To our Subscribers!

We are sorry to inform our readers that owing to an unlucky accident we had the misfortune to "pi" one of our forms just as we were about to go to press, and consequently we are enabled to present but half a sheet this week. Several first-class, brilliant and interesting articles are thus unavoidably left out, but we will make amends next week by producing one of the most lively, interesting and spicy papers which has yet left the office.

PAVING THE STREETS.

The principal subject now under discussion in the city of London the little, is the advisability of building Cedar block pavement on the principal streets. Our town fathers should see that Talbot street be paved as soon as possible. Various experiments have demonstrated the utter impossibility of procuring a substantial roadbed by throwing a few loads of gravel on the streets, in the spring and fall of the year, it would answer the purpose very well for a country town or village, but for a lively town like St. Thomas, where such an immense amount of traffic is constantly passing and re-passing over the public streets, the condition of the roads in inclement weather are a disgrace to, and a blot on the fair name of the town; the mud being in some places about a foot or more in thickness, and was to the unfortunate horse that stumbles, it is irretrievably lost. The citizens of Detroit have tried almost every kind of pavement and have come to the conclusion that the cedar block is the most substantial, long lasting and cheapest. The cost of building the pavement in Detroit is not defrayed by the corporation, but every ratepayer along the street paved, is taxed extra, and allowed four years in which to pay it, while the council pay for the construction of the pavement only at intersections of streets. This plan is found to work admirably. We have been ahead of London in Waterworks and almost every modern improvement for benefiting the town, and no doubt the council will awake from the lethargy into which they appear to have fallen, and take active measures towards improving, at least the principal street, by having it paved in a substantial manner, the sooner the better for the future growth and prosperity of the town.

Tuesday night a colored boy attempted to jump on to a locomotive of the Canada Southern at Amherstburg, but falling under the engine had both legs crushed, which were amputated, the one above and the other below the knee. It is thought the youth cannot recover.

Two girls, about fifteen years of age, named Annie Rupert and Hattie Graham, went into the basement of Wardlow's woolen factory, in Galt, and got on the top of a flange that is connected with a large revolving shaft moved by water power. They stood on this flange, with their arms around the shaft, in order to have a swing around with every revolution. Their dresses became caught, and they were in great danger of being drawn into the machinery. Miss Graham managed to extricate herself, sustaining slight injuries to her feet, but Miss Rupert, before the machinery could be stopped, had both her legs broken below the knee.

POEM.

The Deacon smiled a ghastly smile,
And thus she law laid down
If there's aught besides the flowing bowl,
I love, its known as Brown.

But Mack, he cast his eye askant,
And then did darkly frown,
He said I love to, but then I can't
Shoot yellow dogs in town.

The law has drove my love away,
The Deacon did reply,
Twenty and costs, it's hard to pay,
Said Mack, and rolled up his eye.

It is announced that Bob Ingersoll will not visit this town, consequently the stale egg market has resumed its former inactivity.

By special telegram we learn that no hopes are entertained for the recovery of Hon. George Brown, he appears to be dying, but suffers no pain.

The dog-tax by-law is to be strictly enforced this year, and unless your dog is provided with a brass tag after the 1st June he is liable to be made dogs' meat of.

Mr. Wm. McBride, (East End) at a match game of corporal pool, in Springfield, made a full game in one run, and had three balls remaining.

"Yer going to get some cotton to strain yer maple syrup through, are yer?" observed one farmer's wife to another, on the market. Why, I allers uses my petticoat.

A young lad named Phil Holman, who is employ'd in Green's Mill, had his hand cut very badly, and a finger taken off by a buzz saw, on Saturday last.

Alma College was inspected by the members of the Springfield Conference, of M. E. ministers on Monday last. They expressed themselves highly pleased with the magnificent structure.

Thomas Simmons, the furniture man, whose case of auctioneering without a license and remanded, was again brought before the P. M. on Monday last, and judgment reserved.

Mr. O. Coleman, landlord of the Widfield House, [Port Stanley road, was fined $20 by Mr. J. McKenzie, J. P., for liquor selling on Sunday. The offence was admitted and the tax paid.

A man in Montreal dropped dead a short time ago, after drinking a hot whiskey and water. And still St. Thomas people will not give up the dangerous practice of mixing water with their whiskey.

The wheel of a wagon containing a load of hay broke near the Elgin House on Tuesday last, by the side of the street car track. The cars were detained for some time till another wheel was put on the wagon.

On Saturday last a horse fell into a mud puddle on a Toronto street, and was drowned. Another warning to those persons who recklessly drive up Talbot street on a rainy day.

Mr. G. T. Clavis announces his intention of prosecuting any persons destroying property in the Opera House, or causing any disturbances in the building or neighborhood. This is a move in the right direction.

In chancery at Toronto on Monday last, the case of Lindop vs Parvey was argued, when it was decided to change the venue from St. Thomas to London. Mr. Harcourt moved to amend the bill and change the venue. Hoyle's contra.

POCOCK BROS.

The new Boot and Shoe Store, lately opened in St. Thomas, by the above named firm, has found favor with the people in every quarter. They are undoubtedly selling boots and shoes very cheap, and we would advise all to examine their goods before buying elsewhere.

If any action be taken this year towards procuring a suitable celebration of the Queen's Birthday, it is high time that the matter was taken hold off, and funds collected for that purpose.

The freight business on the railroads is very dull at present, owing to the opening of navigation, and the fact that the boats are carrying freight at very low rates. It is to be hoped that business will pick up.

There has only been one attempt to set a place on fire, three or four fights, and not a single murder, around Lucan for a whole week, and some of the old inhabitants are getting disgusted with the quietness of the place.

Mr. H. Ponsford was entertained to a supper by the members of the Forest Fire Co'y, on Tuesday evening, prior to the occasion of his departure for the "great lone land." He departed for Manitoba on Wednesday evening.

A namesake of the late senator Zack, of Michigan, is a great advocate of shirt making and plain sewing as an occupation for the fair ones of his acquaintance. He always gets through before he commences, and consequently remains stationary still.

Mr. Daniel Mahoney, of the Canada Southern freight office, was the recipient of a diamond ring, presented by his friends on the occasion of his departure for Milwaukee on Saturday last, where he has obtained a situation in the auditor's office of the Wisconsin Central R. R.

Notwithstanding that there are street cars, cabs, and other vehicles to convey sight seers around town, some of the country wedding parties prefer the old and time honored style of walking up the principal streets, hand in hand and chewing gum.

The present population of St. Thomas, is 8063, an increase of about 850, over that of last year. This town will soon be a city, and the east end girls say that they're willing to do their share towards increasing the population, if the young men will only brace up and get the marriage license.

In the Conference which was held at Springfield, we were grieved to notice that no reporter was appointed to take down the proceedings for publication in the REPORTER. Why is this thus? Harry Flowers says that when his church holds a conference he won't forget us in that manner.

Three copper colored individuals, otherwise Indians, got fooling around a couple of bottles of old rye on Saturday last, and in a short time the red men got very salubrious, and were treating the citizens to an exhibition of wild scalp dances, and yelling, and having a little picnic, when the police ran them in. Two of them, Summers, and Nicholas, have sought the seclusion of Castle Rich for a month, while the other, Duxtater, paid $5 for his little indiscretion.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

RICHARD NICHOL FATALLY KICKED BY A HORSE.

On Thursday evening a lamentable accident and one that will probably be attended with fatal consequences, occurred in Kettle Creek, near Bromell's Suspension Bridge, the victim being Mr. Richard Nichol, a teamster who resides north of this town and is more familiarly known by the appellation of "Farmer Dick." The injured man was in town during the day and shortly before seven o'clock he entered his wagon and departed homewards. Some time afterwards the horses arrived home without a driver whereupon the family became alarmed and a search was instituted, which resulted in finding the object of the quest lying upon the bank of Kettle Creek, partially immersed in the cold water. The sufferer was unconscious, and was as once conveyed to his residence; when Drs. D. and C. McLarty and J. Wilson were quickly summoned and after an examination the wounds were dressed. The injured man still lies in a comatose condition and his medical attendants entertain but slight hopes of his recovery.

From the position in which the body was discovered and the fact that his lungs appeared much clogged up, it is believed that he must have been immersed in the water, and although the cause of the accident is unknown, still it is conjectured that he must have stepped upon the tongue or been thrown out of the vehicle in crossing the creek and been kicked by one of the animals. There was a deep gash upon the left side of his forehead and several deep cuts upon the cheek, but the total extent of his injuries is unknown. The injured man was a very quiet and pleasant man, and much regret is expressed for the lamentable occurrence.

Tuesday afternoon a man whose name was not ascertained, while fishing on the bridge on Stony Island, was struck by an engine and knocked into the river. The man was an employee of the Canada Southern Railway Company.

A certain German contractor (as he styles himself) has lately had such success that it has impaired his intellect somewhat. He has been blamed for talking several of the St. David's ward people to death. We humbly protest against being murdered by any such means. Corks!

A house of ill-fame on St. George St., kept by a damsel who travels under the name of Lucy Fwings, but formerly occupied by that well known member of the demi monde, Josie Bain, was pulled by the police Tuesday evening, and the inmates taken into custody and brought before the P. M. on Wednesday morning. The fair but frail Lucy contributed $20 and costs towards the town treasury, and departed to reflect upon the mean, horrid manner in which she had been treated, while the "guests" were fined $5 and costs each, which was paid, one only not possessing a supply of the needfull, and he was allowed till to-day to pay up.

Mr. Alex. Henderson Jr., the well known and long established Soda water and Ginger Ale manufacturer has now secured commodious premises and improved machinery, and will this year be enabled to turn out an immense quantity of these popular drinks, of a very superior quality. He has secured the services of Mr. Bryden, who has the reputation of being one of the best manufacturers of soda water &c. in western Canada, and spared no expense otherwise in procuring all the necessary materials required by a first-class manufactory. Undoubtedly Mr. Henderson with the advantages which he now possesses, will secure the bulk of the trade for the coming summer.

Two prominent East End hotel keepers, one engineer and a well-known night hawk, merrily went a fishing on Tuesday last, leaving instructions behind to prepare for a large number of the finny tribe on their return. All day long the noble votaries of the piscatorial art were fishing, but alas, the fish would not bite. They hauled the seine and tried zets, but all to no purpose. At night four mud covered and disgusted fishermen returned to the East End with the spoils of their day's sport—one sickly looking fish and an old tin pan, which they had captured after dragging the mill race, and the boys all took sugar in theirs.

FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1880.
THE MINISTER WE WANT.
(Anxiously inscribed to the Presiding Elder.)

You told us: you remember, sir,
When you were here one day,
We each might choose a minister
And have it our own way.
And then you'd please us if you could,
That's what you said when here,
You'd send us one from conference,
To suit us all next year.

We've "many men of many minds,"
In our society;
And many women, too, one finds,
Who never can agree.
But they've been telling me their wants,
Each hope and doubt and fear,
And what sort of a minister,
They're looking for next year.

They want a man who's very rich,
He'll keep book agents then,
And never send them to his flock
For them to entertain,
They want a minister who's poor,
For then he won't be proud,
Too good to mix with common folks,
Or smile upon a crowd.

We want a man who lives on Faith,
If he's a new beginner,
Who, if his salary falls behind,
Of course will never mutter.
Do you know such a minister
As I'm describing here?
If so, I hope you'll send him down
To preach for us next year.

He must be pretty careful, too,
And not on bread and butter,
And tell it easy, 'bout that place
That's fixed up for the sinner,
For everybody now-a-days
Don't like the cast-iron teachings,
Of course he'll want to try and please,
When he comes here a preaching.

There's Deacon Grabb, he wants a man
To preach without his notes,
And neighbor Stubbs and Uncle Zeke
Will never cast their votes
For any man who cannot write
A sermon if he tries,
And read it off from end to end
And never raise his eyes.

Old Grandpa Spriggs is very deaf,
Can scarcely hear at all,
And so he wants a minister
To screech and scream and bawl,
While little Aunty Fusser
Is so flighty and nervous,
If one speaks above a whisper,
She never stays through service.

Then Mrs. Lofly, she has three
Or four great grown up daughters
She casts them out year after year
Like bread upon the waters,
But after many days she finds
Them gather about,
As old and sour and crusty
As when she sent them out.

And so she thinks a minister
For our church shouldn't be
A married man, with household goods,
And cares of family.
Well, then, there's Roxy Meadows,
So tall, and spare and wan,
She thinks 'twere best a widower
Should be our coming man.

We've got a big meeting house,
And a great big Bible, too,
And we want a man who knows it all
From Genesis, clear through;
A man who's been to Europe;
And been through school and college,
With a purse brim full of money,
And a head brim full of knowledge.

And thus I've tried to tell you
What the Uppertowners need,
If you know of such a minister,
Do send him with all speed.
As for myself, I promise you
I'll try to do my best
To be well satisfied if you
Will only suit the rest.

The Niagara Falls Gazette says:—A rumor has obtained circulation upon what is said to be good authority to the effect that on or about the 1st of May two through incoming western express trains on the Canada Southern Railway, which have hitherto run over the International Bridge to Buffalo, will thereafter be run from Victoria down the Niagara branch to Clifton, and thence across the railway Suspension Bridge where connections will be made with the Central. It is also reported that the manager of the Canada Southern Railway contemplates erecting a large platform on the line, opposite the Convent of Our Lady of Loretta, where trains will stop twenty minutes to allow passengers to step out and enjoy the grand view to be obtained from that point, it is the highest elevation above Niagara.

SENTIMENT AND SENSE.

Discontent is the want of self-reliance. With time and patience the mulberry leaf becomes silk.
Love is like honesty—much talked about but little understood.
The more we help others to bear their burdens the lighter our own will be.
If you would not have affliction to visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.
The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear.
You may shrink from the far-reaching solitudes of your heart, but no other foot than yours can tread them.
Nature makes us poor when we want necessities, but custom gives the name of poverty to the want of superfluities.
He that resolves upon any great and at the same time good end, by that very resolution has scaled the chief barrier to it.
Truth and purity, like so many gems in the life and example of the good man, cannot but shame and condemn error and vice in others.
It is easy enough to make sacrifices for those we love, but for our enemy we have to struggle and overcome self. Such a victory is noble.
Those who, without knowing us, think or speak evil of us, do us no harm; it is not us they attack, but the phantom of their own imagination.
Politeness may prevent the want of wit and talents from being observed; but wit and talent cannot prevent the discovery of the want of politeness.
Life has many ills, but the mind that views every object in the most cheering aspect and every doubtful dispensation as replete with latent good, bears within itself a powerful and perpetual antidote.
A persistent effort is being made this season in various circles of society here to entertain guests without giving introductions, but the effort has not been by any means inspiring. The custom is borrowed from England, where it is kept up in spite of the ill-success attending it. The average English are the reverse of companionable, and have so few of the traits which make society agreeable that they often enjoy themselves most, or are bored least—it means the same thing with them—when they do not feel obliged to be courteous to anybody, or to say anything beyond monosyllables. They think they can have a delightful time if they can spend an evening in standing around gazing abstractedly at the company, and drawing out to an acquaintance or two that the "thing is deucedly slow, you know, my dear boy," never remembering that they are part of, and directly responsible for its slowness. Americans are not much more sociable by nature than their Anglo-Saxon kinsmen, but they are quicker-witted, more sympathetic, more nimble of thought and speech, and less inclined to visit their friend's houses for the express purpose of being bored, knowing that they can be bored sufficiently without any additional effort. They go into society for a change, to entertain and be entertained moderately at least, and when they are disappointed they withdraw and repeat the experiment under more favorable circumstances. But many an Englishman, while declaring that he is bored to death, will stay an entire evening, with no prospect or hope of relief, till afterwards how much he has suffered, and yet be eager to suffer again in exactly the same way. No wonder they relish the absence of introductions. But we as a people do not, and can never be made to. We will not speak to men, much less to women, to whom we have not been presented, and we certainly will not hold a conversation with them. Our temperament restrains us, and we cannot at least we care not, to overcome it. With Frenchmen, Italians, often with Germans, it is different. They love to talk for the sake of talking; they use persons as an excuse for monologue or declamation. They are indifferent to introductions; they have no ice to break, no disposition that needs thawing. We are frequently made very agreeable and genial to another by introduction; but without it we are not likely to get on at all. We should, as a rule, prefer relinquishing society to going about accosting and pursuing people whom we do not know and often have never met before.—New York Times.

A manuscript supposed to have been written by St. Peter has lately been discovered among the property of a man named Bore, who died at Jerusalem, at the age of 109. The style of the work has led to the conclusion that it was authentic, and it is stated that the London Bible Society, which has despatched a committee to the spot, has offered Bore's heirs the sum of $100,000 for its possession. The heirs, however, refuse to part with the manuscript, though it seems probable that they will allow the society to reproduce and translate it.

NEWS ITEMS.

A cow belonging to Andrew Jackson, Russell county, gave birth to three calves a couple of days ago.

Captain Kirby, who formerly ran the passenger steamer between Port Stanley and Cleveland, has been appointed harbor master in the latter city.

A new and curious case of death from poisoning has occurred in Philadelphia. A young woman who wore colored stockings and shoes with copper nails, had her heel punctured by one of the latter. Inflammation immediately set in, and in a few days she died. Physicians do not know whether to attribute the poisoning to the stocking or to the nail, or to both.

One of the reasons for the great affection that men have for their dogs was illustrated in the story of the fire at Wilmington, N. C. on Sunday morning. The dog belonging to Capt. Ellerbach, who was killed, was found near the body of his master, and from the circumstance that he had a piece of Capt. Ellerbach's coat in his mouth, it was evident that he had perished with trying to drag the body from the ruins. The affection of master for dog is only a return feeling, for there is no more faithful animal than a good dog. As in this case he not unfrequently displays the unselfish devotion that most nobles man.

The Stratford Times referring to the assault committed by Jim Ryder, at the County Jail London, on a prisoner who had expressed his views not in conformity with Jim's ideas, says:—"It seems very strange to a person at this distance from London that prisoners awaiting trial should have the run of the jail so completely as to be allowed to go from cell to cell, and 'lick' those who offend their high-toned 'honor.' If the Ryders, Carralls, McLaughlins, et al, would turn in and give the jailor and bailiffs a jolly good hiding, it would perhaps have a good effect upon them, and give them an idea that it is well to maintain discipline behind the prison bars.

Adelaide Neilson, the actress, was lately going to the White Sulphur Springs, Va., on the steamer Bostona. The passengers stared at her in the cabin, and she retired to her stateroom, where she was joined by an actor named Compton. The Captain of the boat ordered Compton out, on the ground that the rules forbade a man visiting a woman in a stateroom. The indignant actress has published the following statement:—"Mr. Compton and myself were seated in my state room reading over the prison scene from 'Measure for Measure.' While going over the lines, a deck hand knocked at the door, and said that the clerk wished to see Mr. Compton. Upon Mr. Compton's going to the clerk, that gentleman told him he was violating the rules of the boat by being in a lady's cabin. I protested against such arbitrary treatment. I told the Captain that I had never had similar experience in all my travels here and in Europe, but as this statement had no effect, Mr. Compton and myself left the stateroom and walked the deck for two hours or more talking over the play. This is the whole story." Miss Neilson was formerly the wife of an Englishman named Leo, from whom she obtained a divorce.
