

"ECHOES of the Past; The Recompense of Love!"

OR, CHAPTER XVII.

Tibby read the telegram through, counting the words and estimating the cost; then, with a savage nod of the head, she thrust the telegram in her pocket, and muttered:

"Of course. Just what might have been expected of the likes of him and his class. He'll write, will he? Not him! An' if he does, he's got me to tackle. Her mind's set on him," she stifled a fierce sigh. "I can see that. It's lucky for 'er that she's got a sensible woman to protect her."

That day Mina suffered all the agonies of the sickness that comes from hope deferred, which precedes actual despair. Of course, he had been prevented from coming, but why had he not written? Just one line, one little line, to tell her why he had not come, to assure her that he had not changed his mind, now that he was well again? In after years Mina was never able to look back upon that day or the two that followed it without a dull aching pain. The dark shadow of a vague trouble seemed to fall not only upon her, but on the other two.

Tibby appeared to have suddenly lost her capacity for scolding and was almost as silent as Mina, at whom she every now and then glanced with a strange pity and yearning in her old young eyes; and on the evening of the third day she said suddenly and without any leading up to the subject: "What did you say that trip to Margit would cost, father?"

Mina happened to be out of the room, or he would have winked at her triumphantly; but with every sign of meekness he went into details with Tibby.

"Well, it's a ridiculous notion," she said at last, with an air of resignation; "but if you've set your mind on it, I s'pose we shall be forced to go, for you'll writt and writt until we do, I know. An' if we're goin', we'd better go at once," she added.

"Pr'aps Mina won't care to go now," remarked Elisha, with an affectation of doubt.

"Oh, yes, she will—won't you, Min-a?" said Tibby, as Mina, white and wan, entered the room. "Father's got this foolish notion of goin' away still running in his head. Got a cravin' for sea-bathin' and catchin' periwinkles—softenin' of the brain or old age, I s'pose. What do you say, Mina?"

Mina's face flushed and a feverish eagerness shone in her eyes.

"Yes, yes! Oh, yes," she said, her usually clear voice dry and hoarse. "Let us go; oh, let us go. Let us go at once, Tibby, dear! I—I am not well. I feel as if I were choking, as if there were no air—I want to go away—far away."

Tibby sprang up and caught her just in time.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Clive reached his rooms in the state of mind which will be easily understood by every man who has been in love and is fortunate enough to be loved in return.

Notwithstanding his severance from his family and his solitary life, he had had happy moments, the moments immediately following a successful speech, during a long burst with the hounds, a strong pull-up-stream, a tussle with a twenty-pound salmon;

Makes Hair Grow

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of. If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears. The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed. It destroys the dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots. Large, generous bottle for 50 cents.

When Women Suffer

No remedy gives greater relief than anti-kamnia (A-K) Tablets in all conditions generally known as "Women's Aches and Ills." One trial will satisfy any woman that she has at last found the remedy she has so long been looking for.

Indigestion—Dyspepsia

Are you distressed after eating? Do you have nausea when riding in the cars or on the train or boat? Take A-K Tablets and get instant relief. Genuine A-K Tablets bear the A-K monogram. At all Druggists.

The happy moments which come to a man when he is young and strong and his pulse is bounding with health. But he had never known such happiness as this which thrilled him through and through and set his being dancing to the music of joy.

He knew the gravity of the step he was about to take, knew that the world, not only the world of his own class, but the larger one which was also interested in his movements, would declare that he was acting a fool's part, was ruining his career by "marrying beneath him"; that everybody would laugh and sneer at what they would deem his folly, his infatuation for a girl who was so very far below him in social position. The ever-busy and ubiquitous reporter would rake up Mina's antecedents and dilate upon her lowly, not to say vulgar, surroundings. In his mind's eye he already saw the "spicy" paragraphs which would inevitably appear in the daily and weekly papers; he knew that his father and his two brothers would be furious with him, and that he would be still more of an outcast than he was at present.

But all this counted as nothing with Clive compared with the fact of his great love for Mina and her love for him. He began to plan out his course of action; it would not be fair that Mina should face his world without some preparation. Though he himself was not only not ashamed of her, but proud of her beauty, her grace and her innate refinement, he was too worldly-wise to be ignorant of the fact that she would be shy and fearful, and very likely unhappy, if she were plunged, all unprepared for the change, into the society to which he belonged, and in which he must continue to move unless he abandoned his career. And he had no intention of doing so, for he knew that under proper auspices Mina would take her place by his side and would not only be a joy to him, but a helpmate in every sense of the word.

There was absolutely no reason why she should not be what is called "a social success." Again, in his mind's eye, he could see her moving, the admired of all admirers, in the circles to which she belonged.

He would send her to a good school, one of the schools at Brighton, for instance, where she would associate with the daughters of people of rank and fashion, so that she might be armed at all points. He was quite satisfied with her as she was; and his resolve was made for her sake and hers only, so that she should not be handicapped and embarrassed in her new sphere. He could go down and see her frequently—every day that parted her from him would be a lost day—and as soon as possible they would be married and begin their life together.

He had a bath and changed, and then fell to at the pile of letters on his table. While he was reading them there came a knock at the door and, in response to Clive's invitation, Quilton came in.

"Sorry to disturb you," he said, his eyes fixed a foot above Clive's head. "Just looked in to see how you were."

Clive lifted his radiant face and laughed. "First-rate," he replied.

"You look it," said Quilton. "You appear to take a lot of killing. But I imagine you were very carefully nursed by those humble friends of yours."

"I was, indeed," said Clive, with devout gratitude.

"Yes." Quilton paused a moment, his colorless eyes fixed on a picture above Clive's shoulder. "One of the young ladies is rather eccentric, isn't she? But the other atones for her—sister's little peculiarities. A very beautiful girl, don't often see that peculiarly refined type among her class."

Clive colored and his eyes flashed, but Quilton did not appear to notice it or the tone in which Clive said: "She is as good as she is beautiful. Look here, Quilton—"

He hesitated a moment. "No; I won't tell you just yet."

"There isn't any need," said Quilton impassively. "I am aware that when you have made up your mind that I am worthy of your confidence, you will tell me that you are in love with her. Oh, my dear fellow, don't look so surprised; give me credit for the ordinary intelligence of a boiled owl. Besides, the young lady gave herself away the day I went to see you. I mentioned that you were excited and might need her, and she flew past me with an expression on her face which might have been read by a blind man."

Clive drew a long breath, nodded, and smiled. "You've guessed it at once, Quilton," he said. "I am in love with her, and please God we are going to be married."

"Quite so," said Quilton, as if he were assenting to a statement respecting the weather. "Why not? She is not exactly of the class of Vere de Vere to which you belong, but that will not matter to you who are so prominent a democrat, who go in for the 'equality of man' and have justly earned the title of 'The Friend of the People'; in fact, I admire the consistency of your proceedings. Ignoring the claims of the daughters of a thousand earls, some of whom are doubtless quite willing to marry you, you go to the People—capital P, please—and choose a bride from among them. It doesn't matter that her father plays the fiddle in the streets and that her sister is a freak who has no business outside a sideshow—I beg your pardon—"

Clive leaned back and laughed. "Not at all, my dear Quilton. What you say is absolutely true, but it makes no difference to me. I would marry the girl I love, if her father were 'doing time' and her sister danced in the ballet. Love levels all distinctions, you know."

"Quite so. Good old copy-book wheeze. By the way," he said, as if suddenly recollecting, "they aren't her father and sister, are they? You said as much the other day, if I remember?" He put the question in the casual and indifferent way.

"That's so," replied Clive, as indifferently.

"You don't know who she is, have you idea?" asked Quilton, as indifferently as before.

"Not the slightest," replied Clive. Quilton nodded. "You are content to take her as she is, do not care enough about the mystery—she may be a princess, like the girls in the story-books, you know."

Clive laughed. "She has a higher title than that, my dear fellow," he said, with absolutely boyish ardor. "She is a queen, queen of my heart."

"Beautiful!" murmured Quilton. "You've got love's young dream as badly as they make it. And this lack of curiosity on your part will continue you think you will not want to hunt up her origin, employ detectives, worry the girl herself?"

Clive laughed again. "I certainly shall not," he said. "It will be enough for me that I have got the girl I love, that she is my wife—but why do you ask?"

"Ah, why?" echoed Quilton. "I'm sure I don't know; just the journalist's interest in a little love-romance."

"I see," said Clive. "Is there any news?" he asked, as he turned to his letters again.

"Yes," said Quilton. "The Earl of Raiborough has been taken ill—but no doubt those telegrams will tell you."

He nodded to two or three telegrams in the pile, and Clive tore them open and sprang to his feet.

"My father is very ill!" he said. "Why didn't you tell me at first?" "I was trying to break it to you," said Quilton; "but I saw that you would come upon the telegram before I could do so. He was taken ill at his place in the country, Raiborough; you will want to go at once. Is there anything I can do for you? Look here, I'll help you pack while you look up a train. He was taken ill yesterday—there is no need to look so remorseful. We only got the news last night. I should have come and told you if you had not returned today. I'll find your things—there's a Bradshaw, on that table."

"You're a good fellow," said Clive. "Throw some things into a portmanteau. He must be very ill, must want me badly." There are four telegrams. There is just time to catch a train. Quick, Quilton!"

Clive reached the station only just in time. He was fond of his father, had long since forgiven him, and all the way down to Raiborough was gripped and anxious about him. He did not forget Mina; but it was just possible that his father had recovered, that he, Clive, might return to town and see Mina next day; in any case, he could telegraph or write to her.

At Raiborough he found a carriage waiting for him, for the ready-witted Quilton had wired to say that Clive was coming. The old coachman, who had been in the service of the family since boyhood, touched his hat and shook his head gravely at Clive's anxious inquiry.

"I am glad you've come, Master Clive," he said. Clive would be always "master" to the old servant who had held him on a pony and taught him to drive. "The earl's mortal bad. It's some kind of a stroke, I believe. We was afeared that you were abroad somewhere and that the earl might die—he left alone."

"Is my brother Adolphus not there?" asked Clive.

The coachman shook his head.

"No, Master Clive, his lordship is very ill with something or other at a Nursing Home. And Mr. Bertie—he hesitated—"I don't exactly know where he is, sir."

37th Day of the War Latest From the Front.

Messages Received
Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 14. The Governor, Newfoundland, reports enemy counter-attacks at Souchez failed with heavy losses; also some further advance near Tahure. Enemy attacks were repulsed at Vosges.

Russia reports the enemy repulsed near Dvinsk, also further successes obtained in the Stripa region. Zeppelins visited the eastern counties and London area last night. One airship is believed damaged by gunfire. Some houses were damaged and fifty-five were killed, including fifteen soldiers. One hundred and fourteen were injured.

BONAR LAW.

GENERAL ATTACK BY BRITISH. BERLIN, via London, Oct. 14. A general attack by the British along almost the whole front from Ypres to Loos, accompanied by bombardment of the Belgian coast, is reported in the official statement of today from the War Office.

A CORRESPONDENT'S STORY.

LONDON, Oct. 14. A correspondent at the front tells of a great battle going on. According to this message the fate of the Germans in Belgium, and perhaps in Northern France, hangs on these fights. Their whole line is declared to be endangered by success of the Allies between Ypres and Arras. The correspondent discloses that in Belgium hundreds of trains are being held in readiness in case of retreat of the army. Huge reinforcements are said to have been flung into the German battle line in a renewed effort to drive back the Allies and relieve the pressure on the line near Lens, where the gravest danger is said to confront them.

THE LONDON AIR RAID.

LONDON, Oct. 14. (Official.) A fleet of hostile airships visited the eastern counties, and a portion of the city of London, dropping bombs. The anti-aircraft guns of the Royal Field Artillery were at once brought into action. An airship was seen to heel over, and drop to lower altitude. Five aeroplanes went up, but owing to atmospheric conditions only one succeeded in locating the airship. This aeroplane was unable to overhaul the airship before it was lost in the fog. Some houses were damaged and several fires started, but no serious damage was caused to military material. All the fires were soon got under control by the fire brigades. The following military casualties are reported: Fifteen killed and thirteen wounded. The Home Office announces the following casualties other than military: Killed, men 27, women 9, children 5, total 41; injured, men 64, women 39, children 7, total 110. Total men 91, women 29, children 12, total 142. Of these casualties 32 killed and 9 injured were in the London area.

LORD ROBERT CECIL REPLIES TO SIR ARTHUR MARKHAM.

LONDON, Oct. 14. Sir Arthur Markham, who suspects the statement of Foreign Secretary Grey, that the freedom of the seas may be a proper subject for discussion in any agreement between the nations after the war, shows a desire for a revival of declaration of London and raised the question again today in the Commons. Lord Robert Cecil, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replied: The opinion of Foreign Secretary Grey and myself is that the question of international agreements and how they can be made worth anything in future, may reasonably form the subject of discussion between the nations after the war, in the light of the experience gained, and the reflections suggested by the way in which the war originated, and the methods by which our enemies have conducted it on land and sea.

BETTER FIGHTING AROUND LOOS AND SOUCHEZ.

BERLIN, Oct. 14. Correspondents of Berlin newspapers report that fighting on Monday in the districts around Loos and Souchez was most bitter. Intense bombardment of twenty hours preceded the French attack which began on Monday morning. Loos began to be directed against the Hill near Vimla, as well as against the German position further north between Loos and Givenchy.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Oct. 14. There has been a particularly violent artillery engagement in Artois district, northwest of Hill 140, in which both sides took part, according to a statement given out this afternoon. There has also been active trench fighting in the vicinity of Lanchamps in the Champagne district. The Germans have been throwing as-phyxiating bombs on the French lines. A German attack to the west of Tahure has been repulsed by French fire. In the Lorraine district cannonading between the antagonists has been almost continuous.

RUSSIA'S MOVEMENT.

GENEVA, Oct. 14. The Universal of the Bucharest says that Russian troops have been withdrawn from Bessarabia near the Rumanian frontier and are being concentrated at Odessa. From this point a movement will be undertaken against the Bulgarian ports.

NEWS AGENCY DESPATCH.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. A News Agency despatch from Bucharest, published here, says that Bulgarian cavalry and German-Austrian troops concentrated to-day at Vidin, on the Bulgarian bank of the Danube opposite Roumania, apparently ready for an offensive movement against Roumania, or to meet the Russian forces reported to be on their way across Roumania to help the Serbians.

BRITAIN AWAITING FINAL ACTION BY THE STATES.

LONDON, Oct. 14. Britain will await final action by the States with reference to the recognition of General Carranza before deciding on its attitude. In the Commons to-day, Lord Robert Cecil said the Government would defer consideration of this question for the present, in view of the fact that the American Government has not yet granted the expected recognition.

STATEMENT BY McKENNA.

LONDON, Oct. 14. A statement was made in the Commons to-day by Reginald McKenna, that material progress is being made in negotiations between the Board of Inland Revenue and Chicago packing houses, regarding the amount of income tax due from those firms. Taxes for a period of more than ten years are involved.

A Child Gets Cross, Sick and Feverish When Constipated

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated clean little liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

ANGER.

The delegate who truly wise is won't to rave around and paw the dirt; for every time your temper rises, you do your system grievous hurt. Go ask the doctor, if you're doubting the truths I hand out by the ton, and he will say, "You bet! You're shouting! For anger shortens lives my son." Oh, when with senseless rage you quiver, you heat your blood, oppress your heart, disorganize your patient liver, and quite upset your appetit. Not only that, but when you're frantic, and rant around and jaw and scold, the people note your curve and attic, and say your head should be half-soled. Employers, too, will not desire you, they will not like your hothead style; they'll try you once, and then they'll fire you so hard you'll bounce for half a mile. How does the fair immortal Lillian preserve her youth, while others slip? She says she always counts a million, before she lets her temper rip.

There have been many records of heroism shown in the Dardanelles by troops in carrying, under fire, their wounded comrades to a place of safety. One that will take a foremost place is that of Private Humberstone, Essex Regiment. While Captain Gowling wounded he saw Private Humberstone run out into the open three times and bring in wounded men to safety under a hot fire.

Days Past—287 To Come—77

St. Teresa. END OF BRITISH RULE IN AMERICA, 1777. This day, by the surrender of the British Army at Saratoga, the curtain fell upon the last scene of England's attempt to tax her American Colonies. The English were forced by famine to surrender and lay down their arms, on condition of receiving a free transport to England.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE born 1844. German moralist, many of whose works have been translated into English.

VIRGIL born B.C. 70. The great Roman epic poet. He was born near Mantua, and cultivated a farm in the adjacent village of Andes. His most famous work the Aeneid, comprised twelve books, dealing with the story of the wanderings of Aeneas after the destruction of Troy.

ROBERT HERRICK died 1674, aged 83. One of the sweetest of lyrical poets. Author of "Gather ye Rose Buds," "Cherry Ripe."

GREAT WAR 1914. Occupation of Ostend by German troops. Arrival of the German advance guard at Tournai; the commanding officer demanded a war contribution of £80,000 within two hours, and seized 200 citizens as hostages; the sum was paid and the men released.

H.M.S. Hawk sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea; 524 officers and men reported missing.

Sinking of Hamburg-America liner Markomania and capture of Greek steamer Pontoporos off Sumatra by H.M.S. Yarmouth announced.

For the Regiment.

An entertainment was held yesterday afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. James Harris, Carpsian Road, in aid of the W. P. A., and a very handsome sum was realized. The concert will be repeated to-night, commencing at 8.15, in order to augment the money on hand. Tickets may be obtained at the Atlantic Book Store. The programme was as follows:—

Duet, Misses Delgado; Chorus, Soldiers of the King; Violin Solo, Cavatina, Miss Devine; Song, Little Grey Home in the West, Miss M. Shea; Song, My Rose of Yestere'en, Miss M. Doyle; Recitation, If, Miss Morris; Song, His Lullaby, Mrs. Cahill; Piano Solo, Largo, Miss Alice Byrne; Song, Yours, You Come Home, Miss Mary Ryan; Song, When You Part, Miss M. McLean; Song, Sons of the Sea, Mr. Cyril Fox; Violin Solo, Mazurka, Miss M. Johnson; Musical Monologue, Soliloquy on an Old Shoe, Mrs. Baxter; Song, There's a Land, Miss Mary Harris; Song, My Dear Soul, Miss Jean Harrad; Song, Miss Dorothy Johnson; Song, Khaki, Miss Herder; Piano Solo, The Whispering Wind, Miss Eva Harris; Duet, Messrs. Huskins and Cairns. GOD SAVE THE KING.

The S. S. Tobasco is due now from Liverpool. The S. S. Algeriana is expected to reach this port to-morrow from London.

The S. S. Graciana is set down to leave Liverpool to-morrow week, the 23rd instant, for this port.

The S. S. Durango will leave Halifax to-morrow for here.

Amundsen Has Given Up North Pole Drift.

New York, Oct. 9.—Captain Raoult Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole and navigator of the only vessel that ever went through the Northwest passage has abandoned his drifting expedition across the North Pole, according to information received in this country yesterday.

The European war and the choking of the Panama Canal by which route he was waiting to approach the Arctic from the Pacific, combined to influence the explorer to forsake the proposed journey, which has been his ambition for nearly ten years.

Berlin Denies Heavy Losses in Submarines.

London, Oct. 9.—A semi-official despatch received from Berlin referring to statements made in England and America that the losses of German submarines have reached an aggregate of sixty, says categorically that the actual losses in underwater boats "is less than a quarter of the above number." The despatch continues:—

"As to the statements in the foreign press that Germany, owing to losses, has been obliged to restrict her submarine war, we can state that the number of submarines now at Germany's disposal is considerably greater than at the beginning of the submarine war."

FRIDAY, Oct. 15th, 1915.

Local Affairs Election.

Under the Proclamation issued some time ago, Thursday, the Sixteenth of December has been appointed for the Election of Road Boards and Commissioners and any Board may be entrusted with the relief of the poor within its area, by an Order in Council, on the petition of a majority of the electors in that area. The area of the present jurisdiction of Road Boards will be adopted under the Act until changed in the manner provided by the Act. We have to-day received from the Secretary of the Board of Works a copy of the documents relating to this Election. Among them is a letter of instruction, setting forth clearly the main features of those connected with the elections and the Elected Boards. Under the terms of the Act, Stipendiary Magistrate shall convene the meeting at which the Election is to take place. If he is not available a J. P., and if the latter is not available, then the Chairman of the Road Board or another person appointed by that Board. Two weeks notice of time, place and purpose of meeting must be given.

The second rule is one made by the Governor in Council on his own initiative. It is however a reasonable provision and is as follows:—"The meeting shall not be held in the rooms of any Political organization and every voter may be in a position to exercise his privilege of attending and taking part, should he desire to do so, in the business of the meeting."

Provision is made for the election of a Secretary at the meeting, and the Nomination of Candidates. We have, however, not come across any provision limiting the number of candidates who can be elected or for providing an authority to limit them. As this is a tentative measure, it may be as well it is so, and to leave the number of members to be elected to the discretion of the meeting, providing the meeting satisfies the statutory provision of electing not less than three members.

LABRADOR SHIPMENTS.—From passengers who arrived by the Sagona we learn that some 90,000 quintals of codfish have been shipped from the Labrador coast to date. When the Sagona was coming south several foreign vessels were at Bateau, Black Tickle, Salmon Bight, Comfort Bight Macovick, taking on board cargoes for the foreign market.

Assisting Ambition

Men of ambition—with the desire to forge ahead—need revitalizing food to help them to compel success.

Grape-Nuts

is a success food. It is made from whole wheat and malted barley and, pound for pound, contains far more "go" and "get there" than ordinary foods.

It retains all the nutriment of the grains, including their natural mineral salts—Phosphate of Potash, etc.—often lacking in ordinary food, but essential to thorough upbuilding of sinew, brain and nerves.

Grape-Nuts is partially pre-digested and agrees with all. It's the ideal vigor-food for child and adult.

Police Court.

(Before Mr. Morris, K.C.)

One drunk was discharged, and two drunks who fell through a window had to pay $2.40 costs before they were given their liberty.

A drunk who succeeded in sobering himself by a bath in the waters of the harbor was released by paying 50c. for cab hire.

A woman summoned her husband for non-support. The case was dismissed.

Several civil cases were disposed of.

French Banker in for Repairs.

French Banker in for Repair.

The French banking schooner Ramond reached port this forenoon from the Grand Banks for repairs. The vessel left Lisbon on the 30th of March last for the Banks, and ever since the middle of April has been fishing. Very stormy weather was experienced recently and at the beginning of this week was particularly boisterous. The vessel got knocked about badly and got her rudder broken. The Ramond has five thousand quintals of fish on board and as soon as her damages are repaired sails for Lisbon.

Personal.

Mr. Edwin Murray, wholesale fruit dealer of this city, arrived from the Old Country this week via New York and Sydney. Mr. Murray's family are at present in England where his children are being educated, and he comes to keep in touch with his business interests here.

Mr. Arnaud, formerly Canadian Trade Commissioner here and now filling the same position in Bristol, wished through Mr. Murray, to convey his good wishes and kind remembrances to his old friends here, who he remembers with the kindest feelings. Mr. Murray had rather an exciting experience coming through the danger zone, but happily emerged safely.

The Prospero left Bonavista at 9.40 a.m. to-day.

HELP

Our Wounded Soldiers and Sailors.

"TRAFALGAR DAY" HOSPITAL FUND.

Lord Lansdowne, the President of the British Red Cross Society, has made an appeal throughout the Empire for funds in aid of that Society, and the hundred associations, the Order of St. John. These two great societies are co-ordinated with the Royal Army Medical Corps, and upon them largely devolve the care of our sick and wounded soldiers and sailors, both in the field and in hospital. It is probable that at the present moment they are caring for our sick and wounded lads. The enormous demands now being made upon these societies necessitates the present appeal for assistance.

The people of Newfoundland are invited to contribute, and will doubtless feel it a privilege to do so. While we must recognize that our obligation to both branches of the Patriotic Association, and other local war funds, have first claim upon us, yet this appeal, on behalf of the sick and wounded soldiers and sailors, is so insistent, that all must wish to respond.

The casualties every week in the British forces are enormous; the dying and wounded are hourly requiring help and succour. They are making, or are willing to make the supreme sacrifice of their lives—shall we not make some sacrifice to relieve their sufferings?

Trafalgar Day—October 21st, has been fittingly chosen as the day upon which our subscriptions shall be presented. All are therefore urgently requested to send their contributions, large or small, as soon as possible to Mr. J. A. GOSLING, K.C., Treasurer, "England Expects Every man to do his Duty!"

W. G. GOSLING,
Chairman Committee.

Grain Steamer Reaches Port

IN A DISABLED CONDITION.

The British steamer Gartness, Capt. J. Stammers, limped into port at 8 o'clock this morning in a damaged and leaky condition. The ship was 9 days out from New York bound to a port in England. Tempestuous weather was encountered on the Atlantic, storm succeeding storm. The vessel was badly buffeted, numerous heavy seas were shipped and practically everything was knocked about. Sustained damage. On Tuesday night last a regular hurricane raged. As a result the Gartness fared poorly. Her pump connections became choked while she began to make water aft. The stern girth being leaky. To make matters worse the cargo shifted and with a big starboard list the ship became almost unmanageable. The captain decided to come to St. John's for adjustment. Bowing Bros. Ltd. are the agents for the Gartness which will have part of her cargo discharged to have it re-stowed. It is not necessary for the ship to dry dock to have repairs made where she is leaking. The Gartness was formerly the Charles P. Jones, is 15 years old, 2,422 tons gross, 1,562 net, registered in Glasgow and owned by the Gart Steamship Co., Ltd.

Titled Nuns

Many Englishwomen Have Gone Into Convents.

The announcement that the Hon. Albinia Broderick, sister of Viscount Midleton, has almost completed a hospital in County Kerry at a cost of £5,000 for the benefit of the poorest of Ireland's poor, has attracted the noble work of this lady, who for several years has been living a life of self-sacrifice among the poorest of Ireland's poor.

For their sakes she sold her beautiful old furniture, her china and jewellery, trained and became a certified medical and surgical nurse, midwife, and sanitary inspector, and lived among the peasants in a little cottage on 5s. a week. Not only, however, did she dispose of her effects in order to find money for the benefit of the Irish poor, but she saved the expense of having a foreman in connection with the building of the hospital, by doing the work herself. Pending the opening of the hospital, Miss Broderick keeps a supply of drugs and medicines in her cottage. Sometimes she is summoned to visit her patients, and tramps for many miles over the mountains to their homes.

Another titled lady who is an ardent worker on behalf of the Irish poor is Lady Hermione Blackwood, daughter of the late and sister of the present Marquess of Dufferin and Ava. She, too, became a trained nurse, entering one of the big London hospitals, in which she worked exactly like any other probationer, and since then has devoted much of her time and energy to work among the Irish peasants.

Quite a number of ladies have sacrificed wealth, rank, and title in order to enter convents and devote themselves to charitable work. At the beginning of the year it was announced that Julia Lady Lyveden had been received as a novice in the convent of Poor Clares at Edinburg. Poor Clares is one of the most severe and exacting orders in the world. The nuns go barefooted or sandled, while abstinence, silence and voluntary poverty are insisted upon.

Some time ago, too, it was announced that Lady Maud Barrett, second daughter of the late Earl of Cavan, was about to enter a sisterhood and cut herself off from the outside world for life; while in 1912 Lady Mary Catherine Ashburnham entered the Sacred Heart Convent at Rochampton, an order which devotes itself chiefly to the education of children.

But this does not complete the list of ladies belonging to the British aristocracy who have become nuns. No fewer than four of the Duchesses of Norfolk's aunts are in convents, while the duke has one sister in the Carmelite Order, and another a Sister of Charity. Two daughters of the late Lord Russell of Killowen are in the Convent of the Holy Child at Mayfield, Sussex, while Lord Petre, Lord Alibemarle, and Lord Denbigh have sisters.

SUPPRESSED EMOTIONS HARMFUL.

Those very self-controlled women suffer terribly when things go wrong with them and the suppression of emotion surely harms their beauty. Most of us can talk out our troubles with a friend, and get sympathy and comfort; we can look forlorn and get an amount of pity and consideration in consequence. And there is no denying the fact that sympathy and pity do help to make our troubles seem lighter.

But a very self-controlled woman would almost die of shame if anyone saw her in tears. She would sooner be insulted than look woe begone. The enormous amount of self-control which she practices cannot help being more or less of a strain to her, it exhausts her nervous system and then, of course, her troubles seem worse than they really are.

It isn't ordinary easily moved easily comforted folks, who are all broken up by the troubles and tragedies of life. They make a great deal of fuss for a few weeks, and they probably mention their troubles in a self-pitying sort of way, now and then for years. But, as a matter of fact, they go along quite comfortably all the while, and are never in any very acute distress.

The women who have broken hearts whose lives are blighted by one big misfortune, or made empty by one loss, are those who cannot ease themselves of their sorrow by pouring it out on their friends. They don't say or show much, but, like the parrot in the story, they think the more and suffer the more too.

Of course people of this very reserved type find it terribly difficult to bring themselves to confide in anyone, even their dearest friends, and really prefer to go uncomfoted and nurse their troubles and sorrows in silence. But I believe that, if only for their own sakes, they should make a great effort to overcome these natural tendency to silence on these matters and break down the hard barrier of reserve and restraint they have built up around themselves, if only in the interests of their beauty.

Think It Over!

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—TRADE, COMMERCE and TAXATION are the three most vital questions to be grappled with at present, and should enlist our most earnest consideration as Newfoundlanders. We should endeavour, by every means in our power, to bring this unfortunate country of ours through this period of depression and place her once more in a good, sound, financial and commercial condition. It should be the bounden duty of every man in this country to protect our Autonomy, that great and glorious Charter of Liberty and Freedom won and handed down to us by our forefathers.

It should be our duty to see that the economic conditions of this country are not interfered with so as to bring about financial embarrassment and force Confederation as the only alternative. For the past two years the current Revenue fell a long way short of meeting current expenditure. This was brought about, firstly, by placing on the Free List in 1913 such goods as Tea, Sugar, Meats, etc., causing a deficit of about $300,000 at the end of December, 1913. This was followed by a deficit June 30th, 1914, December 31st, 1914, and June 30th, 1915, and according to the present financial outlook there will be a deficit of over half a million on December 31st, 1915. These deficits will aggregate over two and a half million dollars, and will have to be met by borrowing. Besides this amount, the Colony will have to borrow at the end of the War another five millions, bringing our National Debt up to about forty millions of dollars, and increasing our Interest Account about $400,000 per year.

Our obligations to the disabled soldiers, and to the friends and dependents of the brave fellows who will be called upon to pay the price on the field of honour in defence of King and Country, will amount to, at least, $300,000 per year for the next fifteen or twenty years, making a total of over $700,000 per year. These responsibilities, we cannot shirk. They are of our own making, and must be dealt with by increased taxation. The Prohibition measure before country, if it becomes Law, will mean another $480,000 per year increased shortage.

The people of this country, especially the Outport people, should carefully consider, before placing a Law on the Statute Book, that will so increase taxation as to make the cost of living unbearable. There is no Reason why they should. Sentiment does not make the Pot boil.

Yours,
"TERRA NOVA."

Canasia Pictorial

Canada's Most Artistic and Popular Magazine.

This elegant magazine delights the eye while it instructs the mind concerning the picturesque doings of an interesting and highly entertaining world. Its war pictures are alone worth the money.

Each issue is literally crowded with the highest quality of photographs, many of them worth framing. It is the most popular "Pick-me-up" on the waiting room tables of the leading doctors throughout the Dominion, and in the big public libraries it is literally "used up" by the many who are attracted by its entertaining and beautiful pages.

"It's a 'love at sight' publication and it has departmental features of great interest to the young woman and the home-maker. Of it—just to quote one man's praise from among thousands—the late Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona, wrote: 'The "Canasia Pictorial" is a publication which, if I may be permitted to say so, is a credit to Canada.' (Signed) STRATHCONA.

On trial to New Subscribers—Twelve months for only 65 cents.

The "Canasia Pictorial" is published by THE "PICTORIAL PUBLISHING CO.", "Witness" Block, Montreal, Canada. Try it for a year on above offer.

"Huckleberry Finn at 90 Years.

B. F. Finn, the original "Huckleberry Finn" of Mark Twain's books, has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday at his ranch on the McKenzie River.

He has a vivid recollection of Mark Twain, with whom he worked on a Mississippi steamboat, but says Twain really didn't get much from himself of what he wrote about Huckleberry Finn except the name. "We called Clemens Charley in those days," said Finn. "He and I both worked on the steamer Shotwell running out of St. Louis. I was nicknamed 'Huckleberry,' and Clemens seemed to take a fancy to the name. 'Tom Sawyer was my chum, but I was well known before Clemens knew me.' Finn has lived on the McKenzie River for forty years past, and seldom emerges from his retreat.

A corporal of marines who was on board H.M.S. Irresistible when she was struck by a mine in the Dardanelles, wrote to a friend describing the sinking of the ship: "We unfortunately struck a mine," he wrote, "and began to sink, which the Turks could see, and they peppered our poor old ship with shells as we were going down. How we escaped being blown to atoms I don't know. Everything went off grand, and the amusing sight was to see all hands blowing up their swimming collars. On the quarter-deck the boys were dancing the bunny hug and singing ragtime songs to mouth-organ accompaniments."

Defending Yourself From Yourself.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Methinks t h e lady doth protest too much," said t h e authorman, gently. "You're an unkind thing," I said, but the shaft went home. This was the way of it. Someone had accused me of speaking more sharply than I had a right to about a certain matter, and I had been trying to argue myself right.

Though my critic had spoken but a few words, and those half in jest, I had waxed very warm about the matter and had talked at considerable length in my efforts to justify myself. The authorman's gentle comment stemmed the tide, and showed me up to myself.

I did protest too much, and why? Not because I had been severely criticised; not because my critic hadn't been easily convinced that I was right; but because I had another critic whom I was vainly trying to convince. And that critic was, of course, myself.

When You Resent A Criticism Look Out.

When you find that you resent a criticism with unusual bitterness and are particularly anxious to justify yourself, look out. Or, rather, look in. Isn't it because the criticism finds an echo in your own conscience?

An accusation can't hurt so terribly when you know it is unjust. It is the haunting suspicion that there may be something in what the critic says that harbs the arrow of his criticism. It's that traitor conscience within the walls that you are fighting, not the enemy without. Sometimes people try to justify themselves for something they have not even been accused of doing and that is a sure sign of an uneasy conscience.

A friend of mine had let some theatre tickets go unused. "I couldn't think of anyone to give them to," she said.

"Why not Mrs. R.?" someone suggested idly.

"Well, I did think of her, but I didn't know how to get them to her. We could have run over in the auto, but that would have made us late and that makes Henry cross."

So She Kept On Explaining.

Of course that remark would have closed the incident, but she kept breaking out afresh with explanations of why she didn't get the tickets to Mrs. R.

And when a relative took advantage of a relative's privileges and asked her why she made such a fuss about the matter, she said, "I know you think I am selfish."

"Nobody said so."

"But I know you think so."

As a matter of fact I don't believe any of us would have given the matter a second thought if we hadn't got so some day is about the only identify someone else who thought she had been selfish.

As that someone else had inside information her criticism was well worth heeding. As it always is.

Reply.—It certainly would. Tell the woman you love her and she will probably be happy to wait with you. Perhaps she loves you and suffers because she does not know your feelings; perhaps you might lose her if you did not speak, because she might not want to wait on the bare chance of love. Harvest Festival.

It is already very well known that the Salvation Army is holding its Annual Harvest Festival effort. The Officers and Soldiers of No. 1 Corps have commenced operations in this connection.

That the work of the Army deserves the support of the public is not so very long ago since an entirely different view was taken of its methods. A number of the citizens have already helped, and we will be calling on the farmers to help us with vegetables and fruit of any kind.

All will be thankfully received by the Corps. Thanking you for past favours and wishing you every blessing, I remain, yours truly, EDWIN BRACE, Adjutant, No. 1 Corps.

Temperance Campaign Opened at Springdale.

Editor Evening Telegram:

Dear Sir,—On October 7th, a very interesting temperance meeting was held in the Methodist Church. A programme had been previously arranged consisting of recitations, choruses, solos and speeches. The speakers for the evening were Rev. S. Williams, Mrs. Samuel Huxter and Mr. A. Moore. Rev. Williams spoke very effectively on the Temperance question in general. This was followed by an excellent discourse on "Liquor in the Home and its Effects" by Mrs. Huxter, after which Mr. Moore gave us a very stirring address as to how the various nations are regarding the sale of intoxicants and the steps which have been, and are being taken by the various nations to remove this a very large crowd was in attendance and one who listened to the various speakers could but feel the need of doing their part to help rid our island home of this demon drink.

Signed, ONE WHO WAS THERE. Springdale, October 8th, 1915.

Prohibition at Grand Falls.

On Sunday night a few weeks ago a very successful meeting was held in the Town Hall to arrange for a Prohibition campaign for Grand Falls. It was there decided that a Committee should be formed, to consist of the clergymen and two other members of each denomination, making fifteen in all.

When the first meeting was held the question of an appropriate programme was introduced, and it was unanimously decided to endeavour to induce Mrs. Howland to include Grand Falls in her territory. Accordingly that lady, accompanied by Mrs. Benedict, wife of the U. S. Consul, and Mrs. Mitchell of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, appeared to address a mass meeting in the Town Hall called for Sunday, October 3rd, at 3.30 p.m.

Quite a long time before the appointed time had arrived there was a large crowd awaiting admission, and but a few minutes after the doors had been opened it was impossible to effect an entrance. Undoubtedly a goodly number were compelled to go away while inside the people were literally standing on one another.

The speaker of the evening, Mrs. Howland, was introduced by Rev. Loder, acting as chairman, and she immediately began a discourse that claimed the undivided attention of the audience for an hour.

The subject was presented in a manner of once forceful and tactful, free from any of the flamboyant virulence of the fanatic, yet strong with the sincerity and wisdom of the true zealot. It was the emanation of no warped or narrow imagination, but rather the matured ideas of a mind that viewed the question in a common-sense and equitable light. Viewpoints that previously seemed too trivial for notice assumed sufficient importance for intelligent consideration, while on the other hand some of the so-called disadvantages were shown to be quite shallow and small indeed.

The speaker's appeal to save the boys was one that could only have made a deep impression, showing, as she did, how the future of the country and the race lay principally in their hands.

The pace of the world's progress nowadays demands a clear intellect and a steady hand, and in the keen competition of modern commercial life the man who wins out is he who is fittest physically, mentally and morally. The influence of alcohol even in moderate quantities was shown to be detrimental under each of these three heads, while in excess it was an absolute crime against progress and civilisation.

An example showing the good effects of prohibition as contrasted with the evil of intemperance was cited in the case of North and South Dakotas.

The one was teetotal, while the other was not.

The progress of the one soon became marked as the decadence of the other, with the result that the common-sense of the latter swept away the barrier to its advancement and took its rightful place in the sun. Speaking of the moderate drinker the man who takes his drink and lets it stay at that—she said that to him drinking was a luxury, and he was the man who would be willing to deny himself in order that his less fortunate neighbour might be saved from himself.

Each one present felt a personal interest in the issue when the speaker asked: "Would you like your boy to become a drunkard?" and the heart of the parent could not remain unmoved at the question: "Would you like your daughter to marry a drunkard?"

After Mrs. Howland had concluded Mrs. Mitchell gave a short outline of the work done by the W. C. T. U. in St. John's, and suggested that any of the Grand Falls ladies who would like to help in the cause might stay after the meeting was finished and it would then be seen what could be done in that direction in the inland city.

A representative number remained and arrangements were made for another meeting, which was held at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Judge on Wednesday afternoon last and it appears that the response to the request was satisfactory, and there is every hope that that worthy society will have a very successful branch in Grand Falls.

Much of the demoralization arising in family life at meal time is caused by either the irregular coming and going of school children or the absence of this part of the family at the luncheon hour. The hastening away in the morning without time or care to appreciate a well prepared breakfast is an equal source of evil, but this lies in the hands of the homemaker alone to control.

Perhaps in this, as well as in other much talked of school reforms, the parents are chiefly to blame for not asking the assistance of school boards in this important matter. It is highly probable that if the subject of school lunches were brought practically to the notice of those in authority, something effective and systematic would be done. A request, even from each parent interested, sent directly to the central authorities, might work wonderful changes.

Why pay more for less satisfactory results? Incandescent gas is at once the cheapest and the best form of illumination. It is the cheapest not only on account of its low initial cost, but also because by keeping the air in a room constantly moving gas is a powerful ventilating agent and therefore a foe to doctor's bills. Moreover, being "artificial daylight" it does not exercise a deleterious effect upon the eyesight. Children can work or read with perfect safety and comfort in a gas-lit room, and parents may thus avoid laying up for their youngsters the headaches and general "lack of tone" which eyestrain causes.

Gas may claim aesthetic as well as hygienic value. Modern gas fittings have been brought to a very high standard of artistic merit, and can be designed to harmonise with any period of decoration or furniture. Gas means household health, economy and beauty.

Returning Officer. Oct. 15, 11

Trafalgar Day Fund.

A meeting of the Aero-plane Committee was held at the Board of Trade Rooms last night, Mr. W. G. Gosling presiding. It was decided that the Aero-plane Committee become the Trafalgar Day Hospital Fund Committee to take up a collection to be finalized on Trafalgar Day for the benefit of wounded soldiers and sailors. This collection is being taken up in response to the appeal of Lord Lansdowne, presented at Wednesday night's meeting of the Patriotic Association. Messrs. W. J. Higgins, J. Fenelon, H. W. LeMessurier, W. Reeves and D. Baird were nominated as additional members of the committee. The aid of the W.P.A. will be solicited in forwarding the work and the magistrates in the various outposts will be asked to open subscription lists. To augment the fund a concert will be held on Thursday night next, Trafalgar Night. Contributions to the fund will be received by Mr. J. A. Clift at his office Duckworth Street. His Excellency the Governor has already donated $100, and Sir E. R. Bowring, $250.

Prohibition.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Prohibition Canvassing Committee was held at Headquarters, Smallwood Building, last night. Mr. W. White presided over a large attendance. The main object of the meeting was the selection of members to carry on the canvass, distribution of literature, etc., and the following appointments were made:—
West End—Messrs. R. English, F. Woods, H. V. Simms and T. Pope.
East End—Messrs. W. Woodley, P. Joyce, J. M. Devine, G. Grimes, M. H. A. and J. Cochrane.
The city has been divided into eleven wards and two other men will be appointed at to-night's meeting when it is hoped all interested in the Prohibition movement will be present. The initial work in connection with the campaign will begin. Throughout last night's session much enthusiasm was manifested as to the successful outcome of the campaign.
The Finance Committee met and made arrangements for the collection of funds.

Sagona Back.

The S. S. Sagona, Capt. Parsons, arrived in port from the Labrador service last evening having been as far north as Hopedale. The ship made all ports of call going and returning and the round trip only occupied 16 days, fine weather being experienced practically all the way.
Capt. Parsons reports that the fishery on the northern coast is now practically over and that the fishermen have left Cape Harrison, Sloop Cove, Indian Islands, and Black Islands, but at other points they are making their fish before returning home. Several floaters, some of which were fairly well fished, were passed by the Sagona on the way south. Eight bankers are still at Beaulieu, two at Seal Islands and two at Hawke's Harbour. These vessels have been doing very well the past ten days on squid bait, some of them securing 80 quintals a day.
The Sagona brought a full freight, and as passengers Capt. W. Bartlett, Jr., Capt. Moses Bartlett, Mr. Sheard, Miss Taylor, Mr. LeDrew and some 200 fishermen who were landed at their homes on the way along.

Schooner Wrecked.

The British schooner Essex struck on Stag Island Rock yesterday and became a total loss. The crew were landed in the schr. J. R. Bradley. Both these vessels were engaged loading herring. The above information was received by Deputy Minister of Customs LeMessurier from Nipper's Harbor.

Why Your Home Needs Zam-Buk.

Apart from using Zam-Buk for Eczema, Piles, Ulcers, and Skin Diseases, hardly a week passes but some member of your family sustains some slight injury. Whenever the skin is broken there is danger of blood poisoning; and Zam-Buk applied immediately averts this danger.

Zam-Buk, the great herbal healer, does away with all risk. A stronger antiseptic than carbolic, yet causing no pain when applied. No germs can live where Zam-Buk is used. More than this, Zam-Buk quickly relieves the pain of sores and wounds, and the rich herbal essences it contains so stimulate the tissues that new healthy skin is formed and the wound or sore healed in a short time. This is why your home needs Zam-Buk.

It only takes a moment to apply Zam-Buk, and think of the hours, and perhaps years, of suffering it may save! Get the habit—tell your children where the Zam-Buk box is, they'll do the rest; because Zam-Buk stops the pain.

Zam-Buk is unlike ordinary ointments in that it is purely herbal. It does not contain harsh minerals, poisonous coloring matter, or coarse animal fats. Zam-Buk is Healing, Soothing, and Antiseptic—a cure for cuts, burns, bruises, piles, eczema, ulcers, pimples, cold sores, and all skin diseases and injuries. Refuse substitutes—see name "Zam-Buk" on box when buying. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or postpaid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Free Trial Box will be sent on receipt of this article, name of paper, and I. C. stamp. Address all applications for samples and retail orders to T. McMURDO & CO., St. John's, Nfld.

Amusements.

The Crescent Picture Palace presents Leah Baird in "An Affair for the Police." Everybody is mystified, a clever woman proves herself more clever than the police; she furnishes a big surprise, a Vitagraph special feature in two parts, "The Test," or "The Conviction of a Coward" is a thrilling sea drama by the Selig Company. "The Cowboy's Conquest" is a fine meta-drama featuring Isabella Rara. Two side-splitting comedies: "A Matter of Court" and "The Dentist's Janitor" make up this great picture programme. Mr. Dan Deimar who is delighting Crescent patrons with his fine singing will be heard in a new song to-day.

"TREY O' HEARTS" AT NICKEL TO-DAY.

The Nickel Theatre was crowded again last evening, but that is not surprising. To-day there is an entire change and it is even better than yesterday's. The fifth instalment of "Trey O' Hearts" will be presented. There is also a Broadway star film entitled "From Headquarters," which is in three reels. Anita Stewart and Earl Williams, the two favorites are playing the leading characters. This is a great story of life, love and honor and should be seen by all. There will also be a reel of the "Hazards of Helen" and a high-class comedy drama called "Poisoned." The Harmony Boys, Messrs. Huskins and Cairns will be heard in new songs. Extra pictures at the Big Matinee for children to-morrow.

TO-NIGHT'S FUNNY CONTEST.

The great Atlantis, Flak and Jack worked fast and furious last night and the applause showered on them was loud and long. The dainty little lady of the Globe changed her costumes again last night as she has done each night; in fact the two artists change nine times each night. They keep putting in new and startling tricks all the time. To-night the contest will take place and the reserved seats are going quickly. On Saturday there will be a special matinee under the distinguished patronage and presence of Lady Davidson and the Misses Davidson. Atlantis will have a special programme. The gorgeous electrical novelty and spectacular finish to the act is worth a great deal to see. Send the children to see this marvellous exhibition of skill and daring combined with the beautiful human butterfly. Look out also for a great posing statue act. The essence of refinement.

Eat Big Meals! No Sour, Acid Stomach Indigestion or Gas.

"Pape's Diapepsin" is quickest, surest stomach relief known—Try it!

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes. If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

Wedding Bells.

WALSH-HICKEY.

A very pretty wedding took place at Torbay on October 4th, by the Rev. Father St. John, Parish Priest of that place, when Mr. Thomas Walsh, the well known cabman of Patrick Street, was united in matrimony to Miss Lizzie Hickey, the youngest daughter of the late James and Bridget Hickey. The bride was handsomely attired in a dress of blue satin with hat to match, and was attended to by Miss Annie Bennett who also looked very pretty in a costume of blue; the groom was attended to by Mr. James Fitzpatrick who acted as best man. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to St. John's where the wedding supper was held; Miss Hickey is a sister of Mrs. Edward Dunn, of Boston, Mass., and also a sister of Mrs. John Thomas Morrissey, of Ohio.—Boston and Ohio papers please copy.

From Petrograd comes a detailed statement of German atrocities near Vilkomir, northeast of Vilna. A peasant who witnesses the affair tells of the trapping of a small body of 204 Russian soldiers. The men were all killed, and some of them when killed had their tongues cut out. The officers were especially singled out for ill-treatment. One of them, though lying on the ground wounded, was bayoneted several times. Another was bayoneted and buried alive, protesting to the last against the horrible form of death to which he was being subjected.

DOGS DESTROY HARES.—A few nights ago some useless mongrels entered the farm yard of Mr. Hieber Parsons of Hillvue Farm, Mount Pearl, and destroyed 49 valuable Belgian hares.

The officers, teachers and scholars of our Sunday School have been very busy for a while, getting the programme in order for the Rally Day service. The service took place on Sunday evening, 10th inst. Our Pastor, the Rev. T. B. Darby, was chairman. The programme consisted of songs, recitations and readings, each of which was performed creditably. Much credit is due to the perseverance of the Superintendent, Mr. Simeon J. March, and the organists, Mrs. Wm. Bursey, Mrs. J. Mursey and Miss W. M. March for the success of the day. There was a fairly good congregation present of both children and parents although the weather was very unpleasant, and every person went from the building pleased with the results of the evening.

We are again encouraged to see the train coming around the hills every morning and evening. We almost had her given up altogether a short time ago, but we find now that she has started in earnest. It is only what we deserve on this shore, and I believe according to our population we should have had the branch railway here before many of the other less important ones were built. I do not believe (according to the way things are going now) that it is going to be satisfactory to the public. It seems as if a passenger going on the train has to go in by the station and stand outside to wait for the train to arrive, if the train is behind schedule time (which no doubt she will sometimes), the passengers will have to stand in the cold until the train arrives; there does not seem to be any comfort in that.

There is another very busy spurt here just now. Practically all the people of the place are in their gardens digging potatoes. It would have been over by this time, had the weather been fair, but on account of the stormy weather, it is somewhat later than other years.

While the train was coming from Torbay to this place on Tuesday night, an accident occurred. While coming along near Caplin Cove in the dark, the passengers were suddenly surprised to see the train stop, and when they inquired about it, they found out that the train had struck a horse and killed it. There were two horses killed on the same passage.

Yesterday morning, Mr. Uriah Bursey, a prominent citizen of this place, his daughter and son took passage by the train, en route to the city, where he is spending a short vacation. He has been a fairly successful fish buyer this fall.

Our lighthouse keeper, Mr. Stephen Cramm, has a time off. He went to Bay de Verde a short time ago to take a steamer for St. John's. He spent a very pleasant time there and we find that he was one of the passengers on the incoming train last night. It seems that he is more than pleased with the running of the train.

On account of the recent storm, the Prospero could not call here while coming south.

The schr. Austin, Capt. Thomas Strong, arrived from the city a day or two ago, with a general cargo. The rest of our schooners are now waiting for a favorable time to come along. X.Y.Z. Old Perlican, Oct. 13th, 1915.

"It's Good to Be British."

THRILLING PICTURE OF THE AUSTRALIAN LANDING.

A thrilling personal story of the landing of the Australians on the Gallipoli Peninsula by one of those who took part in that world-inspiring feat of arms is published in the October number of the London Magazine. "It is good to be British!" exclaims the writer, Private Fred Fox, of the 3rd Australian Brigade, and it is an exclamation which will be echoed by all sons of the Empire who read his breathless narrative.

Leaving Egypt at the end of February, the troops sailed in transports for Mudros Bay, where they remained for some time waiting for the day. On April 25 the battalion was assembled on deck, and the commanding officer, Colonel Lyall Johnston, told them of the task for which they had been selected, adding gravely that they must prepare, in any event, to "do the job" and, if necessary, be sacrificed. Next day A and C Companies were taken to the beach, to H. M. S. London, which then departed, amid a storm of cheering from both the French and English transports and warships.

"We had a short service on the quarter-deck, in which the chaplain spoke most kindly to us, and then left to our own devices, we had a look around the ship. Some of the time was spent in playing cards, and there was also a good impromptu concert. As night settled down, we made ourselves as comfortable as possible and composed ourselves to sleep. All lights were of course extinguished. Very early on Sunday morning, April 26, we were roused, and went below where we enjoyed a fine hot meal, prepared for us by our friend Jack. There was no excitement; only a feeling of quiet confidence over the prospect of a quiet night's sleep. About 2 a.m. we were ordered to embark in the boats, which were drawn up alongside, with a steam pinnace to tow them. It was all very weird in the absolute silence, with a very pale moon shining. I have no idea how far we were from the shore, but we had steamed under the lee of the battlement for some time when the order came from the captain to "carry on" on our own. Now was the critical time; we hardly dare breathe. I shall never forget that night. There were three or four lines of us, with a space of perhaps 100 yards between, going stealthily and slowly towards the beach.

"Light Up To The Neck." The battleship faded from view, and through the gloom the hills, green and gaunt, loomed up. We felt that we had left all protection behind. However, we set our teeth, and wriggled to get into anything approaching a comfortable position, for we were packed in the boats like sardines. No sign of life on shore could we see, and we were becoming confident that we should land unawares and surprise the Turks. Suddenly a light flashed ashore, and was visible to us for about five minutes. We knew now what to expect. The enemy had spotted us; we were in it right up to the neck. The tension was relieved, and so I think, was every soldier. . . . We were about thirty yards away from the shore when the pinnace cast off. No sooner were the oars in position than—bang! from the right came the shrapnel. The Turks on the cliff and in the trenches were pouring forth a murderous fire from rifle and machine gun. The range was point-blank, and how they missed any of us is hard to say. No orders were given—or wanted—then. "Every man on his disabled at once jumped overboard. I handed my rifle to a sailor to hold, and went over into the water up to the armpits. The poor fellow was hanging my neck back to me when a shrapnel shell burst just overhead and killed him. It was a terrible time. Under the water was a network of wires, and we were slipping and tripping about frightfully. A comrade of mine went under; I grabbed him up, and after a struggle we managed to get ashore. This little incident was repeated all along the beach. The noise was beyond imagination; all hell seemed to be let loose. We were shivering with cold, but we wanted blood now. Off went the packs, the steel rang as we fixed bayonets, and, forming some sort of a line, up the cliff we rushed, regardless of the rifle or machine-gun fire. Nothing could stop these mad Australians now. "Advance, Australia!" went up the battle-cry. "Cooching and swearing, tripping and sliding, we were in among those Turks, and there was not one alive in their first line of trenches a quarter of an hour after our landing, on this amazing and glorious Sunday morning. No quarter was given, no prisoners were taken. Day was breaking quickly now, and after the terrific rifle rush we had an opportunity to have a look round. We kept in the captured trenches, which were excellent, stored with food and ammunition, and saw a slight which gladdened our hearts—dozens of transports steaming in, full of troops. The shrapnel and the snipers were still playing havoc with our landing parties, and the poor fellows were falling fast. Such heroism as those lads displayed may have been equalled—if it can ever be surpassed. It is good to be British! Some of our boats were adrift with the whole of the crew out of action. There were lots of our comrades lying about, too, in all sorts of positions, dead and wounded. Our medical officer, Captain Brennan, and his assistants were working like Trojans, but all they could do was to give the poor fellows quick first aid and leave them. All were heroes on that day. Our commanding officer came up, passed a word of praise and good cheer, and the brigadier was highly elated too.

Miracle To Be Alive. A counter-attack had to be met and down the side of the ravine hurried the troops, enemy shrapnel and snipers dealing out death all the time. Men dropped like ninepins, but on the troops went, fighting more or less "in bunches of three or four," with no chance to dig themselves in. "As long as the Turks were on the run, our reinforcements with ammunition, picks, and other impedimenta, had a sporting chance, for once they had passed the enfilading shrapnel fire on the beach, they had a comparatively easy time before reaching the firing-line. It was terrible, though, to see one's friends falling. We were comrades all, rendering first aid whenever possible, and our padre was as brave as a lion. . . . The firing of the Turks was wonderfully accurate; we could hear their officers urging them on in German. They had every range to a nicety, but as soon as they heard the click of the rifle when the bayonet was being fixed, they were off—officers and men as well. It was now about twelve noon, and we must have advanced a couple of miles. The firing-line now was very much strengthened, our 1st and 2nd Brigades having by this time got a lot of their men on shore. An Indian mountain battery had also arrived, and, with the guns of the battalions, was giving us great assistance. The earth fairly shook with the explosion when the big guns were fired, and the air was alive with bullets zipping over our heads. "Our advance was so rapid that the Turkish batteries found it rather hard to locate us with their shrapnel; in fact, in one case we were right on them before they were aware of it, and we took three howitzer guns, bayoneting the gunners."

Finding a small knoll, Private Fox and two companions halted for a bite and a smoke, but a sniper's bullet picked off one of the trio. Then on again, "advancing in rushes of 10 to 15 yards, then dropping and blazing away at the Turks, whom we could see dodging in through the bush." At last a piece of shrapnel in the knee placed the gallant Fox hors de combat. He crawled out of the fight, but, as he remarks, "to have lived through such a day and to be alive to tell the story is a miracle."

RUSSIAN CO-OPERATION WHEN TROOPS ARE AVAILABLE.

LONDON, To-day. Sir Edward Grey announced in the Commons yesterday that the co-operation of Russian troops in the Balkans had been promised as soon as troops were available. In his remarks, Sir Edward Grey, alluding to Serbia, praised the skill and courage with which she turned upon her foes and had driven them out of her country as one of the outstanding features of the war. Once again, he said, a crisis was upon Serbia and she was meeting it with the same splendid courage. Through Mrs. E. Murphy, Mrs. F. J. Murphy, Mrs. Smythe, Miss Beatrice Smythe, A. A. Carroll, Miss M. Cunningham, W. F. Puzer, R. H. Sparrell, S. S. Shattford, T. Montgomery, Rev. A. G. Greenlees, J. H. Carter and Max Black.

Dr. Geisel at Catalina.

CATALINA, To-day. Dr. Geisel lectured in the Orange Hall last evening, the building was crowded to its utmost capacity. Rev. Mr. Chamberlain presided and on the platform were Rev. W. G. Bugden and Mr. Harry J. Crowe. Dr. Geisel held her audience spell bound for nearly two hours, while she told in clear, convincing and eloquent manner the great need of whole men in the world of to-day and to-morrow and how we could build up a strong race. By charts she illustrated the destructive power alcohol has upon the human system. Catalina has listened to a more eloquent and practical address upon the evil of alcohol than that which was delivered by Dr. Geisel last evening. The lecturer closed her address with a strong plea for prohibition. A vote of thanks which was moved by Rev. W. G. Bugden was carried by the entire audience with great enthusiasm. Rev. G. S. Chamberlain, in presenting it to Dr. Geisel spoke very feelingly of his personal convictions of the sound and unanswerable arguments of the anti-alcohol doctor which he said were based absolutely upon scientific facts. Dr. Geisel addressed a large and appreciative audience at Little Catalina in the afternoon, the audience followed the lecturer with the closest attention. Little Catalina will go practically solid for prohibition. Mr. A. Butler moved, and A. Johnson seconded the vote of thanks. At the close of the meeting Dr. Geisel formed a committee of ladies to aid in campaign work. Dr. Geisel is holding another meeting in Catalina for women only and will speak on what every woman should know.

A large auxiliary committee will be formed with the officers, representing all denominations; the slogan of these workers will be "A day without the island, 1915 consumption stamped out by 1920."

Our Naval Reserve.

The total registration for the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserve to date is 1200. Of these 63 have laid down their lives for the Empire in active service, while others have died through natural causes and more invalided home. The total losses in the Newfoundland Reserve since the war began is approximately 100, so that the fighting strength is estimated at 1100 men. Of these, 75 are in training on H. M. S. Calypso and the others are on active service, all doing their "bit" for the Empire.

"CAN YOU AFFORD TO TAKE CHANCES?"

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, so the mighty giant oak, that cough, if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known where serious complications and fatal illnesses have had their start from a neglected cough or cold.

A cold is more than inconvenient—it is dangerous—so the big thing is to find a reliable remedy—one that will give you quick, satisfactory relief. There are many treatments that are recommended for a cough or cold but "STAFFORD'S PHORATONE COUGH AND 'COLD CURE'" is recommended to be the safest, surest and most satisfactory way to cure a cold, grippe, etc. Price 25 cts., Postage 5 cts. extra. THE GAS METER.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivash."

The Gas Meter is to mechanism what Baron Munchausen is to literature. It is inaccurate protected by a patent. It is also the nearest approach to perpetual motion yet discovered. Leave a gas meter absolutely alone in a deserted house for months at a time and it will work quietly but faithfully without stopping even for meals.

The gas meter is used by gas companies to prove that the consumer has been burning his lights all night and has been sending up balloons from the roof. It is a small box with face and hands like a clock. Here the resemblance stops, however. You cannot turn the meter back and it does not run down. It does 'you no good to neglect the gas meter. It keeps on going anyway. The man who will patent an attachment which will enable a man to stop his gas meter by forgetting to wind it will earn the gratitude of all mankind.

The gas meter brings light to the home, lightness to the pocket-book and aviation to the temper. Like the Bible, it is always causing trouble by being read from different standpoints. The only difference between a theological conference and the office of a gas company on the first of the month is the fact that the language used in the conference is used backward in the gas office. A man may be able to read Greek, Latin and home of some other family which is going to Europe. More than one gas magnate has had serious doubts about the truthfulness of George Washington, but he never doubts a meter until it fails to register anything. Then it is brought in to be repaired.

Gas meters have much influence on American families. They have made more people go to bed early than all the teachers of all ages. They have broken up more courtships than any other one thing. They also exercise a discriminating influence over literature. It takes a good story line indeed to hold a man's attention late at night while in the cellar below the gas meter is steadily clicking its way towards a record-breaking gas bill.

Meters are very strongly made and it is almost impossible to bias their judgment even with an axe. The confidence of a gas company in its meters is one of the most touching examples of perfect faith in the world. If a gas meter reports the use of 11,000 feet of gas while the family has been in Europe, the president of the gas company will not only accept its statement without question, but he will endeavour to place it in the

Armenians Are Almost Wiped Out Bryce Says

London, Oct. 7.—Replying to a question by Lord Cromer in the House of Lords yesterday, the Marquis of Crewe, Lord President of the Council, said that information which had reached the Government in regard to the massacre of Armenians was based mainly on statements from Tiflis. In one district, it was declared, the population had been absolutely exterminated, and the most terrible description was given of the condition of the country.

The Government, the Marquis continued, had no official confirmation of statements that German consular representatives in Asia had encouraged these horrors, but the statements had been made by an observer from the United States, and he was bound to say that, knowing what had happened elsewhere, there could not be said to be antecedent improbabilities that such was the case.

The Government had not thought, said the Marquis of Crewe, that any advantage would follow from an attempt to make either direct or indirect representations to the Turkish Government on the subject.

Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, said that such information as had reached him from many quarters showed that the figure of 800,000 Armenians destroyed since May was quite a possible number. Virtually the whole nation had been wiped out, he declared, and he did not suppose there was any case in history of a crime "so hideous and on so large a scale."

The means for saving the unfortunate remnants of the Armenian people, added Viscount Bryce, were to be found, he believed, in the expression of the opinion of the world, especially of neutral countries, which might possibly exert some influence on the German Government and induce it to take steps to prevent further massacres.

"The death of these people," said Viscount Bryce, "resulted from the deliberate and premeditated policy of the gang now in possession of the Turkish Government. Orders for the massacres came in every case direct from Constantinople. In some instances local governors being humane, pious men, refused to carry out the orders and at least two governors were summarily dismissed for this reason."

The Earl of Crewe quoted the British Consul at Batoum regarding appalling horrors which he said had taken place in the district of Sassoun, where the population was absolutely exterminated except for a handful of people who escaped to the mountains.

The Lord Mayor at a meeting at the Mansion House on the 15th will start a fund for the aid of Armenian refugees. Among the speakers will be Viscount Bryce, Cardinal Bourne and T. P. O'Connor, M.P.

The Loan Negotiator.

Thomas W. Lamont, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Company, and one of the negotiators with the Anglo-French financiers, was formerly a newspaper reporter. Lamont, who is the son of a minister, worked his way through Harvard as a newspaper correspondent, and at graduation secured a berth on the New York Tribune, where he was given the princely stipend of $15 a week. He made progress in the newspaper world and was soon holding down a $40 a week job. Later he came in contact with some big financial men and they took him into partnership. Eventually he came in touch with the late J. P. Morgan, who was so taken with the young man's personality and qualifications that he invited him to the firm. Lamont is only forty-three years of age. —Journal of Commerce.

Proud of J. J. Hill.

Canadians should feel a considerable measure of pride over the fact that James J. Hill, who played such an important part in the big loan to the Allies, was born in Canada. No man in the neighboring republic commands the attention and respect of the people of the country as does the former Canadian.—Journal of Commerce.

Professor J. H. Margon, who contributed to the Bryce report, told an audience at University College, London, recently, of an incident which led to the passing of the Army Sentences Suspension Act, by which a sentenced soldier can have an opportunity of redeeming his character. A sergeant who had lost his nerve was sentenced by court-martial to five years' penal servitude for cowardice. Before the sentence could be carried out the Prussian Guard made their attempt to break through, and in the fighting which followed the sergeant fought with such bravery that but for being under arrest he would probably have received the V.C. The sentence was afterwards quashed.
