ASK FIRE DEPARTMENT, SAYS BRITAIN

Home Bank Depositors Ask For Government Bank In City

BRITAIN SURVEY RECOMMENDS MORE POWER FOR CHIEF AITKEN

Department Employees Must Not Appeal to Members of City Council.

CHIEF TO CONTROL

Suggests Department Officers Should Leave Service or Quit Firemen's Union.

No change in the personnel of the London fire department is recommended by Dr. Horace L. Brittain and his staff of experts, who recently investigated that and three other branches of municipal endeavor. But they acknowledge that everything is not as it should be in order to insure a high standard of morale and efficiency and certain important recommendations are made, that if adhered to, they say, should result in complete satisfaction. One of these is that members of the London city council should refrain from interfering themselves unwisely and too much with the detail of that department, which should be left entirely to the chief and his staff. Their activities strictly to the very important matter of formulating policies of the service. While Dr. Brittain has clearly stated with respect to the fire and police departments that he was not conducting a judicial inquiry as to the rights of persons, his experts did investigate the several charges of dissonance and the many complaints of injustice emanating from the city council as well as from the department.

As a matter of fact it was these very charges which precipitated the survey of the department—the Albany Home fire was an event to hasten the "showdown"—and in his famous inaugural address, Mayor Wenig asked for a full consideration of these charges, even to the point of reorganization if necessary.

No Retirements Needed.

But Dr. Brittain and his experts state that in their opinion there will be no need for the retirement of officers providing their recommendations are accepted, and followed in the main. Only after these suggestions are adopted and found wanting after a fair trial, would they recommend a change in the personnel—and then only two or three of the higher-ups. In London, as in other cities, Dr. Brittain states, members of the city council, probably in all good faith, and in their zeal to serve the people as the best of their ability, have interested themselves too unwisely in the administration of the department. This is a very bad habit, the experts say, pointing out that it is to undermine the authority of Chief Aitken or any other chief and lowers or entirely destroys the morale of the men. Members of the department have accustomed themselves not to worry themselves to any appreciable degree respecting commands from the officers when they felt that they could have the same altered by appeal to individual members of the city council.

Council Keep Hands Off.

Dr. Brittain thinks that Chief Aitken could be held to a stricter accounting of his department if the aldermen will leave to his judgment such acts and duties as should be rightfully his. But these duties must be clearly defined. And the precise nature of the duties of Assistant Chief Scott must be treated likewise if there is to be harmony and efficiency. The duties of all members of the department must be clearly defined. There must be no confusion and no question as to authority. All charges, complaints, grievances, etc., must be made in a regular manner and attempts to register protest in any irregular fashion must not be countenanced under any circumstances, and those who break this regulation should be immediately dismissed from the service.

Give Chief Power.

It is also recommended to the chief that whenever any change is made in the proper manner, that there should be as little delay as possible in submitting a decision and making the same known to all. It appears that a wrong impression has been created in the past through an apparent laxity in this connection, thereby breeding a feeling of uncertainty.

DR. BRITAIN'S PRESCRIPTION FOR LONDON FIRE DEPARTMENT

THE London City Council must refrain from interference in the internal affairs of the department.

CHIEF AITKEN should immediately give captains and lieutenants ample opportunity to either resign from the force or from firemen's union.

DUTIES of the chief, his officers and men must be well defined, but the chief must have absolute control of his men.

BYLAWS affecting this situation should be amended if necessary.

FIRE CHIEF AITKEN must attend all fires—day or night—as he is directly responsible for their supervision—unless the bylaws are amended to permit otherwise.

COMPLAINTS and grievances must be in writing, and attempts to protest through other than regular channels must be halted with drastic action. The chief must rule with an iron hand if efficiency and harmony are to prevail.

THE maximum age for applicants should be reduced from 28 to 25 years, with the limit for probation fixed at one year.

NO change in the personnel of the department until recommendations have been given fair trial.

REPORTS ARRIVAL OF 8 IMMIGRANTS A DAY IN LONDON

Government's Active Immigration Policy Is Proving Real Success.

The government's active immigration policy is fast bearing fruit in this district at least, according to officials of the department of agriculture here. As many as eight immigrants a day are arriving in the city. As soon as they came John Farrell, chief of the immigration department for Western Ontario, has been placed with farmers throughout his territory. Mr. Farrell is in Forest today attending to the placing of a dozen Scotchmen and Englishmen, who arrived there this morning. Tomorrow a large consignment is expected here, and they will continue coming to the city in steady streams for some time. Taking all things into consideration the type of old countryman sent here by immigration officials in England has been very good. Few complaints have been registered with local immigration headquarters from farmers, although several laborers themselves have filed protests against their employers' alleged breach of contract with regard to working hours and wages.

Mr. Farrell anticipates that as many as 2,000 may will be placed in Western Ontario points next year. The remarkable stimulus given to the department since the King government came into power has been the most effective factor in curtailing agricultural depression felt so generally in western provinces. In Western Ontario alone there is room for 10,000 jobs on farms and every immigrant taking on this section is immediately taken on by the farmer.

"We think we can absorb all laborers that Britain can send," an official of the department of agriculture said. "The demand is always lively, and the growth of the country is such that many thousands can be taken care of with little effort."

A number of applicants for farm positions who arrived in the city last week, and who were immediately placed on farms returned here today to express their appreciation of the work done by Mr. Farrell in finding singularly high type of farm workers, and many crossed to Canada for the purpose of securing a few years' experience on Western Ontario farms, after which they intend to purchase farms of their own.

Several hundred western harvesters have returned to the city seeking jobs, and the immigration department is extremely busy sorting out those best fitted for farm work and classifying them under different heads, according to their experience.

C. N. R. WILL CONSTRUCT AN ANNEX TO WORKSHOPS

Special to The Advertiser. Quebec, Oct. 9.—To meet requirements resulting from increases in traffic, and the need of more equipment, and also of more spacious quarters, the C. N. R. has decided to build an annex to the St. Malo workshops. A construction permit for $37,000 was issued today to the railway by the Quebec public works department, and it is said that the work will start immediately.

ALASKAN MOTORSHIP RUNS AGROUND OFF B. C. COAST

Associated Press Despatch. Seattle, Oct. 9.—In a message picked up by the Federal Telegraph Company here at 4:30 a.m., the motor ship Kennecott, a cargo carrier of 6,010 dead-weight tons, reported herself "high and dry on rocks" at a point near the boundary between Alaska and British Columbia. Owned by the Alaska Steamship Company, the Kennecott carries a crew of 20.

SUES TO RECOVER $5,000 DAMAGES FOR INJURIES

James Kestle and Wife Enter Action Against William Amos, Jr.

James Clarence Kestle and his wife, Harriet, of London Township, have entered an action against William Amos, Jr., to be tried at the fall assizes, which open at the court house Monday, claiming $5,000 damages for injuries.

Kestle is a chauffeur. Amos is under 21 years of age, and is the son of William Amos, London Township farmer. Kestle alleges his wife Harriet was knocked down on the Proof Line road on Dec. 9, 1922, by a horse and buggy driven furiously by young Amos, and that his wife was seriously injured and permanently disfigured. He claims $2,000 because of loss of her services, and for medical and nursing expenses. His wife claims $3,000.

W. G. R. Bartram is acting for the plaintiffs, and J. H. Harcourt, official guardian, of Toronto, for the defendant.

The defendant claims the accident was due to the negligence of the plaintiff, Harriet Kestle, and that the claims are excessive. The case is on the jury list. Margaret Kathleen McLeod, mother of the plaintiff, D. S. McLeod, of St. Marys, have entered action against Dr. R. F. Slater and Fred Slater of Heppeler, for $2,500 for injuries.

The plaintiffs claim that on May 14, 1922, the defendants were driving an excessive rate of speed on Queen street, St. Marys, and that their auto struck Miss McLeod, breaking her leg and injuring her internally.

The father claims his daughter will not recover completely. The girl is asking $2,500 damages and the father $1,000.

McEvoy, Judd & Henderson are acting for the plaintiffs, and Murphy, Gunn & Murphy for the defendants. The case has been entered on the jury list.

WATCH THE BALL

If Babe Ruth Hits a Homer, You'll See the Ball Go, Here.

Tomorrow!

Babe Ruth is at bat. The count is two strikes and three balls. Two men are out. The bases are full. And the Swat King crashes his mighty bat against a fast inshoot. The ball sails into deep right field blenchers. Four runs. The crowd goes mad.

Perhaps it will happen. If it does, every move will be reproduced on the playograph in front of The Advertiser building before the crowd in New York has stopped cheering.

The playograph is simply a miniature baseball diamond, about fourteen feet wide, and The Advertiser has secured it for the world's series games, because it is the most ingenious and most comprehensive device available for telling the story of a baseball game.

The playograph shows every move of the ball—the runners speeding down the baselines—the umpire's announcements of "strike" and "ball"—every detail of play.

It shows the play within a few seconds after it happens in New York, because The Advertiser has a telegraph wire direct from the play field by which every move on the field will be flashed simultaneously.

On the scoreboard which flanks the miniature diamond a complete record of the game is made. It is the next best thing to sitting in the grandstand in New York.

The playograph will reproduce the world's series games every day in front of The Advertiser building, and the public is cordially invited to make use of it.

POLICE COURT FREES WESTMINSTER PATIENT

Drink of Rubbing Alcohol Nearly Results in Fatality.

Rubbing alcohol has its own and proper uses, but taken internally it is mighty nasty poison, even for those individuals who boast that their "innards" are zinc-lined. A patient from Westminster Hospital appeared in police court yesterday and admitted to Magistrate Graydon that he had been drinking from a bottle, the contents being described by him as rubbing alcohol. He would not say that the stuff was liquor, and the case was adjourned while Chief Birrell had the concoction analyzed. The case was written off the books today by Magistrate Graydon, as the chief offered no evidence. "The man was nearly dead," the chief explained to The Advertiser. "He is very sick right now, and we had him returned to the hospital immediately."

Sir Auckland Returning to U.S.

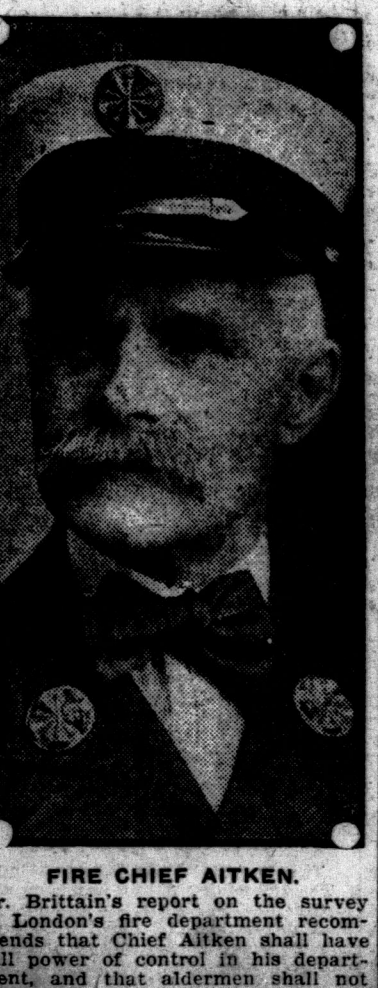

Associated Press Despatch. Washington, Oct. 9.—The British ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, and Lady Geddes will return to Washington early in December. When Ambassador Geddes departed for London some weeks ago, reports were widely published he would not return to this country. Washington papers today give prominence to his expected return.

Alberta Contemplates Action To Boost Her Resources Throughout Canada.

Special to The Advertiser. Edmonton, Alta., Oct. 9.—Undismayed by the limitation by the Canadian National Railway of the cheap rate on coal from Alberta to Ontario points, Alberta is planning a motion picture campaign throughout the Dominion to demonstrate this province's resources in "black diamonds."

Fred V. Siebert, federal officer of the natural resources intelligence branch, has just received word from Ottawa that he has been loaned to the provincial authorities to assist in making Alberta coal better known throughout the world.

FIRE CHIEF AITKEN.

RECENT CHANGES IN STAMP SYSTEM AFFECT SALARIES

Sale by Excise Department Will Cut Sub-Postmasters' Remuneration.

PLAN ECONOMICAL

With the recent introduction of federal excise stamps for all checks and receipts, fifteen branch and sub-postmasters in the London district will have their salaries affected to a small degree, according to T. C. Duncan, postmaster for London.

Sub-postmasters receive a salary dependent on the revenue from their offices in addition to a small commission on stamp sales, amounting to a flat rate of one per cent. Although the fifteen branch and sub-postmasters in the London district will be affected slightly, the rural postmasters who are on a commission basis only, will be affected more.

According to the regulation which governs the matter in the case of rural postmasters they receive a 50 per cent commission for the first $1,000 worth of stamps in a year; from $1,000 to $10,000 the rate is 30 per cent; while over $10,000 the commission is 20 per cent.

Mr. Duncan, when asked this morning by The Advertiser why the new excise stamps were not sold by the postmasters, said that it would not always be understood by the public that stamps obtained at the postoffice could not be used for postage. The result of such a misunderstanding would be that letters or mail parcels prepaid with excise stamps, would pay postage.

According to Hon. Jacques Bureau, minister of customs and excise, a real saving is being effected by introduction of the excise stamps. In a recent interview he said: "In the first place, it must be remembered that most of the postmasters in the rural districts are on a commission basis, and that those selling up to $10,000 of stamps per year receive 50 per cent of the first thousand dollars sold."

Makes for Economy. "Under the new law, a commission of only 2 per cent is granted to vendors of excise stamps, and only 1 per cent to the banks."

A real economy is effected. In round figures, if $1,000,000 of excise stamps are purchased this year from customs and excise offices and the banks, the commission deducted will not be more than $20,000. In other words, $980,000 will go into the treasury. If, however, the old method of using postage stamps had been maintained, and these postage stamps had been bought from rural postmasters on commission, there would have been a deduction of up to $500,000. In other words, the new measure saves the country 48 per cent. Therefore, the object of the measure is both to effect economy and increase the country's revenue," said the minister.

ASK PREMIER TO PROVIDE PROVINCIAL BANK IN CITY

London Depositors in Defunct Institution Plan To Urge Establishment.

STRONG DEMAND

May Request Sir Adam Beck to Discuss Matter With Cabinet.

A demand that the Ontario government establish a provincial bank in London will likely be made by the London Home Bank Depositors' Association shortly.

Joseph Dambra, president of the local depositors' association, declared today that he had been approached by dozens of members asking that a resolution be drawn up and submitted to Premier Ferguson, requesting him to use his influence with the provincial treasurer to found a bank controlled and operated by the government.

"I understand there are about three or four such institutions in existence," Mr. Dambra said. "Many requests have been received by me from depositors that a similar one be established here. The desire seems to be so acute, in fact, that a meeting will probably be called to consider the question."

"I believe that when the government knows there is a demand for a provincial bank it will be ready to fill that demand. Depositors will likely petition Premier Ferguson for one."

Others stated that Sir Adam Beck would be asked to talk the matter over with members of the cabinet. In the meantime the opinion of J. E. Weldon, the Lindsay solicitor who represents all Home Bank depositors in Ontario, will be sought. It is expected that Mr. Weldon, who is assisting G. T. Clarkson, interim liquidator, will have something to say regarding the possible dividend for depositors some time next month. Mr. Clarkson has been given until Dec. 6 to clean up the internal affairs of the defunct bank, but it is possible that a report may be forthcoming at an earlier date.

Announcement that authority was given for borrowing money which would pay depositors 25 per cent of their holdings, was received with pleasure here. The sooner an installment of confidence will be established, they claim.

HAROLD NEWELL HEADS WESTERN FRESHMEN

Newcomers to College of Arts Elect Officers For Year.

Freshmen at the University of Western Ontario today elected their officers for the year, Harold Newell being elected president by a narrow margin over D. Bower.

In their purple and white skull caps, the "Fresh" marched importantly up to the ballot box, located just inside the entrance to the main building, and after scanning the list of candidates, cast their ballots. Voting was carried on from 9 to 12 noon, at which hour the votes were counted.

Other successful candidates were Marion M. Drew, who was elected to the vice-presidency by acclamation; secretary, Oliver Miller; treasurer, G. Simpson; student council representative, Mary Stark; literary representative, M. Wilkey; sermon series, H. McGuffin.

Approximately 150 voters exercised their privilege of deciding who should head the class for the year, and general satisfaction is expressed at the result.

CURZON MAY NOT BE ABLE TO MAINTAIN SECRECY BAN

Premiers Will Await Reply of Foreign Secretary On Suggestions.

WHY ACTION TAKEN

Plain Speaking by Dominion's Representatives Led to Order.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON.

London, Oct. 8.—What did the premiers of the dominions say at yesterday's "strictly confidential" session of the imperial conference?

On this there is much questioning today. While it is admitted that the delegates could speak more freely, knowing that their remarks would not be reported, even by way of the dry colonial office communiqué, regret is expressed that the curtain should have been drawn on the day the Dominion premiers stated their views.

In heavy black type on its front page, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express this morning declares that the "delegates are muzzled; the British people are kept in the dark." The Express adds this remarkable statement:

"The people of the dominions expect their prime ministers to do their worst in the open. If, for instance, Mackenzie King were to propose to the conference that Canada should be changed from a dominion to a commonwealth, the people of Canada would want to know why he makes such a suggestion."

Curzon Raises Point.

The Daily Mail more mildly observes: "The decision to enforce secrecy, while the whole world is so extremely plain speaking by the dominion prime ministers, and other imperial representatives on matters of vital foreign policy."

According to reports, it was Lord Curzon who yesterday raised the point that the whole five hours' debate should be regarded as strictly confidential, otherwise, further international difficulties might arise. The Canadian and Australian representatives, who from the outset have been pressing for the circulation of the greatest possible information regarding the conference, concurred in this in view of the circumstances.

Although yesterday's resolution as to secrecy was unanimous, the issue is not yet settled. When the conference meets again on Thursday, Lord Robert Cecil will explain the part played by the League of Nations in the recent history of foreign affairs, and Lord Curzon will reply to the observations of the dominion premiers. Then the question of publicity will be raised again.

May Be Misunderstood.

Among the overseas delegates there is a feeling that their stand might be misunderstood, unless they are in a position to make their views clear to their own countries. If the conference is unable to reach any decision as to the matter of general publicity, it is probable that the representatives of the dominions will reserve their right to reveal their own views publicly once Lord Curzon has made his reply.

Today and tomorrow, in the absence from the conference of Premier Baldwin owing to prior engagements, the imperial conference will take a recess. The economic committee work, but with the consideration of the question of empire settlement, and Australia will present its experience of the week-end it is expected that the important topic of imperial preference will be reached by the economic conference. The subject comes up under two heads, tariff preference and imperial preference in public contracts.

Although Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, on behalf of the Indian delegates, briefly intervened in the debate on foreign policy at the conference, it is understood that he is devoting all his time to preparation.

CANADIAN PRESS IS FACING CRISIS

Withdrawal of $50,000 Gov- ernment Grant May Force Curtailement of Service.

WILL REORGANIZE

Canadian Press Despatch.
Winnipeg, Oct. 8.—What is the future scope of the Canadian Press, the co-operative news-gathering and distributing association of the daily newspaper publishers of Canada. In view of the approaching withdrawal of the government grant of $50,000 a year, made for the purpose of enabling it to carry on a news service by leased wires from coast to coast, can the association carry on without this material aid?

These were the questions confronting its board of directors at their semi-annual meeting here today. The unanimous decision reached was that the Canadian Press must at all cost continue its national functions.

that for this purpose the vital connecting link of leased wires between east and west, Ottawa and Winnipeg must be maintained. The management presented a report with this end in view and whereby members of Ontario and Quebec would co-operate with members of the prairie section in continuing to lease these Ottawa-Winnipeg wires at a cost of about $300,000 a year, hitherto met out of the government's treasury.

The management, however, sees no possibility under present economic conditions of maintaining leased wires over the two other natural gaps hitherto also covered by the government grant, namely, Montreal, Halifax, for benefit of maritime newspaper members, and Calgary-Vancouver for the benefit of British Columbia members. Under the organization of news services rendered necessary as from April 1 next, the management is reluctantly forced to recommend that these sections of leased wire mileage be dropped, thus destroying the free flow of news across the Dominion, and giving a much-attenuated news service. In particular of Canadian and British news, to the maritime and coast newspapers. Should, however, these sections determine to shoulder the considerable extra cost involved, then Ontario and Quebec members would under the plan submitted by the management co-operate in identical fashion as it is proposed they shall co-operate with the prairie section, namely, by contributing to the cost of these leased wire until the amount that otherwise must be expended for bringing inward to Ontario and Quebec a limited service of maritime or western Canadian news over commercial wires from Winnipeg. Hah-fax or Vancouver, as the case might be.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1923.

Lloyd George Did Things.

Lloyd George has the stage and the front page in Canada. People like him because he is a man of action.

Lloyd George is the one man left in public life who sat with the "Big Four" at the Paris peace conference. Orlando of Italy went with the collapse of his cabinet in 1919; in January Clemenceau was set aside in France, and within two months United States Senate killed the work of President Woodrow Wilson, and shortly after his party was routed at the polls.

The ex-premier of Britain was left fatherless at an early age; an uncle, Richard Lloyd, a shoemaker, and a godly man, gave him the best education his limited means would allow, and he started to practice law, turning later to politics. For 18 years he sat as Liberal member of Carnarvon.

In 1908 he started to climb, when Asquith took him into the cabinet as chancellor of the exchequer. He had not to wait long for a battle to his liking, for in 1909 he routed the House of Lords in the "budget battle," and as one critic says, "this was the first victory against the privileged cathedral of wealth in the modern world."

The war called for Lloyd George. It was he who brought in drastic moves to take wealth from those who had it, and make recipients of unearned incomes put much of them into the common war fund.

When Germany was scoring heavily on the western front, and when British troops had only a few shells per gun, it was Lloyd George who took off his coat, left the exchequer, and with a small office, a secretary, and an oak table, started to make Britain a mighty war machine. He raised an army of 5,000,000 war workers; provided for 4,000,000 tons of shipping; made big estates into truck gardens, and brought about conscription.

All the way through this mighty Welshman was the possessor of tremendous dynamic force; a force that did the thing first, and argued it out after.

That is why Canada is ready to yell itself hoarse every time Lloyd George comes in sight.

He did things; he defied convention and precedent; and he is still a man of vigor who will be heard from in British public life.

Defying the Government.

It might facilitate matters if those who are using the name London Jockey Club would come out and announce themselves.

The club says it intends to go ahead with a race track and betting, at Niagara Falls, in defiance of the wishes of the Ontario government.

The Ontario government, through the attorney-general, should fight the thing if for no other reason than the determination to operate at the Falls comes as nothing short of defiance of the laws of the province.

It is possible to have too much betting in a province, just as it is possible to have too many saw thistles on a farm.

The government ought to have a fair idea of when to call a halt, and when it countenances the races and betting that have taken place in a season it probably realizes that the general public has parted with enough of its money.

Now a new organization says to the government, "We do not care what you say. We are going to run a race track at Niagara and we are going to have betting as well, and we are going into this business because we want to make some easy money for our shareholders. We are setting ourselves up as a higher authority than the government, and if you want to interfere we will fight it out in the courts."

Ontario does not want an autonomy for its government, but it does want an administrative agency that will say that law is law.

It would be a fine kettle of fish in short time if individuals and organizations that differed with a government regulation were to come to the point where they would go ahead on their own plans and defy the government to come into the courts and stop them.

What Our Cars Cost.

The province spent $130,000,000 on motor cars in 1922. That is a lot of money, more, in fact, than the person can get to come to the focus of his vision. For part, we must be content with that view that "it's a lot of it another way, put it in terms of wheat, oats, hay, and such things. Ontario's field crops in 1921 were valued at $220,000,000, and over half of that amount was what Ontario spent the following year on cars.

How are they paid for? A dealer very closely in touch with the situation says not over 20 per cent of the cars sold are paid for in cash. The usual method is about one-third of the purchase price in cash; the balance in monthly payments for a year.

These monthly payments become a new source of employment. One can go from Ontario to California in almost any make of car, and find service all the way. There must be thousands of places where oil and gas are sold, thousands where repairs are made or parts carried. It has built up an enormous business separate and apart from that to which we have been used.

Nor is the business likely to decrease. Once a man drives a car he generally keeps to keep the wheels going around, but he will do the stunting and keep on going. That is not a supposition—it is a proven fact.

Yes, we are putting our millions into motor cars, and even if it is cutting into the revenue of other lines of business there is small chance of any change being made.

Stop Making Them.

Mr. Justice Swift, at a murder trial in old London, said it should be a criminal offence for any one to have a revolver. Certainly if there were no revolvers there would be no shootings.

So they make people get permits before they can buy one. And if a permit is refused, some other way is found to secure a weapon.

The number of men, either in England, Canada, or United States, who are unable to secure a revolver, if they are determined to have one, is very small.

Meanwhile there are factories grinding them out, and using most attractive advertising about safe-guarding the home.

The logical step is to turn the key in the door of the places where they are made. After that there might be some chance to stop the toting of guns. At present there is not.

Note and Comment.

Port Hope Guide says six bootleggers are doing business on the main street. Is that an attack on the police or a bid for tourist trade?

SONG OF THE SEA.

Oh, I love to rave of the bounding wave
And the joys of the misty deep,
Where the raging foam makes you think of home.

As I sit at midnight watch you keep,
Oh, I love to think of the deep blue drink
And the ocean's booming roar,
But 'twixt you and me, I loathe the sea;

There's nothing I dislike more.
Oh, I love to boast of a rock-ribbed coast,
With my schooner scudding near,
And my free from care, calm smiling air.

As my craft I gaily steer,
Oh, I love to say that the swirling spray
Is the thing I most adore;
But it's all a lie, for I'd rather die
Than move ten feet from shore.

The first week our next door neighbor

HOME BANK LOSSES.
Sir—The government chartered
the Home Bank, and told us our money was safe there. Now the least thing the government can do is to stand on an equal footing with the depositors. And if the Bankers' Association does not stand by now
and make good, never again let us hear that we have the finest banking system in the world.

Let them admit that they are a failure, and we will find some other way of taking care of our money.
I believe that every director and official connected with the Home Bank should be compelled by law to give up every dollar they have and divide it among the depositors.

It is the only thing that will help

THE way of Balaam the son of Beer, who loved the hire of wrong doing.—II. Peter ii, 15.

Among antiquities it is wise to discriminate. Some old furniture is both ugly and uncomfortable.

Evil is almost, if not quite, as ancient as good.
Folly and wisdom, among men at least, are twins, and we cannot distinguish between them by the gray hairs.

Adam's way was old enough; and so was the way of Cain, and of Noah's vile son, and of Lot's lewd daughters, and of Balaam, and of Jezabel, and of Manasseh.

Judas Iscariot was as old as St. John.
Ananias and Sapphira were of the same age with St. Peter and St.
Paul.

This is what the hard-boiled conservative fails to take into account.
It is enough for him to know that a thing is antique, to make him regard it as venerable.

He reveres all long-established ways, and considers every rule of ancient date an infallible commandment.

The petrified moral judgment and makes ethics a matter of chronology.

No rule, no custom is old enough to refuse an answer to the question—
Are you right or wrong?

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
There are few tragedies greater than the death of an infant a few hours or a few weeks after its birth.

One never appreciates his own mother until he has been an eyewitness to the sacrifices and sufferings of child-bearing, and of child-birth. The only adequate reward, the only possible reward, for the months of apprehension and discomfort, and for the last hours of agony, is the joy of possessing a sweet, smiling, dimpled baby.

What is the misery, the hopelesness, the moral blackness following the untimely death of a precious baby? There are no words to describe the emotions of a mother thus deprived.

My own greatest interest in the field of health relates to the fate and welfare of the babies. To my mind the fairest page in the history of the world's progress is the improved and improving outlook for the babies.

When Nathan Straus began his fight for better babies and for their protection against early death, one-fourth of the infants born in New York City died before reaching the age of one year. As a result of his work, education of the mother has become a part of the public health which, in that time, was distributed in the great cities, and now the infant death rate is only one-third as many as they were thirty years ago.

Out of every thousand babies born
this year two hundred will live who would have died under the conditions of 1890. What finer monument could any man have!

But there is much yet to do, and that God it is being done.
In Baltimore an eminent cause of infant mortality, The Federal Children's Bureau has found that in the poorest families in that city one baby in six died within the first year. In the most prosperous families only one in twenty-six died.
There appears to be a direct relationship between the earnings of the father and the infant death-rate.

But I hasten to add that poverty need not result in infant deaths. By proper education as to care and feeding, especially as to the giving of pure milk, there need not be a high death-rate, even in the poorest families. This fact is proved by the experience of the New York Board of Health in the congested and poorest districts of the East Side. The eager mothers there have more wholeheartedly undertaken to carry out the rules of health than have the more well-to-do of the city. The result is that the death-rate is much lower there than in many better sections.

I urge upon all mothers and expectant mothers the tremendous importance of having expert advice in that most critical of human experiences, the prenatal period, and also during the first year of the baby's life.

TO THE EDITOR.

ALEXANDRA SCHOOL AND DOUBLE GLAZING.

Sir—In Friday's issue of London's secondary Journal there appears an illustration of the Alexandra school,
together with a report of a recommendation of Dr. Downham, medical officer of health, "that the double glazing in the windows of the above
school be removed as being insanitary."

Possibly Mr. Downham or his inspection have not inspected all of the London schools, or possibly they have not inspected any of them, but have accepted a certain newspaper's statement regarding the windows and their condition in the Alexandra school as correct. If they had inspected the whole of the London schools—carefully—they would have found that at least four of the other schools have the awful double, in-sanitary glazing in their windows,
and if they had traveled about the country at all with their eyes open
they might possibly have found similar double glazing in a majority of Toronto's schools, and in many other schools throughout the country.

However, possibly the aforementioned article may be chasing rainbows or grinding an axe. For that reason, I am not venturing to divert them from their chase or other purpose, by writing to them, as I know
in their great spirit of fairness (sic)
they would hesitate to publish my letter, and I hesitate to embarrass them.

I will, however, take this opportunity to state that the double glass
in the windows of the Alexandra school was installed in accordance with my specifications, after the same

had been duly submitted to the board of education of that date, and was passed and approved of by them.
Further, that the reported finger-
marks of the workmen who installed the glass are non-existent. All the glass was carefully cleaned and the air-space hermetically sealed.

It might further be added that the insulation provided by the dead-air space and the extra thickness of glass has probably saved the ratepayers of London the cost of some hundreds of tons of coal since the school has been in use.

WAGES TOO SMALL.
Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir—In view of the recent bank disclosures, is it not time that the employing class in Canada looked after the side of the wages paid to the workers in and around banks, etc.?

From what I gather, they do not receive wages enough to keep their self-respect, let alone their wives and children, and we wonder why they (the employees) stoop to deceit
and theft.

A recent case, which happened to my own son, applies to banks and other industries. My boy, in the teen age, recently got a job in a wholesale establishment here in the city, and after working a week was paid the handsome sum of four dollars for five days' work, two half days being forced to school. Of course, I did not believe the boy
when he told of what wages he received,
so I went to see the employer to ask if the wages paid were correct, and the employer said: "Why, yes, how much do you want to learn a business?"

Now, on inquiry, into what work

he had to perform, he said he had to sweep the floors, dust the boxes,
and write a few invoices, make himself generally useful around the place, run errands, etc.

I at once proceeded to tell this man that he was sadly out of date.
Here was a man who was expecting and receiving a cheap janitor service, invoice clerk and a parcel boy
all for $4 a week.

On talking this over, he came back with the old gag about how his father paid such and such amount of money to his employer to learn the business when he was a boy, etc., and did I expect he was going to make enough money to keep me, his father, etc.? The lad could not keep his own self-respect and pay for shoe leather out of such a pittance of wages. Then we wonder why boys leave home, and go to other countries.
We have a minimum wage scale for girls, why not for boys, bank clerks,
and others employed in financial institutions? It's time the employers woke up that it's the low wages paid that breeds discontent, deceit, and theft. This is 1923, not 1823, when things were different.

dians, who have, and they are still

"1915"—TOLD BY WINSTON CHURCHILL

Could Ships Force the Dardanelles? —The Inside Reason For Their Attempt; Lord Fisher Said: 'You Want One Man!'

Russia's Call For Help and Discussions With Kitchener.

FISHER FOR ACTION

Beginning of Plans — Queen
Elizabeth To Lead Attack.

By RT. HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL.
ARTICLE IN THE SEARCH FOR A NAVAL OFFENSIVE.

On Jan. 2 I received the following letter from Lord Kitchener:
"You have no doubt seen Buchanan's telegram about the Russians and Turks, if not Fitzgerald is taking it over."

"Do you think any naval action would be possible to prevent the Turks sending more men into the Caucasus and thus denuding Constantinople?"

With this note, Colonel Fitzgerald brought the telegram from which the following extract is relevant:
"Early this week the position of Russians in the Caucasus gave cause for grave anxiety. Turks having commenced enveloping movement
seriously threatening Russian forces.
Commander-in-chief of the army in the Caucasus pressed most urgently for reinforcements, many Caucasian troops being now employed against Germans, but grand duke has told him he must manage to keep on as he is. Grand duke sent for General Williams on Wednesday and officially informed him he was determined to proceed with his present plans against Germany and keep them unaltered."

"Fourth Siberian Army Corps is now on the way to Warsaw, and will be joined by Guard Army Corps, when it is hoped to continue active operations against Germans, and thus help to ease position of allies, although in ordinary course it would be natural to send Caucasians to Turkish front."
"Grand duke, however, asked if it would be possible for Lord Kitchener to arrange for a demonstration of some kind against Turks elsewhere, either naval or military, and to spread reports which would cause
the Turks, who he says, are very liable to go off at a tangent,
to withdraw some of the forces now acting against Russians in the Caucasus, and thus ease the position of Russians."

The grand duke added that, even if Lord Kitchener was unable to

CHURCHILL TELLS THE STORY

To force the Dardanelles!
Britain's great ships sent forward to engage in a battle with land forts to drive through to the Black Sea, secure supplies of wheat and aid the distressed armies of the Russian Grand Duke.

Lord Fisher proposes the attack following an appeal from the Russians. Would it work? Britain's greatest strategists felt that the move would alarm her enemies along the whole battle front.

Lord Kitchener sent word to Russia that Britain would come to her aid. His telegram forced the war office to prepare a plan to bring the armies of the Turk out of the Caucasus.

Churchill cables commander of squadron at Dardanelles
to ascertain if rush on straits were feasible.

Vice-Admiral Carden replies stating only extended operations would bring satisfactory results.

Everyone believed ships could fight forts, and plan of attack met with approval of the highest British authorities.
They treated it as an interesting and hopeful proposal.

War staff proposes that Queen Elizabeth, armed with 15-inch guns, head the attack. Giant battleship was already under orders to proceed to the Mediterranean to try out her guns. British plan of attack was to remain outside the range of the guns of the Turk and slowly crumble the forts along the Straits. By this system the admiralty hoped to reach the Black Sea and come to the aid of Russia as promised by Lord Kitchener.

help, he should stick to his present
plans.

Later in the day Lord Kitchener came over himself to see me at the admiralty, and we had a full discussion on the Russian telegram and whether the navy could do anything to help. All the possible alternatives in the Turkish theatre were mentioned. We both had in mind our discussions of November on the possibilities of a descent from Egypt upon Gallipoli. We both saw clearly the far-reaching consequences of a successful attack on Constantinople.
If there was any prospect of a serious attempt to force the Straits of the Dardanelles at a later stage, it would be in the highest degree imprudent to stir them up for the sake of a mere demonstration. I put this point forward and suggested alternative divisions to help the Russians. Lord Kitchener did not dissent from the argument, but he returned steadily and decidedly to the statement that he had no troops to spare, and could not face a large new expansion of our military commitments. I have sent through the foreign office the following telegram to Petrograd:

"Please assure me grand duke that steps will be taken to make a demonstration against the Turks. It is, however, feared that any action we can devise and carry out will be unlikely to seriously affect numbers of enemy in the Caucasus, or cause their withdrawal."

This telegram committed us to a demonstration against the Turks of some kind or another, but it did not commit us in respect of its direction.
The character or scope. It was the least that could have been said in answer to a request of a hard-pressed ally.

The next morning (January 2) Lord
Fisher entered the field.
The letter which he now sent me is of great importance. It reveals Lord Fisher's position fully and clearly. The turbulence of his style in no way affects the shrewdness and profoundity of his vision. I do not think that Lord Fisher ever took any character or expressed any opinions
which were irreconcilable with the general principles of these first thoughts. He was always in favor of a grand scheme against the Turks and to rally the Balkans. He always believed that Bulgaria was the key to the situation (his quarter he was always prepared to risk the old battleships as part of a large naval,
military and diplomatic combination.
In all this we were, as his letter shows, in entire agreement. That these large schemes were not carried into effect was not his fault nor mine.

Lord Fisher's Letter of Jan. 3, 1915.
"Dear Winston:
"I've been informed by Hankey that war council assembled next Thursday, and I suppose it will be like game of ninepins. Everyone will have a plan and one nip in failing will knock over its neighbor. I consider the attack on Turkey not the field—but only if it's immediate!
However, it won't be! Our Aulic Council will adjourn until the following Thursday fortnight. (N. B.— When did we meet last? And what came of it? ? ?)

"We shall decide on a futile bombardment of the Dardanelles which wears out the irreplaceable guns of the indefatigable which probably will require replacement. That good resulted from the last bombardment?
Did it move a single Turk from the Caucasus? And so the war goes on!
You want one man.
"This is the Turkey plan:
"1. Appoint Sir W. Robertson, the present quartermaster-general, to command the expeditionary force.
"2. Immediately replace all Indians and 75,000 seasoned troops from Sir John French's command with Territorials, etc., from England (as you yourself suggested) and embark this Turkish expeditionary force ostensibly for protection of Egypt, with all possible despatch at Marseilles,
and land them at Besika Bay direct with previous intents before they arrive with troops now in Egypt against Haifa and Alexandretta, the latter to be a real occupation because of its intimate value as regards the oil fields of the Garden of Eden,
with which by rail it is in direct communication, and we shove out the Germans now established at Alexandretta with an immense Turkish concession—the last act of that archenemy of England, Marshall von Bieberstein!
"3. The Greeks to go for Gallipoli
at the same time as we go for Besika,
and the Bulgarians, Serbians, Roumanians for Austria (all this you said yourself).
"4. Sturdee force the Dardanelles
at the same time with 'Majestic' class and 'Canopus' class! God bless him!
"But as the great Napoleon said,
'Celerity—without it—Failure!'
"In the history of the world—a Junta has never won! You want one man!
"Yours, F."

A Consensus of Opinion.
There never was the slightest chance, the Lord Fisher's plan being carried into effect. Sir William Robertson, to whom he proposed to trust it, would presumably have advised strongly against it, his policy being, concentration in the main, or, as he would no doubt have described it, the decisive theatre. The withdrawal of the Indian Corps, and 75,000 seasoned troops from Sir John French's command and their replacement by territorial divisions would have been resisted to the point of resignation by the commander-in-chief, supported by his whole staff. General Joffre and the French government would have protested in a decisive manner.
Lord Fisher's third paragraph about the Greeks, Bulgarians, Serbians and Rumanians expressed exactly what everybody wanted. It was the obvious supreme objective in this part of the world. The question was, how to procure it? This was the root of the matter. It was in connection with this that Lord Fisher's fourth paragraph made its impression upon me. Here for the first time was the suggestion of forcing the Dardanelles

with old battleships.
This series of weighty representations had the effect of making me move. I thought I saw a great convergence of opinion in the direction of that attack upon the Dardanelles
which I had always so greatly desired. The arguments in its favor were overwhelming. And now the highest authorities, political, naval and military, were apparently ready
to put their shoulders to the wheel.
All Mr. Lloyd George's advocacy and influence seemed about to be cast in the direction of Turkey and the Balkans. Though his method was different, the ultimate object, namely, the rallying of the Balkan states against Austria and Turkey, was the same, and all his arguments applied equally to either method. I knew from my talks with Mr. Balfour that he, too, was profoundly impressed by the advantages which might be reaped by successful action in this southern theatre. Lastly, the foreign office and Sir Edward Grey were of course keenly interested.
Here was a great consensus of opinion, at least, as sufficient impulse and unity for action. But was there a practicable scheme? This I determined to find out, and on January 3, with the active agreement of Lord Fisher and after a talk with Sir Henry Jackson, who was specially studying this theatre and advising us thereupon, I telegraphed to Vice-Admiral Carden, commanding at the Dardanelles, as follows:

Admiralty to Vice-Admiral Carden.
First Lord to Admiral Carden:
"Do you consider the forcing of the Dardanelles by ships alone a practical operation?
"It is assumed older battleships fitted with mine-bumpers would be used, preceded by colliers or other merchant craft as mine-bumpers and sweepers.
Importance of results would justify severe loss.
"Let me know your views."

All this was purely exploratory. I did not commit myself at this stage
even to the general principle of an attack on Turkey. I wanted to see the alternatives weighed and to see what support such projects would in fact command. All our affairs at this stage were complicated with the plans which, as has been explained in the last chapter, were under discussion
for the advance of the army along the coast and for the closing up of Zebrugga.

I was still thinking a great deal of the northern theatre, of Borkum
and of the Baltic. "We had better,"
I wrote on January 4 in a note to the first sea lord on various points at the first came up for discussion at the war council the next day. "The other others have to say about the Turkish plans before taking a decided line. I would not grudge 100,000 men, because of the great political effects in the Balkan peninsula."
"The naval advantages," he replied
the same day, "of the possession of Constantinople and the getting of overwhelming that I consider Colonel Hankey's plan for Turkish operations vital and imperative and very pressing."

There is no doubt we could have worked together unitedly and with the utmost enthusiasm for the southern amphibious plan. If it had been pressed forward by the war council
on a great scale and with the necessary drive and decision.
On Jan. 5 the answer from Admiral Carden arrived. It was remarkable.
Vice-Admiral Carden to First Lord.
Jan. 5, 1915.

"With reference to your telegram of 3rd instant, I do not consider Dardanelles can be rushed by extended operations, with large number of ships.
"At the war council that afternoon
the question of an attack on Turkey and a diversion in the Near East
was one of the principal subjects discussed. Everyone seemed alive discussed. Everyone, and Admiral Carden's telegram, which I read out, was heard with extreme interest. Its significance lay in its influencing the decision in a decisive manner without opening a new military commitment on a large scale; and further it afforded an effective means of helping the grand duke without wasting the Dardanelles possibilities upon nothing more than demonstration. My return to the admiralty I found that the idea of a gradual forcing of the straits by extended operations was viewed with favor both by the staff and by Sir Henry Jackson. I had a conversation with Sir Henry Jackson, who had that day completed a memorandum upon the question (which I read some days later). Sir Henry Jackson, deprecated any attempt to rush the straits,
but he spoke of the considerable effects of the brief bombardment of Nov. 3, and he was attracted by the idea of a step-by-step reduction of the fortresses, though troops would be needed to follow up and complete the naval attack and especially to occupy Constantinople. So here we had the chief of the staff,
the admiral studying this particular theatre, and the admiral in command, all apparently in general accord in principle. This coincidence of opinion in officers so widely separated and so differently circumstanced, impressed me very much,
and I therefore, telegraphed on Jan.
8 to Vice-Admiral Carden as follows:

First Lord to Admiral Carden.
Jan. 6, 1915.
"Your view is altered with my high

The K. of C. of Hamilton has not yet won the second round from Burlington. The return game being played in Brantford on Wednesday of this week. New York, Oct. 8.—To hear Joe Jacobs talk, he had more adventures down in Columbia, Guy, than Stanley had in Africa. The way he tells it the Dixie fans had a shapely tree all picked out for him and his meal ticket to swing upon, provided they did not keep their engagement with William Lawrence Stripling in the ring. Not only did they have the tree picked out, but they showed it to Jacobs and McTigue, dilating upon the peculiar merits of the tree as a place from which to hang.

Ruggles Motor Company Elects Pocock President

Prominent London Businessman Will Take Over Active Direction of Firm.

SHAREHOLDERS MEET

Report and Recommendation of Chairman Adopted by Standing Vote.

The Ruggles Motor Company of Canada, with offices and an assembling plant on Dundas street east, will open a new chapter in its history this morning under new management, and under the capable direction of Henry Pocock, manager of the London Concrete Company, who was appointed yesterday by the directors, president and general manager. Other new officers are Arthur Little, vice-president; Paul Gummerson, treasurer; and C. W. McElroy, secretary. The directors will be Henry Pocock, R. J. Goldie, Arthur Little, Colonel W. G. Coles, George M. Reid, John Pringle and S. F. Lawrason.

The company will proceed with its functions as the maker of the well-known motor truck, on a sound financial basis, which will enable this active company to carry on its business, keep its employees, and generally maintain the credit of the city in the home and the export field.

Shareholders Meet.

The present progressive move in the life of the company comes as the result of a meeting of shareholders held in the plant on the afternoon of Sept. 30, at which over 300 shareholders from London and the surrounding country were present. The object of this meeting was to discover some plan by which the company could be financed to carry on the greatly increased business developed, as it was found that there was not sufficient capital available for the purpose.

A committee was appointed to conduct an analysis of the situation and to bring in a report as to the actual conditions and as to some means of construction and continuation. The committee, which was composed of Colonel W. G. Coles, Kent Campbell, Henry Pocock, who was elected chairman, S. F. Lawrason and T. W. MacFarland, spent a week in the work of investigation, and brought in their report at an adjourned session of the meeting on Saturday, October 6. This report, which was read by Chairman

Banish Pimples By Easy Method

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Have Remarkable Action in the Skin to Clear it of Pimples, Blackheads and Other Such Beauty Spoilers.
With all the wonderfully pretty things to wear many a girl is distracted because her complexion is a fright. But here's the way to banish those pimples. Ask any druggist for a 60-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers and follow directions.
Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. The effect is visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pimply complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the complexion seems animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unattractiveness.
Get a 60-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store or write to F. A. Stuart Co., 435 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for a free sample package.—Adv.

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERROR

For Women who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down and out when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, 55 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine.

To-day I saw

Gunning coats for London's dearest babies! There are only three wee maids in London who will be fortunate enough to have one of the adorable little coats and bonnets which we have just received. As soon as you see these attractive little garments you will understand why we insist on having such VERY nice babies for them.

We might advertise: "Wanted—A fair-haired little girl of three with dancing blue eyes to match a bonnet and coat of broadcloth in copper blue; or a rosy-cheeked maiden with brown ringlets and long brown lashes to harmonize with a coat of sand or old rose." For with the possible exception of the babies themselves, the coats are the dearest things you've ever seen!

In the silkiest of rose broadcloth comes a little coat effectively trimmed at collar and cuffs with beaver. The broadcloth hangs in graceful fullness from the plain little yoke, and it is warmly interlined and then lined with a pretty rose satin. The bonnet is beautifully shaped with an elastic inset which keeps it firmly in position. A broad band of corded material forms the front part of the bonnet, and it is edged with a soft little frill of piquet broadcloth, and decorated with satin rosettes and a narrow beaded edging. Equally attractive are the similar models developed in sand with beaver, and in blue with squirrel. Bring your own small maid up to the Infants' Shop on the Fourth Floor. See how soft and warm and dear she looks in one of these little coats and what a fitting frame for her vivid little face is the softly frilled bonnet.

Of course even the tiniest of pattern garments must pay the penalty for being imported and exclusive. But what if they are a wee bit expensive? Your little maid won't stay three years old for very long. And even the dearest of the coat is not to be compared to the dearest of your baby herself!

PLEGE AID TO PERMIT G.W.V.A. TO 'CARRY ON'

G. W. V. A. IS URGED

APPEAL FOR FUNDSTelegrams Advising Renewed

Headquarters.

OFFER ASSISTANCE

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Oct. 9.—"Carry on" is the slogan of more than 125 telegrams and letters received at Dominion headquarters of the G. W. V. A. over the week-end as a result of the announcement Saturday that legislative and adjustment work would have to cease owing to lack of funds. There is a strong urge from several far removed sources that a campaign for voluntary subscriptions should be launched. Branches of the G. W. V. A. in all parts of Canada are offering to utilize their assets or sponsor a drive in order that the Dominion office may continue a full operation.

In a statement issued to branches of the association from Ottawa last evening, Dr. W. D. Sharpe, Dominion president of the G. W. V. A., emphasized that the Dominion command offices were not being closed, but that a re-organization was planned so that the financial resources at its disposal, "under present conditions, to accomplish this purpose, it is necessary to limit the adjustment service, which has been carried on for several years on behalf of all veterans and dependents. It is hoped that by continuing as previously, the G. W. V. A. will gladly accept the task."

STUDENTS ANNOUNCE
NUMEROUS FUNCTIONSWeiner Roasts and Dances
Will Make Up Part of Early Program.

That the student body at the University of Western Ontario is rapidly settling down into the year's work is evidenced by the fact that numerous announcements of class functions are already adorning the entrance hall to the main building.

Prominent among the notices so displayed is that calling attention to the freshmen reception to be held Tuesday next at the Masonic Temple. A program of more than usual attraction has been mapped out, including dancing and refreshments. The "fresh" have this year numbered 150, promise that the party will exceed that given by any preceding class of first year students.

Weiner roasts and dances are also to be held on the evening of Tuesday. These will be held on the river bank near the buildings, and much hilarity and fun is bound to ensue. The "hot-dogs" get better and the evening air cooler. After the roasts have been consumed in sufficiently large quantities, the diners will repair to the building and listen to the "hot-dogs" get better and the evening air cooler.

Of the many clubs in the university, the first one to post a notice of meeting is the German Club, which will hold its initial meeting of the year tomorrow afternoon.

A general meeting of Arts '25 is being held this afternoon, while a meeting of all those interested in football was held this morning, at which Dr. George Smith and Professor Freeman did the honors.

Registration for night classes at the Technical School is rapidly approaching the 1,000 mark, according to Principal H. B. Beal.

STOCKTAKING IN EFFECT
ON THE NATIONAL RAILWAY

C. N. R. employees are busily engaged this month taking inventories of stock and equipment preparatory to a statement regarding the year's business, which will be submitted to the government by Sir Henry Thornton shortly.

The outcome of their efforts this month, which will show the public just what Sir Henry Thornton has been able to do in putting the line on a paying basis, will be awaited with interest.

LOCAL LABORITES
WILL NOT ENTER
MAYORALTY RACECandidates For Aldermanic
Honors Will Be Chosen.

MANY MENTIONED

Members of the executive of the London Labor party are generally agreed that there will be no Labor candidate for mayor in the forthcoming municipal elections. A meeting of the executive held last night for the purpose of discussing the advisability of running a candidate for the chief magistracy's office, but nothing was done, and so far as is known, nothing will be done.

Ald. Frank McKay reiterated his belief that a Laborite would run for the council in every ward, but he did not think his colleagues had given serious consideration to priming a man for the mayoralty. Plans are being made now to enter a Labor representative in the battle for aldermanic honors in every ward.

Next Tuesday's meeting of the Labor party will likely result in a definite statement as to what Labor men will seek civic laurels this year. A dozen or more names were mentioned at the meeting last night, and several will have declared just how they stand.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL REACH ITS GOALDrive Is Likely To Obtain the Sixty New Members Set
as Objective.

The membership campaign of the Chamber of Commerce is progressing satisfactorily. The four team captains on whom the responsibility of securing 60 new members rests, made their initial rounds today, and a substantial addition to the chamber's roster of membership was made.

G. R. Taggart, E. F. Waller, G. F. Parsons and R. M. Burns are the captains chosen to bring additions to the chamber's fold. Mr. Pearson was far in the lead this morning, his team having procured more than a dozen new members.

Only one-third of prospects have been canvassed, and little difficulty is anticipated in reaching the objective set by Chamber of Commerce directors.

OCTOBER CONSTRUCTION
ESTIMATED AT $120,260London's Community Growth
Forging Ahead by Leaps and Bounds.

If the issuance of building permits is any indication at all of the growth of the city, London is forging ahead by leaps and bounds. Building Inspector Piper reported today that since the first of this month he has issued permits for construction work, estimated at $120,260.

This compares quite favorably with permits issued in October, 1922, for $223,530. And the end is not in sight, the inspector says. Building will continue brisk, just as long as the good weather remains.

HAS HEAD BADLY CUT
BY MOVING ELEVATOR

Joseph Garner, an employee of the Canadian Hardware Company, was struck a glancing blow on the scalp at 10:30 this morning, when he ran to catch the elevator in the store. The elevator was in motion when Mr. Garner decided to board it, and the dropping door struck him on the head, inflicting a three-inch gash. The car was stopped and Mr. Garner hurried to the office of Dr. James D. Wilson on Carling street, where the wound was dressed. The injured man suffered much pain and shock, but will be able to resume his duties shortly, Dr. Wilson stated.

STREET RAILWAY DEFERS
APPEALING ASSESSMENT

Assessment Commissioner Bennett stated today that in all probability the street railway's appeal will not be heard until the return of Judge Talbot Macbeth, who is not expected home for another month or so. The company is appealing against an assessment value of $273,183 placed by the commissioner upon the poles, wires, rails, ties, etc. This sum is exclusive of the value of the land, buildings and rolling stock, and is confined to only railway trackage within the city limits.

Government Railway Meet to Plan Elimination of Waste.

PRACTISING THRIFT

Sir Henry Thornton's economy policy through which he hopes to put the C. N. R. on a paying basis has met a whole-hearted response from railway officials of the city. Last evening heads of the various departments of the C. N. R. met to discuss ways and means of eliminating waste in this district, and valuable suggestions were offered.

Every employee of the C. N. R. has been urged to keep the "Make a dollar, save a dollar" slogan of Sir Henry Thornton uppermost on their minds. The idea is to make a dollar for the company every day and save material by practicing thrift.

Freight Agent MacDougall, who called the meeting, is starting in his campaign to clean up any minor items of waste, and other department heads outlined what they are doing in this regard.

The success of the road, and one official suggested this morning that an award of some kind be made for the employee, who within his sphere, practices economy to a greater extent than any other.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO OPEN
SEASON IN NOVEMBERDecide To Present Chinese Play, at Meeting Held Last Night.

The Western University Players' Club will open the season with the presentation of two short plays about the end of November, one of which will be a Chinese drama, "The Thrice Promised Bride," by Cheng Chin Heung. The plays will be produced under the direction of Miss Margaret Glass, and promises to be the finest yet presented by the club.

Plans for the year's work were discussed at the first meeting of the club, held last night at the home of Miss Donna Waller, the president. About sixteen members were present.

Great interest is being taken in this organization, which meets every two weeks throughout the college term to study the theatre and to read plays. The periodical presentation of dramas on the medical school stage keeps the club before the public, and fosters dramatic talent among the students and graduates. Membership in the club comes when an undergraduate has done some dramatic work for the club. And once a member, always a member. In this way the club is made up of students at college as well as graduates.

Doubts Britain
Will Approve

Washington, Oct. 9.—Expressions in British newspapers recently favorable to the acceptance by Great Britain of the 12-mile limit plan proposed by Secretary Hughes to curb liquor smuggling into the United States, has caught the attention of officials here. While hope is entertained that deliberations of the British imperial conference will result in the decision to comply with Secretary Hughes' suggestion, it was emphasized today that no authoritative indication has been received that such action would be taken.

ALL HURON STUDENTS
TAKING DOUBLE COURSEEnrollment This Year Shows Big Advance in Divinity and Art Studies.

A unique record is that made by Huron College this year, according to Rev. C. C. Waller, principal, who announced this morning that all of the present enrollment were also enrolled in courses leading to the degree of B.A.

Mr. Waller stated that for years past he had been working towards such an end, that all the students in Huron College might, like those of other colleges, be able to take their first degree, and that this was the first time it had been accomplished. In previous years, 50 per cent of the students had been enrolled in both the divinity and arts courses, but 100 per cent was the figure for 1923-24.

The principal said that at the end of the last year, eleven vacancies had been left in the student body at Huron College, this representing a heavy exodus, but that the other 100 per cent was the figure for 1923-24.

Referring to accommodation, Dr. Waller said that the building was taxed to its utmost, as far as Huron College was concerned, and that he hoped they would soon be able to find a little more room.

The students have settled down into their curriculum and the college as a whole was now well on its way to a successful year.

FORMER 'TISER MAN
IS HOME FROM WESTJames Bryan Joined Advertiser
Staff Back in 1868.

James Bryan, who first joined the Advertiser staff in 1868, is on a short visit to London, coming here from Toronto, where he has been with his brother, Rev. Canon Bryan. Mr. Bryan at present has a position rather unique, in that he is inspector of all matters that might have to do with the city of Vancouver securing its water supply. His work at present brings him in touch with many of the lumbering companies, and one thing that bothers him continually is the amount of young timber that is slashed and destroyed in taking out the big stuff. American capital is behind nearly all the large lumber companies in his district of British Columbia.

When Mr. Bryan left London he went to Lucknow, where he put the Lucknow Sentinel, running it for 35 years before going to British Columbia. During that time he was reeve of the village several times. A fine tribute to his popularity there was that fact that when he and Mrs. Bryan came back for a visit 16 years after, there was a reception and presentation for them.

Who Owns This Beautifier?
There is a cute little silver vanity case awaiting some fair owner in the local police station. It has a nice little mirror and a tiny powder puff just waiting to be dabbed against a perspiring nose. The vanity case was found on Dundas street near the Majestic Theatre, and the owner will be welcomed at the police station before the constables have the puff "worn to a frazzle."

ALL IN THE DARK
REGARDING BECK
AND CITY RAILWAYCivic or Street Railway Officials Have Received No
Word From Sir Adam.

MAYOR URGES SPEED

Mayor Wenige holds the opinion today that it would be unwise for the members of the city council to wait longer than Monday for Sir Adam Beck to submit a purchase price for the London Street Railway Company.

The time is growing short, as his worship points out, and if it is the intention of the councillors to supply the people with the facts of the street railway situation, action must be forthcoming now.

Sir Adam Beck is still out of the city. When he will return is unknown. Mayor Wenige knows, and knows. Members of the council profess to know nothing further about the situation, and the street railway authorities explain that they are also in the dark, as to the next move by the member for London.

While it was known to The Advertiser two weeks or more ago that Sir Adam's engineers had completed their new valuation of the road, R. G. Ivey, vice-president of the road, gave positive assurance to gain today that no offer has reached the company.

"No offer has reached the company," by communication, verbal or otherwise," he stated decisively. Any reports conveying an impression to that effect are without foundation. I have not seen Sir Adam for a long time. Nor have I or representative of the company received an offer from him, or a communication of any sort. I do not know where he is, and what is further I do not know when he is coming back, or when he expects that I would meet him again."

The vice-president states that while the railway engineers have also surveyed their lines, they are not prepared to set any definite purchase price at this moment, and not until they have opened actual negotiations with the city's representative—Sir Adam Beck.

"I want to see the people buy the street railway if the price is right," the mayor stated. "And for that reason I would like to see some action right away. We want the ratepayers to be in full possession of all the facts of the case. We do not want everything left to the last moment. We'll wait until Monday's session of the council, however, before we consider any different procedure than already authorized."

This building, an old public school, is pointed out, is not suited for collegiate purposes, having no auditorium, gymnasium nor modern classrooms, the students having to make use of the gym and auditorium at the Central building. More than 200 students are taking their courses there, and are handicapped for grounds and space.

Principal Miller stated shortly after the school term opened that new collegiate buildings were almost a necessity, as the entrance classes of last year and this year would be building up the number of those who successfully pass their matriculation.

As far as public schools are concerned, Chief Inspector K. G. Green expressed the opinion that none of these would be needed for the next year at any rate, as with the Trafalgar and Empress avenue schools, one near completion and the other not yet started, together with the four-room addition to the Boyle Memorial School, there would be plenty of room for the pupils.

LLOYD GEORGE'S VISIT
BOOSTS BROTHERHOODPlan of Selling Tickets For the Ex-Premier's Meeting Adds
to Membership.

There is one organization in Toronto that has had its membership boosted by the visit of Lloyd George. Men have bought membership in the brotherhood organization, under which auspices the ex-premier was to have spoken in Toronto.

A membership entitled one to a ticket, so they have been going readily at $3.

Dr. Brittain, of the Citizens' Research Institute, admitted, while in London Monday night, that he was a member several times over, and that a friend of his spent $18 for six memberships.

"We will both feel that we have to go to the brotherhood meetings now," admitted Dr. Brittain, "because we are members five or six times over."

Special To The Advertiser.
Milton, Oct. 9.—Motors report an invasion of cottontail rabbits in Nassagaweya Township, west of here, and state that they have taken possession of the countryside in such large numbers that drivers of such are experiencing considerable difficulty in avoiding them. Farmers and gardeners complain that their gardens and fields are being overrun with them.

William Fraser, of Campbellville, states that the black squirrels are also a nuisance, doing considerable damage to houses and barns, but there is no remedy, as the law protects these animals. It is the general belief among the farmers and others in this neighborhood that the black squirrels like the "gray" should be destroyed before more damage is done to farmers' buildings in this district.

15,000 Years Old

Special Cable to The Advertiser.
Paris, Oct. 9.—Skeletons of two men and a woman, dating back 15,000 years, have been discovered in the south of France. The bodies had been buried facing the east. The men apparently were about six feet tall. The Academy of Science believes they belonged to the Quaternary period.

GOVERNOR CUTS
COST OF KEEPING
JAIL PRISONERSFood and Clothing Cost Reduced From 16.6 Cents to 11.5 Cents in Two Years.

PRISONERS IN JAIL

In his two years in office, Governor Byrnes Dawson has cut the cost of maintaining prisoners at the Middlesex County Jail by one-third.

In 1921, before he arrived, the cost of feeding and clothing a prisoner was 16.6 cents daily. In his first year he dropped it to 14.8 cents. In the year ending Sept. 30, 1923, the daily average cost was pared to 11.5 cents.

Last year there were 432 males and 60 females in custody at the jail. Of these, 125 males and 19 females were held for indictable offences. A total of 228 males and 19 females were sentenced. None escaped in the year.

The prisoners were about evenly divided on the matter of crime. Of 241 males and 44 females being strict prohibitionists and 241 males and 10 females being in favor of occasional violations.

Of those who were guests at the jail during the year, 31 males and 3 females were sentenced to the penitentiary. 2 of them drawing terms longer than three years. Thirty-six men and 4 women were sent to Ontario reformatories.

In the year ending Sept. 30, 1923, there were 614 males and 64 females in jail.

This year the officials were provided with uniforms by the government, and a guard Sidney Murrell, held for murder.

J. C. Spencer, head of the local branch of the government employment bureau, told The Advertiser today that there were 20 youths who had signed up at the bureau, and that he was anxious to place them in the trades.

BRITAIN REPORT IS

To Divulge Any Portion
of Its Contents.

The city council's copy of the British report is safe and snug in the vaults of the city hall, there to remain, it is proposed, until the council meets in regular session Monday next.

City Clerk Baker is on guard, while the mayor flits in and out anxiously as visitors wend their way into the office.

Absolutely nothing for publication," his worship stated at noon, while City Clerk Baker had the story to tell. Some of the aldermen think it would have been better had the mayor called a special session of the council this week to consider the report, or else it should come before the finance committee tomorrow.

It is scarcely likely, however, that the members of the latter group will be burdened with this business, as both the mayor and city clerk will be in Toronto at the Lloyd George gatherings.

Scattered on the notice boards at the University of Western Ontario are little papers of paper bearing the words "For Sale."

Closer inspection of these disclosures to view a list of books, used in the university, which former students are willing to dispose of to those following in their footsteps. Prices quoted are much less than the bookshops' asks, and new students are buying them up rapidly.

Books dealing with science, theology, medicine, economics, history, literature, and many others are included in the lists. Fifteen cents will purchase one or two, while others go as high as $2. Cicero, Plato and other ancient writers and philosophers are to be seen, while text and reference books in modern languages are also advertised.

DRAKE ON CARPET
WHEN 'BLUE BOYS'
MEET NEXT TIMEExposure of Plot To Delay
Civic Business Is Charge Against Him.

WILL FACE MUSIC

Ald. Gordon Drake is going to be under fire when the "blue" boys get together at another informal session this week. It was announced today by an accredited member of the committee on ways and means.

But Ald. Drake stated this afternoon that he will face what he shall see, and he is going to be in attendance at that session, if at all possible.

There seems to be a very grave charge against the doughty councillor from Ward 3, and it all dates back to the last provincial election. The members of one of the group of the insurgent Tory wing have good memories, they say, and recollect, the explained this morning, that Ald. Drake was one of a party of aldermen who announced that they had been requested to remain away from a regular session of the city council.

Ald. Drake stated that he was not a meeting at which it was believed that Mayor Wenige would ask for the resignations of Sir Adam Beck and other members of the Port Stanley Railway Commission.

Ald. Drake stated that he was not a meeting at which it was believed that Mayor Wenige would ask for the resignations of Sir Adam Beck and other members of the Port Stanley Railway Commission.

Members of the committee, who propose to replace Mayor Wenige and his supporters, have been mentioned as still reported busy through the electorate, sounding out the populace and seeking prospective timber for the various contents in December.

The chairman notified The Advertiser today that he would call another special session this week, either Thursday or Friday, when the initial report would be received, and a definite plan of campaign mapped out.

Many aldermen have been mentioned as aldermanic possibilities, and it is anticipated that the majority will be quizzed in time for the meeting, in order that the warders staff will be better enabled to prepare the slate. None but the bluest of the blue have been suggested as yet.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

The Failure of the Henpecking Wife—The Young Man Who Thinks That Marriage Doesn't Matter—The Wife Whose Wartime Hero Is a "Rotter."

Dear Dorothy Dix—Why cannot women see that constant opposing of their husbands' wishes will, in time, make them stubborn and determined to have their own way, as no man likes to acknowledge that he is not the head of his own household? Surely men have a right to have their way in domestic affairs half of the time at least. It seems to be the nature of women to want to rule the roost. For my part, I regard the comic pictures about henpecking wives as real missionary work, for it must show many women how tyrannical they are to their husbands in little ways and how it results.

Maybe you can laugh women out of doing things that you can't reason them out of doing. Anyway, if women only realized that they can get more out of their husbands by being liberal with them than they can by being close, and by agreeing with them instead of arguing with them.

I know a young couple where the husband has always been amiable and pleasant to his wife, but he is beginning to rebel at her bossy ways and is getting ugly and surly, and I would like to save him if I can. But an old wife who knows.

Answer:

Sister, the reason that wives try to dictate to their husbands is precisely the same reason that makes husbands try to manage their wives. Human vanity. Love of authority. The conceit that makes each one of us think that we know exactly how to run the universe and that it is a pity that the Creator didn't have a chance to consult us and get a little good advice about how to do things when He made the world. A passion for tyranny that makes us rule anybody who will stand for it. Men and women are equally guilty of the ambition to dominate the home, and it is this struggle for supremacy, and of each to impress his or her will and taste and opinions and ways on the other that is at the bottom of the perennial family spat and that makes households a dark and bloody battleground.

The husband is determined to treat his wife like an idiot child. She must come to him for every penny she spends. She must buy the clothes he likes. She can't join a club or go to see her mother without asking his permission. And the woman rebels and hates him for the mean, grinding tyrant he is.

The wife is bound and set that her husband shall obey her. She won't let him smoke. He has to eat the things she considers good for his stomach, no matter how he loathes them. He can't go out of an evening. He has to accept her friends and let his own go. And the husband hates her for her nagging, bossy ways, and lies and deceives her.

Believe me, sister, the domestic millennium will have arrived when husbands and wives agree to go fifty-fifty on the head-of-the-house proposition, and when each concedes to the other the right to have his or her own way half of the time.

But you are right about the woman who wants to rule her husband doing it easier by the gumshoe method than the strong-arm way. Sugar will always catch more flies than vinegar, and any man would be grateful for having the henpecking done in as painless a way as possible.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am in love with a young man who thinks that marriage doesn't matter, and that two people who care for each other are united by their love. But I have been brought up with other ideas, and I am troubled and afraid. Yet, if I don't give in to the wishes of my sweetheart in this matter, I will lose him. What shall I do? BARBARA J.

Answer:

It is a shameful proposition that this man is making you, Barbara. He would kill any man who made such a one to his sister, and you will be lucky, indeed, if you lose such a craven. No man really loves a woman, no man with a single shred of honor, asks a girl to do a thing that degrades her in her own eyes and puts her in a discredited position before the world.

The "unwed wife" may be a romantic figure in novels, but, believe me, my child, she is a poor, forlorn, pitiful creature in real life. She is an outcast in society. Her children are nameless. She has no claim on the man who has dragged her into the gutter, and nine times out of ten he deserts her, after she has sacrificed her youth and beauty and chance in life to him.

For the man who means to do the square thing by a woman marries her to begin with. He has too much respect for the woman he wants for his wife even to propose any "under-the-rose" romance to her. Marriage was devised for the protection of women against just such yellow-hearted men as the one who is asking you to throw away your good name to gratify his fancy, Barbara. Don't do it, as you value your own soul and your life's happiness.

Take your stand on what our English friends call their marriage lines, and tell him that the man who gets you has to come across with a wedding ring and bell and church and all the appurtenances of respectability.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My father and mother are very well-to-do people and I was brought up to have every comfort and luxury. When the war came on I married, as so many other girls did, in a frenzy of patriotism. I wanted my husband to know that some one waited for him and loved him alone.

I knew that my husband was poor, and when he returned from the war I set out to help him. I became a good and excellent cook. I kept house on the least possible amount of money, made all my own clothes, did everything to make my husband a success. Only he wouldn't become one. He thought that my father should set him up in business, and resented it when he wouldn't do it.

Then he decided that he would like to take a special course at college at night, so I encouraged him and was a little more economical so that he could go. But he wasted our little money buying good cigars, playing pool and so on. Said he was so tied down he had to do that to relax. When he was supposed to be at college at night, coming home at two or three in the morning, he was really running around with girls.

We have two children now. Before the second was born I found out about his affairs with other women. It was an awful blow because I am young and good-looking myself and keep myself attractively dressed on next to nothing, and keep my home clean and tidy and always have appetizing food on my table.

I have tried to figure out where I have failed my husband, but I can't. Perhaps if I had been wasteful, wicked and extravagant, he would have thought more of me. What do you think? ANONYMOUS.

Answer:

I think two things. The first is that there is nothing so true as the homely old saying that you cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. No wife has any magic whereby she can change a rotter into a real man. She can work no miracle by which she can infuse energy, ambition and purpose into a weak, pleasure-loving nature; nor can she implant a sense of honor and duty into a man who has no principles. No task is so thankless as trying to help such a man. He invariably hates his wife for it because she is a living reproach to him.

My second thought is that a woman who has done her whole duty as a wife bravely and nobly has the consolation of a clear conscience and her own self-respect. And that is worth much. She has been a good sport. She has played the game.

And perhaps being able to look yourself in the face is the greatest of earthly consolations. DOROTHY DIX.

Girls' Softball League Holds Merry Banquet
Nine Teams Dine Together at Smallman's—Frank White, M. P., Presents Trophy to Brownies.

The London Girls' Softball League completed a successful season of activity last night, with a jolly banquet in the Smallman & Ingram dining-room. Each of the nine teams sat at a team table, and headed by the captain. A visitors' table was also prominently placed. Here sat Mrs. Donald McLean, president of the league; Mr. and Mrs. Frank White, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Philip and others.

Undoubtedly the most interesting moment of the evening was during the presentation of the silver trophy to the league winners, popularly known as "The Brownies." The trophy, which is the gift of Frank White, M. P., was presented by him, and during the presentation he gave a very fine address to the girls. The trophy was received by Mrs. Ramm, captain of the team. During his address, Mr. White stated that he was willing to donate another trophy to the league, if the girls would agree to a summer softball schedule for girls, this intimation being received with enthusiasm by the teams present. The statement was also made that the "Y" expected to launch a campaign for a new gymnasium, within a short time. This, too, was greeted with delight by the girls.

A splendid program of toasts and songs was given during the evening. Mrs. Donald McLean acting as toast mistress. The toast to the Brownies was, of course, the most important toast of the evening, and it was offered with a zest by everyone present. Mr. Spearin offered the toast to the league, to which Miss McCormick replied. A song, "To the Umpires," was another merry toast, replied to by William Blay.

The toast to Mr. Kenyon and the All Star team also took the form of a song. Mr. Kenyon replying Miss Phyllis Kennedy proposed the toast to the Y. W. C. A., to which Mrs. Frank White replied.

Other speakers of the evening were Mr. Allshopp of Woolworths; Miss M. Morton, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A.; Ed. Walker, who responded to the toast of the English department; Mr. A. who was proud of them; E. B. Dennis, Gordon Marr, Miss Edith Wynne Pryce, director of physical education at the Y. W. C. A., who was responsible for arranging the banquet, Miss Jessie Gillespie and Mrs. Gordon Philip.

Splendid Service.

Mrs. M. Thirsk is the new matron of the Day Nursery, having been appointed last night at a special meeting of the board. Mrs. Thirsk succeeds Miss Bodkin, who is leaving the city at the end of next month after three and a half years of splendid service. Miss Bodkin expects to go to California for a time.

Mrs. A. T. Edwards presided over last night's meeting, at which plans were made for a rummage sale to be held Friday evening of this week. The nursery is still appealing for vegetables and fruit. There is an average of 26 little mouths to feed every day, and they take a large amount of food. 'Tis true that canned fruit is coming in slowly, but there are practically no vegetables. Potatoes, especially, are needed, and the board is making a special appeal for them.

The London Day Nursery is also beginning a cupboard which will contain warm clothing for the children who are in need and have to attend school. In this connection the London Red Cross Society has donated 25 pounds of yarn to be made into knitted clothing, and an appeal is being made for knitters to help in this part of the work.

The board members have also undertaken to send supplies to a Northern Ontario mother who has appealed for help on behalf of her eight children.

VICTORIAN ORDER NURSES ACKNOWLEDGES BIG CHECKS

The Victorian Order of Nurses, through the honorary secretary, Miss Grace E. Hill, acknowledges the following contributions to the work of the order. "Without this very material help the order would find it difficult to carry on their work efficiently," say the officers: City of London, $1,500; United Welfare Association, $625.

CAPTAIN S. ROBINSON, heroic skipper of the Empress of Australia, whose name will go down in history for his valiant work at Yokohama. His ship carried 2,500 refugees out of the danger zone. He is seen above on the deck of his own ship, just as he was caught by the Advertiser camera. In his hand he holds one of the pipes presented to him by the Canadian Women's Press Club.

MISS RAYMOND HEADS NURSES' ASSOCIATION

Will Make Mayor Keep to Promise of Placarding
London Streets.

Miss E. Raymond was elected president of the Public Health Nurses Association at the annual meeting held last night at the Institute of Public Health. Miss Raymond, who is nursing among the tubercular sick of the city, follows Miss Margaret McDermid as head of the public health nurses. Miss McDermid has just completed a splendid term as president of the organization since its formation a year and a half ago. Other officers are: Vice-president, Miss Constance Fraser of the child welfare nursing staff; secretary-treasurer, Miss Lexy Cockburn, school nurse; program committee, Miss Foster and Miss McVicar.

The election of officers was practically the sole business of last night's meeting, although the association did resolve to remind the mayor of his promise to see that the city streets were named in such a manner that the names would be visible in the winter months. The nurses feel that with the approach of winter they will be in the same difficulty this year as in previous years. The streets have not been designated, as promised, and they want to keep the mayor to that promise. The student public health nurses, who assist in the work, are all out-of-town nurses this year, and finding the streets will be doubly difficult for this reason.

DYNAMIC COMEDIAN DEMPSEY BATTLE DELIGHTS AT GRAND LOEW'S FEATURE

"Vanities," With Its Whirl of Fun, Pleases Large Audience.

SPLENDID CHORUS VIOLA DANA STARS

Following much the same lines as its predecessor in the matter of gorgeous costumes and elaborate scenic investiture, "Vanities," the second of the Barney Gerard burlesque shows to visit London this season, opened a three-days' engagement in the Grand Opera House to crowded houses yesterday. The audiences were not slow to appreciate the obvious merits of the show and applauded the many hits liberally.

Joe Marks, the featured fun-maker with the show, is billed as a dynamic comedian. Certainly he does not allow the fun to lag while he is on the stage, a praiseworthy undertaking in which he is well seconded by Harry Seymour. Incidentally, a clever dialect comedian, Marks does a little bit of everything. As a dancer he leans to the acrobatic and does well, while as a purveyor of sheer fun he comes well up to expectations.

From a standpoint of scenic mounting and oftening the show is a revelation of the heights to which burlesque has ascended. There are 21 scenes, many of which are elaborately presented. Particularly beautiful are the costumes, presenting a vast array of costly imported fabrics and domestic weaves in a display of truly gorgeous gowning. For he understood that while the choruses in the burlesque shows of today have not forgotten that the human form divine is still a powerful box office magnet, and there is the usual number of frankly revealing garments, undulating in black, jet and silver, while the fan number, which closes the show, presents costumes despoiled after one views the creations of the dressmakers' art in which the girls of "Vanities" are arrayed.

Effective Costuming. Particularly ambitious in this line are the numbers which close the first and second acts of the show. The latter, the forest introduces effective costuming in black, jet and silver, while the fan number, which closes the show, presents costumes despoiled after one views the creations of the dressmakers' art in which the girls of "Vanities" are arrayed.

Specialty artists with the company contribute to the show in a program of general excellence. Among these attention might well be directed to the Seven Junior Harmonists—a jazz band of small degree to a program of general excellence. Among these attention might well be directed to the Seven Junior Harmonists—a jazz band of small degree to a program of general excellence.

One of the features is the introduction of old-time burlesque hits. These numbers, hoary with age, awakened memories on the part of many in the audience, which, to judge from the prolonged applause which greeted them, must have been pleasant ones.

"The Music Publisher" is a funny sketch, which gives Joe Marks opportunity to introduce imitations of Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor, and an especially creditable imitation of Dave Warfield of Music Master fame. A burlesque prize fight, in which Marks and Seymour figured was funny, while Seymour's fake mind reading, while not new, is a scream.

Chorus shapely and hard working; specialty numbers good and particularly effective from the standpoint of colorful pictures and beautiful costumes. Altogether a show fully up to the Columbia standard.

The company will continue today and tomorrow, with matinee and evening performances each day. The matinee is becoming popular with London's ladies, the attendance yesterday providing the largest Monday afternoon audience since the opening of the burlesque season.

Your Own Pearls

Are the finest—pearly teeth
Millions find them by combating film

No pearls which hang about the neck compare with pretty teeth. Don't leave them coated by a dingy film.

Look about you. Note how countless teeth now glisten. Mark what they add to beauty and to charm. Then make this test and learn how people get them.

The cloud is film
You feel on your teeth a viscous film. Under old-way brushing, much of it clings and stays. Soon it becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That is why so many teeth lose luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

This film is the greatest enemy of tooth beauty and tooth health.

Dental science, after long research, found ways to combat that

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combant which contains harsh grit.

"Is Your Hair As Thick And Fluffy As It Used To Be?"

If it isn't, your friends have no doubt already noticed it, for nothing is harder to hide than thin scraggly-looking hair.

Why Not Begin Today To Save And Beautify Your Hair?

First give it a thorough washing followed by an application of Newbro's Herpicide. If the hair is falling badly do not rub too vigorously until Herpicide has had a chance to strengthen the hair and scalp. Herpicide applications should be continued daily until all dandruff disappears and until the hair begins to regain its natural beauty. Then to keep the hair soft, lustrous, and fluffy they should be continued two or three times weekly.

For an interesting booklet upon "The Care Of The Hair", together with a small trial bottle of Herpicide, mail ten cents in stamps or coin to The Herpicide Company, Dept. 60, Detroit, Michigan.

Sheridan Arrives At the Hotel Just In the Nick of Time

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

The Prince Returns.

There was silence for a moment. The sun had gone, all but a crown of reddish gold with a tuft of crimson clouds like the spreading plumes of an Ouled Nail queen.

The chill of night had suddenly fallen, and it seemed to Terry that there were tiny prickles of ice in her veins. She wished that the dusk which poured over the low river bed in a violet flood were a wave that would drown her and sweep her body away.

"Well?" asked Nazio at last. "Aren't you going to answer, my little girl? You can't say, now you know everything, that I don't deserve an answer, can you?"

"Perhaps you deserve one," Terry answered heavily. "But I can't give it tonight. Or if I do, it will be no! I'd rather go back to the convent, and take the veil, and stay there forever, than to marry a man I don't love—when I do love someone else."

"But loving that someone will make you more wretched than you are," Nazio said, kindly. "And he'd be better off by far, if you were married, because then he'd have to stop thinking of you and trying to see you. At least, he would if he's made of the strong stuff I think he is. Am I right about him, Mrs. Harkness?"

"Yes," the old woman admitted. "I'm bound to say I believe you are. Oh, it's all round a sad business!"

"We must make the best of it—and make it for the best," went on Nazio. "If you care more for Sheridan than yourself, my child, your answer to me will—"

"I do care more for him than myself, of course. But I won't give you any answer now," Terry persisted, with her mother's quiet obstinacy. "I'll have to think first."

"You mean you want to talk things over with Sheridan?" This decision was a blow to Nazio, for he had tried to "rush" the girl, with his generosity and his arguments, falling on top of the sensational news. He had thrown his vitality into the battle, hoping to win before the other man came to fight with him.

Then, if she had already been persuaded by his (Nazio's) eloquence and the old woman's scruples, to promise, Sheridan would have been up against a fait accompli.

"Yes, I must talk things over with Mr. Sheridan," Terry answered; and as she rose to walk away Nazio muttered "Damn!" beneath his breath. His one consolation was that, even if he didn't get her, she was pretty certain now not to give herself to Sheridan.

Mrs. Harkness stumbled up, too, with a creaking of her joints to return with Terry to the hotel; and Nazio was prepared to go with them. But the girl stopped, looking back at him.

"Please don't come," she said.

Mr. Bob White's Children Do Not Heed His Warning

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

The fifteen children of Bob White and Mrs. Bob White always had been very proud of the way in which their children obeyed. But they were now quite as big as their father and mother and felt quite equal to taking care of themselves. You see, they hadn't learned yet that growing up isn't just a matter of growing big. They hadn't learned that experience is quite as much a part of growing up.

After Bob White had told them that the dreadful hunting season was at hand and warned them to stay on Farmer Brown's land, they were as obedient as usual for a few days. But at the end of that time they began to grow uneasy. All summer they had been in the habit of going wherever they pleased. In the next field to Farmer Brown's—it happened to be a wheat field—there was a great deal of wheat scattered through the grown stubble. It had fallen when the wheat had been harvested. It was splendid eating. My, my, my, I should say so! Those young Bob Whites kept thinking about it. Whenever Bob White and Mrs. Bob White were absent they got together and talked the matter over. "I think father and mother are getting old and it makes them foolishly anxious," said one young Bob White.

"These two-legged creatures seem perfectly harmless to me. I've never seen one of them have one of those fire-and-smoke sticks that hurt a long way off," said another.

Two others laughed. "That sounds like a funny story to me," said one of them. "I've never seen anything yet that could hurt a long way off."

"I think father must have made that up just to try to scare us," said another. "I wish I had some of that wheat over in that next field."

Now, it happened that they were all wishing the very same thing. "I don't believe it is any more danger-

"I think we ought to mind and keep this side of the fence," said the smallest one.

ous over there than it is here," spoke up one of the boldest. "If we should see anyone coming we could fly right back here. I'm not afraid to go over there."

"Neither am I," said another. A third and a fourth and a fifth and a sixth said the same thing. And most of the others felt the same way.

"I think we ought to mind and keep this side of that fence," said the smallest one. "I don't believe father would try to keep us here if he didn't really believe it is for our good."

"Probably he does believe it, but I don't," spoke up the boldest. "He worries over nothing. It wouldn't take us long to fill up on that wheat, then we could fly right back here. One of us could keep watch and if one of those two-legged creatures should appear we could get back here before he was anywhere near. Let's do it. What do you say? Let's do it."

"Yes, let's do it!" cried all those young Bob Whites except the smallest one. And away they went over into the next field.

The next story: "Bob White's Fears Are Realized."

A MADE-OVER ROOM. One Mother Says: Recently I fitted up a bedroom as a playroom for my three lively youngsters. Not having the hard-tiled finish which is being used in such rooms, I had to find a substitute, or have the walls always in a soiled condition. A portion of the wall I set aside for a blackboard, and gave it several coats of hard finish, dull black paint, with a moulding for erasers and chalk. Around the rest of the lower wall, above the base-board, we stretched a strip of fine Japanese matting, fastening it on with plain flat moulding. It makes a splendid finish, easy to replace when necessary.
