CHAPTER VII.

GRIEF AT GEROME'S ABSENSE. TURCHI'S HY-POCRISY.

It was only when the servant threw open the door and announced Signor Turchi that the young girl, aroused from her reverie, rose hastily and went eager ly to meet him, as though she expected him to be the bearer of important news.

Mr. Van de Werve and Deodati met him also at the door; Mary involuntarily took both his hands in hers, and all three regarded him inquiringly.

'Alas! my friends, I know nothing,' said Turchi, in a voice which seemed but the echo of a bruised and broken heart. 'All my efforts have proved unsuccessful. I have vowed before God to save no expense or trouble in order to discover what has become of my unfortunate friend; but so far impenetrable darkness covers the terrible secret. What shall we do? Let us hope that the bailiff and his officers may be more fortunate than myself. who have only my anxiety and affection to guide me.'

The words of Simon Turchi effaced the last lingering hope from Mary's heart, and she seated herself, exhausted from previous emotion.

Turchi drew a chair beside her, regar ded with an expression of profound compassion, and said:

'My poor Mary, your affliction is in tense! I know by my own sorrow how your loving heart is suffering from this terrible suspense!'

The young girl lifted her eyes to his face, and she saw the tears running down his cheeks. Then she began to weep bitterly, and sobbing, she said: 'Thanks, thanks, Simon! I will beg Almighty God to recompense your affec tion and generosity.' presented a singular appearance, from mo has been disturbed and anxious; that the remarkable contrast between the even in the midst of cheerful conversa pallor of his cheek and the deep scarlet which marked the margin of the scar on his face. The hypocrite could shed tears at pleasure and assume an expression of extreme sorrow, but the scar was not submissive to his will, and in spite of him its deepening red betrayed the wicked joy of his heart at the gentle and effectionate words of the young girl.

These words encouraged him to hope that he might fully attain the prize for which he strove. He had, it is true, taken from his murdered friend the proof of the debt of ten thousand crowns; true he had, as he supposed, buried all evidence of his crime in the subterranean vault; but this did not satisfy him. In order to feel that he had received the price of the frightful assassination, in order to remain rich, powerful, and honor ed, he required the hand of the beautiful Mary Van de Werve. He well knew that a long time must elapse before the consummation of his hopes; still, from the very day that he had committed the murder he commenced to lay his schemes, weigh his words, and so direct his plans that sooner or later he would certainly take Geronimo's place in Mary's heart. He felt secure of the consent of the young girl's father. It was on this account that he feigned excessive sorrow, and gazed upon Mary with tearful eves, as though the sight of her grief pierced him to the heart.

He took Mary's hands in his, and 'Speak, Simon,' said Mary, anxiously. Tell us this thought.'

Signor Turchi cast down his eyes in feigned embarrassment.

'Impossible' Mary; it is a secret which have no right to divulge.'

'Alas! is even this consolation refused me?' she exclaimed. despairingly.

"This is unkind, Simon," said Mr. Van de Werve. 'Why do you cheer us up and awaken our curiosity only to cast us down by your silence? Give no names; but at least give us some idea of the reasons we have for hope.'

Simon Turchi shrugged his shoulders. 'Ah, signor,' said Deodati, reproachfully, 'you are ungenerous. This morning before 'change you were about to confide'the secret to me, when you were interrupted by the approach of friends. Tell it to me now.'

Simon glanced expressively at Mary, as if to convey the idea that her presence prevented him from complying with the old man's request.

'Mary,' said Mr. Van de Werve, 'I beg you to go to your room. These varying emotions are more than you can bear; if I learn anything of interest; I will, my child, communicate it to you at once.'

The young girl rose without reply, but she manced reproachfully at Simon Tur-

'Do not blame me, Mary,"he said;'I am deeply grieved to cause you pain; only rest assured that what I do is caused by effection for Geronimo and yourself.'

Without noticing this excuse the young girl obeyed her father, and slowly left the room.

'Now,' said Mr. Van de Werve, 'what s the secret you wish to impart to us? 'I am greatly embarrassed,' replied Simon Turchi, shaking his lead doubt fully; 'my intention was to speak only to Signor Deodati of the affair; perhaps it would be indiscreet in me to reveal to vou also, Mr. Van de Werve, a secret which, under different circumstruces-'For the love of God, abandon these useless evasions!' said Signor Deodati, roused to a high pitch of excitement by his impatience. 'Why should not Mr-Van de Werve know that which, in your opinion, would give us a clue to my neph-

'Since I am forced to speak,' said Turchi, with a sigh, 'approach and listen.'

As soon as Deodati and Mr. Van de Werve had drawn their chairs nearer to him, Simon said in an undertone, as if he feared his words might be overheard:

'Have you not remarked, Mr. Van de Simon's countenance at this moment Werve, that for some time past Geroni- ful death? tion he appeared absent-minded; in a word, that some great trouble seemed weighing upon him.'

I have noticed it, said Mr. Van de

'And you, Signor Deodati?'

'I have also remarked it. But what do you infer from this?

'About a month ago I interrogated Geronimo as to the cause of his melancholy, and he informed me in confused, vague terms, that he had lost a considerable sum at play.'

'At play!' exclaimed Mr. Van de Werve, overpowered by astonishment. 'Was Geronimo a gambler?' exclaimed

Deodati, with ill-suppressed indignation. 'It is the custom at Antwerp to play for money, and often for consideable sums of money,' continued Simon Turchi. 'I never remarked that my friend Geronimo had a passion for play. However that may be, I could never discover to whom he had lost the amount, nor would he tell me how much it was. His melancholy look and agitation were caused by the circumstance I have just mentioned. He was tortured by the certainty that his uncle would discover, upon examination, the loss of a large amount, which was not accounted for on his books. I proposed to advance him the deficit, but he absolutely refused, because he preferred to meet his uncle's just anger rather than deceive him.'

This revelation was stunning to the old Deodati. Nothing could have more morrow I will collect all my agents at keenly wounded the honorable, hightoned nobleman than the thought that Geronimo had been so dishonest and ungrateful as to use the funds of the might discover it by an examination of the books.

There was a short silence. Mr. Van de Werve's eyes were fixed upon the ground. Signor Deodati passed his hand said: across his brow, and was absorbed in painful thoughts.

Simon watched for a few moments, with an inquisitive eye, the effect of this revelation upon his two companions, I was about to learn from your lips that trying to penetrate their very souls. Then he said to Deodati:

'You look on the bad side of the affair, signor. 'Could he so lightly have sacrificed my daughter's love?' said Mr. Van de Werve. Were his expression of affection for her only hypocrisy? No, no; nothing can inauce me to believe that.'

'His love was real,' replied Turchi, and its very depth, perhaps, blinded his judgment. He thought that the discovery of his losses at the gaming table would mevitably deprive him of all hope of Mary's hand. My poor friend! he wished to fly from the fate which threatened him, that he might not witness the affliction of his beloved uncle.' No one replied to Simon's remarks, and he said, with hypocritical surprise: 'How sad you both are! You should rather rejoice at my revelation. Is it not a happiness to think that Geronim o, although guilty of a fault, is still alive, and not to be forced to believe that he is forever lost to our affection by a fright-

'My friends, I must leave you; my mind is troubled; I am' ill. Besides, I wish to discover by the books the truth or falsity of Signor Turchi's statement. Do not attempt to detain me, I beg you. Adieu! May God guard you!'

Simon Turchi prepared to accompany the old man; but whilst they were speaking together the bailiff, Messire John Van Schoonhoven, suddenly entered, and without the formality of a salutation he exclaimed:

'Gentlemen, I have news!'

Turchi trembled and turned pale; but as the unexpected appropriement of the bailiff had startled the others, his emotion was not attributed to terror.

'For the love of God be calm, gentle men, and do not anticipate too much. do not know what has become of the unfortunate Geronimo, but I have just cause to hope that we will soon find him at least we have a clue. I have learned, beyond doubt, that on the day of his disappearance, about five o'clock in the evening, he was seen beyond the Square of Meir. A monk from the Dominican Convent, who knows him well, saluted him and noticed the direction he went. Acting upon this information, one of my most intelligent subordinates has been tracing him. A banker saw him pass through the quarter of the Jews. This is all I know at present, but these facts are sufficient to determine the direction of our researches, and may pereaps lead to a fortunate issue. I have little hope, little hope, signor; but all things are possible,' said the bailiff, shaking his head.

Deodati took his hand, and said:

'Messire Nan Schoonhoven, I am most grateful to you. Excuse me for not remaining longer in your honorable company; but I am indisposed, and I must return home. May God protect you, signor,'

'And are you going also, Signor Turchi?' asked the bailiff.

When Simon gave him to understand, by a glance of the eye, that he could not let the old man go alone, he took his hand effectionately, and said:

'I understand, signor; you are right. Adieu! until to-morrow.'

Turchi offered his arm to Deodati, and supported his tottering steps. They took leave of Mr Van de Werve, who accompanied them to the door, and admiring Simon Turchi's kindness, he followed them with his eyes as long as they were in sight.

CHAPTER VIII.

SIMON TURCHI TRIES TO CONCFAL HIS CRIME.

After having accompanied Deodati to his residence, Simon Turchi went to his own dwelling near the bridge "De la Vigne".

He was greatly excited, either by extreme anxiety or by a feverish impatience; for he descended to the groundfloor, entered his office, pretended to be looking for some papers, went up stairs again, paced the room, opened the window, looked up and down the street, closed the window petulantly, and at last, stamping his foot, he angrily ex-

'The miserable gamester! he is in some tavern drinking, gambling, amusing himself, while I am here on burning coals, almost overpowered by anxiety and terror! Julio, Julio, if I escape the fate which now threatens me, I will have my revenge for your ingratitude!

Again he went to the window, and gain he was disappointed. Thoroughly discouraged, he threw himself on a chair, heaved a heavy sigh, and after a moment's silence exclaimed in accents of 'Alas! alas! is it then true that my crime cannot remain concealed? Who was it. to my great misfortune, who sent the Dominican brother just to the spot to meet Geronimo, and thus furnished the bailiff with a clue to the murder? Who put the Jewish banker on his track, so that the constables might be led to my garden? Who suggested the idea to the bailiff to search the cellars? Was it chance? But chance is blind, and does not proceed with such precision to the fulfillment of a purpose. How frightful if God himself conducted justice! if the Supreme Judge, who cannot be deceived has condemned me to an infamous death! How vain then all hope, all ef-

JOHNNY'S LETTER,

BY PAUL FEVAL.

We are glad to give our readers the enjoyment of this beautiful little story, which is a translation of the great French writer's "Jean et sa lettre—a love gift in our dear Lady's honour for the month of May.

'Sure enough,' he muttered to himself; 'there's poverty, and no mistake, in this Paris of ours! What's your name, mannilliams and Pere Andre ever and again kin? he added, aloud.

'John.'

'John who?' 'Nothing but John.'

Papa Bouin shrugged his shoulders. 'And what do you want to say to your of your heart? Blessed Virgin.'

'I want to tell her that mother has been asleep ever since four o'clock struck yesterday, and I want her to wake mother, if she will be so kind-for I can't.'

The old soldier felt a tightening in his throat as he listened. He was afraid to understand the boy. However, he asked again, 'What were you saying about soup, just now.'

I said, that is what we want so much. Before she went to sleep, mother gave me the last bit of bread we had in the house.'

'And what had your mother had to eat.

'Nothing at all, for two days. She said she was not hungry.

'What did you do, when you tried to wake her.'

'Why, I did as I always do: I went to her and kissed her.

'Was she breathing.'

Johnny smiled. How sweet and pret-'I don't know,' he said. 'Don't we al ways breathe.

Old Bouin turned away, for he felt the tears start into his eyes. Instead of answering, he said, while his voice trembled somewhat.' 'When you kissed her, did you notice anything. 'Yes, she was very cold; but it is very cold in our honse.'

'And was she shivering at all?'

Oh, no, she was quite still. She looks so pretty and white. Her hands are across her chest, and her head is thrown back on the bolster, so that her eyes, not quite shut, seem as if they are looking up to heaven.

Daddy Bouin thought to himself: 'I have envied the rich-I, who have plenty to eat and drink and here is one his knees and was pinioned, he meanwho died of hunger!'

He beckoned to the child set him on his knee, and putting an arm around him, said, very gently: 'Little one, your letter is written, and sent, and received, "and answered Take me to your moth-he added, wonderingly, 'why are you to pass through the door which went in-that men cry? Ah, it is you who will ness:cry, poor little urchin! But do you know. Jeannot, I love you as if you were my own. I don't know what's come to me, to be such o soft-hearted simpleton, un--Well, I had a mother once, Johnny; and I can see her now as I saw her dying- 'Paul,' she said, 'be an honest man and a good Christian.' A picture of our Lady hung by her bed. Our Lady was smiling, and I loved that picture. Well, I have lived an honest man, but as for being a good Christian-why,

I am nothing to boast of, that way. He got up, still holding the boy in his arms. 'Now, then, my dear old mother,' he continued, 'you may rest content. Comrades may laugh, if they please. Where 'you' are, 'I' mean to go too, when my time comes, and I'll see that this little lad will get there also. He shall never leave me, never! and all because this sly letter of his, which has never even got written, has 'killed two birds with one stone'-found a father for him, and a heart for me!

And this is all.

But that poor woman who had died of want_who was she? I know not. But there is, somewhere in Paris, a man, still young, who is an editor also, a redacteur, but not after the manner of Papa Bouin nor in a tiny shop. He writes and 'edits' many eloqent things, and his name is known to us all. Let us call him, as formerly, John-nothing but John.

Papa Bouin is a very happy old man. He is not merely the 'honest man' he has always been, but a good Christian too. He rejoices in the fame of his 'Jeannot', as he still sometimes calls the illustrious son of his adoption; and he says (for it is he himself who told me this story without beginning or ending), I don't know what postman may carry letters of that sort; but anyway, they surely reach their address in heaven.'

BIEL'S LAST WORDS.

A Translation of Riel's Last Statements on the Scaffold.

Rev. Pere Andre gives the following report of the last words of Riel before he took his position on the drop.

Riel knelt on the floor beside the door eading to the scaffold. In his hand was an ivory crucifix, silver mounted, which he frequently kissed. Father McWilsprinkled holy water on the condemned man. Riel was pale-deadly pale-and hii face looked most intellectual.

Father Andre (in French)—Do you pardon all your enemies from the bottom

Riel-I do. mon pere; I pardon all my enemies for the love of the good God.

Futher Andre—Have you any sentiment of malice, any feeling of malice against any one?

Riel-No, my father, I forgive all. Father Andre-Do you offer your life as a sacrifice to God?

I do, mon pere.

Father Andre-My child-the flesh is weak and the spirit strong, do you repent you all your sins of thought word and deed?

Riel: I do my father—I have committed many sins and I ask my God,s pardon for them all in the name of Jesus, Mary and Joseph.

Father Andre: You do not wish to speak in public? You make that a sacrifice to God?

Riel-Oui mon pere. I make to my God as a sacrifice the speaking to the public in this my last hour.

Father Andre-God has been good to you my son to give you an opportunity ty his little face looked when he smiled. of repenting; are you thankful for this.

Riel-I thank the good God that in his Providence He has enabled me to make my peace with him and all mankind before I go away.

The two clergymen then placed their hands on his head and pronounced the absolution.

Riel then in an effective and childlike way prayed to God to bless, his mother, his wife, his brothers, his friends, and his enemies. "My father bless me," he said looking up to heaven, "according to the views of Your Providence, which are ample and without measure." Then addressing Pere Andre: "Will you bless me Father."

Father Andre blessed him, as did Father McWilliams. He then rose from while praying and the clergy praying When he was ready to pass out to the scaffold Pere Andre said to him in French "There, go to heaven." (Bon! Allez au Ceil.) He then kissed Pere Andre on the lips, and Father McWilliams embra ced him, giving him the side of each 'Yes,' said Johnny. 'But, monsieur,' cheek. Riel then said, ere he turned to that room built of course lumber, and 'Nonsense! I crying?' answered the which, as Pere Andre said, was for old soldier, hugging the boy, while his him the poor dingy portals of eternal tears fell like rain. 'Do you mean to say day and unending peace and blessed-

> He now stood on the drop. The cord is put on his neck. He said, "Courage mon Pere."

Pere Andre in subdued tones.—"Courage! Courage!

They shook hands with him as did Dr. Jukes, and Riel preserving to the last that politeness which was so characteristic of him and which was remarked during the trial said.

"Thank you Doctor."

Then he prayed in French. "Jesus, Mary, and Joseph have mercy on me. J'espere encore. I believe still. I believe in God to the last moment."

Father McWilliams-"Pray to the Sacred Heart of Jesus."

Riel_Have mercy on me Sacred Heart of my Jesus! Have mercy on me. Jesu Marie et Joseph assistez moi dans mes derniers moments, assistez moi Jesus, Marie et Joseph!

Father McWilliams held the cross to him which he kissed.

Mr. Deputy Sheriff Gibson-Louis Riel have you anything to say why sentence should not be carried out on you?

Riel, glancing where Pere Andre stood about to ascend the staircase anxious evidently to leave the painful scene, said in French, "Shall I say something."

Pere Andre-"No." Riel (in French)—Then I should like

A gentleman, who was habitually guity ro liberties with the Queen's English, was returned as member for a colonial parliament. Delighted with the importance of his new position he rose on the first chance that offered tomake his maiden speech. "Gentlemen," he said, by way of introduction, "what have we before the 'ouse to-night?" "I think we have 'h' before the 'ouse, gentlemen." was the prompt reply of a witty but rude member of the opposition.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Recently a new boot has been introduced by a British manufacturer, in which a single spring is placed at the back of the boot, in the space above the heel. The elastic is said to be safer liable to wear out and to give the ankles more freedom to move.

Within a few months past markings have been seen on the surface of the relate to this importance and timely subsurface of the planet Venus which gives promise that we may be able to learn something concerning the poles, the mountains, the continents and the seas of that distant world. Mr. Trouvelot has discovered what he regards as probably the snow-clad summits of mountains thrust up through the cloudy atmosphere in the neighborhood of its poles. The mountains, if they exist, must be of its cost in labour, which is very nearly amazing height.

Herr Wenstrom, a Swedish engineer, has invented a machine for separating iron ore, apparently one of great utility. A hollow. cylinder is caused to rotate horizontally by means of cogwheels at its ends. In the centre of the cytinder is a kind of drum of iron bars which is made highly magnetic by an electrical apparatus. Iron ores are fed over the cylinder as it rotates, and the fragments adhere to it so long as the magnetic ac tion of the iron drum suffices to offer the necessary action, but fall off on the reverse side in three distinct heaps, according to the richness. The feeding must be done very carefully and the ores must first be crushed. The power required is very small.

The valley of Limagna, in Auvergne, affords a striking instance of the important functions which certain winds perform in fertilizing the ground. There the prevailing west and southwest winds traversing the chain of Domes, which contains vast deposits of volcanic ashes, carrying much volcanic dust to the valley, where it settles. As this dust contains a large proportion of phosphoric acid, potash, and lime it constitutes a manure of a very high fertilizing quality, and its minute state of subdivision admirably adapts it for ready assimilation amount of filth to be deodorized, and the by the soil over which it is distributed, length of time during which they will rendering the valley remarkable for its be effectual will depend upon local convegetation. The annual ash deposit ditions, there is estimated at from 348 to 400 grams per square metre.

A St. Louis man has invented a new instrument for the deaf. It consists of a contrivance which can be located in the handle of a cane, umbrella, parasol or fan, and which, when placed to the ear of a deaf person, will cause him or her to hear any sound audible to the ear of a person who is not afflicted with deafness. The device which produces these effects is a tube about six inches long. In the tube is a cone shaped electric coil beginning at a small battery at the lower end of the tube and terminating in a bird's bill. The vibration of this coil causes multiplication of any sound or noises passing into the tube through several slits, in the side of the cane. It is simply a multiplication of sound by electricity and the projection of a steady current of electricity against the weakened or paralyzed nerves and tissues of the ear. There it no degree of deafness in which a man cannot hear with this.

THE ANTICHINESE CRUSADE.

The London Times, commenting on the anti-Chinese crusade on the Pacific coast says, "If Chinese immigration into the United States was thoroughly blocked for a period the Chinese might meet with favorable opportunities at home and their immigration into the United States altogether diverted. The attempt to turn back the tide of foreign colored labor by the means resorted to by mobs in the western part of the United States is odious, and the injustice done Chinamen in the recent attacks upon them is an act of spoliation committed against the world at large.

A young lady being very fussy about having her shoes small and neatly-fitting, her stern aunt said: "In 'my' time the men looked at the women's faces instead of their feet!" "Ah, but my dear aunt," retorted the pretty young lady, "you see that the world has improved, and is more civilized than it used to be-it looks now more to the understanding

At a negro wedding, when the min ister read the words "love, honor and obey," the groom interrupted him and said: "Read that agin, sah; read in wunce mo,' so's de lady kin ketch de meaning. I'se been married befo'."

"Has my client anything right," ask a counselor, out of patience of a brother wrangler at the bar. "I know not," was the response. But one thing is certain-have nothing left."

AGRICULTURE.

News of General Interest. Culture of Wheat.

Now that farmers are contemplating the sowing of wheat, and at the same there from friction, and therefore less time considering the very unprofitable price at which grain selling and the poor hope for any advance, it is well that they should study the various quetions which ject. There is too much wheat on the market if we take one view of it; or, if we take another view of it, the cost of wheat is too great for profit. Which is most likely. A farmer whose wheat costs him 40 or 50 cents a bishel can make money even at the present low prices. The cost of wheat is regulated by the quantity grown per acre; or, in other words, by a fixed sum per acre. The farmer who grows 30 bushels per acre produces wheat at about 1 the cost of one who grows only 20 bushels. It is clear the lone farmer has nothing to complain of in res pect of the present value of wheat, it is ruinons .o the other.—N.Y.Times

> Agricultural Notes. A soil may be abundantly rich in everything except for instance, phosphoric acid. Ten dollars worth of dried bones applied to such a soil will be of more value than a hundred dollars worth of ordinary putrescent manures. The ground bones in supplying phosphoric acid, meet the deficiency, the only deficiency, of the soil; the putrescent manures, heavily applied, meet the deficiency also; but they increase ten fold the labor and expense by supplying at the same time otner things not needed.

A pound of nitrate of lead will when dissolved in the same way, cleanse sinks, drains, etc. Chloride of lime 18 also effectual, or a layer of charcoal dust will prevent offensive odors arising from decomposing substance. The quantity of these substances will depend upon the

THE PRESS-THE PEOPLE'S DUTY .-- If you wish to have an honest press you must honestly support it.—Archbishop MacHale.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1885.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. The mayoralty contest is the general topic of discussion.

The American Press is loud in its praise of the brave and Christian spirit in which Riel met his death.

It is said that the membership of the National League in Ireland is increasing at the rate of 25,000 a week. Already there are about 400,000 enrolled under its banners.

King Theebaw of Burmah has sent a very defiant reply to the ultimatum of England and the outcome of the whole affair, which now looks very serious, is difficult to forecast.

This month, which has been set apart by our Holy Mother the Church for special prayers in behalf of the suffering souls in Purgatory is near its close and those Catholics who have departed friends, and who have not, should secure Masses for the poor souls "that they may be loosed from their sins." No of Nazareth warmed by the breath of

The scheme of the enterprising people of Fargo to open up a navigable water way between their city and Winnipeg will." Throughout the Archdiocese of should be warmly encouraged by our cor. poration who have just been communicated with regarding the project. The advantages which Winnipeg and the Northwest would derive from such a commercial highway easily suggest them-

Some of our contemporaries, who are writing disquisitions on the Papal Encyclical should await the full text of this important document. The fragmentary cable report now before the public and which appeared in these columns last week, was furnished by the New York ·Herald' correspondent at Rome, and is very unsatisfactory. Some of the passages from the letter should be taken, as the saying is, "cum grano salis;" we might say with several large grains.

This graceful compliment to our illus trious Archbishop appeared in the editorial columns of the "Manitoban" on Wednetday evening last-

"On Sunday Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, celebrated the 26th anniversary of his accession to the episcopacy. The Catholic Church in Canada rejoices in the possession of a number of veteran workers, such as Archbishop Lynch. Among them there is none of whom she has more just reason to be proud than of our own Manitoba Archbishop-Tache.

In the death of Vice President Hendricks, the news of which comes to hand as we go to press, the end has come to a career that has been unselfishly devoted to its country. Mr. Hendricks the chief council of the land by his ster. ling patriotism and conspicuous ability. His death will be sad news to the people dricks so warmly and recently identified

It is to be hoped that the lecture to Rev. Father Drummond, on the 6th of next month, will not be forgotten. Apart from the pleasure of hearing this learned securing funds with which to alleviate the sufferings of the poor during the coming winter, which threatens to be a trying one, ought to ensure a large audience and a substantial collection.

HIS GRACE.

Monday last, the 23rd instant, was the 34th anniversary of the consecration of His Grace and the occasion was made one of rejoicing by the people of St. Boniface, who on all occasions of note show their profound love and affection for their beloved Archbishop. On the active and indefatigable labors of His Grace (who was one of the foremost among the pioneers of Christianity in the Northwest) in the propagation of the faith it is not necessary to dilate, for the press of the country, for the past decade at least, has teemed with praise of his brave Christian deeds and sterling piety, and our readers must themselves be familiar with his heroic career as a missionary and since his call to the episcopate. The name of Archbishop rache is inseparably associated with the marvelous growth of the Church in the Northwest which to-day is a memorial of the striking success of his labors. In honor of the event High Mass was celebrated in the morning in the Cathedral, sung by His Grace himself and in the evening a very interesting literary and musical soiree was given at the College of St. Boniface, which was largely attended by the people of the town. The entertainment, a full account of which will be found elsewhere, was a rich treat, the students showing great familiarity with the Greek and Latin Classics by the really marvellous precision with which they responded to the interrogatories of Rev. Father Bellivau. This certainly greatly redounds to the credit of the Jesuit Fathers who conduct, the College and who as teachers, the world over, stand first in the front rank. After some very graceful remarks from the Archbishop, expressive of his thanks and delight, the audience dispersed with heartfelt congratulations for His Grace.

ADVENT

To-morrow (Sunday) the 28th inst., will be the first Sunday in advent, the beginning of a season during which all within the ark of universal Christendom _but Catholics in a more especial manner-prepare for the commemoration of the eventful day on which the Son of God lay in a manger at Bethlehem; an event which time cannot obliterate nor distance dim; for we can see as plainly an ox in a roofless stable of a village inn, and hear as plainly now as was centuries ago the glad tidings, "To you is born a saviour; peace on earth to men of good

St. Boniface the Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays of advent will be days of fast and abstinence.

FRANCE.

It is not always that we can agree with that passionate political writer, Paul de Cassagnac, but the following true and timely words from him on the victory just achieved by the French Catholics muted. We did so, because we believed, in the recent elections are certainly commendable. Here they are in chosen rhetoric-

"You remember how indignantly I made an onset against the extreme men | tian loyalty, proclaiming that all authorof the monarchy and the empire, and ity is from God, constrains us to accept how earnestly I implored them not to the decision with respect. fight the elections on dynastic grounds. What a defeat, what a falling to pieces, final and irrepalable, if we had fought for Phillippe or for Victor. We have won, this is plain to all, because we marched and fought for France and God-Let us remain upon this marvelous field, which is wide enough for all honest men to find elbow room upon it. It is the battle field where we shall conquer. Let there be henceforth but one cry of denunciation from every tongue, from every breast, against those who would try to break this blessed bond and talk to us of petty dynastic questions, when one thought alone should fill our minds—the pious and noble thought of lifting up our

Certain it is that the victory gained has been one for God and for a Christian people and not for some senile dynasty was one of the foremost statesmen of his of the past. On this we are certain all have known good or evil, if they have popularity will certainly bring to his country and won his exalted position in true Frenchmen are agreed.

A TRIBUTE TO THE CATHOLIC FAITH | but next to these, who are the happiest, | otherwise be found with Mr. Wesbrook ot Ireland, and their sympathizers on columns of our neighbor, the "Daily this side, with whose cause Mr. Hen-Manitoban," on Monday last, is certainly very interesting from a Catholic point | habits of sin, but who are taken out of of view, inasmuch as it is at variance this miserable world in the flower of with the great Protestant Tradition. be given in St. Mary's Church by the Here are the words of the "Manitoban," gravid with force and meaning-

"In the hour of his seeming triumph Riel was loud in his denunciation of the heart have put off sin, and have come priest, the object of the lecture, that of Catholic Church, but in his adversity he humbly for pardon, and have received was glad enough to avail himself of its comforts and safeguards. This shows that he was sane enough to look well after his eternal as well as his temporal interests."

> This is a very important avowal from a Protestant paper. Every word tells. The contrast between triumphant Riel attacking the Church and humbled Riel sheltering himself in its bosom is complete. Then note the words "comforts" and "safeguards." Finally the "expressions "sane enough" and "to look well" imply that those who are sane and who really care for eternity take refuge in the Catholic Church. We are glad to see that time-honored prejudices hold no place in the mind of our esteemed contemporary.

AN ENGLISH VIEW. We hasten to put on record these powerful words of the London "Truth." before it takes a more familiar course. manner the marked change that has come over British political leaders, and that what English statesmen regarded "non possumus" is now regarded as quite within the cyclopedia of practical politics. It says Hartington, (in supporting the Ulster Liberals is tying himself to dead men. If, on the one hand, Mr. Parnell asks for more than is involved in local self-government Lord Hartington is dishimself a Protestant, and Irish Irish Protestants are no more likely to be unfairly treated by the Irish Catholics than are the English Catholics by the English Protestants. The Nationalists have done great service to the cause of religious equality by stamping out religious feuds, and it is a pity Lord Hartington should next month. have appealed to Protestants. One thing is certain, either we must frankly concede or frankly resist the legitimate demands of Ireland. A nation can only be taught to govern by governing itself. The best way of educating a na tion is to trust its people."

When the demand of Ireland is conceded to be "legitimate" the duty of England is plain and she must therefore bow to the inevitable.

THE DEATH OF LOUIS RIEL.

Ten days ago all Canadians and many outsiders were awaiting news from Regina. Is the rebel executed? Is the unhappy man reprieved? Is the patriot spared? With such different feelings was the career of Louis Riel viewedangry and malignant, pitiful and sad, sympathetic and approving. Death-the terrifying death of the scaffold-answered them all. During the days which have since elapsed all these shades of sentiment have become more calmand now we wish to say a word about his death-an event of great portent, perhaps, in the political history of the country-but of this aspect of it we have no special call to speak. A few words will be sufficient for us. We do not hesitate to say that before the event we hoped to the very last that Riel's sentence would be comas we still do, that he was so far of unsound mind as not to merit so terrible a death. But the constituted authorities of the land decided otherwise and Chris-

But now we look back. We remember his denunciation and misusage (it this be all) of the priests of Holy Church, his open apostacy, his wild measures and protestations against her and his long obstinate persistence in his wrong—then, the fruits of the good and faithful Father Andre's months of holy striving with him, his submission, abjuration and apologies, and at last, the once proud, ambitious and defiant become humble, compliant and forgiving, full of contrition and faith hope and charity, dying a brave and Christian death—as only the Catholic full of thanksgiving, not for his death,

We know nothing of "Memorial Ser vices," or "Lodges of Sorrow," or "Masses of Sympathy," but we do know that many prayers have been offered up, that the Great Sacrifice of the Mass has repeatedly pleaded for Riel at the Throne of Mercy, and therefore that his lot is an enviable one if compared to that of the men who hate and revile him, and who, while they glory in his death, have no care for their own souls. Well would it befor them if their last hour should find them half as ready to die as Riel was

THE CIVIC SITUATION.

In previous years, as the close of the civic year arrived, the question of municipal reform has been the watchword. The cry is a good one no doubt; for it takes with the masses. But this year, we are It utterances show in a most striking glad to say, is not so much of a necessity. It was certainly a necessity tor a long time but the people last year determined to make a clean sweep by as lunar politics and dismissed with a turning out the old council for their abuses and corruptions in the administration of civic affairs; but all who identified themselves last year with what was called the "Citizens Ticket" see no very good or urgent reason for changing the complexion of the Council this year, though many of the old board, no doubt, will retire. The interest in this year's camposed to give him less. Mr. Parnell is paign, however, centres in the struggle for the Mayor's seat, which has been at fever heat since last Tuesday's meeting. The gentlemen now before the people for the position of Mayor are Messrs. Crowe and Wesbrook, and between these two worthy persons the citizens must make choice on the 14th of

Three weeks ago when dealing with this question we gave it as our opinion that if the citizens of Winnipeg wished to draw into the service of the city men of capacity and standing in society; men of unquestionable reputation and integrity they must by all means hold out to these men willing to devote their time to the city's interest some inducement. The office of Alderman is without emolument and it therefore it goes without saying that the position of honor in the Council Chamber should be conferred upon the alderman who has rendered the city public and private service, at his own loss very often, for a twelve month. And this view of the matter taken by the "Review" at the very outset of the campaign, we are glad to note, is now almost universal. With Mr. Wesbrook as a private citizen, we have no fault to find; he is an eminently respectable person and would probably, as he says himself, fill the position with credit to the city, but the fact srill remains that he has not served at the council_board and has therefore given no practical proof of his ability to fill the position of chief magistrate and the city certainly cannot afford to risk a year of misgovernment. This is the greatest objection which the people of Winnipeg have against Mr. Wesbrook; and we are sorry to see him led by his supporters against such a strong public sentiment which now prevails against him on these grounds; and, on the other hand, it is certainly very ungraceful for Mr. Wesbrook to seek the position under the circumstances; it shows shocking bad taste on his part.

And certain it is if the honor of the position is not bestowed upon the gentleman who has freely given his services to the city, respectable and capable men will refuse to serve in the future when the city's affairs must fall into the hands of a cabal who will manage civic matters with a view to their own personal aggrondizement and whose ascendancy will beget recklessness and extravagance in the administration of civic affairs.

Mr. Crowe, the opponent of Mr. Wesbrook, is well known to the people; he has spent a year in the council as chairman of the most important com-Church can teach us how to die. ST. BONIFACE COLLEGE.

High-Class Literary Entertainment in Honor of the Anniversary of His Grace's Consecration.

Monday last, the 34th anniversary of His Grace's consecration, was celebrated by High Mass sung by Mgr. Tache himself, and by a literary and musical entertainment in the evening at St. Boniface College. The hall was filled with a sympathetic audience. We noticed around the Archbishop, Senator Girard, Judge Dubuc, the Hon. Joseph Royal, Judge Prud'homme, Fr. Andre, O.M.I., and many other distinguished members of the clergy. The opening address was in verse, a poetic vision of His Grace's call to the missionary life and afterwards to the episcopate. As it was entirely the work of Mr. A. De Laronde, it speaks well for his facility in handling that most refractory instrument, French versification. Then followed a debate on the question, "What is the essential and principal object of intellectual education?" Mr. E. Gauthier spoke first in favor of the study of History. He sketched with real power the advantages which accrue from historical studies to to the memory, the intellect and the will. He was answered by Mr. Henry Royal, who stood up bravely for the old beaten way of the Greek and Latin classics. These, he said, are languages, not mere departments of knowledge but universal store-houses of all that is most worth knewing; they contain the best known productions of the most refined taste; and, what is more, being dead languages, they cannot be learnt mechanically, they can be taught only by methods that train the youthful mind to habits of order and persevering effort. Mr. Royals' delivery was natural and earnest. The chairman or judge, Mr. Alphonse Lariviere, rose to say that he would give his decision after a practical exhibition, which was about to begin, of the most approved method of teaching Latin to young lads. This part of the entertainment was particularly interesting to all whose memory of early struggles with Latin Grammar was still fresh. The lowest Latin class occupied the platform. It was divided into two camps, the Greeks and Romans, each Greek having one definite Roman antagonist. When all was ready, the lads sang with much spirit, a sprightly hymn, "Amis, vite a l'ouvrage," adapted to a well-known Canadian air. The prologue by Alexander LaRiviere was interrupted by re-Peated bursts of applause elicited by its charming naivete. Now came the tug of war. Fr. Bellivau, the Master of the class, wand in hand, pointed to one of two-for they all fought in twos. Immediately the boy put a question to his antagonist on the Latin verbs; if the latter hesitated, the questioner corrected, and thus scored one. Two all-round tournaments were carried on by the lads themselves, the Master only awarding "victories," as the good marks are called, and setting the combatants a subject to fight about. In the last joust the Master shot his interrogatories right and left among the young crowd, and seldom failed to find them answered as sharply and clearly as they were put. Three fables from Lafontaine filled up the intervals between the various mock-battles. These fables were recited in character, one boy acting wolf, another lamb, another lion, etc. The lion, by Mr. Goulet, was remarkably true to Lafontaine's inimitable portraiture. - After a brief and and tasty epilogue in easy Latin, and the reading out, by the Archbishop, of highest scores for the Greeks, the Chairman of the Debate, Mr. Alph. Lariviere, with dignity and grace, gave his decision in favor of the Classics. The entertainment was brought to a close by one of those exquisite pieces of choral singing by the College boys which were so much admired at the beginning of the perform. ance and just after the debate. His Grace then rose and said a few gracious words of thanks to the Fathers of the College for so interesting an exhibit of their method of teaching. The spectators, as they left the hall, were loud in their praise of the good taste which was manifest throughout, and of the distinctness of articulation which was as noticeable as it is seldom met with in small

THE MEMORY.

Written for the Northwest Review.

There is no department of the human mind whose workings are more remarkable and interesting than those of the 'Memory."

The particles of matter which compose our bodies are continually decaying, passing away and being replaced by new, so that our bodies undergo an entire change during every seven years of our lives, but our minds, our souls, are identically the same to-day that they were when they began to exist, on ly, of course, their faculties have been or should have been, continually devel oping. And that faculty of the mind which enables us to maintain this ident ity, and link our present selves with our selves in the past, is the memory.

The memory has justly been called the "store-house of the mind," and what a vast store house it is.

In it is stored a record of every trans action of our lives; in its depths are hidden the sorrows which constitute the clouds, and the joy which have made the sunshine of our experiences. There are laid up the hopes, the aspirations, the longings, and ambitions of our lives, the disappointments and bitterness we have suffered. There, too, is faithfully inscribed every solemn vow and promise made of our strongest words to be, perhaps, "lightly broken." In its treasury of jewels we have cherished the fond words and looks and tones of loved ones, the meanings, the partings, the welcomes, and the "good byes"; the seasons of pleasant communion with kindred souls, and the hours of weary watching over the couch of suffering. And in some of its pages we find the deep red record of real or fancied wrongs, which burned their impress there..

In the gallery are carefully daguerro typed the faces of all with whom we have ever mingled, the places we have visited the scenes we have witnessed, from our earliest lives.

Not one of the many things committed to this great receptacle of the mind is ever lost, not a word obliterated, nor a feature effaced. Things may become hidden there, for the time beyond our power to recall; buried, perhaps, beneath the accumulation of the dust and rubbish of years, but they are not lost. They lie there asleep, ready to awaken and come forth with all their former freshness, at some unexpected moment. It may be some strain, some look, or word, or tone, that will bid them awake, but such awakening is inevitable.

There will no doubt be a time when the whole vast collection in this storehouse will be in array before our mental vision, and we seall read, as it were, "the book of our life". Nay, we shall be compelld to read it, whether we will or not. This sudden quickening and opening of the memory has beem frequently demonstrated in the case of persons who were about drowning, or have fallen from a great height expecting to be dashed to pieces, but who have lived to tell of the sensations they experienced while thus on the confines of two worlds.

His Holiness Leo XIII. has sent forty thousand francs to his Eminence Cardinal Celesia, Archbishop of Palermo, for distribution among the poor who are suffering from the ravages of cholera.

Answers have been received at the Vatican to the Pope's communication to Berlin and Madrid regarding a settlement of the Caroline affairs. Both the German and Spanish governments accept, with slight modification, the basis of settlement laid down by his Holiness, and the Pope has accepted the changes suggested in drafting his decision.

A religious excitement is prevailing at Rockport, Ind. On September 9th Dr. Willams, a Methodist preacher, together with three members of his family, were baptized in the Catholic Church. The subject of his lecture at night in the court-house was: "Reason why I left the Protestant Church to become a Roman Catholic." The house was crowded. The inconsistencies of Protestanism were held up to public view, while the Catholic doctrine was nobly defended. As an illustration of the great interest felt in Oriental studies by the Holy Father, the London "Tablet" mentions the establishment of the University of Look up to Heaven; - if you are firm Beyrut, in Syria. "This institution is and true in serving God, its joys are all destined not only to raise the standard of education among the clergy of the United Eastern Rites, but also to afford European students greater facilities for becoming acquainted in the East. It is not too much to say that in ,a few years the University of Beyrut will be the first Oriental school in the world. Situated in the East, and at the confluence of several different races, it will offer the European student advantages not to be gained at Berlin or Paris. Already more than one European savant has made use of the opportunity it affords. We learn that the distinguished Assyriologist, Pere Delattre, S.J., is about to set out for Beyrut, where he will devote himself to the study of Arabic. Another ecclesiastic, Dr. Forget, who has just returned from a two year's attendance at the same University, has been appointed professor of Arabic at Louvain." The importance af Oriental studies nowadays in the defence of Truth can hardly be overestimated.—Ave Maria.

A Specimen Infidel Demagogue.

The following curious revelation concerding M. Brisson, the present French premier, is made by a Paris paper. On August 25, a "juge de paix" at Saulzais was summarily, and, as he believed, unjustly dismissed from his post. He sought to obtain redress through the intervention of Madame Brisson, mother of the prime minister, whom he begged to plead his cause. That lady replied: "Since the elections of 1881, that is, for nearly four years, my son has thought proper to break all relations with his father and myself, without at all caring for the great grief thereby caused to us. Immediatelv after the death of my youngest daugh ter he came to Bourges several times to preside over the Conseil General, but without ever setting foot in our home. He let his father die without even seeing him. Six months ago; when he came to assist at my husband's funeral, under circumstances which are generally an occasion of reconciliation, not only did he not ask for me, but he effected not to see me; and behaved in the same manner to my daughter and son-in-law."

At Castlebar, on Sunday, the police surrounded the house of Father Healy, who was celebrating Mass at the time, and arrested some of the congregation for their action in connection with recent evictions.

A powerful committee, comprising Lords Bandon and Castletown and other prominent gentlemen, has formed a committee in London to assist the people of every class in Ireland who have been boycotted and to advance funds to all persons and corporations willing to make open opposition to boycotting.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, speaking at Leeds, said that the Liberals were all agreed that the office of the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland should be abolished. He thought that in time England would voluntarily yield Home Rule to Ireland, maintaining, however, the right of the Crown.

The extent to which boycotting is being carried on is shown by an incident which occurred at a recent funeral at Macroom, county Cork. A boycotted relative of the deceased, together with his family, joined the funeral procession whereupon the mourners withdrew. The obsequies were performed by three Catholic curates unattended

Two hundred respectable inhabitants of Stradbally, Queen's County, have been arrested in pursuance of the government plan for the suppression of boycotting. to consider the matter. The advanced Nationalists of Limerick are establishing a branch of the National League to which they are giving the name of the "Smith O'Brien Branch." This shows the determination of the Fenian leaders and the physical force advocates to fall in line with the National League movement a policy to which they heretofore seemed indifferent. The Fenian body is popularly supposed to possess a considerable supply of arms, and in cases where a resistance to an eviction is organized the evictors may be certain of a warm reception. Though little is said in public, there is evidently a very determined feeling among the people not to allow themselves to be driven from their homes without resistance and should the landlords be unwise enough to attempt to collect rents which the people are not able to pay, this winter will not pass without serious bloodshed. One thing is certain, the Irish peasant will fight desperately to preserve his cabin and little field. In the present state of the popular mind one shot fired in resistance might call the whole country to arms. THE BODY AND ITS HEALTH.

A writer in the Bulletin Generale de the lobe of the ear will stop hiccough, whatever be its cause. Very slight refrigeration such as a drop of cold water

Regular exercise, systematically taken, is required by every able-bodied person, and also by most persons who are not able bodied. A person who by systematic exercise keeps his body in good condition can do more work, endure more fatigue, and survive severer illness than the one who neglects such practice

In the British Medical Journal, Dr. Fothergill says that a person dying of exhaustion is generally dying of starvation. "We give him beef tea, calf's foot jelly, alcohol, seltzer and milk; that is a pany, for the express purpose of carrying small quantity of sugar of milk and some cattle from Cork to England for the fat. But the jelly is the poorcst sort of food, and the beef tea a mere stimulant. The popular belief that the beef tea conconsideration the distress prevailing in tains 'the very strength of the meat' is a terrible error, it has no food value."

> Sportsmen should be careful not to eat of meat from animals which have been much tortured by dogs during the death agony. Dr. Detmars of the National Society of Microscopists, in examining samples of the meat the eating of which had killed several persons in Momence, Ill., found changes which were clearly attributable to a frenzied condition of the animals from which it was taken. The Doctor's opinion upon the subject were formed after careful microscopical examinations of hundreds of samples of meat from cattle slaughtered in Chicago while they were in a frenzied condition from fright.

Signs of Health and Debility-Dr. Reginald Southey, in one of his lectures on "Individual Hygiene," makes a good summary of the signs of sound health and debility as follows-

"A sound constitution depends upon a body well constructed both inside and out, and upon a balance of functions, circulation, respiration, innervation, digestion, sanguification, each well, all unconsciously fulfilled; upon a temperature well maintained all the body over; and last, but by no means least, upon good habits of life. A mar, as Celsus said, is not to live too much by rule; he should be the master not the slave of his body.

"The following signs may be accepted as evidence of sound health: 1, Individual adaptability, the capacity in man to adapt himself to extremely opposite conditions of existence without suffering in energy. 2. Endurance: the capacity of supporting considerable bodily or mental labor without suffering from fatigue, or of repairing the latter quickly 3. Self-command: the capacity of controlling the emotions, blunting as well as sharpening the sensations of will. 4. Resistance to morbific influences: The capacity of eliminating all poisons quickly by dint of sound organs of excretion.

"The following signs of debility ought to be eliminated as well: 1. Deformity, obesity, leanness; bad construction of the skeleton or of its clothing. 2. Personal inadaptability; liability to disturbance of either mind or body upon slight provocation, such as food, clothing, climate or any interruption of the ordinary habits. 3. Lack of endurance, small staying powers, requiring long rest to repair fatigue. 4. Small emotional control: the persons who are quickly provoked to anger, or are speedily moved to tears or laughter, exhibit feeble nervous system, and are prone to nervous disorders. 5. Proclivity to morfic influences; those whose organs of sanguification or of elim. ination are damaged, who, although equal to ordinary calls upon them, exhibit their inefficiency by succumbing to every contagion, miasma, or poisonous influence that they encounter."

INGERSOLL ANSWERED.

Lecture by Rev. Father Fulton, S. J.,

Ladies and gentlemen.—Once upon a time there was a person named Schlasticus who suffered by death the loss of people in great throngs. But our friend, instead of receiving their expressions of condolence hid himself, blushing, in a and asked why he was ashamed replied. "To bury so small a child before so large an assembly." This lecture is the child and the concourse is the audience before me. I have been engaged on matters foreign to literary and scientific affairs, and have no time to prepare a regular lecture, but I think it will not take much time to demolish Mr. Ingersoll.

I will take his book on Orthodoxy, in which he declares that "he knows that the clergy know that they know nothing." Mr. Ingersoll is not a philosopher nor a theologian, though he may be as we hear, an orator of matchless voice and gesticulation. He is witty, as any one may be who attacks what we most revere. Let us look at his scholarship. He has no arguments whatever, except the old objections brouget up in the schools. In the whole book there have been no references nor authorities cited. His only method of reasoning is that by interrogation, why? why? why? Suppose I answer I do not know. The proper test of an argument is to put it in a syllogistic form which is impossible with Mr. In. gersoll's arguments.

Again, the very importance of the subject demands a respectful and reverential treatment which Mr. Ingersoll denies that those who believe in Christianity are hypocrites. Then follows an examination of the Congregational and Presbyterian creeds under the supposition absurdly false, "ex unodisce omnes." Infidelity, says Mr. Ingersol, will prevail over Christianity. This does not prove that it is not the true religion; for infidelity may triumph only because of the contributions of some men." Would these men have supported it, had they not firmly believed in it? Again, he says that the Christian religion was destroyed by Mahomet, and yet no one knows it. Nor were the crusade unjust and destructive wars, for the land which they fought for was one that was dearest to them; their Savior had died there. Was it not a jtst war? And this war saved all Europe, for the power of Mahomet was rising rapidly, and was about to inundate all Europe. The war was carried into the enemy's codntry, and the attack saved all Furope. Again we were freed from the ignorance of the dark ages (dark, as I may say, only because we have not light on them) by the introduction into Italy of some few manuacripts, according to Mr. Ingersoll. But the truth is all the leanning of that period was centred in the church, and by her alone were erected seats of learning. murderer, goes around the country taks from the barbarirn that this ignorance arose. Nor has the church been for doing right, depriving us of a God, inimical to the sciences, more particular ly to astronomy and its promoters, for among the most able astronomers of Europe are to be found the Catholic

Now, Mr. Ingersoll comes to the creed "I believe in one God, creator of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible." "But," says Mr. Ingersoll, "there is no one God. And what did He make the earth of? Suppose I answer I don't know, then what happens? But I do know. He made the world out of nothing. Mr Ingersoll's creed reminds me forcibly of a story told of the eminent Greek scholar Porson, who was told by a young fellow-traveler in a coach that he (the young man) believed only what he could understand. In that case, replied Porson, you will have the shortest creed of any man that I know of.

Mr. Ingersoll says he cannot understand God. For we are told, says he, that God has no body, no heart, no passions, and yet we are also told that he appeared in the Garden of Eden and on Mount Sinai, and that He was angry. But a chil could answer these arguments. If we could understand God's perfection then would we be equal to him. Mr. Ingersoll says we cannot love God. O, my friends, can you not love God? Mr. Ingersol does not understand that there is a rational love—a love springing from a knowledge of God's perfection.

Passing over many other fragile argum ents, we come to Mr. Ingersoll's state-. ment that he cannot believe that our Lord was of a Divine nature, but was only the legitimate offspring of the union of Mary and Joseph, for neither Matthew, Mark, nor John knew of his Divine origin. Not till 150 years after his death place of birth almost as much as if he was this idea circulated. Yet St Matthew, cnapter i., verses 18 to 22, beginning, "Now the generation," contains these words, "Fear not to take unto thee Ma-1y thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is the Holy Ghost." And St. Luke chapter i., verses 31 to 36, declares, "And the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, his child, to whose obsequies came the and the power of the Most High shall overshadow thee." And St. John, chapter i., tells us "In beginning was the word and the word was God," etc. Yet not corner, and on being expostulated with till 150 years after was His heavenly nature suspected.

Another point about the immortality of the soul whicp Mr. Ingersoll says is not contained in the Bible. I admit it; for man was conscious of his immortality long before the Old Testament came into existence for in the book of Wisdom, chapter v., verse 16. "But the just shall live forever, etc., and again chapter iii., from verse 1 to 9, beginning, "But the souls of the just are in the hands of God, etc." do we find arguments to the contrary?

Mr. Ingersoll's persistent upholding of his unbelief is destructive only to himself, and reminds me of a story. When railroads and locomotives were quite unknown, an inventor of an engine, which he had submitted for trial before a number of competent men, was asked by some of them. "Supposing, when you have the locomotive ready on the track, and everything seems favorable, a cow should cross the engine path; what then." "So much the worse for the cow," was the reply. And so I say so much the worse for Mr. Ingersol, for he certianly will not stop the engine.

There is no hell, according to Mr. Ingersoll. What a delightful time we would have! But on the supposition that there it. I will try to make a synopsis of the is a hell, Mr. Ingersoll declares that there work. Mr. Ingersoll declares himself would be found in it such men as Franksincere in his belief, thereby insinuating lin, who was a patriot; but had that anything to do with his fitness for that place. And Humboldt and Goethe, and Schiller and Burns, the poet of human love. And Dickens, about whose family affairs we know something, and R. W. Emer son, and Longfellow-I am sure I don't know. I was at Wakefield a few years ago, giving a leture, and in speaking of Charles Sumner, I mentioned that it would have been better had he died with a recommendation of his sinful soul to God than as he did, sayin: "Take care of the civil rights bill." I was hissed, but they did not crush me- So would it have been well for these poets to have thought of their souls. And Tom Payne will be in hell, too and Voltaire; where else would you suppose him to go. And Spinoza and Hume, and Beethoven and Wagner, who, I think, well deserves it for all the torture he has inflicted on us. Hell, Mr. Ingersol asserts, is heartless. Whatever is heartless, so he thinks, does not exist, therfore hell does not exist.

Now, as to what Mr Ingersoll does believe. There is no God, and therefore there is no hell, for since there is no Providence there can be no law which always presupposes a higher authority. # Catholicity and Labor.

Perhaps nothing is more self-evident to the ordinary Protestant mind than that Protestantism spells prosperity. Catholic countries, as a result of their religion, are always poor; Protestant countries, as a result of theirs, always well.to-do. Possibly a lecture which was recently delivered at Withington near Manchester, by a Protestant minister, Professor Lindsay, D. D., of Glasgow, may help to dispel the illusion. Speaking of the condition of the workingman at different times he said that the 15th cen tury-the last Catholic century, be it noted-was his golden age. His prosper ity was seen in the facts: 1st, that women were seldom engaged in outdoor labor, 2nd, the working day was about 8 hours; and 3rd, peasants bought land and became peasant proprietors, while artisans became small capitalists.

A change-came with the Reformation Two blows were then struck at the prosperity of the workingman from which he had not yet recovered. These were the confiscation of the guilds and others poliations by Henry VIII. and his successor, and the debasement of the coinage. The glorious Elizabethan age found the workingman in a condition of degradation. During the 17th and 18th centuries precisely the very centuries, be it also noted, when Protestantism was at its height and had most power over the peo ple—he was kept down by legislative Suits Worth $12 at $7.50, enactments. Ma. caulay had to admit that the Reformation found all the serfs set free; the facts narrated by the lecturer show that the principles it introduced brought the people to a state differing from serfdom only in the name.

GLEANINGS.

Modesty is a guard to virtue. Richest is he that want least.

Quiet conscience gives quiet sleep. Not to hear conscience is a way to silence it. Virtue and happiness are mother and daughter.

Wise men make more opportunities than they find. Learning make a man fit company for himself.

Love generally makes a wise man act like a tool, and interest sometimes makes a fooi act like a wise man.

Very few men are great enough to bear praise, but a large number of us are just small enough to be found fault with constantly.

Whims are most prevalent among those who lead quiet lives and have little to do with the stern facts, the hurry and bustle of active life.

Many a true heart that would have come back a dove to the ark after its first transgression has been frightened away by the savage cruelty of an unforgiving spirit.

There is no royal road to any study, to acchievement or success, anywhere; it is by the old plebeian path of rugged toil that men reach the heights of attainment and the temple of fame.

A woman's friendship borders more closely on love than a man's. Men effect each other in the reflection of noble or friendly acts, while woman asks fewer proofs and more signs and expressions of attachment.

Canadian Wheat in Europe.

An interesting feature in connection with this season's growth of wheat in Canada is that a number of applications have been received from Europe for samples of the cereals. Among these is one made in behalf of the Italian Government for the agricultural museum recently opened in Rome. For a similar purpose request has been made for samples of wheat, barley and oats by Dr. Wiltmack, Professor of Botany at the Royal Agricultural College of Berlin. The Director of the Royal Norwegian Farm at Bygdo has also made official of the King's Royal Rifles broke out of application for a collection to enable the barracks here to night armed with his Mejesty King Oscar to test the hardier varieties of cereals from Canada and particularly the Canadian Northwest, ity. That would practically open up navigation from this place to Winnipeg. That is $200,000 less than the estimate made by the engineer to our general government at Washington. It is composed of the MICHIGAN CENTRAL from Chicago and Toledo to St. Thomas, where connection is made with the Ontario Division of the Canadian Pacific Railway, St. Thomas to Smith's Falls via Torouto, and the Eastern Division from Smith's Falls to Montreal, via Ottawa, forming a DIRECT ALL RAIL ROUTE from the West to the Canadian Seaboard.
