DR. WILSON'S HERBINE BITTERS.

A remedy that has been a blessing to mankind for many years. Thousands of suffering people have recovered health through its agency. Thousands are using it to-day.

Headache, which in itself is a misery, is only a forerunner of greater miseries if not at once stopped. Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters will cure Headache.

Dyspepsia is one of the greatest ills to mankind; it knows not the smiling face and bright eye; it is torment itself. If you have Dyspepsia you know what it is; if you use Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters you will know what it is to be cured.

Biliousness, the twin brother of Dyspepsia, cannot stand before the proper use of Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters. Those who have tried this remedy for Biliousness know. You try it and you will also believe.

Liver complaints and all the evils that follow in their train can be done away with by the use of Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters.

A sick man knows the joy of relief when it reaches him; many a sick man has felt the pleasure of relief only through the use of Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters.

Without an appetite the machinery of the body will soon get out of gear. Preserve your appetite by using Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters.

No family should think of doing without Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters; it is as necessary in the house to keep out disease as flour is to keep out hunger.

Your head sometimes feels as if it would split; you cannot work, you cannot think, you cannot sleep. Friend, your stomach is out of order; that is the trouble, you need a tonic badly. You must take Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters. You do that and the Bitters will do the rest.

Nervous prostration is common amongst the women these days. One woman with this trouble will keep a whole household in a state of misery. She cannot eat what others eat, she cannot sleep while others sleep, she cannot laugh while others laugh; her nerves are unstrung and she is on the verge of madness. In such a case Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters will do wonders.

It will strike at the root of the trouble; put the stomach in order, drive away the Headache, close the tired eyes with soft, refreshing sleep, bring a bright glow to the cheek and put vigor in the body.

The women use Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters with the best results for those diseases peculiar to them. Many a woman in Canada can testify to the great good the remedy has done her. Many are the testimonials already given.

Safe, sure and speedy is the action of Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters, and this is why it is fast becoming the family medicine in Canada.

Twenty years is a long time in one's life, and in that time spent in business one learns many things. The storekeeper knows what articles have done well and what have not.

When he speaks he speaks from experience and his testimony is not to be set aside with disdain. Here is what a man of experience has to say about Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters.

Buckley Corner, N.S., Nov. 9th, 1897.
Messrs. Brayley, Sons & Co., Montreal.

Dear Sirs,—After twenty years' experience in country store keeping (and during that time I hardly need say I have sold all kinds of patent medicines) I find that Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters have made more cures and given better general satisfaction than any I have ever sold. I use the Bitters as a family medicine, and find by doing so I am on the right track as my doctor's bills are nothing. I sold all I ordered from your representative; please ship me another gross at once. Yours truly, THOS. LAWSON.

After many years' experience a man who has sold medicines of all kinds and used them too, comes forward and says none have ever equalled Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters.

Now is the time for you to use Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters if you are troubled with any of the diseases which arise from a disordered liver, kidney or stomach.

TURKISH DYES ARE THE CHEAPEST.

DR. WILSON'S ANTI-BILIOUS AND PRESERVING PILLS.

The public in all parts of Canada have used these pills for years and thousands upon thousands of testimonies have been given by a grateful people.

Marvellous cures have been brought about by the use of Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills and it has thus become one of the most popular medicines in the market.

It is Anti-Bilious because it is the specific for Biliousness, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Indigestion, Headaches, Jaundice and diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys.

It is Preserving because it preserves the strength and leaves no evil effects behind. It sustains and strengthens.

There are other diseases which are mastered by Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills: Heartburn, Costiveness, Sick Headache, and all forms of disease of the digestive organs.

People complain of ill-health and wonder why they are in such a condition. A little thought on their part would show them that it was through their own neglect that they are complaining. Many little things will put one out of sorts, and if just at that time they took Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills the result would have been different.

A stitch in time saves nine. Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills, if taken when the first symptoms of disease show themselves, will save a long period of ill-health and suffering.

The blood is the life, and in order to continue healthy the blood must be kept clear and free from the accumulations which are the cause of disease. Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills will keep the blood clear and pure.

A common complaint is Piles, one which is painful and annoying. Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills cure Piles, and are a much safer remedy and are more effective than the surgeon's knife.

The feeble appetite is improved by the use of Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills, the blood courses through the veins with energy, the foul smelling breath becomes pure scented.

The nerves regain and preserve their proper tension under the influence of Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills.

The liver is stimulated and does its work when Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills are used.

One dose will do much good and often make an absolute cure in the early stages of diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys.

But in cases of very long standing Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills have never been known to fail in giving relief immediately and ultimately bringing about a positive cure.

The cost of these pills is small; the pills are small, but they are considered by many to be worth their weight in gold. They are put on the market to be within the reach of all.

Pills vs. Bills. In the contest between Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills and doctor's bills the pills are by a long way the favorite. The pills will give an absolute cure without bills that worry and keep your nose to the grindstone.

Foul and morbid matter is being continually taken into the system and this foul matter the poor, unhealthy liver refuses to assimilate into bile; the blood as a result becomes poisoned.

The thousand and one ills that bilious flesh is heir to crowd in upon the sufferer. There is a way out of the difficulty, however, and that is by using Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills.

Those who suffer should no longer be despondent as long as there is a remedy which will drive away that suffering; that remedy is Dr. Wilson's Anti-Bilious and Preserving Pills.

These pills act on the kidneys and are safe in their curative properties. They cause the watery matter to flow freely, thus preventing Diabetes, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Dropsy and other terrible diseases from taking hold on the system.

It is one of the most valuable of the ever-at-hand remedies and should be in every house. Is it in your house?

WHEN YOU WANT A GOOD DYE, USE TURKISH.

TURKISH DYES ARE THE LADIES' FAVORITE.

.....A WESTERN IDYLL.....

CHAPTER I.

Oregon Billy set down his glass on the bar of Jimmie Regan's saloon, and wiped his flushed face on the sleeve of his red guernsey.

"It's gospel, boys," he said, emphatically; "it is, by gum, and you-alls can build on it every time. I stopped at Twenty-Mile Station just as old Abe drove the stage in, and I seen 'em both. Man! they was purty, too!

"What age should ye think they was?" asked old man Litster.

"Waal," said Billy, "they say females' age is a mighty uncertaint topic to converse upon, and deceivin' that-a-way. I'd hate to commit myself any, but I do say if either o' them two gals is over twenty-three, you may slice me up for poker chips."

"And handsome in the bargain," said old man Litster, with a troubled brow. "Waal, boys, I ain't wantin' to spoil sport now, and I s'pose this here camp is free to all, men an' women, but I'low I'm sorry for this here. We've ben gettin' on real peaceful and edifyin' lately—ain't had more'n five funerals this month. It seems a pity, just when everything was goin' so nice, that such a disturbin' element should be comin' in to our midst, and since you-alls has 'lected me mayor of this camp, things like this here makes me feel mighty oneasy."

Oregon Billy went to the door.

"Oneasy or not," he remarked, "don't cut any ice now, for I see dust down the valley, and here they'll be inside of five minutes."

As he spoke he stepped out on the stoop of the saloon, followed after a minute by the other men, each one trying to appear indifferent, and succeeding very poorly.

"Look at that, will ye," said Dave Crandell, as the stage came swinging up the road at a canter, with old Abe in front sitting as upright as circumstances and the extent of his libations on the road permitted.

The stage whirled round to the saloon door, and old Abe pulled up with a flourish that threw his horses on their haunches.

"Now, ladies," he said persuasively, "just you allow me to help you out. I hev much pleasure, ladies, in introducin' you-alls to our Mayor, Mr. Lits-ter—'Old man Litster' he generally gets from us—it's kinder short to say." Old man Litster advanced with outstretched hand.

The foremost of the two girls was tall, dark, with flashing grey eyes, and masses of crisp, dark hair, which formed a complete contrast to the fluffy golden curls, soft hazel eyes and brilliant coloring of her companion.

After the first few words old man Litster had drawn the two girls a little apart, and was now talking to them earnestly, with a grave face. Afterwards he led the way to Lanigan's boarding house, the door opened to admit them all, closed on them, and the miners as one man drew a long breath.

It was fully half-an-hour before old Litster returned and re-joined the boys at the bar.

"Boys," he said, "this here is surely a mighty queer start, and I'm considerable perplexed to know just which trail to follow. You mind old Hank McAllister, him as died in the D.T.'s? Used to keep store here for years, and did well until he took to drinking. Too much liquor, boys, is a bad thing. Just enough is quite another matter. Glasses round, Jimmie."

With hand resting on his untouched glass, old man Litster resumed.

"Them two gals, boys, is nieces to old Hank, and they've come five hundred miles fur to jine him. Their pa died not many weeks ago, and bein' some soft and green, that-a-way, by all accounts, he kinder misconstrues the sort of resort this camp of ours is, and thinks he couldn't do no better (bein' plumb out of dust at the time of passin' in his checks) than to ship them there young wimmen on to their uncle, who he always 'lows is as well to do as he used to be, never havin' heard nothin' contrary. So he makes all arrangements for 'em, manages to get just enough scraped up fur to bring 'em here, and then, havin', as he wrongly conceives, done his dooty, and put them on the road to prosperity, he ups and dies. I had to kind o' break it to them gentle as it were that their uncles gone, and then I give 'em over to Mrs. Lanigan, and lit back here. The question now arises—and there bein' so few women in this camp, it kinder devolves upon us to settle it—what is to be done with them there gals?"

"I'd take Yaller-Head," said Oregon Billy, promptly; "if she's hev me, I'd take her quick!"

"Billy's in love," said Red Jack. "I don't hold with nothin' like that in a general way, but that tall one has rippin' bright eyes, and if 'twould be any accommodation to the camp that-a-way, why, I wouldn't mind spicin' up, provided always the lady was willin'."

This sally called forth a general laugh, but old man Litster was too deeply imbued with a sense of responsibility to see the humorous side of the case.

"Boys," he said, gravely, "this here's fullish talk—main fullish. You alls better keep quiet if ye can't say nothin' sensible. This here's a sandy trail, deep and heavy to travel. I'll hev fur to think this thing out."

CHAPTER II.

Next morning, the fair-haired traveller sat alone in Mrs. Lanigan's best parlour, her elbow resting on the square wooden table, her chin supported by one small white hand, and an expression of hopeless perplexity upon her pretty face. At the sound of the opening of the door, she turned to see her sister enter, bright, resolute and cheery.

"Why, Mollie dear," exclaimed the new-comer, "what a dismal face!"

"Isn't it enough to make one feel dismal?" said Mollie in a troubled voice. "Kate, what are we to do? Here we are in this dreadful place, hundreds of miles from civilization, and no money to get back or to keep us here."

"Now, Mollie," said Kate, sitting down opposite her sister, and placing some papers on the table, "you must not get looking at the dark side of things. I believe we are going to be all right. My giant intellect has formulated a scheme by which I think we can support ourselves for a while, anyway, and get together enough to carry us back to New York. Now, listen. You know that huge box that dear Papa sent on in our charge for poor Uncle Henry's store? I knew he got it in a bad debt some months ago, but I never knew what was in it until this morning, when I got Joe Lanigan to open it for me. It is full of patent medicines. As far as I can see, they are all made by the same firm, Brayley & Sons, Montreal, but there are a good many different kinds."

"Well," said Mollie, "what about it? Do you want to set up a drug store, or take to nursing these dreadful miners, and give them patent medicines free of charge?"

"Neither," said Kate. "Fond as I am of nursing, I don't think I should enjoy it very much among these rough men. Besides, they look too healthy to have long illnesses very often, and if they did, they would probably nurse each other. No, I shall do better than that. I shall turn doctor."

Mollie opened wide her great eyes, and looked at Kate as if she thought she had taken leave of her senses.

"Kate, dear, has all this trouble turned your brain?"

"Or, has 'much learning made me mad?" laughed Kate. "Not so, my Mollie. My plan is a good one, and will hold water. I shall simply give them Brayley & Sons' medicines according to directions. There are full directions with every bottle or box."

"But suppose," persisted Mollie, "they have things their medicines won't cure?"

"Well," said Kate, "I don't think that's likely. See, I have been making calculations. The French Magnetic Oil alone is said to cure over thirty of the most ordinary diseases. Dr. Wilson's Pain and Cramp Reliever has been known to STOP typhoid. I don't half like that, Mollie, that sort of thing wouldn't pay a doctor, would it?" and she laughed mischievously. "Dr. Wilson's Antibilious and Preserving Pills (Preserving Pills, what a name!) have a splendid character given them here in this circular. Then, Dr. Dow's Sturgeon Oil Liniment will do for all outward applications, and Dr. Howard's Quinine Wine is good for the nerves (these men don't look very nervous subjects, though), yes, and for fevers too. And then, no matter what our patients have, if they don't gain flesh and strength after an illness as fast as we could wish, Dr. Howard's Beef, Iron and Wine is guaranteed to do wonders in that line."

"And will you let your patients know that you are using Brayley & Sons' medicines?" asked Mollie.

Kate surveyed her with great disapproval.

"My dear," she said, "you have yet a great deal to learn about professional matters. Of course I am supposed to make up my own prescriptions. I shall get empty bottles and have labels printed, for I saw a dreadful little local newspaper downstairs this morning, and if they can print one thing, they can print another. Then I shall invest in some harmless coloring and flavoring compounds, and mix them with the medicines as my fancy dictates. I know," she went on, earnestly, "that it does not seem quite straightforward, but still no one will be hurt, and we do need help so badly."

She was interrupted by a knock at the door, and at her clear "Come in," it opened to admit three men, Oregon Billy, Danny Connors, and a tall stranger evidently of a very different stamp to his companions. His features were well cut, and bespoke refinement, and he had dark, bright eyes, very white teeth and a black moustache.

"Good morning, Miss," said Billy, bowing low to Kate, but with a furtive glance at "Yaller-Head," "I hope you-alls will excuse this here intrusion, but this gen'lman, who lives forty miles away at Dead Man's Gully, happened in this mornin', and bein' as he's a devil-driver, we thought—"

"Now, Billy," remonstrated Danny, "what fur does you-all git talkin' up that-a-way. Can't ye see the ladies don't understand ye? This gent, Miss, is a Gospel crank, that's what he is."

"I am afraid I don't understand," began Kate, looking helplessly from one to the other, while Mollie's hazel eyes opened wider than ever. But the man with the black moustache stepped forward hat in hand.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but the boys are trying to tell you that I am a clergyman. Hearing of your arrival, I ventured to call to see if I could be of any use."

"You are very kind," said Kate, irresolutely. "I hardly know what to say!"

"Come Danny, let's git out an' leave the parson to run his own show."

With a pleasant good morning, and a word or two of thanks, Kate took leave of them, and Parson Dick drew a chair to the table and began to talk.

Kate began by making certain reservations, but finally, influenced by his personality, and her intense desire for someone to advise her, she told him everything.

"And you don't think it would be wrong, Mr. —", she hesitated, blushing like a rose, as she remembered that they did not even know his name.

"Harris," he said, with a slight bow, "Richard Harris, and very much at your service. Wrong? No, I don't. In a general way I don't like anything that is not quite straightforward, but this seems to me an exceptional case. It will do no one anything but good."

"I must tell you one thing, Miss McAllister," he said, as he rose to take leave, after discussing ways and means, "this little town or camp, as they call it, is full of very rough men, and there are next to no women with the exception of Mrs. Lanigan and a few young miner's wives—half-breeds—Spanish—what-not. But though the boys are a lawless set, and very free with their revolvers among themselves, you will find that they will nearly all stand ready for your protection and service, and count it a privilege that they can do so."

He took a friendly leave of both girls, and if he held Mollie's hand a trifle longer than was necessary—well, it was a very pretty little hand, and who could blame him?

As the door closed behind him, Kate turned to Mollie with a glowing face.

"Isn't it a grand scheme?" she said, with enthusiasm.

"Yes, indeed," said Mollie, dreamily, "they look so white under his black moustache!"

"Mollie McAllister," cried Kate, with an impatient little stamp, "what are you talking about?"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, dear," said

TURKISH DYES GUARANTEE PERMANENCY OF COLOR.

Mollie, with a start, "I was thinking about—something else."

"Pshaw!" said Kate.

CHAPTER III.

A week later, Kate McAllister stood taking a survey of the interior of her office, the front room of a neat little building of adobe bricks about half a block above Duval's saloon. Outside the door swung a handsome signboard, gilt letters on a black ground forming the legend, "Dr. Katherine McAllister." The room was neatly furnished as nearly after the fashion of a doctor's office as the resources of Wild Cat City permitted. On a substantial writing-table were ostentiously displayed a small ear syringe, a measuring glass, an india rubber hot water bag, a couple of pairs of nurses' forceps, a throat atomizer and a clinical thermometer. One of the bottles stood a little out of line, and Kate crossed the floor to replace it just as the door flew open and Mollie danced in.

"Oh! you have your bottles arranged. "Why, what a lot of different kinds of medicine. Surely, Kate, there are not as many kinds as there are different labels here?"

"I have each mixture in three different bottles, and have labelled them to look like the bottles in a druggist's," said Kate. "The inscriptions look well, but mean nothing to anyone but me. For instance, here is a bottle of the Sturgeon Oil Liniment labelled Ol. Lin. co."

"What does 'Co.' mean?" asked Mollie.

"It means compound," said Kate, "but it is only there for ornament. Now, here are two other bottles containing the same Liniment, each with a differently abbreviated variation on the name, as you see. When I have to make up a prescription for outward use, I take my measuring glass and carefully pour a certain proportion from each of these bottles, and behold an excellent liniment, for the compounding of which my patient, looking on, gives me all the credit."

Mollie shook her yellow curls in mock speechless admiration.

That night, just after dark, as Kate sat in her office, a light tap at the door brought her heart into her mouth.

Here, doubtless, was her first patient, she thought, and she was obliged to collect her faculties by an effort before rising to open the door to admit no less a personage than Red Jack Leary.

Jack entered with hesitating steps, and at her invitation, sat himself down in one of the office chairs and cleared his throat nervously.

"What can I do for you?" asked Kate, calmly, all her coolness returning at the sight of her visitor's evident uneasiness.

"I—I—guess I'm sick, Miss," remarked Jack, timidly.

"Ah, yes, I see," she said, composedly, concealing to perfection how completely nonplussed she was. "Let me see your tongue, please."

Jack sheepishly extended a ruddy crimson member, in the appearance of which Kate, drawing on her past experience as a nurse, failed to detect the faintest sign of disease. Examination of his throat showed it to be in a perfectly healthy state, though he complained of its being very sore. Puzzled even more than she had expected to be, Kate extended a slim hand to the great brawny fist which rested on the corner of the table, and sought Jack's pulse with practised fingers. Here at least she felt competent to judge is anything was the matter. Yes, it was certainly very high. Timing it by her watch, she found that it was up to a hundred and twenty, but it was strong and vigorous to a degree.

"Your pulse is very rapid," she remarked, reaching for her thermometer. Please put that under your tongue. Be careful, it is easily broken!"

With a rueful countenance Jack received the little instrument in his huge fingers and tried to adjust it properly; but this was not compassed without the doctor's assistance. For the requisite three minutes he sat with it between his bearded lips, very red in the face and breathing hard. When Kate withdrew it, temperature proved to be normal. She did not know what to think. She excused herself, and leaving the room in a dignified manner, closed the door behind her and fairly flew to Mollie in the little sitting-room beyond.

"Mollie, quick!" she gasped. "where is Brayley's Almanac? There is a man in there who is dreadfully ill, according to what he says, and he has an awfully quick pulse, but his tongue and temperature are all right, and he looks the picture of health. Here, let me look. Yes, this must be it. He says he has fever, chills, headache, sore throat, pains in his bones. It must be the Pain Reliever that he wants. I'll just give him a few of Dr. Wilson's Pills as well, for he has a lot of other symptoms besides. I'm sure I hope all the patients won't be in such a contradictory state. It's terribly agitating to the practitioner!"

She returned to the office, filled an eight-ounce vial with carefully measured portions from three bottles, all containing Pain Reliever, writing directions for taking it on the label, put him up a few pills in a small parcel—boxes as yet she had none—and handed him the medicines with an injunction to go home and go to bed, and let her know how he was the next day. He rose to receive his potion and pills, and thrusting one hand deep in his trouser's pocket, he pulled out a five-dollar bill, laid it down, and was off like a shot.

"Gosh all hemlock!" he ejaculated; "I had an awful time in there, you bet. It was a caution. What a terrible slue o' lies I told about them symptoms. An' she lookin' so puzzled an' as hansum as a pictur. An' she has such rippin' bright eyes. Well, I was just set on her gettin' her first fee from me, and she's got it. I'm ahead of all the boys, anyhow."

Kate heard no more of Jack, so concluded that he had convalesced satisfactorily. But she soon had no lack of patients, though there were no more sham ones. Better than all, as Kate found that Brayley's medicines nobly did all and more than they professed to do, her confidence in them grew apace, and with her knowledge as a nurse to help her, and her dispensing done ready to her hand, she really succeeded very well.

Parson Dick found it frequently necessary to ride over to Wild Cat on business of one kind or another, and always found time to make a call at the office to see if he could be of service. At such times Mollie's interest in the business rose to a high pitch, and she always formed an interested party in all the little caucases, as she used to call them.

One fine day, about three months after the sisters had come to town, the stage brought in a young man who was immediately voted a tenderfoot, because he wore a rough tweed suit, and a blue shirt with a stiff collar. He was, perhaps, a trifle under middle height, but powerfully built, with irregular features, very keen dark grey eyes, and a nondescript light moustache, too slight to conceal that the wearer had a very pleasant smile. As he came in sight of Kate's little office, the flashing gilt sign caught his eye.

"The deuce!" he ejaculated, "a doctor's shingle! I can't see the name, it swings so in the wind. I understood there was no medical man here."

Approaching a little nearer, he made out the name, "Dr. Katherine McAllister." "A woman, by George," he exclaimed. "And I thought I was going to have things all my own way. Now, then, what's to be done? I wonder how much she knows? I'll go over and get her to treat my arm. I'll soon find out."

He crossed the street and knocked at the door. It was opened by Mollie, who, with her golden frizzes flying in the wind, glowing cheeks, and big, liquid, hazel eyes, made as pretty a picture as the heart of man could desire.

But Dr. James Fairfax cared little for feminine charms, and had attained his present age of thirty odd years with a heart entirely fancy free. So, without giving poor Mollie a second glance, he raised his hat courteously, and asked for the doctor. He was shown into the office, and requested advice for a sprained elbow from which, indeed, he was suffering considerable pain. He had slipped getting out of the coach, and catching at the door to save himself, had given his arm an ugly twist. Kate gave the injured part a thorough rubbing with her famous Dr. Dow's, and then applied a tight bandage in a very scientific manner, and told him to come every morning for a few days to have the treatment repeated. Jim watched all her operations closely, but could detect nothing that was not according to Hoyle, and with his arm decidedly relieved, he took his departure resolved to find out all about the fair practitioner, and meanwhile to keep his own calling strictly to himself. He took care that the elbow should not grow strong too soon, and as they chatted together day after day while it was undergoing treatment, he soon saw plainly, without exciting Kate's suspicions in the least, that in some way or other she was not all she was supposed to be. But just as our doctor made sure of this interesting fact, it began to dawn upon him, very much against his will, that this girl whom he felt almost inclined to denounce as an imposter, was very beautiful, and that she was gaining a hold upon him such as no woman had ever gained before.

"Confound it all," he said to himself one night, lighting a cigar as he walked down the street from Kate's office. "I'll have to drop the medico, I suppose, for the present, and take to mining. There's not practice enough for two, and I'll be shot if I'll lift a finger to interfere with her, poor child."

And so it came to pass that Jim Fairfax joined the ever increasing ranks of Kate's adherents, and before long had become quite intimate with the inmates of the little adobe house.

Time went on, and fortune continued to smile on the McAllisters. Kate was already arranging to privately send for a fresh supply, when typhoid broke out in the camp. The men had found what they thought was a spring of pure water near the mines where they worked, and drank freely of it for some weeks before the disease declared itself. But once started, it increased with great rapidity. One after another was taken down, and before a fortnight was over, Kate had established a hospital in an unused Casino, and old man Litster, as head of the little municipality, had, under her direction, seen to the construction of some rough stretchers, and the filling of pallets with fresh straw. The disease was of a light type, the men strong and vigorous, and the Casino, with its lofty roof and large windows, made an ideal hospital ward. Parson Dick and Jim at once volunteered as nurses, and with others under them, the patients had every attention. True, the only medicine at Kate's command was the famous Quinine Wine, but with plenty of bathing stimulant and good milk in addition, the cases progressed satisfactorily, and Kate, though almost worn out with constant care and supervision, began to breathe more freely. Whenever she could spare time from her home duties, Mollie was at her sister's side, helping to the best of her ability, and endeavouring to spare her as much as possible.

One morning, however, about a month after the outbreak, as Mollie was singing like a linnet over her housework, the front door opened and shut hastily, and Kate came in with a white, set face, and to Mollie's unspeakable consternation, threw herself on the little sofa without a word, and burst into a passion of sobs that shook her slight frame as the fall wind shakes a leaf.

"Kate, dearest," she pleaded, "don't look so. Tell me what is the matter!"

"The matter is," said Kate, with a dreadful bitter calmness, "that I am a wicked girl—an imposter—a cheat—and now my punishment is come upon me. No, don't say a word, and I will tell you. Jack Leary"—her voice broke—"Yes, I know that he was doing well. The fever was breaking up nicely, but yesterday I suspected—to-day I am almost sure—that he has an internal abscess. Oh, I know what I am talking about," as Mollie would have interposed, "I nursed such a case once, and Mollie, do you know that if I am right, and a doctor cannot be got—and soon—to operate, he will very likely die—do you hear? die—and I shall have killed him!"

"Kate, don't say so, dear," sobbed Mollie. "You know they would not have another doctor when you wanted them to, long ago."

"And why?" asked Kate, bitterly. "Because I deceived them—fooled them—allowed them to think that I was a doctor, and cheated myself into the belief that good medicine would do instead of medical skill. And there is no time to send for a doctor now. God help me, what shall I do?"

There was a hurried knock at the outer door, and Mollie, hastily drying her eyes, went to open it, and admitted Jim Fairfax.

"I must see your sister, at once," he said. "Is she in here?" and before Mollie could stop him he was face to face with Kate. At the sound of his voice she had started to her feet, and stood in the middle of the room, deathly white and trembling from head to foot. Without a moment's hesitation he took both her hands, and drew her to the sofa. "Sit down, Miss McAllister," he said, gently, "you must not distress yourself like this. I know what is the matter—knew it before you did. I have been watching that abscess for four days, and it promises very well, but the time has nearly come to operate, so I must tell you now that I meant to keep to myself. I am a doctor, and have practised for nearly ten years. If you will trust to me all will go well. I have felt pretty sure that you never did anything in surgery, though your general practical knowledge is good."

"It is not!" cried Kate, passionately. "I will not wear this mask another instant. I am no doctor. I am only a nurse, not even a trained nurse. I use half-a-dozen patent medicines according to directions, and know nothing whatever about dispensing. I am a cheat and an impostor."

Dr. Jim was thoroughly taken aback. However, he put his own feeling aside, and with some difficulty managed to soothe and console the poor girl, and persuaded her to let no one else know what she had told him. Infinitely comforted and relieved, Kate did exactly as he told her, and, in the eyes of the town, retained her old position. Jack's abscess was duly attended to, and he made a brilliant recovery. But the epidemic was over; Kate decided that she had had enough of doctoring, though not apparently of doctors, for when, some weeks later, Jim concluded negotiations for a practice in a town five hundred miles east of Wild Cat, he found it an easy matter to persuade Kate to enter into partnership with him—for life.

Mollie was warm in her congratulations when she heard the great news, but secretly marvelled how any girl could be content with less than six feet of lover, or prefer grey eyes to brown. "Of course, Mollie dear," said Kate, "you must live with us. Jim won't hear of any other arrangement. You will, won't you, dearest?"

"I'm awfully obliged to you and Jim, darling," replied Mollie, demurely, with downcast eyes, "but I think—perhaps, I would rather live—with Dick!"

And Kate, who fancied, like many others, that the universe was only large enough to contain one love affair, was as surprised as she was delighted.

When the news got abroad in Wild Cat City, the excitement was intense. A petition was drawn up and signed by almost everyone in the camp, except a few Mexicans, who didn't count, and wouldn't have been allowed to sign if they had wanted to. It was addressed to the girls begging them to be married before leaving Wild Cat, and offering, if they would consent to bestow that prestige on the town, to import for the ceremony a "real Gospel sharp of the identical same breed as Parson Dick" (i.e., a minister of the Church of England). This gentleman lived no less than two hundred miles away, but it was guaranteed that he should be produced "sharp on time and in good repair," if his services would be accepted.

And so it was arranged, and the wedding was a brilliant success, with Oregon Billy and Red Jack for best men. There was a tremendous spread at Lanigan's, and after it was over, old man Litster, in the name of the camp, presented each of the brides with a gorgeous gold watch and chain, imported along with the officiating clergyman. Parson Dick had made up his mind that the sisters should not be separated, so had decided to travel east and find a parish "more suitable than that-a-way," as Danny Connors said, for a married man. So they departed together, and the coach dashed up the road amid ringing cheers, with old Abe handling the lines in his best style. And they all lived happy ever afterwards, and Kate always maintained that Brayley's medicines were better for the children than their fathers, though Dr. Jim could never be brought to see it.

TURKISH DYES ARE THE BEST VALUE.

FRENCH MAGNETIC OIL.

Magnetism is the most powerful of all known forces. Without it the traffic on the seas would be at a standstill; our great navies would be almost useless.

Magnetic currents are the life blood of the earth, forever flowing backward and forward from equator to pole.

The influence of magnetism not only on this earth but in the universe is great; the influence of French Magnetic Oil in driving away pain is marvellous.

There are few pains and aches which French Magnetic Oil will not relieve. It will cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Cramps, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chilblains, Frost Bites, Bruises, and Pains in the Side and Back.

It also cures Sore Throat Quinsy, Diphtheria, Growing Pains in Children, Enlarged Veins, Chronic Ulcers, Gatherings from various causes and Milk Leg. All of the above French Magnetic Oil cures by external application.

When used internally, French Magnetic Oil cures Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Stomach Ache, Flatulence and Diarrhoea.

It does not only ease the sufferer for the moment, but it cures so that the trouble will not return. French Magnetic Oil cures the diseases.

Rheumatism, Chronic or acute, is a disease which a great many people suffer from. It cannot long withstand the application of French Magnetic Oil.

One of the greatest benefits to be derived from the use of French Magnetic Oil is in the cure of Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Cholera, Colic and diseases of that class which are so common in the summer time.

The results of the use of French Magnetic Oil in such cases is marvellous in the rapidity and certainty with which it acts.

Local muscular pains caused by strains or unaccustomed exercise are driven away by the use of French Magnetic Oil.

Children suffer considerably from Growing Pains. The application of French Magnetic Oil has an immediate and beneficial effect.

Bruises and contusions, the result of blows and falls, are rapidly reduced to a normal condition by the use of French Magnetic Oil.

The Mothers of Canada usually find much trouble with Gathered Breasts and Sore Nipples. They will find in French Magnetic Oil a cure for these ills.

In these cases the French Magnetic Oil should be well rubbed down from the root of the breast to the nipple and then apply it on a fold or two of flannel, repeating this operation every two or three hours until the glands are softened, the pain and heat relieved and the milk flows freely and comfortably.

Milk Leg is another disease incidental to the cares that attend maternity; but bathing the sore limb well, but softly, with French Magnetic Oil and then encasing it in a sheet of batting, repeating the application every six hours or thereabouts, will reduce the pain in a marvellous manner.

Pain flies before French Magnetic Oil. If you have Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, Lumbago or Sciatica try the French Magnetic Oil and see for yourself if it is not all that is claimed for it.

The great beauty of French Magnetic Oil is that it relieves the pain immediately on application.

To enumerate all the diseases that French Magnetic Oil will cure would take up too much space.

Those who sell French Magnetic Oil say that it gives the fullest satisfaction in every case. Chemists and Druggists all over Canada write that it is a most popular and useful remedy.

The demand is growing for French Magnetic Oil; note the following letter:

Mahone Bay, April 16th, 1898.
Messrs. Brayley, Sons & Co.,
Montreal.

Dear Sirs,—Please send me four dozen French Magnetic Oil. I am having a better sale of it this year than I ever had.

Yours respectfully,
J. E. LANTZ.

Taken Internally Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever cures Coughs, Colds, Sour Stomach, Pain in the Kidneys and Back, Sea-sickness, Cramp and Pain in the Stomach and Bowels, Diarrhoea, Cholera, Vomiting, Sore Throat and Diphtheria.

It is a pain curer, not a pain killer or deadener for a little while, after the application of which the pain returns in greater violence.

It is rapid in its action and does not need fifty or more applications ere relief is experienced.

It breaks up Colds and Fevers when taken early and secures permanent relief. Its cost is light, its value is great and it is the duty of every house-keeper to have at hand a bottle of Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever.

Travellers by lake or sea should never sail without Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever, since it is a sovereign remedy against Vomiting and Sea-sickness.

In extracting Inflammation Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever has a wonderful effect. When used immediately on a bruise it seldom becomes black or blue.

When applied immediately to an injury, its beneficial work begins on the instant, before the inflammation begins its detrimental work.

Cramps, Colic and other Bowel disorders will yield at once to Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever.

Bruises and Sprains are often serious if not attended to. Bruises often turn to Cancer and Sprains to Dislocation or Inflammation. To prevent this use Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever.

Dysentery will be properly arrested by saturating a flannel with Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever and applying it to the abdomen.

This powerful remedy prevents the development of pain, stops the effects of sudden colds from being felt, cures Internal Pains, destroying the causes thereof.

Serious diseases often begin with a sudden chill. Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever, which stimulates the vital organs and causes perspiration, helps to throw off the chill. It assists nature in her struggle against disease.

Pains in the Back may be the result of a Strain, a Cold, or Kidney Disease. Rub with Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever and the relief will be immediate.

Stop the Cold and you will stop more serious troubles, which otherwise would follow. As soon as you feel a chill take Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever and be well.

In whatever shape or form pain is, Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever will cure it. The pains may be various and have various appellations, the Cramp and Pain Reliever is but one.

It will prevent the development of pain, and taken internally it can be depended upon to cure Coughs, Colds, Tightness of the Chest, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Indigestion, Cankered Mouth, Cankered Stomach, Pains in the Kidneys, Pains in the Back, Sea-sickness, Cramp and Pains in the Stomach or Bowels, Diarrhoea, Cholera, Vomiting, Sore Throat, Diphtheria and other similar complaints.

Thousands of remedies have been invented to allay pain. The base of most of them was simply alcohol, with other crude materials, that were not harmonized in any way, and instead of relieving pain they only caused injury to the system of the sufferer.

It is different with Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever. Instead of destroying it increases the vital powers and restores new life to the nervous system.

Be on guard for any emergency that may arise. Always have at hand a bottle or two of Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever, and you will be ready to ward off serious sickness.

For intestinal affections, such as Diarrhoea, Cramp, Colics, etc., Dr. Wilson's Cramp and Pain Reliever has never been surpassed as a remedy which cures, as well as giving immediate relief.

TURKISH DYES DO NOT WASH OUT.

LIVING FACTS ABOUT DYEING.

Facts worth the consideration of the good Women of Canada.

It is not a new fact that the Turkish Dyes hold a permanent place in the hearts of the thrifty and industrious women of this fair country.

They know that the Turkish Dyes are dyes that dye. They know that when they use these dyes the results are going to be satisfactory.

They that have used the Turkish Dyes once always use them. They recommend them to their friends and neighbors; thus the demand for these famous dyes is ever increasing; a testimony of their worth.

It does not require a skilful person to use the Turkish Dyes to advantage; ordinary care and attention is all that is necessary to produce good effects.

In this respect they are not like other dyes, which are so complicated, that one has got to be a Philadelphia lawyer or a scientist in order to produce any results of a satisfactory nature at all.

There is nothing more simple than the work of dyeing when the Turkish Dyes are used.

It is a pleasure to use the Turkish Dyes. The dyes are reliable and you get the exact color that you desire.

Full instructions as to how to use the dyes are given in a little book, which is presented free by the manufacturers of the dyes to all their customers.

Everything made of wool, everything made of cotton, can be dyed with the Turkish Dyes to the greatest satisfaction of the dyer.

There are no other Dyes better than the Turkish Dyes. Many manufacturers claim to have as good, which is an admission that the Turkish Dyes are the standard.

You can save money by the use of the Turkish Dyes. Many a well worn and faded article, that you feel like throwing away, may be brushed up and dyed with the Turkish Dyes so as to look as good as new.

In this way you can get more wear out of your ribbons, feathers, gloves and clothing.

It is an economic fact, that the lady who uses the Turkish Dyes can have nearly twice as many dresses, and more hats, ribbons and gloves as she would have if she did not use the dyes.

The richest colors can be produced by the use of the Turkish Dyes.

The softest tints can be produced by the Turkish Dyes.

There is little in the way of coloring that the Turkish Dyes cannot accomplish.

They will dye dress goods, whether silk, wool or cotton.

Straw goods, feathers and artificial flowers can be dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

They will dye hair, they will dye leather, they will dye cane, they will dye mosses all colors and shades.

You can make ink and color paints and washes out of the Turkish Dyes.

In fact, everything that is required of a dye the Turkish Dyes will do.

The Turkish Dyes comprise more shades than any other make of package dyes. You are sure to get the exact shade you want without the risk and trouble of combination.

There is no smut when Turkish Dyes are used. The rain does not wash the dye away, the sun does not fade it, the heat does not dry it up; it does not lose any of its substance by contact.

The colors are permanent. With the Turkish Dyes the color will last as long as the goods.

The Black Dye is a beautiful and fast black, and for that reason it is used a great deal in dyeing stockings.

All Turkish Dyes, no matter what color, are used in dyeing stockings, for the dye sticks fast to the stockings and does not discolor the feet as many dyes do.

Colors dyed by the Turkish Dyes do not wash out. Soap can be used in washing goods dyed by the Turkish

TURKISH DYES DO NOT WASH OUT.

Dyes without injury to the color. As we said before, the colors are fast, and ordinary usage does not injure them.

The sunlight or rain will not injure the colors dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

The demand for the Turkish Dyes is increasing each year. More than 600,000 packages of the Turkish Dyes are used in Canada alone.

The price of the Turkish Dyes is such that they come within the reach of any person. They cost but ten cents a package and every package is guaranteed.

As for variety in shades, you have fifty-two straight colors to choose from in the Turkish Dyes.

Every color is true. None of the Turkish Dyes smudge, blur or become muddy; each dye dyes a distinct, genuine shade.

A thing of beauty is a joy for ever. As long as you use the Turkish Dyes you will always be pleased.

That old dress, now what are you going to do with it? It is not worn a great deal, the material is as good as lots of new stuff that you buy. It is faded only and shabby looking. Then it wants a stitch here and there, but you can handle the needle and thread all right. Now all it wants is color; color will give it freshness and newness. The Turkish Dyes will give you any color you wish and make that old dress look like new.

You will know that it is an old dress, but when you have dyed it with the Turkish Dyes your friends will think it a new garment. That is where you get two dresses out of one.

Those gloves, now, will stand you many more wears. The material is there, but they are off color and you are ashamed to wear them. All they want is color and that can be supplied by the Turkish Dyes.

Those stockings are white and you do not like white. Dye them brown or any other color you choose with the Turkish Dyes and you will have stockings that will please you.

Those feathers are getting dull looking and bedraggled. Use a little patience in combing them out and use the Turkish Dyes, and you will be most agreeably surprised at the change.

Your appearance will be much improved by the use of the Turkish Dyes.

You will get more value out of the Turkish Dyes than any other which you ever used.

Economy is something you have to study, and you will find that the Turkish Dyes will help you a great deal in reducing your household expenses.

There are some people who will have only the best and that is characteristic of those who use the Turkish Dyes.

The best is none too good for you. The Turkish Dyes will fill the bill.

The compounder of the Turkish Dyes is an authority whose opinion is sought for in other countries as well as in Canada, and whatever is new, good or desirable in the compounding of dyes is brought to his attention.

There is a uniformity in the quality of the Turkish Dyes, as the expert tests every lot of dyes made up in packages. Every package is the same in quality and the quality is the best.

If you once use the Turkish Dyes you will use no other. You will find that you cannot do without them.

When you are at your wit's end to know what to do about dress for that concert or entertainment, get the Turkish Dyes and the book of instructions which is given and you will get out of the dilemma.

We have known ladies who have so completely changed the appearance of their garments through the use of the Turkish Dyes that their friends thought them new.

The fact is that the Turkish Dyes are the standard dyes of Canada and all other countries.

You can make something out of almost nothing by the use of Turkish Dyes. What you considered lost, used up or useless can be turned to good account by the Turkish Dyes.

Since the introduction of the Turkish Dyes the women of Canada have developed an artistic taste which has worked much good at little cost to their husbands or to themselves.

The Turkish Dyes are the best, the most largely used and the most satisfactory dyes in Canada or in any other country of the world.

TURKISH DYES DYE EVERYTHING.

GET RID OF THOSE WORMS.

We do not mean earth worms, for they are good for fishing, but the little pests that are eating the life away of your child.

You know the symptoms, a wasting of the body, irregular appetite, itching at the fundament, troubled sleep, difficulty in breathing, ringing in the head, sunken eyes, with dark circles around them.

Children are troubled a great deal from worms from the time they are nursing until they grow up, but men and women, too, are not free from them.

Get rid of the Worms by using Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick.

It kills the Worms, but cures the child. Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick is a remedy which every mother should have on hand.

Don't wait until the system of the child is broken down by the Worms and the health ruined. The Worms will not pass away of themselves. Something must be done to expel them or else they will go on increasing. Get Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick and get rid of the loathsome parasites.

There is hardly a complaint which the presence of Worms will not excite or imitate. Cases are recorded of their producing Epileptic Fits, Catalepsy, Lockjaw, Dysentery, Convulsions, etc.

This being the case, it behoves the prudent mother to watch with jealous care the earliest symptoms indicating the presence of Worms, and by the use of Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick dislodge them before the health of the child is seriously impaired or its life endangered.

Being perfectly harmless in its effect upon the system the mother should not fail to use Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick when there is the suspicion of Worms.

This valuable remedy is purely vegetable in its composition and entirely free from poisonous and injurious ingredients.

Children cry for it. It is in a palatable form and can be administered to young people without any inconvenience.

No instance has come to the knowledge of the manufacturers where Worms were present that Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick has failed to bring them away.

Mothers can place the utmost reliance on this harmless and pleasant remedy, and therefore need not have any hesitation in using it whenever they think the symptoms demand a remedy for Worms.

The most delicate child can be given Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick without the least fear of injurious consequences.

Worms are introduced into the system in different ways, but most frequently by the consumption of raw meats, green, uncooked vegetables, unripe fruits and the like.

It is of little moment, however, how the Worms get there. They are there and the question is how to get rid of them. Give the patient Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick and the Worms will disappear.

It has the approval of the highest medical authorities, but not only that, Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick has the approval of thousands of mothers of Canada.

They have tried it, and have never yet found Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick to fail.

Of the efficacy of Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick there can be no question.

In hundreds of cases where Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick has been employed Worms have been expelled in numbers ranging from twenty-five to five hundred.

By its use the scrofulous taint which produced the Worms, or allowed of their harboring in the system is quickly eradicated, the poison in the blood removed, and the body entirely purified and renewed.

You often wonder what ails the child when it is fretful and peevish and has sleepless nights. In nine cases out of ten you will find that the trouble is caused by Worms. Try Dr. Wilson's Dead Shot Worm Stick, and if there are Worms present it will get rid of them. If there are no Worms present the remedy will not hurt the child.

WHEN YOU WANT A GOOD DYE, USE TURKISH.

THE TURKISH DYES.

Dyeing is the art of coloring in a permanent manner porous or absorbent substances by impregnating them with coloring bodies.

That is the general definition of dyeing as we find it in the authorities.

But the practical definition is, that dyeing is the art of coloring in a permanent manner with the Turkish Dyes.

The good housewife takes a practical view of everything, and she uses the Turkish Dyes.

Most vegetable and animal bodies are porous or absorbent, and can be dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

Some minerals, too, can absorb liquid coloring matters, especially when they are in the form of the Turkish Dyes.

Marble will absorb liquid coloring matter; it will absorb the Turkish Dyes.

Years and years ago, in the most ancient times, dyeing was practised. The Turkish Dyes were not used then.

It was not a common art seems apparent from the uses for which colored garments were devoted, and the distinction which they conferred upon the wearers. It is a common art to-day, but the garments dyed with the Turkish Dyes confer a distinction on the wearer.

Such definite and bright colors, such as blue, purple and scarlet, were so costly in those days as not to be available for general and common use. These colors are better and brighter to-day, being produced by the Turkish Dyes, and are so cheap as to be within the reach of everybody.

The Tyrian purple is mentioned by the ancient authors; its discovery and employment gave wealth and prosperity to Tyre and Sidon more than 1,000 years B.C. The Turkish Dyes give wealth and prosperity to all who use them to-day.

In the days of the Roman Conquest in the East, Tyrian purple was reserved under penal statutes for imperial use. To-day you can buy the richest purple in the Turkish Dyes for 10 cents a package, and not go to jail for it.

The production of the Tyrian purple, through the working of the law, thus declined, and eventually both the material and the art of using it were lost. You will discover this color in the list of Turkish Dyes.

From Pliny's description modern investigators were enabled to re-discover the shell-fish which yielded the dye, but the color furnished by it was neither so permanent as those obtained from much less costly dyeing materials. We have the Turkish Dyes, which give a permanent color, and are not costly.

There is reason to conclude that the most brilliantly tinted garments of an Egyptian priest, or of the mantle of a Roman Emperor were poor and dull compared with those of the Turkish Dyes, which are within reach of the most humble individual of the present time.

The Jews held the secret or monopoly of the dyeing art for several centuries. Every woman has the secret of the dyeing art to-day in the use of the Turkish Dyes.

In the twelfth century the art of dyeing was entirely in the hands of about 200 Jews residing in Jerusalem. The art of dyeing to-day is in the hands of every woman who uses the Turkish Dyes.

The Discovery of America did a great deal for the dyeing art, for many new dye stuffs were found, but the discovery of the Turkish Dyes has brought the art to perfection.

It is a fact that the Turkish Dyes are the best Dyes manufactured to-day.

Those who have used the Turkish Dyes can testify as to that fact. The great increase in the demand for the Turkish Dyes is a testimonial to this fact.

Permanent colors are obtained by using the Turkish Dyes. They do not fade and change their complexion like some of the inferior domestic dyes.

An extensive fact is that the Turkish Dyes comprise more shades than any other make of package dyes.

They have a great range. The Turkish Dyes will dye dress goods, whether silk, wool or cotton.

Straw goods can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

Feathers can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

TURKISH DYES GIVE PERFECT SATISFACTION.

Hair, not growing hair, for it is not a hair dye, can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

Leather can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

Cane can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

Mosses can be successfully dyed by the Turkish Dyes.

All colors and all shades can be obtained by the use of the Turkish Dyes.

Everything that is required of a dye the Turkish Dyes will do.

You can make old and shabby garments look as good as new by using the Turkish Dyes.

You can save money by using the Turkish Dyes.

You throw away your garments when they get shabby, and think them of no use. Mend them, brush and clean them, and then dye them with the Turkish Dyes, and you will be surprised at the nice presentable garment that you have.

If you use the Turkish Dyes once you will always use them.

The richest colors known to the dyers can be produced by the Turkish Dyes.

The Price of the Turkish Dyes is low. They cost but ten cents a package, and each package is guaranteed.

The Directions are plainly printed on each package, so that every user of the Turkish Dyes has all she requires before her.

One package of the Turkish Dyes will impart a beautiful color to two pounds of wool or silk.

An everlasting color. Light, nor soap, nor scouring, nor steaming, will fade it.

Thousands of ladies in Canada use the Turkish Dyes, and their ranks are increasing.

Hundreds of thousands of packages of the Turkish Dyes are used yearly in Canada alone. All are good; all give the best satisfaction.

There are fifty-two straight colors in the Turkish Dyes, from which one can make an endless variety of shades to suit the individual taste of the user.

Be sure you get the Turkish Dyes when you ask for the Turkish Dyes.

The Turkish Dyes are the best, the most largely used, the most satisfactory, the Standard Dyes of Canada and of the world.

The Turkish Dyes are warranted. The manufacturers assume the full responsibility of any defective color found in a package.

Every color amongst the Turkish Dyes is absolutely true. It does not blur or smudge.

Each color dyes a distinct genuine shade. The colors of the Turkish Dyes are permanent, indelible and beautiful.

The Turkish Dyes comprise all the known colors and their various shades.

Save your money by using the Turkish Dyes.
