

RAW DAY MARKS CLOSING OF THE WESTERN FOR 1903

Weather Anything but Ideal; Did Not Keep Visitors
From the Exhibition, However.

THE DEPARTMENTS BEING EMPTIED OF EXHIBITS

No Doubt as to the Financial Success of the Fair — Wednesday's Tremendous Crowds Saved the Board From Having to Face a Deficit—Results of the Dairy Competition

Self-sustaining, unsubsidized and depending entirely upon itself for funds, the Western Fair of 1903 has drawn to a close, and once again the fair has been a success.

Just what surplus the fair board will be able to announce is not yet known, but Vice-President Little is authority for the statement that despite the bad weather of Thursday and Friday, the balance will again be on the right side. To all classes of citizens this is pleasant news, but to the fair board, to the men who give their time to making the great fair a success, and a huge advertisement for the city of London all over Canada, the success of the exhibition is especially gratifying.

And the fair was a success in more respects than from a financial standpoint. The exhibitors have been for the most part better handled and better pleased than before, and visitors to the exhibition have gone away perfectly satisfied and ready and willing to say that London's agricultural show is in a class by itself, and is of more interest and value to farmers than any of its competitors in Canada. The people who paid for privileges on the grounds are also satisfied, and though there was one day upon which their receipts fell off to a mere bagatelle, they nevertheless made money out of the fair, and will come again, for, as is well known all over Canada, it is a spending people that visit the Western Fair. Nowhere on the continent is there a better farming country than the district in which the city of London nestles and forms the hub, and consequently nowhere on the continent are there people relatively better off, more intelligent, or more contented. And it was the people of the district who, recognizing the merits of London's famous agricultural exhibition, flocked to the city in thousands, and made the show what it was—a success. And if it had not been for a slight weather setback, a fair of 1903 could be termed truthfully and without extravagance a huge success. But a success it was, anyway, and all things considered the directors have no room to feel anything but well-pleased.

Then, again, the fair of 1903 was a success, in that during its life not an accident occurred to mar the spirit of the occasion, everything passing off smoothly and satisfactorily on all hands. In this particular there is much to be thankful for. The Advertiser last night, Mr. J. W. Little said that Tuesday's receipts indicated an increase over the year before, and that Wednesday's tremendous attendance gave promise of a fat surplus. But then came the rain, and the board paid for the rest of the week a loss of more than the profit of several thousand dollars. Friday it was cold and forbidding, and business was not normal, though slightly better than a year ago. It was a case of the weather man stepping in and spoiling a bumper year for the Western Fair board.

THE CLOSING DAY.
Friday was anything but an ideal fair day. The weather was raw, and part of the time it looked like rain. Notwithstanding this, however, from 12,000 to 15,000 people are said to have passed into the grounds, and it is said that one gate alone did more business this year than was done by all gates combined on Friday of 1902. The show of cash for the day's business greatly raised the spirits of the directors, and there will be a surplus, but as a year ago, it was a case of the weather man stepping in and spoiling a bumper year for the Western Fair board.

The crowd who attended the fair yesterday was made up of farmers, who drove in, visitors who had stayed over for a fine day, and city people who always take a deep interest in the exhibition. Combined, they made a very decent showing, from an attendance standpoint. On the grounds, business was lively all day. Several of the booths of exhibitors and booths told The Advertiser that they were both surprised and pleased at the splendid business done by them during the day.

In the afternoon the stands were fairly well patronized, and the excellent attractions pleased all immensely. The balloon ascension was clever and clean, despite the rather high wind which prevailed at the time, and the descent was made by both aeronauts without incident. As was the case on all but one day of the week, there were no pockets picked or thefts reported, and everything was quiet, too, in the line of accidents. The hospital tent, an emergency branch of Victoria Hospital, got through the closing day easily, a couple of persons suffering from slight ailments being the only ones who sought medical attendance. The tent has been all week a source of assurance to the fair board and to visitors, and the presence of a doctor, with a number of trained nurses, ready to care for any emergency that might arise, added greatly to the feeling of comfort and safety on the grounds. The emergency hospital has been well conducted all week, and many words of praise of the doctors and nurses have been heard.

In the evening the special attractions were watched by between 2,000 and 3,000 people on the stands, who braved the chilly weather and watched Prof. Hand's "Bombardment of Alexandria," a clever reproduction of the famous battle, in which the British vessels distinguished themselves in 1882, the pyrotechnical display appearing to amply repay all who sat it out.

ALL OFF FOR 1903.
Shortly after 6 o'clock live stock began to leave the grounds and soon there

TO STUDY U. S. SCHOOLS

The Mosely Educational Commission Arrives at New York.

The other members of the Mosely educational commission will sail on the Philadelphia on her next trip from Southampton. They will remain here two months.

A WHITE CHILD TURNING BLACK

Foster Parents Give the Little One Up, But Reclaim It Later.

New York, Sept. 18.—There is a peculiarly human appeal in a case that came out of the charities department in Brooklyn yesterday, and for the truth of which Commissioner Charles Teale vouches. It tells of a lonely husband and wife—lonely for a little child to love and care for. Seven years ago, such a little one, a girl, was given to the couple by the charities department. She was in very early infancy, a waif of the city streets. She was formally adopted and cared for. Pretty dresses were bought for it and pretty little golden chains and golden pins fastened its baby frocks.

But as the months passed a cruel shock came to the woman who had adopted the child. The child was found to be a white child, and the signs of the child's race appeared. Daily its skin grew darker, the lips thickened, and the features became more and more those of a negro. The child was a week ago the presence of the little colored girl became a source of such inconvenience because of the comment and prejudice of neighbors, that the husband and wife decided they must give her up. They sent her back to the charities department with the request to Commissioner Teale that the articles of adoption be destroyed. They even asked that their names, which the child bore, be taken away from her.

Yet the little colored girl had been gentle and had been bright and affectionate. She had made a way deeper into the hearts of her foster-parents than they had imagined. She had only been back in the charities department a few days when the gentle woman appeared.

"I cannot part with the little child—no matter what her color. I have learned to love her and she has learned to love me, and she has learned refined ways. It would be a cruel thing to turn her back now. Bring her to me, please."

The child flew with ecstatic cries to the woman who had adopted her, and Commissioner Teale refused to divulge the names of the couple, but says the little colored girl will fall heir to considerable property when she dies.

PASTORS WITH BIG FEET

Pittsburg Methodists Advise for Circuit Riders.

Pittsburg, Sept. 18.—Itinerant pastors who have big feet felt planted on the solid ground of common sense regarding work in this district. The Methodist Recorder, the organ of the Methodist denomination, today contains the following advertisement written by President Gladden:

"This conference needs at least three or four more pastors for circuit work, and anyone who can fill the following conditions will be welcomed to wit: Must have small family, if any, and be able to furnish a horse and come to church on a good, clear head; a hard work, no hobbies, no place-hunting, sound on the doctrine of holiness, willing to begin for nominal salary of $400 or $500 a year; clear heart; a warm, loving heart, and big feet, well planted on the solid ground of common sense."

LIVE WIRE BROKE; TWO SHOCKED

Narrow Escape From Electro-cution at Hamilton — One of Injured May Die.

Hamilton, Sept. 18.—Miss Maria Haigh, 218 Hess street south, daughter of Mr. Richard Haigh, bookbinder, of 60 King street west, was dangerously injured last night on Margaret street. She was on her way home on a King street car, when a live wire broke overhead and dropped on the head of Mr. Norman Edward Marshall. Fortunately his cap saved him from the full force of the electric shock, but the lightning danced around his head in an alarming manner. He was knocked back to the car seat, and for a brief space of time lost control of the car. He recovered himself soon enough to prevent any further accident. His cap had been knocked off his head and he stopped the car and went back to look for it. He was greatly surprised to find Miss Haigh, who had been in the car just before the wire fell, lying unconscious on the side of the road. Drs. Remie and White were summoned and they saw the injuries might prove fatal. The unfortunate lady, who is about 45 years of age, was removed to the city hospital. This is the second live wire accident in this city of recent date. In the previous one a horse which was being driven by a young man, accompanied by two ladies, was electrocuted.

EXIT SHAMROCK II.

New York, Sept. 18.—The work of breaking up the old America ship challenge Shamrock II, has been commenced under the direction of her new owners. It is said that Capt. Miller's partner in the venture is Capt. Chas. Barr, who commanded the yacht Columbia when she defeated Shamrock II. The first Shamrock has not yet been sold.

BALFOUR TO WAIT UPON THE KING

And Present the Make-Up of the New Cabinet.

PREMIER WIDELY CRITICISED

For Selling His Pamphlet on Tariff Question—Resignation Pleas.

London, Sept. 18.—The political crisis is still the sole topic of discussion in the United Kingdom. Premier Balfour is expected to have an audience with King Edward at Balmoral today, when doubtless he will present the nominations for the cabinet vacancies. The exact nature of these appointments still remains a matter of varied surmise. Regarding the eventual result of the upheaval, the Spectator forecasts that Mr. Balfour, when he appears to the country, will be beaten and succeeded by a Rosebery cabinet, which will not last long, attracts the greatest attention.

A curious phase of the situation is the severe criticism regardless of party lines, levelled on Mr. Balfour's action in publishing his views and selling them in pamphlet form. By Mr. Balfour's own admission it is a "mere child in such matters," and his inexperience in business affairs now appears to have him at the mercy of publishers and pamphlet printers, who are coining money over the vital issue in national affairs.

The Outlook, which is a warm supporter of the Premier, declares Mr. Balfour's indiscretion "strikes a rude blow at one's reverence for the traditions of English public life, when a public servant's position seems to be used for private gain, no matter how small."

The Outlook adds that the fact that a note was sent to the editors, with the pamphlet, only allowing them to quote 1,000 words textually is one of the worst features in this deplorable business.

Spectator and other periodicals also express concern on the latter point. The Outlook estimates that the profit of the pamphlet will be over $17,000, of which Mr. Balfour will receive a large share. The pamphlet promises to reach a sale of a million copies. In the meantime there are no pamphlets in print and the copies printed have reached a premium, many say, they cannot find any more copies of the issue. Mr. Balfour's party managers only proclaim grave dissatisfaction. In the first place, they say, they cannot find any more copies of the issue. Mr. Balfour's party managers only proclaim grave dissatisfaction. In the first place, they say, they cannot find any more copies of the issue.

London, Sept. 18.—A "Reuter" dispatch from St. Petersburg says Mr. Chamberlain has resigned. The Russian press and public with satisfaction, as it is considered that Mr. Chamberlain disappears one of the greatest obstacles to the Russian cause for European peace.

CHINA WILL NOT SIGN

Refuses to Agree to the New Russian Conditions.

Peking, Sept. 18.—China has not yet signed the new Russian conditions in Manchuria, being mainly deterred by the energetic counsels of Japan, whose contentions alone prevented their immediate acceptance. The Chinese at first regarding the conditions as reasonable and moderate. All now, however, depends upon the result of the Russo-Japanese negotiations, though the presentation of new conditions, following so closely upon the reported transference of the negotiations from St. Petersburg to Tokio, is considered to contribute to a more favorable issue.

FATAL SHOOTING AT EVANSVILLE

Police Chief, a Captain and Councilman Mortally Wounded—Murderer Suicided.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 18.—The fatal shooting of Chief of Police Heuke and Police Captain Brennecke and the serious wounding of Councilman Lutz last night by Detective Thomas Hutchens, who afterwards committed suicide, occurred in the presence of about a hundred people. Neither Chief Heuke nor Capt. Brennecke had opportunity to defend themselves. Five minutes before the shooting Detective Hutchens, in conversation with Patrolman Crow and Fireman Hoberer, made the remark with an oath, that there were two men he intended to get even with.

Patrolman Crow was sitting at a table near the entrance of the German village, with Hutchens, when Chief Heuke and Capt. Brennecke entered. He jumped to his feet and started for the detective as soon as the first shot was fired. He did not reach him, however, until both the chief and captain had been struck. Hutchens then threw the gun over his shoulder and fired the shot that struck Lutz. Whether he intended the shot for Heuke or Patrolman Crow is not known. Both men were in the line of fire, and it is probable he intended to kill Crow for attempting to interfere. After he had fired four shots, Hutchens walked outside the tent and saying, "No man will ever live to see me tried," placed the revolver to his right temple and sent his last bullet into his brain. Six years ago Hutchens shot at Brennecke in a saloon, but the bullet lodged in the ceiling. Capt. Brennecke is still unconscious.

Frank Lutz is shot through the right lung and is believed to be fatally hurt.

$9,000 ROBBERY AT VANCOUVER

Was Taken From a Bag Containing $34,000—Property of Wellington Colliery.

Vancouver, Sept. 18.—Detectives are investigating the robbery of $9,000 from the Wellington Colliery Company. The amount was taken from the sum sent to pay the month's wages at the colliery on Tuesday from the head office here. Thirty-four thousand dollars was sent, as usual, in a leather bag. It was given in charge of the purser of the City of Nanaimo, arriving at the Corvex wharf late on Tuesday night. The bag with the cash to pay the wages was left on the dock until the morning, when it was taken in charge by the paymaster of Union mines, who personally took it up on an engine to the head office. On opening the pocket he found that $9,000 had been extracted. No clue has been found yet. One of the staples on the bag had been broken, and the lock left unbroken. The mouth of the bag had been tied open enough to allow the money to be extracted.

A DISTINGUISHED CLERGYMAN.

Rev. Dr. Gordon, who has been announced to preach at St. Andrew's Church tomorrow, is one of the most distinguished clergymen of Canada. His education was obtained at Glasgow and Berlin universities. Among the churches he has been pastor of are St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa, where he was fifteen years; Knox Church, Winnipeg, five years; St. Andrew's Church, Halifax, fifteen years. For nine years he held a professor's chair in Halifax College, and has written extensively. In 1886 he filled the office of moderator of the General Assembly, the highest honor the church in Canada could confer upon him.

"SOO" WORKS CLOSE DOWN; 3,500 MEN RENDERED IDLE

Startling Step Taken by Consolidated Lake Superior
Company Owing to Inability to Pay Salaries.

CITIZENS AND BUSINESS MEN ON VERGE OF PANIC

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 18.—The following regrettable announcement was handed to the Express this morning by Mr. Coyne, assistant to the president of the Consolidated Company: "President Shields, on account of not having funds to meet the pay roll and current accounts, and no immediate prospects of securing money to meet incurring liabilities on account of its officers, men or other creditors, and consequently today has suspended all operations whatsoever except the Algoma Water and Light Company and street railway service in the Canadian Soo and the ferry service, and the street railway service in the American Soo. But one train per week shall be run on the Algoma Central Railway between the Soo and end of track or about 60 miles. This means that 3,500 men will be thrown out of employment."

"The eleven ore mines employing 300 men; the Grace gold mine, employing 70 men; the Michipicoten branch of the railway, employing 50 men; Veneer mill at the Soo, Ont., employing 12 men; the sawmill at the Soo, Ont., employing 100 men; the car shops at the Soo, Ont., employing 20 men; the reduction works at the Soo, Ont., employing 100 men; the Gertrude nickel mine at Sudbury, employing 30 men; the ground wood mill at the Soo, Ont., employing 40 men; the paper mill at the Soo, Mich., employing 20 men; the Michigan Lake Superior Power Company at the Soo, Mich., employing 50 men; the Pine Veneer, Log Pulp, Log Charcoal Company, operating along the line of the Algoma Central Railway, employing 1,000 men; the retort plant at the Soo, Ont., employing 30 men, and the Algoma steel plant at the Soo, Ont., employing 150 men, will be absolutely closed down today, leaving at each operation simply one caretaker in the mine, time and two watchmen at night to protect the property."

"The general office staff and the Algoma Central main line staff will be reduced proportionately, the probability being that no more than 15 of the staff will remain. It is most regrettable that this announcement is made, but it is the only alternative."

PATIENCE COUNSELED.

"For the past 30 days everything that human intelligence could suggest on tireless energy compass has been done to raise funds to finance this immense, magnificent property, but without success."

"The business men of the town are deeply concerned over the situation, as they realize that the loss of the cause of the outcome of these prolonged difficulties at the works will be beneficial to the place, inasmuch as the industries of the consolidated company have been put upon a much more substantial basis, they also feel that many will suffer materially in the loss of their employment. The situation, so far as the town is concerned, is by no means hopeful. In fact the outlook is very dark. It is most regrettable that this announcement is made, but it is the only alternative."

"Much sympathy is felt for President Shields, who has spent the past three months in his heroic effort to work out a solution of this difficulty, but whose lack of success has been almost solely due to the unprecedented depression in the money markets."

YANKEE POACHERS ANGRY

Claim Petrel Unlawfully Confiscated Their Nets.

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—The fishermen of Ashtabula are in arms against action of the Canadian revenue cutter Petrel, which on Wednesday night seized $250 worth of nets from the Canadians, and yesterday the tug Hayes found that seventy of its nets had been taken.

The fishermen say they were on the American side of the line. They will make protests to the Government.

SUFFOCATED BY GRAIN

Lad Falls Into Bin and Is Carried Through Spout.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—Ernest Ennis, a 15-year-old boy, employed in the Montreal Warehouse Company's warehouse, yesterday morning in the grain at the warehouse. Ennis fell into a grain bin, a distance of 25 feet, and was carried by the force of the rushing grain into the spout by which the grain fell into the bin. The grain piled over his head and caused suffocation. The first knowledge of the accident received by those working in the warehouse was when the lad's foot and leg were seen protruding from the end of the pipe. Work was at once stopped, the pipe cut, and young Ennis taken out dead.

INDIAN BAND ON STRIKE

Brought the Boss of a Western Fair Side Show to Time.

An Indian band, which had been taking part in a side-show programme at the fair, went on strike this morning. It was just before their train pulled out for the town where the Indians are to appear next, and London's musical organizations came within an act of obtaining a more or less valuable (?) addition.

It appears that business had been dull here. There was not enough in the treasury to meet the demands of the bandmen, but Chief Jump-Into-the-Lake, as his companions called him, was firm, and said that they would not go with the show until the salary was forthcoming. Moreover, they said that none of the property of the show would go, either, until they did. They didn't know anything about ballet shows, but they knew that they wanted the money due them for playing or its equivalent. Finally the boss of the show made a settlement, and the band went along.

APPLYING FOR DIVORCE

Andrew W. Mann, of This City, Seeking a Decree at Ottawa.

Another bill for divorce has been filed at Ottawa for the next session of the Dominion Parliament. A dispatch from the Capital received this afternoon states that Andrew William Mann, of this city, is making application for a bill of divorce from his wife, Helen M. Mann, now of the city of New York.

The occupation of the applicant is given as that of a manager. He alleges adultery and desertion as the grounds for his move.

out avail. The hardships that this will bring upon many officers and employees must be borne as patiently as possible, trusting that the future may bring about a happy solution and settlement of all difficulties. Above all else I must ask you to remember that we are all law-abiding citizens and that our misfortunes, while hard to bear, are not as hard as our ancestors' or even our fellow-citizens have borne and come through triumphantly. The company's loss on account of this necessary shut-down will be almost irretrievable, for the reason that no pulpwood, sawdust or veneer logs will be available to run the pulp mills, sawmills or veneer mills next year."

ALL OPERATIONS CEASE.
All of the operations of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company were closed down tonight, and the great industries are silent for the first time in six years. The various plants are in charge of watchmen and the town is filled with the unemployed. There is a general feeling of uneasiness among the citizens, and the inevitable approach of an extremely hard winter, combined with the more immediate danger of what may happen when the three thousand dismissed employees of the company are assembled in town, within the next day or two, unable to get their ordinary means of livelihood, is prepared for an emergency of this kind and it is to be hoped that money will be forthcoming very soon to pay these men off.

The House Problem.

The house problem, of which many families in London have had experience, is also vexing Toronto. One of the remedies seriously proposed is the exemption of houses from taxation.

The assessment department points out that the difficulty has not arisen by reason of the city being already closely built up. There are large vacant spaces comparatively convenient to the center of the city upon which, under pressure, owners would erect houses at a moderate rent of from $8 to $15 per month, for which class of houses there is at present a great demand. Says the Toronto Star:

"We have asked builders why they did not put up houses in certain districts upon vacant lands which are lying there. Their answers have usually been that they could not think of paying the prices which the owners of these lands are holding them at. Therefore the whole body of tenants of the city are being made to pay in order that the owners of vacant property may, almost untaxed by the city, hold tight for unreasonable prices."

"Whether, therefore, it is the single tax idea, or not, which we support, we believe the efforts of the city demands that something should be done to bring the vacant lands within the city limits into the market at proper prices, and prices at which it would be profitable to build upon them houses for moderate rent, except houses from taxes would do this, and we would like to see it tried."

All of which makes pleasant reading for the disciples of Henry George. The house problem is making many converts for the principle of the single tax and we expect to see it recognized before long, in a modified form, in the assessment of municipalities. The Ontario assessment commission refused to recommend its adoption, but advised that land and building be separately assessed. This would give a wide discretion to municipalities, by enabling them to shift taxation more or less from buildings to the land, or from improvements to a tax on industry.

The Crash at the Soo.

The Consolidated Lake Superior Company has been unable to find a way out of its financial difficulties, and has suspended operations at the Soo. Thirty-five hundred men employed in the various industries of the company and along its lines of railway are thrown out of work. Fortunately there is a brisk demand for all classes of labor in nearly every portion of Canada and the United States, so that these men need not long be out of employment, but they will suffer temporary hardship, as they are unable to get their overdue wages, and many of them have made no provision against want. It is a staggering blow to the town of Sault Ste. Marie, which almost owes its existence to the Consolidated Company. The business men there have a hard winter ahead. Great hopes had been built on the phenomenal industrial growth at the Soo, but there is not the slightest reason for thinking these are to be permanently disappointed. The fault does not rest with the country. Mr. Clergue made no mistake when he chose the Soo as the seat of a vast enterprise. The natural resources, the wealth of mine and forest, disposed around a great water power, promised a wonderful development. Mr. Clergue saw the possibilities with the eye of a genius, but his genius, as often happens with gifted men, was not of the order which showed itself in the practical details of his own conceptions. He was a great promoter, but not a great manager. If his managerial ability had been equal to his faith in the country, the present troubles would have been beyond his financial resources, but it was an enthusiasm that will be justified in time. If President Shields had been able to find the money the majority of the enterprises created by Mr. Clergue would have been carried on uninterruptedly, as they were on a paying basis. As it is, they will be carried on after a period of idleness, by a reorganized company, profiting by the experience of its predecessor. The solid foundation is there.

Where Prosperity Pinches.

Sir William Mulock has brought in a bill providing for an all-round increase in the wages of the civil service. There is truth in the saying that good times are good for everyone but the man with a fixed income. In a time of general prosperity, prices always rise, and unless a man's earnings rise with them he is a loser where others are gainers, and he may be pardoned if he feels he has a grievance against society. Civil servants and all those who are in public offices are in this class. During the past five or six years wages in every trade and in nearly every occupation have gone up almost automatically with the increased cost of living and demand for labor. But not so with the members of the civil service, who are on fixed salaries and must turn to the tender mercy of the Government for any special consideration, such as is now being given them. Of course the law works both ways. Periods of depression are always periods of low prices, and the man with the stationary income has then the advantage. The wages of public employees do not drop as do the wages in many trades and callings during dull times, so that a Government berth has its compensations. But several years of high prices have doubtless pinched many civil servants, and as the revenue is buoyant, the Government feels the country can afford to do the right thing by them.

The Turbine Steamers.

The report that the Cunard Line steamships to be built for the North Atlantic service, under contract with the British Government, will use turbine engines has not been verified, but it calls attention to the development of this form of steam motor. The fastest torpedo boat destroyers in the British navy, attaining 30 to 35 knots an hour, are equipped with turbines and the first passenger boat using them was launched some months ago for the English Channel service. According to the report of the United States consul at Calais to the state department, she has proved herself to be a wonderful boat. In good weather she attains almost the speed of the best ocean liners, and it is claimed that the pounding noise of the machinery and the annoying vibration of the hull, of which those who travel in steamers can hardly escape the consciousness, are almost completely absent.

The principle of the turbine motor is easily explained. The primitive turbine is the water wheel, used by the old-style grist mill. The water from a stream or reservoir is directed upon or against the paddles or buckets, turning the wheel, the extended turning axis of which formed the shaft from which power was communicated to machinery by cogs or belts. What is commonly known today as the turbine is a horizontal wheel, which has curved, troughlike paddles on the rim or periphery, against the concave surfaces of which the head of water is conducted through channels occupying the interior of the wheel, in a way to strike all these paddles at once, and so set the wheel turning. The water fell upon or pushed against only a few paddles of the old-fashioned wheel.

In steamships the steam which, instead of water, is the motive power, is made to drive pistons which by means of cranks turn the shaft operating the side-wheel or the screw propeller. The application of the turbine principle to steamships does away with the pistons. The steam is forced against the "paddles" of the turbine in a manner similar to that in which the water is forced in a turbine wheel operated by water power.

Mr. Gilmour, Conservative member for East Middlesex, told the House of Commons that the County of Middlesex had been divided in the redistribution "just as it ought to be."

The Western Ontario Conservative Association denounces the redistribution bill as "iniquitous." Shades of the gerrymander!

There are many free traders who would nevertheless be tickled to see Great Britain give Germany and the United States a dose of their own medicine.

The members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association have places for 11,000 workmen. And yet Canadian industries are said to be suffering for want of a higher tariff.

Since Gladstone, no British statesman has inspired such extremes of friendship and hatred as Chamberlain. The London Times calls him the greatest of Imperial patriots, and the London News says his letter of resignation is that of a gambler, "who has thrown his last coin and lost."

A writer in an English paper says Ottawa is the most beautiful in its modernity of all the Canadian cities. He forgot to mention that our Lord was the moon, but in its appearance. —St. Thomas Journal.

If this means that London has retained a great measure of natural beauty, the Journal is correct. Compared with the arboreal loveliness of the Forest City, St. Thomas looks like a summer fallow.

With the exception of London, Ontario, Ottawa is the most highly taxed city in the Dominion of Canada, its total taxation being 22 11-20 mills to the dollar, while that of London is 22 mills.

If the civic rate as apart from school rate is taken into consideration, the city of Quebec comes next to London, while Ottawa takes the third place, the figures for London showing 17-20 mills, Quebec, 17 and Ottawa 15-20 Ottawa Free Press.

This is not a good advertisement for the city of London, but it ought to be heeded by our civic spending bodies, including the Hospital Trust.

Mr. Shoddy—Oh, yes, my ancestor started from there, don't yer know.

The Rose of Wentworth

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A great disappointment came to Arley soon after Sir Charles and Lady Herbert's departure.

A note was brought to her from Sir Anthony Hamilton saying that he had just received a letter from Lady Elaine, containing the intelligence that the housekeeper at Hazelmere was ill, consequently everything was going wrong, and she and Lady Elaine would be obliged to remain a week longer at least.

Sir Anthony wrote that he was very sorry, and if Arley felt that she could not wait that time to learn the precise date of her return, and she could come immediately up to London, and leave his wife to attend to the home difficulties.

At first Arley thought that she could not wait a whole week, and perhaps longer, before having the tantalizing mystery solved.

But remembering how Lady Hamilton clung to Lady Elaine, she said: "I will not be so childish—good news will keep. I will be patient and wait until they see fit to return."

Accordingly she sat down and replied to Sir Anthony's note to that effect, telling him to tell the housekeeper to arrange his wife's plans—to let them take their own time, and she would try to be content.

Three days later she went to the art gallery to see her pictures.

She had chosen an hour when she thought the fewest people of her acquaintance would be about, and she was alone, save for one woman whom she knew.

She wandered about for an hour or more, visiting the different rooms, and examining the pictures, and finally came back to take one more look at her own before going home.

The room just then was almost deserted; there was only a young man there, and he was standing before one of her pictures, pencil and paper in hand, trying to sketch its outlines to take away with him.

Arley was attracted by his bright and intelligent, though rather pale, face, at once, and she noticed, with a thrill of sympathy, that he had one foot, walked, or rather leaned upon a crutch.

Of course it was none other than Eddie Wentworth.

Dear old fellow, everything connected with art, he had asked Philip if he might attend the exhibition, and he had replied by presenting him with a season ticket, and he had been there all day long, disappearing about nine in the morning, and hurrying away to the art gallery, where he would remain absorbed in his treasures until it grew too dark to see.

He always went provided with pencil and sketchbook, and if anything particularly struck his fancy, he would make an attempt to copy it, and then amuse himself during the evening after his return, by trying to fill in and describe to Philip what he had seen during the day.

Thus Arley found him on the third day of the exhibition intent upon trying to make an outline sketch of one of her pictures.

She pretended not to notice him, but in passing him she glanced over his shoulder, with a smile of amusement, expecting to see a shapeless contortion of her work, but she was surprised to find him sketching a picture of a correct likeness to the original.

Actuated by an irresistible impulse, she stopped and said, kindly: "My boy, you are doing very well, will you allow me to look at what you are doing?"

Arley had put up her veil when she saw how nearly empty the room was, and Eddie, turning quickly at the sound of her voice, looked up into what he thought was the most beautiful face that he had ever seen, and he flushed with both pleasure and shyness at her request, and clung to his drawing hesitatingly.

"It is nothing," he stammered; "of course, I cannot do it nicely, but it is so pretty," with a longing glance at Arley's picture, "that I wanted something to remember it by."

"Please let me see," Arley said.

And he reluctantly yielded it up into her outstretched hand.

"Who taught you to draw?" she asked, seeing native talent in every stroke of his pencil.

"I began to learn at school," Eddie replied, "then father bought me a 'guide to art,' and that helped me a great deal; but since I have been sick and could not go about much, with a sigh and a glance at where his missing foot should have been, "Uncle Philip has let me have a teacher at home."

national government, and one of the first acts of its new parliament was to confer the suffrage on women. It was supposed at this time that about 800,000 were thus enfranchised, but this proves to be too small an estimate, as already, for the first election, over 850,000 women have registered. A recent number of the London Daily Chronicle says:

YOU CAN'T BUY SATISFACTION

Complete Gratification Must Be Worked For.

The Thing Won by Our Own Labor Is Worth More Than Ten Gifts of Good Fortune.

Recently a clever writer, inspired by the "exuberant enjoyment" he experienced at close of day in the wilderness, summed up every separate item in the category of delights which he enjoyed and wrote: "Luxury cannot be bought. It must be worked for."

He had worked as only an enthusiastic amateur woodsman is willing to work, and everything was ready for the peace of the sunset and the coming of the night. The balsam boughs were spread in fragrant order for his bed—the shelter above him was sound, well planned and well executed—the fire burned—the trout were ready for the evening meal—the air that he inhaled was balmy—the flavor of his tobacco delicate to a degree. The untrodden wild which in the morning gave no welcome to the intruder, but held half mockingly its materials for joyous occupation in tantalizing nearness, had been for him and seen that it required, and he sat happily victorious and delightedly tired, and thought what the sort of luxury which he had won by his own labor was worth. He had never realized the true sense of luxurious living until now.

The great dictionaries spread out their learned derivations and gave us definitions of the word "luxury." You come to what you seek. "Complete gratification or satisfaction, either physical or intellectual," yes, that is the sort of luxury which he meant, when he said that "it could not be bought," that is the proud delight we can only attain by our own labor.

The secret of the happy freedom and superior advantage in domestic life of the skilled mechanic, who can turn his hand into cause and effect at will, can not escape our observation when we try to compare the varying ranks of American men. In this country, where we want what they enjoy by great and steady labor. That house at once becomes the "house of the future," not too plain chair is surrounded by comfort, which a man has wrested from the world by his own strong arm. He who comes to the level of the things which more or less obedient trades people have made ready, and tries to enjoy what fortune has poured into his heedless possession, finds a fault in everything he touches and ends by feeling sure that his neighbor is better served than himself.

Gardening gives a special point of illustration of what every proof of being a divine and beneficent law. The man, he is a toiler with his hands or weary brain, who has planted and cultivated some secret space, and can enter his home, or perhaps all his happy wife to see that he is bearing some well ripened fruit, some fresh product of the soil—may be more than a bunch of ruddy radishes lying beside the delicate green of lettuce leaves—has a sense of triumph which holds close kinship to that of a victor laden with the spoils of conquest.

The sleep denied the tired brain—the quick obedience to the call of a neighbor—the persistent cheer—the tired back bent over unyielding weeds—the restless slaughter of our insect foes—all swell the value of the perfected fruit or vegetable. And one rose, cut cautiously lest a coming bud may be destroyed, and laid lovingly at the place where sits his love, is to both giver and receiver worth more than a hundred of those wounded, bruised, besprinkled blossoms on which men spend daily such great sums.

Nature and art bring to their perfection a thousand wonderful things with which those of us who can seek to beautify our homes and adorn the persons of those we love, but that into which a man has poured his own endeavor, his watchful care, his patient thought, and the affection which we cannot withhold from what we plant and protect, has an integral value nothing can rival.

There is such a deepening source of happiness in this truth that it is grievous to realize how few comprehend its force and power. We spend so much time in deploring for ourselves and our children, that we are too busy to get what we can give, that we forget all about the intrinsic value of what it is possible for us to attain by our own work.

The rich young man who has gone through four university years as a matter of course, and takes his diploma as a sort of inherited "hall mark" of a gentleman's proper preparation for the social life lying before him, has only made a progressive step—the poor youth, who has struggled to keep himself alive by extra work and who has upon each new textbook as a doubtful acquisition, as he labored up each advancing grade, holds the parchment which certifies him to his degree, as an heir apparent takes his scepter in his hand. He has won a treasure of inestimable value—something which opens a new empire to him and to his children—something which represents aspiration, perseverance, faithfulness, ability. The engrosser's pen has been as ornamental to one as the other, the signatures do not vary in the dotting of an i, the great seal makes the same impression, but the intrinsic value of the one is as much greater than the other as is the proportion of ten to a thousand. "Complete satisfaction" and "exuberant enjoyment," thank God, are not to be bought; they are among those inalienable rights granted to men and women who toil for them, and their value has no measure.

If we could firmly believe and plainly see—for our faith is not severely taxed in this matter—how surely the best things are left to our own achievement, it would alter the fact of the world to us all and set many an anxious heart to rest regarding their children.

No question that there are great things, noble possessions, pleasant holdings and havings which can be bought for gold, but in the method of attaining them—something which has gone out of them. Out of the poor man's acre can be brought forth the splendid estate often lacks—the "luxury" of perfect satisfaction. It is so glad the dictionary did not stop short of this fourth definition.

The incalculable of this thought, the putting into practice of the underlying principle would help to stop the flood of things which are increasing, as individuals and as a nation. If our children could early learn the satisfaction of possessing what they have worked to produce, it would stop many a needless thing, and would save many a useless thought, many a longing, which, growing with their growth, tempts our children to marry for wealth and our sons to seek always the swift and uncertain means to win a fortune.

For a rich father to pay his heir to do some boyish work and see that it is earned by faithful performance—something as well done as the boys' power permits—and let him earn a coveted toy, would mean a noble thing, the father's part, and many times, some resistance on that of the child, but that thing, so worked for, would neither be abused nor quickly cast aside. It would be worth all the treasure which the Christmas tree or lavished on a birthday. Deep down in every human heart there is an instinct stifled by our over-rich times. It is said of a certain king that, traveling while a prince, he saw a laborer eagerly eating his dinner on a coal-side.

"I wonder what makes that taste so good?" he asked good-naturedly. "I worked for the flour," your highness said, "and my wife made the bread. Labor and love make the poor man's sauce. It would not taste the same to you."

Our daughters it seems more difficult to find a way, in this our day of superfluity and oversupply, to distinguish the good from the bad, the value which comes from labor to an end. Many thousands of women, kind and capable, but for them, alas for the majority, I mean—the things which chiefly value and on which they bestow the magic of their industry, are things which have no real value. Even to these the flimsy dress and exaggerated hat with its costly plume are far more beautiful and precious than the simple, useful and precious things which few of our fathers had had the good sense to value.

Many a thin-limbed little girl earns her new shoes and the right to go on her knees to the country, by her "minding the baby" or drudging away at some household which it within her power. To these the demonstration of the value of their labor, and the preciousness of Cinderella's I often see them dusted with a small handkerchief, which has no real value, and the nearest ferry is a fair exchange for the ocean voyage of an emigrant. Worth, why, what is it not worth? Carrying a heavy load, or brother, "for a week and a day," that strange time measure of the old ballads—is a small price for the value of the thing.

Put for the little-to-do, wholly comfortable girls growing up in so many thousands of American homes, how shall we find a way to make known the value conferred by personal effort with its necessary accompaniments of perseverance and self-denial? This we know; as long as the fact is hidden from their eyes and understandings, they are unfairly dealt with and deprived of a great aid to happiness and the joy of making something where-to clothe or cover girls like themselves.

If they cannot naturally find work for themselves and those they love, let them learn to labor for others; let them know the difference between taking a bill from their father's purse and the value of the gift which they give. Let them realize how bare is the gift without the giver—let them have the delight, the "exuberant joy" of the moment which they give. The writer can well remember a certain dress for a little neighbor, over which tears of anxiety were shed, needles too heavily held, broken, and threads snapped in exasperation. The moments in which its fair proportions were held up by a mother's hands, and the last touch of perfection was added by running a blue ribbon in the neck, were of too deep satisfaction to the mother, and of too great a long life to efface. With the happy arms of the recipient tight about my neck, I felt that I had done my labor to make another glad. I would seem to me indeed a pity for any child to lose such a delight as that proved to be.

Everything we plan and do ought to include the recognition of this pregnant truth; let us make room in our lives for recreation, our desire to perfect our family organization, for a measure of effort for one another and for ourselves as well; the keenest zest is lost if we omit the element of production by our own effort. Heart, hand, and thought must unite before the highest value has been given to anything.

It comes out in many ways which our children cannot comprehend. The head of a great establishment tastes languidly the morsel provided by his costly chef and says: "I wish I could get any one to make this as my mother did." Their grandmother preparing food for her children, is an incomprehensible idea: "Do you mean that she cooked it herself?" Yes, and it had something about it that only a lady's care and delicate taste could give. You say you want to be a "Colonial" and don't forget that they all had to work for their households in revolutionary days. We have lost the idea of elegance and dignity associated with that labor of the hands which is the case of gentlemen, an art, and as gracefully done as many a thing called accomplishment.—New York Evening Post.

Novel Sort of Pedograph.

The pedograph is a newly devised instrument which not only makes a record of the distance traveled by a pedestrian, but of the direction taken, so that at the end of a tour a map can be shown giving the distance covered and direction taken in black and white. It is the invention of a young engineer, who gave a description of the machine before the Engineers' Society of Shanghai.

The pedograph is contained in a box that the person walking bears before him suspended from the shoulder by a strap. This box contains a small board, on which is fixed a sheet of paper, parallel to the road, and at a little distance from it being a plate of unpolished glass. The active portion of the instrument—called the recorder—is composed of a small metallic frame bearing a wheel, the periphery of which rests on the paper and traces by its small wheels, the position of the person walking. The recorder is maintained vertically under the action of its own weight, the descent being by the steps of the bearer.

Here are the essential portions of the recorder. A small moving body—arranged as an equilibrium pendulum—long spring acting on a very small lever, which, at each oscillation, makes advance to the extent of a small ratchet wheel, the axis of which carries an endless screw geared to the has 50 teeth. If the ratchet wheel has 50 teeth, 50 steps to two inches or one mile, etc.

The board is always vertical and is fixed in the middle of the horizontal axis connected with the box, and consequently the board may turn around its equilibrium pendulum. It is kept in this position by a piece carrying a magnetized needle forming a compass. A button, which is turned by the hand, makes the piece in question always coincide with the needle, if it deviates from the original position. A little transmitter composed of two pulleys of the same diameter and an endless cord connects the button with the needle to the axis of the board so that if the bearer changes his direction to right or left the board inclines from one side to the other. The original direction, while always remaining the same as the glass in the recorder, does not only trace the distance, but also the direction in which the bearer is going.—Baltimore News.

How to Drive Correctly.

One cannot drive without sitting down, and that position should, from the first, be correct, easy and firm. Sit squarely down on your seat or cushion; not on the end of your spine with your feet stuck out in front as if rowing a boat, but upright, and with the legs forming an angle at the base of the spine, which will make you, for comfort's sake, follow your back, and which position, in turn, will give you a "feel" to wrist, forearm and hand which you never knew before.

The reins are held in the left hand, the left or right rein coming over the first finger and thence through the palm; the right or left rein coming between the second and third fingers and thence through the palm, thus separating the reins by the width of two fingers, and enabling you to move by merely turning the hand and wrist. Do not tug at a horse's mouth, but always drive as if you were pulling a sharp kick might break the reins. However dull he may be, always have enough feeling of the bit to have him under control, and keep him up to that extent. At any hole, gutter or sudden break be sure your hand and arm freely "follow" his mouth, and do not let them administer a sudden jerk, but let them feel your steady mouth and instant before you start, as a signal to him that you are about to require of him motion, and this should be done whether you mean to go forward or backward; it enables him to tighten his muscles and collect himself, physically and mentally, to obey your instructions.—Country Life in America.

Anecdotal.

Terence V. Powderly, formerly Commissioner-General of Immigration, met Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, just outside the White House the other morning. "How's your gout getting along?" a bystander asked Mr. Powderly. "I'm troubled with an old injury to my knee, but I suppose you might as well call it 'gout' as anything," he replied. "Tip the way," remarked Senator Penrose, "they call it 'whiskey on the hoof'."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon sometimes gets mixed in his metaphor when addressing the United States House of Representatives. While arguing against a bill in favor of a railroad, he once began in preacher-like tones as follows: "The railroads have been before the Senate on their knees praying and praying and praying," then, suddenly changing the tone, he concluded: "and, gentlemen, it is time to call their hand."

When a shot was fired in the wings of the Tivoli Opera House during the third act of "Carmen," Zelle de Lusana's opening night, a disappointed spectator, who considered Tenney's Don Jose about "the limit," remarked, with a sigh of relief, "Thank God." Those about him, who shared his feelings, snickered sympathetically. But their smiles were turned to peals of laughter when Don Jose presently bobbed up serenely, and the talkative wretch exclaimed tragically, "Ye gods, her aim was bad! She missed him!"

An Englishman went to meet the great philosopher, Arthur Schopenhauer, every morning walking with his ugly poodle along the promenade in Frankfurt-on-Main. Schopenhauer's eccentric appearance, deeply immersed in thought, excited the Englishman's curiosity to such an extent that one day he could contain himself no longer, and walking up to the philosopher, addressed him abruptly thus: "Tell me, please, what is your name of fate, are you?" "Ah!" Schopenhauer replied, "I only wish I knew that myself!"

Nat Goodwin was examining a canvas at an art exhibit in Boston the other day, when the painter of the picture, who was standing by, said: "You seem to like that picture?" "Like it?" answered Goodwin. "A man who would perpetrate a thing like that ought to get six months in jail." "That's too much for the artist," he exclaimed. "You're only an actor. How can you know a bad picture?" "Never painted one," "No," drawled Goodwin, "that's true enough. But I know a bad egg when I run across it, and would you believe it, I never laid one either."

When Dr. Sewell, for many years warden of New College, Oxford, was seriously ill, about the middle of the last century, the college, and indeed all his friends, despaired of his life. The senior fellow, at the time, wishing to have all things in order, wrote to the Home Secretary for leave to bury the warden in the college chapel. Before the next college meeting the warden had recovered. He presided at the meeting, and with no little enjoyment read off the Home Office's letter permitting his own burial. "It gives me great pleasure," said he, "to congratulate the senior fellow on his admirable promptitude and energy. I cannot, however, truthfully say that I regret that both were wasted."

The late Dr. Joseph Parker, the great non-conformist preacher, would accept nothing but third-class fare when he visited poor parishes, but was to the church that had a reputation for meanness in money matters. He visited one such place, where, after service, the deacon said, "Well, Dr. Parker, as to your fee?" "It is fifty pounds," the deacon demurred; Dr. Parker insisted. Finally the fifty pounds was paid. Dr. Parker said: "Now this is not for myself. Some time ago you had said—'mentioning a somewhat obscure minister'—to preach here. Now know that his church is a struggling one, and that he is a poor man with a large family. You refused to pay him more than his bare railway fares. To redeem this iniquity on your part I have charged you fifty pounds, and I shall send it on to him, and he will be the more for the sermon he preached here."

The Rev. Washington Gladden, after a lecture at Harvard, discussed with a number of students the Christian religion. The students, as is sometimes the case, were not without a certain lack of faith. They were not ashamed of their lack, either. They seemed, on the contrary, to be proud of it. "I am a lad of eighteen years, a freshman, 'I am an agnostic' and I am a poor man," he said in his pocket. He regarded narrowly the effect on Mr. Gladden of his bold words. "You are an agnostic?" said the clergyman. "I am an agnostic," "What is an agnostic?" Mr. Gladden asked. "Well, you know, just what you mean by agnosticism," he said. "How does it happen, then," asked the clergyman, "that you're sure you're an agnostic?"

FIRE FIGHTING A WOMAN'S FAD

Aristocracy in England Lead the Brigades.

Duchess of Marlborough First to Take Up the Idea—Baroness Chutes the Chute.

You never could guess, says a London correspondent, who is the best firewoman, or lady fireman, or fire-lady, for whatever it is that should be called, in all England? She is W. K. Vanderbilt's daughter Consuelo, whose husband is the Duke of Marlborough.

And although she stands at the top of the list, there are at least a dozen other British peeresses who really could give points on the management of fires to some of the fancy officers with whom the bosses of London adorn their fire department. Plenty of the great ladies of London society know by experience just how to handle a hose, wield a fire ax, manage a hand pump and work life lines.

There is a good reason for such a queer diversion from dress-making and courtship. Some of the British peers and peeresses own country seats, far away from the cities and from any fire department except such as they can provide for themselves. The English countryside is dotted over with great mansions where connoisseurs for generations after generations have collected priceless art treasures. Fine old mansions they are, and choice food for the flames that now and then lay hold of them and take it up, and even in distant parts look on helplessly. Some of them were built so many centuries ago, and with much joyous disregard of danger from fire, they are nothing less than death traps.

But with the advent of modern fire fighting apparatus life in rich country houses has become a fire trap, and the study of the subject made by their aristocratic owners and the training they have given to their servants.

CONSELO HAS CHIEF. The Duke of Marlborough was one of the first to take up with this idea. When the access of some of the Vanderbilt millions enabled him to renovate the palace at Blenheim, given to his famous ancestor, he was grateful for his victories in war, one of his first thoughts was to protect it from fire, and he equipped the mansion with the latest fire extinguishing apparatus.

It occurred to his energetic little duchess, however, that their private fire department wasn't of much use until they had trained help to manage it, and an energetic chief, so she appointed herself to the latter post and began to take it up, and even in distant parts look on helplessly. Some of them were built so many centuries ago, and with much joyous disregard of danger from fire, they are nothing less than death traps.

Test alarms were sounded again and again, until the duchess had her brigade so well drilled that in case of fire at Blenheim today it is doubtful if there would be much confusion. It was because of the duchess's proved proficiency as a fire captain that she was selected to present medals of merit to firemen who had distinguished themselves by saving lives.

SHE CHUTES THE CHUTE.

The Baroness Von Eckhardstein, who is a duchess, is a very famous firewoman. Her establishment is fitted with canvas chutes, which can be pulled down from the windows at the alarm of fire. She has a considerable stock of canvas chutes, which she has pulled down from a top story by this means, but the baroness practiced the trick herself until she became an expert, and then set her servants to work. "I am informed by an eye-witness that the baroness sometimes has had to slide down the canvas tube half a dozen times in person before she could induce a nervous housemaid to follow her example."

Thanks to the energy and foresight of the Countess of Warwick, Dumfries Castle is protected from the danger of destruction by fire by perhaps the completest private fire brigade in England. Since the recent destruction of a part of Portland Abbey, the Duke of Portland's historic country seat, fire drill has caught on at royal parties and it is a common experience for the alarm of fire to be given purposely in the midst of festivities, when guests and servants alike rush to their respective posts in readiness to battle with the enemy.

Lord St. Leven's daughters, their friends and servants are among those who have thus become adepts at fire brigade work, and Lord Rosebery's staff of domestics at The Durdans, near Epsom, have been trained under the personal supervision of the ex-Premier.

Curiously enough, however, the men of the British aristocracy—Blenheim, the Duke of Marlborough—seldom trouble themselves about the art of fire extinguishing. They content themselves with paying for up-to-date appliances at their mansions and leave the instruction of their servants to their wives and daughters. The Earl of Derby has recently had his place at Knowsley fitted up in this manner, but he takes no personal interest in seeing that anyone on the premises knows how to use the apparatus.

THE KING AN EXCEPTION.

There is, however, a distinguished exception to this rule. It is not generally known that King Edward VII. has considerable knowledge of the routine of fire brigade work, and that on the occasion of an outbreak of fire at Marlborough House, when he was Prince of Wales, it was through his exertions and the promptness with which he ordered a hole to be cut through a floor and a hose inserted that the fire was extinguished before the arrival of the regular firemen.

The Prince of Wales would be quite competent, it is said, to take the position of superintendent of a fire brigade should a revolution deprive him of his exalted position. The Prince learned the work of fire extinguishing when he was in the navy and it so fascinated him that he took up the study of fire fighting on land, and at one time he made it his hobby.

As a result, perhaps, of this fond in the mother country, the colonies have begun to take it up, and even in distant New South Wales there is now a woman's fire brigade which is said to have earned distinction in several notable fights with the flames. They hold forth in the town of Armidale, practicing with the town brigade appliances and paying especial attention to rescue work.

IT ISN'T THE HORSE; IT IS THE TRAINER

Horses Have Instinct But No Brains. Says a Circus Man.

"My word for it, a horse has less brain power than any other animal," said Edward Shipp, a circus horse trainer. "An ostrich has more sense than a horse; so has an alligator. That curious, indefinite quantity known as 'instinct' is at the bottom of all the tricks the horse learns. Just as he eats from instinct, he learns tricks. Usually by the eating is at the bottom of his entire education. He does things for the most part because he feels something good to eat after the doing. It is his natural search after food that makes him do them, just as he paws away the snow to get at the grass. After a while the actions become habits, and we will say he is 'broken.'"

"Nothing of the sort. There was never anything to break. His instinct was simply set in motion, some men take months to teach a horse the simplest trick and weeks to make him bridle wild. In a week I can have the same horse responding easily to my directions in simple tricks. It isn't the horse, it is the trainer. Some men exercise an influence over animals which is almost hypnotic. The man himself can't tell how it is done, in some mysterious manner the horse's instincts are brought into play."

Unfraid he is invaluable. "I have never yet got over their temper. Not long ago one of our thoroughbreds killed his partner. It was in a car. The partner fell down. The other looked at him and refused to stop long after he was dead. They were in a peace, these two. From their first days together they were friends. The end was inevitable. We should have seen it. But the success of a trick horse is all in his training. The public fancies it is in the horse, but it is not. Without a sensible trainer a trick horse is nothing."—Exchange.

NEW TENDERS ON AMENDED PLANS FOR NURSES' HOME

Hospital Building Committee Will Recommend Both to Council.

The Hospital Building Committee, together with the Hospital Trust, met in the city hall last evening, Chairman Judd, Mayor Leck, Ales, Wyatt and Stevenson; Chairman Bayly, of the Hospital Trust, and Trustee Purdon and Engineer Graydon, being present. At the last meeting of the committee it was found that the tenders for the proposed Nurses' Home were higher than the $25,000 appropriation of the city council, and it was decided then to have the engineer take the lowest tenders for all branches of the work, and point out where it was possible to cut them down and bring the figures within the available $25,000. The engineer's report showed that the stone-finishing the attic and cutting in other places; $1,000 could be saved in carpenter work, etc.; by putting in a steam heating plant, $300 could be knocked off, and by dispensing with single rooms, and having the rooms double instead, $285 could be saved. These and other prunings would bring the cost of the home within the appropriation.

After some discussion it was decided to recommend that the city council accept the plan as heretofore submitted with the changes suggested by the engineer, excepting that, which called for double, instead of single rooms. It was felt that double rooms with two nurses in each would be a backward step, and the home will have single rooms. It was also decided to ask the council for new tenders before because they felt that the tenders would not be so low as the first plans. The mayor further remarked that he believed that if new tenders were called for the home could be built still more cheaply.

Before the motion, which was made by Ald. Stevenson, was carried, however, Chairman Bayly again took a rap at the mayor, the hospital and the present plans. Mr. Bayly said that the committee should go slow. He quoted figures to show that the cost of maintenance of Victoria Hospital per annum was greater than the combined cost of two hospitals—one in Hamilton and one in Stratford—London, with its population of 40,000, paying more for its hospital than the combined population of the above named cities, about 80,000. The cost of the hospital was increasing each year, and if the new home is built, it will still further increase. The city and the trust should make the best possible use of the present buildings, and should hesitate to further burden the citizens. Not being a doctor, he would say it was time to call a halt in hospital expenditure.

Mr. Bayly also went on to tell how the $25,000 should be spent, his idea, as previously outlined, being to remodel the old buildings, and instead of erecting a new nurses' home, enlarge the contagious ward accommodation, and also take precautions as to the laundry, which he regards as necessary to prevent infection amongst the patients.

It looked for a time as though there might be some warm discussion, but Mayor Beck cut it short by raising the point that all discussion on Mr. Bayly's arguments was out of order.

In speaking to his motion Ald. Stevenson rescinded Chairman Bayly's objections to the doctors and hospital expenditure, after which the motion carried.

Mr. Bayly then announced that he would like to say why it was that he did not place his views on the Nurses' Home before the trust instead of before the council, but the committee decided it had nothing to do with this private matter, and the meeting adjourned.

WHY HE STAYED AT HOME WHEAT AND FLOUR GO UP

Ald. Cooper Was Not Asked to Go to Ottawa

Laments Fact That Aldermen Do Not Have Such Good Times Now.

Price of Both Commodities Have Been Advanced.

Damage to Manitoba Crops by the Blizzard the Cause.

Wheat is three cents a bushel dearer here today than it was yesterday, and flour is 20 cents a barrel higher. This is the result of the damage to the Manitoba crops, which, it is feared, will be very serious. A dispatch states that the storm on Saturday last was very bad and dealers cannot make contracts owing to the possibility of their being unable to fill them for the lack of wheat that is predicted. Snow, it is said, covers a good deal of the Manitoba wheat, and as a result the prices have advanced throughout the country and are likely to go still higher.

The advance here makes wheat now $1.20 a hundred or 75 cents a bushel. Flour has also advanced, but as this is the first move in flour to a number in wheat, it is probable that flour will still be advanced. Today Manitoba wheat is selling in London, wholesale at $2.25; half Manitoba and half Ontario wheat at $2.10, and Ontario winter wheat at from $1.75 to $1.80.

It was intended it should be according to Ald. Cooper. When the question of appointing representatives came up in the council a motion was made by Ald. Cooper and carried, appointing the mayor and city clerk, and leaving it with the former to take any of the city council he desired, if they could conveniently get away from their business for the three days.

Ald. Cooper did not get the chance, and he does not altogether appreciate the fact. He was not even asked by the mayor to be a member of the committee, and what bothers him more is to think that very few of the aldermen, if any, mentioned to them. He knows that some of them would like to have gone to the capital, and with his motion going through the council in such a form he does not see any reason why they should not have been asked.

Ald. Cooper has no particular love for the mayor now, having become convinced that the latter does not treat him as he should a colleague, and the strained relations may lead the alderman to tell the city's chief magistrate some day exactly what he thinks of him. "I'm afraid to do it," said Ald. Cooper when discussing the Ottawa matter.

What is more, he feels that the mayor does not treat the entire council as he might. "Why," he said, "look at the good times we used to have when Mr. Little and others were in the chair. We don't get them these days. It's just like this now—when there is a chance for a trip, very few, if any, are allowed to go."

NEWTON HAS FOUND CLUE

Woman Who Befriended Him Supposed to Be in Detroit.

He Will Go There and Continue His Search for Her.

Last evening's Advertiser contained an account of a man who looked for a Mrs. Smith, who had befriended him over 25 years ago in this city. The man's name is Sydney Newton, and he comes from Colorado, and this morning he told The Advertiser that he thought he was on the track of the lady he seeks, and that she is now in Detroit.

Mr. Newton corroborates the story which appeared in print, and says that if he can find the woman who took him in, when he was a starving boy, and helped him, he will make her a state. From that Newton has increased his business and possessions until now he has in the neighborhood of $100,000.

When he came here he only knew that the woman he was looking for was a Mrs. Smith and that she lived in the city of Detroit. He was able to describe her. Several days search were of no avail until last night, when he came to an old lady who knew the woman he was looking for. Mrs. Smith had, however, married a second time, about 15 years ago, and the last the Horton street lady knew of her was that she was living on Clifford street in Detroit, five years ago, her name then being Mrs. Salisbury.

Mr. Newton has now decided to go to Detroit and look up this clue, as he feels sure that Mrs. Salisbury is the woman who was so good to him and whose goodness he can never forget.

ACTION WAS DISMISSED

J. C. Woods Wins in a Suit Brought at Woodstock.

In the high court of justice at Woodstock this week judgment was given in the case of Joslin vs. Woods, in which $1,100 was claimed by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Joslin, now of the Northwest, for the management of the Woodstock branch of Woods' Fair. The action was dismissed with costs, and Mr. Woods consented not to ask for the latter, should no further action be taken.

The evidence produced by the prosecution was taken by a commission, and included the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Joslin, Herbert Joslin and J. A. Joslin. The two former were conducting the Woodstock business on the understanding that they were to share both the profits and the losses. The defense contended that the plaintiff was manager of both the Woodstock and the Belleville branches of Woods' Fair, and while there was a profit in the former store, yet this was more than counter-balanced by the loss in the running of the Belleville branch. The plaintiff, on the other hand, contended that he had never undertaken the management of the Belleville store, declaring that J. C. Woods, the proprietor, had entered into an agreement with his sons, all his business transactions managed this branch. It was contended that the plaintiff had no understanding with the sons, and therefore the father should not be called upon to share the loss incurred in the running of the Belleville store. The defendant swore that he had never negotiated with the sons. All his business transactions were with the father, H. W. Joslin, and the sons were simply employed by the father to manage the branch in his absence. His lordship held that the contention of the plaintiff that the two stores were independent of each other was not proven, and entered judgment accordingly. Gibbons, K. C., London, for defendant.
