Twenty-five years ago Cairo was an Oriental city. To-day it is a mixture, an amazing mixture, of East and West. Sit on the terrace of one What is perhaps the oldest hoodoo years of misbehavior the history of the first 30 and the last 30, of which the first 30 and the last 30, of which are now known but of which the intervening 2,940 are not, the spirit of the Egyptian Princess Hetare, priestess of Amen-Ra, has won a very signal victory. She has forced the staid directors of the British Museum to remove her mummy case from the vulgar gaze of the populace in the Egyptian hall, and to place it far away in seclusion. It took thirty years of appalling misfortunes to whomsoever came in contact with the royal sarcophagus to bring the Britons to this state of mind. While they will not admit that the misadventures which have overtaken all those who have day and you will see in the passing show the most extraordinary medley that the modern world has known, writes H. Hamilton Fyfe in The Lon-don Daily Mail. Here dashes a taxicab, and scrambling out of its way is a man on a donkey, who looks as if he came straight out of the Book of Exodus. He jogs along with a digni-fied air. You meet men riding on donkeys on every street. There are stands for these patient animals, just as we have stands for cabs. She had a half-brother who, on the death of his father, became Amen-Hetep IV. In his youth this young man became a warm devotee of the god Aten, and rejected the cult of Amen-Ra, the god of his fathers, and Hetare resigned from the priesthood to follow the faith of her half-brother. From that time she incurred the go in front of it. This is the last promenade of a man of no account. Yet the beggars cry with a will, "There is no God but Allah, and Mahommed is his prophet," and the police clear the way. The dead man is attracting more attention than he ever did while he was alive.

From that time she incurred the hatred and wrath of the great god Amen-Ra, who, according to the ancient story, decreed that trouble and woe should pursue her through all

Here in the Sharia Kamel I doubt whether you would see a camel, but just round any corner they are passing all day long and geting mixed up with the electric street cars, of which Cairo has an excellent service. Here, however, is a sight better than many camels—a magnificent rider in a regular Arabian Nights costume comes curveting along on a jingling Arab horse. seum to-day is not a munmy. In the East one always misses the charm of women's faces to which we are accustomed in Europe. But there are some women. They are nearly all in black, the only wear for the street among Moslems, and their faces are half-hidden by yashmaks, kept up by a curious brass or wooden nose-piece which has a very uncomfortable look. But here and there an inveiled Christian native with silver bracelets round her ankles carries burdens on her head or squats in a doorway playing with her children.

Outside the cafes sit Europeanized but mostly tarbushed Egyptians, discussing politics, with an occasional sheikh or well-to-do peasant in native dress. In this particular street, where tourists especially congregate, dragomans and street-sellers are annoyingly numerous. There is little need for an intelligent person to employ guides at all, but these nuisances do their best to keep up the tradition that no visitor can stir out by himself.

Thought the Disease was Cancer of the Stomach

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Cured Him

Sydney Mines, N. S., January 25th 1910 "For many years I suffered torture from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited my food constantly. The agony I endured all these years, I cannot describe and I lost over 25 pounds in weight. I also suffered with Constipation which made the stomach trouble worse. I consulted physicians, as I was afraid the disease was cancer but medicine gave only temporary relief and then the disease was as bad as ever.

I read in the "Maritime Baptist" about "Fruit-a-tives" and the cures this medicine was making and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say "Fruit-a-tives" has entirely cured me when every other treatment failed, and I reverently say 'Thank God for Fruit-a-tives'!"

"Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, increases the flow of gastric juice, strengthens the stomach muscles, and insures sound digestion. The wonderful powers of this famous fruit medicine at linear more clearly shown than in curing the apparently hopeless cases of Dyspepsia and Constipation. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c.
