232-4
Bribery, etc., 1156-7
Canada Temperance Act, 2053
Contributions, 781-2

Cannon, Mr. Lucien—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Disqualification
Charitable aid, those receiving, 1816-7
Criminals, 1820
Election officers, 1075-8
False statement, made to affect election, 1067
Indians, 2055-6, 2087-8
Misfeasance, etc.—penalty, 1074-5
Non-electors and non-residents, 784
Point of order—school system, 2283
Proclamation, language of publication, 2287-9, 2306
Returning officers, disqualification of, 1073-4
Public officials, 1795-8, 1804-6
Telegraph, communications by, 1068
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1238, 1244-5, 1250-3, 1493-1500, 1505
Strike of 1910, 1549
Hurons of Lorette, 1152, 2014
Indemnity of members, 4080
Indian Reserves, ques. 802
Industrial Disputes Bill—objection to 3r., 2200
Intercolonial, Rivière Ouelle Service, ques. 597
International boundary surveys, 3294
Levis drill hall, 3727
Maple products—"sucre de fresne," 1255
Militia
Active militia, allowances, 3663-7
Annual drill, 3678-82
Natural resources of western provinces, 3293
Parliament Buildings—French reporters' room, 1425-9
Peace treaties and League of Nations, 347-66
Pictou harbour, 2186
Points of order
Franchise Bill, 2283
Militia estimates, 3667
Relevancy, Cockshutt, Mr., remarks of, 3672
Portland, shipments by, 653-5
Post Office Department, 3740
Purchasing Commission, 1474-5, 1484-5
Rural mail carriers, 1283-4
St. John river water-powers, 3291
San Remo Conference, 1465
Shipbuilding, 642
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4016-7
Supply, interim vote, understanding concerning, 754-6
War equipment—guns, 3662-4
Wharves, 2123

Canso, Marine Hospital proposed, 2255

Canteen. See War

Cape Race, 2117

Capilano Bridge, 3778

Capital and Labour. See also Popular Unrest; Labour.
Readjustment of relations, 373

Capital Punishment. See Criminal Code

Caraquet and Gulf Shore Railway, 4217

Cardin, Mr. P. J. A. (Richelieu)
SS. "Three Rivers," ques. 1897
Sorel Government shipyard, ques. 2180

Carleton-Victoria
Election, 1223
Visit of Ministers to, ques. 409

Car Shortage. See Railways

Carvell, Hon. F. B.
Letter from—loading out of Fort William elevators, 565

Carvill, Mr. George, ques. 586, 4219, 4224

Casgrain, Mr. Pierre F. (Charlevoix-Montmorency)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 71. Economy—anti-democratic policies, 72; prices, cost of living, Board of Commerce—production, 73; tariff—resignations from the Government, 74; proposed general election, 75; peace and work—the Liberal party, 76
Aliens in detention camps, ques. 314
Bankruptcy Bill, trustees, ques. 2414
Biggar, Mr. O. M., K.C., ques. 1462
Bilingual stamps, ques. 314
Board of Commerce, ques. 592, ques. 1740
Canners, 1045
Motion for papers, 2013-5
Price Brothers, 1789
Report, date of, ques. 2012
Budget, 2808. Grain Growers and Canadian manufacturers, 2809; the Government and Socialism—Liberal party's fiscal policy—new taxes, 2809; income tax—financial conditions, 2810; business profits tax—moving pictures—tariff, 2811; Board of Commerce, 2812; war profits—national unity, 2813
Business profits war tax, ques. 314, ques. 2012
Canadian National Railways, 877
Car haulage cost, ques. 2313
Canadian Northern, ques. 2413

Casgrain, Mr. Pierre F.—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Incorporation, ques. 2012
Withholding of information, 1675
Canadian Northern Railway
Car haulage cost, ques. 2313, ques. 2413
Canadian Wheat Board, 4129
Carleton-Victoria, visit of ministers to, ques. 409
"Champlain," the, ques. 314, ques. 672, ques. 921, ques. 1121
Charlevoix-Montmorency
Bridges and highways, 3778
Customs officers, ques. 415, ques. 588
Lighthouse keepers, ques. 319
Pensioners, ques. 994, ques. 1358
Postmasters and mail carriers, ques. 320
Public works, ques. 590, ques. 592
Railway facilities and projects, 878
Wharf repairs, ques. 589
Criminal trials, correspondence, 2014
Franchise Bill, returning officers, 1591
French language, publications in, ques. 541
House of Commons calendar, 2005
French letters, replies in English to, 1045
French origin, Canadian of, ques. 1357
French speeches in House, translation of, 702
General election, cost of, ques. 587
Grand Trunk Railway Company, ques. 996
Lack of information complained of, 1450
Hydro-Electric, Ontario, 4172
Income tax
Earned and unearned incomes, 3309-10
Indemnity of members, 3310
Jellicoe, Lord, visit of, ques. 314
Labrie brothers, case of; also Mantezono, 3560
Lotbinière and Megantic Railway, ques. 590
Mackenzie, Sir William and Canadian National, ques. 1628, 2572
McNichol, Mr. J. L., ques. 994
Mann, Sir Donald, ques. 2183
Members' stenographers, salary of, ques. 2311
Montmorency public works, ques. 592
Naval Service, 4402
Ballantyne, Hon. Mr., reference to leader of Opposition, 4411
Newspapers, payments to, ques. 1114
Newsprint, ques. 994, ques. 588, ques. 589, ques. 2720
Export, ques. 1358, ques. 1114
Parliament Buildings, 1428-32
Parliamentary Secretaries, ques. 1036
Paroled prisoners, ques. 2005
Quebec and Saguenay Railway, ques. 506, ques. 672, ques. 1120

Casgrain, Mr. Pierre F.—Con.
Quebec and Saguenay Railway—Con.
Freight rates, ques. 589
St. Irenée, 3423
Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix, ques. 673
Rivière du Gouffre, ques. 1121
Russia, military expedition to, ques. 995
St. James by-election, 707
St. Joachim postmaster, ques. 1121
Ste. Anne de Beaupre wharf, ques. 506
Shipbuilding, 651
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill 3334
Tapley, W. H., and Baugh, E. L., 2015

Casselman, Mr. Orren D. (Dundas)
Budget, 2879. Repetitions in debate condemned—proposed general election, 2879; Government keeps its pre-election promises, 2880; Civil Service reform—mail carriers—Union Government and the farmers, 2881; Farmers' party platform, 2882; Opposition fiscal policy—tax on unimproved land—Union Government's successful policy and administration, 2883
Experimental farms, motion to adjourn debate, 1017

Cattle Embargo, ques. 340

Cattle Shippers and Government Vessels, 911

Caughnawaga, 3266

Censorship, 4556
Press, ques. 541
Regina library searched for banned books, 396

Census, the last, ques. 2009

Census and Election, 122

Cent Coin, ques. 2007

Central Vermont Railway, ques. 1035. See also Grand Trunk

Certificates of Service. See Canada Shipping Act (Masters and Mates)

Chabot, Mr. J. L. (Ottawa)
Mackenzie Avenue, Ottawa, ques. 999

Chair, Speaker's 3224-5

Chairman of Committees. See Deputy Speaker

Chambly Fort, 3769

Champlain Market Site, 2015

Champlain, Steamer. See that title under Vessels

Chaplin, Mr. James D. (Lincoln)
Budget, 2814. Messrs. W. C. Kennedy, McCoig and Pardee, and Canadian industries, 2814; Ford car prices, 2815; Farmers' platform, 2816; manufacturers and duties on animals, grain, coal, etc., 2817; boot and shoe industry—canning industry—"no trusts in free-trade England," 2818; present condition of British trade, 2819; iron and steel industry of Great Britain, 2820; United States and tinplate—"who pays the duty"? 2821; local conditions in Lincoln, 2822; freight rates as a form of protection, 2823
Food and Drugs Bill, 963
Income tax
Absentees, 3303
Shares of no par value, 3239
Newspaper postage, 3751-5
Welland canal employees, 3138-9

Charlevoix-Montmorency
Customs collections, ques. 588
Customs officers, ques. 415
Lighthouse keepers, ques. 319
Pensioners, ques. 994, ques. 1358
Postmasters and mail carriers, ques. 320
Public works, ques. 590, ques. 592
Wharf repairs, ques. 589

Chartered Banks. See Banks

Charters, Mr. Samuel (Peel)
Alien immigrants, 818
Departmental printing plants, ques. 1738

Cheese. See Dairy

Cheese Factories. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Cheques and Promissory Notes, taxes on, 2487

Cheticamp, life saving station, 2115

Chicoutimi, defaulters, ques. 409.

Child Labour, 368

Children and Income Tax, 2928, 3297

Chinese in Canada, ques. 805.

Chisholm, Mr. Alexander W. (Inverness)
Buoy service, 2116
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Captains, ques. 1624
Withholding of information, 1653
Canadian National Railways, 4236
Orangedale-Cheticamp line, 4239
Canadian Wheat Board, ques. 801

Chisholm, Mr. Alexander W.—Con.
Federal Emergency fund, ques. 998, ques. 1199
Grand Etang, 2114, 3779-80
Icebreakers, 1610
Illustration farms, 2390
Inverness railway, ques. 319, 4236
Lighthouses
Lighthouse Board, 2117-8
Lightkeepers' salaries, 2114
Margaree island, telephones, 2124
Marine department, 2121
Marine hospitals, 3554
Militia, headquarters staff, ques., 1511
Port Hood, 3159
Registration of shipping, 1614
Soldier Settlement, aid to fishermen, 1691
Wrecks, investigation, 1612

Chisholm, Col. H. A., ques. 3359

Chopped Feeds. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Choquette, Ex-Senator P. A., ques. 2572

Cimon, Mr., and Military Service Act, ques. 1461, ques. 1462

Cinematographic Films, tax on, ques. 3489. See also Moving pictures.

Civil Service. See also Civil Service Act Amdts. For departments see their titles
Additions to, 2642, 2675, 2941, 3005, 3145, 3408
Analysts and inspectors under Food and Drugs Act, 964
Appointments—soldiers serving in Bermuda, ques. 1461
Bonus, 1269, 3228
Cheques, preparation of, 1280, 1285
Lightkeepers, 2110
Regulations, 1274
Salaries and, ques. 2079, ques. 2311
Telegraph operators, 2182
Classification, ques. 84, ques. 505, 675, ques. 997, 1292, ques. 1624, 3769. For classification of the several depts. see their titles
Arthur Young Co. 592, ques. 1511
Effective from 1st April, 1919, 345, ques. 674
Experts and, ques. 2413
Inside service, 4019, 4172
Motions for papers:
Ethier, Mr., 592
Fripp, Mr., 544,
Secretary to executive, ques. 2181
Vote to pay increased salaries, 4546
Commission, ques. 997, 4563-7. For classification of the departments, see their

Civil Service—Con.
Commission—Con.
titles. See also debates under Board of Commerce
Appointments by, ques. 311, ques. 320
Board of Commerce, and, 3426
Board of hearing, 3424
Cole, Mr. W. B., ques. 2898
Dominion land surveyors, ques. 1115, ques. 2006
Health Department and, 3543
House of Commons officials and, 4504
Positions, manner of filling, ques. 2006-7
Promotions and, ques. 2007
Putman, Mr., ques. 2414
Returned soldiers, ques. 2006-7
Returning officers—suggested appointment of by, 1803, 1808-9
Staff, ques. 1121, ques. 2414
Unrest due to, 4060
Dismissals and appointments, ques. 320
Appeals in case of proposed. See debates under Civil Service Retirement.
Efficiency through reduction of, 2662
Grievances, 3141
Griffenhagen and associates, investigation by, 3861, ques. 4521
Holidays, 4056, 4259
Inside service, ques. 510
Insurance. See Civil Service Insurance Bill
Members of, with war record, 3129
Reform, 42
Reorganization, 3735, 3738-43, ques. 3861. See also under this title, Classification.
Retirement fund, rate of interest, 459
Returned soldiers and, 19
Suggested disqualification as election officers, 1075
Superannuation, 391-4, ques. 920, 4266. See debates under Civil Service Retirement; Judges' Act
Pensions, and, 391
Peterborough employees, ques. 542
Taxation of income. See debates on Ottawa Agreement Bill
Technical officers, how to retain, 692
Temporary employees, ques. 415

Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 1r., 1112; 2r., com., 3128; 3r., 3161. Senate amendments, 4056, 4259, 4416

Civil Service Insurance Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 949; 1054; 1r., 1229; 2r., com., 1779; 3r., 1781

Civil Service Retirement. Bill. 1r., 2178-9; 2r., 3824; com. 3840; 4062; 4460; 3r., 4466
Appeal, 4460

Civil Service Superannuation and Retirement Act Amdt. Bill (Rate of interest); Res. 459; 1r., 460; 2r., com., 3r., 581

Clark, Mr. Hugh (Parliamentary Secretary for the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment)
Franchise Bill, advance polls, 3876
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3939

Clark, Mr. Michael (Red Deer)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 161. League of Nations—economy and prices, 161; the Farmers' party, 162; classes and politics, 163; debate on the Address and debate on the Budget, 164; protection, profiteering and wages—rate of exchange and trade, 165; inflation and extravagance, 166; direct taxation, 167; Assiniboia by-election, 168; proposed general election—census of 1920 and redistribution, 169; unrest and disquiet, 170; what did men fight for? 171
Bureaucracy, 405
Budget, 2670. Return to the House of Sir Robert Borden, 2670; Mr. Fielding's amdt., tariff revision and stability of tariff, 2671, 2681-2; export trade and exports of agricultural products, 2673; Great Britain and free trade 2673; increasing income or lower expenditure—advances unaccounted for 2674; numerous Civil Service appointments—shipping subsidies—the new taxes. 2675, "a new species in the fiscal zoological garden," 2677; limits to teaching practice of individual economy, 2678; new taxes increase cost of living—income tax 2679; New Zealand and income tax, 2681; Progressive party and free trade, 2682; "army of emancipation" 2683; luxury taxes, 2684-5
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3372-4
Daylight saving, 3449
Export trade, means to promote, 626
Federal Bureau of Education, 1393
Fiscal policy of the Government, 583
Franchise Bill, 748
Aliens—certificate, 2208, 2223
Recall, the, 2033-4, 2045, 2052
Returning officers, 1800-1, 1806
Government annuities, 405
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1437-43, 1448, 1453

Clark, Mr. Michael—Con.
House of Commons—acoustics and audibility of debates, 345, 1417, 2317, 2081-2, 3952
Housing programme, ques. 707
Income tax, 3120, 3124
Charities, 3312
Exemptions on account of children, 3300
Incomes over $100,000, ques. 3490
Indemnity of members and salaries of Ministers, 4435
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4425-6
McKenzie, Mr., and Liberal leadership, 898
Militia—active militia, allowances, 3666-7
Naval service, 4395-9
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4381, 4389-90
Oleomargarine, 1785-6, 1848-53, 1855
Parliament Buildings, 1417, 1422-4, 1433
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3952
Committee—resignation of Mr. Peck, 2081-2
Public finance, economy in, 628
Point of order—Franchise Bill, 2223
Political prisoners, 1790
Race track betting, 3428-9
Saturday and morning sittings, 2783
Shipbuilding, 625, 647
Government programme ended, 905
Government vs. private ownership, 905
Profiteering, 898, 901
Subsidies, 899
Soldier Settlement, 2138
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Amendment, "Sales taxes," 3318, 3321-4
Changes proposed by Finance Minister, 3434, 3438, 3443
Collection, machinery for, 3325-7
Methods of—refunds, 3334, 3434-51
Progress of—retailers not collecting, 3479-80
Debate of Bill, arrangements for, 3454-5
Drayton, Sir Henry, reply to, 3448
Edwards, Mr., reply to, 3438
New taxes not "excise," 3316-8, 3321-4
Permanency of taxes, 3479
Returned soldier, exemption of—amdt (Mr. Lemieux) 3448
Steel and Shipping merger, 1948-54

Clements, Mr. H. S. (Comox-Alberni)
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 3876
Recall, the, 2042
Skeena and Comox-Alberni, 3868
Voters' lists, 2434
Fraudulent naturalization papers, ques. 4096
Opium and Drug Bill, 1755

Clements Mr. H. S.—Con.
Soldier Settlement, aid to fishermen, 1692
Vessel rates—shortage of ships, 1717-8

Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. See that title under Dominion Franchise Bill

Coal. See also Director of Coal Operations. See also Industrial Disputes
Edmonton Board of Trade resolution, 322
Inverness railway and, 4236, 4241
Prices, 321
Purchases by Government Merchant Marine, ques. 1115, ques. 1623
Supply of—M. (Mr. Lemieux) to adjourn House to discuss, 3685
See also Railways, Car shortage

Coal Operations, Director of
Orders-in-Council, ratification of, 3360
Orders of laid on table, 3225

Coal Operations Director Bill; 1r., 3106; 2r., 3175; com., 3185; com., 3360; 3r., 3690

Coasting Vessels. See Railway Commission; Railway Act Amdt

Cocagne, N. B. 3159

Cockshutt, Mr. W. F. (Brantford)
Address in reply to Governor General's speech, 96. Parliament Buildings—Peace Treaty and League of Nations, 96; Christian Church and the Forward movement, 98; popular unrest; record of Union Government, 99; trade, Canadian National railways, 100; labour situation; farmers' movement, 101 prohibition, 102; Quebec and the trade question—general election, 100, 104
Budget, 2840. Congratulations to Minister of Finance, 2843; the new taxes, 2843; income tax—deficit on National Railways—West Indies, 2844; Mr. Devlin and outrages on negroes in United States, 2845; trade conditions, 2846; Canadian surplus, British deficit; Britian's national balance sheet; Canadian Merchant Marine—Mr. Fielding's policy when Minister of Finance, 2848; comments on other speeches, 2849; tariff—parable of the farmers—United Farmers' platform, 2851; protection for farm products, 2852; "implement of production," 2853, income tax defaulters, 2854; farmer candidates in Brant—the labour man, 2855; Canada and United States, competition in manufacturing, 2857

Cockshutt Mr. W. F.—Con.
Canadian National Railways, Rates, 1453
Currency, coinage, 400
Eight-hour day, 377
Firearms, licenses, 3413
Franchise Bill
"Ecclesiastics," 1076-7
Polls—pencil, 1102
Franking privilege, 3765
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1451-4
House of Commons staff, 4547
Income tax
Accounting period, 3308
Charities, 3311
Dividends, when liable, 3304-6
Indemnity of members, 3311
Indians, Six Nations, 3278
League of Nations
Ames, Sir Herbert, statement by, 3979
Canada and the Empire, 491
Militia—Active militia—allowances, 3672-3
Newspaper postage, 3759
Oleomargarine, 1782, 1787
Opium and Drug Bill, 1750
Parliament Buildings, 1430
Peace treaty—Bulgaria, 490
Pensions, 429-35
Purchasing Board, 1479-82
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3323, 3342-4
Automobiles, 3598
Boats, canoes, etc., 3591
Candy—maple products, 3593
Collection—method of, 3469
Food, 3617
Licenses, 3606-7
Manufacturers' agents, 3609
Overdrafts, 3798
Sales tax, 3794
Goods contracted for, not delivered, 3614
Stock transfers, 3800
War trophies, 4557

Coinage. See Currency.

Cold Storage, 2407-09
Butter in, ques. 543, ques. 807

Cole, Mr. W. B., ques. 2893

Collingwood, Marine hospital, 2255-56

Commerce, International Parliamentary conference on, ques. 2721

Commercial Feeding Stuffs Bills:
1. 1r., 617; withdrawn, 1290-1
2. Res. 2184; 3161; 1r., 3174; 2r., 3395; 3405; com., 3405; 3r., 3409

Commission of Conservation, 3286
Consulting Engineer, ques. 1002
Deputy Chairman, ques. 2573
Town Planning Adviser, ques. 1002

Compulsory Voting, 1062-4

Concurrence in supply, 3217, 4586

Connaught Rifle Range, 3728

Conner, James, dismissal of, 415

Conscription, 59. See also Military Service

Cooper, Col. John A., ques. 308, ques. 414

Cooper, Mr. Richard C. (Vancouver South)
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4052
Returned soldiers, provision for—motion for special com., 513
Soldier's buttons, unauthorized wearing of, 4020

Co-operation, 109

Copp, Mr. Arthur B. (Westmorland)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 195. Sir Thomas White as champion of the Government—proposed general election, 195; the farmers' movement — lower tariff — public revenue and private profits, 197; Franchise Act—Board of Commerce, 198; Union Government—illness and absence of Prime Minister, 199
Bankruptcy Bill, 3256-60
Board of Commerce, Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4479
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, information withheld, 1661
Canadian National Railways, 4195-6
Goods for use of, imported from United States, ques. 998
Extensions, 3390-2
Information wanted, 3392
Intercolonial—equipment deteriorated—scenery and opportunities for viewing it—train connections—need for local headquarters — political influence — superannuation allowances—Mr. George Carvill, former ticket agent, 4219-4228
Carvill, Mr. George, ques. 586, 4219
Cereal shipments, ques. 1626
Civil Service
Bonus, 1280
Putman, Mr., ques. 2414
Customs, rentals paid, 3858-9
Drill halls, 3148
Experimental farms—buildings, 3157-8, 3160
Flour, Canadian Shipments, ques. 1788

Copp, Mr. Arthur B.—Con.
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1937-9
Assistant Chief Electoral Officer, 1514-5
Candidate's consent, 1095
"Ecclesiastics," 1077
Oath by elector, 1102
Personation, etc., 1159
Polls, hours to be open, 1921-3
Provincial lists, 3893
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4366
Returning officers, 1576-81
Voting, manner of, 1104
Government steamers, wages, 1599-1600
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1506
Icebreakers, 2105-7
Maple products, 1255
Parliament Buildings, ques. 705
Furniture, 1421, 1427-8, 1434
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3956
Pensioners resident outside of Canada, 4048-9
Widowed mothers, 429
Post Office buildings, 3160
Re-establishment
Fishermen and loans, 4048
Students, 4048
Sackville public building, 3150, 3158
St. John district pension office, 1742
St. John harbour—pilots, 2119-21
St. John river wharves, 2122-3
Scammel, Mr. J. K., 3784-5
Shipbuilding, 643, 660
Material, importation, ques. 1114
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4013
Special War Revenue Bill, 3329-30
Bank overdrafts, 3799
Sales tax, 3615
Tender and contract, 3160
West Indies, trade with, 1884

Copper, 4513

Copyright Bill, 1r., 751-2

Corn. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Cost of Living. See High Cost. See also debates under Address; Budget: Board of Commerce

Coughlan Shipbuilding Company, 3360, ques. 3620

Courts, appeals from. See Supreme Court Act

Courts Martial, ques. 1359

Cowan, Mr. Walter D. (Regina)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 224. Union Government an honest government—democracy and democratic measures, 225; tariff, balance of trade, 226; tariff and prices—income tax, 227; tax on unimproved lands—war-time elections Act, 228; naturalization of aliens—Board of Commerce, 229
Canadian Northern Railway
Willow Bunch, Wood Mountain—western extensions, 3379-82
Coal operations, director, 3178, 3191
Experimental farms, 2390
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2085
Voters' lists, 2433
Provincial, adoption of, 2337-8, 2340-1
Indemnity of members, 4094
Last Mountain river dam, 3788-9
Natural resources development, 1021
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 390, 394, 3198
Scientific research, 2167
Superannuation of public employees, 394

Crerar, Hon. T. A. (Marquette)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 143. New Parliament building, 143; parliamentary government — League of Nations and Canada's status, 144; monetary exchange and trade, 145; natural resources and production — tariff — wheat production, 147; pulpwood—the "Agrarian" movement—by-elections, 148; luxury and income taxes, 149; immigration, 150; franchise and citizenship, 151; proposed general election, 152
Agriculture—federal and provincial control, avoidance of duplication, 2386-7
Bridges and the provinces, 3777-9
Budget, date of, 2126
Budget, 2896. Criticisms of Progressive group, 2896; government control in wheat not desirable—operations of farmers' business organizations—Timiskaming by-election and One Big Union, 2897; expenditure should be reduced—new taxes, 2898; business profits and income taxes—the tariff, 2899; the Government and protective tariff, 2900—Great Britain's fiscal policy—Britain and Germany, 2901; British trade and foreign investments—tinplate industry, 2902; British industrial and social conditions, 2903;

Crerar, Hon. T. A.—Con.
Budget—Con.
agriculture in Canada and Great Britain—inquiries into industries, 2905; result of the war, Britain and other countries compared, 2906; Canadian Council of Agriculture tariff policy, 2907; British tariff policy would apply advantageously in Canada—agriculture under disadvantages—textile industry, 2908; business combines and the tariff, 2909; Mr. Fielding's amendment, 2910
Canadian Wheat Board, 4119, 4348-54
Cold storage, 2407-9
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3166, 3400
Dairy industry, 2405
Dominion arsenals, 3719
Fox farming, 2410
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2217, 2223
House of Commons
Audibility of debates, 2126, 2314
Two o'clock suggested as hour for meeting, 2781
Income tax—errors in returns, 3315-6
Indemnity of members and salaries of Ministers, 4434
Judges' salaries, 3853
League of Nations, 4319-20
Militia—active militia—allowances, 3660, 3671-2
Mineral deposits
Leases, etc., 3808-13
Tax on unused, 3810
Naval Service, additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4319
Retirement of members of public service, 3834
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3206-7
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3995
Special War Revenue Act Amdt., 3332-3
Bank overdrafts, 3799-3800
Collection, method of, 3483
Amdt.—taxes to be collected at source, 3484-7

Cressé, Mr. L. G. A., K.C., ques. 4502

Criminal Cases, appeals in. See Criminal Code

Criminal Code Amendment Bills:
1. Capital punishment. 1r., 308
2. French version. 1r., 2571; 2r., com., 3081; ref. to Spl. Com. 3106; 3r., 3488
3. Firearms; Use of Documents not sworn to; sexual offences; gambling; attempted rape; unlawful use of uniform; differences on appeal; Quebec

Criminal Code—Con.
change of venue; 1r., 2840; 2r., com., 3410; 3r., 3427; Sen. amdts., 4414
For details of debate see Doherty, Rt. Hon. C. J.

Criminals, alleged, removal from one province to another.
See Criminal Code

Cronyn, Mr. Hume (London)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech (Mover) 11. Parliament Buildings—Union Government—League of Nations, 12; thrift—public finance, 13; tariff commission — immigration — scientific research, 14; representation and government — re-establishment, 15; capital and labour—after-war condition, 16; race and religion—Canada, 17; Earl Grey's farewell message, 18
Income tax
Charities, 3311-4
Patriotic funds, 3244
Pensions Bill, 4043, 4050
Drafting in accordance with decisions of Com., 4041
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4044
Widowed mother, dependent parent, 4043
Pensions and Re-establishment Com.
Peck, Mr., resignation of, 2081
Report; M. to adopt, 3922. History of pensions increase, 3923; changes and present state, 3927; insurance, 3928; war service gratuities—Re-establishment, 3930; work of Com. 3931; in reply—unanswered letter, explanation, 3957
Printing additional copies, 4321
Pensions, widowed mothers, M. (Mr. Power), 428
Returned soldiers' insurance, 4054
Scientific Research—Com., Special, report of, 2154
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 585

Crothers, Hon. T. W. (West Elgin)
Civil Service
Retirement of members, 4063-6
Superannuation, 391-2, 4268
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3368, 3375
Food and Drugs Bill, 959-60
Franchise Bill
Chief Electoral Officer—Biggar, Mr. O. M., appointment of, 4268-70
Returning officers, 1535, 1577-86
Voting notwithstanding disqualification, 1824-5

Crothers, Hon. T. W.—Con.
Grand Trunk strike of 1910 and pensions, 1126, 1349-51, 1541
Income tax
Charities, 3247-8
Suggestions, 3122, 3126
Industrial disputes, 2192-6
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4334-8, 4420-3
Opium and Drug Bill, 1641, 1646-8
Postmasters' salaries, 4526
Race track betting, 3427
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 391, 394

Crowe, Mr. S. J. (Burrard)
German and Austrian books, ques. 806
Shipping—sick and distressed mariners, 3104

Currency. See also Finance
Canadian, in United States, ques. 341
Copper—new one cent coins, 402, ques. 2067
Dominion notes and gold, ques. 588
Inflation, 107
Token money, 401
United States silver coins, 402

Currency Act Amdt. Bill (Coinage). Res. 399;1r., 402; 2r., com., 460; 3r., 462

Currie, General Sir Arthur, 3641, 3648, 3652-6, 3706, 3708

Currie, Mr. John A. (North Simcoe)
Balance of trade, 4329
Budget, 3053. Reduced tariff protection, 3053; Liberal-Conservatives and the Budget—how to secure greater markets—"jug-handled" free trade, 3054; home market for beef—effect of cotton duty in United States—Canadian conditions before protection—3055; danger of increasing purchases from United States—indirect and direct taxation—luxury tax and key industries, 3056; free trade agitation sectional—protection needed for glass, chinaware, silk spinning—tinplate—Canada's opportunity and how to meet it, 3057; resources, population, wise and paternal government—injurious effect of free trade agitation, 3058; Liberals and manufacturers—luxury tax opposed—socialists influence, 3059; free trade and public revenues—Adam Smith on sales tax, 3060—"Who pays the duty?"—a free trade Budget. 3061; "going to the country"—Mr. Fielding's amdt. 3062; national policy approved—not pledged Currie, Mr. John A.—Con.

Budget—Con.
to support present policy further than next session, 3063
Canadian National Railways
Canadian Pacific Railway, and, 3384
Deficit—rates, 3382-3
Extensions, 3383
Political patronage, 4222-3
Coal operations, director, 3175-6
Franchise Bill
Chief Electoral Officer, 1071-3
Disqualification of candidates, 1086
Naturalization—amdt. (Mr. Euler) to 3r., 4368-72
Polling divisions, 1520
Returning officers, 1530
Voters' lists, provincial, 2355-63
Franking privilege, 3356-8, 3762-7
Fuel Supply
Demurrage charges, 4328
Special powers for Railway Commission, 4327
Grain transportation charges, 2634
Grand Trunk strike and pensions, 1122, 1131, 1138, 4511
M. to restore pension status, 1122
House of Commons Staff, classification, 1041-4
Income tax
Deficits and losses, 3241
Patriotic and charitable funds, 3245-8
Stock dividends, 3238
Surplus revenues, 3252
Inland revenue, spirits, 3816
Luxury taxes—United States, in, 2528
National defence, 4303-5
Newspaper postage rate, 3351
Catalogues and parcels, 3356
Newspapers and propaganda, 4378
Parliament Buildings, 1420
Pensions Committee
Report, printing, 4321
Resignation of member of, 1085
Printing, Joint Com. on, 4257-8, 4321-2, 4503-6
Quebec's ancient fortifications, 425-6
Sick and distressed mariners, 2256
Soldier settlement—fishermen, 3220
Steel and shipping merger, 1960
Toronto
Letter carriers, 345
Militia property, 3728-31
Wealth, taxation of, 2527
Workmen's compensation Act and seamen, 2263

Customs. See also Customs Tariff
Automobiles, smuggled, ques. 807

Customs—Con.
Brokers, 3716
Department
Employees, ques. 317
Rumoured investigation by U.S. firm, 3491, 3623
Salaries, 3858
Duties, basis of estimates, ques. 1788
Entries and exchange rates, 109
Franco-Canadian tariff Convention, ques. 3684
French Treaty. See that title
Imports for 1919, ques. 2182
Textile imports, duties on, ques. 1899
War duty, removal of, 2489, 3110

Customs Act Amendment Bills
1. Importation of Firearms. Res. 616; 1r., 617; 2r., com., 3r., 1048
2. Export Regulations. Res. 3620; 1r., 3623; 2r., Ref. to Special Com. 3690; Report of Com. that Bill be not further proceeded with, 4504

Customs Tariff Act, 1907. Amdt. Bill. Res. 3110; 1r., 3111; 2r., com. 3174, 3r., 3229

Dager, Herman J., ques. 2182

Dairying Industry, 2403. See also Board of Commerce; Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Oleomargarine
Butter, prices, ques. 807
Feed, 605
Grading Export Butter and Cheese
Res. (Mr. Edwards) moved, 592; withdrawn, 614
Production records of cows, 1014
Products, quality of, improvement in, 599-607
United States market, advertising in, 601

Daly Building, Ottawa, ques. 1200

d'Anjou, Mr. Joseph E. S. E. (Rimouski)
Active militia—allowances, 3659
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 81. Tariff, duty on Government to formulate a policy, 81; Quebec representation in the Cabinet—Hon. Br. Blondin—French language—Quebec province and the Government, 82; Franchise, 83; popular unrest—Printing Bureau dismissals and Civil Service classification, 84; proposed general election, 85;
Board of Commerce, prices, 1151
Budget, 2568. Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) approved—defence of the farmers, 2568; public debt, 2569; economy and encouragement of agriculture, 2569; production and consumption — railway policy, 2570; Union Government and election, 2571;
Experimental farms, 1016, 2384
Franchise Bill—Proclamation, language of publication, 2309
French speeches, translation of, 699
Militia headquarters officers and service at the front, ques. 506
Naval Service, additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4400
Universal military training, 942

Daughters of Canada, 244, 396

Davidson, Mr. A. L. (Digby and Annapolis)
Dominion Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1936
Returning officers, 1523-4, 1580, 1588
Voters' lists, provincial, 2327-38
Naval Service Dept. estimates—agreement as to debate, 4409, 4412

Davis, Mr. Fred Langdon (Neepawa)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 106. New Parliament Building—taxation, increased, needed, 106; Civil Service and returned soldiers—inflation of currency—public revenues and expenditure, 107; Parliamentary control and its methods, 108; customs duties and exchange rates—profits, prices and co-operation, 109
Budget, 3023. New taxes and the business outlook—public finances, 3023; reduction of expenditure—Committee on estimates, 3024; Government should watch mergers—Budget supported—controversy on protection or free trade, Germany and Great Britain as examples—taxes probably to be revised, 3026
Coins, Canadian and American, 461-2
Franchise Bill
Ballot boxes, expenses of returning, 1927
Contributions, 1186
Misfeasance—penalty, 1075
Non-electors and non-residents, 786
Oath, administration of, 779
Polls, hours to be open, 1926
Proclamation, language of publication, 1834
Recall, the, 2035
Soldier land settlement, 2148
Special War Revenue Act Amdt Bill
Collection, method of, 3477
Ethyl alcohol, 3603-4

Daylight Saving, 1084, 1574

Debates. See House of Commons

Debt, National, ques. 309, 2478

DeCelles, Mr., 114, 210
Superannuation, 2968, ques. 3489

Déchène, Mr. Aimé Miville (Montgomery)
Budget, 2946. The new taxes, 2946; manufacturers and their products, 2947; rural population and its problems—new ideas in farming—votes for experimental farms and for Department of Agriculture generally, 2948; demonstration farms and local demonstrators in Quebec—well-being of the farmer the country's safest asset, 2951
Butter and cheese grading, 599
Canadian National Railways
Electric systems, ques. 1510
Express companies and, ques. 801
Civil Service
Bonus, 7191
Classification, ques. 1624
Quarantine station operators, 1281
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3169-70
Food and Drugs Bill, 1258, 1262
Franchise Bill, fees—statement to be in box, 1927
French speeches in House, translation of, 703
Government employees at Sorel, ques. 1199
Government steamers, 1604-6
Grosse Isle, public works, ques. 343, ques. 344
Maple products, 1255, 1258
Naval Service, 4406
Public loan, ques. 810
St. Lawrence dredge, 1616-20
St. Regis Indians, ques. 799
Toronto Eastern Railway, Toronto Suburban Railway, ques. 1004, ques. 2080

Defaulters. See Military Service

Delinquents. See Juvenile Delinquents

Delisle, Mr. Michel Siméon (Portneuf)
Icebreakers, St. Lawrence channel, ques. 317

Demers, Mr. M. J. (St. Johns and Iberville)
Bank interest, 992
Blue books, language in which published, ques. 992, ques. 1004
Budget, 2708. Balance of trade, 2708; cost of living—economy, 2709; protection and its effects, 2710; development of natural industries, 2711

Demers, Mr. M. J.—Con.
Bulgarian Peace treaty, ques. 316
Canadian Expeditionary Force, numbers, ques. 315
Commission of Conservation
Engineer, ques. 1002
Town Planning Adviser, ques. 1002
Farmers' Account book, French edition, ques. 315
Franchise Bill
Polling divisions, 1517, 1520
Polls, hours to be open, 1920
Registrars, 720
League of Nations, Canada's contribution, ques. 316
Mines department, ques. 672
Naval Service, 4401-2
Newsprint Controller, ques. 315
Ottawa new public building, ques. 1002
Quebec city mail deliveries, ques. 591
Rural mail carriers, ques. 591
Smith, Mr. J. E., ques. 2722
Vancouver dry dock, ques. 316

Demobilization, 19, 53, 4550, 4556, 4585. See also War Bonds; Reconstruction; Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment

Demobilization Appropriation Bill. Res. 4137. (See War Bonds, Over-subscriptions.)

Demobilization Vote—Housing and, 3545

Denis, Mr. Jean J. (Joliette)
Budget, 3043. Late sittings of the House—congratulations to Minister of Finance—tobacco duties, 3043; national emergency and the Budget—revenue and expenditure, 3044
Business of the House, state of, 3216
Canadian National Railways—stations, 891
Criminal Code Amdt. (French version) 3083-4
Dairy industry, 2403
Exhibition Commissioner, 4558-9
Fertilizer, freight rates on, 2407
Food and Drugs Bill, 960
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1940-3, 3875
Ballots and ballot boxes, 1097, 1104
Deposit, 1093-5
Disqualification
Candidates, of, 1088-9
Electors of—charitable support, those receiving, 1812-7, 1997
1812-7, 1997
Interpretation, 1987
"Candidate," 1985
"During an election," 1985-6

Denis, Mr. John J.—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Nomination,
Place of, 1092-3
Postponement of, 1096
Polling divisions, 1516-9
Reading of clauses in Com., 1919
Returning officers, 1528-30, 1574-5, 1585-8
Public officials, 1802-4, 1809
Votes for informal candidate, 1096
Voting on certificate, 1099-1100
Women voters, 2418-9
Married, names how listed, 1827, 3869
General election, deposits lost, ques. 922
Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition Bill, 1303, 1317, 1357, 1435, 1442-3, 1449-50
Strike of 1910 and pensions, 1553
Gold shipment to New York, 181
Icebreakers, 1602
Income tax
Additional information, demand for, 3302
Checking returns, 3128
Multiplicity of laws, 3315
Overpayment, 3254
Those who did not make reports, 3118-21
Interim Supply Bill, 3216
Judges' salaries, 3851
Moving pictures, 3627
National defence, 4302
Naval Service, 4300-5
One-cent coin, ques. 2007
Parliament buildings, 1423, 1427
Railways—public ownership rates, 1442, 1449
Royal Military College, 3152-3
Scientific Research, 2162
Session of Parliament, time of, 3217
Shipbuilding, contracts, 894
Statutes, suggested revision, 3821
Supply, undue haste complained of, 4562
Supreme Court Act, 2389
Tobacco growing, 2383, 3819-20
West Indies Conference, 3860
Yukon, 3281-2

Departments of Government, reduction of, 4456

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees (Mr. George H. Boivin)
Rulings and Statements of
Adjournment—order to be maintained, 1838
Amdts., one at a time, 1819
Appeal from ruling as Chairman, put by him as Speaker, 3664
Appeal from ruling—statement of appeal questioned, 1327, 3664
Arrangements to facilitate business—Franchise Bill, 3903

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Bills
Amdts. to, order of, 2224-5
Involving charge on public revenue, 1513. See also, under this title, Motions
Com.
Clause cannot be re-opened after adoption, 1256
Com. and 3r. at same sitting, 1061
Discussion, subsection by subsection, 1935, 1943
Explanation of Bill only by unanimous consent, 396, 1685
Reading of section by Chairman, 584, 1254, 1919
Section adopted, amendable only on reconsideration, 2365
Sub-clause amended, clause not passed—further discussion, procedure in, 1744
Consolidation of two, 1234
Preamble, proposal to insert, 4155
Special Com., ref. to by House, not by Com. of the Whole, 1639, 2022
Title, discussion of details without motion irrelevant, 4466
3r.,
Immediately after amdt. in, Com. only by consent, 1256
Chair to be addressed, 2030, 2231, 3308, 3550
Debate closed, 1044
Debates—publication of matter not spoken, 447, 4251
Decorum—conversation, 2317-8
Denials, 1184
Documents re-read at same session, 2294
Explanation—section amended, 3391
Granby public building, 3149-50
House of Commons officials, 949
Interim supply vote, explanation—rule 17c, 755
Interruptions, 353, 1131, 1179, 2033, 2528, 2916, 3062, 3500, 4118, 4150
Cahill, Mr.—Sir Henry Drayton, 3339
Member may rise to ask permission to ask question, 2047
Member requested to give way, 3454
Questions, 286-7
Asked by permission, not in question form, 1719
Limited, 2562
May exhaust right to speak, 2568
Language
"Delusional insanity," 2732
"False statements," 3006

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Language—Con.
"Knows that the statement he has made is untrue" 3549
"You are trying to fool someone," 3550
Matters sub-judice—Labrie brothers, 3849
Members
Honour of—insinuation, 1186
How to be referred to, 2831
—"the hon delegate" 2032
Interrupted, but address not completed, holds the floor, 3520
Recognition of by the Chair, 2756
Whips' list of names, 3045
Resume seat when Chairman rises, 2042
Right to speak exhausted, 871, 1718, 3086
Motion to adjourn debate negatived, 2951
Speaking, may not interrogate others, 2042
Statement of, to be accepted, 1224, 2291-2, 2334
To keep the floor, must speak, 2242
Motions
Involving charge upon public revenue, 1513, 3587, 4052
Non-debatable—Com. rise, etc., 1044, 1082, 1585, 3617
Seconder not needed, 3587
To be in writing, 1263
Mover to close debate, 333, 419, 553, 1225, 3837, 3403
Indemnity of members—Sir Robert Borden, 4454
Negative motion, 1264, 1915
Nothing before the Chair, 1597
Notice of motion passed over, afterwards called, 703
Point of order
May be discussed, 2032
Right of member to raise, 1183
Previous debate, 1397, 1677-8
Privilege—question not to be raised, 2918
Quorum, count of members, 964
Relevancy, 394, 645, 648, 656-7, 864, 915, 985, 1060, 1313, 1317-8, 1692, 3140, 3401, 3474, 3491, 3545, 3627, 3663, 3667, 3849, 3996
Appeal (Mr. McMaster) from ruling, 1327
Budget resolutions, 3338
Canadian National Railways Bill, 3384-5
Car shortage, 1317
Doherty, Mr., and Irish question, 1496
"Excise" taxes, 3318
Explanation and request for instructions—Special War Revenue Act

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Relevancy—Con.
Amdt. Bill, 3455
Franchise Bill, 1064, 1071-3, 1176, 1196, 1197-8, 1932, 1935, 2223-31, 2294, 2327, 2334
Amdt suggested, not moved, 2337-8
Canada Temperance Act, 2053
Documents, re-read, 2294
Personalities, 2048-50
Reconsideration of clause, 1997
St. Johns election, 2239
Schedule, discussion of, 1999
School system, 2283
Sermon, 1077
Gould, Mr., election of, 2038
Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition Bill
Section and schedule considered together, 1435
Strike of, 1910, 4511.
Judges' salaries and indemnity of members, 3853
Militia estimates, 3656
Appeal (Mr. Cannon), not sustained, 3663-5
Militia—
Cockshutt, Mr., remarks of, 3673
Peck, Mr., remarks of, 3669
Tweedie, Mr., remarks of, 3667-9
Opium and Drug bill, 1746
Post Office, 3742-4, 4531
Reference allowed as for comparison, otherwise out of order, 3492
Unanimous consent to disregard rule, 2105
Ways and means, 915
Repetitions, 2286
Resolution, error in, 3628
Saturday night—time of adjournment, 4320
Six o'clock interrupts debate—procedure, 1034
Special War Revenue—questions, opportunity for, 3631
Suggestions to facilitate debate, Special War Revenue, 3564
Supply—motion for, limits of debate on, 872
Supply—reverting to previous item, 4565
Taxation—request for statement by Minister, 3597
Unanimous consent, 796, 1692, 1999, 2023, 2389, 3315, 3565
Latitude in debate, 2105
Reverting to former clause of bill, 1061
Stacey, Mr., on Indian Act Amdt., 4021
3r., of Bill immediately after amdt. in Com. 1256

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Vote called, debate closed, 2242
Vote in Com., rule as to counting, 3673
Desaulniers, Mr. Arthur L. (Champlain)
Batiscan bridge, ques. 317
Budget, 2623. Protest against existing government, 2623; reconstruction and economy—navy deficits—general election needed, 2624; popular discontent, 2625
Hennick, Daniel D. patents of, ques. 1510
Loans to foreign countries, ques. 318
Mail carriers, ques. 343
Quebec arsenal. ques. 3862
Desjardins, "Ti-Noir," ques. 315
Deslauriers, Mr. Hermas (St. Mary)
Batiscan river, ques. 1230
Board of Commerce, M. for abolition, 1139
Budget, 3072. Workingmen and taxes, 3072; Minister of Labour and labour policy, 3073; present social upheaval—central labour exchange—distribution of Government contracts, 3074; employment insurance and health protection—stick together, 3075
Enemy aliens, naturalization, ques. 992
Montreal wharves, ques, 674
Proportional representation, ques. 803
Destroyers. See Naval Service
Detention Camps, ques. 314
Detroit River
Liquor patrol, 2107, 2118
Devlin, Mr. Emmanuel B. (Wright)
Civil Service
Bonus, 1270-3
Classification, 1272
Coal Operations Director, 3177
Food and Drugs Bill, 959, 1259, 1268
Franchise Bill
Corrupt practices, 1161
Disqualification of candidates, 1085-6
Non-electors and non-residents, canvassing, 772, 785
Public officials, 1802
French speeches in House, translation of, 700
Georgian Bay Canal, 914, 3177
German war payments, ques. 310
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1300-1
Honey adulteration, 798
House of Commons staff organization, 567, 753, 1040
Indemnity of members, 4091
Indian lands, 790-1
Inquiry concerning questions, 2416
Devlin, Mr. Emmanuel B.—Con.
Jellicoe, Admiral Viscount, visit of, ques. 310
Manufacturers, aid to in appeals, 321
Natural resources,—Wright county, 3813
Naval Service, 707-9
Orders in Council, Government by, 2020
Peace treaty, 1060-1
Railway cars—Canada and the United States, 881-2
Returned soldiers, 538
Shipbuilding, 914
Expenditure, how to be met, 917
Special War Revenue
Liquor cabinets, smokers' cabinets and tea wagons, 3793
Tooth washes, 3793-4
West Indies—outrages on blacks in the United States, 2845-6
Director of Coal Operations. See Coal Operations
Distressed Canadians, relief of, 4559
Distressed Seamen. See Canada Shipping Act
Distribution Office, 1037
Divisions. See House of Commons
Divorce, 134
Divorce in Ontario and Prince Edward Island Bill, 1r., 1573
Divorce Cases
Remission of fees, 4321, 4413
Documents, not sworn to. See Criminal Code
Doherty, Rt. Hon. C. J. (Minister of Justice)
Administration of Justice, 3840-51
Labrie Brothers, case of, 3227, 3295, 3558-60
M. (Mr. Casgrain) for papers, 2014
Admiralty Act Amdt., 2842, 3086
Board of Commerce
Constitutional questions, 3685
Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4476
British North America Act, 4168-70, 4379
Motion for papers, 811-2
Campaign funds, 1227
Canada's national status, 474
Criminal Code Amdt (French Version) 2571-2, 3081-5
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 2840, 3410-3
Affidavit, pretended, 3414-5,
Marriage licenses, 3415
Age of consent, 3415
"Appeal Court" defined, 3410
Arrest on summoning of person outside province, 3417-8

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill—Con.
Courts of appeal—Supreme Court, appeal to, 3422-3
Firearms—weapons, 3410-15
Gambling, 3415-6, 3427
Petty thefts and jury trial, 3421
Quebec, change of venue, 3420-1
Race-track betting, 3427
Re-election by prisoner, 3419-20
Saskatchewan and Alberta, appeals in summary convictions, 3418-9
Senate amendments, 4414—collectors of fares, 4415
Sexual offences, 3416
Uniforms, etc., unlawfully worn, 3417-8
Criminal trials
Motion for papers re, 2015
Eight-hour day, 454
Exchequer Court Act Amdt., 2003, 2201-4
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2064-73, 2233-4
Canada Temperance Act, 2053
"Ecclesiastics," 1076
"Hours of the day," "standard time," 1994
Misfeasance—penalty, 1074-5
Pollbooks to returning officer, 1078-80
Franking privilege, 3762-8
Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition Bill, 1298, 1316-21
Loans—amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 1536
Ratification of agreement, 1323-4
Strike of 1910, 1134, 1542, 1545, 1547-53
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) 1351
Habeas Corpus. See under this title Administration of Justice
Internment cases, 4517-8
Irish question, 1496
Judges' salaries, pensions, 3228, 3851, 4331-41, 4417-23
Juvenile Delinquents Act, 2842
League of Nations
Canada and the Empire, 484
Lennox, Mr. Justice, 1232
Military Service Branch, 4516-8
Naturalization
Alien enemy origin, 3920-1
Alsace-Lorraine, 3921
Certificate not issued, 3919
Oaths, administration of, 3919
Naturalization Act Amdt. Bill, 3682, 3915-21, 4416
Revocation of certificate, 3915-9
Newspaper postage rate, 3351
Pecuniary Claims Commission, 3858
Penitentiaries, 3409-10, 3858
Alberta, 3855-7

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Penitentiaries—Con.
Dorchester, 3855
Portsmouth, appointments pending, 568
Purchasing agent, 3840, 3854-5
Penitentiary Act Amdt., 2848, 3409-10
Pension as ex-judge, 298-9
Personal position in relation to pension, 4423
Purchasing Commission, 4582-3
Quebec riots of 1918, 1211
St. James by-election, 707, 787
St. Peter river, floods, 859
Shipbuilding, contracts and tenders, 664-6
Stoneham, the late Finlay, 568
Supreme Court Act Amdt., 2003-4, 2315-8, 2389
Supreme Court reports, 3855
Washington, Canadian minister at, 2469-73

Dominion Alliance, 807

Dominion Arsenals, Quebec, 3717, ques. 3862

Dominion Canners, ques. 415. See also Board of Commerce

Dominion Franchise Bill, 1r., 338, 2r., 710; 756-775; com., 775, 1061; 1085; 1103, 1152, 1160, 1165, 1175, 1512, 1574, 1790, 1916, 1985, 2023, 2082, 2204, 2267, 2269, 2318, 2417, 3864, 4264; 3r., 4379
Amdts.—recorded divisions;
1. By-elections; 2. Provincial lists;
3. Naturalization; 4. Propaganda;
5. Publicity of contribution, 4360-79
Debate of Bill, arrangements for, 1072, 1166, 1198, 1837, 1944-5, 2417, 2430-2, 3901
Com. on forms, 2001
Non-contentious clauses, 776
Printing, copies of Bill, 704
Statement as to additions, 582
Translation into French, 1061
Sections and subjects discussed:
Accidents and errors—provisions in case of, 1110
Advance polls, 1162, 1933, 1998, 3864, 3873, 4271
List of, 3875
Agents and officers to vote, 1918
Aliens, 340. See also that title
Certificate, 2057, 2082, 2204
Amdt. (Mr. Euler) neg. 2224
Amdt. (Mr. Pardee) moved 2225-6, neg. 2242
Amdt. to 3r. (Mr. Euler) 4369; neg. 4373
Armed strangers, 1108
Assistant Chief Electoral Officer, 1513, 4269-70

Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Sections and subjects discussed—Con.
Ballots, 1097
Counterfoil and, 1103, 1104
Counting before opening of poll, 1101
Forgery or destruction of, 1098
Form of, black border, 1168
Not to be displayed, 1103
Ballot boxes, 1097
Custody of, 1928
Returning, 1927
"Blocking the poll," 1827
Bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, 1156
By-election, simultaneous, 1090-1
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 4359-60 to 3r.
Campaign funds. See under this title Contribution
Canada Temperance Act, 1166, 1943, 2052, 3864
Candidates,
Consent, 1095
Withdrawal of, 1096
Canvassing by outsiders, 772, 786
Chief Electoral Officer, 339, 1070, 1075, 4264
Remuneration of—res. 4136
Report as to working of law, 1110
Salary, 1512, 4516
To retain papers, 1111, 1928
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, 1069, 1198
Compulsory voting, 1062-4
Contributions, 781, 1169, 1930
Publicity of, amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King), 4272; amdt. (Mr. McMaster), 1171; neg. 1198; amdt. (Mr. Maharg) to 3r., neg., 4373
Conveyance of electors to polls, 786, 1061
Corrupt practices—disqualification, 1160
Counting and reporting vote, 1109
Definitions, 775
Deposit, 1091, 1095
Deputy returning officers, 1074
Disfranchisement, 731, 735, 738, 746, 748, 750, 757, 763, 765, 768
Disqualification—See also under this head, corrupt
Candidate, of, 1085, 4271
Electors of, 1996
Charitable aid, those receiving, 1812
Criminals, 1820
Returned soldiers exempted from, 1811, 1820
Voting notwithstanding, 1824
"Ecclesiastics," 1070, 1076
Election clerk, 1073, 1515-6
Election expenses, 1152, 1929. See also under this title Contributions

Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Sections and subjects discussed—Con.
Election expenses—Con.
Advertising, 1930
Proposal that Dominion treasury pay, 1197
Publicity of, 747
Return of by agent, 1155
Election officers, 1918
Fees and expenses, 3867, 4270
Taxation of, 1111, 1152
Persons disqualified for, 1075
"Election papers, 1928, 2023
Election return, 1110, 1928
Executory contracts void, 781
Expenses
Accounts, taxation of, 1929
Former general elections, 728
Or wages of voter, payment of forbidden, 1064
Personal, 1991
False, oath—penalty, 781
False statements—made to effect election, 1065
Fees, statement to be placed in box, 1926-7
Forms, 1166, 3868
Hindus who were soldiers, 1812, 1821
Interpretation, 1943
"Advance Poll," 1943
"Candidate," 1943, 1985
"During an election," 1985
"Election officer," 1987
"Elector," 1988
"Hours of the day"—"standard time," 1988, 1994
"List of voters," 1989
"Member," 1989
"Official agent," 1991
"Rural Polling Division," 1991-2
"Urban polling division," 1991
"Voter," 1993
Judges and elections, 721
Jurisdiction, 712, 725, 761
Married women's names—how listed, 1827, 3869, 4272
Misfeasance—penalty, 1074
Names not on list, 1926, 3877
Nomination of Candidates, 1090
"Electors" how defined, 1916
Place of, 1092
Postponement, 1096
Non-electors and non-residents, canvassing, 784-6
Notices, 777, 1169
Oaths, 779-81, 1102
Ontario, election laws amdt act, effect of, 3880-98
Ontario provincial voters' lists, 3880

Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Sections and subjects discussed—Con.
Orders in Council, repeal of, 776
Orientals, 1811, 1820
Paid propaganda—amdt. (Mr. McMaster) to 3r., 4374
Peace and good order, 1105
Liquor, 1108
Penalties, 1160
Personal registration of voters, rules for, 3901, 3907
Rules, 4272
"Plugging," 2350
Political contributions. See under this title Contributions.
Poll books to returning officer, 1078
Polls
Hours to be open, 1919
Pencil provided, 1102
When to be held, 1101
Polling divisions, 1516, 1811, 1995
Polling place—parties present, 1098, 1102
Additional, 1826
Population and status of place, 2320
Present laws, insufficiency of, 710, 724
Printers' name, 779
Proclamation—language of publication, 1918, 2267, 2277, 1828, (Amdt) Mr. Turgeon, 1834
Mailed to postmaster, 1080
Notices, etc., 2319
Provincial lists
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4363; neg. 4366
Jurisdiction, 339, 3889
Qualification of electors, 1811, 4271. See also under this title Aliens
Indians, 2055
Recall, the, 2023-5
Amdt. (Mr. Tweedie) 2023-5, neg. 2052
Recount by Judge, 1110
If judge fails to act, 1110
Registrar and enumerator, 1096
Registrars, 720, 728, 3899
Public officers, choice of, as, 722
Registration of voters
Interrogatories, 1167
Removing notices, 779
"Residence," 1159
Returning officer, 720, 759
Civil Service Commission, proposed appointment by, 1809
Duty on receipt of writ, 1516
Further duty of, 1096
Oath of, 1166
Rules for personal registration amdts. 3901
Rural municipalities, 339
Schedules, 1166

Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Sections and subjects discussed—Con.
Secrecy during poll, 1103
Staff and temporary assistance, 1073
Swearing in of names. See under this title Voters' list.
Swearing in voters, 721
Telegraph communications by, 1068, 1198
Time element, the, 728
Voters' lists, 2319
Corrections in, 1103
Married woman's name, 1827
New lists, 1825, 1997
Not necessary, 1826, 4272
Preparation of, 3878, 4271
Provincial, use of, 2417. See also under this title Provincial Voting
By mail, 1163
By proxy, 1162
Manner of, 1103
On certificate, 1098
War-time Elections Act, effect of, 711, 725, 734, 765
Women voters, 2418
Writs, 1073, 1166
Nomination—election—delay, 1092
To be addressed to returning officers, 1515

Dominion Land Surveyors. See Land Surveyors

Dominion Lands, acreage unsold in West, ques. 1118

Dominion Lands and Parks, 3283

Dominion Lands Act Amendment Bills
1. Alien Homesteaders. 1r., 704; 2r., 1048, 1233; com., 1233; Consolidated with Bill following
2. Soldiers of Associated Powers. 1r., 1113; 2r., com., 1233; 3r., 1235

Dominion Police. See Royal Canadian Mounted Police

Dominion Steamers, 1598

Dominion Steel Corporation, 623

Dominion Troops, Services of overseas, Resolution of thanks from British House of Commons, 1159

Dorval Military Property, 3727, 3731

Doughty, Dr., and war trophies, 4557

Douglas, Mr. James M. (Strathcona)
Budget, 2838. Tariff for revenue, 2838; income tax—manufacturers and farmers, and prices, 2839

Douglas, Mr. James M.—Con.
Franchise Bill
Counting and reporting vote, 1109
Oath by elector, 1102
Polling divisions, 1517
Polls, hours to be open, 1924
Returning officers, 1584
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1458
Rulings and statements as Chairman
Bills, printed in both languages, 3251
Soldiers Settlement Act—cattle branding, 1698
Special War Revenue Amdt. Bill
Bank overdrafts, 3798
Candy, 3592
Carpets and rugs, 3585
Hats, 3453
Jams and marmalades, 3796
Underwear, 3453-4, 3567

Douglas, Mr. John C. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
Coal purchases by Canadian Merchant Marine, ques. 1115

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry (Minister of Finance)
Auditor General's report, 458, 2179, 2390
Belgium, proposed credit, 583
Bonds, tax-exempt, 3339
Budget, inquiry as to, 1047
Budget, the, 2476. Exports and imports (aggregate trade) 2477; national debt, 2478; inflation, 2479; trade with Great Britain and with United States, 2481; revenue and expenditure, 1919-20 and estimated for 1920-1, 2483; Grand Trunk acquisition, 2484; luxury taxes, 2486; motor cars, liquors, sales, stamps, moving pictures, 2487; income tax, 2488; business profits tax—customs war duty removal, 2489; tariff, 2490; resolutions, 2492
Business profits war tax, 3111-7, 3229-37
Public utilities, 3230-7
Canadian National Railways and Canadian Government Merchant Marine—withholding of information justified, 1679-80
Civil Service
Bonus, 1269-71, 1279-89
Slide masters, 1279
Insurance, 1054-6, 1779-81
Retirement fund, 459-60
Currency (coinage) 399, 401
Exchange and, 461
Currency Act Amdt., 460-2
Customs Tariff Act Amdt. Bill, 3110-1, 3174

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry—Con.
Demobilization. See under this title, War Loans
Gas and electricity, tax, 3111-4
Gold shipment to New York, 181
Government annuities, 402-6, 462-3
Income War Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 3118-28, 3237-55, 3296, 3316, 4288
Absentees, 3303
Accounting period, 3305-8
Additional information, demand for, 3302
Beneficiaries, 3309
Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and, 3306
Charities, 3313
Consolidation of laws, 3315
Deficits and losses, 3240-1, 3297
Delinquents, disputable assessments, 3118-27
Distraint of goods, 3304
Dividends, when liable, 3305-6
Earned and unearned incomes, 3309-10
Errors in returns, 3315-6
Estate accumulating in trust, 3243, 3309
Exemptions on account of children, 3297
Five per cent added, 3251-2
Graduated tax, 3126
"Householders," 3249, 3315
Indemnity of members and, 3306, 3310-1
Installments, 3301, 3253
Partnerships, 3252
Part payment with return, 3253
Patriotic and charitable funds, 3244-8, 3309
Penalties, 3303
Pensions, 3253
Refunds, 3301
Residence or investment outside Canada, 3249-51
Retroactive provision, 3304
Returns, 3253-4
Forms, in French, 1085, 1573
Stock dividends, 3238-40
Tax Bills delayed, 3125
Interim Supply Bill, 3215-8
Kingston Harbour works, 459
Loan Companies Act Amdt., 1776-1779
Mint, the, 615-6, 798
Newsprint shortage, 2967-8
Returned soldiers' insurance, Senate amdts., 4466
Returns and questions, 753
Scottish Canadian Insurance Corporation, 583-4
Session of Parliament, time of, 3217
Shipbuilding, cost of—not another popular loan, 917

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry—Con.
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3988-4017, 4155-68
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Administration—cards of directions, 3480, 3791
Amdt. (Mr. Crerar). Taxes payable at source, 3483-7
Auctions, 3575
Automobiles, 3597, 3793
Bank overdrafts, 3624-5, 3798-3800
Beer used to make vinegar, 3604
Binder twine, 3623
Boats, canoes, etc., 3588-92
Boots, 3563-3585
Breakfast foods, 3795
Bric-a-brac, 3576
Candy, 3592-4
Caps, 3566, 3790
Carpets and rugs, 3585
Chandeliers, 3578
Changes made in resolutions, 3345
Clark, Mr. M., reply to, 3442-5, 3449
Date of coming into effect, 3607, 3629
Defended—precedent of 1896, 3444
Duties paid before, 3624
List and explanation, 3561-2
Chewing gum, 3594
Clocks and watches, 3574
Clothes, 3564, 4289-90
Collection,
Method of, 3465-8, 3458-9
Progress of—retailers and collections, 3479
"Consumer," how defined, 3795
Containers, 3633-4
Curtains, 3578
Debate of, arrangements for, 3454-6
Dresses, except silk, 3587
Duties paid before changes, 3624
"Excise and sale" and luxury taxes, 3316, 3319-20, 3465-8
Amdt. (Mr. Lemieux), exemption of returned soldiers, 3447
Explanation and answering of questions, 3326-35
Firearms, 3595, 3793
Food, 3616, 3795
Fountain pens, etc., 3577-8, 4289
Furniture, 3575-6
Gas and electric light fixtures, 3597
Glass, cut, 3569
Imports and manufactures, 3566
Instructions issued, 3791, 3480
Jams and marmalades, 3796
Jewellery, 3578-85
Licenses, 3581
Medals, 3585
Wedding rings, 3584, 3797

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry—Con.
Special War Revenue Act—Con.
Lace, 3792-3
Lace and braid, 3574
Licenses, 3606-8, 4290
Small manufacturers, 3797
Liquor cabinets, smokers' cabinets and tea wagons, 3793
Merchandise not delivered on May 19, 3613
Moving pictures, 3627-8
Musical instruments, 3595-6, 3628-9
Oriental rugs, 3577
Overcoats, 3586
Paragraph by paragraph, consideration, M. 3487-8
Peas (split), etc., 3795
Penalties, 4290
Permanency of taxes, 3479
Plated ware, 3572
Playing cards, 3599-4000
Prices, how arrived at, 3790
Promissory notes, 3624
Proprietary medicines, 3600-6
Purses and pocketbooks, 3568
Real estate sales, 3796
Refunds, 3607-8, 3629-31
Ribbons, 3574
Sales taxes, 3608-17, 3794
Foods, 3616-7
Manufacturers' agents, 3610
Senate amendments, 4505-6
Silk fabrics, 3572-3
Silk kimonas, etc., 3790
Silk waists, 3632
Silks, 3563
Spirits and medicated wines, 3600, 3793
Sporting goods, 3569-72
Stamps, 4290
Stamp taxes, 3627, 3801
Stock transfers, 3625-6, 3800
Stockings, 3567
Tobacco pipes, 4289
Toilet ware, 3576
Tooth washes and powders, 3794
Underwear, 3568
Wedding rings, 3797
Wheat meal, 3796
Supply
Interim vote, 754-6
Taxation of mutual insurance companies, 2080
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 586
Trust Companies, 855
Trust Companies Act Amdt., 1779
Victoria Shipowners (limited) 4584
War loans—oversubscriptions, 4137, 4180-1, 4287-8

Dredging, 3781-90

Drugs. See Opium and Drugs; Food and Drugs; Proprietary Medicines

Dry Docks, 4567
Vancouver, B.C., ques. 316, ques. 3620
Victoria, B.C., ques. 3619

Duff, Mr. William (Lunenburg)
Archibald, Col. Grassie, ques. 2007
"Canada," steamer, ques. 1230
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Ques. 996
Income and expense, 623
Information withheld, policy opposed, 1676, 1681
Canadian navy, ques. 540
"Canadian Recruit," steamer, ques. 312
Cape Race, 2117
Charlottetown fish hatchery, ques. 313
Civil Service
Insurance, 1054-5
Retirement fund, 459-60
Dredging, 3783-4
Extension of trade, 1884
Firearms—licenses—ship-captains, 3411
Fisheries
British Columbia, 3534
Department, estimates, 3521-5
Development of, M. in favour, 839
Food inspectors, 3539-41
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1164, 1933-6, 2001
Peace and good order, 1107
Voters' lists, provincial, 2333-7
Govt. steamers, crews, wages, 2112-3
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, branch lines, 1318-9
Halifax marine agency, 2110
Hanna, Mr. D. B. and Canada Steamships, Limited, 1742
Health Department and Civil Service Commission, 3543
Housing expenditure, 3550
Icebreakers, "Montcalm," 2112
Ice conditions, Atlantic coast, 2105-7
International Fisheries Commission, ques. 311
Liquor shipments and Marine Dept., 2108
Lunenburg, registrar, 2108-10
Margeson, Mr. J. W., ques. 1036
Marine hospitals, 3554
Masters and mates, 569, 984-6
Naval defence
Newfoundland, position of premier of, 3499
Naval service, 3516-20, 4395

Duff, Mr. Wm.—Con.
Naval Service..Con.
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4401-2, 4291-9
Badges, 437-446
Department
Ballantyne, Hon. Mr., statement as to leader of Opposition, 4412
Salaries, 4409
O'Connor, Mr. W. F., K.C., ques. 3618
Oleomargarine, 1865
Pensions Board employees and soldier organizations, ques. 1116
Pictou harbour, 2184-89, 3493
Wharfage dues, 2189
Pilotage, 2120-1
Public buildings—payments, 3724
Roumania, shipments to, ques. 312, ques. 343
St. Lawrence river power development, ques. 1120, ques. 1230
Shipbuilding and Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 632, 641, 646
Expense and income, 904-6
Government ownership, 906
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4001-8, 4148-51, 4159-67
Sick and distressed mariners, 2256-58, 2260
Skeena river hatchery, ques. 412
Soldier settlement, and fishermen, 1690
Special War Revenue Act Amdt Bill, 3466
Bank overdrafts, 3625
Collection, method of, 3478-80
Motor boats, canoes, etc., 3588-90
Musical instruments, 3595
Staff, estimated, 3478
"Stanley," steamer, ques. 312
Steamboat inspection 1051-2, 1763-75
West Indies, 1885

Duncan, Mr. Walter, ques. 1117, ques. 2720

Dupont, Mr. Joseph, ques. 590

Du Tremblay, Mr. P. R. (Laurier-Outremont)
Allies conference at Ostend, 2476
Budget, 3063. New taxes and high cost of living, 3063; income tax—revenue needs as argument for new taxes—tariff commission, 3064; shipbuilding—the German war indemnity, 3065; England after the war—congratulations to Minister of Finance, 3066
Franchise Bill
"Candidate," 1985
Proclamation—two languages, 1082
Newspaper postage, 3760
Ottawa city, agreement with, 988
Parliament buildings, 1427
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4005, 4009
War indemnity—Canada's share, 1084

Economic Conditions of the World
Peace conference declaration, 1888. Prices; peace not yet established; production, increase of needed; consumption, increase of; inflation of currency; profiteering; thrift; credit, difficulties in; co-operation of all classes needed; conclusions, summary of

Economic Development Commission, ques. 1896

Editorial Committee, 4322. See also Printing
French member necessary, 4503-5

Edmonton
Alberta penitentiary, 3855, ques. 2777
Post Office, 4518
Deputy postmaster, ques. 1739
Papers, motion for, 1900
Money parcel lost, ques. 412, 923

Edmundston
Post office and customs, ques. 2722

Education. See also Technical Education; Schools
Aliens, of, 819, 822
English speech among the foreign-born, 814
Federal Bureau of, 826
M. (Mr. Edwards) in favour of, 1362
Methods of, 820

Edwards, Mr. John Wesley (Frontenac)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 135. Reply to Mr. W. F. Maclean, 135; vacancies and by-elections, 136; Assiniboia by-election—absence of Prime Minister, 137; cabinet representation—Hon. Mr. Blondin, 138; French-Canadians and Hon Mr. Blondin—War-time elections act, 139; Military Voters Act and its effect on election, 140; Opium, Hon. Mr. Mackenzie King and, 141; Hearst papers, 142; Quebec and its "hour," 143
Aliens
Immigrants and Canadian citizenship, 826
"Suckling traitors," 732
Budget, 2723. Tariff inquiry and revision, 2723; Liberal party and tariff, 2724; comparison of party records on the tariff, 2725; tariff amdts. of Mr. McMaster and Mr. Fielding, 2728, 2732; Mr. M. Clark and tariff proposals, 2729; Great Britain and protection—fiscal matters and prices in 1909, 2730; reciprocity, 2731; rural depopulation, 2733; Canadian agriculture and United States markets and competition, 2734; Mr. Crerar and the farmers, 2737;

Edwards, Mr. John Wesley—Con.
Budget—Con.
Grain Growers' Grain Company, etc., 2738; protection not for a section, but for the country, 2739
Capital punishment, 308
Civil Service
Holidays, 4059
Senate staff, 4059
Clark, Mr. M., record and views on free trade, 2729, 3436-8
Farmers' party, 610
Federal Bureau of Education, 826, 1362, 1384-5, 1396, 1400
Franchise Act, 733
Aliens—certificate, 2231, 2245
Contributions—Assiniboia expenses, 1187
Proclamation, language of publication, 1831-2, 1836, 2280-4, 2288-91, 2295
Recall, the, 2030-4, 2039-42
Assiniboia 1180-1, 1186
Registration—interrogatories, 1168
Returning officers, public officials, 1793
Grading export butter and cheese, 592, 609
Hearst publications, 142, ques. 993, 1290
Income tax
Charities, 3312
Exemptions on account of children, 3297-3300
Inspector at Kingston, ques. 2181
Indemnity of members and salaries of, ministers, 4083
Lighthouses and keepers, 2114
Military training, 3713
Militia
Active militia—allowances, 3671
Cadet service, 3712
Musical instruments, tax on, 3595
Oleomargarine, 597, 612, 1782-7, 1849-73
Pensions and re-establishment, 3941
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4047-9
Widowed mother resident outside of Canada, 4047
Portsmouth penitentiary, vacancies in chief positions—Stoneham case, 568
Press gallery reporters, 4503
Race track betting, 3430
Rural mail carriers, 4525
Shipbuilding contracts, 666-7
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4011
Soldier settlement, 1688-89
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3319, 3339
Changes proposed by Finance Minister, 3436
Stoneham, Finlay, deceased convict, 568
The Menace, ques. 1899
Timiskaming election, 1188

Eggs—imports and exports, ques. 1898

Eight-hour Day, 334, 367, 449
Agriculture and, 374-80, 384, 453
Contractual rights, 372, 373-4
Dominion and provinces, jurisdiction, 450, ques. 509
Minister of Justice, opinion of, 455
International Conference at Washington—draft provisions, 371
League of Nations and, 383
Peace Treaty and, 381
Summary of position in different countries, 382

Electoral Atlas, ques. 317

Electoral Lists,
Bagot county, ques. 2011
By-elections, for, ques. 310. See also Dominion Franchise

Election, General
Cost of, ques. 587
Deposits lost, ques. 922
Opposition leader's motion in favour of, 35

Electric Railways. See Railway Act, 1919 Amdt. (Provincial Jurisdiction)

Electricity
Competition in sale of—taxation, 3106, 3113
Export of, ques. 1624. See also Special War Revenue Act
Inspection, 1887

Elevators. See also Grain; Canada Grain Act; Commercial Feeding Stuffs
Dominion Government, ques. 3862-3
Fort William, 565
Screenings, ques. 704, 3401-2
Terminal, 1878

Elgin East vacancy, 1, 11

Elkin, Mr. Stanley E. (St. John City and Counties of St. John and Albert)
Budget, 2559. Exchange rate, 2560; business profits war tax—natural resources and development, 2560; protective tariff and those who benefit by it, 2561; the organized farmers and their business activities, 2561; farmers are prosperous, 2562; voting strength of country and city, 2563; American factories brought into Canada by protection—reductions in Canadian tariff, 2564; free trade, effect of on transportation and credit, 2567; duty of members of Parliament to lead public opinion, 2568

Emigration,
Canada, from, ques. 1119
Mennonites to United States, 2127, 2179, 2248

Empire, the. See also Washington, Canadian Minister at; League of Nations; Peace Treaty
Canada's status in, 359
Independence opposed by Government and Parliament, 365
Imperial War Cabinet, 362

Employment Offices, 4512-3
Order in Council affecting, 3087

Employment Offices Co-ordination Bill, 1r., 2313-14; 2r., 3086; com., 3088; 3r., 3092

Enemy Aliens. See Aliens; Naturalization; Dominion Franchise

Enterprise Foundry Company, ques. 2415

Entomology, Branch, 2401

Erieau, 2115

Estimates. See also Supply, Com. of Form of objected to,
Civil Service bonus, 1276
Method of voting, 108, 2778. See also King, Hon. Mr.
Supplementary, 1920-21, 1229, 1254, 2412, 4257, 4413
Inquiry as to, 3769
"Examiner of Estimates" 108

Ethier, Mr. Joseph A. C. (Laval-Two Mountains)
Bankruptcy Bill, 4097
Cinematographic films, tax on, ques. 3489
Civil Service
Bonus, 3228
Classification, ques. 505, 552, 592, 675. See also under this title, House of Commons
Conscription, ques. 320
Conservation Commission, ques. 2573
House of Commons
French language, rights of, 1040
Organization and classification of staff, 858, 1038
Naval Service—Ballantyne, Hon. Mr., reference to leader of Opposition, 4411
Otter, Sir William Dillon, ques. 673
Post Office and Customs Departments, rumoured investigation, 3623
St. Hermas postal service, ques. 412
Tobacco, duties on, ques. 1114

Ethyl Alcohol. See Inland Revenue; Special War Revenue

Euler, Mr. William D. (North Waterloo)
Aliens and franchise, 340. See also under this title, Franchise; Naturalization
Belgium, proposed credit to, 582
Canadian National Railways, mail contracts and, 4530
Civil Service bonus, 4547
Eight-hour day, 357, 383
Jurisdiction, ques. 509
Franchise Bill, 739
Advance polls, 3876
Aliens, 2057, 2065-6, 2071, 2074-5, 2091-6, 2227-8, 2231-2, 2240-2
Amdt. 2096
Amdt. to 3r., 4367-72
Voters' lists, 2429
Provincial lists, 3895
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1501, 1505
Income tax, 3126
Internment case, 4518
League of Nations, 357
Letter carriers, 4529
Naturalization Act, 3683
Alien, enemy origin, 3920
Certificate not issued, 3919
Imperial citizenship and, ques. 996
Revocation of certificate, 3915-8
Opium and Drug Bill, 1633-4, 1746, 1751-3
Parliament Buildings, 1425-7
Postal employees' salaries, 2670, 3145
Roumania, advance to, ques. 3488
Rural mail carriers, ques. 414, 4523
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4144-7, 4156
Special War Revenue Act Amdt, 3439
Auctions, 3575
Automobiles, 3598
Boats, canoes, etc., 3590-1
Collection, method of, 3439, 3459-62
Furniture, 3574-5
Hats, 3562
Gas and electric light fixtures, 3596
Jewelry, 3579
Luxuries, on retail sale, list of, 3462
Musical instruments, 3628

Europe, distress in, 116, 4545. See also League of Nations

"Examiner of Estimates," 108

Exchange, rate of, 69, 112, 126, 145, 157, 165, 178, 190
Gold shipment to New York, 181
United States trade, and, 55

Exchequer Court Act Amdt. Bill, 1r., 2003; 2r. com., 2200; 3r., 2204

Excise
Estimates, 3859

Excise and Sales Tax. See also Special War Revenue
Prices, effect on, 3329

Exhibitions, 4558

Exhibition Buildings, use of by Militia, ques. 2009

Experimental Farms. See also Agriculture; Commercial Feeding Stuffs, ques. 1360, 2382, 2390, 2412
Achievements of, 1013
New buildings, etc, 3156
Ontario, extension in, M. by Mr. Sutherland, 1005
Swift Current, 4560

Exploration
Stefansson expedition, ques, 704

Explosives, 2248. See also Beloeil; Mines

Export Regulations. See Customs Act Amdt

Exports. See also Trade
Hides to United States, ques. 313
Increase of and means to promote, 621, 626
Wheat to United States, ques. 313
Wheat to Greece, ques. 415

Expropriation. See Irrigation Act

External Affairs, Dep, 4534

Extra-Territorial effect of Dominion legislation, 4169

Fafard, Mr. J. Fernand (L'Islet)
Budget, 2717. Wish courage to those who have to pay taxes—railway deficits—standing army, 2717; militarism—new taxes—tariff revision, 2718; high cost of living and popular unrest, 2719; national unity, 2720
Cimon, Mr., and Military defaulters, ques. 1462
Civil Service classification, ques. 997
Dominion land surveyors, ques. 1115, ques. 2006
Flax industry, 693
Food—price regulation, 1144, 1151
High cost of living, 1151
St. Camille-Cabano proposed railway, ques. 589

Farm Labour, 1011, 1220, 1227
Spring work, for, ques. 800

Farms, Fertility of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Farmers' Account Book, ques. 315

Farmers' Movement and party, 102, 127, 153, 186, 196, 282, 1219, 1226, 2057. See also Canadian Council of Agriculture
Subsidies and bounties, position on, 899

Federal Bureau of Education. See Education

Federal Emergency Fund, ques. 1199; ques. 2182

Fertilizers, 119

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens (Shelburne and Queen's)
Admiralty Act Amdt, 3086
"Allied and Associated Powers," 1234
Bill—printing of in English and French, 1057
Board of Commerce, 1685
Bridges, 3772-9
British Columbia Indians, 952
British North America Act Amdt, 41-69-70
Budget, The, 2495. Congratulations to Minister of Finance in view of difficulties of situation, 2496; loans, stabilizing the market, 2507-2517; borrowing in Canada and its effect, 2490; revenues and expenditure, 2500; net debt, 2501; economy needed, 2502; tariff, free trade or protection 2,503; bounties, 2506; the Farmers' party, 2507; Liberal party and policy, 2508; tariff inquiry, 2509; amdt moved, 2510
Budget, date of, 2247, 2318
Budget debate not limited by amdt, 2518
Business of the House, order of, 2314
Business profits war tax, 3111
Public utilities, 3231-2
Canada and the Empire, 493
Canada and the United States, 496
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Crews, 641
Canadian National Railways
Lockeport proposed extension, 3085, 3376, 4218
Nomenclature and legislation, 3390
Western extensions, 3390
Withholding of information, 1667
Withholding of information, 1667
Canadian representative at Washington. See, under this title, Washington
Correspondence, 3081
Canadian Wheat Board, 4358
Capital punishment, 308
Civil Service
Bonus, 1269-72, 1289
Insurance, 1056
Ottawa, taxation, 579
Retirement, 3825-30, 4460-5
Retirement fund, 459-60
Returned soldiers and, 3131

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens—Con.
Civil Service—Con.
Superannuation
Pensions, inadequacy of based on former values, 391
Principle approved, 392-4
Temporary employment, 3129-33
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3361-3
Concurrence in supply, 4586
Criminal Code Amdt (French version) 3081-84
Currency, coinage, 399
DeCelles, Mr., superannuation of, 2968
Dominion Lands Act Amdt (United States soldiers) 1234
Dredging, 3783
Dry docks, 4570-2
Eight-hour day, 380
Estimates and their discussion, 4586, 4589
Experimental and demonstration farms, 2385-6
Export regulations, 3621
Extra session, 1919, ques. 543
Firearms, licenses, 3410-3
Fish inspection, 1054, 4586
Food and drugs Bill, 956-69, 1257, 1260-2
Franchise Bill, 759
Advance and proxy voting, 1162
Aliens—certificate, 2072-6, 2234-7
Ballot and counterfoil, 1105
By-elections, simultaneous, 1090-1
Amdt. to 3r., 4359
Chief Electoral Officer, 1513, 4136-7
Successor to, 4270
Contributions—expenses—public treasury should pay, 1197
Conveying voters, 1063
Corrupt practices, 1160
Deposit, 1091, 1110
Disqualification of candidate, 1086-8
Election expenses, return, 1155
Election officers, fees, etc., 1111-2
False statement made to affect election, 1067
Nomination of candidates, 1090-2
Proclamation, 1081-2
Provincial lists, 2323, 2352-5, 2419-20
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4365
Nova Scotia lists, 3899-3900
Returning officers, 1515 ,1521-5, 1532-5, 1581
Amdt—public officers, 1521
"Standard time," 1988-9
Franking privilege, 3358
French speeches in House, translation of, 700
Government annuities, 403, 4528

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens—Con.
Grand Trunk Railway, 1251, 1296-1303, 1356
Branch lines, 1319-21
Loans—amdt., 1504, 1537
London—Trafalgar Square office, 1251
Ratification of agreement, 1321-4
Stocks, value of, 1562-3, 1567
Halifax, Militia Dept. property, 3724
Hartney, Mr. E. P., 4566
House of Commons
Empire Day adjournment, 2575
Monday for Government business, 1464
Orders of the day—time taken by Minister in reply to question, 3425
Saturday and morning sittings, 2786
Staff, organization and classification of, 1037
Messengers, 3097
Icebreakers — Nova Scotia south shore ports, 1607, 2124
Income tax, 3251
Charities, 3247-9, 3312-3
Deficits and losses, 3241
Dividends, when liable, 3304-6
Part payment with return, 3253
Indemnity of members and salaries of Ministers, 4078
Correction of press report, 4171
Separate bills suggested, 4380, 4454
Inquiry for return, 3226
Inspection and Sale Act Amdt
Nova Scotia fruit growers, 2017, 3109
Jellicoe, Admiral, 386
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4418-23
Doherty, Right Hon. Mr., case of, 4424
League of Nations
Canada's contribution toward expenses, ques. 589, que. 618
Canada's status, 350 353, 366
Labour, 355-6
Peace, maintenance of, 353
Loan Companies Act Amdt, 1778
Lockeport, 3085, 3376, 4218
Lockeport-Froude's Point steamer service, 4514, 4284-5
Lotbiniere and Megantic Railway, 4585
Maple products, 796-7, 1254
Militia, Contingencies, 3714
Mint, the, 616
Naval College graduates, 4562
Naval Service
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4386
Estimates, 4316-20
Newspaper postage, 3761
Nickel coinage, 400
Oil—leases, royalty on, 3809-10
Oleomargarine, ques. 1117, 1787, 1856-74

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens—Con.
Opium and Drug Bill, 1750, 1760
Ottawa city, agreement with, 580, 991-2
Parliament Buildings, 1418-23, 1429-32
Furniture and fittings, 3155
Partisanship, extreme, 493
Peace Treaty
Bulgaria, with, 475, 493, 1058-9
Canada's position, 493
France—protection against Germany, 1059
Ratification, 475
Peat, 3807
Penitentiary Act Amdt., 3409-10
Pensions—widowed mother, 4044-6, 4050
Point of order—matter pending before com., 3652
Prime Minister and portfolio, 4456
Privilege—Press report — indemnity of members, 4171
Public accounts, 1839
Public buildings, none new, 3147
Purchasing Board, 1469-78
Registered postal rate, 3733
Registrar of shipping, 2109
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3203, 4575
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3997, 4155-6, 4160-6
Sick and distressed mariners, 2265-6
Soldier Settlement, 1692
Fishermen and, 1690
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3320
Automobiles, 3599
Boats, canoes, etc., 3589-90
Collection, method of, 3464-6
Containers, 3615
Debate on Bill, arrangements for, 3454-5
Fountain pens, 3577-8
Furniture, 3576
Imposition, mode of, 3340
Jewellery, 3339, 3578-84
Musical instruments, 3596, 3629
Proprietary medicines, 3602
Sporting goods, 3570
Stock transfers, 3626
Sugar embargo, 3226
Supply
Interim vote, 754-6
Terminal elevators, 1878
Trade Commissioners, 1886
War loans
Bonds, amount of, ques. 2008
Validation of over-subscriptions, 4180-1
Victory loans, 2520
Washington, Canadian Minister at
M. in amdt. to Supply, 2442-4, 2453, 3081, 4534-42

Finance. See also Budget; Grand Trunk Railway; Highways; Loans; Taxation; Chartered Banks.
Department, employees, ques. 592
Dominion revenues, ques. 1001
Federal emergency fund, ques. 1199; ques. 2182
International Financial Conference, 1465
Obligations and revenues, ques. 998
Tax-free bonds, 192

Firearms. See Customs Act; Criminal Code

Fiscal Policy of Government. See also Address; Budget
Inquiry, 583

Fiset, Dr. Michel, ques. 317, 2015, 4530

Fish Inspection Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 855, 1052; 1r., 1054; 2r., 1175; Com., 4585; 3r., 4586

Fish Meat used as food for hogs, 3164

Fisheries
Biological Board, ques. 2572
British Columbia fish, quantity, ques. 505
Development. Res. (Mr. Duff) in favour of, 839
Dogfish, 848
Estimates, 3520
Fishermen, education of, 846
Grenfell, Dr., and, 2266
Hatcheries
Charlottetown, ques. 313
Salmon, 848
Skeena river, ques. 412
International Commission, ques. 311
Japanese and, 844
Lobster hatchery employees, ques. 4096
Lobsters, illegal fishing, ques. 410
Officers,
Isle Madame, ques. 3294, 3520
Overseers and guardians, 3522
Pacific Coast, 3521-2
Patrol, 3521, 3523-4
Returned soldiers, and, 531, 885
Peck, Mr., M. Res. 3933. See also Soldier Settlement
Treaty with United States 1290, ques. 1002, 1290, 3161
Vessels. See that title

Flax. See also debates on Scientific Research
Bounty, 1886
Grants, ques. 806
Industry, res. (Mr. Glass), 675
Seed. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Flour. See also Wheat
Canadian, shipments of, ques. 1788
Mills, small, ques. 799

Flynn, Capt. Percy, ques. 2415

Fontaine, Mr. Joseph E. (Hull)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 104. Opposition leader and the War—public debt and expenditure, 104; Board of Commerce—Franchise Act—capital and labour, French Canadians, 105, proposed general election, 106
Budget, 2715. Union Government and tariff revision, 2715; war profits—unwarranted expenditures and inadvisable economies, 2716; downward revision of the tariff, 2717
French speeches in House, translation of, 701
Income tax, 3251
Purchasing Board, 1484
Special War Revenue Act Amendment Bill, 3468

Food
Gambling in, 4133
Hoarding of, ques. 807
Inspection. See Food and Drugs Bill
Production, compared with United States, 679
Shortage, 385, 1845
World situation, 675

Food and Drugs Bill. 1r., 582; 2r., 955, Com., 955, 1256; 3r., 1465
Amdt. (Mr. Pedlow) to refer back, 1465, neg. 1466
Access, refusal of, 977
Adulterations
Drugs, 957-8
Food, 961
Analyses, 963-4
Chief analyst, 967
Compounds to be marked as such, 960
Inspector, 957
Materials usable for adulteration, 977
Misbranding, 958, 1256
Proceedings—evidence, 962
Expenses, counsel fees, 978
Knowledge, 973
No certiorari, 975
Other remedies, 979
Prosecutions, 1263
Regulations, 958, 967-9
Sales, penalties, 971
Samples and bulk, 961
Seizure, 967
Standard containers, 1258
Voluntary payments, 976

Ford Car, 119, 2815, 2823

Foreign Credits
Belgium, proposed, 582
Serbia, reported, 567

Foreign Relations. See League of Nations; Washington, Canadian Minister at Foreign Trade, 2477, 2481. See also Budget

Forestry, 3285

Forests, Waterways and Water Powers. See also Dominion Lands and Parks
Com. appointed, 307

Fortier, Mr. H. A. (Labelle)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 132. Canada under federal compact, 132; Imperialism, 133; Canada's relations with the Empire—divorce—Labour's legitimate claims, 134; proposed general election, 135
Budget, 2889. Congratulations to Minister of Finance—production and thrift—government extravagance—militarism, 2889; soldiers turning to occupations of peace—railway nationalization, 2890; Liberal fiscal policy—general election advocates, 2891
Exchequer Court Act Amdt. 2201-3
Hull and Montreal highway, 1113
Judges' salaries, 4339-40
Printing Bureau linotypes, ques. 670

Fort William elevator, 565, ques. 1358. See also Elevators

Forward Movement of Christian churches, 98

Foster, Mr. A. DeWitt, ques., 1201

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George (Minister of Trade and Commerce and Acting Prime Minister February 26-May 12).
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 35. Congratulations to mover and seconder, 35; Opposition leader's criticism, 36; Franchise Bill—Grand Trunk agreement, 37; preparedness of sessional programme—government by Order in Council—absence of Prime Minister, 38; Peace negotiations and treaty, Canadian Ministers needed in Europe, 39; Ministers of the Crown in the Senate—commissions, 40; cabinet responsibility, 41; proposed general election—the Government's work and record—prosecution of the war, 42; Civil Service reform—Health department—scientific research, 43; women's franchise — prohibition — shipbuilding—cost of living, 44; production—War Purchasing Commission, 45; finance—returned soldiers, 46
Amnesty, general, to political prisoners, 1790
Archambault, Mr., questions by, 709
Armenians, 855
Auditor General's report, 2179, 4276
Bill (Mr. Stevens) proposed introduction, 1216
Board of Commerce
Canners, 1046
Correspondence, 3426
Motion for papers, 2013, 3863
O'Connor, Mr., reported resignation of, 1685
Porter, Mr. Arthur, dismissal of, 568
Robson, Judge, resignation of, 114, 1900
Budget, date of, 1465, 2126, 2247, 2318
Budget, 2510. Debt, gross and net, 2511; economy of administration, 2512; Civil Service policy, 2513; no more loans at present, 2513; taxation to meet present needs, methods of taxation, 2514; forethought and afterthought, 2515; Bank of Montreal trading account, 2516; free trade or protection—Liberal party's policy, 2517
Business of the House
Easter adjournment, 752
Empire Day adjournment, 2575
Late sittings, 1894
Legislation foreshadowed, 1789
Monday for Government business, 1464, 1573
Notices of motion standing, 1628, 2013
Order of, 2314
Wednesday evening sittings, 1044-5
Cabinet changes, 386, 447
Canada Grain Act, administration of, 1877, 3822-4
Canada Steamships Limited and Mr. D. B. Hanna, 1789
Canada Year Book, 1879
Canada's national status, 486
Canada's representative at Washington, 449, 1742, 2177, 2460
Canadian Wheat Board, 4323, 4098, 4110-1, 4341-58
Losses, possible, 4348, 4516
Magill, Dr., statement by, 4124-5, 4342-7
Telegram to Mr. Sifton, 4348
Canadians in Imperial Service, 857
Civil Service classification, 675
Correspondence, motion for, 592
Copyright Bill, 752
Daylight saving, 1574

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George—Con.
East Elgin vacancy, 11, 1085
Economic conditions of the world—Peace Conference declaration, 1888
Estimates and their discussion, 4588-9
When to be brought down, 567
Explosive works at Beloeil, 2248
Extension of trade, 1880-6
Federal Bureau of Education, 1398
Flax bounty, 1886
Franchise Bill
Disqualification of candidates, 1089
Returning officers, 1531
Statement as to possible additions, 582
French speeches in House, translation of, 700
French treaty, 3425-26, 4274
Gisborne, Mr. F. H., K.C., Parliamentary Counsel, 4587
Grain Exchange, closing of, reimbursement of losses, 4516
Grand Trunk Railway, 11
Correspondence, 1228
Stock, 754
Hearst Publications, 1290
House of Commons.
Acoustic properties of, 1418, 2126
Debates, Translation of French speeches, 4588, 700
Staff, 1037
Hudson Bay Railway, 2014
Hurons of Lorette, 2014
Imperial Conference, 114
Industrial legislation, 1790
Inquiry for returns, 857
International Financial Conference, 1465
Ireland, condition of, 856
Japanese occupation of Vladivostock, 1945
Jellicoe, Admiral, visit of, 11
Joint distribution office, 1037
League of Nations, 567
Armenian mandate, 1465
French occupation of German territory, 1046
Marshall, the late David, M.P., 10
Mennonites, 2127
Ministers and Grand Trunk stock, 590
Ministers' knowledge of their business, 527
Naval service, ministerial statement, 708
Newfoundland, 4276-81
Oral answers to questions, 1623
Parliament buildings, 2,. 1418-20, 1432-3
Parliamentary librarian, 114
Partisanship, 485, 488
Peace, 230
Peace Treaty, 485
Pensions and Re-establishment Com.
Resignation of:

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George—Con.
Pensions and Re-establishment Com.—Con.
Lang, Mr., 1085
Peck, Mr., 2081-2
Pensions, soldiers, taxation of, 1895
Prime Minister
Illness and absence of, 9, 114
Return of, 2126
Printing, Joint Committee on, 4321
Public accounts, 1838
Purchasing Board, 1467-70, 1474-9
Questions not answered, 949
Railways, freight to Canada from United States prepaid, 1893
Returned soldiers, 520. See also, under this title, Pensions; Soldiers
Cash gratuities to, 1082-84
Life insurance, 522
Returns, delayed, 459
Russia, 4322
Saar Valley Commission, 344
St. Julien, battle of, 1357
St. Lawrence route, insurance, 4515
San Remo Conference, 1465
Scientific Research, 617, 2176
Serbia, reported credit to, 567
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Dept., 520
Soldier Settlement, 521
Statistical Department, 1880, 3296
Steamship companies, supervision of, 2013
Steamship Services
Cape Breton; Lockeport-Froude's Point; Magdalen Islands; Newfoundland; New Zealand; St. Lawrence, etc.; St. John-Digby; South Africa, etc., 4276-87
Economies in, 4287, 4515
Steel and Shipping merger, 1895, 1955-6
Sugar
Embargo, 3226
Prices, 1896
Supply, Com., of, arrangements for, 1597
Interim vote, 755
Terminal elevators, 1878
Trade Commissioners, 1885-6
Universal military training, 948
Victory loan transactions, 2520
War indemnity, Canada's share, 1084
Washington, Canadian Minister at. See under this title Canada's representative at Washington
Water carriage of goods, 1216
West Indies, 1884, 2892-3, 3860

Foster, Mr. Thomas (East York)
Bell Telephone rates appeal, ques. 2009
"Excise and sales" tax, 3451
Returned soldier (amdt. Mr. Lemieux) 3452, 3455, 3458-9

Foster, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Exhibition buildings and militia, ques. 2009
Franchise Bill, 763
Grand Trunk Railway
Head office, ques. 2008
Technical education, ques. 2519
Toronto
Grain elevators, ques. 1897
Harbour improvements, ques. 2181

Fournier, Mr. C. A. (Bellechasse)
Board of Commerce, 3227
Canadian National Railways, official cars, ques. 409
Cattle embargo, ques. 340
Electric power, export, ques. 1624
Food and Drugs Bill, 958, 977, 1260
Hides, exports to United States, ques. 313; ques. 343
Intercolonial Railway, pensions, ques. 313
St. Valier wharf, ques. 1231

France
Advances to, ques. 318
Occupation of German territory by, 1046

Franchise, 25, 28, 36, 37, 53, 114, 151, 155, 283
By-election lists, ques., 310. See also Dominion Franchise Bill

Franco-Canadian Customs Tariff Convention, ques. 3684

Franking Privilege. See Post Office Act Amdt. Bill

Fraser, Mr. Evan E. (Welland)
Judges' salaries, 4339

Fraudulent Naturalization Papers, ques. 4096

Freight Cars. See also Railways
Grain and grain products in, ques. 1035

Freight Rates. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Railways; Railway Act Amdt.

French Language. See Language Questions

French Treaty, ques. 1788; 3425-6, 3684, 4274, ques. 4323

Fripp, Mr. A. E. (Ottawa)
Biggar, Mr. O. M., K.C., 4265-6
Canada Highways Act, ques. 802, ques. 1119
Choquette, Ex-Senator P. A., ques. 2572
Civil Service
Classification, M. for papers, 544, 556
Commission, staff, ques. 2414
Printing Bureau, ques. 320, 3742
Taxation of incomes, 579-80
Ottawa city, agreement with, 579

Fruit Packages. See Inspection and Sale

Fuel. See also Coal
Price, 321

Fulton, Mr. Frederick J. (Cariboo)
British Columbia Indians, 953
Soldier Settlement, 1695
Cattle branding, 1699

Gambling. See Criminal Code

Game. See National Parks; Northwest Game Act

Gargoyles, 1433, 1493

Gas, taxation of, 3106

Gas and Electricity inspection, 1887

Gascons Wharf, ques. 411

Gaspesia, resources, attractions and need of railway extensions, 4213-7

Gauthier, Mr. L. J. (St. Hyacinthe-Rouville)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 61. Quebec badly treated, waiting for its hour—war and the constitution, 61; Liberals and Union Government policies, 62; public unrest—Prime Minister's health, 63; proposed election, 64; party system and government, 65
Budget, 2605. Tactics of United Farmers, 2605; Liberals and tariff—Wheat Board, 2606; the Government and its record—Canada's production, 2607; currency, credit and gold reserve—profiteers and prices, 2610
Privilege—Complaint of Treatment by civil servant, 4097

Gauvreau, Mr. Charles A. (Témiscouata)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 209. French language—Hon. Mr. Chapais and conscription—Hon. Mr. Blondin, 209; Mr. DeCelles' retirement, Hon. Mr. Sevigny—Canadian National Railway shops at Rivière du Loup—Quebec biding its time, 210
Arthur Young Co., ques. 1511, ques. 1740
Bank Act Amdt., inquiry, 1573
Business of the House—holiday adjournment moved without notice, unanimous consent denied, 2575
Canadian National Railways
Engine repairs, ques. 3079
Cimon, Mr., collections by, ques. 1461
Civil Service, 670
DeCelles, Mr. A. D., 210, 2968; ques. 3489

Gauvreau, Mr. Charles A.—Con.
Dominion Canners ques. 415
Dupont, Mr. Joseph, ques. 590
Empire day adjournment, 2626
Franchise Bill
Disqualification — charitable support, those receiving, 1813-5
French translation, 779, 1061
Indian agents, 3276
Intercolonial employees, pensions, ques. 589
Isle Verte, 3160
Lennox, Mr. Justice, 1232
Lightkeepers, 2110
Montmagny colonization lots, ques. 1229
Parliamentary librarian, 114
Pension Commission employees, ques. 2895
Public Works employees, 3142
Questions
Passed as orders for returns, 1743
Portion deleted, 1045
Rivière du Loup workshops, ques. 315, 801
St. Malo shops, ques. 3079, ques. 3618
Saturday and morning sittings, 2626
Sevigny, Hon. Albert, 210
Témiscouata railway, ques. 674

General Election, proposed. See Address

Genoa, International Labour Conference, 3359

Geological Survey, 3801, 4513. See also Mines

Georgian Bay Canal and Shipbuilding, 915

Germany
Reparation by, ques., 1463, 2574
Allies Conference at Ostend, 2476

Germany and Austria
Books, ques. 806
Imports from, ques. 2416; ques. 3359
Trade with, ques. 801

Gervais, Mr. Theodore (Berthier)
Budget, 2556. Popular unrest, 2556; tariff policy and its effects, 2557; agriculture, its opportunities and needs—manufacturers and high tariff, 2558
Butter and oleomargarine, ques. 2720
Canada Highways Act, payments under, ques. 806
Scrap iron and steel, ques. 1739
Sorel shipyard superintendent, ques. 343
Vandal, Mr. Calixte, ques. 1740

Gisborne, Mr. F. H., K.C., 4587. See also Dominion Franchise Bill; Chief Electoral Officer

Glass, Mr. Samuel F. (East Middlesex)
Alien immigrants, 836
Board of Commerce, 1148-9
Export Butter and Cheese, 598-9
Flax industry, 675
Food and Drugs Bill—Toasted corn flakes, 1261
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 3876-7
Deposit, 1095-6
Election accounts, 1112
Nomination, place of, 1092
Proclamation, language of publication, 2275-6
Returning officers, 1595
Oleomargarine, 1868
Opium and Drug Bill, 1639
Post Office Department, 3743
Prices, 1148-9
Soldier Settlement, 2133-5
Special War Revenue
Fountain pens, 3577
Gas and electric light fixtures, 3596

Gold, 3107. (See also Currency; Yukon)
Commissioner, 3108
Shipment to New York, 181
Standard—Dominion notes and, ques. 588

Good Roads, 45. See also Canada Highways Act

Gophers, 3793

Gordon's Reserve school (Indian) 3269, 3278

Gouffre, Riviere Du, ques. 1121

Gould, Mr. Oliver R. (Assiniboia)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 124. Parliament building—Canadian Council of Agriculture platform, 125; Assiniboia election—trade and rates of exchange, 126; tariff and protection—water fronts and mines as taxable resources, 128; conditions in Assiniboia—grasshopper plague, 128; sessional indemnities for unrepresented years, 129
Budget, 2951. Finance Minister's great task—Mr. M. Clark's address—Mr. Meighen on Britain's policy and condition, 2952; exorbitant protection—Dominion Textile Company, 2953; shoes and protective duties; Farmers' platform, 2954; Western Canada Colonization Association—names applied to Progressive group, 2955; Messrs. Stevens, Mowat and Stacey and protective duties, 2956; faith, hope and charity, 2959; farm implement manufacturers, 2960; apple

Gould, Mr. Oliver R.—Con.
Budget—Con.
prices and protective duty, 2961; lumbering industry and housing problem, 2962; members of the House and special interests, 2964; wages in protected manufactures — proposed railway extension to coal area, 2966
Canadian Wheat Board, 4112-4
Civil Service bonus, 1287
Election for Assiniboia, 1
Franchise Bill
Contributions—Assiniboia expenses, 1172-84
Deposit, 1095
Recall, the, 1181, 2027-30, 2037
Returning officers, 1590-3
Grading export butter and cheese, 607
Grasshopper plague, ques. 705
Indemnity of members, 4449
Indians and wild game, 3280
Parliament Buildings, 1424
Portal immigration hall, ques. 674
Recall. See under this title, Franchise
Seed Grain Purchasing Commission, ques. 1117
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4000, 4015-6
Soldier Settlement Act
Cattle branding, 1699
Increase in stock, 1702
Special War Revenue
Airplanes, 3592
Caps, 3566
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 586
Universal military training, 947

Government Annuities, 4528

Government Annuities Act Amdt Bill. Res. 402; 1r., 406; 2r., com., 462; 3r., 463

Government Ownership, 124. See also debates under Canadian National; Grand Trunk
Ships, of, 627, 659. See also under Shipbuilding

Government Printing Bureau. See Printing

Government Steamers. See also Vessels
Civil Service insurance for crews, 1779

Grain and Grain Trade. See also Agriculture; Canada Grain Act; Canadian Wheat Board; Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Seed Grain
Cereal shipments from Canada, ques. 1626
Dominion Seed Grain Purchasing Commission, ques. 1117 Elevators. See also that title
Halifax, ques. 1116
Terminal, Port Arthur and Fort William, 565, ques. 1358
Toronto, ques. 1897

Grain and Grain Trade—Con.
Flour mills, small, ques. 799
Freight cars, ques. 1035
Grain Exchange, closing of, losses, 4516
Participation certificates, ques. 802
Wheat
Importation in 1912, ques. 590
Shipped by farmers to United States, ques. 802
Spirit River shipments, 566
Winnipeg Grain Exchange, 2005

Granby Public Building, 3149

Grand Etang, 2114, 3779-80

Grand Trunk Railway Company..
Administration of, 4173
Entrance to Montreal, ques. 413
Head office, ques. 2008
London. Trafalgar Square office, 1251
Pensions—and Strike of 1910, 1122
Agreements and letter to Mr. Hays. 4508
Amdt (Mr. Mackenzie King) 1536; neg. 1572
Shareholders, list of, 3426-7, 4258
Stocks, ques. 1361-2, ques. 590, 753
Subsidiary companies, ques. 996

Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition, 11
Arbitrators, 1047, 3860
Taft, Mr., ex-President, 3490
Budget, statement by Minister of Finance, 2484
Correspondence, 1228, 1235
Loan, 4579

Grand Trunk Railway Acquisition Bill. 1r., 1113; 2r., 1235; 1291; 1311; Com. 1311, 1315, 1435, 1486, 1536; 3r., 1572

Grasshopper Plague, 128, ques. 705, 2375

Gratuities to Soldiers
Statement by acting Prime Minister, 1082. See also Pensions

Great War Veterans Association, 3669
Soldier Settlement and, 2142

Greece
Advance to, ques. 318
Roumania, and,
Loans, ques. 3488
Purchases by, ques. 2414
Wheat shipments to, ques. 415, ques. 509

Grenfell, Dr., and fishermen, 2266

Grey, Earl, farewell message, 18

Griesbach, Brig.-Gen. William A. (West Edmonton)
Currie, General Sir Arthur, 3653
Enlistments by Provinces, ques. 408
Franchise Bill
Disqualification, charitable aid, those receiving, 1815
Polling divisions, 1516
Returning officers, 1582-4
"Or a returned soldier," 1525
League of Nations, 3976
Militia
Cadet service, 3704
Contingencies, 3716
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3212
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4159
Universal military training, 933

Griffenhagen and Associates, 3623, 4521. See also Civil Service
Papers moved for and laid on table, 3863

Grosse Isle, ques. 1003
Buildings, ques. 344
Quarantine, 3151
Wharves, ques. 343

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh (Minister of Militia and Defence, and acting Solicitor General)
Bankruptcy Bill, 2246, 3255-65, 4263
Battlefields Memorials, 1460
Demobilization, 4549
Franchise Bill, 338-40, 775-87, 1061-82, 3864-3914; 2r., motion for, 710, 741-2, 773-5
Advance and proxy voting, 1162, 1166, 1933-43, 1997-9, 2002, 3864, 3873
List, 3875-7
Nova Scotia list, 3914
Agents and Officers to vote, 1098, 1918-9, 4271.
Aliens—certificate, 1536, 2057-64, 2214-20, 2226-30. See also under this title, Qualifications of Electors.
Armed Strangers, 1108
Assistant Chief Electoral Officer, 1513-5
Ballot
Counterfoil and, 1104-5
Ballots
Counting before opening of poll, 1101
Forgery or destruction of, 1098
To be alike, 1097
Ballot boxes, expenses of returning, 1927-8
Bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, 1156-9
By-elections
Simultaneous 1090-1
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) to 3r., 4359

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Campaign funds, Publicity amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4273-4. See also under this title, Contributions
Canada Temperance Act, 1166, 2052-4, 3864-6
Candidates,
Consent of, 1095
Disqualification, 4271, 2023
Chief Electoral Officer, 1512-3
Biggar, Mr. O. M., K.C., appointment of, 4264-70
Remuneration, 4136-7
Clerk of Crown in Chancery, 1069-73
Compulsory voting, 1062
Contributions, 781-4, 1169-70
Amdt (Mr. McMaster) 1194-5
Conveying voters, 786, 1061-4
Corrupt practices—disqualification, 1160
Counting and reporting vote, 1109
Debate of Bill, arrangements for, 1072, 1837-8, 1944-5 2001-2
Definitions, 775
Deposit, 1092, 1094-6
Return of, 1110
Deputy returning officers, 1074
Lists of, 1097
Disfranchisement, 1160, 1536
Charitable support, those receiving, 1813-20, 1997
Criminals, 1820
Hindus, 1812
Returned soldiers excepted, 1811-2, 1821-3
Disqualification of candidates, 1160, 1085-8
Election clerk, 1073, 1515-6
Election expenses, 1152-5, 1930-3
Accounts, audit of, 1929
Return by agent, 1155-6
Election officers
Disqualified parties, 1075-8
Fees, etc., 3867-8, 4271
Taxation of, 1111-2
Election papers, 1928, 1988, 2023
Election return, 1928
Executory contracts void, 781
False oath, 781
False statement made to affect election, 1065-7
Fees, statement to be placed in box, 1927
Forms, 3868-76
Advance polls, 3873-5
Indians, 2055-7
Interpretation
"Advance poll," 1943
"Candidate," 2943-5, 1985

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Interpretation—Con.
Opposition, attitude of, 725
"During an election," 1986-7
"Election officer," 1987-8
"Election Papers," 1988
"Electors," 1917
"Hours of the day"—"Standard time" 1988-9, 1944
"List of voters," 1989
"Members,", 1989
"Personal expenses," 1991
"Rural polling division," 1992-3
"Urban polling division," 1991
Liquor on polling day, 1108-9
Misfeasance, etc.,—penalty, 1074-5
Names not on list, 1926, 4272
Oaths, 3877-8
Naturalization—amdt (Mr. Euler) to 3r., 4369
Nomination, 1916
Candidates, of, 1090-6
Place of, 1092-3
Postponement of, 1096
Non-electors and non-residents canvassing, 784-6
Notices, 777-8, 1169
Oaths, 779-81, 1166
Elector, by, 1102
Ontario voters' list, 3880-98
Amdt proposed, 3896; agreed to, 3898
Paid propaganda, publicity of, Amdt. (Mr. McMaster) to 3r., 4375
Pass on railway, 1065
Payment of voters' expenses, 1064-5
Peace and good order, 1105-8
Poll books, etc., to returning officer, 1078-80
Polling divisions, 1516-20, 1996
Polling stations, additional, 1826-7
Polls
Hours to be open, 1920-6
When to be held, 1101-2
Population and status of place, 2320
Printer's name, 779
Proclamation
Language of publication, 1837, 1918, 2268-73, 2291-2, 2301
Mailed to postmaster, 1080-2
Notices, etc., 2319
Provincial lists, amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4364. See also under this title Voters' Lists
Qualification of electors, 4271
Aliens—certificate, 2059, 2076, 2085-8, 2092, 2099-2103, 4271
See also under this title Aliens, Naturalization

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Qualification of electors—Con.
Indians, 2055-7
Naturalization, 4271
Recall, the, 2044
Recount by Judge, 1110
"Registrar" and "Enumerator," 1096-7
Registrars, 3899
Duties of, 3909-10
Rural, attendance of, 3908
Registration—interrogatories, 1167
Voters, of, 4272
Removing notices, 779
Repeal, 776
Returning officers
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 1574-6
Further duties of, 1096
Ineligible parties, 1073-4
Poll books, etc., to be sent to, 1828
Public officials, 1791-2, 1809-10
Schedules, 1166-9
Standard Time, 1988
Telegraph, communications by, 1068-9, 1198
Translation into French, 779
Voters' lists, 2319
Addition and elimination of names, 3909-13
Copies, securing of, 2319-20
Married woman's name, 1827-8
New—when unnecessary, 1825-6, 1997, 4272
Possible delay in printing, 3902
Preparation of, 3878-99, 4271
Provincial, 2417-23, 2430-4, 2438-41
Amdt. (Mr. Ross) 2324, 2329-30, 2333-4, 2345-66
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4364
Voting
Language of voter, 1997
Manner of, 1103-5
Notwithstanding disqualification, 1825
On certificate, 1098-1101
Women voters, Quebec, in, 2419
Writ of election, 1166
Writ, nomination, election—delay, 1092
Militia
Active militia—allowances, 3654-74
Air Service, 4553
Annual drill, 3676-81
Cadet service, 3702-4, 3714
Civil pensions, 4553-5
Contingencies, 3714-6
Customs dues, 3716
Demobilization, 4549
Dominion arsenals, 3717-25
Engineer services and works, 3723-5

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Militia—Con.
Estimates, 4548-55
Grants to associations, 3725-6
Military properties and maintenance, 3726-7
Dorval, 3731
Toronto, 3729-31
Ministerial statement and summary, 3636-45. Estimates compared by branches with former years, 3636; increase due to higher prices, 3638; permanent force and slowness of recruiting, 3639; returned officers, 3641; volunteer militia, 3642; barracks, rifle ranges, 3643; unity of directing organization, 3644
Ordnance, arms, lands, etc., 3727-32
Permanent force, 4548
Staff, 4548-55
Warlike Stores, 4549
Militia Pension Act, 4020-1
Quebec's ancient fortifications, 424
Returned Soldiers' buttons, unauthorized wearing of, 4020

Guysborough Harbour, 2124

Habeas Corpus
Labrie case, 3227, 3295, 3558, 3840
M. for papers, 2014

Halbert, Mr. Robert H. (North Ontario)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 282. Parliament Building—Farmers' movement not a class movement, 282; popular unrest and its cure, 283; proposed general election—Franchise Act, 283; A United Canada, 284
Budget, 2941. Reply to Mr. Cockshutt, 2941; inheritance and income taxes, 2942; farmers' deputation on conscription—a former Conservative — the farmers and public affairs, 2943; public problems the concern of the ordinary citizen—economic as well as political democracy, 2944; public and press, 2945; profits system should function naturally—food production hampered—decrease of farm population, 2945; drawbacks to manufacturers—tariff tax on the coffin, 2946
Election for North Ontario, 1
Foster, Mr. A. DeWitt, ques. 1201
Franchise Bill
Contributions, 1191
Oath by elector, 1102
Recall, the, 2025
Grading export butter and cheese, 606
Indemnity of members, 4083
Oleomargarine, 1871-2
Soldier Land Settlement, 2147
Halifax
Grain elevator, ques. 1116
Marine agency—telephone, 2110
Halifax and Southwestern Railway, 3085
Halladay, Mr. H. H. (Bow River)
Alien immigrants, 820
Franchise Bill
Polling division, 1518-9
Income tax, charities, 3314
New party movement, 126
Soldier Settlement, 1701
Hanna, Mr. D. B., 622, 642, 1679, 4183. See also Canadian National Railway
Canada Steamships Company, and, 1742, 1789
Suit against Mr. Cahill, M.P., 2379
Hanna, town, 2379
Hansard. See House of Commons, Debates
Harbours. See their titles
Harold, Mr. John (Brant)
Food and Drugs Bill, 971
Indians and Franchise, 2055-7, 4035
Purchasing Board, 1485
Special War Revenue
Binder twine, 3610, 3623
Furs, 3569, 3791-2
Jewellery, 3579-80, 3584
Underwear, 3567

Harris, Mr. Lloyd, 1948

Harrison, Mr. Charles R. (Nipissing)
Budget, 3041. Iron and steel industry, bounties — French River waterway, 3041; Northern Ontario—Timiskaming by-election — Labour and One Big Union—class warfare denounced, 3043; Mr. G. B. Nicholson and organized labour, 3043
Eight-hour day, 382
Franchise Bill
Interpretation, 1991
Polls, hours to be open, 1921
Grand Trunk strike of 1910, and pensions, 1129
North Bay shore protection, 3160

Hartney, Mr. E. P., 4566

Hay, Mr. Thomas (Selkirk)
Campaign funds, 1222
Catalogues, postal rate on, 3744
Civil Service retirement, 3837
Franchise—voters' lists, 2441
House of Commons staff, 4566
Indemnity from Germany, ques. 1463

Health. See also Food and Drugs Bill; Honey adulteration; Opium and Drug Bill
Department, 43, 242, 263, 3539

Hearst Publications, 142, ques. 993, 1290

Hearst, Sir William, 3986

Hebertville-St. Joseph D'Alma mail, ques. 1000

Henders, Mr. Richard C. (Macdonald)
Alien immigrants, 835
Budget, 3015. Congratulation to former and present Ministers of Finance — direct taxation approved, 3016; income tax—removal of customs super-tax-postponement of tariff inquiry, 3017; personal position on the tariff, and on proposed taxes, 3019; party records on tariff compared, 3020
Canadian Wheat Board, 4351
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3408
Franchise Bill
Polls, hours to be open, 1923
Voters' lists, 2438
Opium and Drug Bill, 1645
Rural mail, 4529
Special War Revenue
Caps, 3566

Henderson, Mrs. Rose, 2807, 2898, 3039

Hennick, Mr. Daniel D., patents of, ques. 1510

Hewitt, the late Dr. Gordon, 2375-6, 2382, 2402

Hickey's Wharf, ques. 706

Hides, exports to United States, ques. 313, ques. 343

High Cost of Living, 68, 72, 78. See also Address; Board of Commerce; Budget; Popular unrest; Prices of necessaries, (Mr. Burnham) 321

Highways. See Canada Highways

Hindus, soldiers. See Dominion Franchise

Hinton, Mr. W. P., 1311

Hocken, Mr. H. C. (Toronto West)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 284. Controversy between Mr. Rowell and Mr. Murphy, 284; French language in schools, position of Orange order, 285; opinion of Senator Belcourt, 286; French Canadian aims and ambitions, 287; clerical influence — Senator David's book, 288; Quebec's local autonomy, 289; French Canadians

Hocken, Mr. H. C.—Con.
Address—Con.
and the war—Orange order's war record, 290; Orangemen and political party; Orangeism a bulwark of the constitution, 291; Orange Sentinel, 292
Alien immigrants, and Canadian citizenship, 821
Budget, 2659. Congratulations to Minister of Finance, 2660; new taxes and the masses, 2660; personal views on tariff changed by conditions — protective tariff necessary, 2661; development of rsources—economy through reducing number of civil servants, 2662; promoting efficiency in Civil Service, 2663;
Canadian Wheat Board, 4113
Civil Service
Commission, employees, ques. 1121
Customs, employees, 317
House of Commons, employees, 1043
Inside, ques. 510
Dager, Herman, J., ques. 2182
Divorce Bills, remission of charges, 4321
Electoral atlas, ques. 317
Empire day adjournment, 2575
Franchise Bill
Polls, hours to be open, 1921-2, 1925
Proclamation, language of publication, 2296-9, 2301-2
Recall, the, 2036-8, 2042-3
Judges' salaries, 4338
Personal position as member, 2043
War profits in Britain, 2631-2

Hogs, raising of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Homesteading. See Dominion Lands Act

Honey Adulteration Bill. 1r., 582; 2r., com., 3r., 798; Senate amdts., 2314, 2412

Horseracing,
Dr. Rutherford's report, 540
Race tracks and betting, 3415, 3427

Horses
Carload rates on, ques. 2010
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3204

Hospitals
Alcohol tax and, 3495
Ste. Anne de Bellevue, ques. 1115
Ships. See Canada Shipping Act (Sick and Distressed Mariners)

Houle, Mr. Joseph, ques. 2313

House of Commons. See also Deputy Speaker; Speaker
Adjournment, decorum at, 1838

House of Commons—Con.
Adjournment, to discuss matter of public importance. See the several subjects
Adjournments
Ascension Day, 2311
Easter, 752
Empire day, 2574-5, 2625-6
King's birthday, 3080
Answers to questions
Complaint (Mr. Sinclair) 1649
Audibility of debates, 345, 388, 394, 405, 461, 2126, 2317, 3521, 4055, 4419
Statements by Mr. Stevens and others, 1416, 4055
Suggested rearrangement of seats, 394, 1417
Business of, 3216
Complaint of delay, 2778, 3506, 3622, 4102, 4274, 4314, 4547, 4586
Legislation pending, 1789, 2723, 2779
Monday — Government business, 1464, 1573
Order of, 3106
Private Bills, special facilities for, 3957
By-elections, 148
Assiniboia, 1, 56, 126, 137, 168, 1172, 1174-84, 3473
Carleton and Victoria, 1223
Kamouraska, 948-9
Ontario North, 1
St. James, 707, 787
Victoria city, 1
Calendar of the House, ques. 2005
Chamber,
Acoustic properties of, 2317-8. See also under this title, Audibility
Central floor, ques. 2894
Committees, standing, 9, 304. For proceedings and reports, see titles of the several Committees
Debates, official report of Documents not read, insertion of. See Deputy Speaker; Speaker
French reporters, 1425
French speeches, translation of, 552, 697, 4587
Decorum
Conversation, 2317-8
Distribution office, 1037
Divisions
Address—amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) for general election, 303
Appeal from ruling of the Chair, 3664
Budget—amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 3077
Dominion Franchise Bill
By-elections, amdt. (Mr. Fielding) to 3r., 4360
Contributions, publication of, amdt. (Mr. Maharg) to 3r., 4373

House of Commons—Con.
Divisions—Con.
Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Naturalization—amdt. (Mr. Euler) to 3r., 4372
Paid propaganda—amdt. (Mr. McMaster) to 3r., 4378
Provincial lists, amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to 3r., 4366
Food and Drugs Bill—amdt. (Mr. Pedlow) to 3r., 1466
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition—strike of 1910;
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) 1572
Appeal from ruling of Chairman, 1327
Indian Act, amdt., six-months' hoist, 4179
Washington, Canadian minister at, 2475
Estimates, method of voting, 30, 108, 567, 2779, 3769, 4586, 4589
Indemnity of Members, 3228, 3853-4
See also Salaries Act and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill
Alleged round robin, 2967
Correction (Mr. Fielding) of press report, 4171-2
Debate on motion for supply, 4069-95
Illness, 4458
Press, attitude of, 4441
Provinces and Dominion compared—statistical table, 4440
Taxation of, 3242
Internal Economy Commission, 9
Lobbies, admission of strangers to, 1629
Members,
Attendance of, 135, 964, 1838, 2782, 2968, 4457. See also, under this title, Indemnity
New
Election and introduction
Gould, Mr., 1
Halbert, Mr., 1
McDonald, Mr., 1684, 1787
Rinfret, Mr., 1357
Stein, Mr., 949
Tolmie Hon. Mr., 47
Threatened, 1743, 1841
Parliamentary Restaurant. See that title
Post Office
Use of box by Mr. K. H. Palmer, ques. 1001
Press Gallery. See that title
Private members' business, state of, 564
Privilege
Cronyn, Mr., resignation of Mr. Peck from Pensions and Re-establishment Com., 2081

House of Commons—Con.
Privilege—Con.
Edwards, Mr., report in Ottawa Journal and Montreal Gazette, 4503
Fielding, Mr., press report, 4171
Gauthier, Mr.—complaint of treatment by civil servant, 4097
Lavigueur, Mr.—Judge Lennox on non-English speaking witness, 1231
Kay, Mr., reference to by Ottawa Citizen as member for "Mississippi," 2016
Mackie, Mr. H. A., comment on absence from House, 2968-9
Questions, inquiry as to, 949, 2126
Questions passed as orders for returns, status of, 1743
Quorum, attendance of members, 964
Report not printed as ordered, 2016
Returns, asked for, 459, 618, 857, 4258
Senate and,
Joint Committee on unification of certain branches, 402
Joint distribution office, 1536
Sittings, duration of, 1838, 1893, 4432
Morning and Saturday, 2723, 2778, 3684
Two o'clock, 3080
Speaker's Chair, offer of from British Parliament, 3224
Staff
Bonus, 3228
Committees, 1042, 4547
Journals, 1038
Law Branch, 1038
Members' stenographers, ques. 2311
Organization and classification of, ques. 590, 753, 858, 919, 949, 1037, 3092, 4172, 4414, 4459, 4504, 4563
Parliamentary Counsel, 339
Sergeant-at-Arms Department, 3094
Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms, 9
Translators, 552, 2093
Supply, Com. of—Friday rule—statement of Minister permitted by consent, 2366
Unauthorized distribution of documents in house, 1743, 1841
Vacancies, 160
Elgin, East, 1, 11, 1085
Kamouraska, 1
St. James, 1

House of Commons Act Amdt.. See Salaries Act

Housing, 3543
Adams, Mr., 3551-2
Demobilization and, 3543
Dominion—provinces agreement, 3548
Farmers and, 3546
Houses built, 3545-7
Programme, ques. 707

Hudson Bay Railway, ques. 806, 867, 2752, 4231, 4243
Manitoba land, ques. 1897
Res. (Mr. Campbell) 2014

Hughes, Lt.-Gen. Sir Sam (Victoria, Ont.)
Baker, late Lieut. Col., memorial to, 2776, 3557
Bolshevism, 3649
Canadian Wheat Board, 4123
Chauveau, Col., and Pinze, Col., 3666
Civil Service
Holidays, 4262
Retirement of members, 4066-9
Currie, Col. John A., M.P., 3655
Currie, General Sir Arthur, 3648, 3655
Dorval military property, 3731
Franchise Bill
Provincial lists, 3897
Registrars and enumerators, 3907
Fuel Supply, 3181
Special powers for Railway Commission, 4326-30
Indemnity of members, 4079
Militarism, 3649
Military training, 3704, 3709
Militia
Active militia—allowances, 3658, 3674
Annual drill, 3678
Barracks, 3648
Cadet service, 3704, 3709
Ministerial statement of Mr. Guthrie, 3648
Officers reverting to rank, 3681
Rifle ranges, 3649-54
Toronto property, 3729-31
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 4021
Speer, Rev. Dr., statement by, 3491

Hull and Montreal Highway, 1113

Hungary, 1059-60, 3983-4

Hunt, Mr. A. B. (Compton)
Military districts in Quebec, ques. 1035

Huron. See Indians

Hydro-Electric and Ontario Radial Railways, 3113-4, 4172

Ice-Breakers, 1598-1612, 2103-7
"J. D. Hazen," 1599, 1602
"Montcalm," 1606-7. 2112
St. Lawrence, ques., 317
New vessel for, 1620-1
Uniforms for men, 1603-4
Fair wage contracts, 1608-9

Ile D'Orleans and St. Lawrence River Navigation, 3295

Ile Verte, 2111, 3160

Immigrants
Landing of at Montreal and Quebec, 3226-8

Immigration
Emigration and, ques. 1119
Imperial ex-Service men, 387
In 1919 and 1920, ques. 3862
Medical inspection, 3555
Ontario and, 1012
United States from, ques. 1463

Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, rejected by Senate, 3426

Immigration and Colonization
Department, 4557
Conner, Mr. James, dismissal of, 415
Estimates, 3555

Imperial Conference, 114

Imperial Ex-Service Men, immigration of, 387

Imperial Munitions Board
Ships, ques. 1002

Imperial Press Conference, ques. 410

Imports. See also Budget; Customs; Trade
Certain countries from, ques. 2182

Income Tax, 2488. See also Budget, Ways and Means, Taxation
Inspector at Kingston, ques. 806, ques. 2181
Returns, errors in, 3302
Forms in French, 1084, 1573
Toronto payments, ques. 592

Income War Tax Act, 1917, Amdt. Bill. See Revenue Bills. For details, See Drayton, Sir Henry

Indemnity of Members. See House of Commons

India, Status of under League of Nations, 361

Indian Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 386; 2r., ref. to Special Com., 704; 795; Report, 3617-8; Com., 4021; 3r., 4137, 4173
Amdt. six-months' hoist (Mr. Mackenzie King) 4179

Indian Affairs, Dept. of, 3273
Com. of Supply, in, 3265

Indians, 3265. See also British Columbia Indians
Enfranchisement, ques. 807. See also Indian Act; Dominion Franchise
Gordon's Reserve, 3628

Indians—Con.
Hurons of Lorette, 1152, 2014
Reserves, ques. 802
School buildings, ques. 2894
St. Regis, ques. 799
Sparrow, Dr. C. J., attendance on, ques. 1897
Tuberculosis, 3276

Industrial and Scientific Research, 1886

Industrial Disputes Investigation Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1357; 2r., 1900; com., 1901, 1971, 2190; 3r., 2248-51

Industrial Legislation, 1790

Industrial Survey of the Dominion, ques. 341

Infectious Diseases. See Canada Shipping Act (Sick and Distressed Mariners)

Inflation, 107. See also Currency Act

Information Service, Department of External Affairs, 4543

Inland and Coastwise Shipping Rates, proposed to be under Railway Commission. See Railway Act Amdt.

Inland Navigation
Canadian Government Merchant Marine and, ques. 2572
Freight boats, ques. 2572

Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. See Revenue Bills

Inside Service. See Civil Service

Inspection and Sale Act Amendment Bill (Fruit Packages). Res. 1573; 1915; 1r., 1916; 2r., 2016; com., 2016; Ref. to Special Com. on Agriculture, 2023; Com., 3109; 3r., 3110

Institute of Agriculture, 2411

Insurance. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; State Insurance for Returned Soldiers; Civil Service
Annuities, and, 403
Fire—mutual companies, taxation, ques. 2012, 2080
St. Lawrence route, 4515

Intercolonial Railway. See Canadian National

Interior Department, 3192

Internal Economy Commission, 9

International Financial Conference, 1465

International Fisheries Commission, ques. 311

International Institute of Agriculture, 2411

International Joint Commission, 3986
St. Lawrence river development, ques. 1120, ques. 1230

International Labour Conference, 798, ques. 803, 1790
Canadian representative at, 3359

International Parliamentary Conference on Commerce, ques. 2721

International Waterways, 3985. See also International Joint Commission

Internment, 4516

Inverness Railway and Coal Company, ques. 319, 2380, 4236-49

Ireland, condition of, 856

Iron and Steel Industry, 21

Irrigation Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 3358; 2r., com., 3694; 3r., 3702

Isle Madame, fishery officers, ques. 3294

Italy, advances to, ques. 318

Jacobs, Mr. Samuel W. (George Etienne Cartier)
Bankruptcy Bill, 920, 3260-5
Board of Commerce
Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4489-99
Robson, Judge, correspondence, 3769
Budget, 3027. Shipbuilding—advances to Roumania and other countries 3027; Mr. M. Clark and Mr. Fielding, references to Jews—advances unaccounted for, 3028; Canadian Northern Railway and Montreal Tunnel Co., 3029; immigration, 3030; excess profits tax, 3031; promises of members of Union Government as to continuance for war only, 3031; beer tax—East Elgin vacancy, 3032; Mr. Rowell's address, 3033
Business profits war tax, 3111-7
Canadian National Pictorial, 4544
Canadian National Railways
Montreal-Ottawa, 4190
Civil Service
Employees on public works, 3134-5
Retirement of members, 4065-6
Criminal Code Amdt. (French version) 3083

Jacobs, Mr. Samuel—Con.
Export regulations, 3622-3
Food and Drugs Bill, 978-9, 1264-5
Franchise Bill, 768
Aliens—certificate, 2069, 2076-8, 2097
Assistant Chief Electoral Officer, 1514
Chief Electoral Officer, 1070, 1512-3
Conveying voters, 1062
Disqualification of candidates, 1087
"Ecclesiastics," 1070, 1075-7
Election officers, parties disqualified, 1075-8
False statement made to affect election, 1065-6
Indians, 2055
Naturalization
Amdt. (Mr. Euler) to 3r., 4370
Proclamation, language of publication, 2306
Returning officers, 1533-4
Telegraph, communications by, 1068-9, 1198
Grand Trunk Railway, 1488-91
Branch lines, 1314
Income tax
Distraint of goods, 3303-4
Not a joke, 3119
Indians, Christian missions amongst, 3268
Internment cases, 4517
Japanese occupation of Vladivostok, 1945
Naturalization, British Government, representations by, 3917
Peace treaty, United States Senate reservations, 1060
Purchasing Board, 1480
Schelking, Baron, ques. 3618
Shipbuilding
Contracts, 908, 919
Returned men employed, 909
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4145-8
Special War Revenue
Beer, 3605
Firearms, 3595
Overcoats, 3586
Stock transfers, 3626
Steel and shipping merger, 1967
Supreme Court Act Amdt., 2318
Typhus epidemic, 4545
Vessel rates—letter from Montreal Corn Exchange, 1727

Japan, 3670-1

Japanese
Canada, in ques. 805
Fisheries, 844
Occupation of Vladivostok, 1945

Jellicoe, Admiral Viscount
Visit of, 11, 92, ques. 310, ques. 314
Papers called for, 321
Report presented, 308, ques. 309, 344, 386
Australia and New Zealand, 1159
India, inquiry, 1290
Printing of, 386
Job Brothers, wharf rent, 2124
Johnson, "Pussyfoot," 786
Johnston, Mr. J. Fred (Last Mountain)
Agricultural problems, 2397
Budget, 2664. Protection does not retain population—no handicap should impede agriculture—appreciation of Minister of Finance, 2664; ex-Minister of Finance and public borrowing—school lands trust fund, 2665—Mr. Elkin and protection, 2665; farmers and payment of taxes, 2666; farmers and American grain markets, 2667; cross-benchers and the Budget, 2668; make the farmers prosperous, 2669
Canadian Northern securities, ques. 2006
Canadian Pacific Railway taxation, ques, 1360
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1940-1
Aliens—certificate, 2099, 2244
Returning Officer, 1583
Gordon's Indian reserve, 3628-71
Immigration and emigration, ques. 1119
Immigration in 1919 and 1920, ques. 3862
Last Mountain river dam, 3788-9
School buildings on Indian reserves, ques. 2894
Soldier Settlement, 2149-50
Special War Revenue Amdt. Bill
Containers, 3633
Wheat meal, 3796
Sugar importations, ques. 2009

Joint Committee on Printing. See Printing

Joint Distribution office, 1536

Joint Industrial Councils, 4512

Judges. See also Admiralty Act Amdt., Exchequer Court Act Amdt.
Salaries of in province of Quebec, ques. 1035, 3227

Judges' Act Amdt. Bill (Salaries). Res., 4323; 4331; 1r., 4340; 2r., 4341; 4417; com., 4418; 3r., 4426

Juvenile Delinquents Act Amdt. Bill. 1r.,2842

Kamloops, public building, 3156

Kamouraska, vacancy and election, 1, 948-9

Kapuskasing-Spirit Lake, 2398-2401

Kay, Mr. W. Fred (Missisquoi)
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3167-70
Honey adulteration, 2315
Missisquoi Bay—not fishing, 3535
Oleomargarine, 1968-71
Privilege—Ottawa Citizen—not member for "Mississippi," 2016
Rent of Daly Building, Ottawa, ques. 1200
Rural mail, 4525

Keefer, Mr. Francis H. (Parliamentary Secretary for External Affairs)
Franchise Bill, advance polls, 3876
National defence, 4302-3
Natural resources development, 1030
Oleomargarine, 1874
Passports, 4544
Shipbuilding, 634, 4142
Stewart, Mr. W. J., 3985
Vessel rates, proposed regulation, 1733
West Indian trade, 635

Kelley, Rev. P. R., 794

Kemp, Hon. Sir Edward (Toronto East)
Canteen profits, 709

Kennedy, Mr. J. Wilfred (Glengarry and Stormont)
Budget, 3067. Strange features of previous speeches—tariff, "moderate protection," 3068; protective tariff directs capital towards manufacturers rather than to-towards farming, 3069; dairying farm surveys, 3070; cheese product and prices—appropriations for the benefit of agriculture, 3071; features of the budget criticised or commended, 3072
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3406-8
Indemnity of members and salaries of ministers, 4447
Oleomargarine, ques. 1627, 1859
Rural mail carriers, 1283
St. Anne bridge, 3776
Kennedy, Mr. William C. (North Essex)
Budget, 2644. Expenditure and public loans, 2644; banks and their profits—Victory bonds, stabilizing, 2645; collection of taxation, American system—unnecessary expenses, Board of Commerce, Wheat Board, 2646; wheat prices, Canada's credit as affected by Govt. dealings, 2647; subsidies—shipbuilding, 2648; tariff, 2649
Experimental farms, 2384-7
Income tax, Toronto payments, ques. 592
Interest to Govt. by chartered banks, ques. 673

Kennedy, Mr. William C.—Con.
Parliament Building, 1426-7
Shipbuilding, 664
Vessel rates, proposed regulation, 1732

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie (Prince, P.E.I.)
See also Leader of the Opposition.
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 23. Mover and seconder—external affairs dwelt upon in Speech from the Throne, 23; Grand Trunk agreement, absence of documents—Opium Convention, food not drugs, 24; Parliamentary government, extension of term of Parliament, 25; Franchise Act, 26; War-time Elections Act, 27; Proposed new Franchise Act—vacancies, 28; Parliament a deliberative assembly—voting of supply, 30; government by Order in Council—Prime Minister's absence, 31; Cabinet changes—commissions and government, 32; cabinet representation and responsibility, 33; need of post-war policy, 34; amdt. in favour of early general election, 35; (neg., 303)
Air Service, 4554-6
Auditor General's report, 458
Bill not distributed—objection to proceeding with, 1057
Board of Commerce
Murdock, Mr., resignation of, 4170-77, 4466, 4460, 4499
O'Connor, Mr., resignation of, 3685
Robson, Judge, resignation of, 4258
British Columbia Indians, 792-3, 950
Budget, inquiry as to, 1465, 2126, 2247
Budget, 2969. Congratulations to Minister of Finance, 2969; no further loans—direct taxes, approved—economy, 2970; Government's promise for period of the war—general election proposed, 2971; war-time spirit and extravagance—advances unaccounted for—contracts without tender, 2972; supervision of Parliament—loans to foreign countries — unnecessary appropriations, 2973; a profiteer's Budget—income tax delinquents—tax on war profits, 2974; war-wealth taxes in Britain, 2975; the community's share in production of wealth—high cost of living, 2977; industry and taxation—taxes on capital, 2979; manufacturers and freedom of production—basic industries, 2980; urban and rural populations, 2981; Liberal platform on agricultural production, 2982; Health Department and tuberculosis, 2983; child life and welfare—National policy,

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Budget—Con.
2984; St. John harbour and its trade, 2985; cargoes in as well as cargoes out—all classes to be considered in arranging taxation, 2987; Britain's industries and tariff policy, 2987; England and Germany—Supreme Council of Peace Conference, declaration, 2988; Mr. Fielding's amdt., 2989; Government's promise of tariff revision, 2990; Liberal tariff platform and Mr. Fielding's amdt., 2991; Liberal party's fiscal policy—British preference, 2993; Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Fielding tariff, 2994; common ground for Liberals, Farmers and Labour—need of unity on the part of those who think alike, 2995; two wings of the Government forces, 2996
Business of the House
Complaint of delay, 2778, 3506, 4102, 4274, 4314, 4547, 4586. See also under this head, Interim Supply Bill
Defective legislation—complaint of, 2779, 3147
Hasty legislation, 2779
Legislation pending, 1789, 2723, 2779
Long sittings, 1893, 4432
Morning and Saturday sittings, 2778, 3684
Wednesday evening sittings, 1044-5
Canada's national status, 464
Constitution, power to amend, 468
Parliament, authority of, 468, 474
Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden, 472
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Business statement, 950
"Canadian Inventor", steamer, 3226, 3359
Canadian National Railways
Grand Trunk loans, 881
Withholding of information, 1656, 1669-70
Canadian Wheat Board, 4102
Cash gratuities to returned soldiers, 1083
Civil Service
Canadian National Railways employees, and, 3140
Classification, 3142-4, 3769, 3985, 4547
Insurance, 1055-6, 1779-80
Retirement of members of, 3836-9, 4063-8, 4461-2
Taxation of salaries, 579-80
Civil Service Bill—Senate amdts., 4059
Coal Operations Director, 3186-91
Jurisdiction, 3691
Orders in Council, ratification of, 3185, 3360-75
Cold storage and fox farming, 2407-9

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Concurrence in Supply, 4586
Contracts signed by Government before submission to House—Ottawa agreement, 1047
Criminal Code Amdt. (French version) 3081
Customs Tariff Act, 3174
Demobilization, 4550-3, 4585
Appropriation for, 1877, 1887
Dominion Franchise Bill
2r., reply to Mr. Guthrie, 723
Advance Polls, 1933-43, 1998-2002, 3874
Agents and officers, 1918
Aliens—certificates, 2075, 2212-7
Ballots
Counting before opening of poll, 1101
Forgery or destruction of, 1098
Bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, 1156-7
By-elections, 1091
Campaign funds, publicity — amdt., 4272-4
Canada Temperance Act, 2054, 3866
Chief Electoral Officer, 4136
Biggar, Mr. O. M., appointment of, 4268
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, 1069-72
Contributions, 783-4
Counting and reporting vote, 1109
Corrupt practices, 1160
Debate on, arrangements for, 1072, 1944, 2002
Deposit, 1092, 1095
Return of, 1110
Disqualification of candidates, 1086-8, 4271
Election expenses, 1929-32, 1155
Accounts, audit of, 1929
Return by agent, 1155
Election officers, 1075
Fees, etc., 1112, 3867
Enumerators. See under this title, Voters' lists.
False statement made to affect election, 1066
Indians, 1535
Inquiry as to possible additions, 582
Interpretation
"Candidate," 1944
"Rural polling division," 1992
Liquor on polling day, 1108-9
Names not on list, 1926-8,
Oaths, 3877-8
Non-contentious clauses, 775
Oath by elector, 1102
Ontario voters' lists, 3880-98

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Dominion Franchise Bill—Con.
Paid publicity—Amdt. (Mr. McMaster) to 3r., 4376
Peace and good order, 1105-7
Polling divisions, returning officer's discretion, 1995-6
Polls
Fourteenth day, 1101
Hours to be open, 1920-2
Preparation of voters' lists, clause not acceptable, 3905-6
Provincial lists, amdt. to 3r., 4361
Recall, the, 2043
Recount by judge, 1110
"Registrar" and "enumerator," 1096-7
Registration—interrogatories, 1167
Telegraph communications by, 1068
Vacancies, 1091
Voters' lists
Addition and elimination of names, 3911-3
Candidates, to, 3908
Preparation of, 3879, 3905-6
Provincial, adoption of, 2355-7, 2365-6, 2421-36
Voting, manner of, 1103
Drill halls, 3147-8
East Elgin vacancy, 11, 1085
Eight-hour day, 373, 451-2
Contractual rights, 373-4
Employment offices, 3087
Minister, powers of, 3091-2
Orders in Council, effect of, 3091
Estimates and their consideration, 30, 567, 859, 918, 2779, 3215-7, 3769, 4586-8
European distress, 4546
Exchequer Court Act, 2201
Export regulations, 3622, 3690
Farm problems—fertilizers, 2405-7
Food and Drugs Bill, 956-61, 971-9, 1257-8
Franchise. See under this title, Dominion Franchise
Citizenship, and, 340
Gisborne, Mr. F. H., Parliamentary Counsel, 4587
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 11, 1113 1291, 1313, 1488, 1509-10
Appeal from Chairman's ruling—difference in question as put, 1327
Arbitrators, 3860
Correspondence, 1228, 1235, 1251-3
Ratification of agreement, 1329
Strike of 1910 and pensions, 1136-7, 1329-56, 1537-51, 1557-61, 4507-12
Amdt. to 3r., 1547
Hewitt, the late Dr. Gordon, 2382

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
House of Commons Staff, 3099
Housing, 3543-8
Expenditure for, 3543-4
Houses constructed—rural and urban areas, 3546
Icebreaker and car ferry, 1601, 1621
Uniforms of men on— contracts, fair wages, 1604-8
Income tax delinquents, 3119
Indemnity of members and salaries of ministers, 4075, 4431
Indian Act Amdt. 4029-39
M. six months' hoist, 4179
Industrial Disputes Investigation, 1900-15, 1971-4, 1977-85, 2190-7, 2248-9
Interim Supply Bill
Opposition's intention as to advances in future, 3215-7
Irrigation, 3700-2
Jellicoe, Admiral Lord, visit of and report, 11, 344
India, 1290
New Zealand and Australia, 1159
Kamouraska, by-elections, 948
Labour Dept. estimates, 3821, 4512. See also under this title, Eight-hour day
Labour, Minister of, 4512
League of Nations, 464
Ames, Sir Herbert, statement by, 3971
Canada's status, 360-7
Labour
Canada's status in relation to, 356
International Labour office, 355-7
Liberal Party's tariff policy, 2537
Little Sands, 4580
Magdalen Islands, 1601
Maple products, 797, 1254
Marshall, the late David, M.P., 10
Militia, 3710
Active militia—allowances, 3657-8
Annual drill, 3674-5
Cadet service, 3702
Contingencies, 3715-6
Dominion arsenals, 3720
Amdt. to reduce vote, 3721-2, neg. 3722-3
Military properties, maintenance, 3726
Ordnance land, 3728
Permanent force
Barracks, 4579
M. to reduce vote, 4548-9
Reply to Ministerial statement by Mr. Guthrie, 3645
Narrows, the, 3159
Naval Service
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4408-9

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Naval Service—Con.
Additional appropriation—Con.
M. to strike out, 4313-6
After-war conditions, 3511
Correspondence and negotiations, 4408, 4503
Dept
Estimates, consideration of—agreement as to debate, 4409
Debate should be deferred until Supplementaries, 3520
Increase of, 3506-8, 3512-3
Halifax and Esquimalt, 4390
Policy of government, 707
Pre-war lines, 3511
Submarines, acceptance of, 3512-3
Opium and Drug Bill, 1640-8
Control—statement of historical development, 559, 1761
Habit forming drugs, use of, 562
Orders in Council
Coal Operations Director, 3185, 3360
Ottawa city, agreement with, 579, 988-92, 1047
Parliament, two sessions in one year, 4457
Parliament buildings, 4
Peace treaty
Bulgaria, with, 464, 1057-60
Hungary and Turkey, 3983-4
Parliament, authority of, 3984
Pensions and Re-establishment, Com. recommendations, special facilities for legislation founded on, 3957
Petroleum and naphtha inspection, 1916
Prime Minister,
Absence of, 138
Health of, denial of statement by Mr. A. Thompson, 80
Return of, 2126, 2454
Prince Edward Island
Car ferry, 2103-4, 1601, 1621
Railway, 891-2
Purchasing Commissioner, 1469-70, 1477, 1483, 4580-1
Resignations of cabinet ministers, 386
Royal Canadian Mounted Police
Barracks, 4572
M. to reduce vote, 4574
Change of name of Force, 398
Expenses, 3203-8
Provincial authorities, and, 3196
Royal military college, 3152-3
St. Julien, battle of, 1357
Scientific Research, 2174
Services during the war—personal statement, 1405
Session of Parliament,
Progress of, 2779

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Shipbuilding
Contracts, 651, 892-4, 906, 909-10
Expenditure, meeting of, 915-7
Programme, 662-9
Soldiers
Cash gratuities, 1083
Great War Veterans' Association charges, 3223.
Settlement, 1684
Speaker's Chair, 3225
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
"Excise and Sales" tax, 3318-23
Licenses, 3607
Stock in trade, 3604
Speer, Rev. Dr., statement by, 3492
Statistics, including census, 1880
Steel and Shipping merger, 1959-60
Supplementary estimates, inquiry as to,
Supply and Budget, 918
Civil Government, 859
Com. of, arrangements for, 1597, 1615
Interim vote, 754-5
Technical education, 1762
Timiskaming election, 1995
Trade Commissions, 1885-6
War memorial, 3228
Washington, Canadian representative at, 448, 2178, 2454-63, 4540-3
Amdt. to reduce vote, 4540

King's Bench, Court of, jurisdiction, 3295-6

Kingsmill, Admiral Sir Charles, 707

Kingston
By-election, 459
Harbour improvements, 458
Income tax inspector, ques. 2181

Kingsville public building, 3153

Kinmel Camp, 709

Knox, Mr. Andrew (Prince Albert)
Budget, 3051. Increase revenues by lowering the tariff—farmers and packers, 3051; critics of Progressive party—attacks on Mr. Crerar—Canada should have greater population—immigration policy, 3053
Canadian National Railways, western extensions, 3388
Road and structural material, 3808
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3201
Stock-raising—sunflower ensilage, 2388

Kouchibouguac, 4578

Labour. See also International Labour Conference; League of Nations; Eight-hour day; Grand Trunk; Industrial Disputes; Bulgarian Treaty Labour—Con.

Capital and, 16, 22
Employment offices, 4512-3
International Labour Conference, 3359
Joint industrial councils, 4512
National industrial conference, 4512
Washington Conference, 371

Labrie Brothers. See Habeas Corpus

Lachine Canal, work on, 3423, 3561
Bridge, 3778, 4236

Lafortune, Mr. David A. (Jacques Cartier)
Indemnity of members, 3228
Lachine canal bridge, 3778, 4236
St. Anne bridge, 3775

Lake of the Woods, 3985

Lalor, Mr. Francis R. (Haldimand)
Luxury taxes in United States, 2528-9
Oleomargarine, 1782-4
Special War Revenue
Automobiles, 3598
Bank overdrafts, 3798-3800
Jewellery, 3583
Sales tax, 3609-17
Silk goods, 3573

Lanctôt, Mr. Roch (Laprairie and Napierville)
Budget, 2766. Balance sheet, items entered as assets, 2766; Canadian National Railways, deficit — prosperity and prices, 2767; expenditure criticised, 2768; war and conscription, 2769; burden of taxation—low revenue tariff favoured, 2770; war profiteers, 2771
Indemnity of members and salaries of ministers, 4444, 4450-5
Amdt. in Com. negatived, 4457-8
Judges' salaries, 4417-25, 4333
2r. of Bill objected to, 4341
Militia, 3650
Potato bag, 4562

Land Surveyors, ques. 1115, ques. 2006

Land Tax. See Taxation

Lands. See Dominion Lands; Indians
Canadian Northern, in Quebec, ques. 1626, ques. 2008
West, in, ques. 1118

Langton, Brig.-Gen. J. G., ques. 541, ques. 811

Language Questions, 87, 110, 209. See also Dominion Franchise; Education, Criminal Code Amdt. (French Version)

Language Questions—Con.
Auditor General's report, ques. 1627
Bilingual stamps, ques. 314
Blue books, ques, 992, ques. 1004
Calendar, House of Commons, ques. 2005
Customs forms, 3859
Debates reporters, 1425
Editorial Committee, 4322. See also Printing
Election proclamation, 1828. See also this title under Dominion Franchise
Farmers' Account Book, ques. 315
House of Commons, in, 697, 1039, 4587
Income tax forms, 1084, 1573
Lennox Mr. Justice and non-English speaking witness, 1231
Pensions report, 2016
Publications in French, ques. 541
Replies in English to letters in French, 1045
Schools, in, 285

Lapointe, Mr. Ernest (Quebec East)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 264. Proposed general election, 264; by-elections, 265; Union Government and public opinion, 266; mandate of Parliament, 268; cleavage between progress and reaction, 269; illness of Prime Minister, 270; Unionist party differences—Liberal party's attitude, 271; Franchise Act and redistribution, 272; Imperial Conference, 273
Air Service, 4555-6
British Columbia Indians, 793-5
Budget Speech, inquiry for copies of, 2626
Business Profits war tax, 3113
Public utilities, 3229-34
Civil Service classification, 555-6
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3370
Easter adjournment, 752
Electricity, competition and taxation, 3113-7
European distress, 4546
Exchequer Court, 2201-3
Federal Bureau of Education, 1383, 1401
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1163
Aliens—certificate, 2062-3, 2100-1, 2219-21
Assistant Chief Electoral officer, 1513
Canada Temperance Act, 2053-4
Chief Electoral officer, 4266-7
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, 1072-3
Contributions, 782-3
Debate on, arrangements for, 1837
Disqualification
Charitable aid, those receiving, 1813-4
Indians, 2055

Lapointe, Mr. Ernest—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Interpretation—"Standard time," 1989
Polling divisions, 1518-21
Recall, the, 2036
Returning officers — public officials,
Voters' lists, 2418-30
Married Women's names, 1827, 2418-22
Gaspesia—railway extensions—memorial of Quebec Board of Trade, 4216-7
House of Commons
Notices of motion, 1628
Saturday and morning sittings, 2782
Staff, 4414, 4563
French translators, 1043
Journals, 1039
Immigration Act, 3426
Imperial Conference, 114
Indemnity of members and salaries of ministers, 4437
Income tax, 3242
Newspaper report, 4172
Indian Act Amdt. Bill, 4137, 4173-7
Industrial legislation, 1790
Lennox, Mr. Justice, 1232
Militia, 3670
Annual drill, 3677
Moving pictures—Canadian National pictorial, 4544
National Transcontinental Railway, rentals, ques. 1461
Naval Service—additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4317-9
Parliament Building, 1424
Prime Minister's return, 2126
Quebec riots of 1918, 1209
Resignation for Kamouraska, 1
St. James by-election, 787
Soldier settlement, 1685
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill—Quebec Board of trade and, 3457
Vessel rates, proposed regulation of, 1734
Washington, Canadian Minister at, 2449
Winnipeg strikers, ques. 2181

Lapointe, Mr. L. A., M. P., death of, 1

Last Mountain River, Dam, 3788-9

Lavigueur, Mr. Henri E. (Quebec County)
Fiset, Dr., Michel, ques. 317, 4530
Income tax, exemptions on account of children, 3298
Lennox, Mr. Justice, 1231
Militia, 3678
Orleans Island, public works, ques. 810
Parcel post supervisor, 4530
Parliament buildings, 1429
Pilotage, 1839

Lavigueur, Mr. Henri E.—Con.
Quebec riots of 1918, 1212
St. Jean wharf, ques. 317
St. Lawrence navigation, 3295
Ste. Famille wharf, ques. 317, ques. 810
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill — Musical instruments, 3628-9
Telephone contracts, ques. 1627

Leader of the Opposition
Speech on Address commended, 45
War the, and, 222, 1405

League of Nations, 8, 12, 161, 246, 4320.
See also Peace Treaty; Washington.
Ames, Sir Herbert, Financial Director of Secretariat, general statement by, 3961
Armenia, 855, 1465, 3979
Belgium, 3978
Brazil, 3978
Canada and the United States, 500
Canada's contribution to defray expenses, ques. 316, ques. 410, ques. 589, ques. 618, 3981, 4544
Canada's status under, 144, 214, 567. See also Canada's status
Canadian interests and representation, 567, 3982
Commercial treaties, 3973
Council of Nine, 3974
Disarmament, 3976
Eight-hour day, 449
Enforcement of decisions, 3975
German territory, occupation by France, 1046
Great Powers
If they withdrew, 3973
Those not now members, 3983
Greece, 3978
India, 361
Labour—Washington Conference, decisions, 371
Lenroot reservations, 496
Military contribution, 492, 502
Next assembly, 3977
Peace, 938
Persia, 3968, 3975
Public and private sessions, 3973
Russia, Poland, Ukrainia, 3968, 3978
Saar Basin, 3963, 3974
Secret treaties, 3973
Self-determination, 3978
Spain, 3978
Typhus epidemic, 4545
United States
Failure of to join, ques. 1118
Representation of, 3977

Leduc, Mr. J. Alfred (Westmount-St. Henry)
Butter prices, ques. 807
Grand Trunk entrance to Montreal, ques. 413
Hoarding foodstuffs, ques. 807
Lachine canal work, 3423, 3561
St. Pierre river floods, ques. 1115, ques. 4019
Westmount-St. Henri gatekeepers, ques. 998

Leger, Mr. Auguste T. (Kent, N.B.)
C. G. S. "Simcoe," ques. 413
Dredging, New Brunswick, 3781
Franchise Bill
Election expenses, 1932
Peace and good order, 1106
Polls, hours to be open, 1920-1
Proclamation—two languages, 1081, 1828-32, 2270-3
Returning officers, 1575
Voters' lists, provincial, 2332
Grand Trunk Railway, 1500-2
Inquiry for papers, 3769
Lightkeepers' remuneration, 1281, 2110
Milk tests, 2406
Oleomargarine, 1873
St. John armoury, ques. 994
Telegraphs and Telephones, 4576

Legislation. Royal Commission on, ques. 4502

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe (Maisonneuve) (Gaspé)
Administration of Justice
Labrie Brothers, case of, 3227, 3295, 3558-60, 3840
Bankruptcy Bill, 3256-63
Board of Commerce
Chairman, resignation of, 3863
Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4486-96
British mails, 4531
Budget, 2786. The new taxes, 2787; economy needed—naval expenditure rumours, 2788; British safety valves—Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George, 2789; The Onlooker and leading members of the Government, 2790; repressive measures criticized, 2791; Liberal party and tariff, 2792; Mr. M. Clark and the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 2794; party government—national unity, 2795
Buffalo herd, 3283
Canadian National Railways and Gaspesia, 4213-6
Caughnawaga, 3266

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Civil Service
Reorganization, ques. 3861
Griffenhagen and Associates, 3863, 4521-2, 3491
Holidays, 4261
Coal operations director, 3175
Coal Supply—M. to adjourn to discuss, 3686-8
Colonial Investment and Loan, 3859
Criminal Code Amdt. (French version) 3082
Customs
Appointments, etc., 3858-9
Forms, in French, 3859
DeCelles, Mr. 2968
Divorce Bills, charges, 4321, 4413
Dominion arsenals, 3717-20
Dorval military property, 3731
Dry docks, 4567-74
Editorial Board, 4559. See also, under this title Printing
European distress, 4546
Fish inspection, 4586
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2223-4
Proclamation, language of publication, 1832, 2299-2302
Returning officers—public officials, 1799-1801
French treaty, 3425, ques. 3684, 4274, ques. 4323
Goods arrived—date of delivery, 4505
Fuel Supply—special powers for Railway Commission, 4325-30. See also under this title, Coal
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition—arbitration, ex-President Taft, 3490
Habeas Corpus. See, under this title, Administration
Hartney, Mr. E. P., 4566
House of Commons
Attendance of members, 4458
Staff—classification and organization, 4563-4
Income tax, 3237
Advertisements, 3240
Exemptions on account of children, 3298
Indemnity of members, 3310-1
Indemnities of members and salaries of ministers, 4442, 4458
Indian Act Amdt., 4137
Industrial Disputes, 2193-9
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4422
Labrie Brothers. See under this title, Administration
Magdalen Islands, 4282-4
Relief ships to, 1742

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Mail service, increase in, 4526
Military Service branch, 4517
Naval Service, 3513
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4309
Navigation, Pictou—Baie de Chaleur—St. Lawrence, 2186-9, 3492-3
Newspaper postage rates, 3349
Zone system, 3351
Nile Voyageurs, 3857
Northern Canada, resources, 3283-4
Peace Conference Labour Bureau, 4507
Pecuniary Claims Convention, 3857-8
Penitentiary Act Amdt., 3410
Permanent force, commissions to N.C.O's, ques. 3619
Point of order—relevancy, 3743
Post Office
Department, 3735-43
Estimates, 4521-2
Reorganization, 3739
Rural mail carriers, 4522
Post Office and Customs Departments
Rumoured investigation of, 3491
Printing, Joint Com. on, 4257, 4322, 4505
Purchasing Commission, 4581
Quebec-Gaspé service, 4282
Reindeer herds, 3284
Returned soldiers' needs, 3212
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3197, 3206
St. John harbour, 3492-3, 4567-74
Shipping federation, 2266
Sick and distressed mariners, 2260-2
Special War Revenue, 3444
Chewing gum, 3594
Returned soldiers, exemption of, Amdt. proposed, 3446-7
Supply, Com. of, Saturday, order for, 3840
Tobacco, 3819
Washington, Canadian Minister at, 2464
Correspondence, 3080-1
West Indies, 2892-3, 3161

Lennox, Mr. Justice, alleged statement by, 1232

Lesage, Mr. J. E. (Hochelaga)
Proprietary Medicines, ques. 1036
War Tax stamps, ques. 807

Letter Carriers. See Post Office

Levis Drill Hall, ques. 1360, 3727

Library of Parliament, 211, 1426
Joint Com appointed, 307
Librarian, 114. See also DeCelles

Lighthouses and Lightkeepers, 1281-2, 2110, ques. 1897
British Columbia, 1616
Charlevoix-Montmorency, ques. 319
Lighthouse Board, 2117
St. Lawrence river, 3295. For individual lights see their titles

Lindsay arsenal, 3717

Linen. See Flax

Liquor. See also Inland Revenue; Special War Revenue; Prohibition
Duties, 2487
Shipments to United States, 2107, 2118

Little Sands, 4580

Live Stock
Cattle embargo, ques. 340
Feeding of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs
Shipments, inspection, 1614

Lloyd's. See Canada Shipping Act; Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Loan Companies Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 855; 2r., 1776; Com., 1777; 3r., 1779

Loans, ques. 810. See also Victory Loans
Not another popular, ques., 810

Loans to Foreign Countries, Summary, ques. 318. See also Finance

Lobsters. See Fisheries

Lockeport
Froude's Point service, 4514, 4284-5
Railway connection, proposed, 3085, 3376, 4218

Loggie, Mr. William S. (Northumberland, N.B.)
Budget, 3033. New Parliament building—customs reductions, 3033; tariff revision—manufactured food products—adequate revenue, 3034; commercial and industrial competition — cottons, 3036; stabilizing the general tariff—export taxes, 3036; Mr. Fielding's amdt., 3037; Liberal tariff plank—the farmers and free agricultural implements, 3038; Budget approved, 3039
Franchise Bill—proclamation, 2267
Income tax returns, 3255-6
Newcastle-Tracadie, proposed railway, 4217
Opium and Drug Bill, 1754
Sick and distressed mariners, 3105

Loggie, Mr. William S.—Con.
Special War Revenue
Boots, 3565
Collection, method of, 3336-8, 3484
Dresses, 3586
Gloves, 3568
Jewellers, 3579-80
Lace and braid, 3573-4
Collars, 3574
Licenses, 3583, 3607
Penalties, 3302
Refunds, 3608
"Sales taxes" returned soldier amdt., 3452, 3610, 3336
Silk goods, 3563-4, 3572-3
Snowshoes, 3571
Stockings, silk, 3567
Taxes, effect of, 3485
Telegraphs and telephones, 4578

London, Canadian Mission in, ques., 410

Long, Mr. Charles E. (North Battleford)
Canadian Northern Railway extensions, 3391

Lorette, Hurons of. See Indians

Lotbiniere and Megantic Railway, ques. 590, 950, 4578, 4585

Louiseville, postmaster, ques., 1739

Lunenburg, acting registrar of shipping, 2108

Luxury Taxes, 2486. See also Special War Revenue

Macallum, Professor, 3806

Mack, Mr., Lunenburg, N.S., 2108-9

Mackenzie Avenue, Ottawa, ques. 999

Mackenzie, Sir William, private car, ques. 1628; ques. 2572

Mackenzie and Mann, 2379, 4184
Inverness coal, 4238

Mackie, Mr. Henry A. (East Edmonton)
Bird, Mr. Eustace G., ques. 1625
Canadian National Railways, rates, 4189
Carvill, Mr. George, case of, 4226
Child labour, 368
Civil Service
Dismissals and appointments, ques. 320
Holidays, 4058
Edmonton post office, 4518
Deputy postmaster, ques. 1739
Money parcel lost, ques. 412, 923
Eight-hour day, 337, 367, 379
Empire Day adjournment, 2575

Mackie, Mr. Henry A.
Federal Bureau of Education, 1374
Franchise Bill, 749
Aliens—certificate, 2091, 2096
Ballot boxes, 1097-8
By-elections, simultaneous, 1091
Chief Electoral Officer—Biggar, Mr. O. M., appointment of, 4269
Conveyance of electors, 787
Deposit, 1094
Notices, 778
Oaths, 780
Recall, the, 2028
Returning officers, 1522, 1532-3, 1577, 1582
Public officials, 1795-6, 1806
Voters' lists, 2426-36
Indemnity of members, 4074, 4448-9
Industrial disputes, 1910-11
Judges' salaries, ques. 1035, 4339, 4422
League of Nations, 3978
Marriage Act Amdt, 1787-8
Naturalization
"Disloyal," 3917-9
Galicians, 3922
Naval Service, additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4404
New party movement, 125
Oil from tar sands, 332-3
Oliver-St. Paul de Metis Railway, 344, 871
Privilege—comment on absence from House, 2968-9
Returned soldiers, provision for
M. for special Com. 513
Soldiers' widows and children, ques. 920
Saturday and morning sittings, 2781-2
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4005
Speech read—point of order, 2966
Washington labour conference, 371

Mackie, Mr. Herbert J. (North Renfrew)
Indemnity of members and salaries of ministers, 4446
Rural mail carriers, 4524

Maclean, Hon. A. K. (Halifax)
Canadian Wheat Board, 4111
Civil Service Act Amdt. 3133-9
Judges' salaries, 4421-2
Resignation as Minister, 448
Scientific Research, 2169

Maclean, Mr. W. F. (South York)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 129. Union Government — Prime Minister and Parliamentary government, 129; proposed general election, 130

Maclean, Mr. W. F.—Con.
Business Profits tax—public utilities, 3229-34
Canadian National Railways
Public ownership—duplications—colonization lines—community centres—situation in Toronto—public ownership in United States coming, 4195-9
Canadian Wheat Board, 4351
Civil Service, technical officers, 4514
Coal—alienation of lands, 3811
Estimates and their discussion, 4589
Federal laws, enforcement of, 4506
Fuel supply, 4506
Special powers to Railway Commission 4331
Grank Trunk Railway acquisition, 1439-42
Judges' salaries, 4335-41
Labour representatives, 4513-4
Newsprint shortage, 2968
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3947
Railway Commission, jurisdiction over telephones, 2413
Rural mail, 4525
Soldier Settlement—housebuilding, 1687
Steel and shipping merger, 1955-60
Toronto Union station, 3225-6

MacNutt, Mr. Thomas (Saltcoats)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 174. Proposed general election —census and representation, figures, 174; income tax and land value tax—the Farmers' party, 175; Liberals and free trade, 176
Budget, 2884. New party and its names—its platform on the tariff—former Liberals supporting the Budget, 2884; Mr. Stacey and duty on apples—Opposition tariff policy, 2885; effect of Budget on public revenues and on prices, 2887; income tax, land value tax, 2888; no tariff at all but land value tax and if necessary other direct taxes, 2889
Canadian Pacific Railway freight rates, ques. 2010
Franchise Bill, advance polls, 3876
Indemnity of members, 4081
Wheat participation certificates, ques. 802; ques. 802

McCoig, Mr. A. B. (Kent, Ont.)
Agricultural machinery, standardizing, 2079
Apple barrel, 2018
Budget, 2626. Manufacturers and tariff—United Farmers, 2627; effects of policy on stock-raising, 2628; profiteering

McCoig, Mr. A. B.—Con.
Budget—Con.
and Board of Commerce, 2629; prices, 2630; luxury taxes—taxation of war profits, 2631
Canadian Wheat Board, ques. 799, 3561, 4109
Chaplin, Mr., criticism by, 2816
Erieau port, 2115, 2118
Franchise Bill—voters' lists, 2350
Income tax
Part payment with return, 3254
Residence or investment outside Canada, 3251
Indemnity of members, 4083
Indians, enfranchisement, 4037
Opium and Drug Bill, 1705
Postmen, rumoured strike of, 3623
Purchasing Commission, 1472
Returned soldiers, provision for, 514
Special War Revenue
Bank overdrafts, 3624-5
Chandeliers, 3578
Sporting goods, 3571
Stock transfers, 3626

McCrea, Mr. Francis N. (Sherbrooke)
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1497
Stocks, 1571
Strike of 1910, 1570
Indemnity of members, 4454
Parliament Buildings, 1422-1434
Railways, purchase of by Government, 1454
Railway rates, 1498
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4013

McCurdy, Mr. F. B. (Colchester)
Budget, 2936. Budget should be circulated in condensed and popular form, 2936; supposed prosperity, prices, inflation, 2937; gold reserve—taxes and revenue, 2938; expenditures, public debt, 2939; sinking fund—effects of war extravagance, 2940; Government example needed — greater efficiency and economy in Civil Service, 2941
Income tax—corporations, 3239

McDonald, Mr. Angus (Timiskaming)
Budget, 3039. Failure to catch Speaker's eye—Timiskaming by-election — Mrs. Rose Henderson—One Big Union, 3039; in honour of Canada's soldier heroes, 3041
Canadian Northern Railway, North Bay through, ques. 3619
Election and introduction, 1684, 1787
Industrial disputes, 1909-11, 1975-7
Personal position on labour questions, 1977

McGibbon, Mr. Peter (Muskoka)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 215. Exchange situation, 216; Great Britain's industrial efficiency, German competition, 218; protection, income tax, taxation of foodstuffs, 218; duties on boots and shoes, agricultural implements, free goods, 219; tax on farm lands, development of resources —Franchise Act, 220; proposed general election, 221
Civil Service, 4059
Franchise Bill
Agents, 1098
Conveying voters, 786, 1062
Disqualification, charitable aid, those receiving, 1818
Income tax—Charities, 3246, 3314
Indians
Gibson, reserve, 3277
Tuberculosis amongst, 3277
Military training and cadet service, 3710
Newspaper postage rates, 3349, 3354
Northern Canada—oil properties, 3281
Oleomargarine, 1870
Opium and Drug Bill, 1746-50, 1753-6
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3937
Race track betting, 3429
Returned soldiers, 514
Scientific Research, 2164
Special War Revenue,
Automobiles, 3599
Boats and canoes, 3589-92
Proprietary medicines, 3602

McGibbon, Mr. Peter Robert (Argenteuil)
Parliament Buildings, 1434

McGregor, Mr. Alexander (Pictou)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech (Seconder) 18. Illness and absence of Prime Minister, 18; returned soldiers, 19; after-war conditions—class divisions, 20; iron and steel industry in war and peace, 21; labour and capital, 22
Pictou Harbour, 2185
Voters' lists, 2361-2

McIsaac, Mr. James (Kings, P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 221. Parliament buildings, 221; contents of Speech from the Throne—Union Government—leader of the Opposition and the war, 222; illness of Prime Minister—proposed general election, 223; reply to Mr. McKenzie, 224
Agriculture, 2395

McIsaac, Mr. James—Con.
Budget, 2864. Congratulations to Minister of Finance—trade and production, 2864; national debt, 2865; revenue and expenditure—new taxes, 2866; Mr. Fielding's amdt. and address, 2867; fiscal policy of Liberal party, 2868; tariff investigation and amendment, 2869; national policy, 2870
Canadian National Railways
Prince Edward Island car ferry—standardization of railway — winter navigation—Georgetown harbour and terminals—invitation to Prince Edward Island, 4208-12
Car ferry, 2103
Franchise Bill
"Ecclesiastics," 1078
Polls, hours to be open, 1926
Voters' lists, provincial, 2360
Grading export butter and cheese, 606
Icebreakers, 2103
Lightkeeper's salaries, 2111
Masters and mates, examiner, 1610
North Lake harbour, 3159
School of navigation, 1612
Sick sailors, 3553-4
Soldier settlement, 2152

McKenzie, Mr. D. D. (Cape Breton North and Victoria)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 46, 47. Congratulations, 47; new leader of the Opposition, 48; Montreal Gazette's and Hon. Robert Rogers' opinion of the Government, 50; Minister's absence from the House, 51; health of Prime Minister—extension of parliamentary term, 52; technical education — shipbuilding—production—returned soldiers-civil service reform, 53; Liberal policy—late Liberal leader, 54; exchange rate and foreign trade, 55
Admiralty Act, 3086
Appeals in sumary convictions, 3418-9
Arrest and summoning of persons outside the province, 3417-8
Banff National Park, 3770-6
Bankruptcy Bill, 3258-65
Betting machine, 3416
Board of Commerce
Constitutional question, 3685
Porter, Mr. Arthur S., dismissal of, 568
Budget, 2580. Tariff and tariff commission, 2580; the Budget, its purpose, 2581; revenue and expenditure, 2582; luxury taxes and prices, 2583; foreign credits, 2584; governmental interference in

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Budget—Con.
trade, 2585; government and by-elections, 2585; parties and the tariff, 2587; Liberals' and Farmers' tariff resolutions, 2588
Canada Grain Act, administration, 1877
Canadian National Railways
Appointments, how made, 3140
Canadian National Railway Company, 345
Extensions, 3376, 3384-9, 3393-4
Victoria County, 4241
North Sydney terminal, 4251
Reply to general summary of Minister of Railways, 872
Taxation of, 3393-4
Withholding of information, 1657-8
Canadian Wheat Board, 4114
Cape Breton
Need of railways, 875
Newfoundland steamship service, 4285
Civil Service
Bonus, 1270-2, 1276, 1280, 1284, 3147
Cheques, preparation of, 1285-7
Classification, 553
Insurance, 1780
Retirement fund, 460, 3836
Salaries, 3541
Temporary employees, 3133-5
Outside Canada, 3129
War record, civil servants with, 3131
Coal and iron resources, 327
Coal mining—prevention of explosions, 3814
Coal Operations Director, 3693
Orders in Council, 3186
Orders of, 3191
Cold storage for bait, 2408
Commercial Feeding stuffs, 3409
Criminal Code
Change of venue, 3421-2
Courts of appeal, 3423
Prisoner, re-election by, 3419-20
Currency Act Amdt., 460
Dominion lands, 1049-50
United States soldiers and, 1233
Dredging, 3786
Exchange rate, 55, 460
Exchequer Court, 2202-4
Experimental and demonstration farms, 2384-5
Firearms licenses, 3410, 3413
Fish inspection, 1053-4
Fisheries treaty with United States, 1290, 3161
Food and Drugs Bill, 957, 961-77, 1258-9, 1262
Prosecutions, 1263-9

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Food inspectors, 3540
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1942, 1999
Lists, 3914
Aliens—certificate, 2101, 2204
Bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, 1156-8
Burden of proof, 1161, 1825
Clerk of Crown in Chancery, 1071
Contributions, 1169
Corrupt practices, 1160
Deputy returning officers, 1074
Disqualification
Charitable aid, those receiving, 1818
Citizenships and franchise, 1824
Election officers, 1075-8
False statement made to affect election, 1066-7
Interpretation
"Lists of voters," 1989
"Voter," 1993-4
Orders in Council, repeal of 776-7
Payment of voters' expenses, 1064
Poll books, etc., returning officer, 1078-80
Preparation of voters' lists—complaint of unfairness, 3905
Proclamation—language of publication, 1832
Registrars, rural, attendance of, 3908-9
Returning officers, 1161, 1589-90
Voters' lists
Provincial, 1989, 2329, 2341-6, 2348, 2361-4
Voting notwithstanding disqualification, 1161, 1825
Writ of election, 1166
Franking privilege, 3358
Gas and electricity inspection, 1887
Government annuities, 462-3
Government steamers—wages, 1609-11
Grand Trunk Railway, 1291, 1299-1300, 1486, 1489, 1506-7
Branch lines, 1313-6, 1321
Stock, 1321
Strike of 1910 and pensions, 1130, 1551, 1568
Halifax-Cape Breton service, 4281
Halifax explosion, 3698-9
Harbour dues, 2189
Highlander's plaid and clasp, 445
Housing expenditure, 3550
Hungarian treaty, 1060
Icebreakers, 1600, 2106
Imperial conference, 359

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Income tax
Assessment methods, 3254
Charities, 3247, 3314
Delinquents, 3120, 3123-4
Exemptions, 3127
"Householders," 3249
Indians,
British Columbia, 951-5
Economic and religious situation, 3268
Education of, 3277
Enfranchisement, 4038-40
Nova Scotia, 3272-3
Tuberculosis amongst, 3275
Industrial disputes, 1901-4, 1912, 1972-3, 2199-2200
Isle Madame fishery officers, ques. 3294
Irrigation, 3698-9
League of Nations
Britain's treaty-making power and, 349
Washington Labour Conference, 355
Liberal leadership, and, 898, 913, 1277
Liquor sales—jurisdiction, 3498
Live stock shipments inspection, 1615
Loan Companies, 1778-9
Lotbiniere and Megantic Railway, 950
Marine hospitals, 3552-3
Masters and mates, 406, 562-4, 573-4, 979-87
Examiners, 1611
Militia
Cadet service, 3703
Headquarters officers, ques. 344
Mines Dept., explosives, 3804
Moving pictures of Canada, 1884
Naturalization, 3918
Naval Service, badges, 446
Necessaries, prices of, 327
Newfoundland, 4276, 4278-9, 4281
Cattle trade—veterinary, 2410
North Sydney
Harbour and breakwater, 2186, 3493-94
Terminal facilities, 875, 4241
Oleomargarine, 1875-7
Opium and Drug Bill, 1643-4, 1761, 1900
Ottawa city, agreement with, 578, 581, 989-91
Parliamentary restaurant, 3095-6
Patent Record, 1886
Peace Treaty, 1058-60
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3947
Fisheries and returned men, 3948
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4044-5
Vocational training, 3949
Widowed mother, 4044
Pictou harbour, 2186
Pilotage, 1967
Questions not answered, 949

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Railway Act Amdt. (Provincial jurisdiction) 3635
Railways, Govt. vs. private ownership, 872
Registration of shipping, 1614
Returned soldiers' insurance, 4054-5
Returned soldiers, 525
Soldier settlement, 527, 1695
Fishermen, aid to, 1691, 3948
St. John harbour—pilots, 2120
St. Lawrence dredging, 1617-20
Schools of navigation, 1612-3
Scottish Canadian Insurance Corporation, 583
Shipbuilding
Contracts, 911
Prices, 912
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3999, 4009-16, 4137, 4157, 4166
Sick and distressed mariners, 2266-7
Special War Revenue
Candy, 3593
Collection, method of, 3482
Debate on Bill, arrangements for, 3456
Excise and sales taxes
Returned soldier amdt. (Mr. Lemieux) 3452-3
Sporting goods, 3571-2
Spirits, illicit distillation, 3817
Statutes, suggested revision and consolidation, 3821, 4053
Steamboat inspection, 1051, 1767-76
Steamers "Champlain" and "Lady Grey," ques. 3619
Steel and shipping merger, 1965
Supply, interim, vote, 756
Supreme Court Act, 2315-16
Sydney harbour
South Bar lighthouse, 2116
Sydney Quarantine station, 3148
Sydney-Whycocomagh service, 4287
Terminal elevators, 1878-9
Ticket-of-leave system, 398
Treaty of Peace, ratification, 476
Wednesday evening sittings, 1045
Wharves and wharfage, 2123, 2189
Wheeler, Mr. S—rust proof wheat, 2388
Yukon and British Columbia, 3282

McMaster, Mr. Andrew R. (Brome)
Air service, 4555
Alien immigrants, 833
Asbestos, 4513
Banff National park, 3772
Board of Commerce—Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4474-8, 4494
Bright, John, on hours of labour, 326
Budget, 2518-20. Gross and net debt—taxation methods, 2521; inflation and rates of duty, 2522; deficit, and suggestions of economy, 2523; military preparations, 2523; public works, 2524; subsidies, 2525; taxation, methods, 2526; luxury taxes, 2528; tariff investigation, 2529; protection or free trade, 2530; United States free list—"Reduction Rimes," 2533

McMaster, Mr. Andrew R.—Con.
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Civil Service insurance, and, 1780
Canadian Mission in London, ques. 410
Canadian National Railways
Nomenclature and legislation, 3390
Taxation of, 3394
Withholding information, 1672-4, 1680
Coal Operations Director, 3694
Coinage
Deficient, 461
Silver—international standard, 400
Debates, difficulty of hearing, 1418
Eastern Townships, scenic beauty, 3538
Exchequer Court, 2204
Export regulations, 3622
Food and Drugs Bill, 955-9, 966-70
Franchise Bill, 738
Compulsory voting, 1062
Contributions—amdt. 1171, 1192-6
Paid propaganda, amdt. to 3r., 4374
Polling divisions, 1516, 1518-9
Proclamation, language of publication, 2284-5
Returning officers, 1524-5
Telegraph, communications by, 1068
Franking privilege, 3762-8
Grand Trunk Railway, 1313, 1325-8
Appeal from ruling of Chairman, 1327
House of Commons, pages, 3098-9
Indemnity of members, 4452
International Joint Commission—Sir William Hearst — Non-representation of Quebec, 3986
Irrigation, 3695-3701
Judges' salaries, 4419
Labour, Minister of, 4513
League of Nations, 3983
Expenses, Canada's contribution, ques. 410
Loan Companies, 1778
Militarism, 3706-7
Militia, Cadet service, 3704-8, 3706
Mines Department and Geological Survey, 4513
Missisquoi Bay, 3538
Naval Service badges, 444
News Service, 4333
Opium and Drug Bill, 1758

McMaster, Mr. Andrew R.—Con.
Palmer, Mr. K. H., ques. 1001
Parliament Building, 1418, 1429-30
Peace, 230-1
Peace Treaty, Ratification, 478, 3984
Pensions
French reservist from Canada, 4048
Widowed mothers, resident outside of Canada, 4045-6
Post Office Dept, postal rates, etc., 3738, 3756-8
Press censorship, ques. 541
Purchasing Commission, 1476
Race track betting, 3427-8, 3432
Regina Library, 396
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 396-7
Shipbuilding, 638, 666-7, 907-9
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3989-92, 4154-61
Special War Revenue, 3791
Administration — book of instructions suggested, 3791
Caps, 3566
"Excise and sales" and luxury taxes, 3466-7
Changes, date of coming into effect, 3607
Clocks and watches, 3574
Currency, foreign, depreciated, 3615
Fountain pens, 3577
Fuel, 3609
Glassware, cut, 3569
Imports and manufactures, 3566
Jewellery, 3582-4
Musical instruments, 3596
Neckwear, 3790
Proprietary medicines, 3603-4
Refunds, 3607
Socks, 3566
Sporting goods, 3570-1
Umbrellas, 3568
Underwear, 3568
Wedding rings, 3797
Steamboat inspection, 1770-75
Steamboat subsidies, 4515
T. Eaton Life Assurance Company, 669
Washington, Canadian representative at,

McMasterville, Explosive works at, 2247

McNichol, Mr. J. L. ques. 994

McQuarrie, Mr. W. G. (New Westminster)
Judges' salaries, 3853
Returned soldiers, 537

Magdalen Islands, 649, 1601, 4586
Visit of "Canadian Sealer," 649
Relief ships to, 1742
Steamship services, 4276-87

Magill, Dr., 4124-5, 4342-7

Maharg, Mr. John A. (Maple Creek)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 299. Farmers' movement, 299; reply to Sir Thomas White, 300; reply to Mr. McGibbon (Muskoka)—returned soldiers, 301; taxation of war profits, 302; tariff protection—proposed new Liberal and Conservative party, 303
Alien immigrants, 827, 839
Budget, 2632. Luxury taxes, 2632; Liberal party's tariff policy—Great Britain under free trade, 2633; Wheat Board and the farmers, 2635; farmers and purchase of American implements, 2636
Campaign funds, 1224
Canadian Wheat Board, 4131-5, 4346, 4351, 4355
Franchise Bill
Contributions, 783, 1189, 1191, 4373
Election expenses, 1154
Grand Trunk Railway, 1458
Indemnity of members, 4090
Opium and Drug Bill, 1634-7, 1641-2
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 395
Pensions, 615
Shipbuilding, inland waters, vessels for, 913
Soldier Settlement, cattle branding, 1700
Universal military training, 942

Mail Carriers, ques. 343. See also Civil Service; Post Office; Rural Mail

Manion, Mr. Robert J. (Fort William and Rainy River)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 211. Ontario and Quebec—Parliamentary librarian — Parliament Building, 211; proposed general election, 212; franchise, pensions, shipping, civil service, development, 212; tariff, 213; League of Nations, Canada's status, 214
Agricultural and industrial populations, ques. 1002
Budget. 2544. Tariff, 2544; free trade or moderate tariff, 2545; markets, 2547; foreign commerce, 2548; how to estimate prosperity and progress, 2550, 2634; railways, agriculture, pulpwood, minerals, 2552; foreign competition, 2554; tariff revision, 2554
Canadian Wheat Board, 4111
Chisholm, Col. H. A., ques. 3359
Coal Operations Director, 3179
Dairying—cheese, 2406

Manion, Mr. Robert J.—Con.
Food and Drugs Bill, 1636, 1642
Fort Frances public buildings, 3151-2
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1165
Contributions, 1190-1
Disqualification—charitable aid, those receiving, 1815, 1818-9
"Ecclesiastics," 1078
Non-residents and non-electors, 786
Voters' lists, 2429-30
Income tax—aliens in Canada, 3250
National resources development, M. in favour, 1017
Oleomargarine, 1864
Opium and Drug Bill, 1759
Returned Soldiers, M. for Special Com. 519
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 390
Shipbuilding—foreign trade, 906
Special War Revenue
Ethyl alcohol, 3604
Furniture, 3575
Medicines, 3627, 3631
Sporting Goods, 3571
War medals, ques. 1003, 1046, ques. 1120

Mann, Sir Donald, private car, ques. 2183

Mantezono. See Labrie

Manufacturers. See also debates on Address; Budget
Aid in appeals, 321
United States competition, 2857
Vessel rates, 1728

Maple Products Adulteration Bill. 1r., 582; 2r., 796; com, 796, 1254; 3r., 1256; Senate amdts., 2366, 4020

Marcil, Hon. Charles (Bonaventure)
Banff National park, 3777
Bonaventure
Experimental farms, ques. 414
Pensions, ques. 993
Postmasters, ques. 507
Public Works engineer, ques. 411
Wharves, ques. 411
Bonaventure and Gaspe, dairy products and fish, ques. 587
Bridges and the provinces, 3771-3
Campbellton-Cross Point
Bridge, ques. 3490
Ferry, ques. 342, ques. 411, ques. 588, ques. 1789, ques. 2415
Canadian National Railways—cars, 864
Chambly fort, 3725
Civil Service retirement, 3833
Dredging, 3783-7

Marcil, Hon. Charles—Con.
Franchise Bill
Election expenses, 1932
Polls, hours to be open, 1921-2
Gascons wharf, ques. 411
International Joint Commission, 3986
League of Nations, 3982
Matapedia
Bridge and highway, 3780, ques. 411
Station, freights, ques. 587
Mines Dept., 3803
Explosives, 3804
Montreal barracks, 3724-7
Montreal-Quebec-Gaspe service, ques. 587
Newsprint shortage, 2968
Peat, 3806
Public works, resident engineers, 3787
Quebec and Western Railway, ques. 411, ques. 412
Quebec, Oriental and Atlantic Railway, ques. 411, ques. 412, ques. 507
Registered postal rate, 3732-5
Restigouche bridge, ques. 411
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3998
Special War Revenue
Lace, 3793
Prices, how arrived at, 3790
Spirits and beer, 3817-8
Tache, Mr. Chas. Eugene, ques. 3490
Tobacco, 3818-9

Marcile, Mr. J. E. (Bagot)
Acton Vale post office, ques. 1899
Bagot
Electoral list, ques. 2011
Postal inspection, ques. 2721
Flynn, Capt. Percy, ques. 2415
Franchise Bill, 1991-2
Military Service defaulters, ques. 507
Picard, Mr. Elzear, ques. 993
Ste. Rosalie-Bagot spur line, ques. 2009
Theodore d'Acton post office, ques. 2011

Margeson, Mr. J. W., ques. 1036

Marine. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canada Shipping Act. For vessels, see that title
Buoys, 2116
Department
Classification, 2113
Members of Parliament, treatment of, 2121
Services, restored to, 3507
Hospitals, 3552. See also Canada Shipping Act (Sick and Distressed Mariners)
Liquor shipments and, 2107
Wrecking plants, 1615, 2103
Wrecks, investigations, 1612

Marine and Fisheries
Com. appointed, 307

Maritime Provinces, Harbour Commissions, 3492-3

Marriage Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1787

Marriage Licenses, 3415

Marshall, Mr. David, M. P., death of, 1, 10

Martin, Mr. Peter F. (Halifax)
Fisheries
Benefits from government policy, 3535
Estimates, 3521
Halifax explosion, 3699
Voters' lists, 2337

Masonic Records in Parliament Tower, ques. 2894

Masters and Mates. See that title under Canada Shipping Act

Matapedia
Highway, ques. 411, 3780
Station, ques. 587

Matches—use of phosphorus, 356

Mayrand, Mr. Hormisdas (Maskinongé)
Louiseville postmaster, ques. 1739

Meat and Canned Goods Inspection, 2411

Medicines—See Foods and Drugs; Opium and Drugs; Inland Revenue; Proprietary; Special War Revenue

Meighen, Hon. Arthur (Minister of the Interior and Superintendent General of Indian Affairs.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 152; Farmers' movement a class movement, 153; franchise and conscription of aliens; reply to Mr. Caldwell—Canada's national status, 156; monetary exchange and trade, 157; proposed general election—Cabinet representation—illness of Prime Minister, 158; Union Government's mandate—government by commission, 159; vacancies, 160
Alien immigrants, 831, 2238-40
Alpine Club, 3288
Banff National park, 3771-2
Board of Commerce, Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4492-4500
British Columbia Indians, 386, 787-95, 950-5, 1047, 3273. See also under this title, Indian Act.

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
Budget, 2683. "Advances unaccounted for," 2683; luxury taxes, 2684; income tax in Canada, in Great Britain and in New Zealand, 2685-2707; tariff—England as an example, 2686; balance of trade, Great Britain and the United States, 2687; people below the poverty line, 2688; effect of free trade on movement of population, 2689; British industry and free trade, 2690; United States an alleged free trade country, 2690; agricultural population in Great Britain and in Canada, 2690; Great Britain and Germany in the field of manufacture, 2691; British reports on industries—iron, steel, tinplate, 2692; electrical trades, engineering trades, 2695; cotton trade, textile industries, 2696; Liberal party and tariff, 2697; Farmers' party tariff plank, 2699; duty on agricultural implements, 2701; Mr. Fielding and "adequate protection," 2702; tariff and foodstuffs, 2703; answers to questions invited—Liberal and agrarian party platforms, 2704; Mr. Crerar and direct taxation—tax on unearned increment of land, 2706; tariff should remain in force pending revision, 2708
Canadian Forestry Association, 3285
Canadian National Railways and Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Information properly withheld, 1664, 1668-70
Canadian Wheat Board, 4115-24, 4136, 4346
Capital punishment, 1152
Coal Operations Director, 3690
Fuel situation, 3175, 3182-92
Orders in Council, 3186-9
Ratification of, 3361, 3365-75
Orders of Director, 3189-92
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. 704, 1048-50
Homesteading privileges to United States Soldiers, 1113, 1233-4
Dominion Water Powers Branch, 3289-93
Employment offices, 2313-4, 3087, 4512-3
Minister, powers of, 3092
Orders in Council, effect of, 3088-91
Explosive works at Beloeil, 2314
Franchise Bill, 756-9
Aliens—certificate, 2238-40
Grand Trunk Railway
Stocks, value of, 1562-3, 1572
Strike of 1910, 1556-64
Hurons of Lorette, 1152

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
Indian Act Amdt. Bill, 386, 795-6, 4029-40, 4137, 4174
Indian lands (British Columbia) 386
Indians, 3265-80
Agents—salary and bonus, 3273
British Columbia, 3273
Caughnawaga, 3266-7
Education, 3277-80
Game laws and, 3280
Gordon's Reserve—school, 3270-1, 3278
Health and medical attendance, 3275
—Tuberculosis, 3276
Hurons of Lorette, 1152
Missionary work amongst, 3268
New Brunswick, 3273
Nova Scotia, 3273
Prairie Provinces and Northwest, 3267
Prince Edward Island, 3273
Reserves, surrender of, 3274
Self-sustaining, 3268
Sioux, 3267
Six Nations—education, 3280
Ungava—distress amongst — reindeer herds to be established, 3276
Yukon, 3274
Industrial Disputes, 1900-15, 1971-5, 1981-5, 2190-2200, 2248
International boundary surveys, 3293
Irrigation Act Amdt., 3358, 3694-3702
Joint Industrial Councils, 4512
Labour Dept. salaries, 4506
Lake Winnipeg and Elk Island, 3287
Macallum, Professor, 3806
Mill, John Stuart, and protection, 2907
Mines Dept. 3801-15, 4513
Coal, 3810
Dominion and provinces, 3803
Explosives, 3804
Explosions, avoidance of, 3814
Investigation of deposits, leases, etc., 3808
Lignite, 3805
Oil, 331, 3808-10
Overlapping, 3802
Peat, 3806
Resignations, salaries, etc., 3801-3805
Resources, alienation of, 3810
Road and structural material, 3808
National defence, 4302-4
National Industrial Conference, 4512
National parks, 3283, 3771
Naturalization—franchise and, 770-1
Natural resources of Western Provinces, 3293
Naval Service, 4302-4, 4315
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000 4393-7

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
Northern Canada's area, resources and administration, 3280-4
Northwest Game Act Amdt. 2892
Oil—Canada's position and resources, 331
Peace Conference Labour Bureau, 4507
Permanent Force, 3210-1
Provincial affairs and federal aid, 833
Reindeer—caribou, 3276, 3284
St. John River water-powers, 3290-3
Seed grain advances, 3286-8
Soldier Settlement, 1289, 1685-1702, 2127-50, 3218-24
Administration—criticism, 3223
Defaults, 3223
Fishermen, 3219
Irrigated lands, 3223
Loans, employment for districts, 3220
Ministerial explanation, 3192-4
Provincial free grants and, 3223
Repayments, 3218
Solicitors' fees, 3218
Staff, salaries, 3221-3
Training and allowances, 3224
Surveys, 3293
Tariff, personal position on—Mr. Crerar's criticism, 2900
Tar sands, 333
Technical Education, 1761
Yukon administration, 3281-2
British Columbia and, 3282
Yukon Placer Mining Act, 2892, 3106, 4264

Members of Parliament. See also House of Commons
Attendance of in House, 2782-6

Members' Indemnity. See House of Commons

Members' Stenographers, salaries of, ques. 2311

Menace, the, ques. 1899

Mennonites, emigration to United States, 2127, 2179, 2248

Mercantile Marine. See Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine; Canada Shipping Act

Metabetchouan postmaster, ques. 1120, 2876

Meteorological Service, 2125

Methylated Spirits for industrial power, 324, 3820-1

Mewburn, Hon. Sidney C. (East Hamilton)
Battlefields Committee, 2078
Resignation as Minister, 447

Michaud, Mr. Pius (Restigouche and Madawaska)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 214. Popular unrest—proposed general election, 215
American loans, ques. 313
Begin, Cardinal, insult to, 1574
Edmundston post office, ques. 2722
Franchise Bill
Oaths, administration of, 779
Proclamation, language of publication, 1328-32
Returning officers, 1591
Newspaper postage rates, 3349
Railway cars, 1114
Roy, Mr. Gustave, ques. 1898
St. John river—International Commission, ques. 1623
Special War Revenue—boots, 3565
Theriault and St. Quentin, N.B., 3080
Wheat exports and imports, ques. 313, ques. 590

Middlebro, Mr. W. S. (North Grey)
Food and Drugs Bill, 960
Franchise Bill
Contributions—Amdt. (Mr. McMaster) 1193-4
Polling divisions, 1517
Returning officers, 1580-1
Highways, payments to Ontario, 1046
House of Commons staff, 1038
Income tax—charities, 3246

Middlings. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Grain

Militarism. See Cadet

Military College, 3152

Military districts in Quebec, ques. 1035

Military Police, ques. 804; ques. 805

Military Service Act
Agricultural representatives, 3399
Collections by Mr. Cimon, ques. 1461; ques. 1462
Defaulters
Chicoutimi, ques. 409
Fines, ques. 507, ques. 543
Military Service branch, 4516

Military Training, 923. See also Militia; Cadet Service

Military Uniforms
Colleges, etc., for, ques. 413

Militia and Defence
Active militia—allowances, 3654
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to reduce, 3657; neg. 3673
Air Service, 4553
Annual drill, 3674
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to reduce, 3675; neg. 3679
Arsenals Dominion
Lindsay, 3717
Quebec—employees, ques. 1898
Associations, grants to, 3725
Cadet service, 3702
Contingencies, 3714
Customs dues, 3716
Demobilization, 4549
Department
Classification, ques. 3358, 4019
Headquarters officers who did not see service in France, ques. 506
London employees, ques. 671
Permanent appointments, ques. 2079
Printing and stationery, 4549
Engineer services and works, 3723
Headquarters staff, ques. 344, ques. 1511, 4548
Levis drill hall, ques. 1360
Military instructors for educational institutions, ques. 413
Military Service Branch, 4516
Ministerial statement, 3636
Military properties, maintenance, 3726
Ordnance, arms, lands, etc., 3727
Permanent Force, 4548
Barracks, 4579
Commissions to N.C.O.'s, ques. 3619
Flynn, Capt. Percy, ques. 2415
Quebec's ancient fortifications, 421
Rifle ranges—Connaught, ques. 671
Long Branch, 3728
Staff, 4548
Training areas, 4549
Transport and freight, 4549
Uniforms for colleges, ques. 413
Use of exhibition buildings by, ques. 2009
Warlike stores, 4549

Militia Pensions Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 1r., 3959; 2r., 4020; Com. 4020; 3r., 4021

Millers. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Grain

Miners' Disputes. See under Coal Operations

Mines and Minerals. See also Natural Resources; Yukon Placer
Asbestos, 4513
Coal. See that title
Com. appointed, 307

Mines and Minerals—Con.
Copper, 4513
Department, 3801. See also Geological Survey
Employees, resignation, ques. 672, 3802, 4512
Labour in, 370
Machinery, imported, ques. 1625
Oil, 331, 3281, 3808-10
Unused mineral deposits, 3810

Ministers of the Crown. See also Cabinet
Absence of, from Seat of Govt. 39
Attendance in Parliament, 51
Disqualification as candidate for House of Commons, 1086
Resignations of, 386, 447
Salaries, 3228, 4379

Minneapolis stockyards, 3166-7

Mint. See also Coinage; Ottawa Mint Act
The Royal, Ottawa Branch, 565

Missisquoi Bay, Net fishing, 3535-8

Molloy, Mr. J. P. (Provencher)
Elevators, ques. 1358
Franchise Bill
Polling divisions, 1518
Returning officers, 1595
Notices of motion, inquiry, 1628

Monroe Doctrine, 4294, 4310, 4404

"Montcalm," Icebreaker, 1060. See also Icebreakers

Montmagny, Colonization lots in, ques. 1229

Montreal
Corn Exchange, vessel rates, 1727
Harbour, wharves, ques. 674
Immigrants, landing at, 3226-8

Montreal and Hull Highway, 1113

Morden, Col., 1948

Morphy, Mr. Hugh B. (North Perth)
Active militia—allowances, 3659
British North America Act Amdt. 811
Canadians in Imperial service—Capt. Barron, 857
Cattle trade, 2373
Dairy industry, 2403-4
Difficulty in hearing debates, 463
Eight-hour day, 452-5
Franchise Bill
Chief Electoral officer—Mr. Biggar, K.C., 4267
Conveying voters, 1061

Morphy, Mr. Hugh B.—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Counting and reporting vote, 1109
False statement made to affect election, 1066
Interpretation, "Candidate" 1943-4
Liquor on polling day, 1108-9
Peace and good order, 1106
Polls, hours to be open, 1924-5
Proclamation—language of publication, 1829-30, 2274, 2285, 2293-6, 2304-6
Provincial lists, 3898
Returning officers
Oath of, 1166
Public officials, 1797
Voters' lists, 2425-6
Franking privilege, 3764-7
Grand Trunk Railway
Strike of 1910, and pensions, 1128, 1133, 1537-9, 1566, 4509-11
Government annuities, 463
House of Commons staff, 4565
Industrial disputes, 2197
Intercolonial Railway, 1443
League of Nations
Armenia, 3979
Enforcement of decisions, 3976
Provinces of Canada, position of, 452
Secret treaties, 3973-4
Second meeting, 3978
United States, 3981-2
Lignite, 3805
Militia—Dominion arsenals, 3718-9
National defence, 4302-3
Newspaper postage, 3753
Oil—leases, etc., 3809
Peat, 3807
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, provincial authorities and, 3196
Rulings and statements as Chairman
Chair to be addressed, 4481
Decorum, 4481
Judiciary, reference to, 4483
Shipbuilding advances Bill, 4149, 4163
Soldier Settlement, 1688, 2153
Steel ammunition charges, 3718-9
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 586

Morrison's Limited, ques. 997

Motions, Inquiries concerning, 1628

Motor Cars. See Automobiles

Mounted Police. See Royal Canadian

Moving Pictures
Canada film service, 1882
Canadian National Pictorial, 4544
Tax on, removal of, 2487, ques. 3489

Mowat, Mr. Herbert M. (Parkdale)
Active militia—allowances, 3658-9
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 56. Proposed general election —by-election in Assiniboia, 56; Hon. Mr. Blondin—French Canadian Cabinet representation, 57; Liberal party and war policy, 58; Union party and Liberal members—conscription and party, 59
Budget, 2576. Congratulations to Finance Minister—tariff, 2576; agricultural implement prices—tariff and manufacturing concerns from United States, 2577; Mr. Fielding and tariff, 2578; militia expenditure and military preparedness, 2579; Imperialism, 2580
Canada Security Assurance Company, 1103
Canadian Expeditionary Force, ques. 1200
Civil Service retirement, 4067, 4464
Divorce Bills, remission of charges, 4413
Franchise Bill
Ballot—black border, 1168
Compulsory voting, 1064
Contributions — Assiniboia expenses, 1174-8
Election officers, 3868
Non-residents and non-electors, 785
Judges' salaries and pensions, 4426
Naval service, 3510
Badges, 441
Oleomargarine, 1873-4
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4152
Special War Revenue
Food, explanation desired, 3632-3
T. Eaton Life Assurance Company, 669
Toronto military property, 3728, 3730
Universal military training, M. in favour of, 923

Municipal Employees, Industrial Disputes Investigation Act and, 1902

Munitions Resources Commission, 2892

Murdock, Mr. See Board of Commerce

Murphy, Hon. Charles (Russell)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 231. Reply to Mr. Rowell—Religious orders from France, 231; secretarial fund, 238; Mr. Rowell's income tax, 240; expenditures on conferences, publicity, etc., 241; Department of Health—Mounted Police, 242; Mr. Rowell and his colleagues, 245; Peace Treaty and League of Nations—eight-hour day, 246; circular of Orange order, 249; proposed general election, 254

Murphy, Hon. Charles—Con.
Board of Commerce, Robson, Judge, resignation of, 11, 114
Budget, inquiry as to, 1047
Dominion Lands Act (United States Soldiers) 1234
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1999
Interpretation, 1986-8, 1987, 1988
Pass on railway, 1065
Telegraph, communications by, 1069
Grand Trunk Railway, 1242-3, 1250
Greek wheat contract, ques. 509
National debt, ques. 309
Naval defence policy, ques. 309
Newsprint Supply, 2893
Parliament Building, ques. 311; ques. 311
Cost, etc., 311
Parliamentary Com., ques. 311
P. Lyall Company, 3156
Point of order—comment on document quoted, 234-6
Prime Minister, illness and absence of, 9
Shipbuilding—contracts and prices, 901-2
Vatican Mission, ques. 310

Murray Bay-Tadoussac Service, 652

Mutual Insurance Companies, taxation of, ques. 2012, 2080

Myers, Mr. E. T. W. (Kindersley)
Canada Grain Act, 3823
Flax fibre grants, ques. 806
Wheat trade, 3823-4

National Battlefields Commission, 421

National Council of Women, oleomargarine and, 1841

National Debt, ques. 309. See also Finance
Loans in the United States, ques. 313

National Defence, 4302

National Industrial Conference, 4512

National Parks, 3769

National Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National

Natural Resources.
M. (Mr. Manion) in favour of development, 1017
Prairie provinces, of, ques. 995, 1047, ques. 1461, 3049, 3293
Royal Commission on, ques. 4502

Naturalization, 817. See also Aliens; Dominion Franchise, aliens, qualification of electors
Imperial citizenship, and, ques. 996
Papers, fraudulent, ques 4096

Naturalization Act, 1914, Amdt. Bill. 1r., 3682; 2r., com., 3914; 3r., 3922; Senate amdts. 4416

Naval Defence, ques. 309. See also Naval Service
Admiral Jellicoe's report, 308
Statement by Minister of the Naval Service, 3498

Naval Service
Additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4380
Badges, 437, ques. 506
Canadian officers, 4299
Civil Service Insurance and, 1779
Coast defence of Canada, United States and, 4294, 4298
Construction, programme of nations, 4301
Correspondence with Imperial Government, 4408, 4413, 4503
Demobilization, 4299
Estimates, how considered, 4380, 4411
Halifax and Esquimalt depots, 4296-7, 4307, 4390, 4394
Naval college, graduates, 4562
Naval conference of 1921, 4300
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," 4292-3. See also that title
Salaries of Dept., 4409
Ship construction, material, ques. 1114
Statement by Minister, 707

Navigation, aid and protection of, 2115
Schools of, 1612
St. Lawrence River—Ile d'Orleans, 3295

Navigation Rates. See Railway Act Amdt.

Navy, ques. 540. See also debates under Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Naval Service
Jellicoe, Admiral, 11. See also that title
Ships from Great Britain, 4413

Navy League of Canada, ques. 802

Nesbitt, Mr. E. W. (North Oxford)
Chairman, Committee of the Whole, Rulings as, 1326
Unanimous consent for statement in Supply, 2379
Civil Service retirement, 3833
Colonial Investment and Loan, 3859
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3403
Demonstration farms, 2396

Nesbitt, Mr. E. W.—Con.
Eight-hour day, 376
Food and Drugs Bill, 958, 963, 1257-8
Franchise Bill, 1066
Fuel, transportation cost, 330
House of Commons staff, 4565-6
Income tax
Beneficiaries, 3243
Charities, 3247, 3312
Deficits and losses, 3240-1
Five per cent added, 3251-2
Indemnity of members, 3242
Returns, 3253-4
Stock dividends, 3239-40
Judges' salaries, 3851
Natural resources, oil leases, 3810-3
Naval service badges, 445-6
Newspaper postage rates, 3348
Pensions, 433
Widowed mother resident outside Canada, 4045
Returned soldiers, 528
Insurance, 4054-5
Report of Committee, 1082
Rural mail carriers, 4522
Senate staff, 4060
Soldier settlement, 2129-30, 2138-43
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Automobiles, 3599
Collection, method of, 3344-5
Prices, effect on, 3330
Steel and shipping merger, 1952-3
Western Assurance Company, 3860

Neuville Station, ques. 2721

Newfoundland
Cape Race light, 2117
Trade with, 4241, 4242, 4276-7

New Parliament Buildings. See Parliament Buildings

New York—Canadian publicity branch at, 1882

Newspaper Postage. See Post Office Act Amdt.

Newspapers. See also Newsprint; Post Office Act Amdt.; Press
Payments to for printing, ques. 1114
Propaganda, and, 4375

Newsprint
Control, ques. 588, ques. 2720
Controller, resignation of, ques. 315, ques. 589
Embargo, ques. 994
Exportation and embargo, 1358, ques. 1114

Newsprint—Con.
Legislation, inquiry as to, 3227
Statement of Finance Minister, 2967
Supply, 2893

News Service, ques. 414, 4532

Nichols, Mr. M. E., ques. 1118

Nicholson, Mr. George B. (East Algoma)
Board of Commerce, Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4483
Budget, 2796. Liberals and free trade, 2796; congratulations to Minister of Finance—luxury tax—Mr. Fielding's amendment, 2797; contradictory tariff policies of members of Opposition, 2798; forty years' tariff policy of Government side, 2799; articles that would be duty-free under proposed King-Crerar government, 2801; personal position on fiscal questions, 2802; tariff and cost of living, 2803; Hon. E. C. Drury and others on cost of food production—development of natural resources, 2804; British fiscal policy—Mr. Crerar criticised, 2805; Timiskaming by-election and One Big Union, 2807; class prejudice and Bolshevism, 2808
Franchise Bill
Advance and proxy voting, 1163
Aliens—certificate, 2075, 2094
Deposit, 1094
Grand Trunk strike of 1910, and pensions, 1132
Income tax, 3476
Aliens in Canada, 3250-1
Errors in returns, 3302
Five per cent added, 3252
"Householders," 3249, 3315
Indemnity of members, 4093
Indians—Gordon's Reserve school, 3271
Industrial disputes, 1976-80, 2193-8
Military training, 3711
Militia, Cadet service, 3711
Newspaper postage, 3758
Opium and Drug Bill, 1755
Race track betting, 3429
Returned soldiers, 534
Pensions, 535
Widowed mother, 4042, 4052
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Boats, canoes, etc., 3590-1
Changes—when to come into effect, 3608
Collection, method of, 3474
Machinery for collection, 3324

Nile Voyageurs, 3857

"Niobe" and "Rainbow," 4293, 4297, 4401. See also Ballantyne, Hon. Mr., Naval Affairs

North Bay, 3160
Canadian Northern right-of-way and, ques. 3619

North Lake, 3159

North Sydney Harbour, 875, 2186, 3493-4

Northwest Game Act Amdt. 1r., 2892; 2r., com., 3r., 3105-6

Northwest Mounted Police. See Royal Canadian

Northwest Territories, administration of, 3280

Notices of Motion, inquiry as to, 2012

Notices, publication of in Canada Gazette, ques. 2179

Nova Scotia Steel Company. See Pictou Harbour

Noxious Weeds, 3171. See also Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Oaths of Office Bill, 1

Oats, 565. See Canada Grain Act

O'Connor, Mr. W. F., K.C., ques. 3618. See also Board of Commerce

Oil
Canada's resources, 331. See also Mines

Old Age. See Government annuities

Oleomargarine, ques. 543, 1010, ques. 1117
Butter, and, food values, ques. 2720
Imports, 597, 604, 606, 612
Regulations, ques. 1627

Oleomargarine Act Amendment Bill. Res. 1405, 1781, 1840; 1r., 1877; 2r., 1968; com., 1968; 3r., 1971

Oliver-St. Paul de Métis Railway, 344, 871

O'Meara, Mr., 792-3, 4038

One Big Union, ques. 409, 2807, 2897, 3039

Ontario
Highways—contribution to, 1046
Immigration, and, 1012

Opium, 24, 141
Convention (International). See debate on Opium and Drug Bill

Opium and Drug Bill. Res. 557; 1r., 562; 2r., 1621, 1629; com. 1632, 1744; 3r., 1900; Senate amdts., 3081

Orange order, 249, 285

Oranges and Figs grown in the open in British Columbia, 1016

Orders in Council. See also War Measures; Coal operations
Employment offices, 3087
Legislation and Government by, 31, 38, 177, 2018, 2020-1

Orientals
Canada, in, 825
Vote, and, See Dominion Franchise

Orleans, Island of, public works, ques. 810

Ostend, Allies Conference at, 2476, 2574

Ottawa
Agreement with Corporation, 557. See also Ottawa Agreement Bill
Connaught Rifle Range, 3728
Daly building, rental of, ques. 1200
Mackenzie Avenue, ques. 999
Public buildings, 3154
New, ques. 1002
Wellington street—public building, ques. 1002

Ottawa Agreement Bill. Res. 576, 557, 1r., 581; 2r., com., 988; 3r., 1047

Ottawa Improvement Commission. See debates under Ottawa Agreement

Ottawa Mint Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 615; 1r., 616; 2., com., 3r., 798

Otter, Sir William Dillon, ques. 673

Overdrafts, bank. See Special War Revenue

Oxford County, Ont., products, 1010

Pacaud, Mr. L. T. (Megantic)
Budget, 3020. The public burdens, 3020; tariff for revenue—programme of the Farmers' party, 3021; cost of living and development of natural resources—line of demarcation between the parties, 3022
Rural mail—Mr. Joseph Houle, ques. 2313

Palmer, Mr. K. H., ques. 1001

Paper, Manufacture of. See debates on Scientific Research
Newsprint. See that title

Papineau, Mr. Louis J. (Beauharnois)
Board of Commerce, M. 3863
Canadian Northern, total liability, ques. 2011

Pardee, Mr. Frederick F. (West Lambton)
Budget, 2740. Mr. Meighen and the new party—tariff revision, 2740; the consumer and taxes—the new taxes, 2741; address in Montreal, 2742; textile industries and protection, 2743; effect of new taxes upon population, 2744
Canadian Mercantile Marine, insurance, ques. 1511
Canadian National Railways
Deficit, 888-9
Fire insurance, ques. 1623
Withholding of information, 1663
Experimental and demonstration farms, 2382-4, 2388
Franchise Bill, 731
Advance polls, 1999-2001
Aliens certificate, 2063-70, 2225-6, 2230-2, 2238-9
Amdt. moved, 2226; neg. 2242
Election expenses, 1153
False statements made to affect election, 1065
Indians, 2056-7
Name not on list—oaths, 3878
Personation, etc., 1159
Plugging, 2350
Polling stations, additional, 1826
Provincial lists, 2350, 3883, 3889-93
Voters' lists, addition and elimination of names, 3911-2
Writ, nomination, election, delay, 1092
Grand Trunk Railway, strike of 1910, and pensions, 1553-6
Naturalization, 3916
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3938
Purchasing Commission, 1474
Roumanian orders, insurance, ques. 1739
Soldier settlement, 1684, 3192-3

Parent, Mr. George (Quebec West)
Barracks, 3725
Board of Commerce, ques. 408
Business profits tax, public utilities, 3230
By-election lists, ques. 310
Canadian National Railways, 3377
Census of 1911, ques., 2009
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill—M. for 3r., 3423
Food and Drugs Bill, 972-6
Franchise Bill
False statement to affect election, 1067
Payment of voters' expenses, 1065
Undue influence — "spiritual injury," 1158

Parent, Mr. George—Con.
Fuel situation, 331
Grand Trunk Railway — administration, 4173
Immigrants landing at Montreal and Quebec, 3226-8
Income tax, stocks below par, 3238
International boundary surveys, 3293
League of Nations, French occupation of German territory, 1046
Magdalen Islands, 649
Mail delivery—Monday holidays, 3354, 4522
Naturalization—certificate, 3917-8
Neuville station, ques. 2721
Peace, declaration of, ques. 801
Peace Treaties, 1059
Pilots, pensions, 4579-80
Public debt and revenue, ques. 592, 753
Quebec riots of 1918, 1202
Correspondence from sufferers, 1203-8
Shipbuilding, 649, 668
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4165-8
Special War Revenue Act Amdt.
Automobiles, 3598
Beer used to make vinegar, 3604
Furniture, 3575
Jewellery, 3580
Skis, 3570-1
Water-powers, surveys, etc., 3289-92

Pari-Mutuel machines, 3415

Parliament, Sessions of Extra session, 1919, cost of, ques. 543
Time of, 756

Parliament Buildings, 12, 76, 96, 106, 143, 221, 282, ques. 705
Commons chamber floor, ques. 2894
Cost, contractors, architects, ques. 311
Door contract, ques. 320
Fittings and Furniture, 1433, 3155
Gargoyles, 1433, 1493
Heating, plant, ques. 2896
King, the, message from, 1
Material supplied, ques. 311, ques. 705
Post Office, ques. 3294
Scaffolding, ques. 3079
Speeches on the occasion of their occupation, 2
Tower, alleged masonic records in, ques. 2894
Vote for in Supply, 1416

Parliamentary Counsel, 4587. See also, Dominion Franchise Bill

Parliamentary Library, 211, 1426
Librarian, 114. See also DeCelles, Mr.

Parliamentary Procedure. See also Deputy Speaker; Speaker; Douglas, Mr. J. M.; Morphy, Mr.; Nesbitt, Mr.; Steele, Mr.
Bill disposed of—question not to be raised during same session, 3426
Unanimous consent refused, 3423, 3821
3r., Industrial Disputes Bill, 2200

Parliamentary Restaurant, 47, 3094
Joint Committee, 437
Official list for, 2842-3

Parliamentary Secretaries, ques. 1036

Patent Medicines See Proprietary

Patent Record, 1886

Patents of Invention Bill 1r, 505

P. Burns Company, 582

Peace. See also League of Nations; Peace Conference; Peace Treaty
Declaration of, ques 801
Time and proclamation of, 231

Peace Conference
Economic Condition of the world, declaration on, 1888
Eight-hour day and, 335
Labour bureau, 4506-7

Peace Treaty, 12, 16, 96, 124
A potential cause of war, 927
Bulgaria, with, ques. 316, 463. See also Peace Treaty Bill
Res. and ministerial statement, 346
Senate concurrence, 1054
France—protection against Germany, 1059
Hungary and Turkey, 3983, 1060
Translation of, 3084

Peace Treaty Bill (Bulgaria) 1r., 949; 2r., com., 1057; 3r., 1061

Peat, 3806
Alfred plant, ques. 671

Peck, Lieut.-Col. Cyrus W., V.C., (Skeena)
Artillery, Canadian, in war, 3662
Empire Day adjournment, 2574
Fisheries, ques. 505
British Columbia salmon—trap fishing—parcelling out of fisheries—cannery licenses—hatcheries—Chief Inspector—monopoly opposed, 3525-33
Development, 854
Japanese and, 844-5, 3532
Fisheries
Naval Service and, 3532
Salmon hatcheries, 849-50, 3525

Peck, Lieut.-Col. Cyrus W., V.C.—Con.
Indians, British Columbia, 792-5, 3273
Agents, salaries, 3273
Enfranchisement, 4038-40
Militia—Active militia, allowances, 3662-8
Pensions, 434
Com. report—on m. to adopt, 3932
Amdt. 3933, 3952; withdrawn, 3956
M. for Special Com., 513
Resignation from Com., 2081
Returned men and fishing industry, 3932, 3938-40, 3956
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 390
Saar Valley Commission, 344
Senate, cost of, ques. 1118
Surveys, 3293
Uniforms, unlawful wearing of, 3417
Water-powers of British Columbia, ques. 1118
Winnipeg Grain Exchange, ques. 2005

Pecuniary Claims Convention, 3857

Pedlow, Mr. Isaac E. (South Renfrew)
Agriculture, problems and progress of, 2391-5
Armenians, 855
Audibility of debates, 461
Board of Commerce, 4494
Correspondence, 3426
O'Connor, Mr., reported resignation of, 1684
Civil servants with war record, 3129-30
Civil Service
Re-organization, 3741
Retirement, 4462-6
Demonstration farms, 2391
Food and Drugs Bill, 964-71, 1258-62
Prosecutions, 1263-4
Franchise Bill
Advance voting, and voting by mail, 1163-5
Contributions, 1196
Election officers, 1077
Telegraph, communications by, 1068-9
Income tax
Accounting period, 3306-8
Indemnity of members, 3243, 3306
Suggestions, 3124, 3128
Ireland, condition of, 856
Maple products, 1256
Mennonites, 2127, 2179
Mines Dept., resignations, 3804
Opium and Drug Bill, 1638-9, 1748, 1751-2
Pictou harbour, 2186
Postage stamps, used for inland revenue, 3737
Quorum, 964
Renfrew post office, 3151

Pedlow, Mr. Isaac E.—Con.
Slidemaster, retirement of, 4462
Soldier settlement, 2131
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3326
Candy, etc., 3592
Clocks and watches, 3574
Clothes, 3563-4
Collection, method of, 3470
Commodity tax, 3319, 3330
Importations, 3795
Jewellery, 3581
Lace, manufacture of, 3791-2
Licenses, 3606-7
Manufacturer who is also retailer, 3468
Overcoats, 3586
Prices, 3340
Purses, shopping bags, 3568
Pyjamas, 3567
Retail Merchants' Association, 3342
Returned soldier, amdt. (Mr. Lemieux) 3452
Sales taxes, 3612
Silk, 3563
Silk clothing, 3790
Silk waists, 3631-2
Socks, etc., 3567, 3791
Sporting goods, 3570
Stamp taxes, 3800-1
Stock transfers, 3626
Taxes, how paid, 3587-8
United States taxes, 3472

Pelletier, Mr. F. J. (Matane)
Cole, Mr. W. B., ques. 2893
Illustration farms, 2382-4, 2388
Industrial disputes, 1983
Masters and mates, 986
Oil, 3811-2
Sparrow, Dr. C. J., ques. 1897

Penitentiary Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 2842; 2r., 3409; Com., 3409; 3r., 3410

Penitentiaries. See also Justice; Labrie Brothers
Alberta, ques. 2777, 3855
Appointments pending, 568
Manitoba, ques. 2574
Portsmouth, vacancies in chief positions, 568
Purchasing agent, 3840, 3854
Saskatchewan, ques. 2574
Stoneham, case, 568

Pensions, ques. 993, ques. 994. See also Pensions and Re-establishment; Pensions Act
Board of Commissioners, 614
Employees, ques. 2895
Soldier organizations and, ques. 1116
Margeson, Mr. J. W., ques. 1036

Pensions—Con.
District offices, closing of, 710, 857
St. John, N.B., 1742
Militia. See Militia Pensions Act
Royal Canadian Mounted Police. See that title
Taxation of, 1895
Widow and children, ques. 920
Widowed mothers, res. (Mr. Power) 427. See also Pensions Act

Pensions and Re-establishment—Special Com.
Appointment of Com., resolutions in favour
Andrews, Mr., 511
Rowell, Mr., 614; agreed to, Com. appointed, 615, 799
Reports, 1199, 3801
Adoption of final report
Res., (Mr. Cronyn) in favour, 3922, agreed to, 3957
Amdt. (Mr. Peck) subsidies to fishermen, 3932-3; withdrawn, 3956
Printing, 3822, 4321
Recommendations not embodied in Bill, how to be carried into effect; inquiry answered by Prime Minister, 4504
Resignations
Lang, Mr., (reported) 1085
Peck, Mr., 2081

Pensions Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 3864; 3959; 1r., 3961; 2r., Com., 4041; 3r., 4053
Additional pension, 4048
Drafting, 4041
Pensioner resident outside Canada, 4044-52
Widowed mother, 4041-50

Permanent Force. See Militia

Peterborough
Government Employees, ques. 542
Postmaster, ques., 342

Petroleum and Naphtha Inspection Amdt. Bill. Res. 1573, 1762; 1r., 1762; 2r., com., 3r., 1916

Phosphorus, 356

Picard, Mr. Elzear, ques. 993

Pictou, East River lock, ques. 1119

Pictou Harbour Bill. Res. 1945, 2184; 1r., 2190; 2r., 3491; com., 3491; 3r., 3494

Pigs, Feeding of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Pilotage, 1839, 2119, 4579. See also Canada Shipping Act
St. John, 2119

Placer Mining. See Yukon

Police. See Royal Canadian

Political Campaign Funds, 1063-4. See also Dominion Franchise; Assiniboia
M. (Mr. Burnham) prohibiting, 1216

Pollution of boundary waters, 3552

Ponton, Mr. G., ques. 341

Popular Unrest, 22, 63, 816, 1145

Population
Agricultural and industrial, 191, ques. 1002
And taxation, 3297

Port Arthur
Board of Trade—vessel rates, resolution, 1733
Canadian National Railway terminals, ques. 2012
Fort William, and, elevators, ques. 1358

Port Hood, 3159

Port Maitland, 4579

Portage la Prairie public building, 3156

Portal Immigration hall, ques. 674

Porter, Mr. Arthur S., dismissal of, 568

Ports, tax on ships arriving in, 2253

Postal Inspection—Bagot Co., ques., 2721

Postmaster General—Senate, member of, 3734. See also Blondin, Hon. Mr.

Post Office. See also Civil Service; Mail Carriers;
For individual post offices see their titles
Bilingual stamps, ques. 314
Department
Estimates, supplementary, 4518
Letter carriers, 1231, 1276
Classification, 345, 1231, 3424
Salaries and threatened strike, 2670, 3424, 3623-4
Toronto, 345
Magazines, postage rate on, ques. 1898
Money parcel ($50,000) lost, ques. 412
Offices in cities, province of Quebec, ques. 413
Parcel post—Dr. Michel Fiset, 2015
Parliament, hours of, ques. 3294
Rural mail carriers, ques. 414, ques. 506, ques. 591, 1233, 1282-3, 4522. See also Rural Mail

Post Office Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 2184; 3346; 1r., 3358; 2r., com., 3732; 3r., 3768. Senate amdts. 4263
Free matter, 3761
Newspapers and periodicals, 3745
Registration fee, 3732

Post Office and Customs Depts.
Rumoured investigation by United States firm, 3491, 3623

Potatoes.
Bags, 4562
Exportation of, ques. 1360

Poultry, Feeding of. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Power, Mr. Charles G. (South Quebec)
Board of Commerce, M. for abolition, 1146, 1150
Canadian Alpine Club, 3288
Canadian Currency on United States lines of Canadian National Railways, ques. 341
Canadian Forestry Association, 3285
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 644-5
"Canadian Recruit," wreck of, 648
"Canadian Sealer," Magdalen Islands trip, 649
Steamers. See also, under this title, Icebreakers
Crews, uniforms, ques. 1003
"Lady Grey" ques. 1361
Canadian National Railways, cargo for ships, 915
Champlain market, 2015
Court martial procedure, ques. 1359
Federal Bureau of Education, 1388
Firearms licenses, 3411-2
Franchise Bill, 777
Aliens—certificate, 2239
Bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, 1157-9
Canada Temperance Act, 2053-4
Disqualification, returned soldiers exempted from, 1811, 1820-4
"Elector," how defined, 1916-8
Executory contracts void, 781
Interpretation, 1991
"Candidate," 1944
Judges, revising officers, 722
Language of voter, 1997
Non-residents and non-electors, 786
Notices—handbills, 1169
Polling stations, additional, 1826-7
Polls, hours to be open, 1923-4
Returning officers, 1583-4, 1596

Power, Mr. Charles G.—Con.
Franchise Bill—Con.
Voters' lists, use of for advertising, 2319-20
French speeches in House, translation of, 702
Grain trade, 661
Grosse Isle, ques. 1003
Gulf of St. Lawrence Trading Company, 4285
Icebreakers, 1602-5. See also, under this title, Steamers
"Montcalm," 1606-7
Uniforms of men on, 1603-4
Indemnity of members, 1281, 4087
Indians—Sioux, 3267
Magdalen Islands-Belle Isle, 1605
Militia Department
Classification of employees, ques. 3358
Permanent appointments, ques. 2079
Newsprint, 3227
Peace treaties—Anatolia and Smyrna, 3984
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3946
Drafting of Bill, 4041
Offices, rumoured closing of, 710
Taxation of pensions, 1895
Widowed mother, 427, 436, 4041, 4051
Amdt. ruled out of order, 4052
Profiteering, etc., 1146
Quebec
Ancient fortifications, 421, 427
Arsenal employees, ques. 1898
Bridge, ques. 1116, ques. 1229
Marine storehouse, ques. 316
Port, grain trade, 858
Riots of 1918, 1210
Returned soldiers, res. (Mr. Andrews) for Special Com., 523
Shipbuilding, 661, 915
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, ques. 2311
Soldier Settlement, 2141-7, 2151, 3222-3
Vocational training and, 3223
Spirit Lake, 2398-9
Stewart farm, 3223

Prairie Provinces
Natural Resources, ques. 995, 1047, ques. 1461, 3049, 3292

Press, The, 4532. See also Newsprint; Post Office; Censorship
Murray, Mr. G. M. and the, 2753

Press Conference. See Imperial

Press Gallery Reporters, 3747, 3750, 4411, 4503

Prevost, Mr. Jules E. (Terrebonne)
Automobiles, smuggled, ques. 807, ques. 1001

Prevost, Mr. Jules E.—Con.
Board of Commerce, ques. 996
Budget, 2771. Government and commissions, 2771; profits and cost of living—Board of Commerce, 2772; increases in expenditure—Liberal party and tariff revision, 2773; manufacturing industries Union Government, 2774; govts. made for the people, 2775
Civil Service Classification, ques. 2413
Customs war tax, ques. 1001
Dominion revenues, ques. 1001

Price Brothers. See Board of Commerce; Newsprint

Prime Minister, absence, illness, return, 137. See also Borden, Sir Robert Denial by Leader of Opposition of statement attributed to him, 80
Effect of absence on parliamentary government, 129
Head of Department, 4456
Illness, 63, 158
Portfolio, and, 4456
Return, inquiry concerning, 2126
Enters the House, 2316

Prime Ministers of Great Britain and Canada, correspondence, 3685

Pringle, Mr. R. A., resignation as Newsprint Controller, ques. 315, ques. 589. See also Newsprint

Printing
Dept. of Public, reorganization, 2968
Southam Press, ques. 4096

Printing Bureau, 84, ques. 320, 3742. See also Civil Service
Alleged Sunday work at, 4020
Commission of newspaper men and, ques. 1114
Dismissals, ques. 672
Wolff, Mr.—ques. 2005
Employees
Nationality of, ques. 2005
Retirement of, 545
Linotypes, ques. 670

Printing, Joint Committee, 2625
French-speaking member of Editorial Board necessary, 4503
Reports, 4257, 4321, 4504

Printing Plants, departmental, ques. 1738

Prisoners
Paroled, ques. 2005
Political, general amnesty to, 1790

Private Bills
Committee, 305, 2311
Discussed
Canada Security Assurance Company, 1103
Colonial Investment and Loan Company, 3859
Northwest Route, Limited, 3861
Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation, 583
T. Eaton Life Insurance Company, 669
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 585
Western Assurance Company, 3860

Privileges and Elections, Com., 305

Privy Council
Board of Commerce and, 3685
Jurisdiction of, 2389. See Supreme Court Act Amdt.

Profiteering, by farmers, alleged, 3401

Prohibition, 44, 71, 102
As a principle, 1218, 1225, 1228
Canada Temperance Act, ques. 807
Taxes on liquors. See Inland Revenue; Special War Revenue

Promissory Notes, tax on. See Special War Revenue

Proportional Representation, 15, ques. 803

Proprietary Medicines. See also Food and Drugs; Opium and Drug; Special War Revenue
Taxes on, ques. 1036, 2487, 3542

Prorogation, 4589

Proulx, Mr. Edmond (Prescott)
Arrest or summoning of person outside province, 3417-8
Civil Service classification, 547
Desjardins, Mr. Alphonse, 3093
Eight-hour day, 337
Food and Drugs Bill, 1266-8
Franchise Bill
Assistant Chief Electoral Officer, 1514
Chief Electoral Officer, 1512
Contributions, 781
Disqualification of candidates, 1088
Election expenses, 1154
Five-year term for Parliament, 1091
Ontario lists, 3882
Polls—fourteenth day, etc, 1101
Proclamations, 1082
Language of publication, 1080, 1829, 2267
Stamp to be made, 1078
House of Commons staff, 1038

Proulx, Mr. Edmond—Con.
Income tax, 3122-7
Indemnity of members, 3096, 3853-4, 4448
M. to strike out clauses, 4459
Judges' salaries, 3852-4, 4337, 4421
M. for six months' hoist of Bill, 4417
Maple products, 1254
Parliament Buildings, 1418-21- 1434
Parliamentary restaurant, 3096
Race track betting, 3430-2
Rural mail, 1283, 4524-5
Salaries of Ministers, 4430
Soldier settlement, 2129-35
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3577
Dresses, 3586-7
Excise and sales taxes, 3453
Musical instruments, 3629
Silk waists, 3632

Provincial Salaries and Indemnities, Taxation of, ques. 3490

Public Accounts Committee, 306-7, 1838, 4321

Public Debt, ques. 592, 753. See also Finance

Public Information Dept., ques. 1000, ques. 1740, 2639, 2999
Nichols, Mr. M. E., ques., 1118

Public Ownership, 93, 204. See also debates under Canadian National Railways; Grand Trunk Business profits tax. See that title
Electricity, 3113-7
Railways, of, 100

Public Works, 1417. For individual works see their titles
Agreement with Ottawa city, 557
Architectural and Engineering Branch, ques. 587
Canals. See that title
Department, 1416
Minister, 557
Tache, Mr. C. E., superannuation, ques. 3490

Pulp and Paper. See also Customs Act; Newsprint
Pulpwood, 148, 2552

Purchasing Commission, 44, 257, ques. 591, 3718, 3854-5, 4580
Res. to establish Purchasing Board, 1231, 1467

Pure Foods Bill, 3396

Putman, Mr., and Civil Service Commission, ques. 2414

Quarantine, 3554
Grosse Isle, ques. 1003
Sydney, 3148

Quebec (City)
Arsenal, employees, ques. 1898, ques. 3862
Board of Trade and Retail Merchants' Association—proposed taxes, 3457-8
Vessel rates, 1734
Champlain market, 2015
Fortifications, ancient, 421
Mail deliveries, ques. 591
Marine storehouse, ques. 316
Riots of 1918, M. (Mr. Parent) for papers, 1202

Quebec (Port) 650, 654-5, 661
Government Ships, cargoes for, 915
Grain shipments, 858
Harbour Commission, steam dredge, ques. 999
Immigrants landing at, 3226-8

Quebec (Province)
Canadian Northern lands in, ques. 2008
"Hour" of, 61, 67, 90, 143, 206
Military districts in, ques. 1035
People stay on the land, 94
Post offices in cities, ques. 413
Resources—timber, water-powers, 693
Tolerance, 90
Union government and, 83

Quebec and Saguenay Railway, ques. 506, ques. 1120; ques. 3619
Construction and operation, ques. 672
Freight rates, ques. 589
St. Irénée, 3423

Quebec and Western Railway, ques. 411; ques. 412

Quebec Bridge, ques. 1116; ques. 1229

Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway, ques. 673, 4585

Quebec, Oriental and Atlantic Railway, ques. 411; ques. 412; ques. 507

Questions and Answers. See also House of Commons
Inquiry as to, 949, 2126
Oral answers to, 1623
Not answered, 753, 949
Canadian Government Merchant Marine—information withheld, 1649
Portion deleted, 1045

Questions Passed as Orders for Returns, 320, 344, 415, 510, 543, 591, 707, 811, 1004, 1037, 1121, 1201, 1231, 1362, 1464, 1511, 1628, 1741, 1788, 1899, 2012, 2080, 2183, 2313, 2417, 2519,, 4096
Status of, 1743

Race Track Betting. See Criminal Code
Legislation—Statement of Rev. Dr. Speer, 3490, 3557

Radial Railways—Ontario and Hydro-electric, 4172

Railway Act Amendment Bills.
1. Fuel Supply. Res. 4324; 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 4331. Senate amdts. 4506
2. Inland and Coastwise Shipping. 1r., 160; 2r., 1707; debate adjourned, 1738
3. Provincial Jurisdiction. 1r., 2412; 2r., 3086; com., 3634; 3r., 3636

Railway Commission.
Business done from date of establishment, statement of, 1707
Fort William elevators, 565
Vessels and, 160, ques., 2414, ques., 2777

Railways. See also Canadian Railway War Board. For individual railways see their titles.
Cars, shortage, ques. 319, 1312
Canadian cars in United States, 880, ques. 997, 1114
Official, use of by Ministers, ques. 409
Transcontinental, ques. 999
Rates, 200, ques. 1036
Parliament and, 4188
Reports of, inquiry concerning, 1290
United States, freight from for Canada prepaid, 1789, 1893

Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines, 880, 2378
Com. appointed, 305

"Rainbow." See Ballantyne, Hon. Mr.; Naval Defence; "Niobe"

Rape, attempted, 2841

Recall, the, 1180, 2023. See also Dominion Franchise Bill
Amdt. (Mr. Tweedie) 2025; neg. 2052
Dominion Council of Agriculture, platform on, 2052

Re-cleaned Screenings, ques. 507, 1009. See also Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Elevators

Reconstruction, 24. See also Demobilization; Pensions; Soldiers Civil Re-establishment; Soldier Settlement

Redman, Mr. Daniel Lee (East Calgary)
Badges for returned men, 443
Eight-hour day, 381
Natural Resources development, 1026
Pensions—widowed mothers, 429
Recall, the, 2026

Re-establishment. See also Demobilization Pension; Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment; Soldier Settlement
Federal emergency fund, ques. 998
Special Com.; Res. (Mr. Rowell) moved, 614; agreed to, 615

Registration Fee. See Post Office Act

Registration of Shipping, 1614, 2108

Reid, Hon. John D. (Minister of Railways and Canals and acting Minister of Public Works)
Banff National park, 3770, 3777
Bridges
Burlington Canal, 3777
Government policy concerning, 3773-9
Canadian freight and United States railways, 1789
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 652
Canadian National Railways
Appointments—how made, 3139-40
Branches and extensions, East and West
Politics and, 4194, 4222
East
Gaspé, 4247-9
Inverness, 4249
Lockeport, 4247-9
Newcastle-Tracdie, 4247-9
Nova Scotia, 3378
Westville-St. John, 4248
West, 3376-82, 3385-7, 4212, 4232
Brudenheim, 885, 4250
Distances, 3390
Land ownership, 3387
Willow Bunch — Wood Mountain, 3380-1, 3388
"Canadian Government Railways" defined, 4219
Canadian National Railway Company, 345
Canadian Northern Railway, 3377, 3390
Coal purchases, 2381
Contracts, details, 4251-6
Damage claims, 887
Deficits, 880, 886, 888
Demurrage "bunched cars," 4230
Directorate, 4190

Reid, Hon. John D.—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Equipment, 4191
Estimates discussion of, 4249-50
Grand Trunk loans, 881. See also, under this title, Grand Trunk
Hudson Bay Railway, 4233
Insurance, 4257
Intercolonial
Moncton office, 4268
Operation, 4247
Pension fund, 4248
Mackenzie and Mann, interest in subsidiaries, 4191
Maine Central connection, 3376
Management, 4189
Ministerial statement, 859
Prince Edward Island Railway, 891-2
Car ferry, 4246
Standardization of railway, 4247
Public ownership, 4190
Rates, 4187
Reports of operations, 3086
Stations—shelters, 891
Subsidiaries, 3389
Supplies, contracts for, 4193
Taxation of, 3393
Ties—list of contracts, 4251
Townsites, 4191
Withholding of information justified, 1652-7, 1674, 1684
Canadian National Railways Bill, 2842, 3085, 3376-94, 4187-95
Cars. See under this title, Railways
Capilano bridge, 3778
Carvill, Mr. George, 4226-8
Civil Service Commission, 3139
Contracts signed by Government before submission to House, 1048
Dredging, 3781-90
Nova Scotia, 3786
Drill halls, 3148
Dry docks, 4567-72, 4573
Experimental farms, 3156-8
Farm labour, 1227
Flags for public buildings, 3158
Fort Frances public building, 3152
Fort William elevators—coarse grain shipments, 565
Graham's Run, 3159
Granby public building, 3150
Grand Etang bridge, 3780
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition, 1113, 1311-8, 1435-60, 1486-1510
Administration, 4173
Branch lines, 1314-8
Correspondence, 1235-53
Hinton, Mr. W. P., 1311-2
Loan, 4579

Reid, Hon. John D.—Con.
Grand Trunk Railway acquisition—Con.
London-Trafalgar square office, 1251
Montreal-Toronto line, 1491
Shareholders, list of, 3426-7
Strike of 1910, 1542
Grosse Isle, 3151
Hamilton
Postal station, 3152
Post office, 3151
Hanna, Mr. D. B.
Cahill, Mr., and, 2380
Canada Steamships, Limited, and, 1743
Highways Act, contribution to Ontario, 1047
Hull and Montreal highways, 1113
Hydro-Electric and Ontario Radial railway, 4172
Isle Verte, 3160
Kamloops public building, 3156
Kingsville public building, 3153
Lachine lock bridge, 4236
Lotbinière and Megantic Railway, 950, 4585
Militia, Permanent force, barracks, 4579
Narrows, the, 3159
National parks, 3769-70
North Bay, shore protection, 3160
North Lake harbour, 3159
Oliver-St. Paul de Metis Railway, 344, 871
Ottawa buildings, fittings and furniture, 3154
Ottawa city, agreement with, 577-81, 988-92
Ottawa River conservation, 3779
Parliament Buildings, 1418-34, 3153
Port Hood wharf, 3159
Port Maitland, 4579
Portage la Prairie public building, 3156
Postage stamps for inland revenue, 3737
Post Office Dept., 3736-7
Public buildings, none new, 3147-8
Public works, resident engineers, 3787
Purchasing Commission, 4580-2
Question—complaint of unsatisfactory answer, 1047
Questions, inquiry as to, 2126, 2416
Railway Act Amdt. (Provincial Jurisdiction) 2412-13, 3634-6
Railway Mail Service, 4212
Railway rates, 864
Railways. See also, under this title, Canadian National; Grand Trunk
Car shortage, 881-5, 1114
Proposed discussion in Railway Com., 885
Reports of, 1290
Taxation of profits, 865
Renfrew post office, 3151
Royal Military College, 3152-3

Reid, Hon. John D.—Con.
St. Anne bridge, 3773-4
St. John
Harbour, 4567
Public buildings, 3148-9
Scammel, Mr. J. D., 3785
Shenacadie wharf, 3159
Shipbuilding, 652
Spirit River wheat shipments, 566
Steel cabinets, 3155
Sydney Quarantine station, 3148
Toronto
Postal station, 3155-6
Union station, 3226
Vancouver public buildings, 3156
Williams Head quarantine, 3156

Reid, Mr. John F. (Mackenzie)
Bridges, 3770
Budget, 2744. Mr. Edwards and United Grain Growers, 2744; Mr. Elkin and tariff, 2745; business methods of United Grain Growers—export market a necessity, 2746; duties collected in Canada and in the United States—railways in Canada and in Great Britain, 2747; Mr. Stevens and the farmers, 2748; Mr. Stacey and duty on apples, 2749; difficulties faced by Minister of Finance—income, luxury and excise taxes, 2750; life insurance for returned soldiers—railways—immigration, 2751; Hudson Bay railway—Mr. G. M. Murray and the press, 2753
Campaign funds, 1226
Canadian National Railways
Branch lines, 3384
Western extensions, 4232
Civil Service bonus, 1281
Commercial feeding stuffs, 3174
Duties on textile imports, ques. 1899
Experimental farms, 2398
Firearms licenses, 3414-5
Food and Drugs Bill, 1635
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2100
Disqualification
Charitable support, those receiving, 1817
Election expenses, 1932
Recall, the, 2041
"Rural polling division," 1993
Grand Trunk Railway, 1459
Newspaper postage, 3751
Returned soldiers, tubercular, ques. 2005
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4153
Soldier Settlement, 1687-8, 2130, 2137-8
Cattle branding, 1700

Reid, Mr. John F.—Con.
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Firearms, 3793
Proprietary medicines, 3794
Wheat meal, 3795
Steamship subsidies, 4282
Vessel rates, proposed regulation of, 1721, 1734-5

Religious Orders from France, 231, 261

Repatriation Committee. See Pensions

Reports tabled, 1199, 1229, 1289, 1357, 1405, 1460, 1573, 1738, 2311, 2571, 2625, 2840, 3225, 4258, 4502

Restaurant Parliamentary. See Parliamentary

Restigouche, Interprovincial bridge, ques. 411

Retail Merchants' Association of Canada
Special War Revenue, 3342
Vessel rates, 1717

Retirement. See Civil Service

Returned Soldiers, 46, 68. See also Pensions; Re-establishment; Soldier Settlement; Civil Service; Dominion Lands
Badges, 437-47
Cash Gratuities, ministerial statement, 1082
Federal emergency fund, ques. 2182
Fishery officers at Isle Madame, ques. 3294
Fishing industry and, 531, 855. See also Fisheries
Franchise—exemption from disqualification, 1811, 1820
Life insurance, 519, 524. See also State Insurance
Militia Department appointments, ques. 2079, ques. 3358
Saar Valley Commission and, 344
Special War Revenue—taxation and, amdt. (Mr. Lemieux) 3446
Tubercular, treatment of, ques. 2005
Unauthorized wearing of buttons, 4020
University students, 519
Vocational training, 534
War veterans, petitions from, 505
Work for at Victoria—shipbuilding, 4584

Returns
Delayed, 459
Inquiry for, 618, 857, 3226, 4258, 3769

Revenue Bills
1. Business Profits War Tax Act, 1917, Amdt. Bill. Res. 3111; 1r., 3117; 2r., com., 3229; 3r., 3237
2. Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill. Res., 3110; 1r., 3111; 2r., com., 3174; 3r., 3229
3. Income War Tax, 1917, Amdt. Bill. Res. 3117; 1r., 3128; 2r., com., 3237, 3296, 4288; 3r., 4289
4. Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 3494; 1r., 3498; 2r., com., 3815; 3r., 3821. Senate amdts. 4263
5. Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 3316; 3434; 3561; 1r., 3634; 2r., com., 3790; 3r., 4289. Senate amdts. 4505

Revenue and Expenditure. See Budget and debates thereon

Rhodes, Hon. Edgar N. (Cumberland) See Speaker

Richardson, Mr. Robert L. (Springfield)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 200. Freight rates, 200; Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, effect of rate increases, 201; Grand Trunk Pacific, 202; public ownership of railways, 204; Union Government, Quebec and her "hour," 206; Hon. Mr. Crerar, 207; Liberals and the tariff, 208
Board of Commerce, 1947
Correspondence, 3427
Murdock, Mr., letter of, 4488
Canadian National Railways, 4199-4204; public ownership — Transcontinental freight rates increase—no political influence, 4199-4202
Rates, 1448
Conner, Mr. James, dismissal of, 415, 419
Electricity, public ownership, 3117
Franchise Bill—advance polls, 1934
Franking privilege, 3767
French speeches, translation of, 702
Grand Trunk Railway, 1447, 1499
Income tax, charities, 3313
Morning sittings, 2723
National parks and game preserves, 3287
Newspaper postage, 3746-60
Press, the, and, 3752-3
Newsprint, price, 2828
Railway rates, 1499
Rural mail, 4524
Steel and shipping merger, 1945-8, 1966
Vote—late in entering Chamber, 4180

Rifle Ranges. See Militia

Rimouski
British mails and, 4530-2

Rinfret, Mr. Fernand (St. James)
Budget, 2756. Fresh mandate from the people—election of 1917—by-elections, 2756; race prejudice and class party—cost of living—farmers and prices, 2757; profiteering, 2758; the new taxes, 2759; United States luxury tax how imposed—criticism of public expenditure, 2760; St. James by-election—Mr. Meighen's address, 2761; Liberal party and tariff—good understanding with English-speaking citizens desired, 2762; Quebec a tolerant province—the prosperity desired, 2763
Cressé, Mr. L. G. A., ques, 4502
Customs duties—basis of estimates, ques. 1788
Election and introduction, 1357
Franchise Bill
Poll, hours to be open, 1926
Proclamation—language of publication, 2278, 2282, 2291-2
French treaty, ques. 1788
German and Austrian imports, ques. 2416, ques. 3359
Imports into Canada, ques. 2182
Insurance companies, mutual, taxation of, 2012, 2080
Naval Service, additional appropriation of $1,700,000, 4391-2
Newspaper postage, 3750-1
Press gallery, 3750
Roumania and Greece, advances to, ques. 3488
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Beer, 3605
Excise and sales tax, 3335
Medals, gold, 3585
Musical instruments, 3595-6, 3628
Proprietary medicines, 3601

Rivière du Loup
Drill hall, 3726-7
Shops, ques. 315, ques. 801
Engine repairs, ques. 3079

Robb, Mr. James A. (Chateauguay-Huntingdon)
Alcohol, 3816-7
Apple barrels, 2018-21
Banff national park, 3769
Bankruptcy Bill, 3257
Budget debate, arrangements for, 2839-40, 2951
Business profits tax, 3234-7

Robb, Mr. James A.—Con.
Canadian National Railways
Extensions, 3388
Land ownership in, 3387
Mails, 3377
Canadian Wheat Board, 4120-5, 4134, 4342-57
Oats, effect on, 4357
Car shortage, 880-3
Coal operations director, 3179, 3367
Commercial feeding stuffs, 1290, 3164-5, 3405-7
Federal Bureau of Education, 1396
Fiset, Dr. Michel, 2015
Food adulteration, 3557
Fort William elevators, 565
Franchise Bill, election expenses, 1155
Grading export cheese and butter, 605
Grain and grain products in freight cars, ques., 1035
Grand Trunk Railway, 1311-2
Branch lines, 1316-20
Hinton, Mr. W. P., 1311
Icebreakers, 1599
Immigrants from United States, ques. 1463
Income tax
Charities, 3241-6
Mistakes made in good faith, 3302-3
Penalties, 3254
Residence or investments outside Canada, 3249-51
Indian affairs estimates, 3265-6
Indians—enfranchisement, 4029-37
Live stock shipments inspection, 1614-5
Malt, 3818
Oleomargarine, 1782, 1970
Purchasing Board, 1468-70
Railway mail service, 4212
Retirement of members of public service, 3836
Returned soldiers' insurance, 4055
St. Lawrence route, insurance, 4515
Seed Grain advances, 3286-7
Shipbuilding
Cattle shippers, and, 910
"Where is the money to come from?" 915
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 3574
Bank overdrafts, 3799
Duties paid before changes, 3624
Real estate sales, 3796
Taxes, how paid, 3587
Steel and Shipping Merger, 1966
Sugar embargo, 3226
Welland canal, ques. 1200
Western parks roads, 3283

Robson, Judge H. A. See Board of Commerce

Ross, Mr. Duncan C. (West Middlesex)
Automobile imports and excise, ques. 591
Chartered banks, ques. 591
Egg imports and exports, ques. 1898
Food and Drugs, 968, 975
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 3873-4
Aliens—certificate, 2222-3, 2229-31
Ballot and counterfoil, 1105
Deputy returning officers, lists of, 1096-7
Disqualification — charitable support, those receiving, 1819
Forms, 3871-3
Liquor at elections, 1108
Ontario law and lists, 3880-92
Polling divisions, 1519
Returning officers, 1525-8
Voters' lists, provincial, 2419-27, 2438
Amdt., suggested, 2321
Voting on certificate, 1098-1100
Income tax, losses, 3241
Indians
Medical attendance, 3275-6
Munsees reserve, 3277
Rural credits, ques. 589
Soldier Settlement, 3193-4

Ross Rifle Factory, ques. 1898, ques. 2721, 3722
Sale to Enterprise Foundry, ques. 2415

Roumania,
Advances to, ques. 318, 3027
Bonds, interest on, ques. 3488
Purchases by, ques. 2414
Insurance on, ques. 1739
Ports of shipment, ques. 343
Shipments, ques. 312

Round Robin, 2967

Rowell, Hon. N. W. (President of the Privy Council and Minister of Public Health)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 254. Reply to Mr. Murphy, 254; Lake Superior Corporation, 256; War Purchasing Commission — appointments of members to Senate, 257; Secretarial fund, 258; allegation of evading tax, 260; religious orders from France, 261; Mr. Rowell and his colleagues, 262; Women's Conference, 262; Health Department—Union Government, 263
British mails, 4532
Budget, 2997. Answer to Mr. Mackenzie King—Sir Thomas White's administration of finances—congratulations to Minister of Finance, 2997; public debt—expenditure, 2998; Department

Rowell, Hon. N. W.—Con.
Budget—Con.
of Public Information and the Daily Record, 2999; Canadian Official Record, Bureau of Information, New York, 3000; "advances unaccounted for," 3001; Civil Service appointments, number of, 3005; decreasing staffs in the Civil Service, 3006; expenditure and income estimated, 3007; public debt, inflation, 3008; Government's record in the war—Canada in a higher position than ever before—Mr. Fielding's amdt. 3009; Liberal Unionists' tariff record—tariff reduction, 3010; general election and franchise, 3011; Union Government's progressive measures—a tariff policy fair to all, 3012
Bulgaria. See, under this title, Peace Treaty
Business of the House, private members' business, 539
Canada's national status, 498. See also, under this title, League of Nations; Peace Treaty
Empire, in, 359
British connection maintained, 365
Canadian National Railways, mail contracts, 4530
Censorship, 396
Civil Service
Bonus, 1270-6, 3147, 3228
Classification, 548, 556, 1112, 3769, 3984
In force 1 April, 1919, 3142-7
Inside Service, 4019, 4172
Vote to pay increased salaries, 4546
Reduction of pay, 3137
Temporary employees, 3128-33
War record, civil servants with, 3129-31
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 1112, 3146
Senate amdts. 4056-60
Third reading, discussion, 3147
Colonial and Imperial Conference, 359
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 617
Bill withdrawn, 1290-1
Daughters of Canada, case of, 397
Distressed mariners, 2251-9, 2260-7, 3102-5, 4056
Edmonton post office, theft from, 923, 4520
Eight-hour day, 449-54
European distress, 4546
Food adulteration, 3557
Food and Drugs Bill, 582, 956-79, 1256-69, 1465
Food inspectors, Nova Scotia, 3539-40
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2073-5, 2220-3, 2229-30
Disqualification of candidates, 1087
Government annuities, 4528

Rowell, Hon. N. W.—Con.
Health department, 263, 3539-57
Honey adulteration, 582, 798, 2314-5
House of Commons staff, 4414, 4567
Housing, 3543-52
Construction, 3546
Immigration—medical inspection, 3555
Information service, 4543-4
International Joint Commission, 3986
International Labour Conference, 798
Labour Conference at Washington, 356
League of Nations, 349
Ames, Sir Herbert, statement by, 3971-84
Assembly, the, 351
Budget of, Canada's contribution, 3982, 4544
Canada's interests and representation, 498, 3982
Decisions, enforcement of, 3975-6
Disarmament, 3976
French occupation of German territory, 1046
Labour, 354
Peace, maintenance of, 351
Phosphorus for matches, 356
Self-governing Dominions' status, 350
United States Senate reservations, 357
Letter-carriers' salaries, 345, 1276, 2670, 4529
Threatened strike—Government's attitude, 1231-2, 3424, 3623
Maple products, 582, 796-7, 1254-6, 2366, 4020
Marine hospitals, 3552-4
Naval Service, additional appropriation, $1,700,000, 4388
News Service, 4532
Opium and Drug Bill, 557, 1621-2, 1629-49, 1702-7, 1745-61, 1900, 3081
Parcel post supervisor, 4530
Peace Treaty. See also, under this title, League of Nations
Bulgaria, 498, 1057-61
France—protection against Germany, 1059
Hungary and Turkey, 1059-60, 3983-4
Pensions and Re-establishment, 435
Special Com., 614, 752
Pensions district offices, rumoured closing of, 710, 857
Pollution of boundary waters, 3552
Postal employees' salaries, 2670, 4526-30. See also, under this title, Letter Carriers
Postmen. See, under this title, Letter Carriers
Printing Bureau
Economies in, 3006
Sunday work, 4020
Proprietary medicines, 3542

Rowell, Hon. N. W.—Con.
Purchasing Board, 1470-1, 1481-4
Quarantine—Tracadie, 3554
Regina library, 396
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 10, 387, 4021, 4547-8, 4575
Buildings, 3214, 4573
Distribution of force, 3207-8, 3214
Duties of the force, 3195
Expense—Details, 3204-6
Division of with Provincial Governments, 3203
Increased, 3209
H.R.H. Prince of Wales, Honorary Commandant, 398
Name, change of, 398
Pensions, 388, 391, 398, 3202
Permanent Militia Force and, 3209
Provincial Police and, 3195-6
Strikes and, 3200
Ticket-of-leave system and, 399
Rural mail carriers, 1233, 4525-6
St. John pension office, 1742
Services of Dominion troops overseas, resolution of British House of Commons, 1159
Shipbuilding, expenditure, how to be met, 918
Supply and the Budget, 918
Toronto Postal employees, threatened strike, 3424
Venereal diseases, 3556
Washington, Canadian representation at, 4536-41
M. (Mr. Fielding) in amdt. to supply, 2444, 2474

Roy, Mr. Gustave, ques. 1898, ques. 1899

Roy, Hon. Mr., and International Labour Conference, 3359

Royal Assent, 1165, 2259, 3634-5

Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 242, 4547
Barracks, 3214, 4572
Change of name of force, 398
Duncan, Mr. Walter and, ques. 1117, ques. 2720
H.R.H. Prince of Wales, Honorary Commandant, 398
Ministerial explanation in Supply, 3194-6, 3200-15
Pensions, 388, 397
Special Com. not to consider, 615

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Bills
1. Commissioner. Res. 387; 1r., 10; 2r., com., 395; 3r., 459
2. Pensions. Res. 3864, 3958; 1r., 3959; 2r., com., 3r., 4021

Royal Commission on Natural Resources, Trade and Legislation, ques. 4502

Royal Military College, 3152

Rural Credits, ques. 589

Rural Mail Carriers, ques. 414, ques. 591, 1233, 1282-3, 4522. See also, Post Office
Pontbriand-Robertsonville, ques. 2313
Routes, ques. 506

Russia
Icebreakers, sold to, 1599, 1602, 2106-7
Military expedition to, ques. 995
Trade with, 4322

Ruthenian-Greek Rite. See Juvenile Delinquent Act

St. Camille-Cabano proposed railway, ques. 589

St. Hermas postal service, ques. 412

St. James By-Election, 707

St. Jean D'Orleans Wharf, ques. 317

St. Joachim Postmaster, ques. 1121

St. John, N.B
Armoury, ques. 994
District pension office, 1742
Exhibition buildings, use by militia, ques. 2009
Harbour, 2189, 2985, 3492-93, 4567, 4573
Obstruction, 2118
Pilots, 2119
Public buildings, 3149

St. John River
Report of International Commission, ques. 1623
Water powers, ques. 674, 3290

St. John and Quebec Railway, ques. 508, ques. 1036

St. Julien, Battle of, Commemoration, 1357, 1510

St. Lawrence River
I'le d'Orleans, 3295
North shore municipalities, ques. 922, ques. 1116
Post offices, ques. 1116
Power development on, ques. 1120
Engineers, ques. 1230
Route and channel
Dredging, 1616
Ice conditions and icebreakers, 230, ques. 317, 856-8
Insurance, 4515

St. Lawrence River—Con.
Route and Channel—Con.
Navigation season, 916
Steamship service, 652

St. Louis, Mr. Horace and translation of Revised Statutes, 3082

St. Malo shops, ques. 3079, ques. 3618

St. Peter River
Floods, 889, ques. 1115
Work on, ques. 4019

St. Quentin and Theriault, N.B., catastrophe, 3080

St. Regis Indians, ques. 799

St. Romuald, ques. 2005

St. Valier Wharf, ques. 1231

St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. See Labrie

Ste. Anne Soldiers' hospital, ques. 588

Ste. Anne de Beaupre Wharf, ques. 506

Ste. Anne de Bellevue Military Hospital, ques. 1115

Ste. Famille Wharf, ques. 317, ques. 810

Ste. Rosalie-Bagot spur line, ques. 2009

Saar Valley Commission, 344, 3963, 3974. See also League of Nations

Saguenay River
Buoys, ques. 1000
Dredging, ques. 673

Sailors. See Canada Shipping Act

Salaries Act and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 4379; 1r., 4380; 2r., 4427; com., 4456; 3r., 4459

Sales Tax. See Special War Revenue

San Remo Conference, 1465

Savard, Mr. Edmond (Chicoutimi-Saguenay)
Bersimis-Rimouski Service, ques. 1463
Budget, 2870. Union Government—congratulations to Minister of Finance, 2871; the new taxes and cost of living—profiteering — Canada's liabilities, 2872; tariff revision—unfair treatment of Chicoutimi and Saguenay by Government, 2873; St. Catharine-Tadoussac mail, 2874; Metabetchouan postmastership, 2876; Liberal fiscal policy approved, 2879

Savard, Mr. Edmond—Con.
Chicoutimi, military expedition to, ques. 409
Hebertville-St. Joseph d'Alma, mail, ques. 1000
Inspector of weights and measures, ques. 4096
Malbaie-Tadoussac service, ques. 674
Metabetchouan postmaster, ques. 1120
North Point lighthouse, ques. 1361
Post offices in Quebec cities, ques. 413
Saguenay River
Buoys, ques. 1000
Dredging, ques. 673
St. Lawrence North Shore municipalities, 922, ques. 1116
Soldiers serving in Bermuda, ques. 1461
Telegraph operators, government, ques. 2182

Scammell, Mr. J. K., 3784

Scenic attractions, 3538-9

Schelking, Baron, ques. 3618

Scientific Research, 14, 43, 324
Committee, Special, 617, 2154

Scott, Mr. F. S. (South Waterloo)
Canadian National Railways, withholding of information, 1676
Income tax—charities, 3313
Race track betting, 3430

Scrap Iron and Steel, sale of, ques. 1739

Screenings, ques. 704. See also Commercial Feeding Stuffs; Elevators; Grain
Accumulation at elevators, 3395
Export to United States, 3167

Secret Diplomacy. See Debates under League of Nations; Peace Treaties

Seduction. See Criminal Code

Seed Branch, 2411

Seed Grain
Advances, ques. 321, ques. 2519
Alberta, ques. 674
Purchasing Commission, ques. 1117

Séguin, Mr. Paul A. (L'Assomption-Montcalm)
Budget, 3075. Extravagant expenditure, 3075; so-called luxury taxes—neglect of agriculture—Imperial navy, 3076; lighten people's burden—Mr. Fielding's amdt. 3077
Income tax—provincial salaries, ques. 3490

Seguin, Mr. Paul A.—Con.
Leaf tobacco, ques. 996
Military instructors for educational institutions, ques. 413
Military uniforms for educational institutions, ques. 413
Naval Service, 4406

Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. See Indemnity of Members.

Senate
Appointment of members of Commons to, 257
Cost of, ques. 1118
Immigration Act Amdt. rejected by, 3426
Provincial legislators and, 1087
Senator also Legislative Councillor, 209
Staff, 4056-9

Serbia, reported credit to, 567. See also League of Nations; Peace Treaty

Sevigny, Hon. Albert, 114, 210

Sex Hygiene, 942

Sexsmith, Mr. John Albert (East Peterborough)
Apple barrels, 2018-9
Canadian National Railways, standard time, ques. 588
Demonstration farms, 2390, 2396
Eight-hour day, 379
Food and Drugs Bill, 1260-1
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 1935, 1941
Assiniboia expenses, 1179, 1184
Conveying voters, 1063
Deposit, 1094-6
Polling place—parties present, 1102
Voters' lists, 2424-6, 2433
Oleomargarine, 1874-5, 1970

Shaw, Mr. Hugh M. (Macleod)
Canadian Northern Railway bonds guaranteed by Alberta, ques. 2180

Sheard, Mr. Charles (South Toronto)
Franchise Bill—liquor on polling day, 1108
Income tax—disputed returns, 3119-20
Letter carriers' salaries, 1231, 3424
Mines Dept., salaries, 3802-3
Special War Revenue Bill, point of order, 3318

Shenacadie Wharf, 3159

Shipbuilding, 44, 53. See also Shipbuilding Credits; Canada Shipping Act
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 622, 659

Shipbuilding—Con.
Contracts, ques. 314, 662, 892, 919
Govt. operation, Montreal shipping men's opinion, 908
Govt. shipyard at Sorel, 1620, ques. 2180
Inland waters, vessels for, 913
Material for, importation of, ques. 1114
Returned men and, 909
Ship plates, 623
Duty on, ques. 706
Statement by Minister, 618
Steel contracts, ques. 2573
Subsidies, 913
Supply—vote of $20,000,000, 892
Victoria Shipowners (Limited), 4583

Shipbuilding Credits Bill. Res., 3863, 3987; 1r., 4017; 2r., 4137; com., 4155; 3r., 4173
Conditions under which assistance may be given, 4155
Limitation of amount (amdt. Mr. McMaster) 4166
Parliament, report to, 4166-7
Preamble, 4155, 4167
Registration and ownership, 4157, 4167 (amdt. Mr. Duff) 4165
Size of ships, 4159
Wooden ships (amdt. Mr. Duff) 4161

Shipping. See also Canada Shipping Act; Steel and Shipping Registration of, 1614

Shipping Federation. See Canada Shipping Act

Ships. See also Vessels; Naval Service; Shipbuilding; Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Foreign, taxation of. See Canada Shipping Act
Great Britain, from, acceptance of, inquiry for correspondence, 4413. See also Naval Defence; Naval Service

Shipwrecked Mariners. See Canada Shipping Act

Shipyard. See Shipbuilding

Shorts. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs

Sick and Distressed Mariners. See Canada Shipping Act; Marine Hospitals

Sifton, Rt. Hon. A. L. (Secretary of State and Minister of Mines)
Canada Temperance Act, 4559
Censorship, 4556
Editorial Board, 4559
War trophies, 4557

Simpson, Mr. Thomas E. (West Algoma)
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Confectionery, 3593
Sales tax, 3794
Voters' lists, 2424

Sinclair, Mr. John E. (Queen's, P.E.I.)
Canadian National Railways—Prince Edward Island car ferry—standardization of railway—Georgetown-Pictou route—labour conditions — Prince Edward Island representative on Board of Management, 4243-6
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3174
Franchise Bill, voters' lists, provincial, 2359-60
Govt. steamers, wages, 1598-9
Graham's Run, 3159
Hickey's wharf, 706
Icebreaker and car ferry, 1602
Judges' salaries, 3854
Maple products, 797
Newfoundland, 4280
North Lake harbour, 3159
Soldier Settlement, 2132
Wrecks, 1612

Sinclair, Mr. John H. (Antigonish and Guysborough)
Advances not accounted for, 2641, 3652-3
Alcohol tax—effect on science, 3496
Antigonish and North Sydney public works, ques. 543, ques. 1004
Army boots and shoes, ques. 506, ques. 1229
Auditor General's report, 4274
Banks, chartered, Government receipts from, ques. 1001
British Columbia Indians, 788-90, 951-3
British preference, ques. 811
Budget, 2636. Cessation of borrowing, 2636; checking waste and extravagance—Union party, 2637; how expenditure might be reduced, 2639; Dept. of Public Information, 2639; Militia advances unaccounted for, 2641; many appointments to the Civil Service, 2642; Liberal tariff platform — parliamentary govt., 2643
Buoy service, 2116-7
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Coal, ques. 1623
Earnings, ques. 1359
Freight rates, ques. 2009
Information withheld, complaint of, 1649
Shareholders, ques, 2011
Canadian National Railways
Deficit, 889-90
Eastern Nova Scotia and, 3377-8
Ships and, 897, 904

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Taxation of, 3394
Western extensions, 3387-8
Canadian News Service at Washington, ques. 414
Canadian Northern Railway, arbitration, ques. 2008, ques. 3488
Canadian Railway War Board, ques. 508
Canadian Wheat Board, 4345-50
Central Vermont Railway, ques. 1035
Chartered Banks, money received from, ques. 1001
Civil Service, 3132-40
Appointments, ques. 311
Classification, 3144
Employees, number of, 2642, 3145-6
Insurance, 1780
Temporary employees, ques. 415, 3132-40
Coal Operations Director Bill, 3367
Cold storage, 2407
Dominion lands, ques. 1118
Dredging, 3783
Exchequer Court, 2201
Extension of trade, 1881, 1884-5
Fisheries
Overseers and guardians, 3522-3
United States, treaty with, ques. 1002
Food inspectors, 3539-40
Franchise Bill
By-elections, simultaneous, 1093
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, 1070
Constables, 3907
Election officers, 1075
Fees, etc., 1111
False statement made to affect election, 1066-7
Interpretation, 1991-2
Oaths, administration of, 780
Poll books, etc., to returning officer, 1079
Proclamation, 1081
Recount by judge, 1110
Returning officers, 1575
Voters' lists
Addition and elimination of names, 3909-13
Preparation—partisanship complained of, 3906
Provincial, 2328-30, 2338, 2360, 3883-4, 3894
Transfer of voters, 3904
Voting on certificate, 1100-1
Government steamers—purchases for, 1610
Government vouchers, loss of at sea, ques. 3489
Guysborough harbour, 2124
Halifax grain elevator, ques. 1116
Health Dept.—variety of its business, 3541

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Honey adulteration, 2315
Housing, 3547
Expenditure
Demobilization vote, and, 3544-5
Ontario, adjustments with, 3551
Imperial Munitions Board, ques. 1002
Income tax, part payment with return, 3254
Indemnity of members, 4448
Inquiry for returns, 857, 4259
Intercolonial Provident Fund, ques. 509
Judges' salaries, 4340
Lightkeepers' salaries, 2113-4
Loan Companies Act, 1779
Lobsters
Hatcheries employees, ques. 4096
Illegal fishing, ques. 410
Marine hospitals, 3553
Market price of Government bonds, ques. 1462
Masters and mates, 981
Militia, 3674
Annual drill, 3681
Contingencies, 3716
Customs brokers, 3716
Rifle associations, 3725
Morrisons' Ltd. ques. 997
Newspaper postage rates, 3348
Nichols, Mr. M. E., ques. 1118
Ottawa city, agreement with, 990
Paper Currency, gold standard, ques. 309
Pensions and Re-establishment, 3941
Pensioner resident outside of Canada, 4044
Widowed mother, dependent parents, 4043
Pictou,
East river lock, ques. 1119
Harbour, 2187
Pilotage, 1839, 1968, 2119-20
Postal rates, 3736-7
Public Information Dept., ques. 1000, ques. 1740
Railway rates, 1036
Registration of shipping, 1614, 2109
Retirement of members of public service, 3827, 3833
Returns, delayed, 459
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3211
Pensions, 398
St. Lawrence dredging, 1617-20
Schools of navigation, 1612-3
Seed grain advances, ques. 2519, 3286-7
Shipbuilding, Govt.
Assets and liabilities, 896
Contracts and prices, 894, ques. 2573
Trade, tariffs and, 897

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3989-92, 4006, 4009-15, 4157-8, 4166
Sick and distressed mariners, 2254-5, 2264-6
Soldier Settlement
Fishermen and, 1690, 3218-9
Staff of dept. 3221
Special War Revenue—candy, 3594
Steamers
"A. J. McKee," ques. 587, 910
"Recruit," ques. 1199
"Voyageur," insurance, ques. 2776
"33," ques. 410
Steamboat inspection, 1051, 1763-4, 2125
Terminal elevators, 1878-9
Turk—expulsion of from Europe, ques. 409
Unforeseen expenses, 1616
Vancouver, B.C., ques. 3620
Victoria, B.C., dry dock, ques. 3619
Winter fishing, 1609
Yukon Placer Mining Act, 3108-9

Skeena River Hatchery, ques. 412

Slidemaster, 1279

Slums, 816

Smith, Mr. J. E., Ques. 2722

Smith, Mr. William (South Ontario)
Demonstration stations, 1016
Franchise Bill, provincial lists, 3892
Rural mail carriers, 4523
United Grain Growers and the farmers, 2745

Smyrna and Anatolia, 3984

Soldier Organizations and Pension Board employees, ques. 1116

Soldiers. See also Returned Soldiers
Canadian prisoners, ques. 1462
Services of Dominion overseas, resolution of British House of Commons, 1159
Votes—effect in general election, 140
Widows and children of, ques. 920. See also Pensions

Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. See also Demobilization; Reconstruction
Dept. 513, 520, 524, ques. 2311
Officials travelling, ques. 2311
Prospective ending of, 4456
Report in French ready for distribution, 2126
Report of Com. not printed in French as ordered, 2016
Smith, Mr. J. E., ques. 2722

Soldier Settlement, 275, 516, 521, 524, 527, 534, 1684, 2127, 3218
Colonization lots in Montmagny, ques. 1229
Ministerial explanation in Supply, 3192

Soldier Settlement Act, 1919, Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1289; 2r., 1685; com., 1685; 3r., 1839

Sorel
Government employees at, ques. 1199
Shipyard, 1620, ques. 2180
Superintendent, ques. 343
Vandal, Mr. Calixte, ques. 1740

Soulanges Canal Road, ques. 999

Southam Press Limited, ques. 4096

Sovietism. See Bolshevism

Sparrow, Dr. C. J., ques. 1896

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)
Rulings and Statements of Amendments, consequential, 2315
Bills
Com., ref. back to—unanimous consent, 4264
Divorce, charges, 4321, 4413
Introducible only by resolution—ref. to trade, 2079
Introduction—not in "Notices of Motion," 1216
Not printed in French, 1152
Resolution adopted, but notice of motion for first reading possibly required, 1229
Senate amendments taken seriatim, 4059
2r
Declared carried, debate closed, 395
Member may speak only once, 3833
Principle only to be discussed, 3827
Same day as 1r., 4341
3r
Amdt. by House without ref. again to Com. 1537
Consequential amdts. 2315
Same day as Com. stage, 2204
Budget debate
Amdt. not to limit debate, 2518
Debate on Thursday and Friday, 2576
Com. suggested for convenience in asking questions—League of Nations, 3971
Comment on documents criticising members, 235
Debate closed by mover, 436, 446, 1137, 1966, 2316, 3102
Exception, by unanimous consent, 2784

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Debate closed by mover—Con.
Rule inapplicable, 2315
Mover of amdt. 3956
3r. of Bill, 2251
Debates, Official Report of
Insertion of documents not read, 363, 364, 1416, 1890, 3932
Question standing as order for return, 1743
Decorum,
Conversation, 2316, 4367
Cowardice, imputation of, 66-7
Noise—building operations, 345
Estimates, item in, debate on, 2467
Hartney, Mr. E. P., 4566
House of Commons
French language, status of, 1039-44
Honour of impugned by statement outside—Rev. Dr Speer, 3491, 3557
Officials and Staff
Organization and classification, 859, 1037-45, 3092-9, 4504, 4563-7
Pages, 3099
Side lobbies, admission of strangers to, 1629
Hypothetical against direct statement, 259
Imputation against a member, 234, 2846
Inquiry for report ordered in French, 2126
Interruptions, 457, 480, 734, 737, 1653, 1709-10
Board of Commerce, 4496-7
Language
"A void in their craniums," 737
"Deliberate falsehood," 2749
"Falsehood," 259
"Mean," 529
"Meanly and untruthfully alleging," 233
"Representatives....the stigma they have left upon themselves," 547
Retracted but afterwards referred to, 774
"Shameless" and words of like character, 235
"Spoke with a brief for the great Massey-Harris corporation," 2627
"Uttered a falsehood deliberately," 2845-6
Members
Asking for answer to question, 2179
Giving way by courtesy, 759
How to be referred to, 50, 528
Mover limited in reply, 1966

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Members—Con.
Not having the floor, not to be interrogated, 528
Right to speak exhausted, 1561, 1572, 1676, 2315, 2702, 4060
Speaking, may not interrogate another, 2631-2
Speaking, may submit questions, 2702-4
To speak only once on a motion, 1466, 1656-7
Motions
Negative, amdt., 4061
Non-debatable
Adjourning debate, 1017, 2840, 4062
Those moved by unanimous consent, 2626
Those taken up under arrangement of no debate, 2014
Notice not given—unanimous consent necessary, 2023, 2177, 2575, 2626
Consent refused, M. stands as notice, 2575
Public expenditure, calling for, 3933
Seconder absent, 418
Successive to adjourn debate, 2840
To adjourn for purpose of discussing matter of urgent, etc.
Steel and shipping merger, 1945-6
Coal shortage, 3685-6
Unnecessary
Authorizing Com. to sit, it not having reported finally, 2776
Withdrawn on understanding of reference, 437
Non-debatable subjects
Com., matters pending before, 3652-3
Report, presentation of, 4257-8
Subjects already debated, 3686
Notice of motion covering question in Votes and Proceedings, 2723
Notice of motion, undesirability of general debate—unanimous consent for Leader of the Opposition, 2178
Orders of the Day
Debate limited, 33, 230, 231, 710, 856, 1045, 1573, 1896, 2179, 2248, 2968, 3228, 3296
Application must be general, 3424
Appropriateness of matter, 1574, 2476, 1742, 3561, 3423, 3769
Argument, 3427
Labrie Brothers, case of, 3560-1
Letter carriers, 1232
Ministerial statements, 708-9
In the nature of making out a case, 3425

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Orders of the Day—Con.
Debate limited—Con.
Replying, latitude allowed in, 3425
Question to be summarized, 3295
Question only partly answered, 753
Question to the House disallowed, 1743
Stoneham, Finlay, case of, 568
Unanimous consent refused, debate not permissible, 2082
Parliamentary restaurant, 3094-6
Previous debate, 1217, 1675, 4417, 4431-2
Coal question, 3686
Privilege
Non-personal reflections, excluded from, 1231
Question may not be raised when another member has the floor, 529, 2838
Ref. to proceedings of Com. which has not reported, 2081
Questions
Answer of Government to be accepted, 753, 1743
Not to be altered by another member; notice to be given, 510
Passed as orders for returns, 1743
At option of Government, 511
Permission not needed to place on Order Paper, 1047
Portion deleted, 1045
Reference to answering—appropriate occasion, 1047, 2416
Standing for Member's revision, 2413
To Chairman of a Committee, and without notice, 2843
Quotations containing language forbidden under the rules, 234-6
Reading of Speeches, 2966
Recognizing members—Mr. Jacobs, Mr. McDonald, 3026, 3039
Relevancy, 734-5, 750-1, 1573, 1954, 3177, 4060
Address, debate on—Budget debate should not be anticipated, 129
Civil Service and patronage, 547
Debate on motion to adjourn for the purpose of discussing, etc., should be strictly relevant, 1951
Judges' salaries and indemnity of members, 4417
Limits of debate, 2468
Naturalization and franchise, 771
Pensions report—general election, 3946
Report not printed in French as ordered, 2016
Speer, Rev. Dr., statement of, 3491, 3557

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Supply—Committee of
Thursday procedure, 3686
Saturday procedure, 3840, 4275
Unanimous consent, 181, 617, 2078, 2625, 3956, 4060, 4321. See also, under this titie, Debates, Official Report of, insertion, etc.
Adjournment to fixed time, moved without notice, 304
Customs Act, 3620
M. (Mr. Lemieux) Coal Supply, 3686
Mr. Mackenzie King on Canadian representative at Washington, 2178
Speech of mover not close of debate, 2784
Statement concerning Com. not otherwise permitted, 2081-2
Unauthorized distribution of documents in House, 1744
Vote—member late, 4180
Wednesday evening sittings, 1045

Speaker's Chair
Offer of gift from the Lords and Commons of the United Kingdom, 3224

Speech from the Throne debated. See Address

Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. Res. 3316; 3334; 3561; 1r., 3634; 2r., com., 3790; 3r., 4289; Senate amendments, 4505
Arrangements for debate, 3617, 3631, 3454
Consideration in detail, 3487-8
Changes proposed, 3345
When effective, 3335, 3607, 3629
Clauses and subjects
"Consumer," definition of, 3795
Effect on prices, 3329, 3340
Importations, 3795
Licenses, 3579, 3600, 4290
Jewellers, 3579
Manufacturer, small, 3797
Manufacturer's agent, 3609
Merchandise not delivered on May 19, 3613
Penalties, 4290
Refunds, 3629, 3607
Retail Merchants' Association, 3342
Revenue from estimated sources, 3332-3
Sales, one or two per cent tax; res., 3608
Stamp taxes and stamps, 3626-7, 3800, 4290
Stocks in trade, 3604
Taxes, how paid, 3587

Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Sources of Revenue Discussed
Acetylene gas, 3796
Airplanes, 3592
Automobiles, 3597, 3793
Baby foods, 3473
Bank overdrafts, 3624-5, 3798
Beer, 3605
Used to make vinegar, 3604
Binder twine, 3610, 3623
Biscuits, 3460
Boats, canoes, yachts, etc., 3588
Boots, 3563-5, 3585
Breakfast foods, 3795
Bric-a-brac 3576
Candy and confectionery 3592
Carpets and rugs, 3577, 3585
Cattle feed, 3473
Chandeliers, 3578, 3597
Chewing gum, 3594
Cigarholders, etc., 3576
Clocks and watches, 3574
Clothes, 3563
Made to order, 4290
Coats, fur, 3791-3
Collars and collarettes of lace, 3574, 3792
Containers, 3615, 3632
Curtains, 3578
Dresses, except silk, 3586-7
Electrical supplies, 3460
Embroideries, 3573
Firearms, 3594, 3793
Food, 3616, 3795
Fountain pens, pocket knives, etc., 3577, 4289
Furniture, 3574
Furs, 3400, 3569, 3791-2
Gas and electric light fixtures, 3596
Glassware, 3569
Gloves, 3568
Hats and caps, 3438, 3453, 3574, 3562, 3565-6, 3790, 4290
Hosiery, 3791
Jams and marmalade, 3796
Jewellery, 3338, 3578
Licenses, 3579
Departmental stores, 3583, 3617
Medals, 3585
Wedding rings, 3584, 3797
Kimonas, petticoats and waists, 3790
Lace, 3573, 3791-3
Collars, 3574, 3792
Liquor and preparations containing alcohol, 3600
Liquor cabinets, etc, 3793
Meats, 3473
Moving pictures, 3627
Musical instruments, 3460-1, 3595-7, 3628

Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Sources of revenue discussed—Con.
Neckwear, 3790
Nightgowns, 3567
Oriental rugs, 3577
Overcoats, cloth, 3586
Pedlars, 3574
Plated ware, 3572
Playing cards, 3599
Promissory notes, 3624
Proprietary medicines, 3600, 3627, 3794
Purses and pocketbooks, 3568
Real estate sales, 3796
Ribbons (including typewriter ribbons) 3473, 3574
Sales tax, 2487, 3608, 3794
Silk
Clothing, 3790
Dresses, etc., 3562, 3632
Fabrics, 3572
Split peas, etc., 3795
Spirits and medicated wines, 3793
Sporting goods, 3569, 3572
Socks and stockings (silk)
Men's and boys, 3566
Women's, 3567
Stock transfers, 3624, 3800
Suits, women's, 3587
Tobacco pipes, 4289
Toiletware, 3576
Tooth washes, 3794
Umbrellas, 3568
Underwear, 3453-4, 3791, 3568
Wedding rings, 3584, 3797
Wheat meal, 3795-6

Speer, Rev. Dr. and Race Track Legislation, 3490, 3557

Spence, Rev. Ben., 1218, 1227

Spinney, Mr. Edgar K. (Yarmouth and Clare)
Budget, 2711. Congratulations to Finance Minister—Canada's war service, 2711; business profits tax, 2712; Canada's agriculture and fisheries, 2713; Mr. Fielding's amdt., 2714
Port Maitland, 4579

Spirit Lake, 566, 2398

Springs. See Irrigation Act Amdt.

Stacey, Mr. F. B. (Fraser Valley)
Alien immigrants, 823
Budget, 2618. British Columbia farmers, 2618; British Columbia resources—the team spirit—change of attitude on trade question, 2619; orchard industry, 2620; American competition with Canadian fruit growers, 2621; head tax, 2623

Stacey, Mr. F. B.—Con.
Campaign funds, 1225
Franchise Bill, Orientals, 1823
Hearing in the Chamber, suggested rearrangement of seats, 394
Indians, British Columbia, 4021, 4037
Inspection and Sale—Fruit containers, 2021
Oleomargarine, 1858
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 394-5
Soldier Settlement, 2141

Stamp taxes, 2487

Standing Orders, Com. appointed, 305

State Insurance for Returned Soldiers' Bill. Res., 3864, 3958; 1r., 3958; 2r., com., 4054; 3r., 4056; Senate amdts., 4466

Statistical Department, 1879, 3296

Statutes, proposed revision, 3821

Steamboat Inspection, 2125. See also Canada Shipping Act Amdt.

Steamers. See Vessels

Steamship Companies, proposed Govt. supervision of, 2013

Steamship Services
Canadian National Railway vessels, services, ques. 342
Campbellton-Gaspe, ques. 342
Charlottetown, 4280
Halifax-Cape Breton, 4281
Lockeport-Froude's Point, 4514
Magdalen Islands, 649-52
Malbaie-Tadoussac, ques. 674
Montreal-Quebec-Gaspe, ques. 587
Mulgrave-Canso, 4515
New Zealand, 4277
Newfoundland, 4277, 4281
South Africa, 4280
Victoria-Vancouver West Island, 4280
Victoria-Skagway, 4514

Steel Industry, 623, 629, 648. See also Shipbuilding
British Empire Steel Corporation, ques. 2777, 4010
Steel and shipping merger, 1895
Debate on M. to adjourn House, 1945

Steele, Mr. Michael (South Perth)
Alien immigrants, 812, 838
Board of Commerce resignations, 4258
Civil Servants with war record, 3130-1
Franchise Bill, voters' lists, 2440
Magazine postage rates, ques. 1898
Press, the, and postal rates, 3745-50, 3761
Retirement of members of public service, 3834

Steele, Mr. Michael—Con.
Rulings and statements as Chairman
Relevancy, 3219-20, 3680, 3713
Scientific research, 2169
Southam Press, Ltd., ques. 4096

Stefansson Expedition, ques. 704, 3284

Stein, Mr. Adolph (Kamouraska)
Criminal Code—petty thefts, 3420
Election and introduction, 949
House of Commons staff, 1041
Income tax
Appeals, 3243
Exemptions on account of children, 3298
Lightkeepers' salaries and bonus, 1282, 2110
Quebec and Saguenay Railway, ques. 3619
Rivière du Loup drill hall, 3726

Stenographers, Members', salaries of, ques, 2311

Sterling, payments to C.E.F., ques. 2008

Stevens, Mr. H. H. (Vancouver Centre)
Alcohol, tax on, 3495
Bill, introduction of—point of order, 1216
Budget, 2589. Minister of Finance and his critics—revenue and expenditure, 2589; foreign credits—Liberals and Liberal-Unionists, 2590; tariff as discussed by spokesman for the Opposition, 2591; war wealth taxation amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 2593; tariff reform, 2594; Farmers' platform, 2595; farmers and the sale of wheat, 2596; business profits taxes, 2598; elevators—political campaign contributions, 2599; income tax—the Budget and direct taxation, 2601; Wheat Board and wheat trade, elevators, etc., 2602; public debt and natural resources, 2603
Canadian Wheat Board, ques., 3294, 4104, 4112
Civil Service classification, ques. 674
Civil Service retirement, 3838
Debates—difficulty in hearing, 1416
Eight-hour day, 335
Fisheries—British Columbia, 3521
Franchise Bill
Advance polls, 3875
Aliens—certificate, 2089-91, 2094
Polling divisions, 1520
Returning officers, 1534
Grain trade. See under this title, Canadian Wheat Board
Indemnity of members, 4089
Military training, 3707-8

Stevens, Mr. H. H.—Con.
Militia, Cadet service, 3707-8
Naval Service
Badges, ques., 506
Debate on estimates—delay, 4411-2
Parliament Buildings, 1416
Purchasing govt. supplies, ques. 591
Returned soldiers' res. for special Com.—pensions, students, vocational training, 532
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 388, 395
Veterans and Pensions, 397, 3201
Sick and distressed mariners, 2253-4, 2263-4, 3099, 3105
Soldier Settlement—soldiers who remained in Canada, 1686
Special War Revenue
Bank overdrafts, 3798-9
Changes by Finance Minister, 3438, 3448
Water carriage of goods, 1213-6
Regulation of, 1723-7
Young, Mr. F., ques. 2313

Stewart, Mr. J. A. (Lanark)
Opium and Drug Bill, 1632, 1637, 1640, 1645, 1648, 1703, 1744-9, 1754-9
Special War Revenue
Proprietary medicines 3601-6
Sales taxes, 3611

Stewart, Mr. Thomas J. (West Hamilton)
Jams and marmalade, 3796
Letter carriers, 1232
Vessel rates, 1709, 1727

Stewart, Mr. W. J., 3985

Stoneham, Finlay, 567

Strikes. See also Grand Trunk; Industrial Disputes
How authorized in certain cases, 1902
Trial of Winnipeg parties, ques. 2181

Subsidies and Bounties—Farmers' party position, 899

Sugar
Embargo on, 3226
Importations, ques. 2009
Price, 1896

Superannuation. See Civil Service

Supply Bills. See Appropriation Acts

Supply, Committee of, 880, 1296, 1416, 1598, 1649, 1877, 2103, 2151, 2366, 2382, 2390, 3147, 3192, 3218, 3265, 3507, 3654, 3702, 3769, 3801, 3821, 3840, 3961, 4069, 4181, 4274, 4291, 4380, 4466, 4506

Supply, Committee of—Con.
Debate in, arrangements for, 1597, 1602, 1615
Ordered, 304
Subjects and items debated
Agriculture, 2382
Institute of, 2411
Minister, statement and review by, 2366
Bounties Act administration, 1877
British Columbia lighthouses, 1616
Canada Grain Act administration, 1877
Canada Year Book, 1879
Canadian National Railways, 4181
Civil Government, 859
Civil Service bonus, 1209
Cold storage, 2407
Culling timber, 1877
Customs, 3858
Dairying industry, 2403
Distressed seamen, 1613
Dominion lands and parks, 3283, 3769
Entomological Branch, 2401
Experimental Farms, 2382, 2390, 2412
External affairs, 3973
Fisheries, 3521
Flax, 1886
Gas and Electricity inspection, 1887
Health Dept., 3539
Immigration and Medical inspection, 3555
Indians, 3265
Industrial and Scientific Research, 1886
Interior Dept., 3192
Justice, 3840
Labour Dept., 4506
League of Nations, 3961
Lighthouses, 2110
Live stock, 1614
Marine hospitals, 3552
Marine, unforeseen expenses, 1615
Masters and mates, 1610
Meat and canned foods, 2411
Method of voting, 108. See also Estimates
Militia, 3654, 3702
Mines and Geological Survey, 3801
Naval affairs, 3507
Naval service, 4291, 4380
Navigation schools, 1612
Northwest territories, 3280
Ocean and river service, 1598, 2103
Patent record, 1886
Pilotage, 2119
Pollution of boundary waters, 3552
Post office, 4501
Public buildings, Nova Scotia, 3147
Public works, 1416, 3769
Quarantine, 3554
Railways and canals, 880, 2378, 4181

Supply, Committee of—Con.
Subjects and items debated—Con.
Registration of shipping, 1614
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3194
St. Lawrence ship channel, 1616
Seed Branch, 2411
Shipbuilding, 618
Soldier Settlement, 2127, 2151, 3192
Sorel shipyard, 1620
Statistics—census, 1879
Steamboat inspection, 2125
Steamship subsidies, 4277
Terminal elevators, 1878
Trade, extension of, 1880
Wharves, 2122
Wrecks—investigations, 1612
Wrecking plants, 1615, 2103
Yukon, 3281

Supreme Court, judgment in re Board of Commerce, 3685

Supreme Court Act Amdt. 1r., 2003-4; 2r., 2315; com., 2317; 3r., 2389

Sutherland, Mr. Donald (South Oxford)
Agricultural Gazette, 1085
Budget, 2910. Congratulations to Finance Minister—Sir Robert Borden's return —Mr. Trahan—Canada's part in the war, 2911; Mr. Fielding's amdt. and address, 2912; Mr. Crerar's resignation from the Government, 2913; the recall —Mr. Crerar and farmers' organizations in Ontario, 2914; political organizations on class lines, 2915; farmers' delegation on conscription; Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy in 1917—the Government and tariff revision, 2916; England and Canada compared as to tariff conditions, 2917; United Grain Growers, Limited, its policy and profits, 2919; elevator screenings, 2920; record of Mr. Crerar and Mr. J. F. Reid—dairy industry and Mr. Crerar's administration, 2921; agriculture in Ontario, abandoned farms, 2922; overcrowding of cities everywhere, 2923; Canada's war record—conscription, 2924; Canada will carry on, 2925
Business Profits tax, public utilities, 3236-7
Butter in cold storage, ques, 543
Campaign funds—Grain Growers, United Farmers, 1227
Canadian Wheat Board, 4125, 4343-4, 4355-6
Civil Service, bonus, 1277, 1282-4
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3167-73, 3395-3409
Analysis, ques. 922

Sutherland, Mr. Donald—Con.
Eight-hour day, 384
Industry and agriculture, 453
Experimental farm system, ques. 1360
Ontario, 4560
M. for extension, 1005, 1014
Food and Drugs Bill, 965
Food shortage, threatened, 1845
Franchise Bill—Indians, 2056
Grain elevators, ques. 3862
Indemnity of members, 4095
Inspection and Sale Act—containers, 2021
Mining resources—prospectors, 3812
National Council of Women, declaration by, 1841
Oleomargarine, 1840-75
Re-claimed screenings, ques. 507
Registration postal rate, and express companies, 3744
Rural mail carriers, 1233, 1282-4
Soldier Settlement, 2131
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill—License, small manufacturer, 3797
Threat to members by outsiders, 1743
United Grain Growers' Limited, ques. 922

Sydney, Quarantine station, 3149

Syrians in Canada, ques. 3862

Tache, Mr. Charles Eugene, ques. 3490

Tache, Mr. J. de L., 4505

Taft, ex-President, and Grand Trunk Railway, 3490

Tariff. See also Address; Budget; Customs, Special War Revenue
French Treaty. See that title
Prices, 227
Reduction of—amdt. (Mr. Fielding) to Budget, 2510
7½ per cent, ques. 1001
Tobacco, duties on, ques. 1114

Tariff Changes, 2490

Taxation. See also Revenue Bills
Business profits, ques. 314
Civil Service income by Ottawa city. See Ottawa City Agreement Bill Customs. See also Tariff
7½ per cent, ques. 1001
Direct or indirect, 128, 167
Excess profits, ques. 2012
Govt. railway property, of, 580-1, 3893
Income, 123, 227
Forms in French, 1084, 1573
Incomes over $100,000, ques. 3490
Inspector at Kingston, ques. 2181
Trust and Loan Company of Canada, 586

Taxation—Con.
Income and profits, collection, ques. 806
Indemnity of members. See that title
Land, 128, 177, 220, 228, 2612, 2883, 2888
Single Tax, 1120, 2651-7, 2706
Luxuries, 2615. See also Special War Revenue
Mines, 128, 3810
Mutual Insurance Companies, ques. 2012
Provincial and Federal, 833
Provincial salaries and indemnities, ques. 3490
Railway profits, 865
Real estate transfers, 3796
War profits, 189, 302
War taxes, ques. 1001
War tax stamps, ques. 807
Waterfront privileges, 128
Wealth, 2527

Taxes, municipal payment by Dominion. See Ottawa City agreement

Technical Education, 43, 53
Government assistance, ques. 2519

Technical Education Bill. 1r., 1290; 2r., com., 1761; 3r., 1762

Telegraphs and Telephones, 4577
Govt. contracts, ques. 1627
Govt. operators, bonus, ques. 2182
Rates appeal, ques. 2009

Témiscouata Railway, ques. 674

Textiles, duties on imports, ques. 1899. See also Customs

Theodore D'Acton Post Office, ques. 2011

Theriault and St. Quentin catastrophe, 3080

Thompson, Mr. Alfred (Yukon)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 76. Parliament Buildings, 76; Orders in Council and Yukon—stability of Union Government, 77; industrial prosperity and popular unrest—high cost of living and the remedy, 78; Canada and Canada's achievements—local representation in the Cabinet, position of Hon. Mr. Blondin, 79; proposed general election—Leader of the Opposition on the health of the Prime Minister, 80; hopes for Prime Miniser's restoration to health, 81
Franchise Bill
Disqualification of candidates, 1088
"Rural polling division," 1993

Thompson, Mr. Alfred—Con.
Franking privilege, 3357
Opium and Drug Bill, 1631-2
Scientific research, 2160
Stefansson expedition, ques. 704
Yukon Placer Mining Act, 3107-9

Thomson, Mr. Levi (Qu'Appelle)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 177. Class representation and class legislation, 177; exchange rate and trade—Canadian Reconstruction Association, 178; proposed general election, 179
Budget, 2614. War revenue, 2614; luxury taxes—critics of Farmers' party, 2615; manufacturers and farmers, 2616; free list asked for by Farmers' party, 2617: manufacturers would benefit by tariff reduction, 2618
Federal Bureau of Education, 1386
Franchise Bill, 746
Advance polls, 1941, 2000-1
Aliens—certificate, 2091-3, 2099
Canada Temperance Act, 2053
Contributions, 1170, 1196
Conveying voters—compulsory voting, 1064
Disqualification — charitable support, those receiving, 1817-8
Election expenses, 1154, 1930-1
Nomination—"Elector," how defined, 1917-8
Recall, the, 2038-40, 2046
Returning officers, 1523
"Rural polling division," 1993
Voters' lists, 2434, 2441
Newspaper postage, 3756-7
Race track betting, 3432
Soldier Settlement, 1698
Cattle branding, 1700-1

Threat to Members, 1743

Three Rivers harbour, 3491

Thrift, 13. See also Government Annuities
Need of, Speech from the Throne, reference to, 8

Ticket of Leave, 398, 2015

Timber Culling, 1877

Timiskaming, By-election, 1188, 2898

Timiskaming Lake
Wharves, 2187, 3493

Tobacco. See also Inland Revenue and Customs

Tobacco—Con.
Duties on, ques. 1114
Leaf, ques. 996

Tobin, Mr. Edmund William (Richmond and Wolfe)
Asbestos postmaster, ques. 320
Auditor General's report, publication in French, ques, 1627
Blondin, Hon. Mr., trips to Europe, 541
Canada Gazette, ques. 2179
Canadian Northern railway lands, ques. 1626, ques. 2008
Chinese in Canada, ques. 805
Connaught Rifle range, ques. 671
Dominion notes and gold standard, ques. 588
Duncan, Mr. Walter, ques. 2720
Finance Dept. employees, ques. 592
Imperial Press Conference, ques. 410
Japanese in Canada, ques. 805
Langton, Brig. Gen. J. G., ques., 541, ques. 811
Medical officers and nurses, ques. 341
Military Police, ques. 804, ques. 805
Militia Dept., London employees, ques. 671
Obligations, Dominion, ques. 998
Parliament Buildings, 1422
Door contract, ques. 320
Post Office, ques. 3294
Ste. Anne soldiers' hospital, ques. 588
Special War Revenue Act
Boots, 3565
Sporting goods, 3572

Tolmie, Hon. S. F.. (Minister of Agriculture)
Agriculture, review of, 2366. Increased production, possibilities, 2366; keeping people on the farm, 2371; city man and farmer—home and foreign markets, 2372; Dept. of Agriculture and its branches, 2373; summary of policy, 2376; dairy cows, 2378; labour situation, 2379
Agricultural Gazette, 1085
Animal Contagious Diseases Bill, 1622, 1840
Cold storage, 2407-9
Commercial feeding stuffs, 3163-74, 3403-9
Dairy industry, 2403-6
Cow testing and milk testing, 2406
Election and introduction, 1, 47
Entomology, branch, 2402
Experimental farms, 1013, 2375, 2382-9, 2396-9, 2401, 2404, 2412
Ontario and, 1015
Flax industry, 696
Fox farming, 2409

Tolmie, Hon. S. F.—Con.
Fruit Branch, 2410
Grading export butter and cheese, 602-4
Hewitt, the late Dr. Gordon, 2375-6
Inspection and Sale Act (Fruit packages) 1915-6, 2016-23
Apple barrels, 2022
Authority of Governor in Council, 2019
Nova Scotia fruit growers, 2017-8
Penalties, 2020
Size of packages, 2016-7, 3109
International Institute of Agriculture, 2411
Meat and canned food, 2411
Oleomargarine Bill, 1781, 1875-7, 1968-71
Potato Bag, 4562
Seed Branch, 2411
Tobacco growing, 2376, 2383
Victoria
By-election, 4584
Shipbuilding—work for returned soldiers, 4584
Wheat—work of Mr. S. Wheeler, 2388

Toronto
Exhibition Buildings, use of by militia, ques. 2009
Grain elevators, ques. 1897
Harbour improvements, ques. 2181
Income tax payments, ques. 592
Postal employees, threatened strike of, 3424
Postal station "A," 3155
Rifle range, 3728
Telephone rates appeal, ques. 2009
Union station, 3225-6

Toronto Eastern and Toronto Suburban Railways, ques. 1004, ques. 1510, ques. 2080

Tracadie Lazaretto, 3554

Trade
Austria and Germany, from, ques. 2416, ques. 3359
British Preference, 2079
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 621
Extension of, 1880
Foreign, 2477, 2481
France with
Customs tariff convention, ques. 3684
Treaty, 3425, ques. 4323
Royal Commission on, ques. 4502
Russia, with, 4322
West Indies Conference, 3161
Greece and Roumania with, ques. 2414

Trahan, Mr. Arthur (Nicolet)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 87. Liberal party in the war, 87; Quebec, then and now, 88; farmers' and conscription, 89; Quebec and its "hour"—Quebec and its tolerance, 90; League of Nations—Canadian autonomy, 91; Navy, Lord Jellicoe's visit—tax exempt bonds—Grand Trunk Railway, 92; public ownership of railways—Civil Service classification, 93; agriculture, Quebec people stay on the land—the disease of luxury, 94; radicalism and imperialism, 96

Trahan, Mr. Arthur—Con.
Address—Con.
Bankruptcy Bill, 3256
Budget, 2857. Progressive weakness of national credit and its causes—gold reserve, 2857; inflation of credits—prices, 2859; exchange situation and remedies therefor, 2860; Canada and Japan, position as result of the war— deflation, 2861; increased production necessary, 2862; Mr. Fielding's amdt.—Supreme Council for Peace Conference and commercial freedom — Europe's debts to Canada, 2863
Civil Service holidays, 4057-62
Franchise Bill, 776
Corrupt practices—penalties, 1160-1
Election expenses, 1153-4
Polling divisions, 1518
Mackie, Mr. H. A., absence of, 2969
Water-powers surveys, 3292

Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National

Translation Staff. See Criminal Code Amdt. (French version); House of Commons

Trent Canal wharves, ques., 586, ques. 1359

Trust Companies Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 855; 2r., com., 3r., 1779

Turgeon, Mr. Onésiphore (Gloucester)
Abey, Mr. H. R., ques. 1000
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 110. French language—New Brunswick cabinet representation, 110; representation and census, 111; proposed general election—land values taxation—exchange and currency, 112; franchise, 114
Biological Board, ques. 2572
Budget, 2649. Congratulations to Minister of Finance—Canada's soldiers, 2649; gross and net debt—new taxes, 2650; Mr. J. H. Sinclair's charges—free trade advocated—Henry George and land values taxation, 2651; Liberal party and free trade, 2652; Farmers' party

Turgeon, Mr. Onésiphore—Con.
Budget—Con.
and Liberal party—need of increased production, 2653; Mr. Elkin and tariff; manufacturers would benefit by free trade, 2654; foreign trade, harbours and shipping, 2655; free trade and new sources of revenue, 2656; land values tax and its effects, 2657; repeal of land value taxes in Britain, 2659; "Scientific tariff," 2659
Canadian National Railways
Deficits — rates — management—representation of labour — subdivisions, 4202-8
Rates, 1443
Experimental Farms, 2382
Franchise Bill
Advance polls—fixed day of the week for elections, 1164, 1942
Election officers, fees, etc., 3868
Proclamation—language of publication, 1080, 1828, 1833-7, 2267-70, 2310
Amdt. 1834, neg. 2311
Returning officers, 1530, 1581-2
French speeches in House, 701
Grand Trunk Railway, 1443
Indemnity of members, 4086
Pensions, 432, 3934
Quarantine—Tracadie and D'Arcy Island, 3554
Railway rates and Parliament, 4188
Returned soldiers, 531
Fishing industry, and, 3934
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 3993

Turk, Expulsion of from Europe, ques. 409

Tweedie, Mr. Thomas M. M. (West Calgary)
Banff National park, 3770
Farmers' Co-operative Company, 3995-6
Franchise Bill
Aliens—certificate, 2236-7
Contributions, 1184
Recall, the, 2023, 2029, 2033, 2045-50
Returning officers, 1528, 1533
Voters' lists, 2431-8
Indemnity of members 4090
Militia—active militia, allowance, 3669-71
Opium and Drug Bill, 1645, 1647-9
Personal position, 2049
Retirement of members of public service, 3826-9
Scientific research, 2172
Shipbuilding, Credits Bill, 3996

Typhus Epidemic, 4545

Uniform, unlawful use of, 3417. See also Criminal Code

Union Government. See debates under Address; Budget

United Grain Growers, Limited, ques. 922

United Shoe Company case, 4479

United States, See also League of Nations
Canadian ambassador to, announcement, 2177
Canadian representation in, 4533. See also Washington
Coast defence and, 4294, 4298
Export of screenings to. See Commercial Feeding Stuffs
Fisheries treaty with, ques. 1002, 1290, 3161
Immigrants from, ques. 1463
League of Nations, and, ques. 1118, 3977
Liquor shipments to, 2107, 2118
Shipping Board and Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine, ques. 2009
Soldiers and lands in Canada. See Dominion Lands Act Amdt.

Universal Military Training, 923

Unopposed Motions for Returns, 321, 415, 437, 544, 675, 923, 1004, 1123, 1362, 1464, 1628, 1900, 2015, 2313, 2417, 2722, 2896, 3079, 3294, 3490

Vancouver, B. C.
Dry dock, ques. 316, ques. 3620
Public building, 3156

Vandal, Mr. Calixte, ques. 1740

Vatican Mission, ques. 310

Venereal Diseases, 924, 927, 3556

Verville, Mr. Alphonse (St. Denis)
Board of Commerce, M. for abolition, 1143
Bonus and salaries, ques. 2079; ques. 2311
Eight-hour day, 381
Grand Trunk Railway and strike of 1910, 1564
House of Commons staff, ques. 590
Indemnity of members, 4072-3
Industrial disputes, 1981-2
Musical instruments, tax on, 3595-6
Parliament Buildings, 1424-7
Popular unrest, 1145
Price regulation, 1143
Profiteers—punishment, 1145

Vessel Rates, 1733, ques. 2414, ques. 2572, ques. 2777. See also Railway Act Amendment

Vessels. See also Shipbuilding
Canadian National Railways, ques. 342
Charge on for sick mariners, 2253
Icebreakers, 230, 1598, 1620
Uniforms of men on, 1603
"Montcalm," 1606
Importation of material used in construction, ques. 1114

Names
"A. J. McKie," ques. 587, 903, 910
"Canada," ques. 1230
"Canadian Inventor," 3226, 3359
"Canadian Pioneer," 902
"Canadian Recruit," ques. 312, ques. 1199, 648
"Champlain," ques. 314, ques. 672, ques. 921, ques. 1121; ques. 3619
"J. D. Hazen," 2105
"Lady Evelyn," ques. 3619
"Lady Grey"—Uniforms for crew, ques. 1003, ques. 1361
"Montcalm," 1606. See also Icebreakers
"Niobe" and "Rainbow." See Naval Defence
"Simcoe," ques. 413
"Stanley," ques. 312
"Three Rivers," ques. 1897
"Voyageur," ques. 2776
"33," ques. 410
Under Railway Commission, ques. 2777. See also Railway Act Amdt.

Victoria
By-election, 4584
Dry dock, ques. 3619
Shipowners (Limited) 4583

Victoria and Carleton, by-election, 121

Victoriaville-Arthabaska Branch Line, ques. 4502

Victory Loans, ques. 803, 2520
Amount of, ques. 2008
Commissions, ques. 320
Committee, ques. 320, ques. 2008
Gold, payments in, 2647-8
Tax exemption, 92. See also Loans

Vien, Mr. Thomas (Lotbiniére)
Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine, withholding of information, 1654-5, 1681-3
Canadian National Railways, 1457
Civil Service
Bonus, 1273, 1285
Holidays, 4062
Retirement of members, 4461

Vien, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Electricity, competition in sale of—taxation, 3116
Food and Drugs Bill, 1256, 1266-7
Franchise Bill
Disqualification, charitable aid, those receiving, 1815-8
Proclamation, language of publication, 2286-96
Grand Trunk Railway, 1454-9
Income tax, 3120
Charities, 3246
Stock dividends, 3239-40
Maple products, 1255-6
Opium and Drug Bill, 1703-6
Pilotage, 1839
Post Office salaries, 4527-9
Private Bills—insurance and loan, 3860
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3210-1, 3213-4
Shipbuilding Credits Bill, 4139
Soldier settlement
Defaults, 3223
Staff, 3220-1
Steel and shipping merger, 1953-6

Vimy Battlefield, ques. 1358, 1460

Vladivostok, Japanese occupation of, 1945

Vouchers, Govt. loss of at sea, ques. 3489

Wainwright, Herd of Buffalo, 3283

War
Army boots and shoes, ques. 506
Battlefields Memorial, 1460, 1738, 2078, 2177
Bonus to soldiers, 1082
Canada's record, 46
Canadian Expenditionary Force
Burke, Rev. A. E., Chaplain, ques. 2079
Members, ques. 315
Officers and men stationed in Canada, ques. 1200
Provinces, enlistments by, ques. 408
Sterling, payments in, ques. 2008
Vouchers, Government, loss of at sea, ques. 3489
Canteen profits, 709, ques. 800
Defaulters, Chicoutimi, ques. 409
Equipment, guns, 3661-2
Fishermen, and, 845
Indemnity
Allies conference at Ostend, 2476, 2574
Canada's share, 1084
Germany, payments, ques. 310, ques. 1463
Kinmel camp riots, 709
Medals, ques. 1003, 1046, ques. 1120
Medical officers and nurses, ques. 341

War—Con.
Memorial, 1460, 3228
Militia headquarters officers not in France, ques. 506
Pensions. See that title
Re-establishment. See that title
Trophies, 4557

War Bonds. See also Budget
Govt., amount of, 2009

War Bonds Over-Suscription Validation Bill. Res. 4137, 4180; 1r., 4181; 2r., com., 4287; 3r., 4288

War Measures Act, Coal Operations and. See Coal

War Purchasing Commission. See Purchasing Commission

War Tax Stamps, ques. 807

War Trophies, 4557

Washington, Canadian Representative at, 448, 1742, 3080-1, 4533
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) to Supply, 2442-4, neg. 2475
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) to reduce vote, 4540
Announcement, 2177

Washington Labour Conference, 371

Washington, Trade Mission at, 1882

Waste, deplorable, 679

Water Carriage of Goods. See also Railway Act Amdt.
M. (Mr. Stevens) 1213
Order for Bill called—dropped, 2311

Water Powers of British Columbia, ques. 1118

Water Rights. See Irrigation Act Amdt.

Waugh, Mr.—Saar Valley Commission, 344

Ways and Means, Committee ordered, 304, 1289, 3078, 3110, 3111, 3215

Weeds. See Noxious

Weights and Measures, Inspector of, ques. 4096

Westfield Beach Railway, running rights, ques. 508, 4230

West Indies
Canada's trade with, 635, 2542
Conference, 1884, 2892, 3161, 3860
Outrages on blacks, 2845-6

Wharves, 2122. For individual wharves, see their titles

Wheat. See also Canada Grain Act
Exports to United States, ques. 313
Greece, for, ques. 509, ques. 415
Improved breeds of seed—Mr. S. Wheeler's work, 2387
Marquis, 1013
Participation certificates, 127, ques. 802, ques. 802
Production, 147
Shipments by farmers to United States, ques., 802

Wheat Board. See Canada Wheat Board

Wheeler, Mr. S., 2387-8

Whidden, Mr. Howard Primrose (Brandon)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 115; Proposed general election—Reconstruction, 115; Franchise Act—Canada and external affairs—European distress, 116; Little Canadians, 118
Alien immigrants, 829
Canada Temperance Act, ques. 807
Scientific research, 2166

White, Mr. A. V., ques. 1002

White, Mr. James, ques. 2573

White, Hon. Sir Thomas (Leeds)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 182. Personal position—congratulations to leader of the Opposition—proposed general election, 182; mandate of the Govt.—Franchise Act, 183; Union Govt. and its record, 184; the country needs stability of administration, 185; National Liberal-Conservative party—Farmers' movement, 185; Canada's war finance—Hon. Mr. Crerar, 187; tariff for revenue and for protection—his financial administration, 188; taking war profits for public benefit, 189; loans in New York—exchange rate and trade, 190—farmers leaving the land—domestic loans, 191; thrift campaign—tax-free bonds, 192; Canada's financial credit, 193; "Carry On!" 194

White, Mr. W. H. (Victoria, Alberta)
Agriculture and stock raising, 2376-8
Alberta penitentiary, ques. 2777, 3855-7

White, Mr. W. H.—Con.
Canadian National Railways
Brudenheim branch, 871-2, 885, 4250
Equipment, 4250
Canadian Wheat Board, 4130
Car shortage, 882-3
Franchise Bill, 765
Advance polls, 1934, 3875-6
Name not on list—oaths, 3877
Polls, hours to be open, 1920-1
Recall, the, 2050-1
Horse racing 3428
Naturalization, enemy alien origin, 3921-2
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 3199-3200
Pensions, 3202
Saskatchewan and Manitoba penitentiaries, ques. 2574
Soldier Settlement, 2132-3
Spirit River wheat shipments, 566

Wigmore, Mr. Rupert W. (St. John City and Counties of St. John and Albert)
Freight to Canada from United States prepaid, 1893
Opium and Drug Bill, 1753, 1756-8
St. John dry dock, 4573
St. John harbour—pilots, 2118
St. John river—wharves, 2123
St. John-Digby service, 4285-6

Williams Head quarantine, 3156

Wilson, Mr. J. R. (Saskatoon)
Agriculture, 2387
Canadian Wheat Board, 4354
Civil Service bonus—letter carriers, 1276
Coal Operations director, 3180
Commercial Feeding Stuffs, 3165-6
Franchise Bill—conveying voters, 1062
Income tax, charities, 3313
Newsprint, 2967

Wilson, Mr. J. R.—Con.
Soldier Settlement—cattle branding, 1699
Special War Revenue, 3574
Jewellers, licenses'—department stores, 3583
Wheeler, Mr. S., 2387

Wine—imports from France, ques. 1627

Winnipeg
Grain exchange, ques. 2005
Meterological station, 2125
Postal station "A," 3156
Strikers, trial of, ques. 2181

Wolff, Mr., and Printing Bureau, ques. 1624

Women in Industry, 369

Women's Conference, 262

Wood Alcohol, 3580

Workmen's Compensation Act and seamen, 2263. See also Canada Shipping Act, 2263

Wrecks, Investigations, 1612

Wrecking Plants, subsidies, 1615

Wright, Mr. H. O. (Battleford)
Budget, 2753. Luxury taxes, 2754; duties on farm machinery—farmers and tariff—Mr. Fielding's amdt., 2755
Franchise Bill, advance polls, 3876

Young and Co., Arthur. See Arthur Young

Young Men's Christian Association, 1219, 1226

Yukon, administration—salaries, etc., 3281

Yukon Placer Mining Bill. 1r., 2892; 2r., com., 3106; 3r., 3109; Senate amdts. 4264