

ment met the news of the Canadian insurrection is some earnest of what may be expected to be done in the position now assumed by the United States. It appears that these days are portentous of important events.

As soon as the business of this session of the Assembly is all before the public, a condensed view of the whole proceedings will be given in this paper: showing what measures were introduced; whether laid aside or carried to maturity; the principal arguments brought forward pro and con; and the sides taken by the several members as far as it can be ascertained. Respecting the members for this count, an impartial account of their public conduct as shown by the Journals and Reported Debates, will be given with every possible attention to accuracy. Few know the labour required to accomplish the task now proposed, but as it will certainly be acceptable to the County, it will be diligently persevered in to completion. It was found impracticable for the lengthy speeches in the long debates which so frequently occurred, to be given in full in the Standard, and therefore the foregoing plan was fixed on as best calculated to impart a useful and general view of the doings of the Session.

The extracts from the Journals will be made as heretofore until they are completed. We have been enabled to give them regularly through the kindness of Col. Weyer, who has not failed to transmit them in unbroken succession to this office, for which we will please to accept of our best thanks. The twelfth number of the Standard will be that in which the reports proposed will be commenced.

His Excellency Sir JOHN COLBORNE was installed as Administrator of the Government of Lower Canada on the 27th ult. at Montreal. In the evening the city was illuminated in honour of the event. On the same day Lord Gosford had arranged to leave Quebec on his route to England.

LYON MCKENZIE, in humble imitation of Julius Caesar, has written his commentaries on the campaign in Upper Canada, and as Storrow Brown is said to be a poet, he will probably compose an epic on the same subject, or at least an epistle after the style of Addison on the campaign of Marlborough. McKenzie's minute and agitational narrative has served more to amuse than to instruct us. We give the following capital analysis of it, in preference to anything of our own, as it comes from the Editor of Alexander's Weekly Messenger published in Philadelphia, and shows in what light the traitor and his writings are received there.

"McKenzie, the leader of the late insurrection, in Upper Canada, has written a letter to some country editor, which is now going the rounds of the newspapers, in which he gives what he calls a 'narrative' of the war in which he figured so conspicuously, not to say gloriously. If we take this narrative for gospel, Mr. McKenzie was the head, and the heart, and the hand of the conspiracy. He plotted all, directed all, led all, and, oh, lamentable! when all was 'smashed,' he set the example of running away. If we are to believe him, the failure of the grand experiment was occasioned wholly and totally by the remarkable circumstance that none of the other leaders, or rank and file, was possessed of the same spirit, intelligence, courage, and decision, which are so remarkably conspicuous in himself. If the other plotters had been as knowing, the other leaders as prompt and courageous, and the people as patriotic and inflexible as himself, all would have gone well, and Upper Canada would now be a great, independent, and flourishing empire. But alas! the other plotters were stupid and mischievous; the other officers retreated and fled; and the great mass of the people were so insensible to the pressure of British tyranny, that they would not turn out at all. A few with old fowling pieces, a few more with clubs, and a handful with sticks, were all that could be mustered; and although the valiant Mr. McKenzie would have us believe that the whole province was ripe for revolution, and burning to redress their wrongs, yet, some how it happened that their courage could not possibly be 'screwed up' to the sticking place. A few hundreds assembled and marched towards Toronto; but whatever was concocted exploded out of time and ended in defeat and disgrace.

Seriously, this letter of McKenzie's is the strongest proof we have seen that the late rebellion in Canada was without just cause, and without even the approbation of the great mass of the people. It was the work of a few designing demagogues, leading a few deluded and ignorant people to their ruin. The prime instigators of the treason were the first to take to their heels on the appearance of real danger, leaving their dupes to mourn over the result of their too easy credulity in the dungeons of Quebec and Montreal."

The Puisne Judges and Barristers of the Supreme Court, availing themselves of the presence of Mr. Hoyt, the artist in Fredericton, have requested His Honor Chief Justice Chipman to sit for his portrait, to be placed in the New Court House about to be erected in testimony of respect for his high judicial character and legal attainments.

A number of the pupils of the Rev. Dr. Somerville, who are now Barristers, Clergymen, Physicians, as a memorial of their respect and esteem for his character as a Gentleman, a Scholar, and a Divine, have requested the venerable Doctor to sit to Mr. Hoyt for his portrait to be placed in King's College Fredericton: with which the Rev. Gentleman has been pleased to comply.

The friends of Temperance are respectfully informed, that the first No. of the Temperance Monitor, will be issued on Wednesday next, the 14th instant.

Resolved, That this Society highly approve of A. W. SMITH's proposal of publishing the Temperance Monitor and will cheerfully do all in its power to further his object.

Dr. FRYE, President.

WILLIAM CURRY, Secy.

PROSPECTUS;

OF A PAPER

TO BE DEVOTED EXCLUSIVELY

To the Cause of Temperance,

And published on the second Wednesday of every Month, to be called the

TEMPERANCE MONITOR.

He of their wicked ways— Shall them admonish, and before them set The paths of righteousness.—MILTON.

The principles which guide such publications (now happily so numerous) are so generally known, that little is to be said to induce them; but the local arrangements we contemplate, which are especially to promulgate the proceedings of our County Societies—to watch over their efficiency—to notice any errors, and stimulate their exertions.

The general progress of Temperance will be exhibited in extracts from all the papers which we can procure, and we can confidently say that our collection will embrace the principal publications not only of these Colonies and of the United States, but occasionally of the great advocates of the cause in Europe.

Disquisitions from celebrated works will be quoted to prove that men of the highest acquirements have devoted their powers to rescue their fellow beings from the most debased thralldom to which human nature willingly submits, and to show that medical science has pronounced that immediate disease of any intoxicating beverage is not injurious to health, but on the contrary conducive to longevity; and thus dissipate one of the most fruitful incentives to intemperance.

Biographical anecdotes—instances of fatality by means of liquor—every thing tending to society arising from the use of wine and alcohol—every thing tending to the observation of society—authentic information on the deleterious adulterations practised by liquor vendors—and in short, whatever will serve to enforce conviction of the value of being temperate in all the duties of mankind, will be the chief aim of the Temperance Monitor.

The Price of this Paper will be so low as two shillings and six pence per annum, paid in advance; the first number of which will appear on Wednesday the 14th of March next. Lists for subscription will be sent to the Presidents of Temperance Societies and other known friends to the cause, which it is hoped will be numerous; signed and in order that the impression may be regulated, returned at their earliest convenience to
