Her Ambition.

Eva Norrington inserted her latchkey in to the keyhole of a Bedford square boarding house and entered. It was a dismal, windy, rainy November evening, and ever since lunch she had been paddling about London, climbing the grimy stairs of newspaper offi-ces and talking to people who did not seem especially pleased to see her. Her skirts were wet, and a whisp of damp hair was tumbling over her eyes. On the hall table, disclosed by the flickering gas jet, were some as she closed the door against the wind. "Has he written or has he forgotten?" He had not forgotten. Eva picked up the letter from the hall table, looked quickly round at the closed hall door, and at the closed dining-room door, and at the baize door that led to the kitchen stairs-and kissed it. Then she went upstairs to her bed sitting room with the letter in her hand and a great joy in her heart.

"Hateful little room!" she murmured to perself as she struck a match and lit the gas. But it's the last time, thank God!" The room was not really bad-a bed in the corner, a washstand, a wardrobe, here by the window, rather rickety, on which lay a heap of manuscript—a half finished in the minor periodicals, and a happy meet-

"I will burn that before I go to bed tonight," said Eva as she caught sight of it. Then she took off her hat and cloak, drew sat down. Fingering the letter, she did not open it at once. Now that happiness stretched in front of her it was pleasant to linger on the confines of misery, to look back on the life she was to leave.

"It is not every one,', said Eva reflective-"who can make experiments in lifewithout expense."

Eva Norrington had been the pride of the ovincial town which gave her birth. At he high school no girl could stand against Her former governess, who now and then asked her favorite pupils to tea, even said she might be a head mistress one day. To Eva this seemed absurd. But when, at the age of 20 she gained a guinea prize for a story in a weekly paper, she began to think that at least she might be a great novelist. At any rate she felt sure that somewhere ahead of her stretched a career, and as her twenty-first birthday approached she announced to her startled parents her intention of going to London in search of it. Thereupon ensued a series of domestic scenes, such s have been common of late in the homes of England, wherein the parents play the part of the adventurous duckling. The duckling invariably gains its point, and so it was with Eva Norrington. Having refuted argument and resisted persuasion for a certain number of weeks, Eva obtained a grudging consent her departure. The townspeople knew not whether to admire or disapprove. But they had read in novels of young ladies who took their lives and their latchkeys into their own hands, became famous and married respectably after all. So during the weeks of preparation for her campaign Eva became something of a figure in local society, and more than one dinner party was given in her honor as well as plentiful advice as to the necessary precautions against London guile and many recipes for guarding against the colds induced by the fogs that infest the me-

Eva was almost happy, for she had the hopefulness of youth and beauty and all the exhilaration of taking her life into her hands and fashioning it as she would, with none to raise objections to the process. She would have been quite happy but for Allan Craig, who when he heard that Eva was bent on going to London to make a name for herself, promptly offered her his own as a substitute. It was a good enough name, and at the foot of a check it was generally respected, as Allan Craig had lately stepped into his father's business of estate agent and was prospering. Eva was disturbed, but she turned not aside from her project. She had mapped out her life and Allan Craig was not included in the

The details of it would only increase the delight of the letter, for Eva had learned during the last year that happi-ness is so rare that it deserves to be rolled It was at a dance on the night before her departure—her last dance, so she thought, be-fore she started life in earnest. They were sitting out a dance together, for Eva was not disposed to think unkindly of Allan, ough she might resent his intrusion into elbows on his knees and dug the heel of his dancing shoe into the carpet.

She lived sparingly, worked hard and never made the mistake of refusing invitations on the ground of work. She staid up a little later or got up a little earlier instead. Her stories found ing with an editor at a dinner party paved the way to her appearance in a widely read magazine. By the end of the year Eva Norrington had got so far toward the realization of her ambition that when people heard her tioned they wrinkled their brows and tried to remember where they had heard it before. At home, of course, her fame was great. The papers in which she wrote circulated freely in the town, her stories were discussed at afternoon teas, and townsfolk were glad to think that they participated to some extent in the literary movement of the And all this time Eva was horribly lonely. She knew plenty of people, and liked them. They were kind to her, some of them because they liked her for herself, others because they saw that she was marked for ultimate uccess. Having advanced a certain distance along the road she had longed to travel she could judge better whither it would lead her. | may look over your book and see just what It would lead her to a place in the newspaper paragraphs, to a place on the bookstalls, to a place in the photographers' windows, and to a place at Bayswater or South Kensington. This, then, must be the end of the that I was saving money all this time, and struggle and the turmoil of the fight. And victory would bring her no nearer to the actualities of life, for she had come to learn in the year's struggle that our social system by no means places women on an equality with men, and that whereas men can buy the I used to wear mittens. There is no fun in living your own life when that is precisely the life | in need of help, so I sent up twelve cents to you do not want to lead.

It was not as though Allan Craig had never kissed Eva Norrington. She opened the letter, cutting the envelope with her nail scissors, for some distinction must be made between your first love letter and your bootmaker's bill. She felt as one who has heald in his breath to feel what suffocation is like. The letter was long. Eva read quickly at first, then slowly, knitting her brows as she turned the pages and came "at last to the signature, " Ever your friend, Allan Craig."

The letter lay for some minutes in Eva's lap, while she looked vaguely round her

Canada is now seeking to increase her population by offering inducements to old world settlers, and we trust that her efforts will not be so successful that the foreign will not be so successful that the foreign element will outnumber the native. —Canadian cattle exporters are complain.

—Canadian cattle exporters are complaining a bit just now over the recently amended oattle regulation, by which American cattle can be shipped from Canadian ports in a space allowance of two feet six inches each, while the Canadian export must have a space of two feet eight inches. This difference in space allotted to each animal has had the effect of making a considerable difference in the cost of transport, the Canadian exporter having to pay fifty shillings a head, while the American can ship on the same steamer for forty-seven and a half shillings. In amending he regulations, the government must have overlooked this feature, as it is hardly likely that they would wittingly disciplinate against a native enterprise. Public School Examinations.

The public examinations were held in the different departments of the school in this town on Thursday and Friday of last week. The children in the Primary department, so ably presided over by Miss Homer, conducted themselves in a manner that convinced the visitors, who were present on that occasion, that Miss Homer is a very successful teacher.

The Yarmouth Wins.

The Boston Post of Wednesday last has the following: A pretty steaming race between steamers Halifax and Yarmouth, bound to the cities of the same name in Nova Scotia with large Captain Pye, emerged from the north pier of Lewis wharf, and after straightening out in the middle of the stream, started down the harbor, and was soon followed by the the harbor, and was soon followed by the Yarmouth, the former being about three lengths ahead. The distance was sustained by the Halifax until both vessels were going through the Narrows, when the fleet Yarmouth gradually lessened the gap, and when both vessels were going out by Boston Light, the Yarmouth had cut down the lead and was slightly in advance.

The Lawrencetown Creamery.

DEAR EDITOR,—Some remarks made by your Lawrencetown correspondent in the last issue call for some comment. The Lawrencetown Creamery is all right. The stock is about all taken up and the contracts for building and plant have been let on favorable terms. Building operations are being pushed forward briskly and unless it rains every day, and so prevents work, everything will be ready to commence cheese-making June 10th. All appreciate the importance of the dairy industry and the prospects are that a large business will be done.

It is provoking, however, to have disparaging remarks made by an individual like the Lawrencetown correspondent, who was never known to have a practical idea in his life. With all who know the writer, his remarks are perfectly harmless, but others might be influenced by them and we would suggest that it would be just as well for him not to meddle with a matter of which he knows but little and in which he can have no interest. Speaking of "White Elephants," it is generally thought by those best acquainted with him, that the Lawrencetown correspondent is himself a fine specimen of that interesting animal. eresting animal.
Yours truly,

There seems to be a well-grounded conviction among those who know, that increased facilities for books in our public schools are necessary to meet the demands there. Improvements are being made in the locality by painting houses, slingling roofs, removing old buildings, raising and repairing athers, setting out trees and shrubbery and making things in general look better.

We quite agree with the Lawrencetown correspondent in regard to the public schools having very advanced pupils. It seems adverse to the theory of the "greatest good to the greatest number." Perhaps if the teachers were fully qualified at the outset to teach the higher grades it might be carried on to better advantage, but while the teachers only study along with the pupils, not having previously qualified themselves in those studies, it certainly is a decided drawback to the general working of the schools as well as a slow and imperfect way for the advanced students and for the interests of the common school work. It really seems better that those scholars should patronize the higher schools and colleges for the acquisition of the knowledge required. Of course it is a good thing for the teachers who are thus permitted to tax their energiess the expense of time and temper, which should be husbanded for the effort of the larger number attending, for which they are presumed to be devoting those energies, while they are as the saying goes only "having their own axe to grind" at the expense of time and temper themselves for the work in advance of appearing before the pupils to teach the different subjects.

On Sunday of last week our community was saddened by the death of Mr. Charles Banks, one of the oldest inhabitants of this place. The funeral services were conducted on Tuesday afternoon by the Rev. E. P. Coldwell.

The special services here which were conducted by Rev. E. P. Coldwell, have been a great blessing. On Sunday, May 9th, seven were baptized and received into this church. One was also received by letter. On Sunday, May 16th, we again visited the baptismal waters, when one more happy believer was baptized in obedience to the Lord's command. May the good work go on. tion.

In the choir, the ceremony of installing the Knights of the Order of the Garter is performed. At the steps to the communion table is a plate upon the paved floor, which denoted that here was the temporary resting place of the late Prince Consort. On each side of the choir are the stalls of the knights, each bearing the name of the knight whose stall it is, his office and titles. Over the stall is a canony supporting the sword, hel-

Hill-Climbing on Bicycles.

Discussing hill-climbing, the "Bicycle Rider" offers some suggestions that are a fairly steep hill of a mile in length when out for a 15 or 20 mile spin is to begin by maintaining a steady tread on the pedals, pushing them over when at the top, and, e important still, clawing them round past the dead centre at the bottom, sitting in an easy posture and in a slightly forward position.. With this careful ankle action the best result is obtained, and the first half mile or more is compassed in comparatively easy fashion. A change of position may then be well back in the saddle, head back and arms straight, the rider now thrusts out forwards rather than downwards, at the same time keening the steering perfectly straight. A manner by the lower limbs; it is a complete change from the first position, and the rider soon finds himself at the summit, still fresh for the continuation of his journey. A steep bank, if at all long, should always be walked but if short may be ascended with moderate ease by taking a sharp spurt at the bottom, which, with a strong pull on the handles, will quickly land the rider at the top. To accomplish these spurts without sition of the rider, who must be well above his work with full play for extending his limbs. Those who ride with bent arms, apparently seated in a hollow instead of well up on the saddle, cannot expect to utilize their full powers. In touring it is always best to make a point of walking the greater part of all long hills, even if ridable in an ordinary way, for one long "grind" takes road, and if he is out for six or eight hours he should reserve his strength if he wishes to enjoy the journey to the full. There is one broad rule which may be taken as fairly well as the exterior of the circular flame. decisive on the question of hill-riding being harmtul or not, and it is this: If during the ascent the rider can keep his mouth closed the whole time he is not overstraining himself: but if the exertion causes him to gasp for breath it is distressing to the lungs and heart and is proved to be excessive—it would be far better to walk. For the sake of saving five or ten minutes it really is not worth while getting heated and overfatigued. thus to a great extent neutralizing the health-

Who should grow berries? First of all, farmers everywhere, for family use. Farmers must grow berries or do without. No one can grow them so cheaply as the farmer. About Tomatoes.

These vegetables should be grown in every kitchen garden, as they are not only most acceptable additions to the food supply, but very beneficial to the bealth. As soon as the danger from frost is over, the plants should be set out in deeply-turned soil. The Vegetable Garden.

The garden is the most productive acre of the farm. If it is not, it should be made so. It is the most indispensable part of farm life. Half of our living should come from life. Half of our living should come from our garden in summer. Not one-half the country people make an effort to have a garden. There are some that start out well in the spring, sow an abundance of seed and never look to the garden until they think it is time they should have results. They take a look and cannot find any, for the weeds have covered the little plants. Then they come to the conclusion that the seed did not grow. They say all sorts of things about the seedmen and mow off the weeds and wait until another spring, when they go through the same process. Now this is all wrong. To keep the garden clean we should begin early and continue the cultivation until fall.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

A Red Letter Year for 1897!

THE ENTIRE NOVELTY of many of the plans for 1897 is noticeable. For instance, the series devoted to London as seen by Charles Dana Gibson. Mr. Gibson has not before appeared as a writer. He visited London last summer for SCHIBMEN'S MAGAZINE, for the purpose of depicting with pen and pencil those scenes and types which the huge metropolis presents in encliese variety. Of like novelty is the first

Undergraduate Life in American Colleges. A series of articles touching upon leges. A series of articles touching upon the life of our older universities as represented by the doings of the students themselves. Judge Henry E. Howland writes on "Under-graduate Life at Yale." Mr. James Alexander on "Princeton," and Robert Grant and Edward S, Martin on "Harvard."

Japan and China since the War will be a most interesting group of articles richly illustrated.

The Unquiet Sex. Under the title of "The Unquiet Sex," Mrs. Helen Waterson Moody will write a series of articles: "Womman and Reforms." The College-Bred Woman," "Wo-man's Clubs." and "The Case of Maria" (a paper on domestic service), W. D. Howells' Story of a Play. In this Mr. Howells gives us the best novel he has ever produced in his delightful vein of light comedy.

Window boxes are more often failures than Window boxes are more often failures than successes. Why? Because they are not properly cared for. It must be borne in mind that a window box, from the exposed position in which it is placed, loses moisture very rapidly by evaporation. The wind and air get at it from below as well as on the side, ends and top. Only that side next the building is sheltered. It will, therefore, be readily understood, if one stops to think about it, that a great deal more moisture about it, that a great deal more moisture must be taken from the soil in such a box, in a given time, than it would be possible to stract from the soil in a pot or box whose exposure is less.
