NEWS PER MAIL.

Serious Charges Against Lord Lytton.

Monday's "London Echo" contained a long article, headed "The Impeachment of Lord Lytton," and signed "Henry Crompton." The Viceroy is charged with a long series of crimes under eleven heads:—

1. He undertook a deliberate systematic scheme of aggression against Afghanistan
 2. To carry out this scheme he used threats and made unjust demands in the expectation of their being refused, and of that serving him as a pretext for war.
 3. That he concealed these proceedings, and declared war without the sanction of Parliament.
 4. That he sent Ameer an ultimatum declaring that he must accept an English Resident or take the consequences—that is to say, war.
 5. He concealed the fact that the Ameer would yield if time were allowed him; and declared war, not only without just cause, but when he knew the Ameer was prepared to yield.
 6. That false and deceptive news was published.
 7. That the first invasion was carried out in violation of the rules of civilized warfare.
 8. That in spite of warnings he forced the Afghans to accept an English Resident, and is, therefore, responsible for Cavagnari's massacre.
 9. That he is responsible for Robert's proclamation, and those killed under it.
 10. Lord Lytton is primarily responsible for the reign of terror and martial law at Cabul, and.
 11. He is responsible for the misery, ruin, and death brought upon the people of India by these proceedings.
- The article then demands the impeachment of the Viceroy on these charges as a measure of justice, and as the only adequate guarantee of our faith and honour.—"Liverpool Journal," Dec. 20.

Probable Release of the Tichborne Claimant.

The Press Association is authorized to announce that the Attorney-General has granted his fiat for a writ of error in the case of the Tichborne Claimant, on the ground that matters have been put before him in allowing the point to be argued whether or not the Lord Chief Justice should have made the two sentences of seven years' penal servitude successive or concurrent. The first sentence has just expired.

It will be recollected that the sentence passed on the Claimant was seven years' penal servitude on two separate counts, the sentences not to run concurrently.

The Central News says that the Tichborne case is returnable at the Hilary term of the Court of Appeal, commencing on January 12th. As most of the judges will then be on circuit, it may possibly not be argued until February. The grounds upon which the application for the writ of error was made are in effect as follows:—That the offence of perjury with which the Claimant is charged in the indictment, under two counts, is substantially one and the same offence, the parties in each instance being the same, the ends sought to be obtained by the various allegations of perjury assigned being the same. It is understood that the Attorney-General granted his fiat on the ground that the points stated in application are fairly arguable. If the claimant is successful the result will be his immediate release; or even if it should be decided that he must undergo the original sentence he would be entitled to a ticket-of-leave under ordinary circumstance in a short period.

We understand with regard to the writ of error which the attorney General has just granted that the step was taken by Lord Rivers and Mr. Guildford Onslow, under the advice of Dr. Kenely, who applied for a similar writ to Sir Richard Baginbald in 1874, which was refused. The case will, it is stated, be taken to the House of Lords for final decision, and Dr. Kenely will exercise his right as a member of the Irish Bar to appear for his former client before that tribunal.

Death of Calcraft, The Executioner.

Ever busy Death has carried off another celebrity. Calcraft, the only hangman whose name became as much a proverb as that of Jack Ketch. He who sent so many to the land of silence has now himself gone into the silent land. He was hardly eighty years of age, being born in the last year of the last century. For more than half his life he was executioner at the Old Bailey, and would have been executioner to the end of his life had not his age made him a bungler. His superannuation was a grievance to him, though his resignation was his own act, and he continued to get his pay after his retirement. The pay was little enough for such horrible work—only a guinea a week and the clothes of his victims. Personally he was no bold, blustering braggart. Had he chosen any other walk in life he had been called modest and unassuming. He has been described as slinking away from a prison after an execution. It was very difficult to get him to talk about anything, and almost impossible to get him to talk about his dreadful trade, though the gold of special correspondents sometimes open his lips, and even then he left a great deal to their imagination. He was a shoemaker by trade, and we have been told a good shoemaker, and made something by his daily occupation; but he was prouder of the science which brought about the last of a man than the skill which fitted a boot to the last. In appearance he was patriarchal and almost venerable; certainly there was nothing bloodthirsty or repulsive in his features, and no one from his countenance would guess that he had taken more lives than the greatest soldier. That only came out in a certain nameless shrinking which only those in the secret understood. Every execution brought him in some money, because he sold the clothes of the condemned dead to Madame Tussaud. It is said that he has left money behind him. The verdict upon him must be that, though he plied the most repulsive of all legal occupations, he was not the worst of men.

A Husband-Poisoning Club.

A horrible discovery has been made in Hungary. Mysterious deaths have been for some time occurring at a place called Szardakely and the surrounding villages. Within the last six weeks eight married farmers have rather suddenly given up the ghost; but in the wilds of Hungary these things are not so minutely heard of as they are in the large towns. However things came to such a pass that an inquiry had to be instituted, when it was discovered that arsenic, and not fever (as had been reported), was the cause of death. The poison was obtained from a rat-destroying compound, and had been carefully cooked up with the yokels' "bog-aoosen" and coffee. Their wine had been tampered with it. The discovery of a kind of husband-poisoning club or association amongst the "merry wives" of the neighborhood rewarded the investigations of the police. It appears that a twofold object prompted these Magyar matrons, and caused them to harbour such unamiable designs towards their lords and masters. In the first place, each wished to get rid of a drunken husband, who brought no money home, and of whom she was tired, and in the second the decease was a remunerative event, inasmuch as it secured a lump sum from the life insurance office. The authorities, though doubtless struck with the neat simplicity of the system, will find it their duty to put a stop to a practice more remarkable for thoroughness than for legality.

Description of the Engagements—Afghan Valour.

The "Evening Standard" has the following, dated Bombay, Sunday:—
Heavy fighting has taken place around Cabul, in the 13th, General Baker's force having arrived on the previous evening, a series of attacks were then made upon the enemy. Baker's Brigade first advanced against a strong force of the enemy lodged in the village of Boniska, and having driven them out, wheeled round, and took part in the attack which Macpherson's Brigade were making upon the enemy in a position on the high peak, from which Macpherson had in vain endeavoured to dislodge them upon the previous day. The fighting was fierce and obstinate, the enemy holding the position until our men had actually forced their way in, and the result was a fight at close quarters. The enemy were eventually driven out with great loss, but our own list of casualties is very heavy, especially in officers. Our loss in killed and wounded in the three days' fighting is reported at sixteen officers and one hundred and three men.

The Afghans, although driven from their position, still held together and further fighting is expected. The Ghuzni force has been swollen by the accession of large numbers of the native tribes, and the aggregate force opposed to us is very large. In addition to the list of officers already telegraphed as killed an wounded in the cavalry charge, the following are known to be among the casualties:—Killed Captain Batson, 9th Lancers; and Lieutenant Forbes, 92nd Highlanders. Wounded, Major Cook 5th Ghorkas; Lieutenants Chisholme and Trower, 9th Lancers; Lieutenant Pasken, 3rd Sikhs; and Lieutenant Fergusson, 72nd Highlanders.

The troops are said to have fought splendidly, and the cavalry made some brilliant charges on the enemy in the plain.

A Renter's telegram, dated Calcutta, Wednesday, says:—"Telegraphic communication with Cabul is interrupted near Jagdalak. General Gough reports that the tribes beyond Gandamak are obstructing his advance."

The "Times" understands that the India Office, in consideration of the brilliant services rendered to the State by the late Sir Louis Cavagnari, has granted a special pension of £500 per annum to Lady Cavagnari, to the widow and of £100 to Madame Cavagnari, the mother of the gallant officer.

DISTRESS IN IRELAND.—At a meeting of the Dungarvan Commissioners two hundred labourers waited on the board, eagerly demanding employment. Several of the men stated that they and their families had been compelled for some weeks past to live on one meal a day, and that of the worst description. They also said it was not charity they required, but work, it was unanimously resolved that a sum of three hundred pounds, at present in bank to the credit of the commissioners, should be immediately expended in giving the applicants employment.

At the sanitary meeting of the Corporation last week, the Mayor said he had been called on by a number of labourers to provide them with work. Mr. Healy said that the money which it is usual to spend on the Mayor's inaugural banquet on New Year's Night should be applied to the relief of the poor. Several members thought that this was a matter which should be entirely left to the Mayor Elect. Mr. Quinn said that there was no doubt of Alderman Dowling dealing generously with the poor.

Baron Dowse to day sentenced O'Shea for what his lordship termed "the dastardly and audacious assault on Lord Fermoy," to five years' penal servitude. There was great sensation in court when the sentence was pronounced. Lord Fermoy, in his evidence, said that O'Shea had held a small patch of land from him at two pounds a year, and was forlorn three years' rent, and received £20 compensation for giving up possession.

A despatch from Montreal, dated December 4, states that at a meeting of the St. Patrick's Society held the previous night, a committee was appointed consisting of four members, presidents of the Irish societies, to wait upon the clergy and obtain their consent to collect money for the distressed in Ireland. The St. Patrick's Society (the despatch adds) has called a mass meeting for Monday night, at which resolutions will be offered condemnatory of the conduct of the Imperial Government in arresting the three agitators.

English Propriety.

The god of English social life next in dignity to mammon, is propriety. Now propriety rightly worshipped is a very good god; his very rites are sweetness, order, decency, and in their practice they involve that consideration for others which is the highest form of morality, and even of piety.

Emigration to the United States.

The returns made by the commissioners of Emigration of New York furnish some interesting facts. From these we learn that 2,000,000 immigrants have taken up their homes in the United States within the past 30 years.

It will be remembered that at the gallant defence of Rorke's Drift none of the officers present distinguished himself more conspicuously than a young Irishman, Mr. Dunne, of the Commissary Service.

DEATH OF A LIVERPOOL PRESSMAN. The death is announced of Mr. George Warner, who for a great many years has been chief of the reporting staff of the Liverpool Mercury.

A letter has been received from the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P. by Mr. Rathbone M.P., consenting to receive the presentation of the casket and address from the Liverpool Liberals, at Hawarden, on the 29th inst.

the anniversary of his seventieth birthday. It is thought best that the presentation should be made privately, and it has therefore been arranged that only the officers of the association, along with the mover and seconder of the presentation (Mr. J. Mr. Carlyle has joined the committee which has been formed to secure the election of Sir A. Hobhouse and Mr. John Morley for Westminster. This is the first occasion on which Mr. Carlyle has decisively taken a side with either of the great parties in the State, and the fact that he has done so, is a striking evidence of the aversion which Lord Beaconsfield's policy has produced in the greatest minds of the country.

Railways—Their Advantages.

In recent issues of the 'Advocate,' we have read with much pleasure and satisfaction, a series of articles having reference to the construction of railways in this colony. The subject of railways as connected with this colony though viewed by some as utopian and visionary, is nevertheless one in the successful realization of which in the future, we have ever had the fullest confidence, notwithstanding the imaginary obstacles conjured up in the minds of those unfavorable to the introduction into this country of so effective and universally recognized a pioneer of progress and advancement.

Every man according to his ability is the golden rule of giving and working. It is not faithfully obeyed. There are many persons who have great ability; yet do little work, who have much leisure, yet give but little time, who have large means; yet make small contributions.

erally, from the establishment of a good and perfect system of communication, really based on the four great essentials of speed, economy safety and convenience? Is it not a well known fact, that at the present day many resident in the extern districts are absolutely prevented from visiting the capital during a great portion of the year, owing to the absence of a means of communication ensuring the great requisites above mentioned? From personal knowledge and experience of the benefits conferred upon the various provinces of the Dominion and the United States, in the introduction of railways, we see no reason why similar beneficial results may not be expected to accrue to this colony from the practical application of the same great agent of progress, civilization and advancement.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the 'Carbonar Herald,'

Over sensitiveness, mistakes, every man according to his ability and truth form the substance of the present letter, to which should it meet your approbation, you will kindly give room in your valuable journal.

A noble natured person will never rest omission of others, or falsify their motives. A prolific source of unprofitable sorrow is caused by fancied slight or small misunderstanding. Too much importance ought never to be attached to the e. We should not tenaciously watch over our personal dignity. The trivial things which destroy our composure and invade our peace, are pitiful. It is a good rule never to listen to the suggestions of pride or jealousy, in regulating our intercourse with the world.

Our mistakes are sometimes in the end, the best things that could have happened us. However they turn out at last, they discipline character and they compel dependence. It is true, most assuredly, that when we ask for wisdom, and ask properly, it must be given us; for the Giver of all Good is faithful who hath promised. The panic of an irreparable mistake almost crushes us: when we see no way of escape from a blunder into which we seemed to have been pushed in answer to fervent prayer.

Every man according to his ability is the golden rule of giving and working. It is not faithfully obeyed. There are many persons who have great ability; yet do little work, who have much leisure, yet give but little time, who have large means; yet make small contributions.

treasury; so that those who have a little and give nothing violate the golden rule just as truly as do those who have much and give a little. There are a great many persons, young and old, in all communities, whose means and opportunities are limited; from whom not much ought to be expected, but they are able to do something and they do nothing. They are transgressors of the golden rule. They might repent and do works meet for repentance. These are persons whom you can always believe because you know they have the habit of telling the truth.

Yours truly, VARIETY

A Trip to the Dominion.

No. 8.

Having given a transitory description of the capital of the Dominion with its leading public buildings, its various institutions, religious, educational, &c. I shall conclude by making a passing reference to its hotels, which, though not so large as in other cities of the Dominion, are still very numerous when taken in proportion with the population of the city.

A noble natured person will never rest omission of others, or falsify their motives. A prolific source of unprofitable sorrow is caused by fancied slight or small misunderstanding. Too much importance ought never to be attached to the e. We should not tenaciously watch over our personal dignity.

On Thursday night a vessel named the 'Olive Branch' was burned, off the premises of the Hon. John Rorke. The fire which was supposed to be the result of accident was not discovered until midnight, the first alarm being given by Messrs. Gould's watchman. All efforts to save the vessel being found unavailing, she was finally sunk, being subsequently towed into a favorable position for repairs.

Local and other Items.

The extensive circulation of the 'Herald' throughout Conception Bay and the various outport districts of the colony render it a most desirable medium for advertising purposes. We would direct the particular attention of business men generally in the above mentioned most significant fact.

The Temperance Soiree referred to in our last, took place at the Temperance Hall in this town on Tuesday evening last. The Rev. Geo. Boyd occupied the chair on the occasion. After the opening addresses by the chairman and the Rev. W. Jackson, hymns were sung by the Choir. Speeches were delivered by the Rev. W. Goodison, Messrs. A. Penny, W. Joyce, and Simpson, and a dialogue in which W. J. Guy, Jr. Messrs. Jas. Peach, Joseph Maddock, and W. Hawker took part.

The performance of the Avalon Literary and Dramatic Club came off according to announcement, at the Commercial School, South Side on Friday evening last. The performance, which from all we can learn was all that could be desired, was well received by a large and appreciative audience who completely thronged the building on the occasion. By request the performance was reproduced at the same place on the following evening with similar satisfactory results.

On Saturday last, a man named Cole, from Burnt Head, whilst working on board the 'Olive Branch,' was accidentally injured by the falling of a ten inch block from a temporary purchase which had been rigged for the purpose of raising the vessel. Notwithstanding the severity of the injuries received, we are much gratified to learn that the man is progressing favorably.

On Saturday evening last, a valuable Silver Watch was lost in the eastern end of this town. Any person leaving the same at this office, or giving any information leading to its discovery will be suitably rewarded.

We had the pleasure of witnessing an amateur theatrical performance at Brigus on Thursday evening last. On our arrival, early in the afternoon of the day mentioned, we were not a little surprised to observe in various prominent localities of that interesting town, posters intimating that a performance for the benefit of the Poor, would take place that evening at Beaver Pond Hall, the piece selected for the occasion being the well known and universally popular opera H. M. S. 'Pinafore.' Admiring the laudable enterprise and disinterested generosity of those connected with such an undertaking unquestionably demanding no inconsiderable amount of histrionic ability, we determined on visiting the Hall, and personally witnessing the merits of the several performers. It is needless to say that we expected a treat but the result far exceeded our anticipations.

We are informed that H. M. S. "Pinafore," will visit Harbor Grace in a few weeks, and that Sir Joseph Porter, his sisters, cousins and aunts will be introduced to the public by the amateurs of St. Paul's Parish. We hope our friends will let us know in time the evening the gallant Admiral will be in town, as there are many in Carbonar who would be glad to see him.

The Schooner Silver Stream arrived to Messrs. John Munn & Co., on Monday last, 27 days from Cadiz,

It will be perceived from advertisement in our columns to-day, that owing to the inclemency of the weather, the Poll intended to be taken in the District of Bay-de-Verds on the 6th inst., relative to the application of the Permissive Bill, has been further postponed until the 17th February.

From late St. John's exchanges we learn that His Excellency the Governor and Lady Glover, may be expected to arrive from the Dominion by the mail steamer due here to-day. Our much respected Chief Justice Sir Hugh W. Hoyles, leaves by the same steamer as passenger for Britain.

A serious accident occurred at Heart's Content, on Wednesday 7th inst. It appears that whilst a man named Percy with a fellow workman was engaged in making some repairs on board the Victor, belonging to Messrs. J. & R. Maddock of this town the latter missing his footing, his hatch et which was considerably blunted, descended upon Percy's head inflicting a serious injury. We have since learned that the injured man is progressing favorably.

During a recent visit up the Bay we had the pleasure of inspecting some splendid specimens of Copper Ore and other mineral obtained in various parts of the district of Harbor Main. We understand that satisfactory arrangements are being perfected by certain influential parties in the district, with a view to the opening of one or two more mines in the localities referred to, during the ensuing spring.

At Briggs we had an opportunity of inspecting some valuable specimens of copper ore as also of gold bearing quartz obtained in the vicinity of the town. Here we were glad also to learn that arrangements were so far completed to give promise of practical mining operations early in the spring.

From late St. John's exchanges we perceive that our estimable Chief Justice, Sir H. W. Hoyles, being about to retire from the Judicial bench of this colony has been presented with a highly complimentary Address by the members of the Bar. We regret that want of space precludes the possibility of our giving insertion to the Address and His Lordship's masterly and effective reply thereto.

The Active members of the Society beg to thank their friends and public benefactors for their increased contributions of the past year.

During the year, 150 poor families have been visited at their homes, representing 658 persons.

It will be seen by the Treasurer's account that the total receipts of the year amount to £335 9s. 9d. v/z. General Collection £138 5s. 8d. Legislative Grant £30. amounts received for Manufactured Goods £167 4s. 1d., and Expenditure £336 10s. 8d.

Religious News.

His Lordship, the most Rev. Dr. Carafagnini, Bishop of Harbor Grace, accompanied by the Rev. D. McInnes visited Carbonar on Monday morning last. At ten o'clock a. m. His Lordship celebrated Thanksgiving Mass at St. Patrick's Church being assisted on the occasion by the Rev. D. McInnes of Harbor Grace and Rev. R. Walsh of Carbonar.

The Rev. R. M. Johnston, the newly appointed Episcopalian minister of St. Paul's Church, Carbonar arrived here per Lady Glover from St. John's, via Portugal Cove on yesterday evening. Upon landing the Rev. gentleman was welcomed by some of the leading members of his congregation and proceeded immediately to the parochial residence.

The Prince of Wales has just erected in the church of St. Mary Magdalen, Sandringham, a beautiful tablet in memory of the Grand-Duchess of Hesse. The work, which has been executed by Mr. J. E. Boehm, A. R. A., consists of a medallion portrait in marble of the Grand-Duchess, with the following inscription beneath:-

To the beloved memory of Alice Maud Mary, Grand-Duchess of Hesse, Princess of Great Britain and Ireland, this monument is erected by her devoted and sorrowing brother, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales.

Above and below the tablet are carved these texts:- "Blessed be the God that died in the Lord; Thy will be done." His Royal Highness has also presented to the church, a fine organ.

The five hundredth anniversary of the foundation of William Wykeham, of New College, Oxford, was celebrated October 14th. It had been closed for eighteen months while undergoing restoration under the direction of Sir Gilbert Scott. The address was delivered by the Bishop of Winchester.

A speaker in the late Church Congress in England said, that during the last eight years he had baptized 134 Jews, not including children. There are 3000 Christian Israelites resident in England.

Dr. Braumuller, an Austrian mining engineer, states that in the subterranean waters of Folsch's coal mine in the Dux district, Bohemia, regular tides have been observed for the last six months. The Berlin and the Vienna Academies of Science are devoting much attention to the phenomenon.

Two women at Union, had a duel in regular man style. They both fired at word and one hit a boy that was climbing over a fence with a watermelon, and the other hit a calf in the field. Both having drawn blood they acknowledged they had received satisfaction.

LITERARY

In Darkness.

I am 'wildered in the darkness
Hanging o'er my way of life
Hope's star, long my on y beacon,
To the goal for which I strive.
Smileth faintly now upon me,
As a mother o'er a son
Bowed in sorrow, seeks to borrow
Light to cheer when there is none!

Oh, inscrutable ordaining,
That the poet's life should be
In a world of wondrous beauty,
Hedged by keen adversity;
Better, kinder, ere thus poisoned,
To my tired heart it seems—
Be born the base, bleak-bosomed
Being, blind to poet-dreams!

Up, far up a weary pathway,
To a destiny of good,
Have peered, and fain would clamber
I till the distance is subdued;
But the world—the world is careless
Of the poet and his dreams,
Though his singing rises ringing
To the noblest theme of themes!

I am 'wildered in the darkness
Hanging round my upward way—
Weary, lonely, lighted only
By hope's smould'ring beaconray!
Not a hand is reached to guide me!
Ah! my pathway is too high
For the footsteps of the worldly,
For the earthward-groveling eye.

"BOREEN."

CHAPTER VI.

(Concluded.)

If the statue of Admiral Nelson that adorns the pillar in Sackville Street, Dublin, had descended, walked out to Rathfarnham, and, stepping into the modest little parlor in Mrs. Nugent's little cottage, had invited Walter then and there to go through the jubilant evolutions of an Irish jig, the young man's astonishment could not have been exceeded when Mr. Fitzgerald's letter arrived, announcing in cold, legal phraseology, that the town-park of Clonfinnan, together with the townlands of Ballybotney and Turbury, was restored to the possession of the Nugents of Kilterman. At first he regarded the letter as a practical joke played off upon him by some witless scapegrace of the 'Hall' and was about to tear it into a thousand pieces when the genuine appearance of the document stopped him. Could there be any mistake? There in the corner stood his own name, correct in every particular. There in the body of the missive were the two lands succinctly set forth. Clonfinnan had gone first to pay the losses upon Fly-by-Night's defeat at Punchestown; then followed Ballybotney, where the hounds were once again entrusted to his father's mastership; and lastly Turbury that filtered away in the reckless extravagance consequent upon entertaining the viceroy, the Earl of Carlisle, when half the county was invited to meet him.

Could it be possible that this letter was intended for somebody else, and that in the hurry of business his, Walter Nugent's, name had been erroneously inserted? Yes, it must be so; and as Mr. Fitzgerald had been so attentive and courteous, it behooved him to call upon that gentleman without delay, and set to rights this painful error.

'No mistake, my dear sir,' was the solicitor's remark as Walter handed him the letter.

'No mis-take!' he echoed in a dry choking way.

'None whatever. Do not be excited, Nugent. There is such a thing as good luck.' And Fitzgerald busied himself, in order to let the first high heart-beats throbb off.

'I—I—don't understand this, Am I dreaming? Is it real? What does it mean?' Gisped Nugent, grasping the table till his knuckles shone up glossy and white, and staring with dilated eyes and mouth wide open at the solicitor, who, cool as the parchment he was engaged in handling, appeared not to notice him.

'I congratulate you, and—'

'But what does it mean?' burst in the young man, beads of perspiration now trickling down his face that paled and flamed alternately.

'It means that the estate formerly in the possession of your lamented father has been purchased in fee and restored to the family.'

'Who purchased it?'

'A client of mine.'

A flush of joy illuminated the barrister's heart, only to leave utter darkness. Your client's name please—this laughingly,

'Stet nomins umbra' laughed the other. 'Let me call him Junius.'

'You shall call him by his proper appellation, M. Fitzgerald. Although a beggar, I wish to thank this unknown Dives while I refuse his alms.' You'll do nothing of the kind, Mr Nugent. Sit down now—sit down,—and listen to me for just two minutes. I must be in court at 11.20 glancing at a Louis Quatreze c'ock that peeped from behind a bundle of mouldy-looking law papers. The case stands this wise: An old man enormously rich, a bachelor without kith or kin—Father Brown knows a'l about him and this has been done with the reverend gentleman's entire concurrence—has been under mountain loads of obligations to your family at the time when the Nugents held their heads as high as their own race horses. He, I might say lived at Kilterman and his earliest associations have been connected with the place and the race. He loves Kilterman, he loves the family, and a dream of his life is to see Nugents enjoying their own again. Accident has enabled him to gratify this allabsorbing desire. The lands were in the market, he has purchased them on fee. Here are the deeds my dear sir and allow me to offer you ten thousand congratulations and three thousand a year. I shall be late and the Master of the Rolls shall strike me off the rolls. And snatching up his hat and a bundle of papers, Mr. Fitzgerald hastily withdrew.

Walter gazed at the deeds that lay within his reach gazed out at St. Andrew's Church, gazed at the boxes, and maps and acts of Parliament, and the dread paraphernalia of the law by which he was surrounded then he bent over the table, until the backs of his head rested upon the parchment that gave him rank and wealth, and station till his hands rested upon his hands. And thus he remained until one of the clerks came into the apartment to ask him if he felt unwell.

'I cannot go home,' he said to himself. 'I must try and pull my thoughts together.' And hailing an outside car, he drove to the Phoenix Park, and there, under the shade of the fragrant horse-chestnuts, meditated upon this marvelous turn of the wheel of his fortune, and upon the snipery generosity of his unknown benefactor.

'I can meet Hester Branscombe on equal terms now,' was the triumphant thought that fluttered high in his jubilant heart.

CHAPTER VIII.

KILTERRAN, July 28,

'DEAR MR. NUGENT: As we have but a few days ere we retreat from this fortress with let us hope all the honors of war, I would be very happy if you would favor us with a visit, in order that I may render an account of my stewardship. With best regards to your mother and sister, I remain very truly yours.

JULIA HOPE HOWARD.

'P. S. I shall send to Clonfinnan to meet you.'

A burning desire to visit the old homestead possession of Walter Nugent as he perused this epistle, and without a moment's hesitation he telegraphed—he had removed with his mother and sister from Rathfarnham to the Shelbourne Hotel Stephen's Green—his acceptance, adding that he would leave for Kilterman upon the following day at two o'clock.

The Howards had received a polite note to quit Kilterman—in other words were informed that at the expirations of the year ending the 31st of July the proprietor would take possession; hence this note.

It was a lovely summer evening as Walter Nugent, with Boreen at his heels, entered the old-fashioned gateway leading to the home of his race. In his telegram he requested of Mrs Howard not to send any vehicle to the station and he trudged, on a brave pair of high-heel shoes, up the elm-lined avenue to the house. Mrs. Clancy, the lodge-keeper, fairly wept for joy as he stepped into the lodge and took a cup of tea with her, and Patsy Farrell, the gardener, with trembling hands fastened a magnificent Marechal Niel rosebud in the young master's button-hole, how now, 'glory be to God! come back to live amongst his own agin.'

As Water neared the house the tide of past recollection and that of present happiness met in one great wave that washed over his heart, and a tear stood in his eye as for a moment he ever and anon paused to gaze at some well remembered spot, some landmark recalling a past no longer soured with a deadly bitterness. It was during one of these pauses that he heard the rustle of a woman's dress, and, imagining it to be one of the domestics or people employed about the place, he stepped aside. Boreen who was considerably in advance, having travelled miles after impossible rabbits, suddenly set up a joyous barking, followed by whines indicative of pleasure laid on at high pressure.

'Somebody that Boreen is acquainted with,' thought Nugent. I wonder who it can be? He never was here before. I'll answer for the dog. How jolly he is to be sure! And he stepped from behind the tree into the avenue.

A young, girlish figure stooped over the terrier caressing Boreen with dainty hand. The barrister's heart leaped as in the figure he recognized Hester Branscombe.

'Why did you leave Pulleyne that day?' she asked, without looking up and still fondling Boreen.

Water was silent.

'Why did you leave Pulleyne?' she repeated, still stooping over the dog. Her tones were low, and her voice, despite an ill-concealed effort at firmness, quivered from agitation.

'Oh! that stroll beneath the elms at Kilterman; Boreen, inimitable Boreen chasing rabbits with hourse and roystering bark till the dew descended upon the grass, and the moon hung like a gem on the brow of the sky. Are there not moments in all our lives when life seems not to belong to earth, the very remembrance of which awakes echoes of sweet melody in the heart?'

'I liked you from the very moment you stood opposite to me with dear old Boreen, his pink tongue covered with sawdust,' she murmured.

'And yet you treated me—'
'Like a—what a big goose you were!' Miss Branscombe had come over to visit her friends, Miss Howard, even before the sun of the London season had set. She was anxious to see Walter Nugent's birthplace and his home.

'How strange it all seems!' he said, as he emerged into the open space before the house: 'you have got my old room.' The Nugents live at Kilterman, and by the Nugents I mean Mr. Walter Nugent, his wife, his heir, his mother and his sister. By the way, Mr. O'Meara, Q. C., intends removing the latter young lady to Merion Square in the course of the coming autumn. Andy Gavin, whose secret is still faithfully preserved, occupies his old quarters at the stables, where he is as happy as his own honest conscience can make him, and that is completely happy. Little Lady Eche is on a visit with her aunt just now, and takes the heir—she is out of it—for an airing in a very pretty little wicker carriage. Is it drawn by a pony? No. A goat? It is harnessed to our exulting and jubilant
